A PREFACE TO THE READER.

AS in this fourth Volume of the Author's Works, which by the generous Encouragement of ſome few worthy Gentlemen, who in a noble Zeal to promote the Doctrines of the Goſpel, ingag'd to take off the whole Impreſſion, there are great and important Truths diſcours'd with the ſame Life and Spirit which ſhin'd in the former; ſo I doubt not but it will find the ſame grateful Acceptance. After the Diſcourſe of the Perſon and Mediation of our Bleſſed Lord Jeſus, which you had in the Third Volume, it naturally follows in Order to have the Knowledg of the genuine Nature of that Faith, which looks to the Mediator, and comes to him for an Intereſt in his Perſon, Sacrifice, Blood and Righteouſneſs. You have firſt the Infinite Mercies of God's Nature diſplay'd as far as Man's Thoughts and Words can reach them, propos'd as the great Object which a Believer regards, as the Spring of all thoſe Acts of Grace exerted in ſaving a Sinner, and in which he truſts and hopes. You have then the Promiſes, which are nothing but the Mercies of the Divine Nature, and his gracious Purpoſes proclaim'd to us, and ſo are abſolute as they themſelves are, propos'd as another Object which the Soul conſiders in Believing. You have then Jeſus Chriſt ſet forth as the great Object of Faith in his Perſon God-man; and it is indeed a ſufficient Argument to prove his Divinity, that we are commanded to believe on him; nor could we have a certain and undoubted Faith in him, if he were not God: for what aſſured Confidence and Hope could we have in a Creature, whoſe Goodneſs, Wiſdom, and Power in the higheſt Excellence of them are imperfect and defective? The Author therefore inſiſts on it, that the true Believer who heartily comes to Chriſt for Life and Salvation, regards him as the Son of God, and looks to, and conſiders the ſpiritual Excellencies of his Perſon. He is the Object of Faith too in reſpect of what he hath done and ſuffered for our Salvation, and of what he at preſent doth. He is the Object of Faith propos'd to us in his Death, Reſurrection, and Interceſſion: and therefore I once had Thoughts to have drawn into this Diſcourſe of the Object and Acts of Faith, as into their proper Place, thoſe Treatiſes of the Triumph of Faith in Chriſt's Death, Reſurrection, and Interceſſion, which were many Years ago printed in Quarto by my Dear Father himſelf. But when I conſidered that that excellent Book is in ſo many Hands, and perhaps the moſt of them, who will have this Volume, have that already, I apprehended it would look like a Wrong, and an impoſing upon them, to reprint it again, to make them pay for what they had already. Therefore the Reader is to take notice, that the latter end of the Title of the ſecond Book in this Firſt Part of the Object of Faith, directs him to thoſe Diſcourſes of the Triumph of Faith which are in the Quarto Volume.

The Second Part of this Treatiſe is concerning the Acts of Faith, in which that Chapter about Joy in the Holy Ghoſt was his Concio ad Clerum, which the Author made when he commenc'd Batchelor of Divinity in Cambridg: but finding in his Papers that he deſign'd it to be a Part of this Diſcourſe, and not finding that he had done it into Engliſh himſelf, I tranſlated it that it might be ſutable to the other Parts, tho my Engliſh doth not reach the Eloquence of his Latin.

The Third Part treats of the Properties of Faith, and in it you have Diſcouragements removed, and the Arminian Objections anſwer'd. They reproach us, that by depriving Man unregenerate of Power to believe, and by aſcribing the Work of Faith entirely to Grace, we make Mens Endeavours to believe impoſſible, and all their Attempts of this nature frivolous and vain. The Author with great Strength of Thought, and Clearneſs of Expreſſion, baffles theſe unreaſonable Cavils, and ſhews how the prevailing and always victorious Grace of God, and our Endeavours, may very well be conſiſtent together.

In the Diſcourſe of the Order and Government of the Churches of Chriſt, tho the Author hath thrown down thoſe Forms which have been erected by Men, and faſhion'd to ſute with the Political Regiment of Kingdoms, and hath in the room of it aſſerted that Order which is of Chriſt's own Inſtitution; which tho it doth not dazle and take Mens vain Minds with any Appearance of Greatneſs and State, yet ſufficiently recommends it ſelf by its own plain native Beauty. Tho it is not pompous, yet it is handſome; tho it is not fram'd according to the admir'd Rules of Humane Policy, yet it is orderly, and ſo perfectly ſuted by the Wiſdom of the Great King of Saints, to the Caſes, Circumſtances, and Neceſſities of them his Subjects in all Ages, ſo fitted to prevent Corruption both of Doctrine and Manners, to promote Holineſs, and to attain all the Ends of Religion, that as there never hath been any need, ſo there never will be, to add any thing to his Orders. It is this Inſtitution of Chriſt which the Author aſſerts, but maintains it with that Candor as well as Strength of Mind, that they who differ from him in Judgment cannot be angry. Here is no Pride nor Arrogance, which is inſufferable in any Man, much more in a Miniſter of the Goſpel: Here are no Reproaches, no baſe and ſly Inſinuations, no invidious Reflections with which Controverſies are uſually manag'd; but here are ſober Thoughts, calm Reaſonings, and the Truth ſhewing it ſelf in ſuch a mild and lovely Aſpect as may create Inclinations to it in the Souls of all Perſons whom Paſſion or Intereſt hath not too much prejudic'd.

Thus I have endeavour'd to ſet before thee at one view the General Deſign of the Book; and that thou mayſt ſee that thou haſt all the MSS. which I promiſed printed in it, I have annexed a Catalogue of them, directing in what Part of the Book thou mayſt find any of them.

I am

Thy hearty Servant

in our Lord Jeſus,

Tho. Goodwin.

The

THE CONTENTS OF THE OBJECT and ACTS of Juſtifying Faith.

PART I. Of the Object of Faith.

BOOK I.

THE Mercies in God's Nature the Object, and Support, and Encouragement of Faith. How we are to act Faith thereon.

Chap. 1. The Words of the Text opened. That the Mercies in God's Heart and Nature, are a Fundamental Object and Support of Faith. Preſumption thereon beaten off. pag. 1.

Chap. 2. An Explication how this Aſſertion is to be underſtood: 1. On the Negative. Not as if alone conſidered, the Mercies in God (as they are abſtractly in God's Nature) were a ſole Foundation for Faith; but as being joined with an indefinite Declaration of his Good-will to us Men: and in that Conjuncture, all the Mercies that are in God do flow in to ſupport our Faith. This Negative Part of this Explication confirmed from the Inſtance of the Devils, and of our firſt Parents, until God's Revelation of his Good-will to Mankind made to them. 2. The poſitive Ground of Faith laid open; and the Reaſon why a Declaration of his Will is neceſſary. Two premiſory Cautions more added, for the underſtanding the Aſſertion. p. 4.

Chap. 3. The Proofs of this Aſſertion: 1. By Scripture; and afterwards by Reaſons: One Scripture above all other ſingled forth, and that alone; Exod. 34. 6, 7. This made a new Text for the ſubſequent Diſcourſe: The grand Aſſertion reſolved unto two Heads; both of them diſtinctly drawn out, and propoſed to be proved out of the Text: The Eminency of this one Scripture is commended thereby to all our Faiths: Old Teſtament Faith, and New, one and the ſame. p. 7.

Chap. 4. That the Mercies of God's Heart and Nature are the prime Object of Faith. The firſt Proof drawn from ſome ſpecial Obſervations upon this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6, 7. and upon the Story, Occaſion, Occurrences, Circumſtances, End and Purpoſe of it by God. The Iſſue and Effect of it, and the Uſe Moſes made of it; which, as they exceedingly exalt the Grace and Mercy proclaimed, ſo do greatly commend it to our Faith, for the Support of it. p. 9.

Chap. 5. That the Mercies of God's Nature, as they are proclaimed in Exod. 34. are a prime Object and Support of Faith. That this Name of God, Exod. 34. 6, 7. was an Aſylum or ſtrong Tower, unto which the Faith of the moſt eminent Saints of the Old Teſtament had Recourſe, eſpecially for Forgiveneſs: And the Evidence hereof carried through the Times of the Old Teſtament, from Moſes, by a Cloud of Witneſſes, as Moſes, David, Nehemiah, and the Prophets. p. 14.

Chap. 6. What is imported by the Name Jehovah, made uſe of in this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6, 7. That as it ſignifies God's Infinite Eſſence, it denotes the Subject of all thoſe Mercies which are in him. That this Name of God, Jehovah, doth beſt ſute, and is moſt fitly joined with thoſe Epithets merciful and gracious. What Supports of Faith may be derived from theſe two, Jehovah and merciful, join'd together. p. 18.

Chap. 7. The other Name of God אל, El, us'd in this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6, 7. This Name imports that all the three Perſons are merciful, which is particularly proved concerning the Holy Ghoſt. This Name El alſo imports an Attribute in God, his Strength and Power, and that it is in conjunction with Mercy. How much this hath an Influence to make Mercy effectually prevailing, and to conquer all Difficulties which lie in the way of its acting. p. 34.

Chap. 8. The next word in this Proclamation of Exod. 34. 6, 7. explain'd [Merciful]; from whence Mercy ariſeth in God. p. 42.

Chap. 9. The other part of the Proclamation of the Mercies of God's Nature in Exod. 34. explained. The Meaning of thoſe Words, Jehovah, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion, and Sin, ſhewed, by the Explication of another Text, Pſal. 89. 30 to 37. That the Covenant of Grace in Chriſt is the ſubſtantial Scope and Deſign of the Pſalm. That the Promiſes of God's pardoning Mercies do concern, and are made unto Chriſt's ſpiritual Seed. That there is ſuch an Amplification of Grace in them, as to extend to the worſt Caſes they can poſſibly be ſuppoſed to be in. That they are ſtrengthned by the firmeſt Engagements. p. 47.

Chap. 10. Of the Mercies of God's Heart and Nature. That Mercy and Grace are true Eſſential Properties in the Divine Being. That there are ſome that deny this. This Head diſcourſed in three Branches. 1. An Explication. 2. The Proofs out of the Text. 3. Anſwers to the principal Objections. 1. The Explanation. 1ſt. How it is to be underſtood, that Mercy or any other Attribute, is the Nature of God. 2dly. Of the Difference be- tween thoſe mere ſimilitudinary Attributes borrowed from Man, as Sorrow, Repenting, &c. and thoſe ſubſtantial Attributes in God, the Likeneſs whereof are communicated to Man, and ſo attributed both to God, and alſo to Man: ſuch as Holineſs, Goodneſs, Mercy. The State I put the Queſtion into, for the Proofs of the Aſſertion. p. 57.

Chap. 11. That Mercy and Grace in God are Properties of his Divine Being and Glory. No other Proof alledged but from the Text, Exod. 34. 6, 7. p. 63.

Chap. 12. Some of the principal Objections, why Mercy ſhould not be a natural Attribute of the Divine Nature, anſwered out of the Proofs and Parallels in the foregone Chapter. p. 84.

Chap. 13. That in every Object there is ſome ſpecial Attractive to affect the Faculties and Principles in Man's Heart, to excite them to act on it. That this general Maxim holds true, as to all the main Acts of Faith, for Forgiveneſs: And that the Mercies of God have the moſt proper Influence into the Faith of Forgiveneſs of Sins, of all other Attributes in God. This Aſſertion carried thorow, aud made good, in all the eminent Acts of Faith. p. 88.

Chap. 14. The Uſes of the Doctrine. That the Thoughts of the Mercies in God's Nature ſhould encourage us to come to him for Salvation and Life. That the Conſideration of them ſhould cauſe any Soul to hope that God will pardon him in particular. p. 97.

Chap. 15. That God, conſider'd as juſtifying the Ungodly, is the Object of Faith. How we may be ſaid to be juſtified from Eternity. In what Senſe it is to be underſtood that we were juſtify'd upon the Reſurrection of Chriſt. How we are ſaid to be juſtified when we believe. p. 103.

BOOK II.

The ſecond Object of Faith, Jeſus Chriſt. Of our being drawn to him by the Father, and our treating with him for an Intereſt in his Perſon, and Salvation by him. That Chriſt as God-man in one Perſon, is the Object of our Faith. That as a ſpiritual Meſſiah and Saviour he is propounded to our Faith. That not only Chriſt in his Perſon, but in all that he hath done and ſuffer'd for our Salvation, and now doth for us in Heaven, is the Object of our Faith.

Chap. 1. That the Mercies in God's Nature are not the Object of our Faith, but as they are conſider'd together with Chriſt. That God's Mercies, and Jeſus Chriſt, are accordingly propounded jointly to our Faith. p. 109.

Chap. 2. That when we come to Chriſt, and believe on him, there is a Concurrence and Conſent of all the three Perſons in the Godhead unto that great Work. p. 112.

Chap. 3. The Uſes of the Doctrine. We ſhould conſider Faith on the Lord Jeſus, as a Matter of the greateſt Importance, ſince all the Perſons of the Godhead concern themſelves in it. We ſhould not neglect this great Buſineſs of Believing. We ſhould glorify all the three Perſons for the great things which they do for us at the time of our believing. p. 117.

Chap. 4. Of a Believer's being drawn unto Chriſt by the Father. The Reaſons why it is the proper Work of the Father to draw the Soul unto Chriſt. p. 119.

Chap. 5. That the Father teacheth us to know Chriſt as the great Object of our Faith. That he inſtructs us that eternal Life is to be found, and obtain'd only in Chriſt his Son. That he teacheth us to ſeek this Life only in him. That he teacheth us to look to the Perſon of Chriſt, and to ſeek and deſire an Intereſt in himſelf, as well as Salvation by him. How God the Father teacheth us to know Chriſt his Son, and what are the Effects which his Inſtructions have upon us. p. 124.

Chap. 6. Chriſt our Saviour typified by Noah's Ark. As Noah was inſtructed by God to enter into the Ark for his Safety, ſo God in the Covenant of Grace teacheth us to know Chriſt, and to come to him for Salvation. That our Faith looks both to the Free Grace of God bringing us to Chriſt, as well as to Chriſt. Without Chriſt the Grace of God doth not, nor can ſave us; and therefore it is neceſſary that we explicitely act Faith on him for Salvation. p. 129.

Chap. 7. That Jeſus is propoſed to our Faith as a ſpiritual Chriſt and Saviour. That unleſs he was the Son of God, he could not be a quickning Spirit to us. p. 136.

Chap. 8. That Chriſt repreſented as a quickning Spirit, is a proper Object of our Faith. p. 142.

Chap. 9. That Chriſt's Perſon, as Son of God, in one Perſon with the Man Jeſus, is the prime Object of Faith, and taught by the Father, as the Truth is in Jeſus. p. 145.

Chap. 10. The Uſes of the foregoing Doctrine. How we are to exerciſe Faith on the Perſon of Chriſt God-man. p. 147.

BOOK III.

The Free Grace of God as declar'd and propos'd in the Covenant, is the Object of Faith. Of the Soul's applying it ſelf unto the Free Grace of God, and treating with it for its Salvation. That the abſolute Declarations of this Free Grace, or the abſolute Promiſes of the Goſpel, are the Object of Faith of Recumbence, or Adherence. That Election-Grace, and the Immutability of God's Counſel as indefinitely propos'd in the Promiſes, are alſo the Object of Faith. How the believing Soul may conſider and regard God's abſolute Decree of Election.

Chap. 1. How the Soul may for its Salvation treat with the Free Grace of God as declar'd in the Covenant. p. 153.

Chap. 2. What high Regards the Faith of the Apoſtle Paul had to the Free Grace of God the Father as the Object of it. How he magnifies and celebrates this Free Grace diſcover'd to his Apprehenſions and Thoughts. p. 158.

Chap. 3. That Abſolute Declarations about GOD and Chriſt, and Abſolute Promiſes of Salvation, tion, are the moſt proper and only Objects of that Act of Application of Faith, we call Faith of Recumbency or Adherence. p. 162.

Chap. 4. What Act of Faith it is which thoſe that want Aſſurance may exerciſe upon ſuch abſolute Declarations and Promiſes, and of the Sutableneſs between that Act and ſuch Objects. p. 175.

Chap. 5. That Election-Grace, and the Immutability of God's Counſel indefinitely propos'd in the Promiſes, is the Object of Faith. p. 186.

Chap. 6. How abſolute Election and abſolute Promiſes are the Ground of Faith of Recumbency. p. 194.

Chap. 7. How the Faith of a Believer ſhould depend on Electing Grace for Salvation. p. 198.

PART II. Of the Acts of Faith.

BOOK I.

The Acts of Faith in the Underſtanding are a Sight of Chriſt, a diſcerning and Knowledg of his Excellencies, and a hearty Aſſent to the Truths of the Goſpel concerning him. That this mere Aſſurance of the Object, or a general Aſſent to the Truth of the Promiſes, is not the Act of Faith juſtifying, but an Application is neceſſary. What the Acts of the Will are, which are exercis'd on Chriſt in Believing.

Chap. 1. That Faith in the Underſtanding is a ſpiritual Sight and Knowledg of Chriſt. That it is a Sight diſtinct from bodily Senſe, and from Reaſon, and other ways of Knowledg. That this Sight hath the greateſt Certainty in it, and realizeth to the Mind the Things believ'd. That the true Believer ſees the ſpiritual Excellency and Glory that is in Chriſt, ſo as to have his Heart affected with it: That he ſees an All-ſufficiency of Righteouſneſs in Chriſt: That he is perſwaded of Chriſt's Readineſs to ſave Sinners, with ſome ſecret Intimation that there is Mercy for himſelf, tho a Sinner. p. 1.

Chap. 2. That the mere Aſſurance of the Object, or a general Aſſent to the Truth of the Promiſes, is not the Act of Faith juſtifying, but Application is neceſſary: This proved by ſeveral Reaſons. p. 13.

Chap. 3. What the Nature is of this ſpecial Faith of Application. That beſides a ſpiritual Faith or Wiſdom to know all other Divine Truths ſavingly, there is a ſpecial Faith on Chriſt and God's free Grace for Juſtification: Or, that God in Chriſt as a Saviour and Juſtifier is the Object of that ſpecial Faith which is juſtifying. p. 15.

Chap. 4. That a ſpecial Act of Faith on the Free Grace of God as juſtifying Sinners, and on the Blood and Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, is the only true Juſtifying Faith: This prov'd by ſeveral Arguments. What are the Reaſons why God hath ſingled out this ſpecial Faith to be that Faith upon which he juſtifies. The Uſes. p. 25.

Chap. 5. The Acts of Faith in the Will. The believing Soul truſts in Chriſt alone for Help. That this Confiding in Chriſt is the Act of Faith which juſtifies. The Nature and Properties of a true Confidence in Chriſt. p. 41.

Chap. 6. That where there is true and unfeigned Faith, the Soul is prevailed on to conſent to give it ſelf to Chriſt in all Services and Obedience: That yet this chooſing of Chriſt to be our King and Lord, and ſubmitting to him accordingly, is not that Act of Faith which juſtifies a Man. p. 53.

Chap. 7. What the Errors are to which Men are obnoxious in Believing. How the fatal Miſtakes are to be rectified. p. 62.

BOOK II.

Of Faith of Aſſurance. That all Juſtifying Faith is not Aſſurance of our Perſonal Intereſt in Chriſt. That yet Aſſurance of Salvation may be obtained. How Aſſurance is caus'd by three Witneſſes in Heaven, and three on Earth, and of the Difference of their Teſtimony. The Diſcoveries and Manifeſtations which Chriſt makes of himſelf to the Soul. Of Joy in the Holy Ghoſt. Directions unto the Faith of ſuch who want Aſſurance how to take in, and to make uſe of God's eternal electing Love, in believing with Comfort.

Chap. 1. That Juſtifying Faith is not Aſſurance of our perſonal Intereſt in Chriſt, tho it be an Aſſurance of the Truth of the Promiſe. p. 71.

Chap. 2. The Reaſons why there may be true Juſtifying Faith in a Man, and yet he want Aſſurance. p. 76.

Chap. 3. That Aſſurance of Salvation may be obtained. p. 82.

Chap. 4. The Objections againſt Aſſurance anſwered. p. 87.

Chap. 5. How Aſſurance is produced in the Heart of a Believer, by three Witneſſes in Heaven, and three Witneſſes on Earth: The different Nature of the Teſtimony which they give. p. 91.

Chap. 6. That ſince Aſſurance is attainable, it is our Duty earneſtly to deſire and endeavour the Attainment of it. p. 100.

Chap. 7. Chriſt's Diſcovery of himſelf to the Soul, inſtanc'd in the Example of Chriſt's manifeſting himſelf to Mary Magdalen, after his Reſurrection, as a Pattern of his like Dealings with believing Souls, ſeeking him now after his Aſcenſion into Heaven. p. 107.

Chap. 8. Of Joy in the Holy Ghoſt: That it ſprings from our Communion with God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. p. 119.

Chap. 9. Directions unto the Faith of ſuch as want Aſſurance, how to take in and make uſe of God's Eternal Electing Love, in Believing with Comfort. p. 128.

BOOK III.

Of the Actings of Faith in Prayer. That we are not bound to pray with Aſſurance of obtaining the very particular Bleſſing which we aſk: That God, neither in the Revelation of himſelf and of his Attributes, nor in his Promiſes, hath oblig'd himſelf to give us the very particular Bleſſing which we aſk: That the Eſſential Acts of Faith in Praying do not neceſſarily require that we ſhould have ſuch a certain particular Perſwaſion. How we are in Prayer to act Faith upon Temporal Promiſes, and how upon Spiritual.

Chap. 1. That God hath not by any Revelation of himſelf or Attributes, engag'd himſelf to give us the very particular Bleſſing which we aſk, and therefore we are not bound to pray with Faith of Aſſurance of obtaining it. p. 142.
Chap. 2. That God hath not in his Promiſes obliged himſelf to give us the very particular Bleſſing which we pray for, and therefore we cannot pray with Aſſurance of obtaining it. p. 150.
Chap. 3. That the Eſſential Acts of Faith in Prayer are ſuch as do not neceſſarily require a certain Perſwaſion of obtaining the very particular Bleſſing for which we pray. p. 155.
Chap. 4. How we are in Prayer to act Faith upon Temporal Promiſes. p. 162.
Chap. 5. Concerning Praying and Faith in Prayer, for Performance of Promiſes purely Spiritual. A Diviſion of ſpiritual Promiſes into three ſorts. A Diſcuſſion concerning Abſolute Promiſes. How this Maxim is to be underſtood, that Abſolute Promiſes are to be abſolutely ſought by us; with what manner of Faith in Prayer any Soul may deal with God for the Performance of thoſe Promiſes. p. 169.

PART III. Of the Properties of Faith.

BOOK I.

Of the Excellence and Uſe of Faith. That good Works are not ſlighted by exalting Faith. Of the Excellence of Faith, in that it gives all Honour to God and Chriſt; and that for this Reaſon God hath appointed it to be the Grace by which we are ſaved. Of the Excellency of Faith, as it hath a general Influence on all our Graces.

Chap. 1. The Excellency of Faith diſplay'd in ſeveral Particulars. p. 3.
Chap. 2. The Excellency of Faith ſhew'd in farther Inſtances. That it is ordain'd to give all the Glory to God, and therefore God puts the greateſt Honour upon that above any other Grace. p. 8.
Chap. 3. The Excellence of Faith in that it is moſt active, and hath the greateſt Influence in the whole Courſe of our Salvation from firſt to laſt. p. 12.
Chap. 4. How good Works are not ſlighted by exalting Faith alone to have an Intereſt in our Juſtification. p. 17.

BOOK II.

The Difficulty of Faith. That it is above all the Powers and Faculties in Man. That all which is in Man is ſo far from enabling him to believe, that it doth withſtand his Believing. That Faith is the Work of the alone Mighty Power of God.

Chap. 1. Of the Difficulty of Faith; how hard it is to attain to believe. p. 21.
Chap. 2. That all the Faculties and Powers in Man do not afford him Abilities to believe. That all humane Wiſdom is ſo far from promoting Faith, that it ſets it ſelf againſt it. p. 30.
Chap. 3. That all the Workings of a Natural Conſcience will not help a Man to believe; but that on the contrary, they withſtand Faith. p. 35.
Chap. 4. That all the Powers of a Man's Will cannot enable him to believe. That Faith therefore is an Effect of the Infinite Power of God alone. p. 40.
Chap. 5. That all in Man's Will is oppoſite to Faith, and withſtands his Believing. p. 45.

BOOK III.

Tho Faith be a difficult Work, yet we ought to uſe our Endeavours to believe. What thoſe Endeavours are. Cautions about uſing them.

Chap. 1. Tho Faith be a difficult Work, yet we are to uſe Endeavours to believe. What thoſe Endeavours are. p. 55.
Chap. 2. That the Reſting in our holy Duties and Endeavours, is an Hindrance unto Faith; but a right Performance of them, is very well conſiſtent with it, and needful. p. 58.
Chap. 3. Cautions about uſing our Endeavours to believe. We muſt act in Subordination to God's Power, as working in us both the Will and the Deed. We muſt alſo renounce all Ability in our ſelves. p. 63.
Chap. 4. We muſt uſe our Endeavours to believe, being fearful of doing any thing to offend that God upon whoſe Power we depend to work Faith, and all other things in us. p. 68.
Chap. 5. We ought to uſe our Endeavours to believe, being very watchful not to neglect any gracious Opportunities which God affordeth us. p. 66 miſprinted for—p. 71.

BOOK IV.

Tho Faith be a difficult Work above our Power, yet God commands us to uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to believe. The Reaſons why God commands us ſo to do, and how the Infinite Power of God in working Faith, and our own Endeavours are very well conſiſtent together. Diſcouragements remov'd, which may ariſe either from our own Unability to believe, or from the Senſe of our great Sinfulneſs, or from the Thoughts of an abſolute Decree of Election, reſolving to ſave only ſome particular Perſons. Directions to guide us in our Endeavours to believe.

Chap. 1. Tho Faith be a difficult Work above all our Abilities, yet God commands us to uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to believe, and it is our Duty ſo to do. The Reaſons of it aſſign'd. p. 77.
Chap. 2. Diſcouragements againſt uſing our Endeavours to believe, which ariſe from the Thoughts of the Difficulty of Faith as being above our own Power, conſider'd and anſwer'd. p. 85.
Chap. 3. That the Senſe of hainous Sins is another great Hindrance of Faith, which diſheartens Men from endeavouring to believe. Theſe Diſcouragements anſwer'd and removed. p. 91.
Chap. 4. That Men ſhould not be diſcourag'd from Believing by the Doctrine of Election. That the Conſideration of God's having by his electing Decree appointed only ſome few choſen by him unto Salvation and eternal Life, ought to be no Diſcouragement to obſtruct our Endeavours to believe. p. 94.
Chap. 5. Some general Conſiderations premiſed to open a way for the following Directions to guide us in our Endeavours to believe. p. 98.
Chap. 6. Directions given to guide us in our endeavouring to believe. That we ought to furniſh our Thoughts with all ſuch Conſiderations as are Motives and Encouragements of Faith, and lay them up in our Hearts, and meditate often upon them. That we ſhould attempt to exerciſe the very Act of Believing it ſelf. Objections anſwered. p. 105.

Of the Conſtitution, Right, Order, and Government of the Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK I.

OF the right Inſtitution of the Churches of Chriſt. That the Order and Government of thoſe Churches are eſtabliſhed by Divine Inſtitution. What is the Nature of Divine Inſtitutions, and how the Knowledg of them is conveyed to us; that Chriſt hath ſettled Ordinances for Worſhip and Diſcipline, which are to continue unto the end of the World; that the Power of Church-Cenſures and Excommunication hath its Inſtitution in a more eſpecial manner from Chriſt, as Head of the Church.

Chap. 1. A brief Scheme of the ſeveral Opinions concerning the Conſtitution and Government of the Church of Chriſt. The Truth ſtated and vindicated. p. 1.
Chap. 2. That the Conſtitution of a Church, and the Rules of its Order and Government, are eſtabliſh'd by a certain Inſtitution of Chriſt. Some Propoſitions laid down in order to the Demonſtration of this Truth. p. 5.
Chap. 3. That Chriſt hath by his own Inſtitution eſtabliſhed the Order, Diſcipline, and Government of his Churches, proved by ſeveral Arguments. p. 11.
Chap. 4. What Power Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical is: Of the Nature of a Divine Inſtitution: How the Knowledg of Divine Inſtitutions is derived to us, that we may be aſſured what are truly and really ſuch. p. 17.
Chap. 5. That there are Ordinances of publick Worſhip eſtabliſhed in Churches under the New Teſtament, which are to continue to the end of the World. p. 29.
Chap. 6. That by Excommunication more is meant than bare caſting out of the Church. That it is an Ordinance of Chriſt, to deliver the Excommunicate Perſon to Satan in his Name and Power. The Rules which Chriſt hath given for Church-Admonitions and Cenſures. p. 35.

BOOK II.

Of the Divine Inſtitution of a Congregational Church. That it is not Secondary or Conſequent upon a Charter given to the Church Univerſal, as virtually included therein, but is immediate and proper to it. That Chriſt inſtituted ſuch a Church, in Mat. 18. and gave the Power of the Keys to it. That ſuch Congregational Churches were Primitive and Apoſtolical, proved from the Inſtances of Churches planted by the Apoſtles. That the Conſtitution and Order of ſuch Churches is moſt fitly ſuted to the Edification of the Saints, and moſt exactly accommodated to their various Conditions. That Chriſt hath not only inſtituted a Congregational Church, but hath appointed what the Extent and Limits of it ſhould be.

Chap. 1. That the Inſtitution of particular Churches is not virtual only, or ſecondary, and dependent on the Charter given to the Church Univerſal, but immediate and proper to them, as particular Churches. p. 41.

Chap. 2. That the grand Charter of Church-Government, or the Power of the Keys, is granted not to Miniſters in particular only, excluding the People, but to the whole Body of Believers. p. 44.

Chap. 3. That before a Company of Believers or Saints can become the formal Seat of Government, they muſt be united into the State and Order of a Church. Reaſons given why this is neceſſary. A Demonſtration of it alſo from the Example of the Primitive Churches planted by the Apoſtles. p. 49.

Chap. 4. That Chriſt in his Inſtitution of Eccleſiaſtical Power, Matth. 18. hath granted this Power of the Keys, only to Saints embodied, and united in the State and Order of a Congregational Church. That tho it ſhould be granted, that Chriſt in this Inſtitution had a regard to the Conſtitution of the Church of the Jews, yet it would be evident that he intended a Congregational Church. p. 55.

Chap. 5. That tho it were granted, that the Power of the Keys in Chriſt's Inſtitution, Mat. 18. was given to the Elders or Officers, and not to the People; that yet in a greater Probability of Reaſon the Officers or Elders of a particular Congregational Church are meant. That in all probability too the Inſtitution of ſuch Churches was deſigned by him, becauſe their Conditions and Order beſt ſute the Ends of the Edification of his Saints. p. 62.

Chap. 6. That Congregational Churches were deſigned in the Inſtitution of Chriſt, proved from Inſtances of the Primitive Churches planted by the Apoſtles. The firſt Inſtance aſſigned from the States and Order of the Church at Corinth. p. 69.

Chap. 7. That the Name of a Church given in the New Teſtament to Congregational Churches rather than any other (as is proved from ſeveral Texts, 1 Cor. 11. 18. Rom. 16. 1, & 5. 1 Cor. 4. 17, &c.) proves Congregational Churches to have been intended by Chriſt in his Inſtitution of a Church, they moſt properly being both in Name and Nature ſuch. That a Preſbyterian Aſſembly of Elders cannot properly be called a Church, evinced by ſeveral Arguments. p. 72.

Chap. 8. The Inſtances of the Churches ſettled by the Apoſtles in the leſſer Cities and Villages, prove a Congregational Church to be according to the Apoſtolical and Primitive Form. p. 78.

Chap. 9. That the Account which the Scripture gives us of many Churches eſtabliſhed by the Apoſtles in one City, demonſtrates Congregational Churches to have been by the Primitive Inſtitution of Chriſt. p. 84.

Chap. 10. The Conſtitution of a Congregational Church evidenced to be by the wiſe Appointment of Chriſt, becauſe it is ſo exactly accommodated to the various Conditions of Saints, p. 89.

Chap. 11. That the Forming of Saints into Churches, under the Government of Elders, is a Matter of that needful Order as requires a Divine Inſtitution for it. That it was alſo requiſite that the Extent of thoſe Churches, and the Limits of the Elders Juriſdiction ſhould be ſet and determined by Chriſt. p. 94.

Chap. 12. That it is the Prerogative of Chriſt's Power and Wiſdom, to determine the due Limits of Churches, and the Boundaries of the Elders Power. p. 105.

BOOK III.

Particular Congregations, having a ſufficient Number of Elders and Officers, are compleatly enabled for all Acts of Government and Excommunication it ſelf, within themſelves, as well as for Worſhip.

Chap. 1. That a particular Congregation of Saints having a ſufficient Number of Elders, is a compleat Subject of Church-Power and Government, proved, 1. From the Power which they have to examine and admit Members. 2. From their Power of ſuſpending from the Sacrament. 3. From their being a perfect Political Church. p. 111.

Chap. 2. The fourth, fifth and ſixth Arguments, to prove a ſingle Congregation to be a compleat Subject of Eccleſiaſtical Power, drawn, 1. From being a Body of Chriſt compleatly ordained. 2. Becauſe Worſhip and Government are commenſurate. 3. From the Nature of Excommunication. p. 116.

Chap. 3. The ſeventh Argument, to prove that a ſingle Congregation is the intire Seat of Church-Power, becauſe thus there appears a Harmony in all the Eccleſiaſtical Adminiſtrations. p. 122.

Chap. 4. The eighth, ninth and tenth Arguments, to prove a Congregational Church to be the due Subject of Eccleſiaſtical Power, becauſe Admonitions are to be given, and Excommunication to be adminiſtred in the Preſence of ſuch a Church. p. 128.

Chap. 5. The eleventh and twelfth Arguments, proving ſingle Congregations inabled to exert all Acts of Church-Power. That ſuch Churches there were in the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity. That the Apoſtles planted ſuch Churches that had the intire Power within themſelves. p. 132.

Chap. 6. Some Exceptions made againſt the laſt Argument, as not concluſive, removed: How we are to conſider the Churches, as at firſt planted by the Apoſtles, as Patterns and Examples to us. p. 134.

Chap. 7. Two Queries reſolved. 1. When a Church hath but one Elder, or none at all, whether it retains its Power. 2, Whether a particular Congregation having compleat Power in it ſelf, may oblige it ſelf, in a conſtant way, to ask Advice and Direction from a Conſiſtory of Preſbyteries. Reſolved in the Negative, and proved by ſeveral Reaſons. p. 138.

Chap. 8. Some Objections anſwered. p. 147.

BOOK IV.

The Claims of the Preſbyterian Government conſidered and refuted. That the Church Univerſal is not a Church Political, and the Seat of Government. That the Inſtitution for Worſhip and Government falleth not upon the Saints in a Nation, as a Nation or Kingdom, to be the Seat of it. That an Argument cannot be urged for a Na-

National Church-Government, from the Inſtance of the Jewiſh Pattern. That a ſtanding Presbytery is not to be ſet up to exerciſe Power and Juriſdiction over particular Congregations.

Chap. 1. That the Church Univerſal is not a Church Political, and the Seat of Inſtituted Government. p. 151.
Chap. 2. That the Inſtitution for Worſhip and Government falleth not upon the Saints in a Nation, qua Nation or Kingdom, as the Seat of it. p. 161.
Chap. 3. That the external Inſtitutions of Chriſt for the Government of his Saints under the New Teſtament, is not the ſame that was under the Law, nor can the Government of the Jewiſh Church be made a certain Rule for the Government of the Church of Chriſt. p. 166.
Chap. 4. Whether a fixed and conſtant Aſſembly of Presbyters or Elders have a Right of Authority over particular Congregations. The Queſtion ſtated. p. 176.
Chap. 5. That if a Presbytery of Elders be erected, having Power over many Congregations, beſides their general Relation, they would alſo bear a particular Relation to each Congregation. p. 180.
Chap. 6. The Incongruities which flow from the Elders of a Presbytery, ſuſtaining ſpecial Relation of Elders to all the particular Congregations. p. 187.

BOOK V.

The Juriſdiction of Synods debated. That Appeals are not neceſſary to the Government of the Churches; and therefore there is no neceſſity of Synods upon that account. What Power may be allowed to a Synod, occaſionally meeting to conſider the male-Adminiſtration of any particular Church. That they have not that grand Prerogative of Power given by Chriſt, to excommunicate other Churches; and ſo by that Rod to inforce them to revoke their Sentence of male-Adminiſtration, and to receive a Perſon wrongfully excommunicated by them. The Subordination of Synods conſidered and refuted. Tho particular Churches are not ſubject to the Juriſdiction of Synods, yet they are not wholly independent, but there is a Communion which they ought to hold one with another.

Chap. 1. Concerning Appeals; that they are not abſolutely neceſſary to the Government of the Churches. p. 197.
Chap. 2. What Power Synods compoſed of the Elders of particular Churches occaſionally aſſembled have, in caſe of male-Adminiſtrations by any particular Church. p. 202.
Chap. 3. The other Prerogative of Power challenged by Synods to excommunicate other Churches, conſidered and invalidated. p. 204.
Chap. 4. Arguments againſt Subordination of Synods to exerciſe Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction or Government. The firſt Argument, that there is no Warrant or Deſignment of ſuch a Subordination in all the Scriptures. p. 211.
Chap. 5. The ſecond Argument againſt Subordination of Synods, that it would introduce a Foreign Eccleſiaſtical Power over every State and Kingdom. The third Argument, that there is no conſtant ſtanding Rule by which ſuch a Subordination ſhould be ordered and managed. p. 214.
Chap. 6. The fourth Argument againſt Subordination of Synods, that it requireth Repreſentations of ſpiritual Power, ariſing from other Repreſentations. p. 217.
Chap. 7. Reaſons againſt the Allegation brought of Acts 15. for the Subordination of Synods, Provincial, National, Oecumenical. And Reaſons againſt the Argument drawn from the Analogy of Mat. 18. p. 219.
Chap. 8. Of the Intercourſe or Communion which particular Churches are to hold one with another. That there is a twofold Communion of Saints, the one ariſing from the Relation which they all bear to one another, as Members of Chriſt's Myſtical Body; the other, which proceeds from their being formed into particular Churches by Chriſt's Inſtitution. That the Duties of Catholick Communion, which one Believer owes to another by virtue of their all being Members of the ſame Myſtical Body of Chriſt, thoſe Duties one or many Churches may and ought to perform to another Church. p. 222.
Chap. 9. The ſeveral Duties of Communion which one Church owes to another enumerated. That this Communion doth not include in it, that one Church may exerciſe any Act of Juriſdiction over another. p. 227.
Chap. 10. That tho it were granted that the Elders of one Church might exerciſe Acts of Authority and Juriſdiction in another, occaſionally, and when called to do ſo by that Church; yet from this cannot be concluded that Authority over particular Congregations which our Presbyterian Brethren challenge. p. 231.
Chap. 11. That Churches in the ſame Nation are obliged to maintain a nearer Communion one with another, than what all Churches, tho ſeparated by diſtinct Kingdoms, are bound to, by virtue of their Catholick Obligation. p. 234.
Chap. 12. That tho no Church or Churches have the Power to excommunicate any other Churches, yet they have Authority of declaring Non-communion with them, upon occaſion of juſt Offence given. p. 237.

BOOK VI.

Of the Conſtitution of a particular Congregational Church. The Riſe, Inſtitution and Definition of it. A Compariſon between it and the Church Univerſal. That Chriſt hath given to his Saints a Right and Liberty of gathering into ſuch Holy Societies. That in doing ſo they are not guilty of ſinful Separation or Schiſm. Of the diverſe kinds of Officers in a Church. That there is an Inſtitution for each ſort. That the Paſtor and Teacher are equal in Authority and Power. Of the Exerciſe of the Communion of Saints, which the Members of a Church ought to have one with another.

Chap. 1. The Reaſons why God and Chriſt would have a Church, as the Seat of Divine Worſhip, wherein they might be adored and praiſed. What a Church is. That Saints or Perſons regenerated rated and holy are the proper Matter of it. The Church is either the univerſal myſtical Church, or a particular Congregation. The Grounds of this Diſtinction ſhewed from Scripture. p. 242.

Chap. 2. The Reaſons why Chriſt hath inſtituted a Congregational Church. p. 246.

Chap. 3. A Compariſon between the Church Myſtical, Univerſal, and an inſtituted particular Church. Wherein they both agree, and in what Reſpects there is a Difference between the one and the other. The Definition of a Congregational Church. p. 248.

Chap. 4. That Jeſus Chriſt hath given Liberty and Power to his Saints to imbody themſelves into Congregational Churches. That in doing ſo, they are not guilty of ſinful Separation or Schiſm. p. 256.

Chap. 5. That it is neceſſary there ſhould be various kinds of Officers in a Church, and that each ſhould be ſettled by a Divine Inſtitution. p. 262.

Chap. 6. That particular Congregations are each of them to have more Elders than one ſet over them for the publick Adminiſtration of their Worſhip and Government. p. 270.

Chap. 7. That the Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath not only appointed many Officers to be in every particular Church, but hath aſſigned Offices of different kinds, which they ought to diſcharge, Rom. 12. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. p. 271.

Chap. 8. Wherein the Diſtinction of the Officers in a Church conſiſts, and what are the due and proper Bounds of their ſeveral Offices and Duties; the Difference between Paſtor, Elder and Teacher ſtated. That they are co-ordinate, and that one hath not an Authority and Power ſuperior to the other: what are their diſtinct Offices and Adminiſtrations. p. 282.

Chap. 9. That a Paſtor and Teacher, and many other Officers of a particular Church have the Promiſe of a ſpecial Bleſſing from God. That accordingly they do receive ſuch a ſpecial Bleſſing ſuted to the Rank and Order of their Office, to give Succeſs in the execution of it, beyond what a mere Preacher can expect. p. 290.

Chap. 10. Of the Communion of Saints, which the Members of a Church ought to have one with another. p. 298.

BOOK VII.

That the Preaching of the Goſpel is an Ordinance of Jeſus Chriſt, inſtituted for the Converſion of Sinners, and for the Edification of the Saints. Of the Uſe and Neceſſity of Miniſters wholly ſet apart to preach. That Chriſt by his Inſtitution hath appointed a due Maintenance for Miniſters. Concerning the time for the Adminiſtration of Ordinances, and whether the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper ought to be adminiſtred on every Lord's Day. Whether, in caſe of neceſſity, a Church may by common Conſent divide themſelves, to meet in ſeveral Parts, and receive the Lord's Supper in ſuch diſtinct Meetings, rather than omit that Ordinance wholly. Whether in caſe of apparent Danger of Life, Loſs of Eſtate rationally foreſeen, or in caſe of Force and Violence, cauſing Ordinances to ceaſe, there may not be a prudent Forbearance or ſecret Avoidance. Whether one who is not a Church-Member, may be the Subject of Baptiſm. Whether one who is not a Paſtor may adminiſter Baptiſm. Whether a Church may depoſe an Officer for a Fault which doth not deſerve Excommunication. Of anointing with Oil. Of Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience to be granted to particular Churches, tho differing from the National Conſtitution.

Chap. 1. That the Preaching of the Goſpel is an Ordinance inſtituted by Chriſt for the Converſion of Sinners and Edification of the Saints. The Reaſon why he hath choſen the Preaching of the Word by Men to be the Means of Salvation rather than any other. The Pleas which Men make againſt their conſtant Attendance on the Preaching of the Word as needleſs, anſwered. p. 304.

Chap. 2. Of the End and Deſign of the Miniſtry, and of the Uſe and Neceſſity of Miniſters ſet apart to preach, and devoting themſelves wholly to that Work. p. 310.

Chap. 3. The Character and Duty of a true faithful Miniſter of the Goſpel. p. 317.

Chap. 4. Of the Miniſter's Maintenance. Of the Right and Tenure by which he hath a Claim to it. Of the Ways and Means by which it is to be ſettled and raiſed. p. 322.

Chap. 5. Whether the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper ought to be adminiſtred every Lord's day. p. 328

Chap. 6. Some Caſes concerning the Time of the Adminiſtration of Ordinances reſolv'd. p. 345.

Chap. 7. Whether a Church of Chriſt may lawfully make an Agreement among themſelves to divide themſelves into ſeveral Parts, and to have the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper adminiſtred to one of theſe Parts one Lord's Day, and ſo ſucceſſively to every part of the Church. p. 350.

Chap. 8. Whether in caſe of apparent Danger of Life, Loſs of Eſtate rationally foreſeen, or in caſe of Violence and Force, cauſing Ordinances to ceaſe, there may not be a prudent Forbearance or ſecret Avoidance. p. 356.

Chap. 9. Two Caſes reſolved, Whether a Perſon who is not a Church-Member may be the Subject of Baptiſm. Whether a Miniſter who is not a Paſtor may adminiſter Baptiſm. p. 377.

OF THE OBJECT and ACTS OF Juſtifying Faith.

Of the Object of Faith.

BOOK I.
The Mercies in God's Nature the Object, and Support, and Encouragement of Faith. How we are to act Faith thereon.

CHAP. I.

The words of the Text opened. That the MERCIES in God's HEART and Nature, are a Fundamental Object and Support of Faith. Preſumption thereon beaten off.

PSAL. 130. 7.

Let Iſrael hope in the Lord, for with the Lord there is Mercy; and with him is plenteous Redemption.

THE Work of Faith whereby a Sinner's Heart is firſt won, then John 6. ſtrengthened and ſupported to truſt and ſtay it ſelf on God, for 29. its eternal Salvation, is in general experience, found to be a Matter of greateſt Difficulty, Exerciſe and Conflict. There is need therefore of all ſorts of Encouragements and Suggeſts, that can poſſibly be raiſed out of the Holy Scriptures, with the largeſt dilatings on them; which may either ſerve to bring humbled and broken Hearts and God together at firſt, or afterwards to hearten them to hold faſt the beginning of Heb. 3. 6, their Confidence firm and ſtedfaſt to the End; and all little enough: Such, and ſo 14. great, and ſo manifold are the Diſcouragements, which Unbelief within us doth foment, and which Satan doth indiſcernably caſt in. Now above all other inducers, and ſupporters unto Faith, the conſideration of the Mercies in God's Heart and Nature, is the ſtrongeſt, the moſt winning and obliging. Unto throughly humbled and broken Hearts, it is I write this: As for others who were never heavy laden with Sin, look as Sin ſits light upon their Hearts, ſo they ſet as light by the Mercies of God; and a confuſed ſlight apprehenſion that God is merciful (which yet is their common Plea) ſerves their turn, and is a Salve ſufficient for their Sore: Which indeed is but proportionable unto that like confuſed apprehenſion of their ſinfulneſs, which in like manner they uſe to wrap up, that we are all Sinners. Ay, but take a Soul that hath been unhinged from off the Opinion of his being in a good Eſtate, (which is ſo natural to us, and our Souls do turn themſelves upon) and who alſo is made throughly ſenſible of the abounding ſinfulneſs of Sin, as Sin, the leaſt; and then hath taken in the diſmal Proſpect of the hainous Guilt of his bold Preſumptions and crying Rebellions againſt Knowledg; and eſpecially hath been amazed with that numberleſs account, of the innumerable Multitude and variety of Sinnings, which he is to give unto God the Judg of all Men; and together herewith hath been ſtruck as with Lightning and a Thunderbolt, with the dreadfulneſs of that Wrath of the great God that is due thereunto; (all which apprehenſions do yet prepare Mens Souls for Faith juſtifying, and diſpoſe them the more readily to attend to, and take in theſe encouragements unto Faith that follow) and to work ſome apprehenſions of theſe, and to ſet forth theſe, hath been the drift of thoſe the Subjects of the foregoing Treatiſes. Unto ſuch a Soul, (I ſay) filled with the Apprehenſions of theſe things, the moſt enlarged, full diſcovery that can any way be made of the riches of the Mercies that are in the Heart and Nature of God, and of the fulneſs of Merit that is in Chriſt's Righteouſneſs and Redemption, do all prove little enough effective, either to beget a ſound and ſaving Faith, (when upon this Conviction it is anew to be wrought in ſuch a Soul); or when ſome beginnings of that Faith are in ſome degree raiſed, to keep it up, nouriſh and ſuſtain it, in a comfortable Reſt and Confidence unto the end. Which Difficulty doth not ariſe from any Want or Scantneſs in the Objects themſelves, which are ſo over-rich and ſuper-abundant for the Pardon of Sinners; but from the deep incredulity, and vaſt Fears, Jealouſies, and Miſgivings, which our Souls (when the hideous apparitions of Sin and Wrath are raiſed up once in Mens Conſciences) do create and harbour in themſelves in Matters of ſo infinite Moment, as Salvation and Damnation appear then to be at ſuch times. The truth of theſe things (beſides daily experience) we may readily perceive by the Pulſe of his Heart that penned this Pſalm, and the beatings thereof therein: who being ſunk into the greateſt Depths [Out of the Depths have I cried, &c.] which Depths (when we fathom them) we find to be his Sins, both in the Multitude and Heinouſneſs of them, as the following verſe, ver. 3. tells us; [If thou Lord ſhouldſt mark Iniquities (therein lay the bottom of his Diſtreſs) O Lord who ſhall ſtand?] In which Conflict and ſad Condition, what hath his Faith its next and immediate recourſe unto of all other things, which the Word of God (for that, as the 5*th verſe* ſays, he conſulted) did afford; and which he commends unto all the Iſrael of God, ver. 7. as the maineſt prop and ſupport unto his and their Faith? Even this, WITH THE LORD THERE IS MERCY, and with him there is PLENTEOUS REDEMPTION, v. 7. And then again, WITH THEE THERE IS FORGIVENESS, verſe 4. as the Fruit both of Mercy and Redemption: and therefore it is that my Soul doth wait for the Lord, verſe 7. And therefore let Iſrael hope in the Lord. And he ſhall redeem Iſrael from all his Iniquities, ver. 7 and 8. this is the ſummary effect of this Pſalm. Nor yet herein do we find this poor humbled Soul to pitch his Hope and Confidence upon any gracious Works had been wrought, or were in or with himſelf; he is altogether ſilent as to any mention of ſuch: but wholly and abſolutely his Affiance is upon what was with God, and in God, Mercy is with him, &c. (ſays he.) And this is it was the Foundation and bottom of his Hope; this was all he had (now) to ſay: and yet oppoſeth this alone unto all the Sins and Iniquities which came up before his view, whether in their Greatneſs or Multitude. There is Mercy with God, enough to pardon them, yea and more than enough, [plenteous] Redemption, overflowing Redemption, and of Mercies together with it. Again, whether all theſe Mercies were as yet his own in particular or no, he ſpeaks not that neither; nor whether God were the God of his Mercies (as David, when ſtabliſh'd in Aſſurance elſewhere ſpeaks, Pſal. 89. 10.) but only utters this for the preſent, (and that he was ſure of) that Mercy was with God, and in God; Forgiveneſs was with him, there it was to be had for ſuch Sinners as he was, and for the Iſrael of God, and therefore he perſonally puts in for a ſhare in them, that was all his Hope. Yea, and thereupon he quietly waits (as he there profeſſeth to do) till the Lord ſhould give forth ſome farther ſpecial word of Comfort to his doleful and deſolate Soul.

I. Three things are here ſaid, to be [with God:] which phraſe [with God] he again and again chooſeth to expreſs the Grounds of his Hope in God by. He applies it, 1. To Mercy, the Original and Womb of all; Mercy is with him. When a Quality is in one as a Diſpoſition, or his Nature, we find it ſaid, that [it is with him] of Nabal, Folly is [with him] as is his Name, ſo is he, 1 Sam. 25. 25. 2. To Redemption, which I underſtand to be the Mediation and Satisfaction of the Meſſiah, (which was in thoſe times in the Pſalmiſt and other Believers Eyes) the procuring Cauſe of all. 3. To Forgiveneſs, as the Fruit and Effect of both; Forgiveneſs (alſo) is with thee.

Yet II. Theſe three are ſaid to be [with him] in a differing Senſe or Reſpect.

1. Mercy is with God, that is, it is in him as his Nature, and is all one as if he had ſaid, he is of himſelf, and of his own inclination a moſt gracious and merciful God, mercifully diſpoſed to forgive; ready to forgive, as the 85*th Pſalm* expreſſeth it: It is his Name, it is his Nature, and in this Senſe it is ſaid to be with him; it is alſo in his Purpoſes and Reſolutions of his Will, yea, it is the Delight of his Soul.

2. Redemption is in that Senſe ſaid to be with God, as his Treaſures are elſewhere ſaid to be with him, that is, laid up with him or by him, Deut. 32. 34. And thus Chriſt's Redemption or Righteouſneſs was then with him, in the Virtue of Chriſt's Bond and Covenant given to God to perform it; and as truly with God then, as ſince that Chriſt hath actually paid it; Chriſt being the Lamb ſlain from the beginning of the World. And God did accordingly then under the Old Teſtament, pardon Sinners upon the Intuition and Security thereof, as Rom. 3. 25, 26. ſhews; which Place plainly ſpeaks forth this Truth, as alſo Acts 15. 11. the ſame: in Job you have a Term equivalent unto the Pſalmiſt's word Redemption, Job 33. 24. Deliver him, (ſaith God of an humbled Sinner) I have found a RANSOM or Atonement.

III. In the Virtue and Intuition of theſe two, it is that David ſays, Forgiveneſs is alſo with him, that is, it is laid up ready by him on purpoſe to be had from him: As Money coined lies ready by a rich Man, as a rich Man lays up ready Money deſigned for ſuch a ſpecial Uſe; ſo is Forgiveneſs laid up as on purpoſe. He is ready to forgive, Pſal. 86. 5. And God hath minted his Mercies forth from out of his Purpoſes into Promiſes, where they lie expoſed, and to be given forth to every one that will come in for Grace, and take them from Mercies Hands, even Redemption from all Iniquity, whereof there is this undoubted Evidence given in the Pſalm, that God would have the Sons of Men thereupon, and for that Cauſe to fear him, that is, to worſhip him and come to him; which if Forgiveneſs were not [with him] and to be had from him, for them, they would never do. You find moreover a ſpecial Encomium of [plenteous] given to one of thoſe three, in ſaying [plenteous Redemption] which is placed in the midſt of the three, on purpoſe to ſhew that the Glory of this Epithet is to be transfuſed to both thoſe other; and ſo what is given to that one, is in like manner to be attributed to the other two, but eſpecially unto the firſt, viz. [Mercy] which hath in other Scriptures eminently the Glory of Riches or Plenteouſneſs aſcribed unto it; that being the Original both of Redemption and Forgiveneſs, and they but Derivatives from it: And ſo it is all one as if he had plainly ſaid, that [plenteous] Mercy alſo is with him. And indeed elſewhere David gives the very ſame attribute unto Mercy, Pſal. 103. 8. The Lord is plenteous in Mercy; and for that other of Forgiveneſs, (the Effect of both) it is impliedly all one, as if he had ſaid of that alſo, that plenteous Forgiveneſs is with him, which very ſtile God himſelf doth in Terms equivalent elſewhere uſe of it, Iſa. 55. 7. I will abundantly pardon. So then Plenteouſneſs and Riches were intended, and are to be attributed to them all, but above all unto Mercy, of which you ſo often read, the ſame to be ſpoken, as abundant Mercy, 1 Pet. 1. 2. the exceeding Riches of his Grace, Eph. 2. 8.

The Heart and Drift of the Pſalmiſt being thus laid open, I begin with the MERCIES of God, theſe being the Original, the Matrix, the Primo primum, the firſt cauſes of our Salvation, and that other of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs (or Redemption) but a Primo ortum, or that which ſprang or roſe up from thence; this therefore of the Mercies in God's Heart ought to have the Priority, as having deſervedly the Preheminence in the thing it ſelf, and as being moſt Fundamental, and accordingly procreative of Faith.

The OBSERVATION for our Practice which comes forth and meets us out of the whole, is, That it is a moſt behoveful and advantagious way for humbled Sinners, in their treaties with God for Forgiveneſs, to take the moſt ample view of the infinite Mercies that are in the Heart and Nature of God, together with Promiſes of Forgiveneſs indefinitely delivered, and ſo to plead them unto God. Which to do, will prove the great- Obſerv.

eſt Support and Strength to their Souls for believing. This, I confeſs to be in view ſo plain a Point, and ſo obvious in the very propoſal of it unto every common Underſtanding in Chriſtianity, that it will perhaps be wondred at that I ſhould ſo largely inſiſt upon it; yet this I will aforehand ſay, that the true and real ſpiritual Exerciſe and Practice of it, as it is not commonly enough and experimentally underſtood, but very greatly diſuſed; ſo the Uſe and Benefit that follows thereupon, is exceeding great, and not ſufficiently known. And unto Souls humbled and broken (as aforeſaid) that this Courſe ſhould be taken by them, is ſo remote from ſtrengthning Preſumption in them, that on the contrary (through the Efficacy of the ſame Mercy) it proves moſt operative to make the Soul holy and obedient unto God; according unto that true antient and frequent Character given of Saints under the Old Teſtament, where we find theſe two joined, as impoſſible to be ever ſeparated, (when they are in Truth either of them) One that feareth God (whereby his Obedience is expreſſed) and that hopes in his Mercy, (whereby his Faith is expreſſed) as Pſal. 33.18. Behold the Eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his Mercy: And Pſal. 147. 11. The Lord taketh pleaſure in them that fear him, in thoſe that hope in his Mercy. And as you find theſe two diſtinctly thus mentioned, and theſe two alone mentioned, to ſpeak the whole Sum of all true practical Religion; ſo of the two you find the ſpecial Indigitation to be ſet over, and put on that latter of theſe Characters in both places [UPON THEM] that hope in his Mercy: thoſe, and thoſe eſpecially, that are eminent in that Grace, it is, that his Eyes are upon, and whom he hath pleaſure in. And let this be ſufficient once for all, to ſtrike off the preſumptuouſneſs of impenitent Sinners, that reſolve to go on in Sin, from laying on its impure Hands upon theſe Holy Mercies (as the Mercies of Chriſt are ſtiled by the Apoſtle, Acts 13. 34. out of Iſa. 55. 3. ſee the Margent of your Bibles). And finally to roll the fatal Stone upon the Sepulchre of ſuch Sinners as ſhall thus preſume on Mercy, take but that one Scripture, Deut. 29. 18, 19, 20. If any Man or Woman hearing the words of this Curſe, (which is there pronounced upon one's turning away from the Lord, after the tender of the Covenant of Grace, publiſhed in that and the following Chapter, as Rom. 10. ſhews) ſhall bleſs himſelf in his Heart, ſaying, I ſhall have Peace though I walk in the imagination of mine Heart: The anger of the Lord ſhall ſmoke againſt that Man, and all the Curſes that are written in this Book, ſhall lie upon him, and the Lord ſhall blot out his Name from under Heaven. And this to be ſure is load enough to preſs down ſuch Sinners above any other, to the very bottom of Hell, who bearing themſelves upon that Grace made known, and tendred them, ſhall wilfully go on in Sin without Repentance and turning unto God.

CHAP. II.

An Explication how this Aſſertion is to be underſtood: 1. On the Negative. Not as if alone conſidered, the Mercies in God (as they are abſtractly in God's Nature) were a ſole Foundation for Faith; but as being joined with an indefinite declaration of his Good-will to us Men: and in that conjuncture, all the Mercies that are in God do flow in to ſupport our Faith. This Negative part of this Explication confirmed from the inſtance of the Devils, and of our firſt Parents, until God's Revelation of his Good-will to Mankind made to them. 2. The poſitive Ground of Faith laid open; and the Reaſon why a Declaration of his Will is neceſſary. Two premiſory Cautions more added, for the underſtanding the Aſſertion.

ERE I come to the Proof of the ASSERTION, it is neceſſary to ſtate and explain it to prevent miſtakes.

And firſt on the Negative, it is not, as if the Knowledg of the Mercies in God's Nature were alone a ſingle adequate Ground of Faith, though we could attain unto never ſo inlarged apprehenſions thereof. This Negative is evident,

1. Becauſe where and whom God hath abſolutely and peremptorily, and for ever, by a ſpecial Bar and Proviſo, declared, and excepted from Mercy and Pardon; There and unto thoſe, all the Mercies that are in God's Nature, though known by them, can no way be drawn in, or ever become an Object or Ground for their Faith, ſuch as ſhall any way benefit thoſe Perſons declared againſt. This is the Caſe of the Devils, who are ſhut out from Mercy: and this not only by that ſingle Bolt of the Law, Curſed be every one that continues not, &c. (for that doth alike ſhut us Men up, until Faith (that is the Goſpel) be revealed) but they have that, and a farther and ſtronger Bolt and Bar, never to be ſhut back, or rather (as the Apoſtle metaphors it) everlaſting Chains, of God's making, (never to be broken or knock'd off) that hold them faſt under Darkneſs. Which Chains are ſuper-added to that ſingle Sentence or Curſe which merely the Law pronounceth againſt them, (for that alone might have been annulled, through a Grace of Pardon, as well as to us Men it is) but God did further declare irrecoverably againſt them, and each of them, perſonally, on the Negative, that he will never be merciful to them: He ſpared them not, ſays the Apoſtle, but caſt them down to Hell, and delivered them into Chains of Darkneſs, to be reſerved unto Judgment; he gave them no Quarter. And thereupon ſome Divines have ſaid (which I will not diſpute) that Deſpair of Mercy, taken abſtractly, for this ſingle Apprehenſion in their Underſtandings, that God will have no Mercy on them; and that Apprehenſion alſo as it is accompanied ſimply with no Hope of Mercy, that this alone would be no Sin in them, ſeeing it is but conformed unto what is the Truth, which God hath revealed to them, concerning themſelves: only the Conſequences hereof in them, are the Sins, as Blaſphemy, and the like.

2. But however, Secondly, I may more ſafely aſſert, whatſoever the Devils do believe, or may be ſuppoſed to believe of the Mercies that are in God's Nature, that yet, however, their Faith thereof doth no way capacitate them to lay hold upon them for Pardon, but cauſe them the more to tremble at the Thoughts that they are for ever utterly excluded, whilſt they revolve within themſelves, that ſuch Riches of Mercy are in God, but in no wiſe do concern them, and withal to think (which hath the Sting in it) that all thoſe Mercies ſhould be kept and intirely reſerved (as God's Expreſſion in the ſecond Commandment is) for the Sinners of the Sons of Men, while themſelves on the contrary are kept and reſerved under thoſe Chains unto Judgment, (as the Words of two Apoſtles are, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6.) But, that theſe Apprehenſions ſhould inrage and provoke them, unto that reſolved and obſtinate Malice and Revenge, which they bear againſt God; theſe all I am ſure (without any Debate) are Sins; yea, the higheſt kinds of Sinnings, and yet are but the Conſequents of that Deſpair forementioned, which in it ſelf alone would be no Sin.

3. Nor yet, Thirdly, would the ſingle Knowledg of all the Mercies that are in the Nature of God, have been a full and ſole Ground of actual poſitive Faith, unto us Sinners of the Sons of Men, had not God upon the Fall firſt unboſomed himſelf, and declared his Purpoſes of Mercy towards us in his Meſſiah. Our firſt Parents, during that doleful Space or Interim (Suſpenſion ſhall I call it) between their Fall, and that (ever to be bleſſed) Declaration let fall by God, of his good Will to Men, in the Promiſe of the bleſſed Seed of the Woman, &c. until then I ſay, although they were not utterly debarred, upon their Sinning, as the Devils were upon theirs, yet they had not any Ground or Footing, for a poſitive Act of Faith, for Forgiveneſs: notwithſtanding we ſhould or might ſuppoſe them to have known, and (after their Fall) to have retained, and continued to have known or remembred that infinite Goodneſs (which is the Spring of Mercies in God) to have been in the Divine Nature, as well as any other divine Perfections; and that poſſibly that Goodneſs might be diſſolved and melted into Mercy and Forgiveneſs unto Sinners, ſuch as now themſelves were become. But yet ſtill the Curſe of the Law, Thou ſhalt die the Death, ſtanding in full Force, and full Butt (as we ſay) againſt them; and that being the whole of the Mind and Will of God, which at that preſent was revealed to them; therefore they had no Door of Faith and Hope any way open before them, but were, as to their own Apprehenſion, utterly ſhut up, unleſs ſome Word of Faith ſhould be further made known to them. God had not let fall the leaſt Intimation of Mercy, neither by proclaiming his Nature to be merciful; nor as yet had he ſaid, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious; nor was there any Inſtance or Example of any one of the Sons of Men (for alas there were but thoſe two extant) whom he had de facto pardoned, which might give them any Encouragement, or Dawn of Hope.

But notwithſtanding perhaps it might be propoſed as a Queſtion that would require a juſt Debate, Whether an utter Deſpair (ſuch as we ſpeak of, to be in the Devils) ſingly conſidered, and cut off from the curſed Conſequents forementioned, had not yet in them been properly a Sin during that Interval, which in the Devils ſimply and alone it is not. And the Ground of the Demur is this apparent Difference between the Devils Condition and theirs, during that Space: that God had not negatively pronounced of them, I will never be merciful, as of the Devils he had from the firſt of their Sinning. Yet ſtill this muſt be ſaid, that they had not the ſmalleſt Twig for a poſitive Act of Faith, to ſet foot upon: (I allude to that in Noah's Flood) but in that Condition of theirs, nothing in ſight did appear, but an over-flowing Deluge of Wrath, which did environ and over-ſpread them, and their Poſterity in and with them, through the firſt Curſe, not as yet taken off, nor mitigated by any new Declaration of God. This for the Negative State of the Aſſertion.

II. For the poſitive Ground of Faith. Bleſſed, yea for ever bleſſed be our God, who hath not only by that Promiſe to them, but with Millions of other Promiſes and Declarations ſince made to us, thrown open all the Windows of Heaven, and freely expoſed all the Mercies in his Heart and Nature, unto us the ſinful Sons of Men, Peace on Earth, good Will towards Men, &c. (not in Hell, nor to the Devils:) And withal hath given an Invitation, nay a Command, to hope in them; and hath taught us to know him by this of his Mercy, (above all his Perfections) yea and pronounced of our Knowledg and Faith thereon, that he eſteems it to be our Glory, yea his own greateſt Glory, that we ſhould know him to be a God that exerciſeth Loving-kindneſs, Righteouſneſs and Judgment in the Earth; (on Earth ſtill, not in Hell) and that therein he doth delight, Jer. 9. 24. Moreover, in that he hath not, by any expreſs Proviſo or Exception, declared againſt any ſort of Sinners, or any individual Perſon of the Sons of Men; ſo as to ſay of any ſuch, or ſuch, I will never be merciful to, nor pardon them (as againſt the Devils he did) that ſort only excepted that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt; thereby it comes to paſs, that not any one can ſay, I am debarr'd or excluded. And hence a wide Door for Hope and Faith ſtands open, for any one to come in at. Nay, he further commands every Man every where to repent, upon the Hopes of Mercy, through the indefinite Promulgation of it; adding withal, whoſoever believeth and repenteth, he ſhall be ſaved, laying at the Gage for the Performance thereof, all the Mercies in his Nature, which we, thorow theſe Declarations, have free Acceſs unto, and full Liberty to plead them all afore him, and urge him with them. The Product or Iſſue of all which is, that the Revelation of the Mercies of his Nature thus joined with the Declarations of his gracious Willingneſs to ſhew Mercy to us Men, is now become a juſt and meet Ground and Object for a Sinner's Faith: Whereas otherwiſe, like as Breaſts never ſo full, if there were not a Teat, and a Vent fitted to the Child's Mouth, they would never afford any Succour to a periſhing Infant; ſo here in this Caſe. And it is not an Alluſion foreign to the Scriptures, to compare God's Mercies and Promiſes unto Breaſts of Conſolation. And the Reaſon of this Concluſion is, becauſe God's ſhewing or his actual exerciſing of Mercy dependeth upon an Act of his Will, and is not a mere, ſole, ſingle Effect of his Nature. For if it were ſolely an Act of his Nature, it would have been, and would ſtill be neceſſary for him to ſhew Mercy on the Devils: and therefore look as God's actual ſhewing Mercy, dependeth upon an Act of his Will, I will be merciful to whom I will, &c. ſo ſome Revelation or Manifeſtation of his good Will, (at leaſt indefinite to Mankind) is neceſſary to our Faith, and not merely the Knowledg of the Mercy in his Nature; and as both concur to the effecting the thing, ſo alſo the Apprehenſion of both ſhould do unto our believing. And otherwiſe, Who hath known the Mind of the Lord, or who hath been his Counſellor? Rom. 11. 34. And it is notorious, that the Apoſtle utters that Maxim upon this very Point of God's Will, in ſhewing Mercy, for which compare ver. 30, 31, 32.

I add unto theſe things concerning the ſtating of this Aſſertion, theſe two Premiſes more, for the practical underſtanding of it.

1. I muſt not be underſtood, as if that every time the Soul doth exerciſe an Act of Faith, he muſt of abſolute Neceſſity take into his Thoughts ſuch an ample Review of

theſe Mercies : And that otherwiſe it were not Faith : No. For it often falls out, that in the exerciſing of Believing, ſuch things as are moſt fundamental to Faith, and were at firſt explicitely taken in and conſidered by Believers, are afterwards but as things taken for granted and ſuppoſed : and yet notwithſtanding, all thoſe ſubſequent after-Acts of Faith are put forth in the Strength of them. We may know, that general Principles of Knowledg in any kind being once inlaid and pre-conceived, do yet virtually work, and the Force of them conduces to the making of every Concluſion, when yet we do not explicitely think of thoſe Principles. And in like manner it comes to paſs, that our Souls do many times really act true Faith, upon particular Promiſes of Forgiveneſs, or the like Promiſes, when yet we did not aforehand, or together therewith, revolve in our Minds at large the Thoughts of theſe Mercies, which yet are to be always ſuppoſed the bottom of thoſe Promiſes, and fundamental to our Faith. And notwithſtanding this, yet the Belief of them doth ſecretly and really work and accompany ſuch a Faith : even as Principles of Knowledg, innate and taken for granted, are wont to do our Improvements of Knowledg from them, whilſt thoſe Principles lie dormant as to our thinking, and yet thoſe Improvements grow up in the Virtue and Strength of them. We may ſee this in that one moſt fundamental Principle of Faith of all other, [That there is a God] which being inlaid in the bottom of the Heart of every Believer, works in all particular Acts of Faith whatever : and they are all founded and born up upon the Strength and Weight thereof, when it ſelf, in the way of a formed Propoſition, is not diſcerned, nor brought forth into an explicite Act or Thought. And thus it falls out in the Faith of Forgiveneſs, it is always put forth in the Force of the Belief of thoſe Mercies, when yet the Conceptions thereof lay hidden deep in the Soul. Which to be ſo, may appear by this Experiment ; that all our Faith for Forgiveneſs, may, at any time, be readily and finally reſolved into the Mercies of God, as the ultimum Objectum in quod, as the ultimate Object or Foundation. This will be found if the Heart will at any time call for the bottom-ground of its Faith, or of its Recourſe unto God for Forgiveneſs, and but ask of it ſelf the Reaſon why it ſo believes. Yet,

2. It ſtill ſtands good (and is even ſufficiently inferred from that which was laſt ſaid) that the more ample diffuſed Proſpect, View and Contemplation of theſe Mercies, which upon all great Occaſions (eſpecially in Conflicts of Believing) we can poſſibly make, or attain to, is the moſt conducible expedite way, to give an abundant Evidence unto Faith, and doth wonderfully hearten a broken-hearted Sinner to lay hold upon any particular Promiſe, eſpecially of Forgiveneſs: which otherwiſe comes but barely clad, in compariſon of what it appears to be, when the Riches of Mercy (being apprehended with it) do environ and array it, which ſuper-add wonderful Allurements to our Faith. And this Aſſertion, as I ſaid, is inferred even from what was ſpoken afore, viz. that if the tacite hidden Belief of fundamental Principles (ſuch this is) do virtually, yet ſtrongly influence all ſubſequent Acts of Faith, then much more if there be an extenſive revolving of them in our Thoughts, they will come to have, according to the Proportion of that Inlargement, (through the Spirit's accompanying of them) anſwerable Effects, in an Inlargement and Increaſe of Faith in us.

CHAP. III.

The Proofs of this Aſſertion : 1. By Scripture ; and afterwards by Reaſons: One Scripture above all other ſingled forth, and that alone ; Exod. 34. 6, 7. This made a new Text for the ſubſequent Diſcourſe : The grand Aſſertion reſolved unto two Heads ; both of them diſtinctly drawn out, and propoſed to be proved out of the Text : The Eminency of this one Scripture is commended thereby to all our Faiths: Old Teſtament Faith, and New, one and the ſame.

I Come to the Confirmation of the Aſſertion, as thus ſtated and explained, which proceeds,

1. By Scripture.
2. By the true and innate REASONS thereof, drawn from the NATURE OF FAITH;

FAITH; and the WONDERFVL SVTEDNESS that the Mercies in God's Heart hold, by way of Object with and unto that Principle of Faith in our Hearts, ſo as to attract and draw forth Faith, in all the Acts of it.

1. By Scripture I ſingle out only that renowned Original God himſelf immediately publiſhed unto Moſes, concerning his pardoning Mercies to him and us all: For unto him it was, though on our Behalf alſo, that they were proclaimed, Exod. 34. Two grand Deeds there were, which Old Teſtament-Faith held all upon. The firſt of the Promiſed Meſſiah, given to Eve and Adam, at firſt by God himſelf, the immediate Revealer; and after renewed to Abraham, David, and ſo on. The ſecond, this glorious Diſplay of pardoning Mercies, which was as immediately, but far more ſolemnly proclaimed, Regio more, by God himſelf: And theſe two were as the two Pillars, Boaz and Jachim in the Houſe of God; and are in Pſal. 130. ſet out as two known Cities of Refuge, for broken Hearts to fly unto. I ſhall make the latter of theſe the Stage or Subſtratum of all throughout this Treatiſe; the Grace and Mercy in God being the Originale originans, the Womb or Original even of the Promiſe of Chriſt himſelf, and bears up an anſwerable Pre-eminence of Order and Streſs in the Foundation of our Faith. And this Scripture, Exod. 34. 6, 7. holds forth the ampleſt and largeſt Diſplay of Mercy any other affords. And therefore I have, moſt deſervedly, made choice of this one, to ſuſtain henceforth the whole Weight of all that follows; and ſhall accordingly found all upon it as upon a new Text.

EXOD. XXXIV. 6, 7.

And the Lord paſſed before him, and proclaimed, The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-ſuffering, and abundant in Goodneſs and Truth;

Keeping Mercy for thouſands, forgiving Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion, and Sin; and that will by no means clear the guilty: viſiting the Iniquity of the Fathers upon the Children, and upon the Childrens Children, unto the third and to the fourth Generation.

I Shall not yet handle it in ſuch an orderly and continued way, as is uſual to compleat the Expoſition of a Text; but do reſerve that when I come to the Merits of it afterwards. In the mean while, I ſhall only make Obſervation of ſuch things about and out of it, as do directly tend to prove that general Subject I affixed as the Title to the whole Diſcourſe, in the Front, upon the Entrance unto it. The Subſtance of which is reſolved into two Propoſitions and Heads. 1. That the Mercies in God's Heart and Nature are a prime Object and Support of Faith, as it hath been ſtated. 2. That Mercy and Grace in God are truly and properly Properties of the Divine Nature and Being; or, that God is of a merciful Nature; and that his Heart and Purpoſes are to ſhew Mercy, as the Effects of that Mercy in his Nature: which two will make the Demonſtration compleat. And my Deſign is to alledg the Heads of no other Proofs for either, than what theſe Words, and the Coherence of them, and Circumſtances about them, or Citations of them elſewhere, do afford Ground for: and ſhall call in no other Scriptures, but reductive only, for Aid; and but ſuch as of themſelves will come about this, to back and confirm thoſe Proofs firſt, ſo grounded on the Words. The Grounds for the firſt Head are two. 1*ſt*. Some ſpecial Obſervations made upon this Proclamation it ſelf, of Mercy; which contains the Occaſion, Circumſtances, End, and Purpoſe of it; and the Iſſue and Uſe made of it by Moſes, at that inſtant Time. All which, as they do wonderfully enhance the Grace and Mercy of God proclaimed in it, ſo do mightily alſo commend theſe Words unto our Faith. 2*dly*. That theſe very Words (as to before the Subſtance of them) were ever after made uſe of, as the common Refuge and Aſylum (and therefore the Object) of the Faith of the Saints of the old Teſtament; as to which they ordinarily had Recourſe for their Support, in point of Forgiveneſs, and upon other Occaſions, in which they ſtood in need of Mercy. The Evidence of both which, when they ſhall be ſpread before us, and punctually exemplified in ſo many Inſtances of the beſt and greateſt of Saints, and their Practice, this rich Parcel of Scripture will come concredited and recommended to our Faith; with a mighty Teſtimonial, under the Hands of ſo many renowned Witneſſes, that lived and died in the Faith: As the Apoſtle ſpeaks of thoſe Saints, Heb. 11. throughout that Chapter, and in Chap. 12. And as the Apoſtle there exhorts thoſe Hebrews of the New Teſtament, to live by Faith, from the Inſtances of ſuch a Cloud of Witneſſes, under the Old Teſtament, of whom he gives the Catalogue; ſo may I, upon as juſt a Ground, invite all Believers, heedfully to attend this Scripture; as being alſo the Spring of all other Scriptures, about God's Mercies, that after followed, which are but as leſſer Streams from a Fountain. And I may withal invite them to ſtudy the Mercies of God, as they are ſet forth therein; and to have it much in their Meditations, Treaties, and Pleadings with God, and in all their Exerciſes of Believing; becauſe in this ſmall Compaſs of Words God hath met with, and by it ſupported ſo many of his precious ones of old. And we that are Believers under the New Teſtament, we having the ſame Spirit of Faith; according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I ſpoken, we alſo believe, and therefore ſpeak, 2 Cor. 4. 13. (as the great Apoſtle, citing David's Old-Teſtament-Faith, to expreſs his own New-Teſtament-Faith by) and we profeſſing with all the Apoſtles and Primitive Saints, to believe that we ſhall be ſaved by the ſame Grace of Chriſt, (and Mercy of God) that they under the Old Teſtament were ſaved by, (which great Maxim is expreſly utter'd in the Name of the Apoſtles, and of all the Chriſtians of the New, Acts 15. 11.) may well be induc'd to make a like Improvement and Valuation of this Old Teſtament-Carkenet, beſtudded with ſo many Jewels.

CHAP. IV.

That the Mercies of God's Heart and Nature are the prime Object of Faith. The firſt Proof drawn from ſome ſpecial Obſervations upon this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6, 7. and upon the Story, Occaſion, Occurrences, Circumſtances, End and Purpoſe of it by God. The Iſſue and Effect of it, and the Uſe Moſes made of it; which, as they exceedingly exalt the Grace and Mercy proclaimed, ſo do greatly commend it to our Faith, for the Support of it.

THAT this Proclamation of Grace was fully intended by God, for a Foundation to our Faith, and that it tendeth directly to prove the Aſſertion, the following Obſervations will, I hope, when taken along and put together, ſufficiently poſſeſs us of. 'Tis true that theſe Obſervations themſelves are but about Circumſtantials of the proclaiming it, in compariſon unto the gracious Matter and Merits themſelves contained in the Proclamation it ſelf; and theſe concern but the Occaſion, Seaſon, &c. which God took for this firſt publiſhing of it: yet ſuch they are as the Conſideration of them doth greatly tend to the exalting of God's Grace, which is proclaimed therein; and the two laſt of them will end in a punctual Proof of this firſt Head.

Obſ. 1. That 'twas God himſelf who immediately publiſhed this. Wiſe Princes, if Matters of extraordinary Grace be to be declared or manifeſted, chooſe to do it themſelves, and not by others, though Favourites. And if ever there were Words of Grace ſpoken, then are theſe ſuch: They are ſuaviſſima Concio (as one ſtiles them) the ſweeteſt Sermon that ever was preached. And God himſelf was the Preacher, and for the Reaſon forementioned would be the Proclaimer of them.

Oſiander.

The Vulgar Tranſlation and the Romaniſts addicted thereunto, do put the Honour of proclaiming it upon Moſes (forſooth) and that it ſhould be he who ſaid, Jehovah merciful, &c. to the great obſcuring of the Greatneſs, yea Majeſty of God, given Demonſtration of, herein.

'Tis true thoſe Words in ver. 5. tranſlated [he proclaimed the Name of Jehovah] are elſewhere rendred [called on the Name of Jehovah]: And indeed the very ſame Words, in the Hebrew, are uſed of Jacob, Gen. 12. 8. that he called upon the Name of the Lord. And ſo if the Coherence here had not apparently contradicted it, it might have been ſo underſtood here, and attributed to Moſes. But to be ſure thoſe Words, ver. 6. And the Lord paſſed by before him, and proclaimed, The Lord merciful, &c. this muſt neceſſarily be referred to God himſelf, not to Moſes. For,

1. He that paſſed by was he who proclaimed this; and that was God.
2. We find God himſelf, in chap. 33. to have given it out to Moſes, and to have before-before-hand promiſed that himſelf would be the Proclaimer. I will proclaim the Name of the Lord, (ſaith he) and ſo not dictate it only for Moſes to proclaim it; and accordingly we ſee that here in chap. 34. he performs it, ver. 5, 6. The Lord deſcended in the Cloud, and ſtood with him there, and proclaimed the Name of the Lord; and the Lord paſſed by before him, and proclaimed, The Lord, the Lord God, merciful, &c.

3. Moſes's true Time and firſt beginning to ſpeak was but at the 8*th* and 10*th* Verſes: And Moſes made haſte and bowed his head, and worſhipped, and he ſaid, &c. namely, after that God had done ſpeaking: And thereupon it was, that he began to ſpeak in all great haſte, and to urge what God himſelf had ſaid. So as indeed it is plain, that both Speeches, both that in ver. 5. as well as that in ver. 6. are to be underſtood not of invocating the Name of the Lord, but of proclaiming the Lord, as our Tranſlators have rendred them both, and both alike to be wholly referred to God as the Proclaimer. And that it ſhould be twice ſaid, he proclaimed, was to put a Notoriety upon it, and to ſhew of what Moment it was for us to know that the great God proclaimed thus his own Name and Glory; and the Stream of the Hebrew Text runs thus, ver. 5. And the Lord deſcended in the Cloud, and ſtood with him there, and proclaimed the Name of the Lord. He that deſcended and ſtood with Moſes, he it was that proclaimed it, and that to be ſure was God.

But we find Moſes, in Numb. 14. expreſly urging theſe Words as God's own Words upon him, ſo to put the more Force into his Plea; ver. 17. And now I beſeech thee, let the Power of my Lord be great, according as thou haſt ſpoken, SAYING, (Quemadmodum pronunciaſti dicendo [even AS THOU HAST PRONOUNCED] (O God) in ſaying) The Lord is long-ſuffering, &c.

Junius and Tremel.

Obſ. 2. It is further ſaid, that God deſcended to proclaim this in ver. 5. which ſtill ſpeaks the more Grace. I know it is hiſtorically meant of God's viſible deſcending in the Cloud; yet give me leave from that Shadow or Type thereof, to decipher the Impreſſes of Grace ſignified thereby. For,

1*ſt*. That God ſhould ſhew Mercy to Sinners, hath the greateſt Condeſcenſion in it, but much more to come down and proclaim it: He humbleth himſelf to behold things in Heaven, (even to behold his Angels that never ſinned) Pſal. 113. 6. but for him not only to behold, but withal to deign to caſt an Eye of Grace and Mercy upon Sinners, the things on Earth, yea and himſelf to deſcend unto Earth to proclaim it, this is condeſcending indeed in the high and lofty One. And further,

2*dly*. For the great God to ſhut up the emblazoning his incomprehenſible ſimple Nature into the narrow Compaſs of a few Words and Form of Speech, and thoſe Words importing ſeveral diſtinct things; and ſo as it were to pourtray forth himſelf by Piece-meals and brokenly, by an imperfect Delineation (for ſuch theſe Epithets are) to the end to bring himſelf down to our low Capacities and Conceits; this was a farther condeſcending indeed; it is a ſpeaking to us of himſelf in the Image of our own puerile Underſtandings. But,

3*dly*. This his viſible deſcending in the View of all the People, to proclaim this Grace by Words, was a moſt certain Pledg given, that he who was the Jehovah, God bleſſed for ever, would one day break the Heavens, and come down and take our Nature, and dwell among us, and put this Proclamation into full Force and Virtue, which in the mean while, until he ſhould do this, had yet its Efficacy upon the Saints of the Old Teſtament; and upon that deſcending to be ſure we ſhall have Cauſe to ſay, as in the ſame Chapter, That the Law came by Moſes, but Grace and Truth by Jeſus Chriſt; which are the great Materials of this great Proclamation, and of which the ſecond Perſon, the Son of God, was indeed the Proclaimer.

Obſ. 3. The Subject Matter of this Proclamation conſiſts chiefly of Grace and Mercy. 'Tis true, Matter of Juſtice comes in and hath a Place in it, but how? Afterwards: but Mercy excels, exceeds, and is the prevailing Argument.

1. In the Number of the Particulars here recited, there are thirteen Titles (ſay the Jewiſh Writers) given to God here; others reckon fewer, ſome but eleven, (that's the leaſt) whereof the three firſt are counted by them to be the proper Names of God, Jehovah, Jehovah, El, tranſlated the Lord, the Lord, God. All which three do yet ſute with, and impliedly intend Mercy. The other nine (which are Attributes) even ſeven of them ſpeak altogether God's gracious Affections towards repentant and believing Sinners, as is evident in the very reading and counting of them.

2. If all the firſt three be taken for the proper Names of God, yet of thoſe Attributes that follow, Mercy, &c. have the firſt Place and Rank, yea and all the ſeven (the whole ſet for Mercy) are placed together firſt, and ſo claim to have the chief Place in point of Order and Precedence before all.

3. In God's own foreſhown Declaration of what his Mind was to be therein, (chap. 33. 19. (which explains this) where, when he promiſeth, I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee, he adds, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and I will ſhew Mercy to whom I will ſhew Mercy) Why are theſe latter ſo nearly and immediately ſubjoined to his proclaiming his Name? but that his great Name, which he then and here intended to proclaim, conſiſted moſt in his being merciful and gracious, &c. Himſelf before-hand profeſſeth it; yea and the other, the firſt Words before theſe, in the ſame Verſe, refer moſt properly thereunto. I will cauſe all my Goodneſs to paſs before thee: and Goodneſs is the Genus that comprehends Mercy, Grace, Long-ſuffering, Kindneſs, Truth, &c. in it, as Branches from that as the Root.

4. The Quotations that David ſo often, and the Prophets, make of the Words, do confirm this, they rehearſing no other but only thoſe that belong to Mercy; Pſal. 86. 15. Pſal. 103. 8. Pſal. 145. 8.

The two latter indeed; 1. That will not clearing clear the Guilty; 2. Viſiting the Iniquities of the Fathers upon the Children, to the third and fourth Generation; Theſe two are commonly referred to punitive Juſtice, as importing Acts and Reſolutions in God thereof; the firſt being rendred, that will by no means clear the Impenitent. And yet, Non eſt pars ultima gratiæ quòd nos ad ſe talib. blanditiis allicit Deus. Cal. in. Pſ. 145. 8.

1*ſt*. About this Meaning there is a very great Controverſy among Interpreters; ſome very Judicious caſting this very Clauſe in among God's Mercies, in chaſtiſing but not deſtroying, in taking Vengeance on their Inventions, and yet forgiving them, as in Pſal. 99. 8. of which Interpretation afterwards. And if ſo, then Juſtice hath but one left, and Mercy may challenge eight of the nine to belong to it; but however Mercy may triumph, and ſay, if Juſtice be avenged two-fold, Mercy is gracious ſeven-fold, it carries it clear.

Pſal. 99. 8.

2*dly*. This Rehearſal of his Mercy and Grace doth come in directly and abſolutely, and for themſelves, and the Current of them hath its Spring purely from the Heart of God, and runs with a ſtreight direct natural Stream; but theſe of Juſtice, mentioned, come in but accidentally, and indeed but as occaſioned by God's having gone ſo far in declaring ſo much Mercy, and having poured forth ſo much Grace, (from his whole Heart) to the View of Sinners of all ſorts and ſizes. Becauſe he knew how much and how deeply this Root of Bitterneſs was ſeated in Mens Hearts, to ſay in their Hearts, I ſhall have Peace though I walk in the Imagination of my Heart, &c. Deut. 29. 19. and how apt they are to turn all this Grace into Wantonneſs; therefore it is that at laſt, and but at laſt, he brings this high Threatning in, That will by no means clear the Impenitent. And ſo as the Apoſtle ſays of the Law, that it was added becauſe of Tranſgreſſion, ſo is this a mere occaſioned Additional, (though moſt neceſſary by reaſon of Man's Corruption) becauſe of obſtinate Sinners continuing in Sin againſt Light, and indeed but to vindicate and turn the Glory of his Mercy (which he is pleaſed to account his higheſt Glory) from the impure Claim and profane Hands of preſumptuous Sinners laying hold thereon, when reſolved to continue in their Sins. And look, as Mercy it ſelf in him is from and of it ſelf not moved by any thing in the Creature, but on the contrary, Juſtice, (tho it is as eſſential to him as Mercy) yet makes and puts forth it ſelf but only upon Man's Sin; juſt ſo doth the mention of it come in but in relation and for the prevention of Man's Sin, and abuſing of his Mercy.

3*dly*. Again unto thoſe Acts of Juſtice ſpecified there are Bounds and Limits ſet, viſiting the Iniquities, &c. to the fourth Generation, and further: And after that is paſſed and gone, leaving the Door for Mercy wide open: And it is for them that hate him, which is the ſecond Commandment's Addition; and thoſe that hate him love Death. Yea, in that very Decalogue, the Law, (which, if any part of Scripture, was deſigned to ſpeak Juſtice and Wrath) the Compariſon between the ſhewing Mercy exceeds by thouſands, ſo as it is not the Proportion of one thouſand to three or four, but of thouſands; and to how many thouſands he limits not that neither, but leaves room for to ſet down Millions of Millions of Thouſands, and yet this is in the

Law. But here in this Goſpel-Declaration he plainly ſets no Number either of Thouſands or Millions of Thouſands, none at all; for of his Mercy there is no end. And at this very time, whilſt God renewed that Law, and thoſe Words in it, with his own Hand, he utters with his own Mouth this Proclamation of Grace ſo far excelling, profeſſing to pardon all ſorts of Iniquities, Tranſgreſſions and Sins, which he knew and foreſaw the Sons of Men would commit againſt that Law.

Obſ. 4.

The Seaſon which God was pleaſed to take the Advantage of, is moſt obſervable: 'Twas this; This People had immediately before committed that greatly heightned Sin in all manner of Circumſtances of it, of making and worſhipping the Golden Calf; the Story of this you find to be the Subject of Chap. 32. throughout; by which high Tranſgreſſion they had utterly, on their Parts, broken the Covenant, as Moſes his breaking the Tables of Stone did ſhew. The Senſe of the high Heinouſneſs of which Sin the Jews bare upon their Spirits unto this Day, it being uſual with them, when any eminent Puniſhment befals their Nation, to ſay, that an Ounce of the Golden Calf is in it. In which Chapter you alſo have the deep Reſentment which God took thereat, and a moſt eager Zeal to have been avenged was breaking forth: Let me alone, (ſays he to Moſes, that was about to intercede for them) that my Wrath may wax hot againſt them to conſume them, ver. 10. which tho in ſound of words ſeems to expreſs an high Indignation conceived, and to check Moſes (as it were) for praying for them; yet in Reality did tacitely inſinuate an Inclinableneſs to Mercy upon Moſes's farther Intreaty; and indeed to invite him the more earneſtly to put himſelf forth in interceding for them; importing, that he was not abſolutely or wholly reſolved, but overcomeable by Entreaties; which Moſes took the Advantage of, and followed his Suit, and upon the Aſſault God began to relent of the Severity he had threatned: And yet ſtill God did not reveal this to Moſes, but kept it to himſelf; for v. 30. Moſes, as it were, ſpeaks of it uncertainly to the People, Peradventure I ſhall make an Atonement for your Sin. But God carried it ſtill to him as if it ſtill ſtuck with him, ſo as to be avenged, as by the hard Conflict Moſes had with God, carried Dialogue-wiſe between them, and God's quick Reply unto his Prayer, ver. 31, to the end of the Chapter, appears. And again, chap. 33. to ver. 4. the Tidings hereof the People hearing, though they mourned and humbled themſelves, ver. 4. yet ſtill God carries it reſervedly and aloof off to them, as unto what he would do with them, (as thoſe Words ſhew, That I may know what to do unto thee, ver. 5.) whether pardon or deſtroy them. But Moſes thereupon farther ſpeaking with God, the Lord was ſo familiar with him above all times ever before, either with himſelf, or ever with any other Man, that Moſes was bold to plead for farther Favour to that People, and for a ſpecial high Privilege to himſelf; Shew me thy Glory. All which Tranſactions were the moſt lively Repreſentations and Types of Chriſt's Interceſſion and Prevalency for us, in and by whom God was to manifeſt all his Glory, ſpecially of Grace and Mercy, to his choſen Children; John 1. 17 and 18 compared. And hereupon God ſets him a Time, which was the next Day early; and at his Time ſet comes down to him, (which was in view of all the People) and then comes off like the Great God himſelf; proclaiming all thoſe his Mercies to him of pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin. And tho this was done in his Hearing alone, yet for the Peoples ſake, and on their Behalf; for whom he had ſo vehemently interceded, whoſe Concernment this was as well as his own, as that Clauſe, keeping Mercy for thouſands, ſhews. And having done this, he reſtores and eſtates them into the ſame Favour they were in before, he renews his Covenant with them, which they had broke; ver. 10. Behold I make a Covenant before all thy People, I will do Marvels, ſuch as have not been done in all the Earth, nor in any Nation: and all the People amongſt which thou art, ſhall ſee the Work of the Lord.

Deodate.

Obſ. 5. Obſerve the HASTE God made to do this, after that this Treatment between himſelf and Moſes was come to its full Iſſue, he makes no Delay, his Heart was ſo full of it, ver. 2. BE READY (ſays God to Moſes) in the Morning. And it could be appointed no ſooner; for the Solemnity which the Lord was pleaſed to make and obſerve in the doing it, which was to have all the People forewarned, ver. 3. put in expectation, &c. and then himſelf to deſcend in their View, ver. 5. And according to God's Command Moſes roſe up early in the Morning, (and 'tis added) as the Lord had commanded him, (ſo that God had appointed the very earlieſt of the Morning too) and all ſpeed was uſed that could be, and God made him not ſtay for him a Moment; after Moſes was come the Lord deſcended in the Cloud, and ſtood with him there, and then the Lord paſſed by before him, and proclaimed, &c. And what he performed to Moſes and the People in this reſpect, he alſo doth to us, for how often do you read of his hearing us in the Morning, as in Pſal. 5. 3. and of his cauſing us to hear of his Loving-kindneſs in the Morning; as Pſal. 143. 7, 8. Hear me ſpeedily O Lord! cauſe me to hear thy Loving-kindneſs in the Morning. And Pſal. 90. 14. O ſatisfy us early with thy Mercy. Look, as Moſes haſted, ver. 8. (as is ſaid) to put up his Suit and Petition upon it, and that we are bidden to ſeek God early, ſo God was as early with him: which was intended for a Precedent for us that ſhall for ever need this Grace and Mercy which he here proclaims. Nay, ſometimes God prevents us before we call, but is always ready to forgive, (as the Pſalmiſt's Word is) and to be ſure comes down to help in time of need, Heb. 4. 16. O the Riches of his Grace! and the Depth of the Riches of the Wiſdom and Knowledg of God, Rom. 11. 33. that thus contrived and took the faireſt Seaſon and Opportunity for Advantage for his expreſſing his Grace and Heart to us, magnifying thereby his Mercy and Goodneſs to the utmoſt. I ſaid, there were two grand Pillars in the Old Teſtament, one God's Promiſe of Chriſt, and the other this Manifeſto of God's gracious Nature: and lo, the Advantage God took for both, upon the Commiſſion of the moſt heinous Sins; the one upon Occaſion of the firſt and greateſt Sin, and of the largeſt Extent of Miſchief in the Conſequence, that ever was committed, viz. our firſt Parents Fall, by which all Mankind were undone; and it was upon that Occaſion he let fall that Promiſe of Chriſt, which was the firſt Foundation of Old Teſtament-Faith, and continues ſuch to the end: and now again upon the firſt greateſt Sin this People did commit after their having received the Law, and heard God's Voice, it was that he publiſheth this other. And he pardoned each of theſe their Sins whilſt he was a ſpeaking and uttering of theſe Promiſes; and this latter of his Mercy was the Original of that other of the Meſſiah himſelf, conſidered as he is our Saviour, and the Overcomer of Satan for us. We may well therefore hereupon glorifying him ſay, as that the Lord is gracious and full of Bowels, (with the Apoſtle James) ſo in reſpect to the Opportunity God took, that he waiteth to be gracious, (with the Prophet Iſaiah) that is, to manifeſt it in the fitteſt Seaſon; for he is a God of Judgment, Iſa. 30. 18. What Heart guilty of the moſt heinous Sins, that is now humbled for them, ſhould not this move and encourage to come in unto ſuch a God!

Talibus blanditiis allicit ad ſe nos Deus. Calvin.

Obſ. 6. Moſes having heard what God had ſpoken, God then ſpeaks anew inwardly to Moſes's Heart, and Moſes inſtantly puts it into practice and ſuit. Now as this ſhews moſt effectually what God's Intention had been in uttering his Meaning, Iſa. 55. 10, 11. ſo it doth moſt exemplarily inſtruct us what Uſe this Publication of Mercy is to be put out unto by us: That we ſhould lay hold on it by Faith, and turn, and put it into Prayer, but eſpecially in the Caſe of Pardon of Sins. For ſo of Moſes it is ſaid, ver. 8. that (when God had done ſpeaking, and was paſſing apace by him) Moſes made haſte, and bowed his Head towards the Earth, and worſhipped: Even as one that is an humble Suppliant to a King as he paſſeth by him, follows him, and humbly preſents his Petition in haſte, leſt he ſhould be gone out of ſight: So here.

If it be ſaid, might he not at leiſure have, at any time afterwards, put up the ſame Petition upon the ſame Ground? The Anſwer is, That when God is near and greatly preſent to the Soul, (as he was here to Moſes) that is the moſt acceptable time of praying for all or any thing a believing Soul deſires. Let them take that Opportunity, and though ſuch a ſpecial Nearneſs ſhould not fall out till towards the end of one's Prayer, yet let them then take the Advantage of that Time and Tide, to pray over again afreſh, and put in all they deſire to pray for, or would have God do for them, for God is with them.

Now what was Moſes's Petition? it follows, ver. 9. And he ſaid, Now if I have found Grace in thy ſight, O Lord, let my Lord, I pray thee, go amongſt us, (for it is a ſtiff-necked People) and pardon our Iniquities and our Sin, and take us for thine Inheritance. In which (as I ſaid) he puts into Uſe and Practice (laying hold on the Words now ſpoken by God) himſelf to ſpeak a good Word from thence for that People. The Effect of which Prayer is, that although they were indeed a ſtiff-necked People, as any in the World, (this he firſt confeſſed) that yet God for this his Name's ſake would not leave them, but pardon their Iniquities, and mine own too, Lord, (ſays he) for the Expreſſion is, pardon our Iniquities. Which for God to do was the plain Intent of his declaring it. And it is implied, that God would do this, not for the preſent only, but to continue to do it. He prays for the future as well as for the preſent, when he ſays, pardon our Iniquities, &c. This the Words foregoing, [for it is a ſtiff-necked People, i. e. they will ever and anon be ſinning againſt thee] and alſo the Words that follow do ſhew, Take us for thine Inheritance, (ſays Moſes) which Words Calvin renders, ut poſſideas nos, that thou mayſt poſſeſs us for thine Inheritance. As if he had ſaid, (ſays he) "God cannot come to enjoy and "poſſeſs his Choſen as his Inheritance, otherwiſe than by pardoning their Sins con-"tinually: for Man's Frailty is ſuch, that they would, after his receiving Pardon, "fall from that Grace, if they be not continually reconciled to him; which con-"cerns us Gentiles as well as them then. God muſt not only take us to be his, but keep us to be his, and continue to be merciful to us, according to this his great Name, or we ſhall be utterly loſt and undone.

CHAP. V.

That the Mercies of God's Nature, as they are proclaimed in Exod. 34. are a prime Object and Support of Faith. That this Name of God, Exod. 34. 6, 7. was an Aſylum or ſtrong Tower, unto which the Faith of the moſt eminent Saints of the Old Teſtament had Recourſe, eſpecially for Forgiveneſs: And the Evidence hereof carried through the Times of the Old Teſtament, from Moſes, by a Cloud of Witneſſes, as Moſes, David, Nehemiah, and the Prophets.

THIS Proclamation of Grace being a Magna Charta of the Old Teſtament, was ſo highly valued by the Prophets and Saints of thoſe times, that ever after it had been proclaimed to Moſes, they had, throughout all Ages, * frequent Recourſe thereto; and their wont was to make Rehearſals of it upon ſeveral Occaſions; as either when particular Mercies were to be obtain'd, or Exhortations made to bring Men in to God, or Thankſgiving and Praiſe offer'd; their manner was, upon ſuch Occaſions, to rehearſe theſe Words, but eſpecially in the point of Forgiveneſs. Beſides that Uſe that Moſes made of it, inſtantly upon the Place, when God had done proclaiming it, he putting it preſently in Suit in all haſte, in the behalf of that People, the ſame Moſes in more cool Blood, makes the ſame Improvement of it, in after times. And the Occaſion was another moſt heinous Sin of Murmuring, committed by this People, and then he again urgeth God with theſe his own Words, for a Forgiveneſs of them; Numb. 14. 17, 18, 19. And now I beſeech thee, let the Power of my Lord be great, according as thou haſt ſpoken, ſaying, The Lord is long-ſuffering, and of great Mercy, forgiving Iniquity and Tranſgreſſion, and by no means clearing the Impenitent, or (perhaps rather as others) clearing I will not clear, (that is, although he forgive, yet he will chaſtiſe, and not altogether leave unpuniſhed) viſiting the Iniquities of the Fathers upon the Children, unto the third and fourth Generation.

Next comes David, who although he had over and above this Proclamation of Mercy common to him with all the Saints, a perſonal Covenant of ſure Mercies, particularly made and renewed to himſelf; yet however, he had an uſual Recourſe unto this more general Refuge: Of ſuch Uſe and Valuation was it with him, and ought to be with us. Thus in Pſal. 86. twice, in ver. 5, and 15. by way of Prayer: Thou O Lord, art a God full of Compaſſions, Long-ſuffering, plenteous in Mercy and Truth; O have Mercy upon me, and ſave me, ver. 16. And then again, in another Pſalm, viz. 145. he brings in all the Saints, with their Hearts and Mouths full of it, pouring forth in a way of Praiſe, (for in that Channel the Stream of that Pſalm runs) the very ſame Words; having firſt ſaid, ver. 7. They utter the Memory of thy great Goodneſs, and ſing of thy Righteouſneſs: Then in the next follows, (as being their univerſal joint Outcry, and the Burden of their Singing) the Lord is gracious, full of Compaſſion, ſlow to anger, and of great Mercy: So as this was the general Vogue of the Saints of thoſe times, to cry this Scripture up.

* Nec mirum eſt Davidem ſumpſiſſe hæc Elogia ex celebri illo Moſis loco, Exod. 34. 6. quum prophetis viſionem, quæ illic refertur, ſummo illis in pretio fuiſſe: quia, nuſquam clarius, vel familiarius, exprimitur Dei natura. Calvin. in Pſal. 145. ver. 8.

Mollerus upon the 86th Pſalm, (where this Deſcription of Mercy is twice rehearſed) hath theſe Words: Sumptus eſt hic verſus ex Moſe, & quia tanquam in ſignis quædam gemma inter cæteras promiſſiones elucet, crebrò repetitur in ſcripturâ. Mollerus in ver. 15. Pſal. 86.

In Pſal. 103. we have a reference to theſe Words; yea, an expreſs Quotation of them. David repeats theſe very Words of Moſes in ver. 8. The Lord is merciful and gracious, ſlow to anger, and plenteous in Mercy. In which Rehearſal there is not only a videtur alludere ad illud Moſis, an Alluſion, &c. (as Calvin) but a plain citing or quoting of the Words, as having been ſpoken to Moſes by Name, and as punctually alledging them out of him in ſuch a manner, as we uſe to quote Jeremiah, Iſaiah, or any other of the Prophets Writings, when we have occaſion: For in the very Words before, ver. 7. he ſays, He made known his Ways unto Moſes, his Acts unto the Children of Iſrael.

The Coherence of which Words, ver. 7. Interpreters have wholly drawn up, and exhale into ver. 6. as if theſe Words, [He made known his Ways to Moſes] were intended only for a particular Inſtance of God's delivering the Oppreſſed, (as he had done the Iſraelites) becauſe in the Verſe before (ver. 5.) ſay they, he had ſpoken of God's Vindication of ſuch as were oppreſſed: But ſome later Criticks have to a more ample Scope drawn thoſe Words of ver. 7. down to a Coherence with the next, ver. 8. The Lord is merciful, &c. the very Words of God to Moſes: and to juſtify this Coherence rather than the former, thoſe Writers do pertinently compare the Words which Moſes had firſt ſpoken to God, ch. 33. 13. with theſe of God's unto Moſes, in this chap. 24. which (ſay they) were ſpoken by God, as in anſwer unto what Moſes had there ſaid. Now in the foregoing Chapter, Exod. 33. 13. Moſes had ſaid, I pray thee, if I have found Grace in thy ſight, I pray thee ſhew me thy way, (or thy ways, as Junius, and Druſius, and others render it) that I may know thee; that is, ſay they, know thee by what thy Inclination and Diſpoſition is, and Dealings ſhall be towards this People: For in the following Words he had preſented before him the Caſe of this People; Conſider (ſays he) that this Nation is thy People; and thereupon was further bold to ask, Shew me thy Glory. Upon which Requeſt on Moſes's part it was, that God promiſeth there to proclaim his Name. Now the Jewiſh Writers † uſually underſtand by [thy Ways] the Properties of God, his Inclination and Diſpoſition; by which, or from which, being inwardly in his Nature moved, he outwardly goeth forth to diſpenſe unto his People. And ſo by [Ways] in this Speech of Moſes are complexly underſtood both the Attributes of God's Nature, as the Root and the Principles in his Heart, or the Original Cauſe, and his Dealings, proceeding from thence, as the Effects. And to know what theſe Ways were, was that thing which Moſes deſired of God, that he would fully reveal to him, that ſo he might know him, both for his own Comfort, but eſpecially in reference to what was, or how his Mind ſtood towards this People. And God in anſwer hereto, did punctually, according to theſe two Requeſts, firſt promiſe to do this for him; chap. 33. 19. I will cauſe my Goodneſs to paſs before thee; and I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee: and then did perform it, in the Words of my Text; chap. 34. 6. Proclaiming the Name of the Lord, The Lord God, merciful, &c. Hereupon theſe Interpreters comparing all theſe things together, are bold (and that rightly) to underſtand this Paſſage in Pſal. 103. [He made known his Ways to Moſes] to be meant both of that his Name and Properties, proclaimed by God in Exodus unto Moſes: What Ways? (ſays Druſius on Exod. 33. 13.) or what Properties? He is paſſionate for this Explication of Moſes; and that by Ways God's Purpoſes, innate Diſpoſitions, Mores or Ingenium ſhould be meant: And before him Genebrard, out of the Jewiſh Writers, doth the like on Pſal. 103. Dr. Hammond, on Pſal. 103. 7, 8. vehemently contends for the ſame Coherence: “ The Place (ſays he) evidently refers to Exod. 33. where Moſes petitions God: 1. Shew me thy Way; Then ver. 18. Shew me thy Glory: By his Way and Glory, meaning his Nature; and his Ways of deal-† [Vias ſuas] hoc eſt, qualiter ſe gerat erga ſuos: Muis. Apud Hebræos plerunque via ſignificat rationem, & inſtitutum vitæ, mores, negotia, &c. & ſcire viam tuam, id eſt, rationem agendi quâ uteris erga tuos, vel ſimpliciter quomodo cum piis agas: Mollerus in Pſal. 86. 11.

“ ing with Men. And God ſaid, I will make all my Goodneſs paſs before thee, and proclaim the Name of the Lord: by which his Nature is ſignified: and what that “ Name is, is ſet down by the Enumerations of his Attributes, chap. 34. 6. He “ proclaimed the Lord merciful, gracious, &c. juſt as here (ſays he) in the Pſalm, “ in the next Verſe; the Lord is merciful, &c. Only Dr. Hammond differs from the other in this, that he interprets by [Ways] made known to Moſes, God's manner of his Dealings; or, his Actions to be meant; and the following Words, his [Acts], to the Children of Iſrael, the word tranſlated his [Acts] he would have to import his Nature and Attributes that follow, according to his underſtanding the Hebrew Phraſe, &c. but he and they all agree in that Scope I alledg this Place for. And indeed the Pſalmiſt teacheth us, that God's Ways mean his inward Diſpoſitions; Pſal. 103. for after he had ſaid, [He made his Ways known to Moſes] he ſubjoins, The Lord is merciful, and gracious, ſlow to anger, and plenteous in Mercy. God thereby declaring at once to Moſes, that theſe were the Diſpoſitions in his Nature, and that according unto theſe they ſhould find his Proceedings ſhould be, not with this People only, but with all his Children for ever in the World; as alſo with wicked Men impenitent: ſo as Moſes might certainly know him thereby, (as he requeſted) and know where to have him, (as we uſe to ſay) which was the main Intent of what he had deſired to know. And accordingly the reſt of the Pſalm that follows, is a Verification in ſo many Experiments of what God's Ways in Mercy had been to that People from Moſes's time downwards, drawn into Maxims or Propoſitions, according unto what he had here declared to Moſes ſo long before.

And that his Ways ſhould more particularly and eminently note out his Mercies in pardoning Sins, &c. (which is one of David's Applications and Interpretations of Moſes here) that Paſſage in Iſa. 55. confirms. For ſpeaking of God's having Mercy, and abundantly pardoning, ver. 7. he adds, ver. 8, 9. For my Thoughts are not your Thoughts, neither are your Ways [my Ways] ſaith the Lord: for as the Heavens are higher than the Earth, ſo are [my Ways] higher than [your Ways], and my Thoughts than your Thoughts. The like many other Scriptures expreſs. I conclude; What is all this other than that David in this famous Pſalm of Mercy, (as in which he makes a Celebration of the Mercies of God to himſelf, from ver. 1, to 7. and from thence towards others of his Children, in ſundry Particulars) doth firſt profeſſedly take theſe Words of Moſes for his Text, (even as we are wont to do ſome Portion of Scripture, and make a Sermon upon it) that is, that Part of them that concerned Mercy; and then plainly writes a Comment upon it, in the Rehearſal of ſundry particular gracious Dealings? All which are but Explanations (confirmed from Experience) of theſe ſeveral Properties of Grace, Mercy, Long-ſuffering, &c. more briefly ſumm'd up by God himſelf, in Moſes. And this might, though not in the ſame Order, be exactly ſhewn, if Prolixity here forbad it not.

But we meet not with theſe Words only in David, upon theſe Occaſions ſpecified, but as frequently alſo at leaſt with ſome Pieces of them in the Prophets, unto the ſame or other like Purpoſes. As Jeremy, in that ſolemn Prayer for the Church, in the Condition it was in his times; Jer. 32. 18. Then again, in the Prophet Joel, he lays it as a Foundation and Corner-ſtone of Faith and Hope, to perſwade the People to come in, and turn to God, Joel 2. 12, 13. Turn ye to me (ſays God himſelf by him) with all your Heart, with Faſting, and Weeping, &c. and turn unto the Lord your God, for he is gracious, and merciful, ſlow to anger, and of great Kindneſs, &c. Theſe are ſtill God's Words in Moſes anew repeated.

Yea, Jonah points as plainly unto theſe Words, as thoſe, the Remembrance whereof moved God to be merciful in pardoning the Ninevites, upon their ſerious and ſolemn Repentance. He attributes that his ſparing them, unto the Subſtance of theſe Words, which Jonah had learn'd from Moſes, as the Cauſe of God's pardoning them; and was certainly led to do it by the Holy Ghoſt that penn'd that Prophecy; although he utter'd it whilſt he was expoſtulating the Matter with God for his having ſpared them, that when he had ſent him with ſo preciſe a Meſſage, to foretel them of their utter Deſtruction within ſo many Days; I knew (ſays he) that thou Jonah 4. 2. art a gracious God, and merciful, ſlow to anger, and of great Kindneſs, and repenteſt of the Evil. And his ſaying, I knew, prompts evidently that the Knowledg he had of God, had been taken from theſe Words in Moſes, as that which from his Writings was the familiar, wonted, and common Notion; which both he, and that People that knew the Law, were nouriſhed up in: And that when Matter of threatning Judgment was apprehended, (which excited to Repentance) the Thoughts of this Scripture was at hand, and roſe up in their Minds, as here it did in his, although to a worſe purpoſe, as in his Thought. Yea and Jonah tells God there plainly, that from the Knowledg of that very Declaration of Mercy, and God's wont in pardoning, he had ſuſpected that this might or would prove to be the Iſſue: And that the Remembrance of Mercy, as he had declared it to Moſes, would overcome him, and prevail with him haply to give Repentance to thoſe Ninevites, and thereupon to ſave them, even againſt the peremptory Meſſage of their Deſtruction: wherein God ſhewed he loved the Glory of his Mercy, more than of his Juſtice, or his own declared Threatning, and his own Prophet's Credit.

And which is yet more to be wondred at, and God to be adored in it, is, that although the Prophet knew this afore-hand from this Scripture in Moſes, yet the poor Ninevites knew not thereof, having not ſeen as then Moſes's Writings; nor had ever heard one Tittle of this Proclamation of Mercy: nor can we think that Jonah had revealed it to them; for a Denunciation of Deſtruction was preciſely all of his Commiſſion; but it was God's own holy Spirit, who alone prompted theſe poor ignorant Souls with this Suggeſtion, To cry mightily unto God, and to turn every one from his evil way; who can tell if God will repent, and turn away from his fierce Anger, that we periſh not? chap. 3. 8, 9. And they had to do with God, who to be ſure knew, and was privy to himſelf, what he had ſet forth himſelf by, as that which was in his Heart and Nature; and he could not deny himſelf, and his own Declaration of it, though theſe poor Souls could not have challenged him by it.

I only add this comfortable Obſervation, (comfortable indeed to us Gentiles) from Jonah's Allegation of theſe Words, even that Jehovah, gracious and merciful, &c. as in Moſes it was proclaimed, that this Proclamation concerned not only the Jews, or was a Meaſure for God to go by towards that People, but was intended by God, even at the firſt Delivery, for us Gentiles alſo. For he proceeded according to the Tenor of it with thoſe Ninevites, who were an Handſel of the Gentiles Converſion to come. And therefore let us Gentiles, from the Apoſtle's Inſtruction, adore and glorify God for his Mercy, and exerciſe our Faith much upon theſe bleſſed Words, Jehovah, gracious, merciful, long-ſuffering, abundant in Kindneſs and Truth, as having been proclaimed and written, that we might have as much Hope as the Jews had therein, and ſo turn to the Lord, as theſe Ninevites did: This for Jonah.

Rom. 15. 9, 10, 11.

Next the Prophet Micah brings in a piece of it, chap. 7. 18. by way of Wonderment at ſuch and ſo gracious a God: Jehovah, Jehovah God, pardoning Iniquity and Sin: Thus God ſpeaks to Moſes; Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth Iniquity, and paſſeth by the Tranſgreſſion of the Remnant of his Heritage? So the Prophet there.

Hezekiah alſo (that holy King) writing to his Brethren of the ten Tribes, inviting them to return to God, from forth of that long and great Apoſtacy and Revolt from God and his Worſhip which they had made, aſſuring them that God would notwithſtanding pardon and receive them again upon their Repentance: He aſſures, and he perſwades them of it by God's own Words, the Words of this Proclamation, ſo commonly known amongſt all Iſrael; 2 Chron. 30. 9. For the Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and therefore will not turn away his Face from you, if you return unto him.

Laſtly, good Nehemiah, almoſt a thouſand Years after Moſes, doth make mention of theſe Words; Neh. 9. 17. Thou art a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, ſlow to anger, and of great Kindneſs, and forſookeſt them not. Mark the whole drift of that which follows in that Chapter, and you will find it to be; Firſt, to aſcribe all the Mercies and Forgiveneſſes of that People, both in the Wilderneſs, and in after-Ages that followed, upon and after moſt grievous Backſlidings, (which he there all along reciteth) unto that Declaration of Mercies, firſt uttered to Moſes, as the Cauſe of all; and as that which had been verified over and over, in ſo many Experiments, thorow ſo many Ages. And, Secondly, his Scope was to put Force into his preſent Prayer and Plea for Mercy and Reſtauration for the future, to this (then) ſo ſinful and broken a People; which he purſues as his main drift in that Chapter, concluding his Prayer thus; Thou art a merciful and a gracious God, ver. 13. Now [Therefore] our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepeſt Covenant and Mercy, &c. Now that word of his [therefore] draws into this his concluſive

Prayer the Strength of all he had alledged, both of that Proclamation recited, ver. 17. and of all God's merciful Dealings with that People in former Ages, according to the Tenour thereof; and that [therefore] God would pleaſe to manifeſt and magnify, and put forth the ſame Grace now to them. Yea, and to that end he repeats and revives again the Memorial of the ſame Words, (for it is a bleſſed Memorial to all Generations) as our Tranſlators have obſerved, in referring us unto Exod. 34. 6, 7.

And Nehemiah's Times being with the laſt of thoſe, (I do not ſay the laſt) wherewith Scripture-Records of the Old Teſtament do end; and he in that 9*th* Chapter, having gone over all Times that had been paſt from Moſes's time, and having devolved all God's merciful Diſpenſations during all thoſe times, into the Mercy of God, then publiſhed as the Well-head of them all; and he ſtill continuing to plead the ſame for the whole time to come, from thoſe times of his: From hence I may well conclude, that this Publication of Mercy was accounted the Baſis or Foundation of Old Teſtament-Mercies, on God's part; and Faith on theirs, in all the after-Ages of it.

You ſee I have traverſed this from Moſes to the laſt of Scripture-Records: And though a thouſand other Promiſes had been given between, yet ſtill this is above all rehearſed, as the Original of all other. So as I may well conclude it to have been a main Article of the Old Teſtament-CREED.

CHAP. VI.

What is imported by the Name Jehovah, made uſe of in this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6, 7. That as it ſignifies God's Infinite Eſſence, it denotes the Subject of all thoſe Mercies which are in him. That this Name of God, Jehovah, doth beſt ſute, and is moſt fitly joined with thoſe Epithets merciful and gracious. What Supports of Faith may be derived from theſe two, Jehovah and merciful, join'd together.

HAving thus ſhew'd that the Mercies of God's Nature, as proclaimed in Exod. 34. are the great Object and Support of Faith, I now come to the Deſcription it ſelf in this his Proclamation, and which is God's Picture drawn by his own Pencil, as far as Words could render it: the ſmaller Models whereof David and the Prophets drew, (as I have ſhewn) and wore next their Hearts, as Men wear precious Medals of their Friends upon their Breaſts.

Oſiander.

Calvin in Pſal. 86.

It is ſuaviſſima Concio, as one ſtiles it, the ſweeteſt Sermon that ever was preached, and preached by God himſelf upon the higheſt Subject; and therefore the richeſt Text the whole Bible affords. It is maxime inſignis naturæ Dei deſcriptio, the moſt renowned and ſignal Deſcription of the Nature of God.

In his Sermon of Love, from p. 35 to 44.

Dr. Preſton hath ſingularly diſplayed the Glory of God ſet out in this Delineation, as altogether moſt lovely, but his Scope was to win the Souls of Men to love him, (which the Reader may conſult as he thinks meet) but my Deſign in this Explication which follows, is to conſider it, as it is a Ground for and Support of Faith to draw Men to believe, which was God's original and primary Purpoſe in this his firſt Delivery of it, though it as fully conduceth to that other end alſo.

And we have Example for diſpoſing it to either of theſe Purpoſes; the Prophet David having penn'd two Pſalms, more eminently appropriated by him to himſelf as his own; the one enſtiled David's Prayer, (though many other Pſalms are Prayers) it is Pſal. 86. the other David's Praiſe, Pſal. 145. no Pſalms elſe in their Titles bearing theſe Enſigns of Honour but theſe two, the firſt his Tephilla, the latter his Tehilla; in each of theſe he makes a ſolemn Rehearſal of theſe very Words in Moſes. In the Firſt, Pſal. 86. he brings them in as they were a Support unto his Faith in his Diſtreſſes from Sins and Miſeries, to which Uſe he puts them, ver. 3, 4, 6, and 7. And again, ver. 16, 17. he makes a Plea of theſe Words by way of Prayer (which is exerciſing Faith) in that diſtreſſed Condition. In the Second, Pſal. 145. he brings them in as they are an Elogium or Celebration of the glorious Nature and Excellencies of God to excite the Sons of Men to love and praiſe him. And upon the like Deſign he doth again reſume them in a Rehearſal in Pſal. 103. Now as that worthy Man fore-mentioned made this latter his Deſign; ſo I ſhall take the firſt for mine. And yet as David, in thoſe Places ſpecified, culls out and takes only what of God's Words concerned his Mercies, leaving out the threatning Part, as that of viſiting the Iniquities of the Fathers on their Children: So ſhall I inſiſt only on the Mercies of God therein promulged, that being the ſole Subject of my Purſuance.

The Materials of this Deſcription I reduce to two Parts, which of themſelves the Words fall into.

1. Quis ſit, who he is, and what proper Name or Names of his it is, of which and under which he makes this Proclamation of himſelf: It is Jehovah, Jehovah, twice repeated, tranſlated the Lord, the Lord: to which is added [El] the ſtrong God.

2. Qualis eſt, what a God he is. This is expreſſed in thoſe ſeveral Perfections that follow, attributed to him, which we uſually call Properties and Attributes; as that he is ſtrong, merciful, and gracious, &c. Or if you will,

1ſt. That Name Jehovah notes his infinite Eſſence, as the Subſtratum of thoſe Attributes.

2dly. The other that follow ſet out thoſe Perfections of that Eſſence, as merciful, &c.

I. Who? JEHOVAH.

There are of thoſe proper Names of God which ſignify (and we ſo tranſlate them) God or Lord, three that are moſt eminent, and all three revealed to Moſes.

1. Ehiſe; I am: firſt mentioned, Exod. 3. 14.
2. Jehovah, Exod. 6. 3.
3. The Abridgment of Jehovah, Jah, Exod. 15. 2. Jah is my Strength, firſt there uſed.

And theſe are the chiefeſt Names of God, and for Subſtance ſignified one and the ſame thing. 1. And all of them, Jehovah eſpecially, are the chiefeſt Names proper to God alone, and never given, or to be given (as other Names are) to any Creature; Pſal. 83. ult. That Men may know, that thou whoſe Name alone is Jehovah, art the moſt high over all the Earth. And of Jah it is ſaid, it is that Name by which God will eſpecially be exalted; Pſal. 68. 4. Sing unto God, ſing Praiſes to his Name; extol him that rideth upon the Heavens by his Name Jah. 2. They all three of them ſignify that God is Being, Being Fulneſs of Being, the Original of all Being. They all ſpeak abſolute Eſſence and Exiſtence alone, and of himſelf.

Jehovah therefore is of all other Names placed here deſignedly, as the Seat and Subject of theſe Attributes that follow: for as this Name ſpeaks him to be the whole of Being, ſo theſe Attributes ſpeak the Excellencies and Perfections of that Divine Being; and are but particular Explications and Decipherings of what a God he is that entitleth himſelf Jehovah, or [I am].

But, 2. (which is more to my purpoſe) the firſt Revelation of it with God's own Comment made upon it, was to betoken, and be a Sign of Mercy, and in a more eſpecial Deſign. And Primum being menſura reliquorum, the firſt, the Pattern or Meaſure of what follows it, therefore Jehovah, of all other Names, doth beſt ſute and join with merciful and gracious. Now that it was firſt given and revealed as a Token and Signal of Grace and Mercy, is evident thus.

When God firſt appeared to Moſes in the burning Buſh, Exod. 3. and had thus told him, v. 7——11. And the Lord ſaid, I have ſurely ſeen the Affliction of my People which are in Egypt, and have heard their Cry, by reaſon of their Task-maſters; for I know their Sorrows; and I am come down to deliver them out of the Hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that Land, unto a good Land, and a large, unto a Land flowing with Milk and Honey, and to the Place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizites, and the Hivites, and the Jebuſites. Now therefore behold, the Cry of the Children of Iſrael is come unto me: and I have alſo ſeen the Oppreſſion wherewith the Egyptians oppreſs them. Come now therefore, I will ſend thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayſt bring forth my People the Children of Iſrael out of Egypt. Moſes thereupon, to obtain a farther Information and Confirmation from God of his Intentions of Grace to that People, particularly deſires to know by what Name he ſhould repreſent him unto them, ver. 13, 14, 15. And Moſes ſaid unto God, Behold, when I come unto the Children of Iſrael, and ſhall ſay unto them, The God of our Fa- thers hath ſent me unto you; and they ſhall ſay to me, What is his Name? What ſhall I ſay unto them? And God ſaid unto Moſes, I am that I am: and he ſaid, Thus ſhalt thou ſay unto the Children of Iſrael, I AM hath ſent me unto you. And God ſaid moreover unto Moſes, Thus ſhalt thou ſay unto the Children of Iſrael, the Lord God of our Fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob, hath ſent me unto you: this is my Name for ever, and this is my Memorial unto all Generations. Ainſworth penetrating into the Myſtery of this Queſtion and Petition, conceives Moſes's drift therein, to be to draw forth from God more fully and explicitely, whether he ſent him upon a Meſſage of Mercy, (pure Mercy) or for Judgment; (as in the Iſſue it might prove) and that he would ſignify ſo much by ſome ſpecial Name he would pleaſe to aſſume to teſtify ſo much thereby. And in anſwer unto Moſes, God firſt there tells him his Name was Ehijeh, &c. [I am that I am] ver. 14. And this was his firſt Anſwer unto Moſes's Requeſt. Now this Ehije is in Signification for Subſtance the ſame with this of Jehovah.

Therefore again, when a ſecond time God was pleaſed to renew his Inſtructions to this his Embaſſador, (the moſt Extraordinary of any other until Chriſt came) in Exod. 6. ſtill in farther Anſwer thereunto, God ſays, ver. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. And Jehovah ſaid unto Moſes, Now ſhalt thou ſee what I will do unto Pharaoh; for by a ſtrong Hand ſhall he ſend them away, and by a ſtrong Hand ſhall he drive them out of his Land. And GOD ſpake unto Moſes, and ſaid unto him, I am Jehovah. And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Iſaac, and unto Jacob, by (the Name of) God Almighty: but by my Name Jehovah was I not known to them. And alſo I eſtabliſh'd my Covenant with them, to give unto them the Land of Canaan, the Land of their Sojournings, in the which they ſojourned. And alſo I have heard the groaning of the Sons of Iſrael, whom the Egyptians keep in Servitude, and I have remembred my Covenant. Therefore ſay thou unto the Sons of Iſrael, I am Jehovah, and I will bring you out from under the Burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their Servitude, and I will redeem you with a ſtretched-out Arm, and with great Judgments. And I will take you to me for a People, and I will be to you a God, and ye ſhall know that I am Jehovah your God, which bringeth you out from under the Burdens of the Egyptians. God in this Declaration puts over the whole of that Covenant, and theſe Mercies thereof, and his Purpoſes therein unto the Import and Memorial of his Name Jehovah, to ſignify ſo much to them, and doth farther lay that as his Gage, to inform them thus at the Cloſe of all, ver. 8. And I will bring you in unto the Land which I did lift up my Hand to give it to Abraham, to Iſaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it to you for an Heritage; I am Jehovah. This laſt Clauſe [I am Jehovah] I look upon to be put in at laſt, as one uſeth to do his Name and Seal unto a Covenant or Deed (ſuch as this is) for Performance; ſo God he ſubſcribes unto all, I am Jehovah; all hath this Seal, as the Apoſtle elſewhere ſpeaks.

Now the Ground upon which Ainſworth affixeth this Meaning upon that Queſtion of Moſes, chap. 3. 13. (beſides that God himſelf, in the 7*th* Verſe of that Chapter, hath ſolemnly aſſured us, that he did electively give, and deſigned himſelf this Name unto theſe graceful Ends and Purpoſes) his Ground I ſay is this, (as in his Note on the 13*th* Verſe of that 3*d* Chapter he declares) "That Moſes underſtood
" that God by Names might, or was wont to manifeſt his Works. So the Hebrews " teach upon this Place (ſays he) that when God judgeth his Creatures, he is called
" Elohim (God); Sabaoth (Lord of Hoſts); when he doth Mercy unto the World
" he is called Jehovah, as in Exod. 34. 6. Jehovah, Jehovah, God merciful and gra- " cious.

You ſee the Senſe which the Jews themſelves do put upon it, and how that they refer us to this very Text, Jehovah, merciful, gracious, &c. And ſurely if God himſelf did ſo expreſly aſſume this Name as a Sign and Seal of his gracious Covenant, and the Mercies thereof, &c. then that in this new Proclamation of Grace and Goſpel-Mercies he ſhould to a greater Emphaſis double it, Jehovah, Jehovah, gracious, &c. ſurely 'twas electively and deſignedly done, to ſhew that this Name (of all other) ſhould bear the Flag and Colours of Mercy.

And let us farther join to all theſe this one Remark, that in that Deliverance ſpecified in thoſe Chapters, Exod. 3, and 6. their Redemption out of Egypt (which was the Occaſion of God's firſt Revelation and Application of that Name to the Mercy of that Deliverance, put afterwards into the Commandments) God had therein an higher Aim unto that Mercy promiſed their Fathers to be performed by Chriſt, of whom as Moſes was the Type, ſo this Deliverance was of that Redemption performed by Chriſt. And I am Jehovah, is the Gage to the Performance of both, the latter as well as the former. We may ſee Reaſon then why that when Luke 1. 72. God cometh to proclaim his Goſpel-Mercies more illuſtriouſly (as here he doth, if any-where in the Old Teſtament, yea in the whole Scripture) he ſhould make his Proclamation of them under his great and chiefeſt Name Jehovah, as the great Standard-bearer of thoſe tranſcendent Mercies.

2. And what if in the New Teſtament you find (conform to what is here) this his Name Jehovah expreſly aſſigned as the Fountain of the whole of his Grace, as the Spring likewiſe of Peace, which is the whole of ſpiritual, yea all Bleſſings? And yet thus we do expreſly find it; and in the laſt Book of the New Teſtament, which puts the farther Weight upon this Notion. Grace and Peace had been often wiſhed in other Epiſtles of the New Teſtament, from God, as the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, &c. but in Rev. 1. 4. Grace and Peace is prayed for from him who [is], and which [was], and which [is to come]. This directly points us unto theſe very Places in Exod. 3*d* and 6*th* Chapters, where the Name Jehovah is uſed, and which we have explain'd, as the moſt judicious Interpreters do generally obſerve, and our worthy Tranſlators have in their marginal Citations referred us *. And as his Name Jah is the brief of [Jehovah], ſo he that is, he that was, and he that is to come, is, in Words at length, the undeciphering of the ſame Name [Jehovah], of which afterwards. Now from God as ſuch, that is, as Jehovah, is the whole of Goſpel-Grace at once wiſhed and prayed for, this Name being the Ground and Original of the Goſpel it ſelf, and of all the Mercies of it.

Uſe. And e're we go any farther, let us here ſtand and wonder at the Thought that this Name of all other Names, this great and terrible Name, by which he chooſeth to be exalted, (Pſal. 68. 4.) that this great Name (as Jer. 44. 26.) which is ſo terrible and ſo holy (as Pſal. 99. 3. he meaneth this Name there, for it is that Name which was made known to Moſes and Aaron, as it follows there, ver. 6. whereby we are referred to thoſe very Paſſages in Exod. 3*d* and 6*th* Chapters) that Name ſo terrible to the Jews for theſe many hundreds of Years, that they have not dared to pronounce it, and is called his dreadful Name among the Heathens †, Mal. 1. 14. that this ſhould be made the Baſis, the Subject, the Signal of ſo much Grace: This muſt needs (in the very Entrance) afford us ſtrong Conſolation, in that out of the Strong ſhould come forth Sweetneſs. And the Reaſon hereof doth hold forth this, Judg. 14. 14. that God accounts Mercy to be his greateſt Attribute, (at leaſt in the Name Jah) as Jehovah his greateſt Name, which he hath choſen to be the ſpecial Subject of Mercy and Grace, as the Predicate.

The Enquiry next will be, what ſpecial particular Affinities there are between this great Name Jehovah and the Mercies of God, or rather (as being more cloſe to our Purpoſe) what ſpecial Supports of Faith (the Aim of my Subject) may be fetched from the bleſſed and intimate Conjunction of theſe two, Jehovah and Merciful put together? I anſwer, much every way; I ſhall inſtance but in ſome few, leaving it to others to enlarge unto more on this Argument.

I. This great Name wholly and abſtractly ſpeaks Being it ſelf; I am Jehovah, that is, I have Fulneſs of Being, I am an immenſe Sea of Being, and am all, and in whole very Being it ſelf. That then God ſhould put Jehovah, and Merciful, and Gracious together; What is the Reſult hereof? and what would God have us to underſtand thereby, but that his Mercies have Being it ſelf for their Root and Foundation; not only that Mercies are with him, but that they have a very Being it ſelf to rely upon, whilſt we rely upon them? So as look what Wiſdom, or Chriſt, (who is Jehovah) in the Proverbs, ſays of himſelf, I cauſe thoſe that love me to inherit Subſtance: Prov. 8. 21.

* And otherwiſe this is ſtrange and uncouth Language to Grecian Ears, to ſay, ἀπὸ τοῦ ὁ ὢν, and ſo of the reſt, and not ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄντος, &c. But the Reaſon is this, his great Name Jehovah ſtands as inflexible and indeclinable as his Nature is immutable; it keeps its State, and will not be ſubject to the Laws and Rules of Grammar, as in other Languages.

† That the Heathens knew him to be the God of the Jews under this Name Jah, or Ἰαὼ as the Grecians wrote it, and that they called their chief God Jove, is well known. See Aug. de Conſenſ. Religionis, c. 23. Diodor. Siculus, lib. 2. c. 5. Macrobius, lib. 1. Saturni, c. 18. and Grotius his Animadverſ. de verit. Relig.

ſtance: the ſame (God thus inviting us to believe on Jehovah, merciful) may we as confidently ſay, that we believe upon what is Subſtance, upon ſubſtantial Mercies: And hence it is that even our Faith, when pitch'd on God, is alone dignified (and no other kind of Knowledg is ſo) with the Title of ὑπόστασις, Subſiſtence or Reality, Heb. 11. 1. and ſaid to be our Reſt. For why God himſelf is the ultimate Object of it, and Baſis of its Reliance, as alſo his Son Chriſt, they being Subſiſtence and Reality. And to this Purpoſe you find theſe his Names, Jah, Jehovah, (which is indeed Jehovah doubled or repeated twice as here) to be put under the Feet of our Faith as a firm Rock of Being to ſtand upon; Jer. 55. 4. Truſt in the Lord for ever: for in Jah Jehovah is the Rock of Ages: So in the Original, and the Tranſlators have here ſignally, on ſet purpoſe, put Jehovah in Capital Letters; they might have done ſo by Jah alſo, which they tranſlate the Lord, for it is not ſingly Jehovah, but accompanied with Jah, which is Being, and Being it ſelf. And he fetcheth this out of theſe two Names, that he is therefore a Rock, and a Rock of Ages, whom we may therefore perfectly truſt on; for in the relation he ſpeaks this in the Verſe before, Thou wilt keep him in perfect Peace whoſe Mind is ſtayed on thee; unto which perfectly anſwers that of the Apoſtle, 1 Pet. 1. 13. Truſt perfectly on the Grace revealed; (ſo in the Margin alſo.) And why? becauſe in truſting on that Grace you have Being it ſelf for the Foundation, Jehovah, gracious, who is the firſt Being, and therefore the loweſt Foundation on which all that is built ſtands firm.

1 Pet. 1. 22.

II. Jehovah imports that God only [is] or alone hath true Being in him. For why elſe doth he appropriate this Name Jehovah to himſelf alone as incommunicable unto Creatures, ſince all his Creatures are but æquivocè entia, Shadows or Pictures of Being, not true Being it ſelf, as a Man's Picture is called a Man equivocally, and not in a true Senſe. And as their Being is but a Shadow of Being, ſuch are all the Mercies in them but equivocally Mercies in compariſon unto the Mercies that are in God, who is Jehovah, merciful, in whom his Mercies have Being, or rather are himſelf. So that it muſt be ſaid, that God alone is merciful and gracious, as truly as Chriſt ſays, that God alone is good, for Mercy is but a Branch of Goodneſs. That Jehovah is merciful as God, not as Creatures; I ſhall have occaſion afterwards to purſue this more fully.

If therefore we at any time think we may have any degree of Confidence upon the Mercies and Pities that are in Creatures, even ſuch as are in neareſt and deareſt relation to us, as Fathers, &c. of whom Chriſt ſays, Though evil, they yet know how to give good things to their Children; and ſo likewiſe to pity them: Then how much more may we be encouraged to rely on God, who is an heavenly Father to us, the only true and loving Father, as he only is the true and living God, and is withal ſtiled the Father of Mercies? 2 Cor. 1. 3. And his Mercies are true and living Mercies, as himſelf is. That Paſſage in Pſal. 86. 10. Thou art God alone, will be found eminently to be ſpoken as a magnifying of him, in relation to his Mercy, (if the 5*th* and 15*th* Verſes be compared with it) and indeed it is the main Current of that whole Pſalm, of which hereafter. So as we may ſay he is merciful alone. And if Sins come to be pardoned, there God's Mercies ſolely and alone can ſtand us in any ſtead, not only becauſe that God alone can pardon Sins committed againſt himſelf, the great Sovereign Being, nor can any Creature have any Influence thereinto, none can forgive Sins but God, Luke 5. 21. But beſides, for this, that he alone hath Mercy great enough in him to do it. The Creatures have not Mercy ſufficient enough in them; great Sins they could not find in their Hearts to pardon, ſo great an Iniquity, if to themſelves, as Sin is againſt God, they cannot forgive. Who is a God like unto our God, pardoning Iniquity? &c.

The Inference and Direction to our Faith from hence is, as to truſt perfectly on him, (as before) ſo only and alone upon him: My Soul, wait thou [only] upon God, for my Expectation is from him; he [only] is my Rock: all one as to ſay, he only hath Firmneſs of Being, whom my Soul can build upon; and therefore he is my Salvation. If any Creature had all the Goodneſs and Clemency, Mercy and Grace that is diffuſed throughout the whole of intelligent Natures, Angels and Men, it were not to be relied upon, but being laid in the Ballance with God, he were altogether lighter than Vanity, as it follows there, ver. 9. And the Reaſon is correſpondent, if in their Being they are Vanity, (Iſa. 14. 17. All Nations before him are as nothing, and they are counted to him leſs than nothing and Vanity) then in their Goodneſs much more. And as God only is Being, ſo only to be relied on as merciful. Yea, if your own Graces that are in your own Hearts, though wrought by God's Spirit, even that Mercy and Kindneſs which you have for your ſelves, whom you love ſo much, yet are no way to be truſted in, but are as to ſuch a purpoſe lighter than Vanity, and would fail but for his Mercy, the Maintainer of them, then much more all that is in all Creatures elſe whatever.

I ſhall after have occaſion to ſhew, that the Ground for all this Exhortation, thus only to truſt in God, is, in the latter end of this very Pſalm, centred upon, and referr'd to the Words of this Proclamation, my Text, in ver. 11, 12.

III. Jehovah imports, that his Being is of himſelf, ἀυτοῶν ἀυτοφυης, and ſuch is Jehovah as merciful, or his ſaving Mercies; and indeed all his Mercies whatſoever, they flow and proceed wholly from himſelf, having no Motive but from what is in himſelf, either as to the Perſons to whom, or as to the things and Mercies beſtowed. For although to be merciful is his Nature, yet the Diſpenſation or giving forth of Mercy is from his Will; and that which his Will is guided by, is the good Pleaſure of his Will, Epheſ. 1. 5. and according as he is pleaſed to purpoſe within himſelf, ver. 9. you may obſerve is this, I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful. This is the Royal Preface and Effort unto this Proclamation of his Nature, in which he ſpeaks but himſelf to be Jehovah, merciful, or the Poſſeſſor of all Being: and that looking as Jehovah, he is Lord of Being it ſelf, ſo the Lord of all his Mercies themſelves; and that as his Being is of himſelf, ſo that his ſhewing Mercy is from himſelf. And all Reaſon is there for it; for his Mercies, whence theſe Acts of Mercy flow, are himſelf, and alſo where and to whom his ſaving Mercies go, himſelf goes with them. He beſtows his whole ſelf on whomſoever he beſtoweth them. This you expreſly find, Iſa. 43. 25. [I] even [I] am he that blotteth out thy Tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and will not remember thy Sins: i. e. [I] that am what [I] am, [Jehovah], am he that doth it, and I do it of my ſelf; he reſolves it wholly into himſelf, and as moved by nothing but himſelf, ſo as he aſſumes this thing to himſelf, and takes it wholly on himſelf. The Prophet Ezekiel, chap. 36. ver. 22. thus expreſſeth it, I do not this for your ſakes, but for my own holy Name's ſake. And again, leſt they ſhould not take in the Weight of this ſufficiently at once ſaying, he repeats it, and withal leaves a ſmart and ſound Memento behind him for them to think on, why they ſhould conſider it, ver. 32. not for your ſakes do I [this], be it known to you. And [this] there ſpoken of was the cleanſing them from their Sins, ver. 25. and giving them a new Heart, and ſaving Repentance, ver. 26, 31. Mercies to Salvation all of them. And that Clauſe at the Cloſe of all, [its being known to them] rounds them in with a witneſs. And by a good Token of the clean contrary in your ſelves do you remember, (ſays he) ver. 31. Then ſhall ye remember your own evil Ways, and your Doings that were not good, and ſhall loath your ſelves in your own ſight, for your Iniquities and for your Abominations. Thus Mercy comes over them with a Triumph, as Sinners confounded even with their being pardoned; as elſewhere it is ſaid, that Mercy rejoiceth againſt Judgment.

Compare Exod. 33d & 34th ch.

IV. Jehovah imports him in general to be the Fountain of all Being to all things elſe that have Being, and him to be the Original Being; other things but derivative: So the beſt and nobleſt, higheſt Sort or Rank of Beings, do derive their Original, and hold their Dependance entirely upon Jehovah, as he is gracious and merciful. And therefore Jehovah merciful are well joined together, ſeeing it is Grace and Mercy that gives Being to the moſt tranſcendent Works of God.

Thoſe of our Redemption, the firſt ſort of Beings, that hold their Copies of him, are the Works of his firſt Creation, of which himſelf thus ſpeaks, Iſa. 66. 1, 2. All theſe things have my Hand made, pointing to Heaven, and Earth, this viſible World, and all therein; and all thoſe things have been, (ſays he) that is, by this ſame Hand of mine all theſe things exiſt, and have a Being; as you alſo have it, Acts 17. 25, 28. or all theſe things continue in Being, as elſewhere the Word is uſed. And this is dictum Jehovæ, the ſaying of Jehovah; and it is as if he had ſaid, You all that have Being and Exiſtence, hold of me in capite as I am Jehovah. But there is another, an higher Rank of Beings, that holds of him as he is Jehovah, gracious and merciful; and ſuch a ſuperiour kind of Beings God himſelf there intimates; in ſaying, with Difference from thoſe other Makes or Beings, To him will I look (or but to thoſe will I look) that is of poor and contrite Spirit, and trembles at my Word; that is, who hath a gracious Heart, of which, and all that belong to it, Jehovah as merciful is the Founder. And the dilating on this being full and pertinent to the Notion in hand, and tending ſo much to the Glory of our Jehovah, and the Mercy of him, I ſhall enlarge upon this Diviſion of theſe two Ranks, as taking up and dividing between them the whole Breadth of Beings, as both the Scriptures and the Schoolmen abundantly ſhew.

1ſt. The Schoolmen reduced all things derivative from God as the Fountain, unto two Orders. The firſt is Ordo Naturæ, the Order of things in Nature, which are thoſe by the firſt Creation, which are continued in Exiſtence by common Providence, whereof God in the Prophet there firſt ſpeaks. Secondly, Ordo Gratiæ, the Order of things in Grace, which are wholly ſupernatural, which alſo the Prophet there inſinuates with diſtinction of one from the other.

2dly. The Scripture alſo it ſelf ſpeaks the Difference of their Productions, as when it ſpeaks of ſome things not made with Hands, and not of this building, Heb. 9. 11. that is, not of this ordinary Make, by the firſt Creation or common Providence, of which God alſo ſo ſlightly and undervaluingly had ſpoken in that of Iſaiah, Theſe things my Hand have made; but, &c.

1. For the Proof of this I will inſtance in the higheſt of that Rank, in the Order of Grace, and things ſupernatural, the Head of them all, viz. Chriſt's humane Nature, in its Advancement by perſonal Union with the Son of God; ay, and Chriſt's Body too, as having been conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, Heb. 9. 11. where it is ſaid, that hereby he became an High Prieſt by a greater and more perfect Tabernacle, not made with Hands, that is to ſay, not of this building. Alſo as to the Work of Grace wrought by a new Creation in the Heart of a Sinner, (which is the Image of Chriſt with Difference from that of Adam) as it is ſaid to be a new Creature, ſo the way of producing it is ſaid to be a new Creation made without Hands, Col. 2. 11. And this new Creature, with the whole Syſtem of things belonging to it, is call'd another new World, or Beings of another kind. And,

2. All thoſe things appertaining to this Order of Grace, have the Name and Nature of Being, as truly as thoſe other; of him (that is, of God) you are in Chriſt Jeſus, 1 Cor. 1. 30. i. e. you have another Being founded in Chriſt (de novo) anew; you have your Exiſtence in him: God declares himſelf there the Founder of a new Creation, and Chriſt to be the Head of it. And theſe things that are by this new Creation, he ſets in oppoſition to all elſe of the old Creation, and that are the higheſt Perfections of them; in ſaying, he brings to nought things that are, by things that are not, which he nameth anew to be of him.

3. And theſe things of the new Creation are an higher and more tranſcendent kind of Beings, (not only a differing Being) and are ſo in God's Eſteem; for in that Place of Iſaiah he ſpeaks of the greateſt things of the firſt Creation, pointing to them undervaluingly, All theſe things have my Hand made; but unto him will I look, and have Reſpect, and my Eye is upon, that is of my new Creation. And of Chriſt's humane Nature, (in that Heb. 9. 11.) though it be made of the ſame Stuff we are all made of, yet becauſe it was brought forth by this new way of Creation, he terms it a greater and more perfect Tabernacle, not made with Hands.

4. All things of the new Creation hold their Exiſtence of Jehovah upon this Title of Jehovah, gracious. Of him ye are in Chriſt Jeſus, ſays the Apoſtle; but of him as Jehovah, gracious and merciful, ſays the Prophet: for the Apoſtle refers us for the Proof of this unto Jer. 9. 23, 24. Thus ſaith Jehovah, Let not the wiſe Man glory in his Wiſdom, &c. but let him that glories, glory in this, that he underſtandeth and knoweth me, that I am Jehovah which exerciſe Loving-kindneſs, and Judgment, and Righteouſneſs in the Earth; for in theſe things I delight, ſays Jehovah. To this Place the Apoſtle refers us, as appears by his next Verſe, v. 31. That according as it is written, ſays he, he that glories, let him glory in the Lord. He hath Jehovah and Jehovah over and again, and him as exerciſing Loving-kindneſs, and ſo as merciful (in which he delights) as the Foundation of this new Being in Chriſt; Of him ye are in Chriſt Jeſus, whereof this he brings as the Proof.

And this is the Accompt given why he aſſumes the Name Jehovah as if he had never been known by that Name before: Tho we find it in Moſes from the very 2*d* of Geneſis, and ſo on, often uſed, yet our moſt judicious Commentators ſay, that it was to ſignify, he came to give Being to his Promiſes; he had made Promiſes before, made a Covenant, promiſed that good Land, which he had done under other Names; but now (ſays he) I come to ſhew my ſelf Jehovah, in giving Being to thoſe Promiſes, and that Covenant, to give Exiſtence to them. Which is all founded on this, that his Name Jehovah is not only to ſhew, that he hath Being in himſelf, but to give Being to all things elſe, but eſpecially to his Covenant of Mercy and Grace, whereof thoſe things were the Types.

In the New Teſtament this is the Founder of this new Rank of Beings in Grace, as Jehovah merciful is ſet out by that bleſſed Title more ſutable to the Expreſſion of the New Teſtament, of his being the Father of Mercies, that is, the Conditor or Author novæ Ordinis: 2 Cor. 1. 3. Bleſſed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of Mercies, the God of all Comforts. His being Father of all Goſpel-Mercies is ſet next to his being the Father of Chriſt, becauſe of him we are in Chriſt Jeſus what we are in Grace. This his Title of Father of Mercies bears two Senſes:

1. That he is a merciful Father, it being an Hebraiſm, (ſay ſome) as when he is called the Father of Glory, &c. that is, a glorious Father. And in that he ſays of Mercies in the Plural, this intends or augments the Emphaſis of it. It is as if he had ſaid, he is ſummè miſericors, he is a moſt merciful Father in the higheſt degree. Thus Beza, Grotius, and others.

2. He becomes the Author and Original of all Goſpel-Mercies that are founded in Chriſt, having taken on him firſt the Relation of a Father to us in Chriſt, Mercies of Mercies being here taken for the Effects of Mercy, as often in Scripture the word Mercies is uſed for merciful Effects or Benefits. And the word ὀϱτισμῶν, in Latin miſerationes, doth properly ſignify the gracious Effects flowing from Mercy in God, which are called his Mercies, and ſo do differ from ἐλεως, which ſignify the Mercy that is ſeated in the Heart of God himſelf. And Mercies being thus underſtood, when it is ſaid, he is the Father of Mercies, it implies he is a Father that gives Being to thoſe Mercies, as a Father doth to his Child. And they are the Mercies of the Goſpel, and all the Mercies of the Goſpel in Chriſt, which here he eſpecially and apart intends; for he ſpeaks of ſuch Mercies, which he beſtows as he is the Father of Chriſt, as well as he is the Father of Mercies, as the Words following imply, The God of all Comfort, and therefore likewiſe the Father of all Mercies.

Vid. Druſium in 2 Cor. 1. 3.

Now of theſe Mercies or Benefits of this new Rank of Beings, which God as Jehovah merciful is the Father of, there are two ſorts:

1*ſt*. Such as impreſs ſomething on us, work ſome real new Being in us, which we call a phyſical Change.

2*dly*. There are Privileges granted us, which work a mighty Change in us in our State and Condition before the Lord. The firſt are ſuch as when he makes us holy, and the like, and ſuch were moſt of the Benefits of the firſt Creation, when we were framed and formed firſt out of nothing. But the greateſt Benefits in Grace do impreſs nothing upon us, make no phyſical Change, (tho ſuch a Change is the Conſequent of them) and yet are things of the greateſt Make, and have the greateſt Reality in them, and the Title of Creation given to them. The firſt ſort are like unto that, that he will at the Reſurrection change our vile Bodies into the Likeneſs of his glorious Body, in Phil. 3. 21. which is done according to the working whereby he is able even to ſubdue all things to himſelf: But the latter are ἐξȣσίαι, they are Privileges; as in John 1. it is ſaid, he gave us ἐξȣσίαν, Power, or Right, or Privilege, (as it is in the Margin) to become the Sons of God: And anſwerably (to explicate this) there is a twofold Power in God. Firſt, That which we call Potentia, whereby he is the Author of all thoſe Works which flow from mere Power and Force, whereby he made the World. But, Secondly, There is Poteſtas, Dominion or Sovereignty: and the Acts of this kind of Power or Sovereignty, by which he makes things that are not to be, of the two are the greater, far greater than the other. The greateſt Works in the Order of Grace are of Sovereignty's Make; you may ſee it by that in Kings, who have no more phyſical Power than other Men, by their own Hands they can work no more than another Man, yet they can do ſtrange Acts of another kind which flow from their Sovereignty ; they can make Knights, create Noble Men, ſet up Favourites, which are call'd their Creatures ; which Actings of theirs are not by any internal Workings on the Perſon, but by external Works as to the Perſon, that reſides in their own Breaſt, and then expreſs'd and put forth ; and yet they are as real Effects in their kind as any other.

You may ſee theſe two different Works in that 1 Cor. 1. 30. where Chriſt is ſaid to be made Righteouſneſs to us, and Sanctification to us. Righteouſneſs of Juſtification is a Work of God upon us, but Sanctification is a working Holineſs in us ; and yet each of theſe have the Title of Being given to them, Of him ye ARE in Chriſt Jeſus, who is made both theſe to you. I ſhall only inlarge upon the latter of theſe two, namely, that theſe outward Privileges have yet the moſt real Being in them ; which will alſo appear by the Conſequents that follow.

Thus in Scripture-Phraſe God's advancing to an Office or Dignity, is ſaid to be a making or conſtituting ; thus Exod. 7. 1. The Lord ſaid to Moſes, See I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, and Aaron thy Brother ſhall be thy Prophet. And 1 Sam. 12. 6. The Lord advanced (that is, made) Moſes and Aaron, and ſet them up in thoſe Offices, furniſhing them with Gifts ſutable. Thus Mark 3. 14. it is ſaid, Chriſt ordained twelve (Apoſtles namely) the word is, made them. He prefers them to that Office out of Grace ; for in Rom. 1. 5. it is called Grace and Apoſtleſhip. Theſe were Acts of Grace, making of them, or conſtituting of them in an outward Office, the Conſequence whereof was inabling them with ſuch and ſuch Gifts, but the Office was but an external Privilege with Authority. Now there are many of the greateſt Bleſſings or Benefits we receive in Chriſt that are an external preferring us unto a Dignity, an high Privilege in which the Benefit mainly conſiſts, but hath for its Concomitant and its Conſequence the moſt real Effects of any other. And the Privilege it ſelf hath a tranſcendent Being in it ſelf, and they are beſtow'd upon us by way of a Creation, or God's making or calling us ſo to be, according to what is ſaid, Rom. 4. 17. God calls thoſe things that are not, as though they were, and gives them Being. From this General I give particular Inſtances.

Firſt ; That we ſhould be the People of God. His calling us to be ſo, is his making us ſo, by way of Privilege, from the contrary State wherein we were, of not being his People, till he is pleaſed to call us ſo ; and this is anſwerable unto a new Creation by Mercy ; 1 Pet. 2. 10. Who in times paſt were not a People, but are now the People of God, which had not obtained Mercy, but now have obtained Mercy. This was done by Calling, ver. 9. Here is a Change wrought in our State and Condition analogous to that political Change which a King makes in a Man when he prefers him ; and this wholly the Effect of Mercy, who have obtained Mercy : and hereof the Scripture uſes the ſame Phraſe of making us his People, as truly as it is uſed of the old Creation ; Pſal. 100. 3. Know ye that the Lord he is God ; it is he that made us, and not we our ſelves, his People ; that is, made us his People. He ſpeaks in diſtinction from the firſt Make, and it is founded on this, that he gives us this new Being as he is Jehovah, as he is God, and this is done by way of Preferment or Exaltation. That in Deut. 32. 6. Is not God thy Father? hath he not made thee, and eſtabliſhed thee? in Acts 13. 17. is thus expreſs'd, The God of his People Iſrael choſe our Fathers, and exalted the People.

Secondly ; He hath call'd us to be the Sons of God ; it is but a Title and Privilege in it ſelf, as out of John 1. 12. I ſhew'd. He gave them ἐξουσίαν to become the Sons of God as a Privilege by Patent ; as alſo to be Heirs and Coheirs with Chriſt, as in Rom. 8. 17. But this in the Conſequents of it appears to have the greateſt Being to follow upon it ; it hath ſo in it ſelf, but I ſay, it doth appear, it will appear one day to have ſo ; 1 John 3. 1. Behold what manner of Love the Father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the Sons of God. Beloved, now we are the Sons of God, and it does not yet appear what we ſhall be. What will be the Conſequent of it ? but we know that when he ſhall appear, we ſhall be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is. And it is but the Father's calling us to be his Sons. What is that? It is but giving us that Relation upon his own ſaying, we ſhall be ſo : It is calling us what we were not, to be now what we are ; and his ſaying, we ſhall be his Sons, it is but an Act external upon us ; and yet this hath the greateſt Reality of Being flowing from it, and contained in it.

Thirdly; It is thus alſo in Juſtification. It is but calling us from what we are not, yea from the contrary, to be righteous in his Righteouſneſs by the Power and Dominion of him that is Jehovah, the Fountain of Being, who ſays to an ungodly Perſon, Thou art righteous, and in ſaying it, makes him ſuch; Rom. 5. 19. By the Obedience of one many ſhall be made (or conſtituted) righteous. This is a Matter of the greateſt Reality, and hath the firmeſt Being in it, and yet is but an Act external upon us; the Soul in it ſelf hath no Being as to this Righteouſneſs, for God juſtifies it as ungodly; it hath no ſuch Being, but God gives it, and gives it by an Act that is external to us, anſwering to that forenſical Act of pronouncing a Man innocent at the Bar.

The ſecond ſort of Beings or Bleſſings of Grace are ſuch as do impreſs ſomething upon us, and their Beings conſiſt wholly in ſuch an Impreſſion. As when God comes to a Soul that is nothing but Sin, and gives it a new Heart, and a new Spirit, and it becomes a Workmanſhip created to good Works; this he does by working this new Creature in it, by internal changing our corrupt Hearts, as one Day he will do our vile Bodies. Theſe, and all ſuch Effects, are but the Fruits of Jehovah merciful.

3*dly*. There is a third ſort of this Rank of Mercies which are imminent in the Heart of God, which are call'd his Thoughts of Peace and Mercy, Iſa. 55. 7, 8. which in Pſal. 40. 5. Chriſt ſays, are infinite for Multitude towards us, being continued, fixed in him from everlaſting; Jer. 29. 11. I know the Thoughts that I think towards you. And theſe I call imminent in himſelf according to that, Epheſ. 1. 9, 11. which he purpoſed in himſelf.

There are alſo a middle between his Purpoſes in himſelf, and the Execution of them upon us, all which are call'd Mercies. There are alſo Promiſes which are his Promiſes of Mercy, a middle between both, and unto all theſe he gives a Being as he is Jehovah merciful. All the Promiſes of God are Yea and Amen, 1 Cor. 1. 20. And that theſe in Chriſt are ſaid to be Amen, it imports they have a real Being and Exiſtence: For what is Amen but ſo be it; ſo that he ſets to his Promiſes anſwerably, let it be ſo, (which was the Word at the firſt Creation, and it was ſo) and ſo ſhall theſe Promiſes one day be.

But what do I treating of theſe little Makes of Grace, Mercy in and upon, and towards us, that ſhew Jehovah gracious and merciful, in giving a Being to them all, while I am to give Inſtances of a far greater Make and Being, that flow from Jehovah gracious, to be ſure? for it is the Grace of Union we now ſpeak of.

1. What ſay you to Jeſus Chriſt that new thing? Jer. 31. 22. Jehovah created a new thing in the Earth, a Woman ſhall compaſs a Man; that Man of Men, that ſtrong Man Jeſus conceived in the Womb of that Virgin in Nazareth, a City of the ten Tribes, whom therefore he exhorts to return. Now take Jeſus Chriſt as God-Man and Mediator, and all of him from top to toe, and all he was made of, it is all of God, out of Grace, I will not ſay of Mercy. That the Son of God ſhould take that Fleſh, was a new thing, which I need not inſiſt on.

2. As his Perſon, ſo all his Offices were all made things by Jehovah gracious. Acts 2. 36. that all the Houſe of Iſrael may aſſuredly know, that he hath made that ſame Jeſus both Lord and Chriſt. He made him a King; Pſal. 89. 27. I will make him my firſt-born, higher than the Kings of the Earth. He was made a Surety and Mediator; Heb. 7. 22. He was made a Prieſt after, &c. By ſo much was Jeſus made a Surety of a better Teſtament: made an high Prieſt, Heb. 3. 2. ſo the Margin hath it; all out of Grace and Prerogative. Thus in himſelf.

3. To be ſure whatever he made to us to be, that is of Jehovah merciful to us; 1 Cor. 1. 30. Of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made to us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption.

4. Then how was he made theſe to us?

He made him Sin, 2 Cor. 5. 21. as ſtrange a Work for God to make his Son to be, as any of the former. He made him Sin, that knew no Sin: Will you have it further? He made him a Curſe, Gal. 3. 13. And theſe were real Makings, for his Soul felt the Effects of them, though in themſelves they were but external Imputations. But he felt the Effects of them, as we do the Benefits of his being made ſuch. And thus as to his Perſon and Offices, and what he is made to us, all are new Beings of Jehovah gracious to him, and merciful to us.

3*dly.* He is Jehovah merciful; he is the Father of all the Mercies that are in the Heart of Chriſt himſelf, thorow whoſe Heart all God's Mercies run and flow to us. Jehovah merciful gave Being to them, God commanded him to love us, and put into his Heart, as Man, that Love which paſſeth Knowledg, Epheſ. 3. 12. All thoſe ſure Mercies of David, that is, of Chriſt, (Acts 13. 55. and Iſa. 55. 3.) that are either in his Heart towards us, or are the Benefits he purchaſed and beſtows upon us, Jehovah merciful is the Father of them all: That he is a merciful High Prieſt, Heb. 2. 17. That he does pity us according to the meaſure of our Needs, Heb. 5. 2. That he hath Mercies in his Soul wherewith to do it: All this is what God beſtows upon his Heart to make him ſuch. As God gave him a Body fitted, he gave him an Heart fitted; Pſal. 89. 24. ſpeaking of Chriſt under the Type of David, (ſays he) My Faithfulneſs and my Mercy ſhall be with him, and he ſpeaks it as in relation unto his Government and Diſpenſation of things to us, even as of David in the Type it is there ſpoken in relation to his Government. My Mercy ſhall be with him (ſays God) to execute all for me, and to diſpenſe all the Mercies out of Mercifulneſs in himſelf, which I my ſelf would diſpenſe, God having given up all into his Hand; God's Mercies and Faithfulneſs are with him in the execution.

Laſtly; It would be too poor a thing for me now to tell you, that Jehovah merciful gives Being to all the Mercies in the Hearts of Fathers, Mothers, Friends, or whomever you know to be pitiful. Read over all Stories, and put all the Mercies you can read of, or hear of, into one Heart; if a Father had all the Mercies that all Fathers ever had, how pitiful would he be. But who is the Father of theſe, and gives Being to them? It is Jehovah merciful, and ſhall not he that made the Eye ſee? and ſhall not he that put theſe Mercies into all the Hearts of all the Creatures, yea into the Hearts of them that are evil, (for ſuch are Parents, both Fathers and Mothers) be himſelf merciful? And ſhall it be ſaid, How can a Mother forget her Child? And ſhall not this, in a more infinite tranſcendent manner, be attributed to God? I have told you he is the Father of Chriſt, and of all the Mercies in Chriſt, and that is beyond all. Remember that he is Jehovah merciful that gives Being to all, in whom your Souls do truſt.

V. The Name Jehovah, by which God makes himſelf known in this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6. imports him alſo to be the firſt and the laſt in Being, and ſo his giving Being to all things from the firſt unto the laſt, and that they all wholly and all along depend upon him for Being; which is in a great part the Mind of that Speech, Iſa. 44. 6. I am the firſt, and I am the laſt. And in another Place of the ſame Prophet, ch. 41. 4. Who hath wrought and done it, calling the Generations from the beginning? I the Lord the firſt, and with the laſt, I am he. He ſpeaks it in relation unto all created Beings, from the firſt Creation throughout all Generations. Wherein obſerve how he is abſolutely in both Places ſaid to be the firſt, but not with the laſt, which is only in the latter Text, for time was when there was no Creature with him from all Eternity, and then he was firſt only and alone. But in this ſecond Text he is ſaid to be with the laſt, and yet neverthelſs he is ſaid to be the laſt in that other. The Reaſon of which I take up thus, That for time to come God hath ordained ſome ſort of Creatures to exiſt to Eternity, like as himſelf doth, and ſo in that reſpect he is ſaid to be with the laſt even of them: But yet take in this with it, that nevertheleſs he is alſo the laſt, as truly as the firſt, ch. 44. 6. as alſo Rev. 1. 11. This is to be underſtood in reſpect (ſay I) of their total and abſolute, and continual Dependency upon him: And it is all one as if he had ſaid, although they do continue to Eternity, yet it is thorow me and from me, for I am the laſt however; becauſe it is I uphold them in Being ſo to do: For I only have Immortality of Being, 1 Tim. 6. 15. and they but by Participation from me, and ſo in Truth, and de jure, of Right, I am the laſt.

Now what the Prophet ſpeaks, as in reſpect to thoſe firſt Beings of the Creation, the Apoſtle in his Revelation applies unto Grace and Salvation, the things of the ſecond ſort of Beings. For in reſpect thereto it is the Apoſtle utters the ſame Saying, as by comparing Revel. 1. 4*th* and 8*th* Verſes appears. In the 4*th* Verſe he wiſheth Grace and Peace from him, which is, and which was, and which is to come. And from Jeſus Chriſt, ver. 5. who, ver. 8. ſays of himſelf, I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending (ſaith the Lord) which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty. And this his Title, I am the Beginning and the Ending, is ſpoken in relation unto Grace and Salvation; for upon this Title it is that Grace is wiſhed from him as well as from the Father: And alſo they are the very Benefits of Salvation which he had there ſpoken of, ver. 5, 6. Thus then in Grace he is the firſt and the laſt, as well as in the Prophet he is ſaid to be ſo in relation unto the Beings of the firſt Creation.

And his being the firſt and the laſt, notes forth not only the two Extreams of Grace and Salvation, that is, of the firſt Beginning and laſt Ending or Accompliſhment of our Salvation, as if he were the Author only of theſe: But this Expreſſion of his being the firſt and laſt, encloſeth and taketh in the whole Line and Series of Benefits of Grace and Salvation, whatſoever continued all along between that firſt and laſt; even as in reſpect of natural Beings (as Life and Motion) his being the firſt and laſt takes in all whatſoever of them from firſt to laſt.

Only I obſerve, that his being Alpha and Omega, in this reſpect, is reſolved into his being Jehovah, for both in ver. 4, & 8. it runs thus, From him that was, and is, and is to come: Which is the decyphering of Jehovah, and thereby he is apparently made, and is declared the Fountain of all and every whit of Grace, both paſt, preſent, and to come; and not only at firſt, or at the laſt alone, but all along in the Intervals of Time between. 1. From him that was: And ſo he is the eternal Spring of that Grace which was from everlaſting, and is ſhewn at Converſion. 2. Which is: that is, he at preſent continues to diſpenſe all Grace to us. 3. Who is to come. So he is the Author of all Grace, for everlaſting, unto the laſt.

And yet I will not reſtrain theſe his Titles only unto Matters of Grace and Salvation, for they comprehenſively relate unto all other Works which Chriſt doth for his Church, or towards others, or that are propheſied of in this Book, as by the Repetition of them, ch. 22. 13. at the end of this Book, and as after all the Works of his Kingdom perfected, it appears. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the firſt and the laſt; yet ſtill ſo as here at the beginning of the Book, wherein Grace and Peace is wiſhed, it muſt be allowed to have a ſpecial relation to Grace and the Works thereof. Thus God is the immediate Forger of every Link of that golden Chain, whereof the firſt is rivetted in his own Heart, and the laſt Ends in him alſo. Thus it is in his loving us, and thus it is in his ſaving us; he is the firſt and laſt in both.

1. In loving us (which is the Foundation of all Grace to us, for Love is the Ground of all Mercy, Epheſ. 2. 4. and ſo of all Benefits of Salvation) he is the firſt. So it is ſaid expreſly, 1 John 4. 19. We love him becauſe he firſt loved us; and not we him, ver. 10. And he is the laſt in loving alſo; whom he loved he loved to the end, John 13. 1. and we ſhould not love him to the end, if he did not continue to love us to the end. Thus it is in the Foundation of Mercy.

2. In the Works of Salvation he is the firſt and the laſt, Heb. 12. 2. He is the Author of our Faith; and ſo the firſt, and the Finiſher, and ſo the laſt. Thus he is at Death too, when we receive the end of our Faith the Salvation of our Souls, 1 Pet. 1. 9. And after that he is thus to us at the Day of Judgment, 2 Tim. 1. 18. The Lord grant he may find Mercy at that Day. It is then we have need of Mercy, and he is the Giver of it: And as at the firſt and laſt, ſo all along between, he is thus the Fountain of all Mercy and Grace to us. It is by the Grace of God I am that I am, (ſays the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 15. 10.) And it is not I, but the Grace of God that is with me; i. e. which is all along with me in every Act and Step. We are therefore continually to look for, and depend upon the Mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, even all along unto eternal Life, Jude 23.

It is not as the Papiſts ſay, who acknowledg God to be the firſt in the Benefits of Salvation, as that at the firſt Mercy doth all in Juſtification, (and they call it therefore the firſt Juſtification) which they aſcribe to God's Grace wholly; but then they feign a ſecond Juſtification, as that which ſaves us, and makes us Heirs of eternal Life, through the Merits of Works. O but Jehovah merciful and gracious is the firſt and the laſt, and all and every thing of Grace depends upon him, and it is wholly Grace and Mercy from firſt to laſt.

Part I. Yea, and he is Jehovah gracious with the laſt, (as you heard the Prophet Iſaiah ſpeak, ch. 41. 4.) for eternal Glory is as much from his Grace as Converſion it ſelf at firſt. It is the Gift of God, Rom. 6. 23. and Grace reigns even in Heaven to Eternity, Rom. 5. 21. as much as ever it did in this Life, and more, and it is Grace then that entertains us in Heaven; Epheſ. 2. 5, 6, 7. Who hath quickned us and ſaved us, (ſo in this Life, as he had ſaid in the Verſes before) that he in Ages to come might ſhew the exceeding Riches of his Grace in his Kindneſs towards us thorow Chriſt Jeſus. This is to be done in Heaven. We have Grace here but by driblets, and but imperfect Holineſs, and a defective Communion with God, &c. there it is he profuſely ſpends and pours forth his Riches reſerved to that time, and then the Veſſels of Mercy poſſeſs the whole of the Riches of Glory, Rom. 9. 23. the Well-head whereof is Mercy, as there is expreſs'd.

VI. This Name of God Jehovah imports alſo his Being from everlaſting to everlaſting: and as his Name [El] that follows, tranſlated [God] notes forth his Power, ſo Jehovah and Ehije his Eternity, as Calvin and others obſerve. But we have a ſurer Word of Prophecy, that the Import of it is Eternity, from the before-cited Apoſtle's own Paraphraſe upon it, Rev. 1. 4. (which many of our Divines upon that Place have obſerved) Him which is, which was, and which is to come, which is the unciphering of the very Name Jehovah, and the true Reaſon why he ſaith not ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄντος, but ἀπὸ τοῦ ὁ ὢν, was, which is (as Calvin and Beza have obſerved) to point as with the Finger unto this very Name Jehovah, I am, Exod. 3*d* and 6*th* Chapters. “ Yea, the Form of the Hebrew word Jehovah (ſays Ainſworth) im“ plies ſo much, [Je] being a Sign of the time to come, and ſo [Jehovah he will be]:
“ [Ho] of the time preſent, [Hovah] he that is, and [Vah] of the time paſt; [Ha- “ vah] he was. And again elſewhere the ſame Author obſerves *, that Jehovah “ cometh of [Havah] he was, and by the firſt Letter [J] it ſignifies he will be, and “ by [Ho] it ſignifies he is †; and this the Hebrew Doctors (ſays he) acknowledg “ in ſaying that the three times paſt, preſent, and to come, are comprehended in “ this proper Name [Jehovah], as it is known to all, ſay they. Thus Ainſworth on Gen. 2. 4. out of them.

Now as his Being, ſo theſe his Mercies are from everlaſting; for both Jehovah and merciful are ſtill correſpondent: Pſal. 25. 6. Remember, O Lord, thy tender Mercies, and thy Loving-kindneſſes, which have been ever of old. They are Mercies as to time paſt, which the word remember inſinuates; and they are his ſpecial Mercies to his Elect, which with Difference he ſtileth his tender Mercies; and they are his Loving-kindneſſes, which word imports his entireſt Love, as Pſal. 18. 2. The ſame word ſignifies to love heartily in the midſt of the Bowels. And theſe have been ever of old, and that not only as of a time of an old Date, and ſo the word is elſewhere uſed; but theſe have been for ever of old; it is that Oldneſs of Eternity, they are as old as Jehovah himſelf, the Antient of Days is. And why? Becauſe they are the Mercies of him that is Jehovah: And thus we find his everlaſting Love ſtated in Difference from what is of old; Jer. 31. 3. The Lord hath appeared to me of old: this the Church ſays, that is, in antient times, in former times; Ah but appears not now to me. In anſwer thereto, ſays God, Doſt thou ſpeak of times of old? yea I have loved thee with an everlaſting Love, &c. and ſo of an elder Date than that old time thou ſpeakeſt of, in which I ſhould have appeared to thee. And thus here our Tranſlators have emphatically tranſlated the words for ever of old.

But what, are they everlaſting only from time paſt? No, but as Jehovah imports his Being to everlaſting alſo, ſo his Mercies are; Pſal. 100. 5. The Lord is good, his Mercy is everlaſting, and his Truth endureth to all Generations. And the Eternity in this Place is that part of it for time to come; for it is from Generation to Generation. And as we find the Everlaſtingneſs of them either way thus ſingly and apart ſet out in theſe Pſalms mentioned, ſo we find them in Pſal. 103. 17. to be conjoined; The Mercy of the Lord is from everlaſting upon them that fear him. So then Jehovah that was, that is, and that is to come, is merciful and gracious.

* Ainſworth on Pſal. 83. 18. which is with a ſpecial Obſervation cited by Dr. Jackſon, of the Divine Eſſence and Attributes.

† Phraſis eſt quæ occurrit apud Judæos quâ Deum ſignificare volunt, & æternitatem περιφραστικῶς exprimi Capellus in Apoc. ch. 1. v. 4.

And this ſpeaks more than what is in the former Aſſertion ; for by this he is not ſimply the firſt in Grace, and ſo in Mercy to us : That might have been, though he had begun to have loved, but then when he firſt wrought on us, or as having purpoſed it from ſome very antient Date : But this imports his having ever loved us ſince he was God, and had Being, or ſhall have Being, both his own Nature inclining him together with his Purpoſes of Mercy taken up by his own Will towards us. For he would have his Mercies unto his Children to bear the Reſemblance of his very Being Jehovah, and ſo anſwer to his Name in being as eternal as himſelf : Iſa. 54. 7, 8, 10. For a ſmall Moment have I forſaken thee, but with great Mercies will I gather thee. In a little Wrath I hid my Face from thee, for a Moment, but with everlaſting Kindneſs will I have Mercy on thee, ſaith the Lord thy Redeemer. For the Mountains ſhall depart, and the Hills be removed, but my Kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the Covenant of my Peace be removed, ſaith the Lord that hath Mercy on thee.

Uſe. The Uſe of which is this, To truſt on him at all Times and Seaſons. You heard before, out of Pſal. 62. you ſhould truſt in Jehovah ſolely and alone, ſo v. 5. but v. 8. you have that added, Truſt in him at all times ; for he that was, is, and is to come, is your Jehovah merciful. The worſt times are thoſe when you have ſinned againſt him, yet come to him with Faith at ſuch time. You are not to imagine that indeed when we have walked holily, and only then, we may come with expectation of Mercy and Pardon from him : No, but truſt in him at all times, only come humbling your ſelves and turning unto him ; draw near to him and he will draw near to you. God is not as Man, to be merciful by fits, when the good Humour comes on him : but conſider, he is merciful as Jehovah, and therefore with a Conſtancy, and continually, which in expreſs Words you have, Pſal. 71. 3. Be thou my ſtrong Habitation whereunto I may continually reſort : thou haſt given Commandment to ſave me : for thou art my Rock and my Fortreſs. Ver. 14. But I will hope continually, and will yet praiſe thee more and more.

VII. The Name Jehovah alſo imports Immutability, Unchangeableneſs of Being ; Mal. 3. 6. I am Jehovah, I change not ; ſo in the Original. It is as if he ſhould ſay, My Name Jehovah ſpeaks my Being to be unchangeable. His Name, [I am] in ſhort, imports, that he is always one and the ſame in Being ; which Chriſt, as being God, aſſumes when he ſaid, Before Abraham was I am, John 8. 66. And the Apoſtle ſays alſo of him, Chriſt, the ſame to day, yeſterday, and for ever, Heb. 13. 8. And therein alſo you have interpreted what is ſpoken of Chriſt, Rev. 1. 8. He that was, that is, and is to come, (the Paraphraſe of Jehovah) to be meant of Unchangeableneſs ; ſemper idem, always one and the ſame. And as God is thus in his Being unchangeable, ſo in his Mercies ; the Mercies of this David are ſure Mercies, Iſa. 55. 3. Acts 13. 34. Theſe his ſpecial Mercies to his Choſen have the Similitude of his Being. It is Jehovah that is merciful ; and as Jehovah ſignifies Firmitude of Being, and is therefore compar'd to a Rock, &c. ſo theſe his Mercies are likened to things of longeſt Duration, to thoſe things which to us Men are ſuch in our Account. Thus he compares them to the Mountains, which cannot be removed, yea Mountains of Braſs, Zech. 6. 1. Iſa. 54. 10. For the Mountains ſhall depart, and the Hills be removed, but my Kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the Covenant of my Peace be removed, ſaith the Lord that hath Mercy on thee. Alſo in Pſal. 89. the Perpetuity of Mercy is one eminent Piece of that Pſalm : For with that he begins, ver. 2. For I have ſaid, Mercy ſhall be built up for ever : thy Faithfulneſs ſhalt thou eſtabliſh in the very Heaven. And they are the ſure Mercies of our ſpiritual David, (Chriſt) he means. Now to ſet forth the Perpetuity hereof, he firſt uſeth Words that expreſs Firmitude, as eſtabliſhed, built up for ever, ver. 2, 4. Then he uſeth ſuch Similitudes as are taken from things which are held moſt firm and inviolable amongſt Men, as ver. 4. fœdus incidi, I have cut or engraven my Covenant, (ſo in the Hebrew) alluding unto what was then in uſe, when Covenants were mutually to be made, ſuch as they intended to be inviolate, and never to be broken ; to ſignify ſo much, they did engrave and cut them into the moſt durable laſting Matter, as Marble, or Braſs, or the like. You may ſee this to have been the way of writing in uſe, as what was to laſt for ever ; as Job 19. 24. O that my Words were graven with with an iron Pen and Lead, in the Rock for ever! And what is that Rock or Marble here? No other than the Heart it ſelf of our gracious and moſt merciful Jehovah, and his moſt unalterable and immoveable Purpoſes, Truth and Faithfulneſs. This is that Foundation in the Heavens, whereon Mercy is built up for ever; as ver. 2. which (as the Apoſtle ſays) remains for ever; and ſo they become the ſure Mercies of David, Iſa. 55. 3. Again, ſolemn Oaths amongſt Men ſerve to ratify and make things ſworn to perpetual. This alſo is there ſpecified as having been taken by God, Once have I ſworn by my Holineſs, &c. and ſworn by him that cannot lie, and ſworn to that end, to ſhew the Immutability of his Counſel, Heb. 6. 17. And not only is the Immutability of his Mercy illuſtrated by theſe things taken from what is firm on Earth, but he aſcends up to the Heavens, and firſt unto the very higheſt Heavens; ver. 2. For I have ſaid, Mercy ſhall be built up for ever: thy Faithfulneſs ſhalt thou eſtabliſh in the very Heaven: comparing them to an Houſe built not on Earth, or upon a Foundation of Earth, which Thieves break through, and Violence deſtroys, but in Heaven, whither they cannot reach. And there is good Reaſon for it, for theſe Mercies have a ſure Foundation laid in God's Heart, The Lord knows who are his. And then they are founded alſo on that Corner-ſtone, elect and precious, Chriſt: And which having been begun to be laid in the Heart once of every one that is regenerate, (though but t'other day converted) yet will never ceaſe to be built up even to Eternity. We are apt to think, how little of Mercy have I yet had ſhewn forth upon me! Conſider, God hath but begun with thee, he laid in thy Heart at Converſion a ſmall Spark and Seed of Grace; and therewith, as the Foundation, the Pardon of all thy Sins, which, as to all that is to follow, is but as a Foundation buried under Ground: But Mercy hath not done with thee; for it is in infinite glorious Works that follow to be built up for ever, continually to be added unto, both in Grace and Glory. For God's Diſpenſations in Heaven are but a Continuation of Mercy to Eternity, and a laying forth Riches of Grace and Kindneſs on this Structure, Epheſ. 2. 7. The Prophet adds in that Verſe, Thy Faithfulneſs ſhalt thou eſtabliſh in the very Heavens. Some ſay, cum Cœlis, with the Heavens; that is, it is a Mercy as ſtable as Heaven it ſelf, meaning the viſible ones. But I take it to be a ſupernatural ſuper-Creation Phraſe, to expreſs a Grace and Mercy above all that is or was earthly in our firſt Creation-Condition, and above all Compariſons to be made therewith, conſiſting altogether of Bleſſings heavenly; yea, ſuper-celeſtial, as the word is in Epheſ. 1. 4. And thus much the Expreſſion [in the Heavens] doth import: As in Luke 10. 20. Rejoice that your Names are written in Heaven. And Heb. 12. 23. The firſt-born whoſe Names are written in Heaven. And in ſaying here that theſe Mercies are eſtabliſhed in the Heavens, I underſtand them to be ſuch ſuper-celeſtial Mercies ſpoken of: The Heavens is the Place they came from, and where they are eſtabliſh'd and fix'd, and unto which they tend, riſing up to their Original, and where they are finiſhed and compleated. They are eſtabliſh'd in the Heavens, in the higheſt Heavens, where the Angels and Saints are, ver. 2, 5, 6, 7. compared. And therefore they are as ſure and ſafe, as Treaſure there laid up is, as Chriſt ſays. This Houſe of Mercy is as eternal and undemoliſhable as that our Houſe in thoſe higheſt Heavens is, 2 Cor. 5. 1.

And becauſe we ſee not thoſe higheſt Heavens, (but only by Faith) he farther points us to the Heavens we ſee; Ver. 28, 29. My Mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my Covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him. His Seed alſo will I make to endure for ever, and his Throne as the Days of Heaven; which in ver. 36, 37. is more punctually amplified; His Seed ſhall endure for ever, and his Throne as the Sun before me: it ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever, as the Moon; and as a faithful Witneſs in Heaven. Selah. And he introduceth theſe not as Examples only, to which his Mercies for their Unchangeableneſs may be likened, but he propoſeth them as God's faithful Witneſſes thereof. As the Rain-bow is ſet forth as a Witneſs that God will deſtroy the World with Waters no more: Thus the Continuation of the Heavens, and of the Sun and Moon, are propoſed as Witneſſes of the Perpetuity and Unchangeableneſs of theſe Mercies; and this not for Duration only, but Immoveableneſs and Fixedneſs. For though the Sun ſets, and leaves Darkneſs behind him for half the time of his Courſe, yet this Father of Lights is without ſo much as Shadow of turning in his Mercies towards us, as the Apoſtle's Compariſon is, Jam. 1. 17. and elſewhere: He hath pawned the Covenant of Day and Night; Jer. 31. 35, 36. This ſaith the Lord, which giveth the Sun for a Light by Day, and the Ordinances of the Moon and of the Stars for a Light by Night, which divideth the Sea when the Waves thereof roar, the Lord of Hoſts is his Name. If thoſe Ordinances depart from before me, ſaith the Lord, then the Seed of Iſrael alſo ſhall ceaſe from being a Nation before me for ever. The like is in Jer. 33. 20. Thus ſaith the Lord, If you can break my Covenant of the Day, and my Covenant of the Night; and that there ſhould not be Day and Night in their Seaſon; then may alſo my Covenant be broken, &c. Yea, and that Covenant of the Waters of Noah (we ſpake of) to which the Rain-bow is appointed as a faithful Witneſs, is alſo appealed unto, and called in by God as a Witneſs of this his Mercy's Covenant; Iſa. 54. 9, 10. For this is as the Waters of Noah unto me: for as I have ſworn that the Waters of Noah ſhould no more go over the Earth, ſo have I ſworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee: For the Mountains ſhall depart, and the Hills be removed, but my Kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the Covenant of my Peace be removed, ſaith the Lord, [that hath Mercy on thee]——.

Now this Unchangeableneſs of Mercy is put upon the Account of his being Jehovah, as was obſerved out of Mal. 3. 6. I Jehovah change not, therefore you Sons of Jacob are not conſumed. Unto which bring that of Lam. 3. 22. and then you have what it is in Jehovah which is the Cauſe that we are not conſumed: It is the Lord's Mercy we are not conſumed; which is all one as to ſay, it is of the Lord's Mercy, as the Cauſe why we are not conſumed. So then the evident Inference or Concluſion from both is, you are not conſumed, becauſe my Mercies, who am Jehovah, change not, which the Words that follow do more expreſly ſhew to be the Cauſe or Reaſon of this, [Becauſe his Compaſſions fail not] which ſtill carries this before them, that we are not conſumed, becauſe his Mercies conſume not, becauſe God; that is, Jehovah, conſumes not, fails not, changeth not. Job 14. 11. The Waters fail from the Sea, and the Flood decayeth and drieth up; but theſe his ſpecial Mercies fail not, nor are ever drawn dry, becauſe Jehovah, or inexhauſtable Being, is the inexhauſtable Fountain of thoſe Mercies.

I have given the Reaſon why the Name Jehovah merciful is uſed; but farther, the Duplication of it here is to be conſider'd, Exod. 34. 6. Jehovah, Jehovah. The Reaſon hereof, which Interpreters ordinarily give, riſeth but to this, that it was to ſtir up Moſes his and our Attention the more unto the Matter that follows. I ſhould rather and further ſay,

1. It is to ſhew an infinite Vehemency and Heartineſs of Affection to have been in the Heart of God when he utter'd this, and it manifeſts how much his Soul was in what his Voice proclaimed. Such Duplications have (as it were) a double Strength in them, to heighten and enforce thoſe things they are prefixed unto, according to the Nature of the Matter unto which they are prefixed. Thus if the Matter be an Affirmation, the Reiteration affixed intends and makes it an Aſſeveration far the ſtronger. Thus when the two Tribes and an half made an Appeal to God in the caſe of their Altar, to the intent to expreſs the Truth and Sincerity of their Souls therein, in the higheſt manner, ſay they, The God of Gods Jehovah, the God of Gods Jehovah, he knoweth, &c. Joſh. 22. 22. In this Appeal to God as a Witneſs (for ſuch it is) they rehearſe no leſs than three Names of God, (ſay ſome) El, Elohim, Jehovah; or, as others interpret it, God of Gods, Jehovah. But whatever Meaning we take, it is certain that they are repeated twice over, which muſt needs have the greateſt Emphaſis that could be given, and all was to give the greateſt Confirmation to the Matter affirmed by them. Again, if it be ſet unto Matter of Prayer or Praiſe, the Repetition of Lord, Lord, or of Jehovah (as of the Perſon invocated or praiſed) or the doubling the Matter petitioned for, as be merciful, be merciful, Pſal. 57. 1. likewiſe when the Seal to either is put at the Cloſe of either, as of Amen, and Amen, Pſal. 72. 19. ſuch doubled Rehearſements do manifeſt a redoubled Vehemency and Intention in the Invocators. Now according to this general Rule: Pſa. 72. 18.

2. In this Duplication of the Name of Jehovah here muſt be allowed the like intended Emphaticalneſs, according to the kind of the Matter it is prefixed unto. Now that which it is prefixed unto, is a Deſcription of God, or a lively Character of him; even as when we would notify the Character given of a Man to be moſt proper, genuine and expreſſive of what the Man is, we uſe before or after it to make a double Indigitation of his Name, which carries this Import or Signification;

[This is the Man, this is he]. To the ſame purpoſe is it that God's Name is doubled here. And it is as if in Words he had more plainly ſaid, This is your God, This am I: or if you would know, what a God I am, look upon this Deſcription of me, upon this my Portraicture drawn to the Life, ſuch a God am I, [Jehovah, Jehovah merciful].

Cant. 5. 9, 10.

When the Watchmen in the Canticles ſaw the Spouſe keep ſuch ado, and to make ſo anxious an Inquiſition after her Beloved, What is thy Beloved, ſaid they, more than another Beloved? What, ſays ſhe? She then deſcribes him in all his Beauties from Head to Foot: And at the Cloſe, having ſaid, he is altogether lovely, ſhe adds, this is my Beloved, and this is my Friend. She doubles it there; and with the ſame Efficacy doth God in his ſetting forth himſelf double this his Name here; Jehovah, Jehovah, &c. as if he ſhould ſay, This, this am I.

Nay, yet further here in this Proclamation in my Text there is not a Duplication only, but a Triplication of the Subject, that is, the Name of God is not only twice repeated, but thrice, יהוה יהוה אל, tranſlated the Lord, Lord, God. And what is or can be the Mind or Intent hereof other than this, that God, the whole that is in God, is merciful and gracious? &c.

CHAP. VII.

The other Name of God אל, El, us'd in this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6, 7. This Name imports that all the three Perſons are merciful, which is particularly proved concerning the Holy Ghoſt. This Name El alſo imports an Attribute in God, his Strength and Power, and that it is in conjunction with Mercy. How much this hath an Influence to make Mercy effectually prevailing, and to conquer all Difficulties which lie in the way of its acting.

I Have conſider'd the firſt Name of God Jehovah implied in this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. 6, 7. and have evinc'd that Mercy is an eſſential Property of his Nature: What remains next to be conſider'd is what the other Name of God אל, El, here made uſe of, imports.

There are two Significations of this Name of God. It is ſometimes put for an eſſential Name proper to God, as our Tranſlators have rendred it in this Text, and it is ſometimes put for a ſpecial Attribute of God, ſtrong, powerful, noting Greatneſs and Dominion, and both are here intended, for it ſignifies both; and truly Junius always tranſlates the word El where-ever he finds it, Deus fortis, the ſtrong God, and ſo puts both together.

Now if we tranſlate it as our Tranſlators have done it, God, Jehova Jehovah, El, God, (he repeats the Name of God three times) the Import of that is, that the three Perſons are herein proclaimed to be merciful and gracious. There muſt be ſome great Myſtery in the thrice repeating it: If the thrice repeating an Attribute, Holy, Holy, Holy; if the thrice repeating, the Lord, the Lord, the Lord, Numb. 6. 23, 24, 25, 26. hath the Myſtery of all three Perſons, then the Repetition of the Name of God, fixed to Mercy and Gracious, hath the like. So Ainſworth and others have improved it. So that from this it is evident, that all three Perſons incline to be merciful and gracious, God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt: and what is this other than what we have, 2 Cor. 13. 14. The Grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghoſt, be with you all. Amen. The Holy Ghoſt is therefore both gracious and loving as well as the Father and Son, for it is he communicates the Love and Grace of both thoſe Perſons. I find not (I confeſs) a Scripture where the Holy Ghoſt is call'd merciful, but I find Scripture where he is called good, which is the Root of Mercy; Pſal. 145. 10. Thy Spirit is good. Neh. 9. 20. Thou gaveſt them thy good Spirit. I find alſo that Love is aſcribed to him, Rom. 15. 13. Now what is Mercy? It is but Love and Goodneſs extended to Creatures in Miſery. I find alſo that Grace and Mercy are the Fountain of all Bleſſings both ſpiritual and temporal, Epheſ. 1. 2, 3. And I find

Grace, and Mercy, and Peace, is wiſh'd, as from God the Father, and God the Son, ſo from God the Holy Ghoſt, Rev. 1. 3, 4. So then he is the Fountain of Grace. I will not open that Controverſy between Papiſts and us about ſeven Spirits: It is but one Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 4. But what I will inſiſt on is, an Anſwer to that Queſtion, Why the Holy Ghoſt ſhould bear the Name of אל El, ſtrong, the ſtrong God, for it ſignifies both, an Attribute as well as a Perſon; Jehovah the Father is call'd, and Jehovah the Son is call'd, and the Holy Ghoſt is call'd ſo too; but why is this Name El here [the ſtrong God] given unto him rather than Jehovah?

The Anſwer is; He hath the Execution of all the Mercy that God doth diſpenſe to us, it is committed to him; the Father had the decreeing Part of all Mercy, the Son the purchaſing Part, and the Holy Ghoſt the operative Part, which requires Power and Strength; and therefore you find ſo often the Holy Ghoſt to be expreſſed as the Power of God, as Chriſt's Perſon in the Proverbs is called the Wiſdom of God. The Holy Ghoſt is call'd the Power of God, Luke 1. 35. The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the Power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee. And in Luke 24. 49. he is called the Promiſe of the Father. Who is that Promiſe? Compare it with Acts 1. 4. and you will find it is the Holy Ghoſt. What is the Holy Ghoſt called in that Place of the Acts? Chriſt being aſſembled together with them, commanded them that they ſhould not depart from Jeruſalem, but wait for the Promiſe of the Father. Where was that Promiſe? The 5*th* Verſe tells us, You ſhall be baptized with the Holy Ghoſt. How is the Meaning of that expreſs'd? You ſhall receive Power, after that the Holy Ghoſt is come upon you, ver. 8. And in Scripture theſe things are often joined; The Goſpel came not in Word only, but in the Holy Ghoſt and Power, 1 Theſſ. 1. 5.

The Holy Ghoſt then is he that ſhews Mercy, he is ὁ ἐλεῶν. There are five Offices which the Holy Ghoſt exerciſeth in the Churches, mentioned in Rom. 12. 8. and the laſt is called ὁ ἐλεῶν, a Shewer or Executor of Mercy, to ſupply all Needs and Neceſſities to the Sick, &c. Let him that is the Shewer of Mercy do it with Chearfulneſs, i. e. whoſe Office is to be merciful. There are many particular Mercies which the Holy Ghoſt hath the Office to diſtribute, as he is the Diſpenſer of Mercy. For example,

1. Begin with Regeneration, that is, Mercy; According to his abundant Mercy he hath begotten us, 1 Pet. 1. 3. Who begets? The Holy Ghoſt.

2. Who brings home all the ſure Mercies of David, all that the Father hath decreed, or the Son purchaſed, John 16. 14, 15. He will not leave us as Orphans unprovided for. Therefore,

3. Is it not Mercy to take care of Orphans, Children that are fatherleſs and motherleſs, that elſe would be deſtitute? John 14. 17, 18. The Holy Ghoſt ſays, I will not leave you Orphans, the word is ſo in the Original. Is it not Mercy to tend the Sick? Alas! how doth the Holy Ghoſt attend thy Soul all the time of thy Infirmities and Sickneſſes, and to eaſe thee he bears them, Rom. 8. 26.

4. Who is the Advocate to plead for thee, and undertakes all thy Suits for thee, and to obtain all Good? It is the Holy Ghoſt. Who makes all thy Prayers, Rom. 8. 26. draws all the Petitions thou putteſt up? He indites them. Who does bear with the Noiſomneſs that is in thee? It is the Holy Ghoſt. And is not that Mercy, as it is in a Nurſe or Mother to bear the Noiſomneſs of a poor Child? and tho he be grieved, yet he continues his Love and Care, ſo as no Mother nor Nurſe doth the like. Is not this Mercy? Who mourns with thee in Miſery like a Dove, (as he is call'd) who keeps thee Company, and brings thee Cordials? It is he who is the Author of all Comfort, Acts 9. 31. who fills thee with all Joy and Peace in believing. It is the Holy Ghoſt, Rom. 15. 13. To conclude; Who ſtrengthens thee in all Temptations, and upholds thy feeble Knees and weak Hands? It is the Holy Ghoſt. And is not that Mercy? Epheſ. 3. 16. That you might be ſtrengthned with Might, by his Spirit in the inner Man. I have done with this word אל El, as it ſignifies a Perſon, and imports the Mercy of the Holy Ghoſt. I come now to אל El as it is an Attribute (and the moſt of Tranſlators ſo render it, Junius calls it Deus fortis, the ſtrong God) and ſo the word ſignifies Strength, Strengthning, Strong in Might; we call it vis in Latin, that Power that ſubdues all things to it ſelf, Phil. 3. 21. And ſo God is mighty in Strength, Job 9. 4. Now I am to handle it as an Attribute, I join Greatneſs with it, for ſo they are joined, and both with Mercy, as in Jer. 32. 17, 18, 19. where he joins great, and mighty, and merciful all together; magnus ille, potens ille, as Piſcator renders it. I confeſs I wonder at it, to find it up and down when they make Prayers in Scripture, (as Jeremiah does here) that they ſhould put merciful and mighty, and terrible and great all together; you ſhall find it ſo, Neh. 1. 5. O Lord God of Heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeſt Covenant and Mercy, &c. Here they are joined together. And ſo when he made his ſolemn Prayer, Neh. 9. 32. Our God (ſays he) the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepeſt Covenant and Mercy, &c. which is plainly the ſame that Moſes expreſſeth it in Exodus. You have it alſo in Dan. 9. 4. in his ſolemn Prayer, O Lord (ſays he) the great and dreadful God, keeping the Covenant and Mercy, &c. Thus Mercy, and great, and terrible, are joined all together, and all refer to this Paſſage in Moſes, as the Margin of your Bible ſhews. Now when he ſaith, the terrible God, truly it imports two things:

1*ſt*. His being glorious and illuſtrious, and that he is to be reverenced.

2*dly*. It imports a Dreadfulneſs; he is terrible in Praiſes, Exod. 15. 11. What doth that imply? That he is magnified, illuſtrious, great and glorious in Praiſes, not only doing things that are dreadful, tho ſo he is ſaid to be terrible in doing to the Sons of Men, and yet he ſpeaks not of Judgment, Pſal. 66. 5. but wonderful Works of Mercy.

That which I am to give Account of is, that Power and Mercy ſhould be joined together, God the ſtrong, and God the merciful; take in Greatneſs, (if you will) and take in Terribleneſs. In Pſal. 62. 11, 12. ſays he, God hath ſpoken once, twice have I heard this, that Power belongeth unto God. Alſo to thee, O Lord, belongeth Mercy, for thou rendereſt to every Man according to his Works. I confeſs it is alledged, I heard it once, and twice, that is, God ſet it on upon me as a ſpecial ground of Comfort; you have the Phraſe ſo uſed in Job 33. 14. For God ſpeaketh once, yea twice, yet Man perceiveth it not. I confeſs I was ſuſpicious it might refer to this Paſſage of Moſes: I found firſt the Engliſh Annotators ſay, that it was a plauſible Interpretation to refer it to what God had ſaid upon Mount Sinai, where there are two things (ſay they) ſaid. Firſt, That God was a jealous God. Secondly, Shewing Mercy, Exod. 20. 5, 6. I conſulted Hammond, and he in his Paraphraſe refers us to what God had ſpoken in Mount Sinai, but he ſpeaks it indefinitely; but the others refer it to the ſecond Commandment: I ſtick at this, that Jealouſy is mentioned in the Commandment, but Power is not; but here he ſays, Power belongs to thee, O Lord God, and Mercy. I thought therefore I might go further, and take a ſtep further upon Mount Sinai, where the Law and this Declaration was given, as it is expreſs'd, Exod. 34. The Pſalmiſt ſays, he heard it twice; he heard it from God's Mouth, that Power belongs to God; and he heard it, that Mercy belongs to God; and he heard the ſame from Moſes, Numb. 14. 15, 16. Let the Power of my Lord be great, according as thou haſt ſpoken, ſaying, &c. In Pſal. 103. he expreſly quotes God's ſaying to Moſes, The Lord gracious and merciful: and in Pſal. 62. he ſays, he heard it once and twice, again and again, both from God and Moſes, that Power belongs to him, and Mercy belongs to him.

I come now to that which is the main thing which I ſhall endeavour to make uſe of, which is this, why theſe two are joined together, Power and Mercy, by Moſes, Numb. 14. by Daniel, Nehemiah and Jeremiah. I will not give you the Heathen Accompt: you know Tully ſays, Jupiter is call'd Optimus maximus: he reduceth it to this very thing; he is called Optimus, the moſt good God, the moſt good, or thrice good God (ſays he); he is for his Benefits, propter vim vero & potentiam maximus: for his Force and Power he is called the great God; he knew God to be good, but knew not God to be merciful. But let us follow Scripture.

The Inquiſition is this, why he joins Strength, and Greatneſs, and Dreadfulneſs, with Mercy: 1. (ſay I) To ſet Mercy out the more, to exalt Mercy the more. Certainly it is prefaced to that purpoſe, Neh. 9. 32. Our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepeſt Covenant and Mercy, &c. It was well he could ſay firſt, our God, before he ſays, the great and terrible God, that ſo they might be ſure that ſhould import no hurt to them. But the Preface is to ſet forth and aggrandize Mercy the more, that a God ſo great, ſo dreadful, ſhould yet be merciful. The Lion in Chriſt commends the Lamb that is in him, as Rev. 5. 5, 6. that he that is ſo great, and ſtrong, and terrible, ſhould be a Lamb: It is becauſe the Name of God is in him that he is ſtrong, and he is merciful too. Look, as the Unworthineſs and Sinfulneſs of us, whom God loves and ſhews Mercy to, commends his Love, as you have it in Rom. 5. 8. ſo the Greatneſs and Terribleneſs of the Perſon that loves doth advance and magnify his Goodneſs and Mercy, that he that is ſo great and terrible, and hath ſuch Power, ſhould yet be ſo merciful. Pſal. 89. It is a Pſalm which profeſſeth to ſing and ſet forth the Mercies of God, and the ſure Mercies of David, I will ſing of the Mercies of the Lord for ever, and Mercy ſhall be built up for ever, ver. 5. The Heavens ſhall praiſe thy Wonder, thy Miracle. He calls Mercy the greateſt Miracle that ever was: Wherein lieth it? He tells us in theſe Words, Who in the Heavens can be compared to the Lord? God is greatly to be feared in the Aſſembly of the Saints, and to be had in reverence of all that are round about him: Who is a ſtrong Lord like unto thee? &c. So that Mercy in the firſt Verſe meets in this God, that in the ſeventh and eighth Verſes is ſo great a God, ſo fearful to all that are round about him; and they that are neareſt him know him beſt, they ſay ſo of him, that this God ſhould be a God of Mercy: this begets a Stupor, an Amazement, that he that is able to rebuke all, and deſtroy all with a Nod, ſhould yet have ſo much Love and Mercy. This exalts, and ſets out his Mercy, and makes it a wonder. 2. This Greatneſs and Power in God conduce to make him (we muſt not uſe that word make but after the manner of Men) to be merciful and gracious. The multiplying Grace iſſues from Jehovah as he is Almighty. This is the Difference between God and Man: In Man Weakneſs is the Foundation of Mercy very much; thoſe that are weakeſt for Age, as Children, will cry bitterly if they ſee any one in Miſery; thoſe that are weakeſt in Sex, as Women, are moſt pitiful; thoſe that are of ſofter Tempers amongſt Men, are more merciful, which ariſeth from Weakneſs: but in God Mercy flows from Strength, and Power, and Greatneſs; The Lord God, ſtrong, merciful. You find in Scripture God is merciful, not after the manner of Men; 2 Sam. 7. 19. Is this the manner of Men, O Lord God? Thus he ſpake when he conſidered the Greatneſs of the Mercy beſtowed; as when it is ſaid, My Thoughts are not your Thoughts, but as the Heavens exceed the Earth, ſo, &c. Iſa. 55. 8, 9. It is alſo true, God is merciful not after the manner of Men for kind of Mercies, I am God and not Man, therefore you are not conſumed, Hoſ. 11. 9. i. e. becauſe I am merciful as God. His Mercy then proceeds from his Greatneſs and his Strength: From his Greatneſs, as is plain from 2 Sam. 7. 19. when he had ſaid, Is this the manner of Men, O Lord God? ſays he, According to thine own Heart haſt thou done all theſe great things: Wherefore thou art great, O Lord God; for there is none like unto thee, neither is there any God beſides thee. God did it out of his own Heart, as having a great Heart: The Mercies he declares to David there, proceed from Strength, as he is the Lord God, ſtrong and merciful. So it is alſo, Numb. 14. 17. Let the Power of my Lord be great, as thou haſt ſpoken.

I would make it plain, that God's Mercy proceeds from Strength; or that becauſe he is a ſtrong God, able to do all things, becauſe he is Almighty, therefore he is merciful. 1*ſt.* It fits him to be merciful, his Strength doth ſo qualify him, as we may ſpeak after the manner of Men: He hath all that qualifies a Perſon for the Reality of Mercy. He is free from all Miſery, hath no Subjection to any kind of Miſery whatſoever; hath no Subjection to Potentiality, as the Schoolmen ſpeak in this Point. Why? Becauſe he is a ſtrong God, he is a powerful God, and an Almighty God, and that keeps him off from all Miſery, and exempts him from all the Dints and Impreſſions of Miſery.

There is (I ſay) a blaſphemous Queſtion that hath been travers'd up and down by corrupt Divines, Whether God hath Mercy truly in him, and be of a merciful Diſpoſition. And what Reaſon do they give for it but this? ſay they, Mercy ariſes from Senſe of Miſery, that one lays to Heart others Miſery as that which may be ones own, which we cannot ſuppoſe to be in God.

Say I, to anſwer it, Here lies the Queſtion, What it is that is truly Mercy, whether it be that one out of Weakneſs is condoling you or pitying you, that is unable to help, whether that be truly Mercy or no? or whether a Readineſs of Will and a Propenſeneſs of Affection, joined with Ability to ſuccour effectually and irreſiſtably, whether this be not Mercy rather? ſince the firſt proceeds from Weakneſs, but this from Strength. I ſay, here lies the Queſtion, whether yea or no, one that out of Weakneſs and Paſſion condoles with you, and hath from that ground Pity in him, that Affection of Pity, of ſuffering with you, and is ſorry you are in Miſery, and troubled you are ſo, but yet is unable to help, whether this be Mercy truly or no? or whether one that hath Readineſs of Will, his Soul is inclined to help, and he joins Ability to help, which of theſe two is Mercy? ſay I, the laſt, and that is in God, and it is demonſtrable thus:

1. If he that is merciful be himſelf liable to Miſery, he is not in that Senſe merciful. Why? Becauſe he is ſo far weak and unable to help. That ſame King in the Famine could not ſhew Mercy, becauſe he could not help; 2 Kings 6. 26, 27. O Lord my King, help, ſays the poor Woman. If any Body could help, a King could; but ſays he, If the Lord helps thee not, I cannot: I am a poor weak Creature, in plain Words; ſhould I help thee out of the Barn, to give thee Bread; or Winepreſs, to give thee Drink? I can do neither, ſaith he. What was the Reaſon he was thus unable to grant an Aid? He was weak and ready to die, as well as other Men. That is Mercy which in the Iſſue and Event will prove it ſelf ſo, that is Mercy indeed and truly.

2. If he be not able to help you efficaciouſly, he does but increaſe your Miſery, as you ſee in the Caſe of this poor Woman and the King. Poor Woman, what ail'd ſhe? he told her he could not help her. The Woman was extremely diſturb'd, that ſhe came to a King, and the King could not help her: What aileth you, ſays he? 2 Kings 6. 28. Says ſhe, I come not to you for Mercy, but for Juſtice: Here is a Woman ate my Child yeſterday, and I ſhould have eat her Son, but ſhe hath hid him; ſo ſhe came to the King for Juſtice. Directly he could not help her in that neither, he could not order the Child to be kill'd, it had been Murder, but he increas'd her Miſery by all this. So that now, ſay I, that which fits for Mercy is, that one is free from all Miſery, Impotency and Weakneſs, and hath a Fulneſs of Ability to ſuccour, and this is from Strength. Now, 2dly. To pardon Sin (which is our Caſe) is in it ſelf an Act of the greateſt Strength in God; and therefore Strength fits him for being merciful. The Phariſees ſaid, No Man is able to forgive Sins but God, Mark 2. 9. Says Chriſt, I will ſhew you I am able to forgive Sins. Why? To the Man ſick of the Palſie, ſays he, Take up thy Bed and walk. He did this, to ſhew that he who had Power and Strength to heal ſuch a Diſeaſe, had Power alike to be merciful: and had he not been the Almighty God, he could not have ſaid, Thy Sins are forgiven thee.

3dly. For a Man to contain his Anger, it is from Strength; Prov. 16. 32. He that is ſlow to anger, is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his Spirit, than he that taketh a City. Thus it is the Strength of a Man to overcome his Paſſion: Let the Power of my Lord be great, according as thou haſt ſaid, The Lord is long-ſuffering, Numb. 14. 17, 18, 19. There is a good Saying in one of the Collects in the Common-Prayer-Book; O Lord, that ſheweſt thy Omnipotency chiefly in ſhewing Mercy, in forgiving Sins: wherein it is accounted an high Act of Omnipotency to forgive Sins.

But you will ſay, Though here is an Ability to ſuccour, and out of Strength to ſhew Mercy, yet where is the Affection of Mercy, and whence ariſeth that?

Anſw. The Seat of Mercy is the Will, as appears by that Speech, I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful, Exod. 33. 19. Now the Will of God hath Affections in it; for there is Hatred of Sin, which is an Affection that is natural, and Love an Affection of the Will that is natural. Tho theſe Affections in God are but various Poſtures of his Will to various Objects, what then is Mercy in his Will? Not a mere Act, but a Propenſity, an inward Inclination from out of his Goodneſs of Will to ſhew Mercy to them that are in Miſery; Pſal. 86. 5. He is ready to forgive: The Lord is good and ready to forgive, and plenteous in Mercy. Theſe are not Metaphors, (as Bowels and the like, uſed of Mercy) Pſal. 34. 18. But the Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken Heart: Not in reſpect of Omnipotency merely; ſo he is to all, but in Readineſs of Diſpoſition and Inclination, he is ready and quick to be merciful ſo ſoon as he ſees their Hearts. If any ſay that God willeth Mercy, and it is his Will to ſhew Mercy, let them but add and acknowledg that there is a Propenſeneſs in his Will thereunto, unto ſuch merciful Acts; and then they muſt ſay too, that Mercy (as to the Affection of it) is a Property in God.

But doth his Power and Strength move and ſtir that Affection in him, and render his Will propenſe unto Mercy?

Anſw. Yes: And to prove that it moves, I take that of Moſes for my Ground, Numb. 14. 17, 18, 19. when pleading for Forgiveneſs, he ſays, Let the Power of my Lord be great. Pardon I beſeech thee this People, as thou haſt forgiven them hitherto. He woes God with that very Conſideration, and preſents it to him. Now it is a ſure Maxim, that what Moſes was taught by God to move God with, that God himſelf is certainly moved withal.

If you ſay unto me, But in what manner is he moved with it thereunto?

Anſw. Becauſe he hath Power lying by him to help in time of need, and he can put it forth as eaſily and readily as we think a Thought, or ſpeak a Word.

There is a Saying in 1 John 3. 17. If a Man hath this World's Goods, and ſeeth his Brother hath need, and ſhutteth up his Bowels of Compaſſion from him, how dwelleth the Love of God in him? Truly God hath Love dwelling in him, yea God is Love, 1 John 4. 16. and he hath Power to help them whom he loves, and he ſets himſelf to love his Children. Why then, thinks he with himſelf, have I Power to help them I love, and do I ſee them in Miſery, and ſhall my Power lie by, and not ſhew it ſelf? I may ſay, that if he thus ſees them whom he loves to abide in Miſery, and yet ſhut up his Affection of Mercy towards them, how doth Love dwell in God? how is he Love to ſuch? So that this is my Concluſion. Mercy implies in it ſelf a Non-ſubjection to Miſery, and alſo an Ability and Fulneſs of Strength to help; and a Will, which tho it hath not Paſſions in it, yet hath Love and Propenſeneſs to Goodneſs. There is a Readineſs to forgive, there is an Affection which is the Foundation of ſhewing Mercy. So that he only is truly merciful. It is a Baſtard-Mercy that is in Creatures, for that is true Mercy that is able to help with a Propenſeneſs to do ſo, which alone is in God, who is the Lord God ſtrong, and the Lord God merciful. It's then but a baſtardly ſpurious Mercy that is in Creatures, and only God is merciful upon this reſpect, that God only is God.

Uſe 1. Is God's Power and Strength join'd with Mercy? Is it that which fits him for Mercy? O bleſs him that you find ſo dreadful an Attribute as Power join'd with Mercy: Why? you find them divided elſewhere, when they are to be exerciſed on others than the Elect: Rom. 9. 22. What if God willing to ſhew his Wrath, and make his Power known, indured with much Long-ſuffering the Veſſels of Wrath fitted for Deſtruction. There is Power join'd with Wrath; let us therefore adore this God that hath in this Proclamation of Mercy, Exod. 34. put the God ſtrong and merciful together.

Uſe 2. Do we find Mercy and Power joined together and paired elſewhere, as in Pſal. 62. 11, 12. then as it is in that Pſalm, Go, truſt him in all times: for upon theſe two grounds he bids us, ver. 8. to truſt in him at all times. But there are ſome times in your Lives that you are in ſuch a Caſe and Condition that you have no kind of Hope or Poſſibility of Thought that ſuch a thing ſhould come to paſs: but truſt in him at all times. Why? Becauſe Power belongeth to him, and Mercy; theſe two put together will effect any thing: what is too difficult for God the ſtrong, and God merciful? Now I draw this Uſe out of Jer. 32. 17, 18. (which I cited before) I prayed unto the Lord, ſaying, Ah Lord God, behold thou haſt made the Heaven and the Earth by thy great Power, and ſtretched-out Arm; and there is nothing too hard for thee: Thou ſheweſt Loving-kindneſs unto thouſands, and recompenſeſt the Iniquity of the Fathers into the Boſom of their Children after them: The great, the mighty God, the Lord of Hoſts is his Name. The Caſe ſtood thus; The Prophet Jeremiah was bid to buy a Purchaſe of Land, as you read in the forepart of the Chapter; it was at a time when the City was deſtroyed by the Sword, Famine and Peſtilence, as at ver. 24. and the City given into the Hands of the Chaldeans, and they were by Prophecy to be ſeventy Years. The thing that was ſignified by this was, as God told him, Thus ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, Houſes and Fields ſhall be poſſeſs'd again in this Land. The poor Man's Spirit was extremely exerciſed about it; not for the Loſs of his Money, but Strangeneſs of the thing, (as you will ſee it a ſtrange thing, but he ſaw more) and it was the ſtrangeſt thing could fall out, and the greateſt Mercy to the People of God that could fall out: Becauſe the manner of Conquerors was to remove all the People; as when they conquered Judea they took all the People and removed them, and planted them in other Countries, and brought People out of thoſe Countries and planted them in Judea. They did ſo with the ten Tribes, they took the ten Tribes out of their own Land, and carried them into Media, and planted

ed in the room of them the Natives of thoſe Countries where themſelves were planted. The Land of Judea was a fruitful Place, and that there ſhould be brought into that Land Strangers to poſſeſs it, and that there ſhould be ſeventy Years time before they ſhould return, this was the greateſt Wonder in the World they ſhould return. Yet notwithſtanding the Lord intended that the Land ſhould not be inhabited but by a Company of poor Jews that were left: But the Land was made deſolate: 2 Chron. 36.21. it's ſaid, the Land enjoyed its Sabbaths: There was a Law, that the Land every ſeventh Year ſhould not be digg'd; and accordingly God ſays, 2 Chron. 36. 21. Your Land ſhall enjoy its Sabbaths, it ſhall be deſolate. But all this tended to make good that, which was ſo ſtrange a thing to be done. There was the Babylonian Monarchy to be deſtroyed: Of them it is ſaid, The Children of Iſrael, and the Children of Judah, were oppreſſed together, and all that took them Captives held them faſt, they refuſed to let them go: but their Redeemer is ſtrong, the Lord of Hoſts is his Name, Jer. 50. 33. When they were deſtroyed, that they ſhould poſſeſs every one their own Land again, what a wonderful thing is this. The Turk does not thus, yet they were as barbarous as the Turks; Neh. 5. 12. Nay, the Prieſts were free from Taxations upon their Land, Jeremiah's Land ſtood free, Ezra 7. 24, 25. Was not that a ſtrange Word that there ſhould be buying and ſelling of Land again, it was not done for any Nation elſe; that in Pſal. 126. 2. the Heathens among themſelves ſaid, The Lord hath done great things for them. Now Jeremiah received the Revelation of this in ver. 15. that there ſhould be Houſes, and Fields, and Vineyards poſſeſs'd again in the Land: He goes to God to ſtrengthen his Faith therein, ver. 17. Thou art the great and potent God, thou ſheweſt Loving-kindneſs unto thouſands. He urges theſe two Attributes upon God; (you may ſee what it is to urge two ſuch Attributes upon God, and have Faith to do it) when he had urged theſe (I ſhall ſhew you the Iſſue of it) directly God makes this gracious Promiſe upon this Prayer of his, to reſtore them to their own Land, and reſtores him not only his Money but Land too. Read what God did in anſwer from the 36*th* Verſe to the end of the Chapter. This good Prayer of his, urging in this difficult Caſe theſe two great things, the Power and Mercy of God, you ſee what it drew out from God, and what great things God did for his Mercy's ſake, and by his Power, for theſe poor People. Therefore let us in all Straits and Difficulties make uſe of it, and remember to do likewiſe. God is the ſtrong and merciful; Is any thing too hard for me? ſays God, in the ſame Chapter. No, Mercy ſets God on work, and cauſes him to exert his Power, which effects every thing.

Vſe 3. Let us glorify him according to the Greatneſs of this Mercy and Greatneſs join'd together. Men, the more great they are, do degenerate into Rigour, and Severity, and Cruelty. Your great Kings have but the Name of Gracious, ſays Chriſt, by a Reflection on them; Luke 22. 25. The Kings of the Gentiles exerciſe Lordſhip over them, and they that exerciſe Authority upon them are called Benefactors. I take his Meaning to be this, You call them Benefactors, you are fain to call them ſo gracious, and ſo clement, and juſt and gracious, and you call them Benefactors for all their Greatneſs and Exerciſe of Lordſhip over you, though they rule you according to their Luſts. But our God that is the ſtrong God, is the merciful God, and he that is the great King, whoſe Name is terrible, Mal. 1. 14. is alſo a good God, a merciful God, a gracious God. He is ſo merciful a God as all the Angels adore him, and worſhip him, while they conſider the Miracles and Wonders of his Mercy. Let us therefore adore him, ſince the Angels do it. Conſider Pſal. 89. where the ſure Mercies of David are ſet out, and the Angels celebrate the Miracles of his Mercy, thoſe Angels to whom he is ſo dreadful and fearful in their Aſſemblies, ver. 6, 7, 8. O how much more (if they magnify the Conjunction of Power and Mercy in God) ſhould we whom God ſhews Mercy to, who are the Objects of Mercy, and Subjects of Mercy, which the Angels are not.

Vſe 4. Is Mercy thus join'd with Power and Greatneſs? See, poor Wretch, what need thou haſt of his Power and Mercy every day, need of his Strength, need of all Mercies to thy Soul. As for Sanctification, and Holineſs, and Faith, and helping us to believe, they are from Strength, and depend upon the Strength of God; Pſal. 86. 15, 16. But thou, O Lord God, art a God full of Compaſſion and gracious, long-ſuffering and plenteous in Mercy and Truth. Thou O Lord Adonai art a God; El the ſtrong God, full of Compaſſion, the ſame Words as Moſes uſeth. Inſtead of Jehovah, Adonai is uſed, O Lord; but then El, ſtrong God, is the ſame Word. The meaning is, Let all the Strength and Power thou the ſtrong God haſt in thee, be for my Advantage. Now is it not a bold Requeſt to ſay, Lord, wilt thou give me all thy Strength to help me? A very bold Requeſt indeed, but his Mercy moves him to grant it. Thus then petition him, Thou art a God merciful and gracious, give thy Strength to me. Thou, O God, giveſt all thy Attributes up to thy Children to ſerve their Advantage as well as to ſerve thy own Glory, give me thy Strength. Doſt not thou need Strength (poor Wretch!) How oft is thy Heart apt to ſink, and thou canſt not believe but ſo long as God helps thee to do it? How apt to ſwoon in thy Deſpondencies and Doubts? Doſt thou find Strength come in to help thee to believe? It is the ſtrong God helps thee, Pſal. 138. 3. He ſtrengthned me with Strength in my Soul (ſays he) when my Soul is ſinking. Thou haſt a Heart weak to Duty, feeble Hands, weak Knees; who ſtrengthens thee in the inner Man? He does it according to the Riches of his Glory, that is, of his Mercy, (which is eminently call'd his Glory) he ſtrengthens us in the inward Man, Epheſ. 3. 16. Laſtly; Is God ſtrong and merciful? Pſal. 31. 24. Be of good Courage all you that hope in the Lord, and he ſhall ſtrengthen your Heart; for he is your ſtrong God, and he is your merciful God. Indeed if we had Faith and Hearts to improve and put together theſe two things, what might we not obtain from the Hands of God, where there is Power to enable, and Mercy to make willing, what cannot be done? Jeremiah putting together theſe two things, Jer. 32. 17, 18. ſays God, in anſwer to Jeremiah's Prayer, There is nothing too hard for me; I have Power to do it, and Heart to do it: Improve all to the Good of your own Souls. Go and ſay unto God, O thou God, plenteous in Mercy, and full of Compaſſion, give me thy Strength, I am a poor weak Creature. A little Cordial you ſee what Strength it gives; ſo a little of the Strength of God, how doth it ſtrengthen the Soul? make uſe of his Strength, He is the Glory of your Strength, Pſal. 89. 16.

Uſe 5. If Power be thus joined to Mercy, then make uſe of it for Pardon of Sin. Though Sins be great, yet in ſuch Caſes, let the Soul go to God with theſe Words, Let the Power of the Lord be great to pardon, and to forgive, as you ſee Moſes pleads it. That Strength that concurs to do all things elſe, it doth conduce to pardon Sin. Is it eaſier to ſay, Take up thy Bed and walk; or to ſay, Thy Sins are forgiven thee? ſaith our Saviour Chriſt. It is twice ſaid in Jer. 32. Nothing is too hard for me: God ſpeaks it once at ver. 27. and Jeremiah ſays it at ver. 17. He ſpeaks it of Matters of Providence; apply it to Sin, there is no Sin too hard for him, for merciful Power, or powerful Mercy to pardon. God is as ſtrong in forgiving Sin, and in the Power that forgives, as he is in his providential working Power: and as God's Power is good at making Worlds, nay at making his Heavens, wherein he dwells, the High and Holy Place, ſo his Power is as good at pardoning Sins, and the one is as great a Work as the other. In ſuch Caſes, let thy Faith bring it to this, God is able to pardon thee; and do but think with thy ſelf, He that was able to make a World, is able to pardon me: He can find that in his Heart as is ſufficient to pardon me. It is a great Step of Faith when Men ſee, and are convinc'd of their Sinfulneſs, to go to God and ſay, Thou art able to make me clean, thou art able to pardon my Sin.

Uſe 6. Doth Power thus yoak with Mercy; nay, is it the Ratio of Mercy? (I mean of that Phraſe) then take God's Counſel, to lay hold on his Strength. Iſa. 27. 5. Fury is not in me. He ſpeaks as to his Vineyard, his Church, Fury is not in me againſt my Church, I can do that no hurt; but my Fury is againſt Briars and Thorns, as ver. 4. Who would ſet the Briars and Thorns againſt God in Battel? He would go thorow them, and would burn them together. Well, Is there no Remedy if they be Briars and Thorns? Yes, even for them there is a Remedy: What is that? ver. 5. Let them take hold on my Strength. Of my Strength; what is that? It is an Alluſion to Jacob's Story that had Power with God, Gen. 32. 28. The meaning is, Humble your ſelves. Suppoſe a Child or Servant ſhould ſee one coming to ſtrike him, they fall down in the humbleſt manner, and lay hold upon their Hands. Lay hold (ſays God) upon my Mercy, and Strength joined with Mercy, and I am charm'd, you may rule me; Mercy ſays it twice before Power's Face, you may make Peace with me, and you ſhall make Peace with me.

CHAP. VIII.

The next word in this Proclamation of Exod. 34. 6, 7. explain'd [Merciful]; from whence Mercy ariſeth in God.

I Come now to the next Attribute expreſs'd in this Proclamation, MERCIFUL: The Lord, the Lord, God, ſtrong, gracious, merciful, abundant in Goodneſs and Truth, keeping Mercy for thouſands, forgiving Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, Exod. 34. 6, 7. Things attributed to God here are of three ſorts.

1. The inward Diſpoſition, or Inclination, or Aptitude and Readineſs to Mercy, that is in the four firſt Attributes, Merciful, Gracious, Long-ſuffering, much in Goodneſs; and Truth is added.

2. There are his Purpoſes and Reſolutions of Mercy, keeping Mercy for thouſands; and they are immanent Acts in God, kept and laid up in God's own Breaſt.

3. There are extrinſical Acts of Mercy iſſuing from both, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin.

The meaning plainly is; Firſt, God is merciful as he is Jehovah, that is his Nature. Secondly, He fully reſolves to ſhew Mercy; there is his Heart. Thirdly, He hath done it, and doth it every Day; in pardoning Sin, there is his Wont and Practice. So that God is every way merciful, in his Nature, in his Purpoſes, and in his Deeds and Performances. Theſe four, Merciful, Gracious, Long-ſuffering, much in Goodneſs, are all of Mercy's Kindred and Alliance; and it is very obſervable, that when in Pſal. 103. 8. the Pſalmiſt doth quote Moſes's Words, he only quotes theſe four Attributes, and leaves out Truth, for it was not a-kin to Mercy; it was not congenial to it, and was not recited there. Though it fell in with Mercy, yet it is not of Mercy's Pedigree. Theſe four are therefore Attributes of pure Mercy, which yet have their Diſtinguiſhment, which I ſhall after ſhew.

Obſ. That which I obſerve is, That to deſcribe the merciful Deſigns of Mercy, and Grace, and Long-ſuffering, is to define the Nature of God. Of which I ſhall ſay two things:

1. That all God's being merciful, it is reſolv'd into God's Nature, of being merciful, becauſe if being merciful be the Cauſe of merciful Effects, then Mercy muſt have an Exiſtence before; and where, but in him? Merciful Effects ſuppoſe his being merciful as the Root and Principle in himſelf; ſo that merciful Effects, and pardoning Sin, &c. are attributed to him as the Cauſe: Pſal. 78. 38. But he being full of Compaſſion, forgave their Iniquity, and deſtroyed them not. It is plain, forgiving their Iniquity is reſolved into this his being full of Mercy, as the Cauſe. Saith Calvin, the Cauſe is aſcribed to Mercy, which is naturally in him: In Pſal. 86. he implores merciful, gracious Effects towards himſelf; ver. 1, 2, 3, 4. Bow down thine Ear, O Lord hear me, for I am poor and needy; preſerve my Soul, for I am holy, O thou my God, ſave thy Servant that truſteth in thee: Be merciful unto me, O Lord, for I cry unto thee daily: Rejoice the Soul of thy Servant, for unto thee O Lord do I lift up my Soul. Theſe Mercies he implores in theſe Verſes upon this Ground, becauſe God himſelf is merciful, it is his Nature. And ſo too, Neh. 9. 31. Thou didſt not utterly conſume them, nor forſake them, for thou art a gracious and merciful God. Here theſe merciful Effects of not conſuming them is aſcribed to Mercy, as the Cauſe. Jer. 3. 12. Return, and I will not cauſe mine Anger to fall upon you, for I am merciful, ſaith the Lord. Still it runs in the cauſal Particle: Therefore they are infinitely out that ſay, he is ſaid to be merciful, becauſe he does merciful Effects, whereas the Scripture ſays he does merciful Effects, for he is merciful.

2. The ſecond thing I would ſay to ſhew he is merciful is, that he ſays, Jehovah, Jehovah, God; and then Merciful, Gracious, Long-ſuffering. This thrice repeating the ſubſtantial Name of God, hath not only a Myſtery in it of the Trinity, but refers alſo to thoſe Attributes that follow, to ſignify what Jehovah is; he gives him his ſubſtantial Names, and then his other Properties four times, which declare in Reality, that Jehovah, Jehovah, God, are one and the ſame with merciful and long-ſuffering, as I have ſhewed you largely before. And to this end too the Name of God is joined with Faithfulneſs; Deut. 7. 9. Know therefore that the Lord thy God, he is God, the faithful God, which keepeth Covenant and Mercy with them that love him, and keep his Commandments, to a thouſand Generations. Here is firſt a vehement Indigitation of God's being God, Know ye therefore, (ſays he) know that the Lord thy God, he is God. And to the end they might thus know him, he adds, that he was the faithful God. Faithfulneſs is his Truth. That he inſiſts thus on the Name of God firſt, and then the Faithfulneſs of God, it is to bring over the Godhead into Faithfulneſs, that ſo they might truſt to his Faithfulneſs as his Godhead. And indeed you find it expreſly call'd himſelf; 2 Tim. 2. 13. He abideth faithful, he cannot deny himſelf. Faithfulneſs is himſelf, Tit. 1. 2. God that cannot lie: Why? Becauſe he is God, it is his Godhead to be true and faithful. Where-ever he hath ingaged his Word, there his Godhead is ingaged to make it good, for he is the faithful God; and where-ever his Mercy is ingaged, there is his Godhead ingaged, and laid at ſtake to Eternity, to ſhew Mercy to that Soul. Now read over that, Deut. 7. 9. once more, Know therefore that the Lord thy God he is God, the faithful God, which keepeth Covenant and Mercy with them that love him, and keep his Commandments, to a thouſand Generations. Then read theſe Words in the Text of Exod. 34. Jehovah, Jehovah, God merciful, gracious. What faithful is there, merciful is here.

Let us now conſider why merciful is in order plac'd firſt: The Truth is, in order of Nature Grace is before Mercy, and I could give many Scriptures where Grace is firſt named: but the Reaſon why he here put merciful firſt, is, becauſe he is to ſpeak to Sinners. He preſents himſelf to Sinners; and if to them he had ſaid at firſt daſh, God is good, or God is gracious, or God is Love, Sinners would have ſaid, This ſpeaks ſhort to us, and why? Becauſe he is good to all his Creatures that never ſinned, he is gracious to Angels that never ſinned: Ay, but merciful, with that proper Effect, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, that is a welcome Saying to Sinners, and ſpeaks home to their Caſe.

I now ſhall conſider what is the Riſe of Mercy, which doth involve the Godhead it ſelf; that one Attribute ſhould be Ratio alterius, as to our Apprehenſion, is allow'd by them that did moſt exquiſitely argue about God and his Attributes. Now then I ſhall ſhew you what it is makes him merciful, (it will help our Faith to conſider it) not how all Attributes fall in, as Holineſs, &c. do, but what is the ſpecial Genealogy and Deſcent of Mercy, (we ſpeak after the manner of Men, and yet the Scripture ſpeaks the ſame) what is the Ratio miſericordiæ. Mercy fetcheth its Pedigree,

1. From his Bleſſedneſs, God comes to be merciful by Deſcent, from his having all Fulneſs of Perfection compleatly in him, and being happy in himſelf, and having no need of any thing, Acts 17. 25. He is the bleſſed God, and all-ſufficient God, and ſo all-ſufficient, that he is above all Miſery, that Miſery cannot reach him, and this makes and inclines him to be merciful. God having all within himſelf tranſcendently and compleatly, that he need not any thing that is out of himſelf, he is therefore able and hath Power to make others bleſſed; and being merciful, therefore he can pardon, though Sinners ſin againſt him: For why, their Sins do not hurt him, he is full of all Enjoyments, and is equally happy, whether the Creatures be or not be; and as equally happy, whether the Creature ſin or not ſin againſt him, for they no way reach to hurt his Enjoyment: Job 35. 6, 7. If thou ſinneſt, what doſt thou againſt him? or if thy Tranſgreſſions be multiplied, what doſt thou unto him? If thou be righteous, what giveſt thou to him, or what receiveth he of thine Hand? Neither the one nor the other can any way hurt him, or benefit him; he is not benefited by the Righteouſneſs of any Creature. Nay, Chriſt himſelf ſays, Pſal. 16. 16. My Righteouſneſs extends not to thee, thou art never the better by it, thou art ſo perfect a God. Nor is he hurt by Sin, therefore he can eaſily pardon. All are not alike to him as to his external Glory, but as to his inward eſſential Happineſs, they are all alike, as to any Prejudice they can do it.

What made Paul that he could forgive Injuries? it was that he got good by them, he was not injured at all, Gal. 4. 12. And ſo the Bleſſedneſs of God, and his being above all, ſo high, and above the Reach of all, is a Ground of his being merciful. I obſerve in Luke 1. 72. that Mercy is there ſaid to be promiſed; To perform the Mercy promiſed to our Fathers, and to remember his holy Covenant. Among theſe it was to Abraham God made himſelf known by Name, and it was to ſtrengthen his Faith in the Promiſe of Mercy. And the firſt Name by which he manifeſts himſelf is this, I am (ſays he) God all-ſufficient, Gen. 17. 1. and the word ſignifies, I am full of Paps, I am all-ſufficient of my ſelf, and therefore I am a God that can afford what is in me unto others; I have a Breaſt full for others, as well as Happineſs in my ſelf. And thus, God of Comfort, and Father of Mercies, are well joined together, 2 Cor. 1. 3. that is, he that is ſo bleſſed in himſelf is merciful in himſelf. Abraham, to whom God thus proclaimed himſelf all-ſufficient, is the Standard-Inſtance of being juſtified, and the Father of the Faithful; and that Maxim is drawn from his Example, Rom. 4. 5. Now it was All-ſufficiency that Abraham heard of, which encouraged him to believe.

There was alſo another Name of God, and that was אל עליון El Helyon, God moſt High, brought up by Melchiſedeck, when he came to Abraham, Gen. 14. 19. It is four times uſed there, and that is the firſt Uſe of it upon Abraham's Occaſion. What is the Meaning of this, the moſt High God? It is, that he is above all, out of the Reach of all. Now you find the Scripture calls it, the Mercy of the moſt High, Pſal. 21. 7. Nay, it is obſervable, that ὁ ἐλεῶν in Greek, and in the Hebrew ho eleon is the word for merciful. The moſt high, and the merciful God, are well then joined together. The Schoolmen ordinarily ſay, true Mercy is only in God: Why? Becauſe he only is above all Miſery, and therefore able to help his People out of it. The Scripture ſays, it is the Mercy of the moſt High; Luke 6. 34, 35. Be ye merciful as your heavenly Father is merciful: That is the Exhortation, Imitate your Father; and, ſays he, You ſhall be the Children of the Higheſt: You ſhall be like him that is higheſt; therefore be merciful as your heavenly Father is merciful.

2. Mercy is in God ad modum virtutis, as a Perfection, which you know is after the way of being a Vertue. All Perfections are in God, and there are theſe three ſorts of Perfections in him. Firſt, Such as we call metaphyſical tranſcendent Excellencies in himſelf, as Majeſty, Glory, Unchangeableneſs, Infiniteneſs, Eternity. Secondly, We ſay there are Perfections of Faculties, of Underſtanding, (which the Scripture ſays is infinite) and of his Will. But, Thirdly, There is alſo in him Perfectiones morales, moral Perfections: We are forc'd, and God himſelf is forc'd to ſpeak of himſelf in this manner that we may underſtand. It is a good Saying of the Schoolmen, It becomes God to be moſt perfect, not only in his abſolute Being, and the Excellencies thereof, but alſo in Vertue. If you would have Scripture, ſee 1 Pet. 2. 9. Shew forth the Praiſes of him who hath called you. We tranſlate it Praiſes, but in the Margin it is Vertues. Whom doth he ſpeak of? Not of Chriſt only, but of God the Father: Now you are the People of God, ver. 10. As he which hath called you is holy, (there is one Vertue) ſo be ye holy in all manner of Converſation, 1 Pet. 1. 15. And anſwerably hereto ſhew forth the Vertues of him which hath called you. Now Mercy is one Vertue eminently intended in Peter, for it followeth, which in time paſt were not a People, but are now the People of God; which had not obtained Mercy, but now have obtained Mercy, from God, by calling you, and therefore ſhew forth that Vertue. Now Holineſs is a Vertue we all acknowledg: As he which hath called you is holy; ſo be ye holy in all manner of Converſation. And what? Is not this parallel to that Scripture, Be you merciful as your heavenly Father is merciful, Luke 6. 35. As Holineſs then is a Vertue in him, ſo Mercifulneſs is a Vertue in him. If you yet doubt of it, conſider further what is ſaid, Be you perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect, Mat. 5. 48. He ſpeaks it of Mercy, for it refers to ver. 44, 45. Love your Enemies, bleſs them that curſe you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that deſpitefully uſe you, and perſecute you, that ye may be the Children of your Father which is in Heaven. Now then that Mercy whereby God is perfect, muſt needs be himſelf, his Eſſence, nothing can perfect God but himſelf, he ſhould otherwiſe be beholden to an Accident, and Quality, and Creature, if any thing perfect him but himſelf. Now to ſhew the Deſcent of Mercy for ſtrengthning our Faith, conſider,

1. The Bleſſedneſs of God is the Riſe of Goodneſs in him (ſtill we ſpeak after the manner of Men). Now there is his Goodneſs of Being, Entity of Goodneſs; and there is his Goodneſs by which he communicates himſelf, and that is an Attribute, which is all one with his Being, only it inclines him to communicate: Pſal. 119. 68. Thou art good, and doſt good. The Nature of Goodneſs is to communicate it ſelf, and to be ſure Goodneſs in God is his Nature. But how doth it riſe from Bleſſedneſs? ſays our Saviour Chriſt, (there is but one ſaying of his that is not in the Evangeliſts) Acts 20. 35. It is more bleſſed to give than to receive. Is he a bleſſed God? He will give then, he will communicate himſelf. In Exod. 33. 19. which is the Preface to this Text, Exod. 34. 6, 7. ſays God to Moſes, I will cauſe all my Goodneſs to paſs before thee, and I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee, and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will ſhew Mercy on whom I will ſhew Mercy. Doth God proclaim all his Goodneſs here? No, there be many Attributes he doth not proclaim. The beſt Interpretation I have is, that which is his Goodneſs communicative for us, (as for his eſſential Goodneſs it is himſelf) ſuch as Mercy, and Grace, and Truth, theſe are thoſe he proclaims, ſo that his Goodneſs is the Ground of his being merciful and gracious, Pſal. 25. 6, 7. David there praying earneſtly for Forgiveneſs, Remember (ſays he) O Lord, thy tender Mercies, and thy Loving-kindneſſes, for they have been ever of old. Remember not the Sins of my Youth, nor my Tranſgreſſions: according to thy Mercy remember thou me, for thy Goodneſs ſake, O Lord. He centers upon this, that God was good, and Goodneſs it ſelf, becauſe he knew that Mercy centred in Goodneſs. Pſal. 86. 5. Thou Lord art good, that's the firſt; then ready to forgive, and plenteous in Mercy. And this is the firſt Burden of many Pſalms, the Lord is good, and his Mercy endures for ever. And it was that they ſung in the Temple, as you may read in the Chronicles. You ſee then there is Bleſſedneſs firſt, and Goodneſs ariſeth from Bleſſedneſs.

2. The next thing in God is Love, and that ariſeth from Goodneſs. The Goodneſs that is in God inclines him to love, and to be the moſt profuſe Lover. You read in 1 John 4. 7, 8. God is Love. The Queſtion is, whether this Speech doth not import, that he is Love in himſelf, as well as that he ſhows Love. There are theſe Reaſons why it imports what he is in himſelf, when he ſays, God is Love. Says he, ver. 7. Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God, that is the Affirmative; and ver. 8. He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is Love: that is, he knows not God in what is moſt proper to him, as to what doth moſt abound in him, for God is Love. We ordinarily ſay of a Man that is of ſuch a Diſpoſition, I know him, he is ſo and ſo; ſo the Believer knows God to be Love. Thus the Apoſtle ſays poſitively, He that is born of God knows God, for God is Love. I take the meaning thus; When a Man hath taſted that the Lord is gracious, the Truth is, it is not only an Act of Love that he taſtes, but he taſtes God, he ſucks in dietatem, he ſucks in this, that there is a Principle in God to maintain his Love to Eternity: And ſo God being Love, he knows him to be ſo. Again, he ſays, All Love is of God, for God is Love. What is the meaning of that? That if God be the Author of all Love, then certainly there is Love in him; He that made the Eye, ſhall not he ſee? But that which moſt convinceth me is, that he ſaith, ver. 12. No Man hath ſeen God at any time. He ſpeaks it of his Love, which none ſees but as manifeſt by Effects; but God is Love eſſentially. Says Aquinas, Whoever hath a Will, hath a Proneneſs to Love. Says Muſculus, As every one is in Goodneſs, ſo in Love. If God then hath a Will inclined to any thing, it is to Love; he hath Hatred in him to Sin, he hath the oppoſite: He hath a Love alſo to ſomething, only it is guided by his Will towards Creatures.

3. Love and Grace are the Roots of Mercy. Where he ſets his Love, if there be Miſery, there Love is drawn out to Pity and Mercy. The Schoolmen ſay, It is but extenſio amoris, but an extending of Love to the Creature when in Miſery. And indeed the Hebrew word for Mercy חסד ſignifies alſo Love or good Will. Our Tranſlators oft render it, merciful Loving-kindneſs; Pſal. 117. 2. His merciful Kindneſs is great towards us. And it is Mercy he ſpeaks of, for it is quoted in Rom. 15. 9. The Gentiles ſhall glorify God for his Mercy. And Pſal. 119. 76. Let thy merciful Loving-kindneſs be for my Comfort; or thy Loving-kindneſs be ſtretch'd out into Mercy where there is need. Where there is Love, there is a Deſign of Good to the Party loved; then Deſires follow: where there is Love, there is a rejoicing over the Perſon; when he proſpers, then there is Joy: If he be in Miſery, there is a drawing out that Love into Pity. If you ſay, the Lord is gracious, you go not beyond merciful; for that is Grace and Love drawn out to the full length, as far as Grace and Love can reach. What Phraſe the Schoolmen expreſs it by, the Scripture doth the like; Pſal. 36. 10. O continue thy Loving-kindneſs: Draw out at length thy Loving-kindneſs (ſo in the Margin). And it ſpeaks of Mercy, for he magnifies Mercy; Ver. 5. Thy Mercy O Lord is in the Heavens. In that Scripture too which is famous amongſt us, Jer. 31. 3. I have loved thee with an everlaſting Love, therefore with Lo- ving-kindneſs have I drawn thee; that laſt Clauſe hath two Significations, (it is varied in the Margin) I have extended Loving-kindneſs to thee, I have ſtretched out Loving-kindneſs to thee; ſo Piſcator reads it. Now hence it comes to paſs, that in ſhewing Mercy God makes the Foundation of it to be Love; Epheſ. 2. 4, 5. But God who is rich in Mercy, for his great Love wherewith he loved us. Rom. 5. 8. God commendeth his Love towards us, in that while we were yet Sinners, Chriſt died for us. Mercy is there called Love; and it is indeed but a commending or extending of Love towards Sinners, when we were Sinners Chriſt died. Tit. 3. 4. The Kindneſs and Love of God our Saviour towards Man appeared, not by Works of Righteouſneſs which we have done, but according to his Mercy he ſaved us. When the Kindneſs and Love of God appears, Mercy follows; According to his Mercy (being Sinners) he ſaveth us.

Uſe 1. Is Mercy the Nature of God, and is Mercy himſelf? Then conſider, Look how great God is, ſo great is his Mercy: Our Tranſlation reads it, As is his Greatneſs, ſo is his Mercy: Why? Becauſe it is God's. Where he pitcheth Mercy by his Will, there the whole Godhead is engaged, Jehovah, Jehovah, God gracious and merciful; he brings over all the whole Godhead when he will be merciful.

Uſe 2. We do treat with the Will of God every day: He that is a Believer treats with the Will of God, that he would but be merciful to him. Now thoſe that treat with the Will of God, either in a way of Aſſurance, or in throwing themſelves upon him, and hoping in his Mercy, what have they to plead? All the Mercies in the Nature of God, to be a ground of Plea before him, to tell him what a God he is in Mercy: O that we would but inure our Hearts to this Practice, it would be a mighty Advantage! In Numb. 14. Moſes having firſt urg'd the Mercies that were in God himſelf, that he is a God, long-ſuffering, great in Mercy; then he prays, According to thy great Mercy do thou pardon. What Mercy? The Mercy he mentioned, which is in God himſelf; Deal (ſays he) according to this Mercy in thee which thou haſt ſpoken of. As if one were to ſupplicate a merciful Man, he implores the Mercy and Ingenuity of his Nature, which upon all Occaſions he had ſhewn. Moſes was the firſt that brought up this happy Expreſſion, According to thy Mercy, (I know not where it is uſed by any other Man) that is, according to the infinite Mercy in thy Heart and Nature. David did next uſe it, Pſal. 25. And in the great Caſe of his Sin of Adultery, Pſal. 51. 1. That he would be merciful to him according to the Multitude of his Mercies. And as he needed all the Mercies in God, ſo he confeſs'd the Sin of his Nature, and hath Recourſe to the Mercies in God's Nature. But it is Pſal. 25. 7. I pitch on: There he doth not content himſelf only with this Expreſſion, According to thy Mercy, but he adds another Phraſe, For thy Mercy ſake, and Goodneſs ſake. Muis obſerves in this Coherence, Good and upright is the Lord, that he centers in his Nature. Thou haſt a merciful Nature, deal with me according to that, and for the ſake of that, according to thy Mercy for thy Goodneſs ſake. The Meditation of that Attribute was the Foundation of his Faith and Prayer herein. When he hath done, he referreth himſelf to Moſes, ver. 11. For thy Name's ſake, O Lord, pardon my Iniquity, for it is great. He refers to that Name proclaimed before Moſes, Exod. 34. 6, 7. But you will ſay, How do theſe Expreſſions, for thy Name ſake, for thy Goodneſs ſake, for thy Mercy ſake, imply the ſame as for himſelf, for his own ſake, how do they involve the Godhead? Look to Iſa. 43. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy Tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, that is, for my ſelf: Iſa. 48. 11. For mine own ſake, even for mine own ſake will I do it. You have it twice in one Verſe; and that which is for Mercy ſake in one place, is for mine own ſake in another: And behold it is I, I am he, as I am God who doth it. What is this but Jehovah, Jehovah, God merciful? We may learn from Old Teſtament-Phraſes that which we do not ſo much conſider. They have taught us in their Prayers from Moſes's Example, how to pray and urge the Mercies of God; Dan. 9. 18, 19. He had ſaid, For thy Mercy ſake do this. And at ver. 19. For thine own ſake do this: He puts them both together. To me this is a great thing, that when we go to pray, we have the liberty to urge God to ſhew us Mercy for his own ſake; that altho it is we who have the Benefit of the Mercies, yet we may urge him, Thou ſhalt have the Glory of it, thou ſhalt have the Glory of thy Grace by it, and the Glory of thy Mercy by it. It is yet again a greater Advantage in praying, that we have all the Mercies in God before us to ſpread before him; Mercies in his Word might be limited, mited, but in his Nature they cannot. What may we not obtain at the hand of God, if we could improve this Notion, to go to God to be merciful to us, as God, and according to the Mercies that are in his Nature, and for the ſake of them?

CHAP. IX.

The other part of the Proclamation of the Mercies of God's Nature in Exod. 34. explained. The Meaning of thoſe Words, Jehovah, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion, and Sin, ſhewed, by the Explication of another Text, Pſal. 89. 30, to 37. That the Covenant of Grace in Chriſt is the ſubſtantial Scope and Deſign of the Pſalm. That the Promiſes of God's pardoning Mercies do concern, and are made unto Chriſt's ſpiritual Seed. That there is ſuch an Amplification of Grace in them, as to extend to the worſt Caſes they can poſſibly be ſuppoſed to be in. That they are ſtrengthned by the firmeſt Engagements.

PSAL. LXXXIX. 30, &c.

If his Children forſake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments: 31 If they break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandments: 32 Then will I viſit their Tranſgreſſion with the Rod, and their Iniquity with Stripes. 33 Nevertheleſs my Loving-kindneſs will I not utterly take from him; nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to fail. 34 My Cove- nant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my Lips. 35 Once have I ſworn by my Holineſs, that I will not lie unto David. 36 His Seed ſhall endure for ever, and his Throne as the Sun before me. 37 It ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever as the Moon, and as a faithful Witneſs in Heaven. Selah.

I Shall center in the 89*th* Pſalm for the illuſtrating that great Attribute of Jehovah merciful, Exod. 34. Pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, &c. Altho firſt I muſt neceſſarily premiſe ſome few things concerning the main drift of the Pſalm.

I ſhall firſt remark the Occaſion of making this Pſalm. 'Tis certain the Penman of it lived in ſuch times wherein great and ſad Diſaſters did befal the Houſe and Throne of David, as appears by what ſo bitterly he complains of from ver. 38, to the end. But the Queſtion lies, what times this ſhould belong unto, which ariſeth from hence, that Ethan the Ezraite is the Author of it, of whom we read, 1 Kings 4. 31. that he lived in Solomon's time, and therefore moſt Interpreters aſſign this Calamity unto the times of Rehoboam's Reign, until when that this Ethan ſhould live, is no wonder: For Rehoboam ſucceeded Solomon, and it was in the beginning of his Reign that the ten Tribes were deplorably cut off from David's Houſe, and given to Jeroboam, and never did return again.

Now Piſcator and others object, that in ver. 40. 'tis ſaid, Thou haſt broken down all his Hedges, thou haſt brought his ſtrong Holds to Ruine; which cannot (ſays he) belong to any other times but thoſe of the Captivity. The Anſwer given by ſome is, that within the firſt five Years of Rehoboam's Reign, Siſhack King of Egypt took alſo the Cities of Judah, and the Strong-holds, 1 Chron. 12. 4. yea he came to Jeruſalem it ſelf, and ſpoiled the Temple, 1 Kings 14. 25. by all which David's Throne loſt its Virgin Primitive Glory: As likewiſe by this Rehoboam himſelf, the King and his Kingdom, Servants, &c. were made Tributaries to Egypt, 2 Chron. 12. 2. This Event thoſe Interpreters judg a full and ſufficient ground for the Prophet to utter his fore-mentioned Complaint upon. And indeed it may be ſaid, that in this great Change there was an initial Performance then, and a Beginning of thoſe final Diſaſters upon David's Throne and Family, though it had a more full Accompliſhment in the Captivity of Babylon, unto which Piſcator and others do rather refer this Pſalm. But there is this Difficulty attends that Interpretation of theirs, that there muſt have been another Ethan, and he an Ezraite too, living at the Captivity, which though it poſſibly might fall out, thoſe of the ſame kindred giving to their Poſterity the ſame Names of their famed Anceſtors, yet this not being extant, I ſhould, to compound all, rather think that this Ethan of Solomon's time ſeeing that this diſmal Calamity began in Rehoboam's time, did further, by the Spirit of Prophecy, foreſee how an after total Eclipſe would in the Iſſue fall out from this unhappy Beginning, it fore-boding that final Ruine which followed; this being a laying the Ax to the Root of the Tree; and ſo he wraps up both in one. But be it either the one or the other, however he that wrote it did upon theſe fatal Events begin deeply to conſider what that Covenant made with David ſhould mean and intend, eſpecially as touching that Clauſe of the Perpetuity thereof; the Promiſe being, that it was eſtabliſhed for ever, as at the firſt Promulgation of it was declared, 2 Sam. 7. 13. whenas this Prophet by theſe Occurrences foreſaw that David's ſucceſſive outward Kingdom would one day ceaſe. And that at the Captivity it had a fatal Period, Ezekiel did pronounce, ch. 21. 25, 26, 27. And thou profane wicked Prince of Iſrael, whoſe day is come, when Iniquity ſhall have an end, thus ſaith the Lord God, Remove the Diadem, and take off the Crown: this ſhall not be the ſame: exalt him that is low, and abaſe him that is high. With which compare this Pſal. 89. 39. Thou haſt profaned his Crown by caſting it to the Ground. And as he had begun, ſo he threatens to go on: I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it ſhall be no more until he come whoſe Right it is, and I will give it him: that is, until the true David ſhall come, who was intended by the Type of David's temporary Kingdom. And by the Conſideration of theſe things our Pſalmiſt was by the Spirit led into the clear Underſtanding of the Myſtery of the Covenant of Grace founded on Chriſt the ſpiritual David, to ſet forth which is the intimate Scope of the Pſalm. And by this it was that he comforts and relieves himſelf (as he well might) againſt thoſe ſad Overthrows that fell upon that external ſucceſſive Kingdom and ſhadowy Covenant of David's Houſe over Iſrael, which was temporary. And thoſe Words, (which I underſtand to be the Prophet's own) ver. 23. I have ſaid Mercy ſhall be built up for ever, thy Faithfulneſs ſhalt thou eſtabliſh in the very Heaven; for I have made a Covenant with my Choſen, I have ſworn unto David my Servant, do expreſs ſo much. And it is as if he had ſaid, I have, notwithſtanding the Wreck I have ſeen hath and ſhall fall out to David's Family, ſet down with my ſelf as a fixed Concluſion, that there are ſure ſtable Mercies of David ſignified, that ſhall be built up for ever. And this he was reſolved and aſſured of, (and his Words at laſt do argue as much) that notwithſtanding thoſe doleful Miſeries befallen David's Family, and the Jews, related from ver. 39, &c. that he ſhould yet be in the Faith and Confidence of thoſe ſpiritual Mercies. And accordingly he concludes the laſt Verſe, Bleſſed be the Lord for evermore. Amen, and Amen.

This he according to this Scope propoſeth at the Beginning; ver. 1. I will ſing of the Mercies of the Lord for ever: with my Mouth will I make known thy Faithfulneſs to all Generations. And theſe Mercies (as was ſaid) are thoſe of the Covenant of Grace, (which afterwards are in this Pſalm ſet forth) and ſummarily they are the Mercies promiſed unto Chriſt and his Seed, whom David typified, as they are formed up into a Covenant of Grace: Of which he profeſſeth to ſing throughout this Pſalm: And therefore the moſt Particulars therein are to be underſtood to relate thereunto. This Summary or Breviate of all he declares in the 3d and 4th Verſes expreſly, as the Words of God himſelf, whom he introduceth to ſpeak in the midſt of his own Diſcourſe in theſe Words; I have made a Covenant with my Choſen; I have ſworn unto David my Servant, Thy Seed will I eſtabliſh for ever; and build up thy Throne to all Generations. Selah.

Regnum Chriſti vocatur Regnum Davidis, quia adumbratum fuit Regno Davidis, &c. Sic Theophilactus inter Græcos, Bernardus inter Latinos. Lucas Brugenſis in locum.

That the Covenant of Grace in Chriſt is the ſubſtantial Scope of this Pſalm, all Chriſtian Interpreters do agree, and the Arguments are invincible which Muſculus and Calvin have urged to perſwade this, as not only that our Saviour hath the very Name of David their King given him by the Prophets, Jer. 30. 9. Ezek. 34. 23. Amos 9. 11. and by the Apoſtle, Acts 13. 34. as in relation to theſe ſure Mercies; who is therefore intended as the Subſtance of this Shadow; but becauſe the Promiſes in this Pſalm are not fulfilled, if not in him. For not only David's Seed, but his Kingdom and Throne are ſaid to continue for ever. And if the fleſhly Seed of David can be ſuppoſed to continue ſtill on Earth, yet to be ſure his Kingdom hath not, whereas the Promiſe is of his Kingdom's Continuance for ever as well as of his Seed. And if God hath failed in point of his ſucceſſive Kingdom, who will believe that other of his Seed, unleſs as both were accompliſhed in our Jeſus? And this the Angels at his Conception do expreſly aſſert; Luke 1. 32, 33. He ſhall be great, and ſhall be called the Son of the higheſt; and the Lord ſhall give unto him the Throne of his Father David. And he ſhall reign over the Houſe of Jacob for ever, and of his Kingdom there ſhall be no end. Which was taken from Iſa. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government ſhall be upon his Shoulder; his Name ſhall be called Wonderful, Counſellor, the mighty God, the everlaſting Father, the Prince of Peace.

Chriſt's Kingdom is ſaid to be the Throne of David, becauſe ſhadowed out by that of David; himſelf profeſſeth that his Kingdom was not of this World, John 18. 36. which David's Kingdom was, after the Mode and Splendor of other earthly Kings, which hitherto Chriſt's hath no way been. And in this Pſalm thoſe great Promiſes of Pardon of Sin, from ver. 30. appertain to that ſpiritual Kingdom which Chriſt did found. And anſwerably, the Seed of this David are a ſpiritual Seed, which by his Word and Spirit he begets, who are therefore named Iſrael, even the very Gentiles, Iſa. 44. 5. (who are the ſurrogate Iſrael) and their Converſion (as well as of the Jews) the Apoſtle expreſly terms the building again the Tabernacle of David; Acts 15. 16, 17. After this I will return, and will build again the Tabernacle of David, which is fallen down: and I will build again the Ruines thereof, and I will ſet it up; that the Reſidue of Men might ſeek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my Name is called, ſaith the Lord, who doth all theſe things. In which Speech is alſo confirmed, that David's outward ſucceſſive Kingdom was utterly brought to Ruine, (as to be ſure in Herod's time, wherein Chriſt was born, it was) and that now it was wholly to be raiſed up a-new by Chriſt into a ſpiritual Kingdom, then begun over both Jew and Gentile, they becoming one Fold, and David their King becoming one Shepherd over them; as the Prophet hath it, Ezek. 34. 23.

Dicitur Meſſiæ Imperiũ Davidis ſoliũ, quod Davidis ſolio adumbrabatur. Et ſic locum 2 Sam. 7. 13. explicat Iſaac Ben. Arama. Grotius in locum.

Theſe Covenant-Mercies then being the declared Ditto of his Song, and the moſt eminent Mercies in that Covenant being God's pardoning Mercies to thoſe under this Covenant, he therefore particularly ſingles forth thoſe, and they have a ſpecial and large Room in this Pſalm, from ver. 30, &c. But before I come to diſcourſe of the Greatneſs of theſe Mercies in pardoning Sin, I cannot paſs over that Praiſe and Celebration which the Pſalmiſt breaks forth into, of our great God, who is the Father and Founder of this Mercy and Covenant, in the 5*th* Verſe, which is as a Preludium to his Song; And the Heavens ſhall praiſe thy Wonders, O Lord, thy Faithfulneſs alſo in the Congregation of thy Saints.

Herein to provoke us Men to ſing and ſet forth theſe Mercies, he ſets before us the Example of the glorious Angels in Heaven, who tho never having ſinned, and ſo never needed the pardoning Mercies of this Covenant, do yet praiſe God for it, and on our behalf; then how much more are we obliged?

The Heavens do praiſe thy Wonders, O Lord. Theſe Wonders are thoſe wonderful Mercies laſt mentioned, (for he continues to ſpeak punctually to this his Subject he had thus propoſed to ſing and celebrate) and ſo they are not chiefly to be underſtood of God's Wonders at large; tho that is a Truth alſo, that the Angels celebrate God for them.

That the Angels are expreſs'd by the Heavens, ſundry Places do ſhew; Job 15. 15. Behold, he putteth no Truſt in his Saints; yea [the Heavens] are not clean in his ſight: compared with ch. 4. 18. Behold, he puts no Truſt in his Servants; his Angels he charged with Folly. See alſo Pſal. 50. 4, 6. And that the Angels are meant in this Place by the Pſalmiſt, all Interpreters, from the Force of the Coherence before and after, do agree. For it follows immediately in the ſame 5*th* Verſe, Thy Faithfulneſs alſo in the Congregation of the Saints; that is, is alſo praiſed among them; which being a Continuation of the ſame Sentence and Matter, muſt be underſtood of the ſame kind of Praiſe, tho indeed by another Order of Praiſes. That it is not meant of the material Heavens is clear, it being the Praiſe of the Wonders of his Mercy and Faithfulneſs, as was ſaid. And ſuch Praiſes are Subjects of that ſuper-celeſtial Nature, which the material Heavens are not capable to ſet forth the Praiſe of: Nay, they have not the leaſt material Impreſs or Stamp upon them to hold them forth unto us Men. They declare indeed the Glory of God in his Works of Creation, Providence, &c. but not theſe of Grace. And if any where it be applied thereto, it is but merely alluſively, as out of Pſal. 19. The Apoſtle doth, in Rom. 10. apply the Pſalmiſt's Words of the Heavens, Pſal. 19. 1. and indeed but as by way of parallel Type, ſhadowing forth the Apoſtle's preaching throughout the Earth. And beſides, would he ſet (think we) and join the material Heavens, inanimate Creatures, and the Congregation of the Saints, in one Quire together, in their praiſing God; as in like manner in ſinging forth theſe like Praiſes of Covenant-Mercies and Faithfulneſs, eſpecially when the Heavens ſpoken of are brought in as the Precentors, or chief and firſt Singers in this ſacred Conſort? The Heavens therefore here are the Inhabitants of Heaven, as Earth is often put for the Inhabitants of the Earth; you have both in one Place, Pſal. 50. 4.

His Wonders. The word in the Original is the ſingular Number; mirabile tuum, [thy Wonder] the eminent Wonder above all Wonders, the Sum of Wonders, which are the Contents of the Covenant of Grace. The Contrivements and Diſpenſations of it are all Wonders, nothing but Wonder, both in the whole of it, and every the leaſt part of it, and all make up but one Wonder of Wonders, above and beyond all Wonders; and therefore by way of tranſcendent Eminency it is thus ſtiled. The Head of this Covenant alſo, Chriſt our ſpiritual David, his Name is Wonderful; Iſa. 9. 6. Again, God's pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, (to celebrate which ſo many Verſes in this Pſalm are ſpent) is a Wonder of Wonders, Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneſt Iniquity? &c. Mich. 7. 18.

It follows in the Pſalmiſt, in the ſame Verſe, Thy Faithfulneſs alſo in the Congregation of the Saints: namely of the Saints on Earth, who have the moſt Reaſon to magnify God for his Mercy in it, as Rom. 15. And from whom alſo it is, by what is publiſhed in their Aſſemblies, that the Angels do learn much of theſe Wonders, as that Scripture ſhews, (which is a Place greatly parallel to this here) Epheſ. 3. 10. To the intent that now unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly Places, might be known by the Church the manifold Wiſdom of God. I ſay, parallel to this: for as there the Angels and the Church (on Earth) ſo here the Heavens, and the Congregation of the Saints on Earth, are joined in their Adoration of theſe Myſteries.

I only ſhall obſerve, that the Angels principal Part in this Celebration is diſtinct from that of us Men, it is to praiſe the Wonders of this Covenant; or as it is a Wonder, ſo it is moſt proper to them to admire and adore God for it. Well, but the Mercy it ſelf, and the Faithfulneſs of God therein, that you ſee is aſcribed and allotted to the Congregations of the Saints, or Men on Earth, as their Theme, and to praiſe, that is our part. For why? that's an Intereſt peculiar and proper to us, the top and height of our Joy and Comfort lies herein. But the Angels they fall down chiefly to the Wonders and Excellencies of Wiſdom and Glory that are diſcovered in it, which they are therefore (as out of Curioſity) ſaid to pry into, 1 Pet. 1. 12. And it is upon the Account hereof they worſhip; Rev. 7. 11, 12. And all the Angels ſtood round the Throne, and about the Elders, and the four Beaſts, and fell before the Throne on their Faces and worſhipped God, ſaying, Amen: Bleſſing, and Glory, and Wiſdom, and Thankſgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen. Which Place, tho at firſt it ſhews that they heartily rejoice in what concerns the Salvation of us Men contained therein, in that they firſt ſay Amen unto a Song which the Sons of Men had in Praiſe of God begun before them to ſing, ver. 10. Salvation (that is, the Glory of our Salvation) be unto God, and the Lamb. And unto this the Angels ſay Amen firſt, e're they begin their own, of bleſſing him for his Glory, Wiſdom, &c. The Salvation then, and ſo the Mercy and Faithfulneſs of God therein, is the eminent Argument of our Song: But the Wiſdom and Power ſhewn therein (tho we chant forth the Glory of them alſo) is principally the Matter of theirs.

The grand Mercies and Faithfulneſs promiſed unto Chriſt our David, (the Subject of this Song) I reduce unto three Heads, according to what we find ſummarily put together in ver. 3, 4. where you have,

1. The Promiſe of a Throne and Kingdom to be eſtabliſh'd.
2. The Choice and Deſignation of the Perſon (Chriſt) the true David, under the Type and Shadow of King David.
3. The Promiſe of Mercy to the Seed of Chriſt under the ſame Type. As for the Perpetuity of theſe Mercies, it runs along through the whole of all.

1. As touching the Throne promiſed, you have a magnifick Deſcription of a Kingdom, which begins at the 7*th* Verſe, and reacheth to the 15*th*, which Kingdom indeed, (as there deſcribed) is that which God the Father promiſeth unto his Son Chriſt, our David. And it is a Matter worthy our Enquiry, why the Kingdom which God the Father did hold and viſibly execute in the Old Teſtament, ſhould be ſet out here when he promiſeth his Son a Throne, &c. The true Myſtery and Reſolve of which is, that it is the ſame Throne and Kingdom for Subſtance and Oeconomy which himſelf held, which he promiſeth to his Son, and that therefore he ſets forth his own herein, for indeed it is all one. We know how Chriſt himſelf ſays, that God the Father had committed all Judgment to him, becauſe he was the Son of Man, John 5. 22, 27. And that the Father viſibly judgeth no Man, but hath given up all to his Son; and this to that end, that all Men might honour the Son as they honour the Father, ver. 23. And therefore it is he is ſaid to come in the Glory of the Father, and to ſit on the Father's Throne, Rev. 3. 21. Yea, and it is called the Throne of God and of the Lamb, Rev. 22. 3. Hence therefore it is that the Prophet being to declare what a Throne it was which God here intended and promiſeth to give to him, makes ſo ample a Deſcription of God's own Kingdom (altho much in the Old Teſtament-Language) as that which he meant to eſtate this his Son into, who yet becauſe he was to come of David in the Fleſh, and David was his Type, this Kingdom is ſtiled the Throne of David in the Shadow, but in Reality and in the Subſtance is indeed the Kingdom of God the Father. And this to be the true Air or Scope of thoſe Verſes ſeems to me moſt genuine and accommodate, and the beſt Account that perhaps will be given of thoſe Verſes. This for the Kingdom, expreſs'd in the firſt Part of the Pſalm.

There is inſerted between this and the other Parts that follow, a moſt comfortable Application, directed (as in the midſt of this Diſcourſe) to thoſe that are under this Covenant, and are the bleſſed Objects of this Grace and Mercy of ſo great a God their King, who either live under the continual Sound thereof, and have their Hearts ſtirred and awakened with the Sound thereof, ſo as by Faith to purſue after the Enjoyment of it, or eſpecially thoſe that have arrived unto a ſolid Aſſurance of their Share and Intereſt therein. Or, if you will, the following Words are a Congratulation of their infinite Happineſs, as elſewhere it is expreſs'd, Bleſſed are the People whoſe God is the Lord, Pſal. 33. 12. The Bleſſedneſs of the People inſtated in this Covenant is diſplayed in this Pſal. 89. 15, 16, 17, 18. Bleſſed is the People that know the joyful Sound: they ſhall walk, O Lord, in the Light of thy Countenance. In thy Name ſhall they rejoice all the day: and in thy Righteouſneſs ſhall they be exalted. For thou art the Glory of their Strength: and in thy Favour our Horn ſhall be exalted. For the Lord is our Defence: and the holy One of Iſrael is our King.

2. The Choice, and Advancement, and Dignity of the Perſon who was to be eſtated in this Throne, even of Chriſt, is deſcribed under the Shadow of David. This Chriſt he dignifies with the higheſt Titles of Honour, his holy One, his mighty One, upon whom God laid Help for us all; his choſen, his exalted One, ver. 19. his Servant, his Chriſt and Meſſiah, with God's own holy Oil anointed by God himſelf, ver. 20. in whom ſhould reſt all the Power of God (which before in ver. 8, 10, 13. you heard of) to eſtabliſh and ſtrengthen this his Chriſt, and beat down his Enemies, and wherewith to over-rule all, ver. 21, 22, 23. And compare but the Expreſſions in ver. 8, 13. with theſe ver. 21, 22, 23. likewiſe ver. 9. and ver. 25. in like manner ver. 10. with ver. 22, 23, 24. in which latter he ſays, their Mercy alſo and Faithfulneſs (which the Prophet had ſaid did ſupport God's Throne, and did go before him to execute all the Adminiſtrations of his Kingdom, ver. 8, & 14.) is promiſed unto this his King, ver. 24. My Mercy and my Faithfulneſs (ſays God) ſhall be with him, that is, in the whole of his Government towards my Church, to perform all with as much Mercy and Faithfulneſs as I my ſelf would. If you will farther have it, God committed all the Mercies that ever he had promiſed, or meant to beſtow upon any or all his Children, into the Hands of his Chriſt, to give forth to them, and conſtituted him to be his own Executor, and hath given him an Heart of Mercy of equal Largeneſs thereunto, and Faithfulneſs to perform it unto every Tittle, as himſelf hath: So as he that ſhall compare all thoſe Deſcriptions of God's Kingdom in the foregone Verſes, with the Expreſſions of Chriſt's Kingdom here, will readily acknowledg that God's Spirit in this Pſalmiſt did on purpoſe ſet forth the former Repreſentation of God's Kingdom, to the end, to ſhow that the like Glory, yea the ſame Kingdom for Subſtance, he hath devolved upon his Son, and put into his Hands: which was the genuine Drift and Scope of ſo large a Deſcription of God's Kingdom therein made. In the Concluſion he proclaims, among other of the Royal Titles which God beſtows upon his Chriſt, that of being God's Son: He ſhall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, my God, and the Rock of my Salvation: Which in how tranſcendent a manner it is true of Chriſt, you may read, Epheſ. 1. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 3. and of all Sons, his firſt-born is higher than the Kings of the Earth, ver. 26, 27 of this 89*th* Pſalm, with which comports that of Rev. 1. 5. The Prince of the Kings of the Earth. Theſe Titles of Chriſt you find from ver. 19, to 28.

3. The other part of Pſal. 89. is that which I have choſen as my Text, from ver. 28, to 37. and this Part principally concerns the Seed, the ſpiritual Seed of Chriſt, as the former does his Kingdom and perſonal Dignities. You may remember how 'twas ſaid, that the Mercies of this Covenant were propheſied by the Pſalmiſt as the eminent Subject of his Song; I will ſing (ſays he) of the Mercies of the Lord for ever, &c. that is, which are for ever. And in this ſpecial Part of the Song we find Mercy's Voice elevated to the higheſt Note, or to the higheſt Ela, which can be ſuppoſed it ſhould reach unto. For as the Height and Top of Mercy's Glory is put forth and ſeen in pardoning of Sins, (that is the moſt proper Seat or Subject wherein and whereupon the Mercies of God are manifeſted and ſpent) ſo in this Paragraph (if any where in all the Scriptures) pardoning Mercies are aſcendent, and in their ſupremeſt Elevation.

Two things are to be farther cleared towards a Foundation unto that ſetting forth the Greatneſs of God's pardoning Mercies to his Children, as here they are held forth. The firſt, that by David's Children here, the ſpiritual Seed of Chriſt are intended, as by David Chriſt himſelf is, (as hath been ſhown) and ſo the Parallel runs thus: 1. David's Perſon is the Shadow of Chriſt's Perſon. 2. David's temporal Throne of Chriſt's Throne, who was his eminent Seed after the Fleſh. 3. That as David had other Children after the Fleſh in a Succeſſion, ſo Chriſt a ſpiritual Seed in their ſeveral Generations. And of this ſpiritual Seed or Children of Chriſt, and of God's pardoning Mercies unto them, is this Paragraph to be underſtood. 1. That Chriſt hath a ſpiritual Seed, unto whom he is the Father, as David was a Father to his other ſucceſſive Seed: And that David bore the Shadow thereof, there are many Paſſages in this and other Scriptures which do confirm it. It is obſervable, that in the 9*th* of Iſaiah (before-cited) when the Promiſe of the Throne of David is again more expreſly (than here) repeated, that withal, ver. 6. one eminent Title amongſt thoſe other is, of his being the everlaſting Father, which Title doth neceſſarily relate to a Seed, unto whom he that is ſaid to ſit upon David's Throne is alſo a Father. And anſwerably we ſee both the Promiſe of Chriſt's Throne, and theſe Promiſes to his Seed and Children, to be nearly conjoined in ſeveral Paſſages in this Pſalm, as being inſeparably riveted and involved both of them in this one and the ſame Covenant, and as the alike ſubſtantial Parts thereof, and involved in the ſame Oath. Thus ver. 28, 29, 30. My Mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my Covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him. His Seed alſo will I make to endure for ever; and his Throne as the Days of Heaven. If his Children forſake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments, &c. At the Entrance of my Text, and again at the Concluſion, ver. 35, 36. Once have I ſworn by my Holineſs, that I will not lie unto David. His Seed ſhall endure for ever, and his Throne as the Sun before me. For he poſſeſſeth his Throne upon ſuch Terms as that his Children alſo ſhould be effectually ſaved. And what Reaſon there ſhould be that any ſhould ſever theſe two, which God hath ſo cloſely joined together, I underſtand not. We cannot conceive that the Promiſe of the Throne which is unto Chriſt's Perſon, ſhould be the ſole and alone Subject of the Oath, but the Promiſe concerning the other Seed and Children ſhould be without Oath, and limited to David's other fleſhly Children in their Succeſſions, as unto temporal Reſpects, and not to take in the ſpiritual Seed of Chriſt, or thoſe of David's Seed who were ſuch, eſpecially ſeeing in other Scriptures true Believers on Chriſt, whether Jews or Gentiles, are ſo frequently termed the Seed and Children of Chriſt, (our David) Lo here am I, and the Children which thou haſt given me, Heb. 2. 13. And in Pſal. 22. which ſo lively ſets forth Chriſt as he was hanging on the very Croſs, the Iſſue and Product of his Crucifying is in the Cloſe ſaid to be, That a Seed ſhould ſerve him, and it ſhall be counted to the Lord for a Generation. Parallel unto which is that Iſa. 53. in which Chriſt Jeſus is as evidently alſo held forth as crucified; the Fruit whereof is there declared to be, that he ſhall ſee his Seed, and ſee the Travail of his Soul, and be ſatisfied in them, and their effectual Salvation by him, ver. 10, 11. for nothing elſe will ſatisfy Chriſt about them.

And to this purpoſe it may be farther obſerved, that in theſe Promiſes in my Text, made in David's Name, as in behalf of his Children, there is this ſtrange Difference apparently made between David the Father and his Children; that the Holy Ghoſt ſays not on his part, If he forſake my Law, I will viſit him with Rods, &c. but only, if his Children do, ver. 30, 31. whenas yet we all know, take David perſonally, he did foully forſake God's Law, yea deſpiſe the Commandment, as the Prophet Nathan challenged him, and was ſharply viſited with Rods. Yet there is no mention of any of his Sins, nor ſo much as of an [if] about any ſuch Matter; but all of him is paſſed over in Silence. And to what other myſtical Purpoſe ſhould this be, but that as Melchiſedeck's Genealogy is omitted to make up a Likeneſs to the Son of God, to the like intent there is omitted the mention of David's Sins in this Place, that David hereby might bear the Type and Shadow of Chriſt's Perſon; and withal be a perfect Type of him in his relation unto his Children, who was in his own Perſon not only without Sin, but above the leaſt Suppoſition of it. But if his Children ſhould ſin, and ſome of them might be left unto great Sins, yet for the Mercy promiſed him they ſhould be pardoned. And under this Repreſentation David comes to perſonate Chriſt, as he was to bear the Relation of Father unto his ſpiritual Children, as for whoſe ſake thoſe Promiſes were made. And in this manner, upon Chriſt as ſuch a Father and our David, and thoſe Promiſes to his Seed, did that Oath reſt, as well as for the Throne. If we alſo take the Succeſſion of David's fleſhly Seed, good and bad, the Mercies and Forbearance of God towards them (taking the Circumſtances of their Sinnings, &c.) were greater towards them than unto any other Succeſſion of Men that have been on Earth. And we find it often in the Story of the Kings and Chronicles put literally upon this Reaſon, that is, for David my Servant's ſake. And theſe Diſpenſations of temporal Mercies to thoſe his Children, were but the Shadows of thoſe ſure Mercies, of pardoning Mercies, promiſed to the ſpiritual Seed of Chriſt. And for a farther Confirmation of this, the ſpiritual Children or Seed of Chriſt are alſo termed David's Seed and Children here in the Text, by the ſame juſt Reaſon that the Faithful are termed the Sons of Abraham. For the Foundation of Abraham's Title to his being the Father of all the Faithful ſtood thus; that becauſe a Covenant and Oath was promulged perſonally and particularly unto him, how that in Chriſt, who was to be his Seed after the Fleſh, all the Nations of the Earth ſhould be bleſſed; and that Seed out of all Nations being Chriſt's Seed firſt, therefore he had the Honour to be ſtiled the Father of all the Faithful, whether Jews or Gentiles, and the Repreſenter of Chriſt therein. Yea, and that Oath and Covenant involved the ſpiritual Seed, as made unto them as well as unto himſelf, who laid hold upon it by Faith, or as unto Chriſt, or rather with Chriſt for them, for ſo it is expreſly interpreted to be, Heb. 6. 16, 17. For Men verily ſwear by the greater, and an Oath for Confirmation is to them an end of all Strife; wherein God willing to ſhew unto the Heirs of Promiſe the Immutability of his Counſel, confirmed it by an Oath. Now the very ſame Covenant and Oath being in more ample and plain Terms renewed unto David, the Analogy holds between David and Abraham, and this Pſalm is an Evidence of it. If then Chriſt, and the ſpiritual Seed in Abraham's caſe, are not to be ſeparated, then not in the caſe of David, wherein both are more diſtinctly and expreſly mentioned, and included in one and the ſame Covenant, than in Abraham's they were. Only David being a King ſet up ſo immediately by God, therefore the Promiſe of the Throne unto Chriſt his Succeſſor is more eminently indeed ſpoken of, yet not ſo as that it ſhould be the ſole Object of that Oath, but that God's Faithfulneſs unto the Children of Chriſt, or Heirs of Salvation, is taken in as in Abraham's caſe it was, though far more obſcurely.

And that the ſpiritual Seed of Chriſt are reckoned as David's Houſe and Children, that Place alone may perhaps be ſufficient to prove, in which the Converſion of the Gentiles is termed, the building up the Tabernacle of David, Acts 15. 15, 16, 17. Unto this agree the Words of the Prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the Tabernacle of David, which is fall'n down: and I will build again the Ruines thereof, and I will ſet it up; that the reſidue of Men might ſeek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my Name is called, ſaith the Lord, who doth all theſe things. Among the Hebrews * a Tabernacle was put for one's Houſe; and that Houſe ſignifies Children, is well known, Luke 1. 33. He ſhall reign over the Houſe of Jacob for ever: By which is meant the ſpiritual Seed, whether of Jew or Gentile, as before opened.

* Hebræis omne habitaculum σκηνὴ dicitur, quia ea habitatio vetuſtiſſima. Grotius in locum.

Having thus clear'd and evinc'd it, that by David's Children here in this Pſal. 89. 30. is intended the ſpiritual Seed of Chriſt, I come now to ſhew how in ver. 30*th*, 31*ſt*, 32*d*, 33*d*, 34*th*, 35*th*, 36*th*, 37*th*, the Glories of Jehovah, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, are moſt ſignally diſplay'd in this 89*th* Pſalm, from ver. 30, to v. 38. If his Children forſake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments: If they break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandments: Then will I viſit their Tranſgreſſion with the Rod, and their Iniquity with Stripes. Nevertheleſs, my Loving-kindneſs will I not utterly take from him: nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to fail. My Covenant will I not break: nor alter the thing that is gone out of my Lips. Once have I ſworn by my Holineſs, that I will not lie unto David. His Seed ſhall endure for ever; and his Throne as the Sun before me. It ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever as the Moon: and as a faithful Witneſs in Heaven. Selah. But thou haſt caſt off and abhorred: thou haſt been wroth with thine Anointed. That God will pardon your Sins of ordinary Infirmities that you commit, that you think eaſily the Covenant of Grace doth reach and extend to; ay but here is a Proviſo (you call them ſo in Acts and Wills) which is an Ampliation of the Covenant of Grace upon the Suppoſition of the worſt of Caſes, of the worſt of thoſe who are under the Covenant of Grace: If his Children forſake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments, &c. You ſee the Amplitude of the Covenant of Grace, (what hath God to do to run out to this) and you ſhall ſee the Largeneſs of the Covenant of Grace, how far it extends.

1. I begin with the word IF; it implies, that it is a Caſe may fall out, God hath not ſaid temere raſhly, or uſed all theſe Words in vain: It is a Caſe may ſometimes fall out.

2. What is the Reaſon of this if, if they ſhall do ſo and ſo? It is not ſo much (as Muſculus ſays) to ſhew what Man will do, but it is to ſhew what God will do: If Men do ſo and ſo, (and make a Suppoſition to the utmoſt) if they do ſo and ſo, yet I will do ſo and ſo (ſays God) as far, nay beyond what the Imagination of Man can reach, as Chriſt is a Saviour to the utmoſt.

3. He uſeth the word IF, not that what is ſuppoſed does oft fall out, for there are Millions of Saints go to Heaven, and not come within the Compaſs of this Place, and therefore it is what ſeldom happens; Ay but ſometimes it does, for God would not in vain uſe ſo many Words. It's hard to ſay what Sins God pardons after Regeneration: In ſome God exalts his juſtifying Grace more, in ſome his ſanctifying. If one of ninety nine be gone, he leaves all the other for thoſe few's ſake; he hath made Proviſoes in this Covenant of Grace, he hath put this IF in.

4. He repeats it, and indigitates it over and over; for (as Calvin ſays) it is the hardeſt thing in the World to believe it, and whoever lives in great Sins, it is the hardeſt thing in the World to believe that God will pardon him.

But doth he ſpeak of the Members of Chriſt, is it of thoſe that are actual Members of Chriſt that he ſpeaks this? Is it not of their Sins before Converſion rather? Nay, but it is after, If his Sons forſake my Law, ſays the 30*th* Verſe. Thoſe that are his Sons and Children are actually in the State of Grace; at the day of Judgment, ſays he, Heb. 2. 13. Lo, I, and the Children which God hath given me: and he is called an Everlaſting Father, Iſa. 9. 6.

Another Obſervation is concerning his Seed, that the greateſt of their Sins may come under this IF, under this Proviſo: So Calvin and Muſculus obſerve. David did not commit a Sin of Infirmity when he deſpiſed the Commandment of the Lord, but his Sin extended to the moſt heinous Guilt. And he ſpeaks of ſuch Sins as may not be call'd mere Infirmities. Obſerve how he ſets out their Sins ſuppoſeable.

1. He reckons up all ſorts of Laws broken, ver. 30, 31. there is my Laws, Judgments, Statutes and Commandments: and Interpreters fetch out all the judicial Laws in Rites and Statutes, and moral Laws in Commandments.

2. Then obſerve how he expreſſeth it, for the Act, ver. 30. If they forſake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments: Ver. 31. If they break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandments: (here is a worſe than all) If they profane my Statutes: It is tranſlated, ſlated, If they break my Statutes; but in the Hebrew, and ſo in the Margin it is, If they profane my Statutes. Now for a Saint to be a profane Perſon, as Eſau was, Heb. 12. how hainous is the Guilt!

3. Take the Title of their Sins; he calls them Tranſgreſſions and Iniquities, ver. 32. Pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion, and Sin. One of the Words ſignify Falſeneſs, Treachery of Sin. Thus he ſets out the Greatneſs of thoſe Sins which it is ſuppoſed Saints may fall into, after they are Children.

4. Here are Sins of Omiſſion and Commiſſion. Of Omiſſion; If they walk not in my Judgments, ver. 30. Of Commiſſion; If they forſake my Law, and break my Statutes, or profane them, ver. 31. I will not ſay, that it is not to be ſaid how far Men may ſin: As it cannot be ſaid how far Men may go and not be ſincere, ſo neither how far a Man may ſin. Tho it is certain there was a Seed of God remained, yet that Perſon that was excommunicated, is called the wicked Perſon. And you know the Story of the Apoſtle John's young Thief, recorded by Euſebius, which was an amazing Inſtance of a Man's falling into Sin. Water may be ſo heated, that any body that puts his Hand into it may ſay, Here is no Cold in it, but yet tho it ſcalds, let it ſtand a while and all the Heat will be gone. Let Men in a State of Grace be inflamed with Luſts, that one would think there is nothing of Grace, yet there is a Principle of Grace which will reduce them at laſt. Thus much for the Greatneſs of their Sin.

5. God promiſeth Chaſtiſements in ſuch Caſes. He does not bring great Chaſtiſements for ordinary Infirmities, but for ſuch Sins as theſe are, that they may not be judged of the World; 1 Pet. 1. 17. If ye call on the Father, who without reſpect of Perſons judgeth according to every Man's Work, paſs the time of your ſojourning here in Fear. Tho he be a Father, yet therefore be afraid of him. It is not for Men to ſay, Let Men live as they liſt, they ſhall be ſaved; no, ſays God, I will put a ſtop to you by chaſtiſing you. See what theſe Chaſtiſements are in theſe Caſes, and how he ſpeaks of them; (you may ſee the Covenant of Grace to ſhine in all ſtill) Firſt he ſays, He will viſit them with Rods and with Stripes. He calls them Rods, 2 Sam. 7. 14. when the Promiſe was firſt made to David, (this very Promiſe) I will be his Father, and he ſhall be my Son: If he commit Iniquity, I will chaſten him with the Rod of Men, and with the Stripes of the Children of Men. It is a Moderation of the Correction, I will not whip him ſo hard as to kill him, ſays God, but as you whip Men: I will not chaſten with Soreneſs of my Diſpleaſure, but deal with them as Men. The Truth is, God whips with Ruſhes, in compariſon to his Vengeance in the other World: It is with the Rod of Men, which Men may bear. He hath a ſweet Word, I will viſit their Tranſgreſſions with Rods. He ſays not, I will ſtrike; no, it is a fatherly Word, I will viſit them as you do ſick Folks, to help them: It is a Word full of Tenderneſs. Again, he ſays, I will viſit their Iniquities: It is a ſweet Word; he does not ſay, I will viſit them; no, I love them, I have no Anger at them, and Wrath for them, but I have at their Tranſgreſſions, Iſa. 26. This is all the Fruit of my chaſtiſing, to take away the Sin.

6. Conſider the Promiſes he makes to this Caſe, (the Promiſes of Chaſtiſements you heard) but conſider the other part of the Promiſes that are here mentioned, and it will extremely affect your Hearts.

1ſt. Says he, I will be kind for all this, I will not make my Kindneſs void, (ſo it is in the Hebrew) ver. 33. Nevertheleſs, my Loving-kindneſs will I not utterly take from him, nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to fail. My Kindneſs ſhall never fail in pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, I will ever be abundant in Kindneſs and Truth, Exod. 34. 7. Well, go then, count the Number of Promiſes he makes of this kind, they are juſt the Number of what he ſays of their Sins. He had ſaid four things of their Sins; If his Children forſake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments: If they break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandments: and there are four ſeveral Expreſſions which relate to his pardoning them. Notwithſtanding my Loving-kindneſs will I not make void, nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to lie: My Covenant will I not profane, nor alter the thing gone out of my Lips. So that here is four to four.

2dly. Conſider how he ſutes theſe Expreſſions in Correſpondency to their Sins.

1ſt. If they keep not my Commandments, ver. 31. My Mercy will I keep for him for evermore, ver. 28.

2dly. If they forſake my Law, ver. 30. I will not alter the thing gone out of my Lips, ver. 34.

3dly. If they profane my Statutes, ver. 31. I will not profane my Covenant, ver. 34. It is a mighty Speech; as if God had ſaid, I ſhould run into Profaneneſs, and be as profane as you, if I ſhould break Covenant: As if God were in danger of this, if he fail'd Chriſt's Seed in this caſe, of being a profane God, and an unholy God, and a lying God to David, which can never be.

7. He binds all this with an Oath; Once have I ſworn by my Holineſs, that I will not lie unto David. I have ſworn abſolutely. Now conſider;

1ſt. An Oath is the higheſt Confirmation of all other, Heb. 6. 6.

2dly. He tells you, it is an Oath but once taken: Why but once? To ſhew that all is irrevocable, both Oath and thing ſworn to.

3dly. Tho it be ſworn but once, to ſhew it is irrevocable, yet notwithſtanding we hear of it twice in this Pſalm; ver. 3. I have ſworn unto David my Servant. And again, ver. 35. he took the Oath but once, but we hear of it twice. He took an Oath to his Son, that he would make him a King, and ſet up his Throne, that the 3*d* Verſe ſhews: And he takes an Oath for his Seed, and his Seed in this caſe of ſinning, and it is as ſacred to him concerning his Children, as it is to Chriſt to oblige himſelf to give him a Throne and Kingdom.

4thly. Conſider what he ſwears by. Of all things elſe this amazeth me, he ſwears by his Holineſs; Once have I ſworn by my Holineſs. Now bring all your Conſciences to God, and what is it you do dread in God? His Holineſs. What is it provokes him? It is laid in the Foundation of Juſtice and Wrath; and becauſe he is a God ſo pure, that his Eyes can indure no Iniquity. Now then that his Holineſs, which is the moſt againſt Sin, ſhould be brought in to be ſworn to pardon Sin, what can you have more? Calvin ſays, to ſwear by his Holineſs, is more than to ſwear by himſelf; for he ſwears by that thing which is like to be your greateſt Enemy, to condemn and deſtroy you.

5thly. Laſtly, He ſwears by that which is moſt eminent in his Holineſs, and muſt be profane and lie, if he doth not perform.

8. Conſider that all this is founded upon Chriſt, tho the Mercies are in the Heart of God. It is a mighty Expreſſion when he ſays, If his Children forſake my Law, I will viſit their Tranſgreſſions. He ſpeaks to them, If they do ſo and ſo; but when he comes to make his Promiſe, Notwithſtanding my Loving-kindneſs ſhall not be void from him. FROM HIM, ver. 28. i. e. from Chriſt. What, does Jeſus Chriſt need any Mercy? Ay, it is well for us, he doth not for himſelf. But thus, as he is the Head of all Saints, and he and they make one Body, the Covenant of Grace and Mercy was made with him, and ſo they are called the ſure Mercies of David, Pſal. 51. All the Mercies God beſtows are for his ſake; and it is well now that God hath ſworn, that he will not take his Mercies from Chriſt, in relation to us; and that Jeſus Chriſt can go to God and plead, Lord, I have no need of Mercy, but thou haſt given me all thy Mercies, for thoſe who are mine, Lord fulfil them to them. There is one Uſe which Calvin makes, Live upon the Covenant of Grace, you need no more; and if you be guilty of great Sins, you had need live upon it. But let me commend one Uſe, which David makes in the midſt of the Pſalm, ver. 15, 16, 17, 18. Bleſſed is the People that know the joyful Sound, &c. He ſpeaks in relation to the Covenant of Grace, to all them that are under it. He ſets it in the midſt as an Uſe of Application to the Perſons under it. But what kind of Perſons are they that are under it? They that know the joyful Sound. All Interpreters acknowledg it is an alluſion to the ſounding the Trumpets, which you read of, Numb. 10. 4, 10. Lev. 23. 23. This I find by Ainſworth and others, that joyful Sound here imports (what was typified by the ſounding their Trumpets and Cornets) the ſpiritual Joy the People of God ſhould have in the Favour of God, and Meeting with God, and Communion with God in his Covenant of Grace. This is plainly the Meaning, for (ſays he) they ſhall walk in the Light of thy Countenance. When did they ſound Trumpets? They ſounded Trumpets for War, for Feaſts, upon extraordinary Occaſions of great Joy, as at the Dedication of the Temple, Ezra 3. 11, 12. when the People returned from Captivity, 1 Chron. 5. 12, 13. when the Foundation of the Temple was laid, Ezek. 3. 10. and at its Dedication, Nehem. 12. 35. and every New Year they had Trumpets and Cornets ſounded; the one was made of Rams Horns, which they call'd a Cornet; the other of Silver; the one had a loud Sound, the other a ſhrill, Pſal. 98. 6. There is both Trumpets and Sound of Cornets, with theſe they made a joyful Noiſe. Now what is the Meaning of this, but to tell us, O bleſſed are thoſe People into whoſe Ears God blows Joy, and Peace, and Salvation? Says the Apoſtle, If the Trumpet gives an uncertain Sound, who knows what is meant, 1 Cor. 14. 7, 8. But when God comes and ſpeaks to a Man's Soul all this that I have ſaid of the Covenant of Grace, and tells him, that he is his Salvation, and blows this with his own immediate Voice, O bleſſed is that Man that hears this joyful Sound: This Man may walk in the Light of God's Countenance. Conſider what he ſays of it, They ſhall walk in the Light of thy Countenance, and in thy Name ſhall they rejoice, and in thy Faithfulneſs ſhall they be exalted: Thou art the Glory of their Strength, &c. Such as have had this Trumpet ſounding in their Souls, are inabled to walk triumphingly, and are prepared for War. They ſounded the Trumpet for War: We are in War more than Conquerors; O Grave, where is thy Victory! O ſeek to the Lord that he would blow and make this bleſſed Sound in your Souls, that you may have God to rejoice in, and God himſelf alone. The Angels may wonder at the Wonders of the Covenant, but you rejoice in them as yours, and you may do it all the day long; and in doing ſo you will be taken off from all that is in your ſelves. In thy Name ſhall they rejoice: They glory in this, that they know thee that exerciſeſt Loving-kindneſs in the Earth, and their Joy ſhall none take from them, Pſal. 89. 16.

CHAP. X.

Of the Mercies of God's Heart and Nature. That Mercy and Grace are true Eſſential Properties in the Divine Being. That there are ſome that deny this. This Head diſcourſed in three Branches. 1. An Explication. 2. The Proofs out of the Text. 3. Anſwers to the principal Objections. 1. The Explanation. 1ſt. How it is to be underſtood, that Mercy or any other Attribute, is the Nature of God. 2dly. Of the Difference between thoſe mere ſimilitudinary Attributes borrowed from Man, as Sorrow, Repenting, &c. and thoſe ſubſtantial Attributes in God, the Likeneſs whereof are communicated to Man, and ſo attributed both to God, and alſo to Man: ſuch as Holineſs, Goodneſs, Mercy. The State I put the Queſtion into, for the Proofs of the Aſſertion.

IT may be greatly wondred at, that it ſhould ever ſo much as have entred into the Thoughts of any of the Sons of Men, [ſinful Men] (who therefore need an Infinity of Mercy from the great God, to ſave and pardon them) to affirm that all the Mercy which God himſelf ſo magnifies in this Scripture, and for which other Scriptures do ſo highly extol him, ſhould be aſcribed to God only è ſimilitudine effectus; that is, becauſe he doth, and exerciſeth Loving-kindneſs; and only becauſe that his outward Diſpenſations are ſuch, as Men who are mercifully diſpoſed uſe to exerciſe, out of a pitiful Nature. But God, ſay they, without any inherent Diſpoſition or Affections, (which ſhould properly have the Name of Mercy) or which as ſuch, ſhould be the Root and inward Principle of ſuch merciful Acts, doth exert them. They anſwerably affirm Mercy to be an Attribute of that Rank which are uſually termed after the manner of Man: As when God is ſaid to grieve and repent, which are merely aſcribed to him, becauſe he doth ſuch things towards us, as we Men are wont to do when we grieve or repent; but God doth them without any inward Principle of Grief or Repentance: And 'tis ſo here in the caſe of Mercy, ſay they. But their queſtioning this great Truth, is not the Occaſion of my ſpeaking to this Point in this Place; but my Method and Subject neceſſarily lead me to it: with-

It need not ſtumble any that ſuch an Opinion is vented by the ſame Perſons that ſpeak at the ſame rate of the Sacrifice which Chriſt made by offering up himſelf for the Sins of us Men; denying that alſo to be a Price or Ranſom properly to redeem us, and would make it to be but metaphorical. And truly when theſe two grand Pillars of Faith are thus enervated, and made weak, by taking from them what gives the Strength and Subſtance unto them; what remains there of Solidity ſufficient for the Heart of a Sinner, loaden with that infinite Weight of his Sins, to ſuſtain and bear it up, and him to ſtay himſelf upon?

out the Demonſtration of which added to the former, my grand Aſſertion, which bears the Title of my Subject, would be imperfect, and of leſs Power and Force upon Believers Minds; And being thereby obliged to prove it out of the Text, I ſaw ſome neceſſity firſt to premiſe that general Explication that follows, to prevent Miſtakes out of vulgar Apprehenſions.

I offer then an Explication, how it is to be underſtood that any of God's Attributes are of the Nature of God, or may be ſaid to be the Nature of God.

This Explication of this I ſhall abſolve by theſe two explanatory Propoſitions. 1*ſt.* The Scriptures ſay, that he is God by Nature, Gal. 4. 8, in difference from thoſe that are but called Gods; and ſo we may affirm that what God is, he is by Nature, that is, by his being himſelf God; and ſo the Perfections of his Being are himſelf, and termed his Godhead, Col. 2. 9.

1. Theſe divina nomina, (as the Antients call them) that is, theſe Names attributed to God, ſuch as Wiſe, Powerful, Holy, Good, Merciful, are ſaid to be his Nature, becauſe there is that in his Divine Nature or Godhead, which truly anſwers to what is intended to be ſignified by theſe Names, and he is by Nature THAT which theſe Attributes do expreſs him to be.

2. It were abſurd to think or underſtand that any Attributes whatſoever, as they are Words and outward Characters or Expreſſions, ſhould be the Nature of God; but yet the things ſignified by theſe outward Words and Characters are truly and inwardly in the Nature of God, and he is ſuch a God by Nature; and that theſe outward Words and Names do proprio & primario ſignificatu (as the Schools ſpeak of them) in their primary and proper Signification convey to our Minds what is really in God's Nature.

3. Nor yet are thoſe glorious inward Conceptions and Apprehenſions that are conveyed to, and begotten in our Minds by theſe ſignificant Characters, begotten by the Spirit in us; nor are theſe the Nature of God, although they be the inward bright Rays and Shinings thereof. Both which is evident from that Speech, 2 Cor. 4. 6. God that commanded (by Creation namely) Light to ſhine out of Darkneſs, hath ſhined in our Hearts, to give the Light of the Knowledg of the Glory of God, in the Face of Jeſus Chriſt. Where firſt it is the Glory of God himſelf that is ſaid to be known. And yet, 2*dly.* The moſt illuſtrious Light that was in the Minds of the Apoſtles themſelves, whereby they knew him, was but a created Reſemblance of that Glory of God made in and through the Face and Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt, who is a far more glorious Repreſentation of the Godhead than what thoſe attributed Names can any way render to us.

4. It remains to be proved, that yet the things themſelves conceived of by us, and expreſſed by theſe Names, are ſubſtantially and by Nature in God; or that there are thoſe Perfections in his Nature and Godhead as do really anſwer to what theſe outward ſignificant Characters of Attributes, and thoſe inward Beams of himſelf in our Conceptions do repreſent his Nature to be. And the Evidence for this may be drawn from the leſſer to the greater, from that lower Repreſentation of God and his Godhead made to the Heathens by the Works of God's Providence and Creation. And ſurely look what thoſe Repreſentations or Manifeſtations of God made to them are termed, or what is ſpoken of them, we are warranted to ſpeak the ſame, yea much more of theſe Attributes of God's own Choice to ſet forth himſelf by. Now it is expreſly ſaid, Rom. 1. 20. That the inviſible things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal Power and Godhead. Where, 1*ſt.* [thoſe inviſible things of God] are his Properties, ſuch as are eſſential to him, and particularly Power and Eternity are there inſtanced in. Which, 2*dly.* are inviſible in themſelves to us as his Godhead is, and but known of us as God is pleaſed to make ſhew of them unto us; as ver. 19. Becauſe that which may be known of God is manifeſt in them, for God hath ſhewed it unto them. And, 3*dly.* That thoſe inviſible Things or Properties of God are eſſentially and by Nature in him; there is this Evidence in that Text, that what of them is manifeſted, is ſaid to have been in God himſelf before he made, yea although he had never made the World, (which is the Manifeſtation of them there ſpecified) or had any of theſe Names given him; and he gives for Inſtance thoſe two eſſential Attributes, Eternity and Power. And in that he ſays [Eternal], he proclaims the Reality of that Attribute which we call

Power, to have been ſubſtantially in him from Eternity, like as Eternity it ſelf alſo, before ever theſe attributed Names were given him, or before any ſuch Works or Effects of his were extant, by which theſe are made manifeſt. The things were in him before.

Yea he riſeth up higher, and expreſly ſtiles that which was ſignified and repreſented by theſe Works, &c. to be his Godhead, in adding his eternal Power and Godhead; which let Criticks interpret how they pleaſe either to be his Divinity, as Beza; or Godhead, as our Tranſlators; yet either both do and muſt centre in this Concluſion that it is ſtiled either of theſe, becauſe there is that in his Godhead and Divine Being which in an Exceſs of Fulneſs doth in Truth anſwer unto that Manifeſtation of him. And ſo the Argument becomes ſtrong and prevalent for the Point before me, That if thoſe ruder and obſcurer Impreſſes made of himſelf by the Works of Creation. ver. 20. and thoſe imperfect Medals of himſelf ſtamp'd upon the Souls of thoſe Heathens thereby, of which, ver. 19. he ſpeaks, (for God hath ſhewed it to them) be called his Godhead: Then how much more do theſe Names or Attributes which God in his Word by his own Inſtitution hath appointed, and in infinite Wiſdom himſelf invented and revealed, being accompanied and brought home by the Power, ſupernatural Light, and Bleſſing of his Spirit, to the Souls of his Saints through his Word, (as out of 2 Cor. 4. 6. was obſerved) how much more (I ſay) ſhall theſe be ſtiled his Godhead in the Senſe and for the Reaſon above-ſaid, even becauſe they do in their proper, direct and abſolute Signification ſhew what his Godhead is? And there is that in God that correſponds to, and to an Infinity doth make good what is ſpoken of him by theſe, as we call the Repreſentation of a Man's Face in Water, the Man's Face which it repreſents; becauſe, as Solomon ſays, it anſwers as Face to Face; and ſo it is here. And the Repreſentations by theſe are but as thoſe of a Man's Face or whole Perſon in broken Pieces of a Looking-glaſs ſever'd one from the other, whereby it comes to paſs that not the whole in any is entirely ſeen, but one Lineament or Caſt of the Countenance is repreſented in one; another Part, as an Eye, in another Piece of that Glaſs, and ſo of the reſt. And therefore in the plural it is here ſaid, [The inviſible things of God] are clearly ſeen, &c. in relation unto our multiplied Conceptions of them in and by his Works or Attributes ſeverally. For whilſt by one Act we take into our Conception that he is Wiſe, we then do not ſo much as think of his Power or Goodneſs. We ſee an Eye in a diſtinct Attribute ſever'd as 'twere from the reſt, but actually ſee not an Hand at that Inſtant, and ſo of the reſt. God hath caſt the Apprehenſions of himſelf into leſſer Moulds, to fit the narrow Bore of our Underſtandings. And if any Man apprehending ſome one or more, as thoſe in the Text, ſhould ſay, there are no more, he ſhould greatly derogate from the Godhead. But notwithſtanding the Multiplicity of the Repreſentations of theſe Attributes, or of our Conceptions thereby, yet ſtill there are all thoſe Perfections in the Godhead, which do in omnimodâ & unitiſſimâ ſimplicitate, in an undivided Unity and Simplicity in the Godhead, anſwer unto all theſe. And look as we call the broken ſcattered diffuſed Beams of the Sun upon diſturbed or ſurging Waters the Sun, although they repreſent it but by piece-meal; this Beam in one Wave in one Part, and that Beam in another Wave another piece of it, becauſe tho it be thus ſcatteredly and brokenly done, yet there is that in the Light and Body of the Sun that anſwereth unto all theſe: So it is here. And were it not thus, we could not be ſaid to know him that is the true God, as John 17. 3. nor to know the Truth of God as it is in God; and ſo the Heathen had not been without Excuſe, in that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God. Only we are to correct theſe our imperfect Conceptions by this Rule, that whilſt we make a Compoſition of all theſe, to the end that thereby we might come to underſtand what God in the whole is, (which is but a Multiplicity in our imperfect Contemplations of him) that yet ſtill in the cloſe of all we ſit down with the Faith of this, that in him all theſe Perfections are inſeparably one indiviſible Being, and all of them himſelf, and withall comforting and relieving our ſelves againſt this preſent Deficiency, that God

I leave it to the Schools to diſpute: the Scotiſts on the one ſide, other Schoolmen on the other; Quid ſit Fundamentum diſtinctionis Attributorum in Deo, num in re an in ratione ratiocinante. This I am ſure of, that what of the things of God are multiplied in our Conceptions, are but one in God, and one God. Sicut ſi quæratur an potentia ſenſitiva coloris & odoris ſint idem, an diſtinguantur? Reſpondendum, in ſenſib. externis quidem diſtingui, in ſenſu interno eſſe realitèr idem. Raphael Averſa de Sanſeverino in Part. primam, Quæſt. 3. Sect. 4.

hath reſerved a Time in the other World, in which with one intuitive Act of Knowledg, or entire View at once, we ſhall ſee all thoſe Perfections of his to be but one ſimple Nature and Fulneſs of the Godhead, which is a ſeeing God Face to Face. And then we ſhall find alſo, that theſe Attributes in this Life did yet truly and really repreſent what was really and truly in himſelf.

And thus much for the firſt explaining Narrative or Account, (as I call it, becauſe it conſiſts of ſo many Branches) which though it contains but what is common to other Attributes, yet was neceſſary to be premiſed both for the better underſtanding of the Proofs, and for the preventing Miſtakes perhaps in ſome vulgar Underſtandings, as alſo conducing to the bringing forth ſomething towards the State of this Queſtion, as it particularly concerneth Mercy, viz. this,

That this Attribute of Merciful is ſaid to be NATURAL to GOD, or the Nature of God; becauſe it directly ſignifies what is in God's Nature, truly anſwerable thereunto: And that God's Intent in proclaiming himſelf Merciful, &c. is to declare what properly himſelf is, and his Godhead is.

II. The ſecond explanatory Propoſition is, That there are two Ranks of theſe Attributes, as our Divines, and the Attributes themſelves (as in the Scriptures they are related) ſpeak them to be.

1. The firſt is of ſuch as are utterly incommunicable unto us Creatures, nor have they any Reſpect unto the Creatures; ſuch are God's Infinity, Simplicity, Immenſity.

2. There are thoſe that are communicable to us, that is, in the Shadow and Likeneſs of them, as Wiſdom, Holineſs, Truth, Goodneſs, Mercy; and ſuch as have a Reſpect unto the Creature, as Power, which is ſeen in creating and governing the Creatures; and Goodneſs likewiſe, which reſpects a Communication of Good unto the Creature, whereof Grace and Mercy are eminent Branches, and to be ſure do reſpect the Creature only; for God is not merciful to himſelf. The Lord is good, and his Mercy endureth for ever, was the ſolemn ſet Song in the Temple, wherewith to praiſe the Lord. And this Communicableneſs of ſome that are God's eſſential Properties, is evinc'd by that Speech, He makes us Partakers of his Holineſs, Heb. 12. 10. And in like manner it holds of his Wiſdom, Truth, Goodneſs, Mercy, Kindneſs, Long-ſuffering, &c. in that theſe are ſtiled the Image of God, that is, of what is in God, as the original Pattern, πϱοτότυπον. Now becauſe the Attributes of this latter Rank are in a Shadow communicable to the Creature, and have a Reſpect unto the Creature, &c. therefore theſe Men do confound theſe kind of Attributes, at leaſt ſome of them, (as they pleaſe to except) with thoſe that are but metaphorically attributed to God, and are apparently but borrowed from what is really in the Creatures, and attributed unto God. And they do utterly deny theſe are firſt really and eſſentially in God, but only the Image and Shadow of them communicated to us, as hath been ſaid, whilſt yet they acknowledg thoſe of the firſt Rank to be eſſentially in God. But for the Confirmation that the ſecond Rank communicated, &c. are no leſs eſſentially his Divine Nature than the firſt, I ſhall alledg but two Arguments.

1*ſt.* The firſt is out of 2 Pet. 1. 4. where we are ſaid to be Partakers of the Divine Nature: whereby either, 1. The Divine Nature or Godhead it ſelf is intended: And ſo we are ſaid to be Partakers of it in this juſt Senſe, by way of Communion with the Godhead in the three Perſons, who becoming our God, gives up himſelf, and all the Perfections that are in him unto us, to be enjoyed by us; and ſo either here or hereafter we are to be filled with all the Fulneſs of God; not bodily, (or by perſonal Union, as Chriſt, Col. 2. 9.) but in the objective Communications thereof, for our eternal Happineſs. And if this be underſtood, (as many do underſtand it) we have his Godhead directly and immediately termed his Divine Nature, which yields an additional Confirmation to what was affirmed in the former Explication. Or, 2. By Divine Nature there is meant, that Deiformitas, (as the Antients call'd it) that is, the Image of God, or a Conformity unto God in us, which is the more common Opinion, and ſo underſtood, it falls in to be a Proof of the Aſſertion of this ſecond Explication: for therein three things are neceſſarily imported; 1. That there are in God ſuch Perfections, as whereof we in the Likeneſs of them are Participants; and ſo that that whole Set and Sort of communicable Perfections in God are intended, and are expreſly termed the [Divine Nature], becauſe they are firſt and originally in in him, and then in us. Again, 2. The Image of thoſe Perfections are ſtiled the Divine Nature in us, as being the Imitation of his; and that not only in reſpect of the Reſemblance or Likeneſs which the Graces communicated have to his Perfections, as thoſe we have inherent in us bear the Semblance of thoſe in him. But further, 3. In reſpect that they become a new and divine Nature in us, in our kind, even as his Perfections (thus communicated) are a Nature in him, even a bleſſed and divine Nature. And for their Reſemblance unto him in that very reſpect, they are in common called a divine Nature in both him and us; being firſt true of him, and then in us; as the Apoſtle John in caſe of Love ſpeaks of Chriſt and us. And for that they are a Nature in him as well as in us, therefore the Concluſion is, that theſe communicable Attributes are truly his Divine Nature, as well as the incommunicable. But, 4. There is this Difference betwixt theſe Perfections in God, and thoſe communicated to us, That in us they are but inherent Qualities, which are termed a Nature, becauſe they become as natural in us as any inbred and innate Qualities can be ſaid to be; whereas in God, look as he himſelf is the moſt high God, (Gen. 14. 22. and elſewhere, God moſt High) ſo theſe Perfections are accordingly in him, after a moſt high and tranſcendently ſupreme ſurpaſſing manner incomprehenſible by us; whereof the following Argument is an invincible Evidence.

Arg. 2. Theſe communicable Attributes of Wiſdom, Holineſs, Truth, Goodneſs, Power, &c. are ſo attributed to him, as ſuch as are in him alone: Notwithſtanding that we Men do partake of theſe, and the Angels alſo do far excel us Men in all theſe; thus as wiſe as an Angel of God is the Expreſſion, 2 Sam. 14. 17. and they are ſtiled the holy Angels, and that excel in Strength, Pſal. 103. 20. far above us Men in this Life. Yet God alone retains and challenges the Honour of being only wiſe, Rom. 16. 27. only holy, Rev. 15. 4. only good, Mat. 19. 17. the only true God, Rom. 3. 4. Which Attributions with an only muſt and do neceſſarily import, 1. That this Wiſdom, Holineſs, Goodneſs, Truth and Strength, are in God as God; and that they are of his Divine Eſſence and Nature, which we Creatures are in no wiſe capable of. Our Souls are one thing, namely, Subſtances; our Graces another, namely Accidents; but the Eſſence of God, and his Divine Properties, are but one and the ſame; of which more afterwards. And hence it is that although theſe are communicated to us, yet indeed are but equivocè attributed to the Creatures, and are in them but in a Semblance, even as the Picture of a Man is called a Man. And though becauſe Men aſſumed and impoſed theſe Names firſt, and applied them to Men; and ſeeing ſuch and ſuch Qualities in them, they thereupon gave them the Names of wiſe and merciful, to ſignify thoſe things in a Man, which according to Man, is Wiſdom and Mercy, (and 'twas they that gave theſe Denominations to Men like themſelves, becauſe Men are next and firſt in our View) yet in Truth and Reality the ſole Honour and Glory of theſe Names, thus invented by Men, and applied to Men, are due to God alone. For the true Reality and Subſtance of theſe in the Creature is in God, and Men had the Gifts and Qualifications of them derived from God. And Men having given ſuch and ſuch ſeveral Names unto thoſe Excellencies that are in Men and Angels, calling Man for that little Wiſdom in him, Wiſe; for Holineſs, Holy; yet theſe falling out to be the Likeneſs and Reſemblance of what is in God ſubſtantially, therefore God in ſpeaking of himſelf unto Men, uſeth the ſame Terms and Stile, to ſet out thoſe Glories in himſelf; and this Account the Schoolmen have wiſely given. Seeing then that theſe Attributes that are communicated to the Creatures are as they are in God his Nature, as well as the incommunicable, there are theſe Conſectaries from thence.

Iſta nomina per prius dicuntur de Deo, quam de Creaturis: ſed quantum ad impoſitionem per prius à natis imponuntur Creaturis: (quas prius cognoſcimus.) Aquinas 1 parte, Quæſt. 13. articulo 6. in fine.

The firſt is to ſhew the apparent and yet infinitely vaſt Difference that is between thoſe Attributes which are ſaid to be aſcribed to God after the manner of Man, which have been ſpecified again and again; and thoſe we call communicable to Men, and are in common aſcribed to us, and to God. The Difference is manifeſt; that thoſe after the manner of Man, (as when God is ſaid to grieve, be troubled, his Repentings, &c. of which ſort thoſe Men would perſwade us the Mercies in God to be, and would reduce and bring Mercy in God thereto) are ſuch as are truly, and properly, and originally in the Creature firſt, and then borrowed from the Creature by way of Similitude only, God condeſcending in that Language to ſpeak of himſelf after our Manner,

Hoſ. 11. 8.

Manner, and Weakneſſes, and Paſſions; ſo to make a ſmart and ſenſible Impreſſion upon our dull Souls. But on the clean contrary, theſe communicable Attributes, whereof Mercy is one, are firſt and originally in God, and derived from his Fulneſs; which God vouchſafes to expreſs to us by thoſe Names, which we Men give to the Semblance of them, in us Men, as hath been explained.

Hence, 2. We may likewiſe diſcern how eaſily Men may err from the Right in this Matter: Becauſe Mercy in us Men, in the Sound of it, ſpeaks Weakneſs, and an affectionate Paſſion, as the Conjunct of it; and when ſpoken of God, is expreſs'd by the Sounding of Bowels, &c. and by God's being troubled for us, which is acknowledged to be indeed ſpoken of him, but it is to be underſtood after the manner of Men, becauſe he doth that which merciful Men are wont to do, when their Bowels yearn within them. But yet ſtill Mercy it ſelf, that is the Root of all as it is in God, is another thing: We muſt cut off all ſuch Imperfections, whilſt yet we are helped by them, as we are Men, to conceive how tender his Mercies are towards us. We poor Creatures are apt to drench our Conceptions in what Mercy in the Creature is, and thorow the Tincture and Apprehenſion we have thereof, taken from the Creature, do we look upon the Mercies in God, and ſo conceive of them as if God had borrowed the Denomination of them from us, to expreſs himſelf to us by; and ſo we are apt to think Mercy to be a mere metaphorical Attribute in God. We grant Mercy in us to be analogous to what is in God, but that Mercy in God to be the original Idea, and not metaphorical or ſimilitudinary.

Hence, 3. Let us in our Thoughts about theſe Mercies in God form and caſt our Conceptions in the Mould of this Rule; that though they be in God, yet after an unconceivable manner to us; and that they are in God for the Kind and Being of them, with an infinite Difference; as being in God as God, and in the Creature but as a Creature. And therefore that as far as God's Eſſence and Being tranſcends ours, for kind of Being, ſo far doth Holineſs and Mercy in him exceed the Mercies that are in us, even for kind alſo; as Chriſt in the very Point of Mercy informs us, in ſaying, So ſhall you be the Children of the moſt High, Luke 6. 35, 36. And ſo much higher in Mercy is God than we, for our Comfort, as the Heavens are higher than the Earth, as God himſelf ſpeaks of himſelf, Iſa. 55. 9.

Theſe things forelaid, the true Meaſure of the Deciſion of this Queſtion (if any will dare to make a Queſtion of it) is,

Whether that theſe Attributes, Merciful and Gracious, &c. although in common attributed unto Man, do not yet ſerve, and be not intended by God, as really and fully to expreſs and ſet out to our Faith what a God he is in himſelf, and what his very Nature and inward Diſpoſition, and Inclinations of Soul are, and Affections of Heart, a Root and Principle of merciful Effects; as when he is ſaid to be Holy, Good, Wiſe, True, Strong, Powerful, or the like: which are all communicated to Man, and yet not aſcribed to God after the manner of Men only: as when he is ſaid to be grieved, and pricked at the Heart.

And if any will deny theſe, and ſuch like, to be eſſential Attributes, or expreſſive of the true Nature of God, they muſt affirm that no Attributes, whereof Men partake the Name, are at all ſuch, and that all do ſerve to expreſs but outward Effects merely, and no way inward Diſpoſitions, as the Principle of thoſe Effects in him: And thus propoſed, I ſhall make this one main Argument of the Aſſertion, viz. that Mercy is a parallel Attribute with thoſe other. None dare ſay that he is Holy in his Works, or in reſpect he doth Holy Works, but that he is Holy in his Being, as he is God. The like is to be underſtood of his being Good, Wiſe, Merciful, &c.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

That Mercy and Grace in God are Properties of his Divine Being and Glory. No other Proof alledged but from the Text, Exod. 34. 6, 7.

I Come now to the farther Proofs of this Aſſertion, that Mercy and Grace are Properties of the Divine Nature: And I profeſs to alledg no other (that I may ſhew this Text to be a compleat Abundary of all God's Mercies) than what the Text, either in the Words themſelves, or the Aſpect of them upon what went before, do afford the Heads of, and Foundations for: and I ſhall then call in the Help but of ſuch other Scriptures, which as Volunteers willingly offer themſelves to aſſiſt in this Cauſe, and verify and confirm each hereof, when firſt extracted out of the Word.

The Point to be proved is, That Mercy and Grace are glorious Properties of the Divine Being or Nature.

Arg. 1. The firſt Argument is drawn from the true Reference and ſtrict Correſpondency this Proclamation of God, Merciful, &c. holds with the foregone Tranſactions in the Chapter before, Exod. 33. which lead on to it, which were Moſes's Requeſt, God's Anſwer and Promiſe unto his Requeſt; and here in my Text, God's Performance according to his Promiſe. Theſe three are correſpondent one to the other. Obſerve we then, 1*ſt*. What it was Moſas deſired of God. And, 2*dly*. What God promiſed to gratify him in. And, 3*dly*. The thing which God did punctually perform. And in my beginning with this firſt, I ſhall but keep to that Method generally obſerved for the opening of a Text, in diſcovering its Occaſion, Coherence; and yet withal prove my Aſſertion at once. In the 33*d* Chapter Moſes had deſired of God, that he would ſhew him his Face and Glory; that is, his divine Eſſence immediately, or his eſſential Glory as it is in himſelf. This Moſes aſpired unto, ver. 18. I beſeech thee, ſhew me thy Glory: but God tells him, that this ſeeing his Face, or the immediate Viſion of his Eſſence or Being, none is capable of, and live, ver. 20. which yet leaves a Room for Hope, that the Frailties of this Life being removed, a Man may ſee God's Face in that other Life. But yet in lieu thereof, God, to gratify him, profeſſes his gracious Reſolution to grant the Privilege as far as was poſſible for any mere Man to partake of it and live; and to manifeſt his foreſaid Face and Glory, and his being God, as far as was expreſſible, and might be repreſented unto Man, and he live, in theſe Words: ver. 19. And he ſaid, I will make all my Goodneſs paſs before thee; and I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee: and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will ſhew Mercy on whom I will ſhew Mercy. And the beſt Interpretation of this is that which I find in Oleaſter, who paraphraſing thoſe Words of God's, [all my Good] that is my ſelf, (ſays he) in whom is all that is good or excellent, or a Perfection ſhall paſs before thee, and be made known by Voice ſignifying it; I will proclaim my Name, &c. or by a Viſion of his, ver. 23. Thou ſhalt ſee my Back-parts; repreſenting it. And you heard how the Names or Attributes of God do ſignify truly and properly what is really the Nature of God. So then God's eſſential Divine Perfections are intended and promiſed by God, to be ſeen and proclaimed by ſuch Characters of Words; or a Name and Attributes, as far as was poſſible, thoſe Perfections in himſelf to be by Words expreſs'd; yet ſo, as ſtill theſe Words ſhould be ſuch as ſhould repreſent what was in himſelf, or the Divine Nature, in Truth and Reality anſwering thereunto, as in my Explication premiſed, chap. 6. I have ſhewn.

Ego tranſire faciam omne meum bonum, id eſt, meipſum; in quo ſunt omnia bona quæ coram te explicabuntur voce: Clamabo nomen Domini. Oleaſter in verba.

From whence I argue, that if theſe firſt and chief Attributes proclaimed, viz. Jehovah, merciful, gracious, long-ſuffering, much in Goodneſs and Truth, had not ſerved to ſignify that eſſential Goodneſs which was in himſelf; or if there had not been that Glory eſſentially in himſelf, which theſe Names were intended to ſignify, then God had neither gratified Moſes to the utmoſt he was capacitated for, nor anſwered his Deſire to ſee his Glory, as far as he was capable to ſee it, and live. For that there are ſome ſuch other Names and Attributes of his in Scripture, which do expreſs his Nature and Eſſence, all do, and muſt acknowledg, as Wiſdom, Holineſs, &c. which are not here expreſſed. And therefore if he doth it not in theſe

the Efficient Cauſe, For thou art a gracious and merciful God. 2. There's the Effects of that Mercy, Thou therefore forſookeſt them not. And, 3. There is the ſame Mercy in his Nature, and ſet out as the final Cauſe moving him thereunto, for thy great Mercies ſake.

By David's Application of the words of my Text, I ſhewed in the fore-going Chapter how David rehearſing firſt theſe four Attributes (appertaining to Mercy) word for word, hath likewiſe by Name cited Moſes, as out of whoſe Writings he had them; and his Method there is accordingly the ſame with this we have ſhewn was that of Moſes: Firſt abſtractly to recite thoſe Attributes as the Principles in him and the Cauſe, Pſal. 103. 8. The Lord is merciful and gracious, ſlow to Anger and plenteous in Mercy: And then to bring in many of the outward Effects of that Mercy, ver. 9, 10. He will not always chide, neither will he keep his Anger for ever. Ver. 10. He hath not dealt with us after our Sins; nor rewarded us according to our Iniquities. And amongſt others he introduceth that of pardoning Iniquity, &c. ver. 12. As far as the Eaſt is from the Weſt, ſo far hath he removed our Tranſgreſſions from us.

Elſewhere and in other Scriptures we find the ſame; and indeed other Scriptures that ſpeak about the Mercies of God ſpeak but according to God's Intent in theſe words, they being Derivatives all from this. Now when in Pſal. 78. 38. 'tis ſaid, he being full of Compaſſion forgave their Iniquities, he plainly aſſigns the Mercifulneſs in God to have been the Cauſe of his forgiving them, and therefore Mercy is moſt properly aſcribed to God, and is in God: And this Speech of his there is but explicatory of theſe words here in the Text. In like manner in Pſal. 86. after he had ſo earneſtly ſought for Mercy at God's Hands, (as preſerve my Soul, ſave thy Servant, v. 2. be merciful to me, v. 3.) he foundeth all his Petitions on this, For thou art good and ready to forgive; plenteous in Mercy unto all them that call upon thee. He ſupplicates his good and merciful Nature to move himſelf to put forth theſe Acts of Mercy towards him. Likewiſe Nehemiah, Chap. 9. 31. giving an account of God's gracious dealings with that People notwithſtanding their Sins, Neverthele ſs (ſaith he) thou didſt not forſake them, for thou art a gracious and merciful God. That Particle [for] in this and thoſe other places, doth undeniably teſtify that God being himſelf truly and properly merciful, from thence and according thereunto it is that he acteth graciouſly and compaſſionately towards us, as moved by and from a true Principle and Diſpoſition in himſelf. O how perfectly contrary are theſe profeſſed Dictates of the Holy Ghoſt unto what ſome would elevate and dilute this Attribute unto, viz. That he is only ſaid to be gracious and merciful, &c. for or becauſe he doth merciful things; whereas the Scripture-Stile all along (you ſee) is, he doth merciful Works, [for] he is gracious and merciful.

Cauſa attribuitur ejus miſericordiæ, quæ naturalitèr in ipſo eſt. Cal. in verba.

Yea further, to confirm this, it is ſo remote that God ſhould be ſtiled merciful in relation to his Works of Mercy, that his Works of Mercy have their Denomination or Name of Mercies (as frequently they have in the Scriptures, and in common uſe of Speech) given them from that proper ſpecial Relation they owe and bear unto the Mercy that is in God, from whence they do proceed. And ſo they are not ſtiled Mercies becauſe they reſpect us, or our Needs, the Objects of them, but in reſpect to the merciful God who is the original Subject in whom Mercy is, and he the Father and Fountain of them. And as the Effect ordinarily bears the Name of its proper Cauſe, as the Child of the Father; ſo thoſe Mercies bear their Name of and from his Mercy, who is more eminently ſtiled the Father of them than of any other his Works wrought by other Attributes. And that which confirms this Notion is, that in the caſe of other Attributes, their proper Works or Effects have their Denomination from that Attribute which is their Cauſe, wherefore ſo in this. Thus Pſal. 119. 137, 138. Righteous art thou, O Lord, and upright are thy Judgments. Thy Teſtimonies that thou haſt commanded, are righteous and very faithful. There they are term'd righteous and faithful Judgments, as proceeding from his being a righteous and faithful God, and as from whoſe Righteouſneſs they proceed. In like manner alſo the Works of his Grace in us are term'd Grace, Grace freely given, being the free Impreſſions and Fruits of the Grace that is in himſelf. And indeed in that Elogium of him that he is the Father of Mercies, 2 Cor. 1. 3. look as the word [of Mercies] οἰκτιρμῶν, doth import Mercies beſtowed, ſo Father of thoſe Mercies is ſpoken of God to a like purpoſe; as when the Sun is ſaid to be the Father of Lights (for unto unto the Sun is that Alluſion of God in the Apoſtle, Jam. 1. 17.) the meaning is, that the Sun hath firſt all Light originally ſeated in it ſelf, and ſo communicates all thoſe Lights and Glory with which the Moon, Stars, and Air are enlightned. Looking-glaſſes are array'd and do borrow from that Sun, and yet themſelves are called Lights, but how? only by Participation from it the original Light. And in the ſame reſpect is God the Father of Mercies, as he is alſo entitled the Father of Glory, in Epheſ. 1. 17. which in like manner notes, 1ſt. That he is a glorious God in himſelf: The God of Glory, Acts 7. 2. having an eſſential Glory abiding in him as Light doth in the Sun. And then, 2dly. That he diſperſeth Glory to his Saints and Angels, as the Father of all their Glory. And in and for the ſame reaſon he is magnified to be the Fountain of Life, Pſal. 36. 10. 1. Becauſe he is the Living God, and hath Life in himſelf, as a Fountain hath Water firſt in it ſelf: And, 2. That from thence he derives Life to others in leſſer Streams, and anſwerably in the words of the Apoſtle Paul, 2 Cor. 1. 3. he is ſtiled Merciful, and the Father of Mercies; theſe being the Off-ſpring of his Mercy, do bear the Name of Mercy from God the Father of them.

As in that Speech, (to name but one Inſtance) I am leſs (ſays Jacob) than the leaſt of all thy Mercies. Leſs in worth than this Staff, or any other Mercy beſtowed.

See Druſius in locum.

It hath been ſufficiently by all thoſe foregoing Paſſages of Scripture proved, that all outward Effects of Mercy are aſcribed unto Mercy, an Attribute of God, as their Cauſe and Principle. I ſhall ſhut up this Argument with a further Proof of this Inference, That therefore there is an inward Principle of Mercy in God himſelf, which is that Cauſe.

1. Firſt in Reaſon: If the Mercies of God be the Cauſe, they muſt have a real Being and Exiſtence afore all outward Effects of Mercy, and a greater than the Effects, for it produceth them: And in whom or in what can that Mercy have an Exiſtence or Being but in God himſelf, whoſe Mercy alone and greatneſs of Mercy too it is ſaid to be? It is the Mercy of God to which thoſe Effects are attributed, and therefore it's in God. And certainly did thoſe merciful Effects proceed from other Principles in God more eminently than from Mercy, he would never give the Honour away from them, and cry up his Mercy ſo much as the principal Cauſe: He would not give the Honour to it, if it were but a made Attribute, and not real and genuine. And if that which I before laid at the entrance be true, (as it is) viz. that genuine Attributes have their proper Effects attributed to them, in relation to which they are diſtinguiſhed one from another as to our Conceptions of them: It muſt then hold, that if all merciful Effects are ſet over by the Scriptures unto the Mercy of God as their proper Cauſe (as hath been ſhewed); then Mercy it ſelf alſo is and muſt be as genuine and eſſential an Attribute as any of the other. I hope the ſame Plea for other Attributes in this Cauſe will be admitted and allowed in Mercy's behalf; as for inſtance, when it is ſaid, the Lord is good, and doth good, Pſal. 119. 68. here doing good, being the Effect of his being good, and attributed thereunto as its proper Cauſe, doth invincibly argue his being good to be an eſſential Attribute in him, &c. Thus in like manner when it is ſaid, God being merciful forgave their Iniquities (which is the higheſt Act of Mercy) and divers others like to this that have been alledged, doth it not as aloud ſpeak that God being firſt merciful in himſelf, doth out of that merciful Diſpoſition pardon and forgive Sins? Again, when it is ſaid, The Righteous Lord loveth Righteouſneſs, Pſal. 11. 7. hereby is imported that God firſt is himſelf righteous, which Righteouſneſs in this place, is that Integrity, Rectitude, and Uprightneſs of his Nature, whereby he is wholly addicted, and diſpoſed, and inclined unto Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, and then thence a ſutable Affection flows, he loveth Righteouſneſs. Then ſurely on this other hand, when it is ſaid, God is merciful, and delighteth in Mercy; that Affection of Delight ought to be interpreted to ariſe from an innate Propitiouſneſs unto merciful Acts, as proceeding from a merciful Inclination and Diſpoſition of Heart, unto which to ſhew Mercy is ſo naturally agreeable, as he delights in it; and therefore it is ſaid, that above all he is known by it, that is, known how merciful in himſelf he is, even as when 'tis ſaid he is known to be a juſt God by the Judgments that he executes, Pſal. 9. 16.

And indeed thoſe and ſuch like Speeches up and down the Scriptures, Shew us thy Mercy, O Lord, Pſal. 85. 7. [thy Mercy] that is, which is in thee, in thy Heart and Nature, lying of it ſelf hid, and latent there, unleſs and until thou putteſt it forth in Mercies towards us. And in Pſal. 17. 7. Shew thy wonderful Loving-kindneſs; or, as others read it, mirifica miſericordiam tuam, make wonderful thy Mercy: [Thy Mercy]

which is ſo wonderful in it ſelf, and as it is in Thee; therefore ſhew it and give Demonſtration of it by wonderful Effects: To which correſponds that of Pſal. 111. 3, 4. His Work is honourable and glorious; and his Righteouſneſs endureth for ever. He hath made his wonderful Works to be remembred: the Lord is gracious and full of Compaſſion. As alſo that in Epheſ. 2. 7. to ſhew outwardly the exceeding Riches of his Grace, (namely within himſelf): And many the like Phraſes (I ſay) do evidence the Point in hand. For ſo in the caſe of other Attributes it is acknowledged, that to prove them to be eſſential ſuch Expreſſions do ſerve; as when of God's Truth and Uprightneſs it is ſaid, Pſal. 92. 15. To ſhew the Lord is upright, and there is no Righteouſneſs in him. So of his Power, to make his Power known, Rom. 9. 22. To ſhew himſelf ſtrong, 2 Chron. 16. 9. And this for the third Argument fetch'd from the relation of Mercy in God as the Cauſe, and Mercies as the Effects.

Arg. 4. That which gives a farther Addition of Strength unto the foregoing Argument, and will withal grow up to a new one, is, That God hath placed and ranked this of MERCIFUL amongst other Attributes, which muſt be acknowledged to be of his Eſſence, and to expreſs what his Nature is. And Merciful being ſeated on this Royal Throne together with them, without any Character of difference from them, yea with the firſt of them, and with an height of greater Eminency in ſome reſpects; how ſhall we otherwiſe underſtand it then, that it is an Attribute of the ſame kind, of equal Rank and Dignity, and of as high an Alliance to the Divine Nature as they are of?

Here are in the Text two Attributes eſpecially, or indeed four, which God hath ſeated on this high Bench; and hath ſet Merciful in equal Royal State with them, next Himſelf, Jehovah, God. Firſt, The two; the one ſitting on the Right-hand, the other on the Left of Merciful plac'd in the midſt, as on the Throne between them. 1. STRENGTH, or Power, to aſſiſt and ſtrengthen the Hands of it; אל El indifferently ſignifies either ſtrong, or God; (as is well known) I take both, as Junius throughout the whole Old Teſtament doth, every where tranſlating it, the ſtrong God. 2. There is on the Left Grace, to quicken Mercy in all its Actings; ſo read the words thus, God, the Strong, Merciful, Gracious. 3. Unto which two are added Goodneſs or Kindneſs. And, 4. Truth. I might reckon in Long-ſuffering as a fifth; but it is ſo apparently a Sprig of Mercy, or rather indeed, but Mercy it ſelf ſtretch'd out at length, or continued, (as Waiting is but Faith continued) that therefore I ſhut up that into Mercy, and mention it not here as diſtinct.

Note, That ſome tranſlate that word Goodneſs, others Kindneſs.

But I do take in the other two, abundant in Goodneſs, and Truth, as diſtinct, and as importing inherent Principles in God of Goodneſs and Truth, as in which his Nature doth abound: and altho in our Engliſh the word abundant would ſeem to carry the ſound or report more toward actual Kindneſs, and to God's Performance of Truth; yet the original word it ſelf, and as it is by others tranſlated, ſignifies as well MUCH, Ample, Large, PLENTEOUS in Goodneſs and Truth; and is by our own Tranſlators, in Pſal. 103. 9. render'd plenteous in Mercy: And theſe words much, plenteous, &c. do in their Connotation ſtrike deeper, and reach unto the bottom, and expreſs the Mind and Treaſury in God's Heart and Nature, as it is ſtored with a Plenteouſneſs in all Goodneſs and Truth: And how out of that infinite Riches it is, that in the outward Diſpenſation he ſo abounds in Goodneſs and Truth. And that it is thus intended is undeniable; for, as the Lord is firſt good in himſelf, and out of that Goodneſs doth good, as in Pſal. 119. 68. And like as he is eſſential Truth firſt, who cannot lie, Tit. 1. 2. i. e. his Nature is Truth; and then from out of that Nature it is that having ſpoken once the word, he performeth Truth; ſo for the ſame reaſon the Ground why he is ſo much and ſo abundant in Goodneſs and Truth diſpenſatorily or in actual Execution, muſt be, that he is much in Goodneſs and Truth firſt in himſelf eſſentially: That ſuch exceeding Abundance in the one, is from the Superabundancy of the other; and the reaſon is, becauſe the Degrees of much Kindneſs and Goodneſs in outward Effects, do as much depend and hold on the Plenteouſneſs of each of them in his Nature, as ſimply his doing good in the leaſt degree, doth upon his being good, or no good at all would be done. The abounding therefore of Goodneſs and Truth in his Nature, muſt fundamentally be here underſtood as the Spring, the overflowing of which cauſeth thoſe high Floods of each in his Actings and Diſpenſations. And Goodneſs and Kindneſs in any one (who is ſuch) do moſt genuinely expreſs Nature in him, and what is natural to him, ſince by way of Eminency we give ſuch Diſpoſitions the Stile of good Nature. And ſo ſeeing

Verus in naturâ, verax in ſermone: ſo in reſpect of Strength, he is ἰσχυρὸς οὐσιωδῶς, καὶ ἐνεργητικῶς.

Goodneſs and Kindneſs are thus attributed to God, they ſpeak Nature in him alſo, or if you will the Goodneſs of his Nature, (as with Reverence I may ſpeak) the moſt of any Attributes.

Upon theſe fore-mentioned accounts I may juſtly reckon upon four Compeers which Mercy here hath, and is every way equal with them, and with each of which I might vie on Mercy's ſide, and plead it to be as natural as any of them. I reaſon from them now as they are placed all together as fixed Stars, all of them in this one glorious Conſtellation, declaring the Glory of God, and of the like Brightneſs and equal Magnitude; they are all merciful, and all alike formed up and caſt in one and the ſame Mould, that is, one and the ſame uniform kind of Speech, and under that attributed alike to God, viz. ſuch a Form as was in the foregone Argument, ſaid to be denoting inward innate inherent Diſpoſitions, which the four here for certain do (under ſuch a form) denote, and are all four in themſelves ſuch. And it is very hard to think and judg, that one alone of Merciful uttered in the ſame Tenor, ſhould be otherwiſe; that that alone ſhould be adventitious. God is ſaid to be good, and true, and the ſtrong God, from that innate Strength, Goodneſs and Truth that is in himſelf, and not only from his doing good, &c. And why ought we not as well conceive him to be merciful (as it is here placed amongſt theſe other) from an inherent inward merciful Diſpoſition in himſelf, and not in relation only to the merciful Effects he doth, and every day brings forth? And God himſelf (who beſt knows himſelf, and how to ſpeak of himſelf) having put no Character of Difference, who ſhall dare to make a Difference? So vaſt a Difference, as to affirm, that merciful is but a made, artificial Attribute, raiſed up meerly from his outward Works of Mercy, as his Stile of being the Creator is from the Works of his Creation, without which he had not had the actual Glory of that Title; whenas thoſe other that ſit round about it here, have the Honour (de jure, and of right) to be acknowledged abſolutely, and de ſe, to be and to have been in him, whether he had ever acted according to them yea or not. Pſal. 19.

And further, there may be added unto this that which I inſerted, that merciful holds this its rank and place amongſt them, with ſo great an Eminency. Search this and other Scriptures; firſt, here in this it is placed with the firſt; and by Moſes made the great Dominator, together with Power, which two he alone ſupplicates whilſt he alledgeth theſe words, Numb. 14. 17, 18, 19. they two being as eminently ſet up in the words. And, 2. Elſewhere the Scripture gives and beſtows a richer and larger Coat of Arms upon Mercy, than on any other Attribute that is not akin to this. One word uſually ſerves to expreſs any other Attribute; but what a multiplication and heaping up of words frequently is there to emblaſon the Glory of this? In the Text here, there is merciful, gracious, long-ſuffering, plenteous in Goodneſs; which are in a manner all but various Characters of Mercy, and are much the ſame with Mercy. However (as we ſay) they are of neareſt Kindred to it, and are therefore ſingled out and ſever'd from all the reſt of the words that follow in the Text, by the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 103. 9.

Laſtly, the Scripture loads Mercy in God with Titles of Honour, and ſuperadded Epithets of Greatneſs, Riches, Glory, Plenteouſneſs, Fulneſs, Abundance, Multitude, Variety, Manifold, Eternity, Everlaſtingneſs, Unchangeableneſs, and what not? The like ſuper-Attributions might be obſerv'd given to the outward Effects of it, above what to the Effects of other Attributes. It would be therefore yet more ſtrange, and beyond a poſſibility of Imagination, that this ſo magnified an Attribute extolled (as we ſay) to the Heavens, yea above the Heavens, yea great above, and ſo far above the Heavens, ſhould in the end be but a ſimilitudinary Metaphorical Attribute, Pſal. 108. 4. ex ſimilitudine effectus, and after the manner of Men only, and ſo to have in compariſon but the ſhadow of an Attribute; but in reality and truth infinitely below all other.

But there is in other Scriptures that which brings in yet new and farther Confirmation to this fourth Argument, in that we find Mercy not only naturally growing up in one Bunch or Cluſter thus with theſe four, (as in this one place) but that traverſing the large Garden of the Scriptures, we may beſides frequently meet with each of thoſe and Mercy apart, and yet ſometimes join'd and ſprouting fourth, as two Flowers growing upon one Sprig; that is, you may up and down eſpy Mercy and

and Power, and they two alone joined together in one Stalk, then Grace and Mercy ſingly and alone on another: The like may be obſerv'd of Mercy and Goodneſs, as alſo of Mercy and Truth in other Scriptures, and thus Mercy and they are Σύμφυτοι; ſo that if we acknowledg any of theſe four, eſpecially if we own all of them to be natural Attributes in the Godhead, we cannot but own Mercy to be ſo too; for we find both altogether with Mercy (as here), and each (elſewhere) to grow alike as a natural Branch together with another, which to be ſure is natural, that it muſt be too hard to think that in ſo multiplied a Variation Mercy ſhould ſtill be but as an Ingrafture by Art, and ſhould not naturally grow out of one and the ſame Stock of the Divine Nature.

In this Argument it holds that both juncta & ſingula juvant; we have argued in general from the Conjunction of all together, and now we ſhall argue particularly from the ſingular and apart Conſtellation of each with Mercy: And as the Conjunction of all, ſo the ſingular Conſtellation of each with Mercy ſo often will evidence it to be a fixed Star indeed in this Firmament.

1. Mercy and Power, (the two firſt in the Text) are ſingly paired by Moſes when he hath occaſion to alledg theſe, God's own words, Numb. 14. Let the Power of my Lord be great, v. 17. and Pardon join'd with it alſo, The Lord great in Mercy, pardon according to the greatneſs of thy Mercy. He pairs theſe two and that for Greatneſs alike equally, then are they Pairs in Kind and Eminency, which is the Particular we are arguing: Yea, and of the two he greatens Mercy, for Mercy hath the Epithet great twice given it; the Lord of great Mercy, v. 18. and again, according to the Greatneſs of thy Mercy, v. 19. and Greatneſs in the latter is in the Abſtract given, but to Power this Title is given but once. The Prophet David alſo ſets theſe two alone together as moſt eminent in God, Pſal. 62. 11, 12. Power belongs to God: Alſo unto thee, O God, belongeth Mercy. Look how Power is God's (as ſome read it) or belongs to him, and is with him; ſo and in like reſpects Mercy is God's, and is with him; there is no difference at all put, and that's enough, for Power is God's in that tranſcendent manner that it eſſentially belongs to him. And whereas Power to be ſuch in him might diſcourage, he therefore (for his own Comfort, and of God's People) adds, To thee [alſo] Mercy belongeth, ſo to poiſe and ballance it; which if Mercy were not every way equal to it, it would no ways poiſe his Power, and ſo not have relieved Souls that tremble at the Power of the great and mighty dreadful God, as Nehem. 9. where Merciful is alſo join'd. And this is not the firſt time they have been thus paired as by David; for David himſelf adds, For God hath ſpoken once, and twice have I heard THIS: It is David's Preface to thoſe former words. And what will you ſay if this Citation of his refers us, and brings us back again to thoſe very words firſt of God to Moſes in my Text, and then of Moſes to God in this Numb. 14. as that which from both he had heard of twice? Sure I am I find no reference to any other, or any ſenſe given by Interpreters more probable, or ſo proper. Now that POWER is an eſſential Attribute of the Divine Being, there was none that ever yet denied it, it being ſo expreſly entitled his eternal Power and Godhead, Rom. 1. 20. and therefore no leſs muſt its Compeer Mercy be.

A ſecond pair is Mercy and Grace, here placed next to merciful [gracious]: you find theſe two alone ſingled out, and paired as the two great Letters of his Name are, tho many more are in it. Firſt, when God promiſed to Moſes to proclaim this his Name, he ſpecifies but theſe two only, Exod. 33. 19. I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee; and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will ſhew Mercy on whom I will ſhew Mercy. And how often elſewhere do you meet with theſe two in like ſingle Couples? I need not abound in Inſtances they are ſo many, Pſal. 145. 8. The Lord is gracious and great in Mercy; moreover, Pſal. 116. 5. before cited. Likewiſe Neh. 9. 31. Nevertheleſs for thy great Mercy's ſake, thou didſt not utterly conſume them, nor forſake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

Now beſides that as to the things themſelves, Grace and Mercy are ſubſtantially one, (for Grace conſidered in its Diſtinction from Mercy, what is it but Love or Favour ſimply conſidered with a Connotation of freeneſs in God, as not being obliged by any worth in the Creature why he ſhould be gracious?) the very Definition of Grace given by God himſelf, is a Love that's free, and that loveth freely. Thus Hoſ. 14. Receive us graciouſly, prays the Church, ver. 2. (and 'twas God that put thoſe words into her Mouth, as in the ſame Verſe) and God anſwers, I will love them freely, v. 4. ſo explaining it. And that Love in God is the Root and Ground of Mercy, and Mercy but Love ampliated, or ſtretched out and enlarged to thoſe he loves when they be in Miſery, I ſhall have a fairer occaſion to demonſtrate: And therefore that if Love and Grace be an eſſential Principle in God, then Mercy muſt needs be alſo. Beſides this way of Proof (which I now wave) I inſiſt only upon this at preſent, as that which is proper to what is now afore me, viz. that Grace and Mercy are Compeers and Equals in every reſpect; and that therefore if gracious be an eſſential Attribute, then merciful. Now that Grace is ſuch, I urge this one Argument, That God accounts his being gracious as the height and top of his Glory, yea and his being merciful to be ſo too; give me leave to put a weight upon this. When in general it is ſaid of God (as often) that he is a glorious God, that which this carries to every Underſtanding is, that an Infinity of ſurpaſſing Glory is in himſelf, and proper to him as God, and eſſential to him, which Glory it is required of us to glorify. In like manner when in particular it is ſaid of any Attribute, that it is his Glory, and which we are alſo called upon to glorify him for in the Manifeſtation of it to us; there is neceſſarily withal imported therein an eſſential Glory which is the Root whence that Manifeſtation proceedeth, and which is therefore to be glorified by us, the proper Glory of that particular Attribute being the end of that Manifeſtation: As when either in ſpecial it is ſaid of Grace, (as Epheſ. 1. 6.) To the Praiſe of the Glory of his Grace; it is no leſs nor no other than when in general it is ſaid, That we ſhould be to the Praiſe of his Glory. Surely as in the latter Speech, v. 12. To the Praiſe of his Glory; by his Glory to be praiſed is meant all the Attributes, as Power, Wiſdom, &c. the Reſult and Crown of all which is his Glory, that are the Cauſes of, and are manifeſted in our Salvation, all which, both the Attributes and this Glory of them, muſt be acknowledged to be eſſential, and that anſwerably there is an eſſential Glory of them in himſelf, which was and had been in him altho he had never made any outward Manifeſtation at all thereof. So in the former Speech, v. 6. his particular Inſtance [the Glory of his Grace] muſt neceſſarily be underſtood, that his Grace is glorious with the ſame kind of eſſential Glory proper to it as the other; and to import this it is ſtiled the Glory of his Grace. Some would have it, that by the Glory of his Grace to be praiſed, ſhould immediately and directly be meant the glorious Manifeſtation of his Grace, yet ſtill there muſt be imported therewith and thereby an eſſential Glory that is the Glory manifeſted: And it muſt needs be ſo, for all Manifeſtation is but of what is and hath being as the Object of that Manifeſtation, ſo as ſtill we muſt reſolve all into an eſſential Glory that is at the bottom, and is the Foundation: Yea and that intrinſical Glory of any Attribute is that which is the ultimate Object of our Praiſe when we are called upon to glorify it, the fartheſt Mark, the Terminus which we tranſmit our glorifying of God in that reſpect unto, as that which we aim to praiſe and glorify, as indeed it is here expreſſed, To the Praiſe of the Glory of his Grace. The Aſpirements, and holy Aims and Reachings of Godly Souls in their giving Glory to God, reſt not in praiſing or in giving Glory to the Manifeſtation of his Glory altho that be never ſo glorious, but by means and upon occaſion thereof are carried out to, and terminate in his eſſential Glory it ſelf, as that which is in their Aims to give Glory to. And indeed thereby only it is fulfilled, That he that glorieth, glorieth in the Lord, as the Apoſtle and Prophet calls us to do, whilſt both ſpeak of Mercy manifeſted. 1 Cor. 1. 31. Jer. 9. 24. And indeed either none of thoſe Attributes of Wiſdom, Power, &c. ſhewn in our Salvation, that wear and have the Title of his Glory ſtampt upon them, are eſſential to him, or this of Grace alſo muſt be ſo which is ſtiled his Glory, κατ᾽ ἐξοχὴν, by way of Eminency and Singularity. The truth of theſe things that one place, Rom. 9. 22. declares, That he might make known the Riches of his Glory on the Veſſels of Mercy. Here is at firſt a Manifeſtation of Glory in thoſe words, make known, and withal a Riches of his Glory which is manifeſt, whereby it is evident that Glory muſt needs be underſtood to be different from that Manifeſtation, be it never ſo glorious; for it is the thing that is manifeſted, and what can that be other than thoſe Riches of Glory which he poſſeſſeth in himſelf, and makes known by Communications and Manifeſtations thereof on his Saints, as it follows there; like as in that Speech in the Verſe afore, v. 22. which in Coherence is parallel to and yokes with this, God willing to make his Power known: that is, his Power being an intrinſical eſſential Attribute in himſelf, he manifeſts it, and makes it known: the like holds of his Glory ſpoken of here. And the cloſe of this is, that thoſe Riches of Glory there do prove to be the Glory of his Grace and Mercy in a ſpecial manner intended, and ſo bear the Name of Glory by way of Eminency. This Æſtius and others have obſerv'd, and my Ground why ſpecially Mercy is intended, is, becauſe the Saints, who are the Veſſels or Receptacles or Subjects unto whom theſe Riches, &c. are to be communicated and manifeſted in them, are in reſpect unto this ſtiled Veſſels of Mercy. The Riches of the Glory of Mercy then are thoſe which are the principal Contributors, altho the Glory of all other Attributes do likewiſe empty their Streams into the ſame Veſſels to fill them with Glory. So then Mercy ſtands every way equal with Grace (an eſſential Attribute) and that in Glory, yea in Riches of Glory, and therefore is of as high an Alliance to God as that is: They are every way rated alike in God's Books, the Scriptures; and God who is an equal Prizer and Valuer, doth not ſet a deeper Eſtimation or Value than the real Worth doth bear. As then I ſhewed afore Mercy and Power were paired as equal for Greatneſs, ſo Mercy and Grace we find to be Equals: Theſe two are for Eſtate and Riches equal, and are as Peers for Glory and Honour too, and they are both alike God's Riches and Glory, by the Valuation of which God ſhews what a rich and glorious God he is in himſelf. I conclude this, as I did the former, who then ſhall dare to ſay to rich Mercy, to Mercy which God accounts his Glory, (when withal he ſhall ſee it placed by God himſelf immediately, and bidden to ſit there by him on the ſame Throne with equal Royalty with other ſo high-born eſſential Attributes of mine) who then ſhall bid and ſay———Thou rich and great and glorious Mercy, come off the Seat thou ſitteſt on, as too high for thee, and ſit thou at the foot-ſtool of all theſe other?

For thoſe other two Attributes Goodneſs and Truth, ſo much having been ſaid of the former two, it is not neceſſary to enlarge on theſe; yet, to compleat this Confirmation, I ſhall add ſome things as to both.

A third Pair is Mercy and Goodneſs, merciful, and much or plenteous in Goodneſs, ſays the Text: where whether Goodneſs imports (as in the general Notion of it) a Communicativeneſs of good things; The Lord is good and doth good, Pſal. 119. 68. it being the innate Property of Goodneſs to be communicative: or whether more ſpecially Kindneſs, Bounty, Benignity be intended, as many tranſlate the word here and elſewhere; however it be taken, it is ſingly paired with Mercy.

1. As to GOODNESS, how many Pſalms do begin with, and ſome alſo do begin and end with The Lord is good, his Mercy endures for ever. I inſtance only in Pſal. 118. whereof both the firſt and laſt Verſes have thoſe words. It was the uſual form of praiſing the Lord, to ſing, the Lord is good, his Mercy endures for ever, Jer. 33. 11. and had been preſcribed unto the Levites, 1 Chron. 16. 41. And tho he is good to all his Creatures, Pſal. 145. yet here 'tis that Goodneſs that extends it ſelf to his Iſrael, as Pſal. 73. 1. which draws forth the Goodneſs in his Nature in the Communications of it to its full length: And that is ſpecially intended in this Text, for 'tis that Goodneſs which brings forth Pardon of Sins, ſaving Mercies which the Text ſpeaks of; which two the Pſalmiſt puts together, Pſal. 86. 5. For thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in Mercy unto all that call upon thee.

2. And as his Goodneſs and Mercy are paired, ſo Kindneſs and Mercy, Titus 3. 4. After that the Kindneſs and Love of God our Saviour toward Man appeared. And Mercy is not far off them, for v. 5. According to his Mercy hath he ſaved us; for indeed they are all but one. And again, Luke 6. 35, 36. He is kind unto the unthankful, and to the evil. Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father alſo is merciful. And to ſhut up this, you have both Kindneſs and Goodneſs join'd and pair'd with Mercy in Pſal. 25. 6, 7. Remember, O Lord, thy tender Mercies, and thy Loving-kindneſſes, for they have been ever of old. Remember not the Sins of my Youth, nor my Tranſgreſſions; according to thy Mercy remember thou me for thy Goodneſs ſake, O Lord. Theſe two import not barely his affording outward Favours, which we call Kindneſs, nor barely a doing Kindneſs, as we uſe to ſay, or God's being good to us in Benefits communicated; but they connotate withal a Root that is in God's Nature, from whence thoſe outward Kindneſſes proceed. The Lord is firſt good in himſelf, and thence and therefore doth good; and in like manner he is of a kind Heart and Nature in himſelf firſt, and thence and therefore is kind to others, even to the evil and unthankful, as Luke 6. 35. and the abundancy of his Goodneſs and Kindneſs in Effects is from the Amplitude and Largeneſs of the Goodneſs and Kindneſs in his own Heart and Nature, as I ſhewed in the beginning of this ſecond Confirmation, and as is evident from the 8*th* Verſe of that 25*th* Pſalm now cited, it immediately following, the Lord is good and upright; which as an eſſential Principle in God, and the Root of that Mercy and Kindneſs which he ſued for, he reſolveth ultimately his Faith into, as Muis hath obſerved. And among Men we uſe by way of Eminency to expreſs Goodneſs in a Perſon by good Nature; and one that is kind in his outward Deportment, we term him one of a kind Heart and Nature. And indeed Kindneſs denotes an inward kind Diſpoſition more principally, and in the firſt Place; even as when the Scripture denominates a Man, a liberal Man, it doth it principally from that noble, free and large Diſpoſition of Liberality in his Spirit, whence liberal Actions proceed, as Iſa. 32. 8. A liberal Man (ſuch in himſelf) deviſeth liberal things: Thus it is in Kindneſs alſo. And in God to whom theſe are thus attributed, it holds much more, Goodneſs is ſo eſſential to him as he alone is to be called Good, as alſo that he alone is Holy, Rev. 15. which evidently imports he as God hath ſuch and ſuch an Holineſs and Goodneſs in him as is proper to him alone, and tranſcendeth that Goodneſs that is in Creatures, that theirs is no Goodneſs in compariſon. And as he was eſſential Holineſs, and ſhould have been ſo for ever, although he never had produced a Work, (who yet is holy in all his Works he doth produce): So he was and had been eſſentially good, altho he never had communicated a good thing to any Creature. And if it be the Nature of Goodneſs to communicate it ſelf, then it is the common Voice of all Mankind, as the common Voice of the Scriptures too, that Goodneſs is the Nature of God. Now Mercy is not only paired therewith, but it is indeed eſſentially all one with it. Mercy is but Bonitas ſummè extenſa, as the School ſpeaks, it is but Goodneſs extendible, an Aptneſs or Readineſs in his Goodneſs to extend it ſelf to Sinners, as well as to communicate good things to others that had not, nor have not ſinned, which by the Creation God did. Mercy is but a Promptitude to communicate ſo much further, viz. to Sinners. Mercy is but Goodneſs with a nevertheleſs, that is, though they are Sinners, as Neh. 9. 31. And indeed as in the Schoolmens right Apprehenſions they are but one and the ſame in God, ſo in the Senſe of the Scriptures alſo. Thus his Mercy to Sinners is expreſly ſtiled his Goodneſs, Rom. 11. 22. Towards thee Goodneſs, &c. which along after in the Chapter doth bear the Name of Mercy, ver. 30, 31, 32. and chap. 12. 1. And again, his Mercy to Sinners is in like manner termed Kindneſs, as expreſly, Luke 6. 35. He is kind to the evil and unthankful. Ver. 36. Be ye therefore merciful as your Father alſo is merciful. To conclude this, Mercy, Goodneſs, Kindneſs, are ſo near a-kin, and of one Stock, that if one be eſſential to God, then muſt the other be alſo.

The laſt Pair are Truth and Mercy: Theſe two are alone thus yoked, one under the Names either of Truth or of Faithfulneſs, the other of Mercy or Loving-kindneſs. And thus you meet with them ſo frequently in ſo many Pſalms as I ſcarce need particularize any, but might refer it either to the Reader's Remembrance, or adventure upon his Advertency thereof, at his but turning over a few Leaves, ſoon to find enough. I will inſtance but in one or two, Is God to be praiſed? The Height of Praiſes is for his Mercy and Truth, Pſal. 108. 3, 4, 5. I will praiſe thee, O Lord, among the People: and I will ſing Praiſes unto thee among the Nations. For thy Mercy is great above the Heavens: and thy Truth reacheth unto the Clouds. Be thou exalted, O God, above the Heavens, and thy Glory above all the Earth. And you have theſe Words over and over in two ſeveral Pſalms, Pſal. 57. 9—11. In Pſal. 108. his Mercy is magnified not only to the Heavens, but as great, above the Heavens: that is, to an Infinity, as that which the Heaven of Heavens do not, cannot contain, as they do not God himſelf. And ſo it is an extolling of Mercy by this, that it is an Infinite, as God himſelf, in whom it is. And that which is tranſlated the Clouds, which his Truth is ſaid to be exalted unto, are indeed the Heavens, as two learned Criticks have with Vehemency contended for. And the 138*th* Pſalm hath not only joined them together for Praiſe, (ver. 2. I will praiſe thy Name for thy Loving-kindneſs and thy Truth) but adds, for thou haſt magnified thy Word (namely, as it ſets forth thoſe two Attributes) above all thy Name. The greateſt part of his Word is taken up either with Promiſes which Loving-kindneſs or Mercy made, or of the Performance of them which Truth effecteth: ſo then theſe two are to be magnified above all his other Properties whatever; which two to celebrate all Nations are ſpecially called upon to praiſe him for, Pſal. 117. 1, 2. which is interpreted to mean both Jews and Gentiles when converted; as the Summary of the Goſpel, Rom. 15. 8, 9. imports, and as Chriſt's Miniſtry in the 40*th* Pſalm (a Pſalm made for Chriſt, if any other, ſee ver. 6, 7, 8.) was foretold, ver. 10. I have not concealed thy Loving-kindneſs, and thy Truth, from the great Congregation. Or is God to be prayed unto for any kind of ſaving Mercies, and the Continuance of them? it follows, ver. 11. of that Pſalm, Withhold not thou thy tender Mercies from me, O Lord: let thy Loving-kindneſs and thy Truth continually preſerve me. I need mention no more, paired we ſee they are equally: and of the two, if either be greater, it is his Mercy, as to whomever, that will attentively conſult thoſe Scriptures, it will appear.

See Piſcator on Pſal. 57. ver. ult. and on Pſal. 36. 6. and Dr. Hammond on Pſ. 57. 10.

See Dr. Hammond Annot. on the 2d Verſe of the 138*th Pſalm*, His Word being here annex'd to Loving-kindneſs and Truth, muſt needs be that Part of his Word to which theſe two are applicable: 1. His Promiſe: The Matter whereof is Loving-kindneſs. 2. In the Performance of which is Truth and Fidelity.

Now that his Truth is an eſſential Attribute, none can deny that will read that Scripture, 2 Tim. 2. 13. He is faithful, and cannot deny himſelf: It is himſelf, he is true in ſuch a tranſcendent manner, as no Creatures can ever come to be Partakers of. Which Difference between him and them, in reſpect of Truth, I take to be the adequate Meaning of that, Rom. 3. 4. Let God be true, and every Man a Liar. It is a vehement Aſſeveration on God's Behalf, (as if he ſhould ſay) Although all Men ſhould be Liars, yet God is Truth, that is, there is a Poſſibility for the moſt faithful plain-hearted Man that ever was yet, to become a Liar, (Adam and the Angels that fell were created true and holy, but abode not in the Truth): But of God it is
Heb. 6. pronounced, that he is true in ſuch unchangeable a manner, that it is impoſſible for him to lie, for his Truth is his Godhead, and himſelf, and ſo is Mercy.

Quicquid eſt in Deo Deus eſt. Arg. 5. It is a common profeſſed Maxim among Divines, that whatever is in God, is God himſelf. This in the utmoſt Latitude of it I argue not now, for all internal Acts are not God's. But when we ſpeak of ſuch as are Attributes abſtractly given him, whereby to deſcribe him; that theſe ſhould expreſs his being God, yea his very Godhead, this is generally, and muſt be adhered unto by us. And how this is to be underſtood and cautioned, I hope to ſhew afterward.

That this ſhould hold true of Mercy, Long-ſuffering, &c. in a more eminent way of Evidence, that which I ſhall now further obſerve out of this Text, may, I hope, for the preſent ſerve to evince, which, if gained, doth afford a 5*th* ſtrong Argument, and meet to be brought the laſt for the ſhutting up of all.

I have much conſidered and dilated within my ſelf, what ſhould be the Myſtery of ſo vehement a triple or thrice Recital of the ſubſtantial Names of God, by themſelves alone firſt, as Jehovah, Jehovah, God, before theſe four or five attributed abſtract Names, Merciful, Gracious, &c. which then do as entirely by themſelves follow. I cannot but apprehend that ſome more than ordinary Myſtery muſt be in it; the like not being ordinary that I know of.

I know that it is put over to the importing the Myſtery of the three Perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, to ſhew, they all are merciful, long-ſuffering, &c. and equally or alike ſuch; And that is a great Myſtery indeed, and greatly for our Faith and Comfort. But then withal reflecting, that theſe merciful three do poſſeſs and ſubſiſt in that one Godhead and ſimple Divine Eſſence; and that the Attributes they have in common, are the Attributes of the Godhead, or of God himſelf as God; and ſo are theirs, becauſe each of them is God: I came to this farther Enquiry, Why ſhould not this triple Rehearſal of the Names of God be intended to declare that God, as God, is merciful, long-ſuffering, &c. or that merciful, &c. are himſelf in the ſame, and in as true a Senſe as any other Attribute is ſaid to be in Scripture. In the ſubſtantial Names, Jehovah, &c. he proclaims who, in the attributed Names or Properties he declares what that Jehovah is, as in which his Godhead and his being Jehovah conſiſteth, namely, in merciful, gracious, &c. ſo as Jehovah, Jehovah, is theſe Attributes, and reciprocally theſe Attributes are Jehovah, Jehovah. In thoſe his ſubſtantial Names he ſpeaks himſelf as at once by the great; in theſe attributed Names or Properties he unfolds himſelf, and explicates himſelf by Parcels, for the letting in of himſelf into our Underſtandings; the Bore of which is not large enough to take in the whole at once. Thus elſewhere we alſo find ſuch conjoined to the Being of God, tho not with this triple mention of his Name: O Lord, the great and terrible God, that keepeth Covenant and Mercy, &c. Neh. 1. 4. And Solomon before him thus ſpeaks, Lord God, there is no God like thee, who keepeſt Covenant and Mercy, 1 Kings 8. 23. And ſo for pardoning, Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth Iniquity? &c. Mic. 7. 18. And tho theſe being Acts are not God or God himſelf, yet you ſee they are attributed as proper and peculiar to him as he is God, and do argue him to be God alone, and are ſuch as if he were not God, could not be acted by him; concerning which this Rule is to be held, that therefore they neceſſarily proceed from the Godhead it ſelf; and farther muſt be aſcribed unto thoſe Properties of the Godhead of the firſt ſort, which in the Scriptures are held forth as the proper Cauſes of ſuch Acts or Effects, and ſo reductive, (as we ſay) muſt be reſolv'd unto thoſe Attributes in God, their Cauſes, which are the very Godhead. And in this Senſe here Jehovah keeping Mercy, and pardoning Iniquity, as Acts proper to Jehovah, are to be aſcribed to Jehovah, (as here) Jehovah merciful and gracious, (that goes before) as Divine Properties in him, that are Cauſes thereof, and as thoſe that do immediately expreſs his Godhead, and are himſelf, as this Triplication of the Name of God prefixed imports. And thus conſidered and ſtated, both ſorts do indeed come all to one. So then we may call them eſſential Attributes, that import his being God, and without which he were not God.

Nor need it here to ſtumble any, that pardoning Sin, &c. keeping Mercy for thouſands, are alſo here attributed to him, but of them it muſt not be ſaid, that they are God; if he ſhall withal conſider, that there is this vaſt Difference between thoſe firſt abstract Attributes immediately coming next to Jehovah, Jehovah, and thoſe other that follow, they being apparently Acts in God, and from God, as his Wonts and Practices, whereof thoſe five of the firſt Rank are the Cauſes, as was at large ſhewn in the Argument. And yet even thoſe Acts ſpeak him to be God too in this reſpect, that they do neceſſarily ſuppoſe and involve his being God as God, as proper to him above, as he is God, or they would never proceed from him.

I begin with the firſt, that merciful, &c. are one with Jehovah. And now I muſt call in the Help of other parallel Scriptures, both to confirm the thing it ſelf, viz. that as other true and real Attributes are one with Jehovah himſelf, or are himſelf, ſo Mercy is, and that upon the ſame Grounds: as alſo by way of Parallel, to juſtify that Construction and Collection I have made of this thrice Repetition; and which I make the Riſe of this Argument out of the Text.

1. One Attribute which is undeniably evident to be eſſential to and with Jehovah, is Truth and Faithfulneſs, which is his Godhead and Himſelf: Tit. 1. 2. God that cannot lie, that is, becauſe he is God, or that Truth is his Godhead, and his Godhead is Truth; he were not God elſe: and he muſt ceaſe, if otherwiſe, to be God: whereof the one can no more be than the other: Yea, and in terminis it is ſtiled HIMSELF, 2 Tim. 2. 13. If we believe not, yet he abideth FAITHFUL: He cannot deny himſelf. Why? for Faithfulneſs is himſelf.

Now let us bring a parallel Scripture ſpeaking this very thing of God's being faithful as God; and expreſſing this in the like, yea well-nigh the ſame Equipage of Language with this in Exod. 34. proclaiming Jehovah, God, merciful God: And the Language being the ſame, and that being the Intent of it there, it muſt be the ſame here. That Scripture is Deut. 7. 9. Know that the Lord thy God he is God, the faithful God, which keepeth Covenant and Mercy with them that love him. Here is firſt a vehement Indigitation of his being GOD, the Lord thy God he is God, to the end that they might know that he was the faithful God, as God: He that is God, the Lord thy God, is faithful, that is, Faithfulneſs is eſſential with his Godhead, that therefore they might ſurely build upon it as upon his Godhead it ſelf. For why? Faithfulneſs was he himſelf, and 'tis to the Intent they might know him. Now do we not hear God proclaiming himſelf in a like ſtrain, Jehovah, Jehovah, God merciful, &c. and this to the ſame Intent, that they might know him, and know what a God he is in and by theſe; yea, and Truth or Faithfulneſs being one of thoſe very Attributes that follow much in Truth, as you have heard? This Place then in Deut. 7. 9. muſt refer unto that uttered before it, in Exod. 34. and therefore may well ſerve to illuſtrate it, which this alſo confirms, that keeping Mercy for thouſands, here in Exodus, very well accords with he keepeth Mercy, &c. in Deuteronomy. Now then after you have read over once more, a ſecond time, that Paſſage in Deuteronomy, Know that the Lord, &c. and then that Preface joined to the faithful God, to ſhew, that he is faithful as he is God, with thoſe other ſaid Places pre-confirmed, then bring this of Exodus to it, Jehovah, Jehovah, God merciful, and the ſame Conſtruction and Purpoſe will ariſe up out of it; that this God, as God, is a merciful, gracious God, in the ſame Senſe and Intendment that the faithful God comes in in Deut. and after comes in here, much in Truth; and thus utter'd to the ſame full Intent and Purpoſe, that we might know what a God God is.

And if the Parallel of theſe two be not ſufficient to evince the ſame, then take another Paſſage in Pſal. 86. 15. But thou, O Lord, art a God full of Compaſſion, and gracious; long-ſuffering, and plenteous in Mercy and Truth. He ſays not ſimply, Thou Lord art full of Compaſſion, but manageth it with this Reduplication, Thou Lord art a God full of Compaſſion; and ſo ſpeaks no leſs than that as he is God, ſo he is merciful, &c. and that his Godhead is the ſubſtantial Root and Subject of his Mercy: And that which adds farther Confirmation is, that plenteous in Truth comes in, and is coupled with Mercy. They are Pairs then, and Pairs alike in this, that they are his Being, and God himſelf both. This for the Firſt; which at once gives Strength to our Argument, and Illuſtration to this Place.

2. Holineſs is argued to be God himſelf. And why? Becauſe whereas in one Place it is ſaid, he ſwore by himſelf, having no greater to ſwear by, Heb. 6. 13. (God will ſwear by no leſs than himſelf never) in another Place it is, He ſwore by his Holineſs, Pſal. 89. 35. And theſe two Oaths were, as to the Matter of them, of a kind, being ſet as Seals to the Covenant of Grace and Mercy both. The firſt was given to Abraham, to perform the Mercy promiſed, Luke 1. 72, 73. The ſecond to David, (and in his Name and Type unto Chriſt) to aſcertain the ſure Mercies given him. And the like Inſtance of the ſame Forms of Swearing is given in the caſe of verifying God's Threatnings; Amos 4. 2. The Lord ſware by his Holineſs: And in chap. 6. 8. The Lord hath ſworn by himſelf: So then his Holineſs is the Lord himſelf. And we may add this Reaſon, becauſe he can ſwear by nothing leſs than himſelf, as the Apoſtle affirms: And therefore ſwearing by his Holineſs, his Holineſs muſt be himſelf. The Evidence on Mercy's ſide, that it is himſelf, is equivalent. For whereas in ſome Places it is ſaid, Remember not the Sins of my Youth, according to thy Mercies, and for thy Goodneſs ſake, Pſal. 25. 7. And Neh. 9. 31. Nevertheleſs, for thy great Mercies ſake, thou didſt not conſume them, &c. when God ſpeaking the ſame in Iſa. 44. 25. I, even I, am He (that is, that Jehovah merciful) that blotteth out thy Tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and will not remember thy Sins. What in the one is for his Goodneſs ſake, and for thy great Mercy ſake, is for his own ſake in the other. So then Goodneſs, (as all muſt confeſs) yea and Mercy, are himſelf. You have it again in Daniel's Prayer, chap. 9. and there both theſe conjoined are brought in together, as explicatory the one of the other. In ver. 18, 19. We do not preſent our Supplications before thee for our Righteouſneſs, but FOR THY GREAT MERCIES. O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive, FOR THINE OWN SAKE, O my God! What in the very Words before is for thy great Mercies, which is plainly for thy Mercies ſake, is in the next Petition for thine own ſake; and you have theſe two pick'd out as ſcatter'd, one in one Place, the other in another, and ſo brought together, and argued from.

I come now to a third Proof. It is certain when we hear ſuch and ſuch Effects, as involve his being God, and which could not be done unleſs he were God, and do argue him God alone, that then thoſe Effects muſt proceed from the Godhead it ſelf. And farther, unto what in the Godhead can we aſcribe them, but ſuch Properties in the Godhead, as in the Scriptures are held forth as proper to produce ſuch or ſuch Effects? And whilſt we ſay ſuch or ſuch a Property in God did effect ſuch or ſuch a thing, we may warrantably alſo ſay, that his Godhead did it. The Creation of the World is a mighty Product of the Godhead, and argues him God alone: as Iſa. 44. 24. I am the Lord that maketh all things. And we muſt ſay, that the Godhead did effect it, for he made them by himſelf. Yet further, we find the making of them attributed peculiarly unto Power and Wiſdom, as proper Cauſes of ſuch Effects. And withal, that Power of his to be ſtiled his Godhead, Rom. 1. 20. So his Wiſdom alſo we find to be ſtiled Infinite, Pſal. 147. 10. which is equivalent as to ſay, it is his Godhead, for that alone is infinite and without Bounds. Now in Correſpondency unto theſe we find the Effects of pardoning Sin, &c. to involve his being God, as that which could never be done if he were not God; Mich. 7. 18. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth Iniquity, &c. becauſe he delighteth in Mercy? That Speech, Who is a God like unto thee? is ſtill uſed to ſhew he is God alone: And that as the Great God he doth ſuch and ſuch Works; which if he were not God he could not do; Pſal. 77. 8. Among the Gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord; neither are there any Works like unto thy Works. And ver. 10. For thou art great, and doſt wondrous things, thou art God alone. Now Pardon of Sin is a Work of ſuch Wonder and Greatneſs, as none ever more. And you ſee in that Prophet how they ſtand agaſt and wondring at him, as a God ſo great, as God alone, none like him, in that he can pardon Sin. And if he were not ſo infinite a God, he could not do it; for Sin and Sins are infinite. It is his Godhead pardons Sins, as well as his Godhead made the World. 'Tis a Truth, though ill intended by thoſe that ſpake it; Mark 2. 7. Who can forgive Sins but God? And had not Chriſt been God as well as Man, he could not have done it then. Now as other Works of God have ſome ſpecial Attribute in God, as their more proper Cauſe, and unto which thoſe Works are aſcribed for the Honour of that Attribute; and from thence we rightly argue, that they are his Godhead (as all thoſe inviſible things of God the Apoſtle terms his Godhead, Rom. 1. 20.) ſo as the Godhead pardons Sins: ſo read the Scriptures, and you find Pardon attributed ſpecially to Mercy in God, as its proper Cauſe (I need cite no Places). And this is done for the Glory of his Mercy and Grace. And certainly he would not inſtruct us to give this Honour due to his Godhead, and in which he as God is ſo highly concerned, if Mercy were not his Godhead, as well as any other Attribute is. He will not give his Glory to what is not himſelf. We may as warrantably then ſay, his Mercy and Godhead, as the Apoſtle doth his Power and Godhead. And this as intending to make both one and the ſame: yea, and add his eternal Mercy too, for that Epithet is given to it, Pſal. 25.

Pſ. 35. 10. as in Micah in pardoning, ſo there in delivering.

And when it is pleaded to God, that he would pardon Sins for his Mercies ſake, Neh. 9. 31. the plain Meaning and Reſolution is this, for thy great Mercies ſake, which are thy ſelf, or which are in thy ſelf. And there is this farther Reaſon to back this, and as ſtrong as that before-mention'd was for the former, that for his Mercy ſake, or for the glorifying of thy Mercy. This denotes God's utmoſt and moſt proper End for which he pardons and ſhews Mercy: And withal, the higheſt Motive by which he is moved to forgive, &c. And it is urged by theſe in their Petitions, as the moſt prevailing Plea they could move God withal. Now that can be no leſs than himſelf, whoſe higheſt and ſupremeſt End is himſelf; and he is moved to Acts of Grace and Pardon by nothing but what he is moved with in and from himſelf. And therefore in that 44*th* of Iſaiah, he holds up himſelf to their View, and himſelf alone; I, even I, am HE that blots out thy Tranſgreſſion FOR MINE OWN SAKE: and we are ſure it is Mercy for which and by which he only is moved thereto within himſelf, and is himſelf. And truly doth not his thrice repeating there (I) (I) (He) anſwer to his thrice repeating Jehovah, Jehovah, God merciful? &c. Exod. 34. 6.

Arg. 6. The four firſt Attributes we meet with at the Entrance in this Divine Proclamation, Exod. 34. 6. do, in what is common to them all, prompt us with a ſixth Argument, That Mercy and Grace are eſſential Properties of the Divine Nature.

1. The four Attributes are, Merciful, Gracious, Long-ſuffering, Abundant in Goodneſs and Truth. But I reckon not that of Truth in this Enumeration, as likewiſe the Pſalmiſt doth not in his Rehearſal of the Words of this Proclamation, Pſal. 103. 9. which is word for word the ſame as to theſe firſt four. They are in the Original in both Places, tho our Tranſlators have varied their Tranſlations of them there from what is here, yet without any material Difference, for what there they have rendred plenteous in Mercy, (which they have varied too in the Margin, great in Mercy, according to the Hebrew) here they render abundant in Goodneſs. But the Pſalmiſt omitteth the mention of [and in Truth]: And the Reaſon of that Omiſſion may be the ſame that mine is in ſtopping there, namely, becauſe he takes thoſe Attributes that purely concern Mercy, and are Branches of it; whereas Truth or Faithfulneſs comes in here, not as being any way a Branch of Mercy, but as Mercy's Superviſor, or Mercy's Remembrancer, to ſee to it, that Mercy does perform what God out of Grace hath promiſed and declared; according to that Memorandum of old Zacharias, deduced out of the three Names of himſelf, his Son John, and Elizabeth, Luke 1. 72. To perform the Mercy promiſed, and to remember his Holy Covenant, the Oath, &c.

2. That which I call common to all theſe four, from which I would deduce my Argument, are two things. Firſt, That the Form of Speech they are atttributed to God in, is Nouns, not Participles, which denotes them to be inherent Diſpoſitions, or Properties in God, which ſet him forth ab intra, or by what are in him, the Inwards of himſelf. The ſecond is, that for the ſpecial kind of them, they are of thoſe which Divines ſtile the Vertues of the Divine Nature.

3. The Argument from theſe, or either of them, riſeth thus: 1ſt. That inherent Diſpoſitions in God are to be accounted his Nature. 2dly. And ſpecially vertuous Diſpoſitions are ſo to be eſteemed; and ſuch Mercy and Grace are, and therefore are truly his Nature.

There are two things then to be performed by me in handling this Argument, which conſiſts of two Branches. (1.) To eſtabliſh the Proof of this one Propoſition, that theſe four Names are attributed in ſuch a Form of Speech as denotes them to be inherent Diſpoſitions, intrinſical Properties, that are truly in him. (2.) That for the ſpecial kind of them, they are among the Vertues, or vertuous Diſpoſitions of the Divine Nature of God. This Propoſition hath, as you ſee, two Branches.

2dly. The ſecond thing to be proved is the Conſequence inferred from them, viz. 1. That if they be inherent Properties, that then they are in, and of the Divine Nature. 2. That if they be properly to be reckoned among the Vertues of God; and ſo to be eſteemed, that then much more they are in and of his Divine Nature. But all theſe being in their Order joined and put together, will make the Argument compleat.

My Method ſhall be to handle the two Branches of the Propoſition, and the Proof of them firſt, and then the two Conſequences and the Proofs of them, whereof the firſt is a ſtep to the Proof of the latter, and both center in one and the ſame Reaſon of either.

1. As for the firſt Branch of the Propoſition or Hypotheſis, it is the Animadverſion of that learned Critick and literal Expoſitor, Genebrard, commenting upon the 8th or 9th Verſe of Pſal. 103. which I even now cited, to ſhew, that theſe four firſt Attributes that ſet forth Mercy, are word for word in the Original, the ſame with theſe four here. He beginning to expound this firſt word [Merciful] ſpeaks on this wiſe of it, and the like of the reſt; It is a Noun (ſays he) not a Participle, as alſo thoſe that follow; becauſe thereby is declared, not the ACTS of God, but as it were an IMMOVEABLE QVALITY, or that which is perpetual in God. And then of the other three that follow, for the ſame Reaſon he pronounceth the ſame of them: For theſe are Properties (ſays he) that are innate in God: nor are they aſſumed by him contingently, according as Circumſtances are, and give occaſion. Thus he. Wherein his Argument lies not ſimply in this, that for the Form or Manner of Speech they are Nouns, for there are Attributes that are Nouns, which are not Qualities, as great, immenſe; but taken conjunctly therewith, that the matter of the things attributed are Qualities. And whereas Genebrard ſays, that merciful denotes as it were an immoveable Quality in God; his quaſi is but to allay and qualify our Apprehenſions, that we ſhould conceive of them with an infinite Diſproportion, as they are in God, and in us Men. In us they are mere Qualities, differing from the Eſſence of us, as Accidents are from the Subject they are in; but in the Divine Nature there are no Accidents: And yet he is fain to make uſe of an Aſſimilation to theſe of Qualities, to convey their Inherency, as of Qualities, to our Apprehenſions, as the neareſt Notion to do it by: And that however they are [immoveable] Principles in the Divine Nature, as inherent Qualities uſe to be. This he abſolutely affirms to be ſignified thereby; and ſo that Mercy is and was permanently in his Nature, whether he had ever purpoſed or ſhewn any Act of Mercy, yea or no; and not contingently attributed, for that he acteth mercifully. And this Difference he obſerved to be between ſuch Attributes that are expreſſed of God by way of Nouns and Quality-wiſe, (which theſe are) and ſuch as denote Acts by Participles.

And this being thus explained, the Foundation of the Argument proceeds from the common Uſe of Speech, that when Qualities are ſimply and abſolutely attributed unto a Perſon, in the Form of Nouns, as that he is liberal, holy, devout, couragious, bold, and the like, that then in the wonted Acception of Speech Men commonly underſtand, and readily conceive, and apprehend that he is a Perſon of a liberal Spirit, an holy and devotional Soul, and ſo addicted inwardly, ſo or ſo diſpoſed, inclined and affected within himſelf; of ſuch a Temper, Frame and Conſtitution of Spirit, or a Man of ſuch inherent Principles of Heart inwardly moving him, ſwaying him to liberal and holy Actions: And that theſe are his Indoles, Ingenium, his Spirit, as the Scripture-Word is. And in like manner, God's Intention (who makes uſe of our wonted Language to make himſelf known unto us by, as in other his Attributes is apparent) here analogouſly ſhould be to deſcribe himſelf in ſuch Attributions of Speech as we uſe when we would ſet forth a Perſon, who and what he is, and paint him forth by ſuch Qualities and Diſpoſitions as we know are in him. Thus God here, thereby ſignifying what Properties are truly and really in himſelf, as far as poſſibly they are by Words expreſſible to us. And as we, when we have ſet out a Man by ſuch Qualities, (Good or Evil) we uſe to ſay, that's the Man; ſo we may ſay, this is our God: And indeed God himſelf here doth ſay in terminis, fully as much as this of himſelf, thrice over; Jehovah, Jehovah, El, God, God, God, merciful, gracious, &c. as if he had ſaid, this is your God. And as for thoſe other Attributions given to God, purely after the manner of Man, which the Oppoſers would choak this Truth with, they are expreſs'd by Words that denote Acts only, and thoſe but occaſionally expreſs'd; as that it grieved him, it repented him, and the like, as it is obvious to obſerve in theſe Scriptures where they are uſed. But theſe are ſolemn Names and Denominations, whereby God purpoſely makes a Deſcription of himſelf, what a God he is: and accordingly they do fully anſwer to this Queſtion, whenever it be demanded, Qualis Deus ſit, ac quis? who and what a God is he? as plainly, and directly, and abſolutely, and in the like ſtrain of Speech, as any other of their fellow-Attributes do: as when it is ſaid, he is wiſe, and good, and Almighty, theſe Words are juſtly judged and acknowledged to ſignify what a God he is in his Eſſence; and in like manner, theſe here to be a Deſcription of his Nature: and that even ſuch a God he is, ſet out by ſuch Characters as are given him ab intra, as our Divines ſpeak, that is, ſuch as do declare what a God he is inwardly, that ſhew his very Inwards to us. And thoſe Characters do expreſs in reality THAT to be in his Divine Being, which anſwers to all theſe, (as I have opened it in the Explication I premitted) it being a commonly received Maxim among Divines of all ſorts; Deus dicitur quis, ac qualis eſt, ab eo quod natura eſt.

And for the Cloſe of this Point, we may affirm, that this his Title of merciful, gracious, doth as roundly give and return an abſolute Anſwer to any ſuch Enquiry, what a God is he? as any other Attribute whatſoever: Pſal. 116. 5. Gracious is the Lord, and righteous, yea our God is merciful: This is the Saints Vogue and Saying of him, as here he ſpeaks theſe of himſelf; and it is form'd up ſo, as it may ſerve to be an Anſwer, (as the Apoſtle's Word is) an Account in Readineſs to be given to any Stranger to Religion who knows not God. If an Heathen, ſuppoſe ſuch as were in thoſe times, or are now, ſhould be inquiſitive, and demand, What a God is your God? Say this to him, Our God is merciful, [YEA] our God is merciful, with an Emphaſis. And it is as if they had ſaid, If any would know what our God is, let him know him by this, That if he have any internal Perfection, (who is all Perfections, good, holy, wiſe, gracious) he is as perfectly merciful as any of theſe: And (ſay I) if any ſuch an one be not ſatisfied with the Saints plain Verdict, given in upon their own Knowledg, let them then hear and attend to what God himſelf ſays of himſelf; and take from his own Mouth what he is; Jehovah, Jehovah, God merciful and gracious. He multiplies his ſubſtantial Names thrice, as well as his Attribute of Mercy four times: And why? but becauſe if God, as God, be to be known by any thing, it is by theſe. The Pſalmiſt ſeems to vie with all other Attributes whatſoever; yea, as it were outvies all other with this of his being merciful, whilſt he ſo vehemently ſpeaks it, [yea] our God is merciful; he ſets the Crown upon the Head thereof.

There was an additional Branch in the Suppoſition, that theſe Attributes are the Characters of Vertues in the Divine Nature, or vertuous Diſpoſitions in God, which ſuperadds unto the former, and is a farther ſtep towards the Proof of the Conſequences therefrom, which are to follow, viz. that therefore they are in and of his Divine Nature.

All Perfections are in God, in all kinds of Perfection whatſoever. The Attributes of God are uſually reduced by Schoolmen, as well as our Divines, to three Heads.

1. Such as are utterly incommunicable to us Creatures, as Unchangeableneſs, Infinity, Eternity, Ubiquity, or to be every where, and his Divine Glory. Theſe are the abſolute and metaphyſical Excellencies (as I may call them) of his Divine Entity.

2. There are alſo all ſuper-excelling Habilities that belong to, and are found in intelligent Creatures; as Faculties of Underſtanding, which the Pſalmiſt ſays is Infinite, knowing all things, &c. So of a ſovereign Will, which doth whatever he pleaſeth in the Earth, and in the Heavens.

3. All ſorts of Vertues belonging to either of theſe, Perfectiones morales; all ſuch as are not founded upon Imperfection, (as Humility, Self-denial, &c. are) and when I call them Vertues, I mean all the Excellencies of Goodneſs; ſuch as are Holineſs, Righteouſneſs, and Mercy, and Grace there; and Truth alſo, which is mentioned here. God ought to be every way moſt perfect, (ſay the Schoolmen) not only in the Perfections of Entity, or of natural Being, but in the Eminency of Goodneſs and Vertue, in that kind of Being alſo. Hence his Royal Titles among the Heathens were, Deus optimus maximus; a God that is moſt great in Power, and the Abſoluteneſs of Being, and a God moſt good. And the Goodneſs therein meant was that vertuous Goodneſs we ſpeak of, whereby he is inwardly, and of himſelf, ready to do good to his Creatures, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, The Lord is good, and doth Good. Of which Goodneſs, Mercy, and Grace, are the eminent Branches, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, The Lord is good, and his Mercy endureth for ever. And therefore I rightly ſaid, that the Vertuouſneſs of Mercy in Scripture-Language is the Excellency of his Goodneſs.

And let no Man boggle at the word Vertue, or deem it as a lowering of the Godhead, to ſay he excels in Vertues; for the Scriptures aſcribe this to him in terminis; 1 Pet. 2. 9. where the Apoſtle exhorts to ſhew forth the Vertues (ſo in the Original) of him that called you. Obſerve, they are the Vertues of him that calleth us, not our Vertues that are in us that are called.

And by him that called us, is meant not Chriſt only, and his Vertues as Man, but God the Father chiefly, to whom our Calling is there aſcribed: as alſo in chap. 1. 15. it had been by the ſame Apoſtle, with the like Exhortation; for there he ſays, As he that hath called you is holy, ſo be you holy, &c. as Children of your Father. Thus in like manner, though in other Phraſe, but in Subſtance the ſame, he entered his Exhortation to all ſorts of Goodneſs, wherein we are to imitate him, and be like him, ſhew forth the Vertues of him that hath called you, that is, ſays Gerard, thoſe Attributes of God, which in calling you he ſhewed forth: and particularly and to be ſure the moſt eminent is that which the Apoſtle ſpecially inſtanceth in, and in this, and in no other elſe: ſo in the following Verſe, which have now obtained Mercy. So as in effect this Exhortation is all one with Be ye merciful, becauſe your God that called you is merciful; even as in the former Exhortation he had ſaid, Be holy, for I am holy: Holineſs in God being the Foundation of all thoſe Vertues in God, as well as in us; which the comparing of thoſe Verſes ſhews: and the Apoſtle alſo there enforceth from this, that we muſt be like our Father.

Su Gerard in locum.

Theſe Vertues are to us poor Creatures, the eſpecial Attribute we praiſe God for; inſomuch as the Holy Ghoſt records it for the Title and Name of Praiſes, the word ἀρετὰς there uſed ſignifying at once both Vertues and Praiſes, as 'tis there tranſlated: or elſe let thoſe that boggle at the word Vertues, ſay of them, that in God they are the Patterns, and Samples, or Ideas of what are called Vertues in us; and 'tis enough to my purpoſe. And the Reaſon why that is to be acknowledged, is, There is not nor can be any Perfection which the Creature partaketh of a Likeneſs to God in, but it is and muſt be found after an infinitely more excelling manner in God, and the Nature of God, than it is in the Creature. Only take this in, that they are found in God after the manner of God, in us Creatures after the Mode or Manner of Creatures, with an infinite Difference.

Non tam virtutes quam ideæ virtutum in Deo ſunt: Kekerman Syſt. Theol, c. 4.

Obſerve how in the forming this Argument I put in this Limitation: There is no Perfection in Man, in which he partaketh of a Likeneſs to God; but the Perfection thereof is in God. And the Reaſon of this my Limitation is, becauſe there are two ſorts of gracious Perfections in us, whereof ſome indeed are not in God, though in Chriſt they are found; as Humility, Lowlineſs of Heart, Submiſſion of our Wills. Theſe are not by way of Likeneſs to the like which correſpond in God, but by way of Applyings of the Soul unto God, or by way of Subjection of the Creature to ſuch other Attributes in God as are incommunicable; as his Soveraignty, Greatneſs, abſolute Will, &c. And in that reſpect it is they are reckoned Parts of the Divine Nature, becauſe they give the greateſt Glory to the Divine Nature, in the way now ſpecified. But as for ſuch Perfections as are ſaid to bear a Likeneſs with what is like unto what is attributed unto God; of them all we may and muſt ſay, that there is no Perfection of ſuch in the Creature, but it is much more in God, which is the major or firſt Propoſition. And this doth in a more ſpecial manner hold true in ſuch Vertues, or ſuch ſpiritual Graces, in which we are ſaid to be like him; and wherein he is expreſly made our Pattern in the Scriptures. And of thoſe it muſt be acknowledged, that if they be properly in the Creature, then they are more properly in God; of all which the Holineſs and Purity of God's Nature is the Root, as being in himſelf firſt, and ſo becomes the firſt Rule and Meaſure of ſuch Vertues in us.

And that this is particularly true of this Vertue of Mercy, (the thing in hand) thoſe Speeches of Chriſt (who came out of the Boſom of the Father, and hath declared him both in his Nature and in his Will) do uncontroulably evince: Luke 6. 27, 28. Love your Enemies, do good to them that hate you. And ver. 35. Love your Enemies, and ye ſhall be the Children of the Higheſt; for he is kind to the Evil and the Vnthankful. And in the Cloſe of all, ver. 36. Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father alſo is merciful: [As,] that is, after the Image of God; as Col. 3. 10. Put on the new Man, after the Image of him that created him: Whereof Mercy and Love are in the 12*th* Verſe following mentioned to be an eminent Piece; Put on therefore (as the Elect of God, holy and beloved) Bowels of Mercies, Kindneſs, Humbleneſs of Mind, Meekneſs, Long-ſuffering: and then add thoſe other Speeches of our Lord in Mat. 5. which correſpond with thoſe recited out of Luke 6. Mat. 5. ult. Be you perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect. He ſpeaks of the Perfection of Vertues, and ſpecially of that of Mercy: for unto Works of Mercy unto Enemies, &c. he had particularly exhorted, ver. 44. But I ſay unto you, Love your Enemies, bleſs them that curſe you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you, and perſecute you. And this he exhorts to by the Inſtance of God's Mercy to the worſt Sinners; ver. 45. That ye may be the Children of your Father which is in Heaven; for he maketh his Sun to riſe on the Evil, and on the Good; and ſendeth Rain on the Juſt, and on the Vnjuſt: and thereupon exhorts us to be perfect in that Grace, upon this very Ground; becauſe it is a Perfection in God firſt, and originally in him; and that we have thereby the Likeneſs of the Perfection of our Father. This for the Proof of the two Branches of the Propoſition.

2. I come to the Proof of the Conſequence in the ſecond Place propoſed, from both, viz. That if theſe Attributes do denote inherent Diſpoſitions, Properties, or permanent Qualities, and not Acts only, eſpecially ſuch Qualities as are Vertues in God, that then they are of the Divine Nature it ſelf. I put both into one, becauſe the Reaſon of either centers much in one, altho the Reaſon of the latter greatly adds Force to the other.

And that Reaſon will at once ſerve both for a Proof of the Conſequence, and alſo for a Caution in this Caſe, that whilſt we are forced to uſe the term of Qualities to expreſs them by, to relieve our Apprehenſions of them, (whereas indeed they are not ſuch Qualities as are in the Creature, and yet denoting Inherency and Permanency of like Properties in God, and not of Acts only) they can be no other but his Divine Nature.

And the Reaſon is founded on this, That in God there are no Accidents (and ſuch thoſe in us Creatures are) inherent or permanent in him: And therefore theſe Attributes denoting Properties, like to Qualities in us that are inherent and permanent, they therefore can be no other than the Divine Nature it ſelf; which is confirmed by the infinite Difference that is and muſt be acknowledged to be between the Creatures and God bleſſed for ever, in this reſpect: That the inherent Qualities in us Men or Angels, be they never ſo excellent, yet they differ from the Subſtance or Being of the Perſons in whom they are, as Accidents do from their Subject; and they are ſaid to be added to perfect and adorn the Subjects in which they reſide. And altho the moſt eminent of Creature-Qualifications do vaſtly differ from the Subſtances or Eſſences they are in, yet there are ſome of them that ſo immediately flow from their Subſtances, and are ſo proper and ſpecifically peculiar to them, that if we ſhould ſuppoſe they could be ſeparate from that Subject or Perſon, the very Nature and proper Being of that Subject would withal ceaſe to be what it was. 'Tis an aſſured Maxim, Proprietatum negatio eſt naturarum deletio; as to deny the Faculty of Reaſon it ſelf, to be in one of Mankind, is to degrade a Man as a Man, and blot him quite out of the Catalogue or Roll of Men, and to ſet him down a Brute: Of which 'tis ſaid, Pſal. 32. They want Underſtanding. So that commonly we allow the term of Natural unto ſuch Properties, and call them eſſential, or belonging to the Eſſence, although not the Eſſence it ſelf; but yet they riſe to no higher Dignities than of Faculties and qualifying Abilities, which are at beſt but Accidents, tho of another kind than ordinary Accidents are of, and therefore called Natural, becauſe they are inbred, inlaid, and blended with the inward Conſtitution and Temper of the Subſtance it ſelf. But on the contrary, when we ſpeak of God, and ſay, that Mercy is a Property, and of his Nature, our Intentions, and God's alſo in ſo ſpeaking, reach infinitely higher, and intend thereby that it is his very Divine Nature, as far as it is by Words expreſſed to us; even as Eternity and Power are ſaid to be his Godhead, Rom. 1. And the Reaſon thereof is, becauſe God and the eſſential Nature of God, is perfected by nothing but himſelf, and ſo not by any thing differing from his own Being: for then his Godhead, as he is God, ſhould be imperfect, and needed ſomething beſides himſelf to add Perfection and Hability unto it, which the Scripture utterly denies of him; Acts 17. that he needeth not any thing: And therefore all ſuch Attributes, and this of merciful being in Tenor of Speech given to him, after the manner of the Attribution of inherent Qualities, for our Conception ſake, are to be underſtood to be his Divine Nature, in a tranſcendent manner, unconceivable by us.

Moreover, take in this for a ſecond Caution alſo, That when we call both theſe, or any like Qualities, in Men or Angels, as alſo theſe Attributes in God, Natural, or Nature in either, the word Nature or Natural muſt be taken and underſtood with an infinitely vaſt differing reſpect in the one and in the other: For theſe Qualifications (thus ſaid to be natural to us Angels and Men) are but at the beſt the Shadow of what is ſubſtantially natural in God: and accordingly that Mercifulneſs which is in Man, is but the imperfect Shim of that eſſential Mercy which is in the Divine Being. And hence it is ſo far remote from God's being called merciful, righteous, after the manner of Man, (as thoſe other Attributes, the oppoſite Inſtances, which are ſtiled but ad ſimilitudinem effectus) that to the contrary, theſe inherent Qualities in Man, (take them in their Perfection) are ſaid to be after God, Epheſ. 3. 24. And therefore they are propriiſſimè, moſt properly in God firſt: yea and in Truth only in God (as Goodneſs is ſaid to be) and but ſimilitudinarily, and by way of Semblance in Man. And this by way of Caution alſo.

But, 2*dly.* I urge this Reaſon further, upon and from the Account of that Additional, viz. That Mercy and Grace are to be reckoned among the higheſt Vertues that are in God. Now true and perfect Vertues are inherent in that Perſon that deſerves the Stile of Vertuous: And if they be true, they are permanent, and conſtantly abiding in him: yea, and the Perfection of them lies in the inward Diſpoſition and Addictment of the Mind, as the Root of the Actings, or performing vertuous Things: tho they, as being the Fruits thereof, have the Name of Mercy, and their due Valuation: but ſtill that inward Principle of thoſe Actings much more and above all, ſo far as they have been inbred, and by Nature found in any Perſon, that is the Height of their Perfection. And therefore in God, if they be true and perfect Vertues indeed, as they muſt be ſuppoſed to be, they muſt be all theſe; both inward Diſpoſitions, ſtrong Inclinations, Propenſions unto merciful Acts, and ſeated in his Nature, and to be his Nature. And to be ſure God is not perfected (as Man) or grows up in Vertue by Acquiſition, or by the Increaſe of Habits that uſe to be acquired by Uſe, Practice, and Exerciſe: This were to lower him infinitely yet more, ſo to affirm. And therefore if Vertues be at all in him, and theſe Vertues, (as we have proved them to be) then they muſt be acknowledged his Divine Nature, and his Perfections by Nature.

I ſhall caſt in a Coronis to all, and which will without Contradiction confirm all that I have hitherto ſaid in this third Argument: It is thoſe Words which our Lord hath made the Concluſion of his Exhortation unto us, to be merciful, in that 5*th* of Matthew, laſt Verſe; Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect.

1. You ſee here is a Perfection attributed to God, which Man is exhorted to imitate: Be ye perfect, as your Father in Heaven is perfect. God's Perfection is the original Pattern, and Man's Imitation that is to be the Copy to that Pattern; and God's Perfection is to be underſtood after the manner wherein God is, or ought to be underſtood to be perfect, as a God; or as the Evangeliſt Luke upon that Occaſion entitles him, the Higheſt; and Men, as Men in their kind, as Children of the Higheſt; ſo in ver. 35. And he therefore ſpeaks it of ſuch a Perfection in God, as is of the higheſt kind of Perfection proper and eſſential unto God. And to be ſure, there are ſome Attributes of his that are the eſſential Perfections of his Divine Nature, and then this ſpoken of by Chriſt's own arguing, is among them that are of the higheſt Rank.

And, 2. It proves to be this ſo rich and precious Attribute of Mercy, which Chriſt intended here; as appears both by the Interpretation, that by comparing Chriſt's Diſcourſe about this of our being merciful, in thoſe two Evangeliſts, is apparently given of it. For whereas the one ſays, Mat. 5. ult. Be you perfect, as your Father in Heaven is perfect: The other ſays, Luke 6. 36. Be ye merciful, as your heavenly Father is merciful. And each come in as the laſt Cloſe and Concluſion of Chriſt's Exhortation unto Mercy in either Place. So then Mercy is one of the higheſt Perfections that perfect him that is the Higheſt, or the moſt perfect in all Perfections.

3. This Perfection of Mercy muſt neceſſarily be underſtood to be intrinſical to him, and ſo his Nature. For nothing extrinſical or outward to God, can add any Perfection to him. His own Works, be they of Mercy, and never ſo excelling, add nothing to him: he was as perfect a God before he made the Worlds, as ſince: And what is it can be his Perfection but what is and was then in himſelf, and of himſelf? who of himſelf is the Fulneſs of all Being: and if any thing added the leaſt Perfection to him, he muſt be ſaid to be of himſelf, and in himſelf, imperfect: And Mercy being ſo plainly, expreſly, in particular, thus ſtiled his Perfection, it muſt be a Property in himſelf, and of himſelf; and without which he would not be ſo perfect as he is ſaid to be: Yea, we may upon this Ground further ſay, that without it he were not God. Let the Oppoſites bring all their Diſtinctions and wonted Pleas to make void this ſo great a Truth, and you will ſee them all melt before this Speech, as Wax when it comes unto the Fire, and be confuted in every Part thereof.

1*ſt*. They diſtinguiſh and ſay, God is merciful quoad effectus; in and for his doing Works of Mercy, and not becauſe he is of a merciful Nature, and inward Diſpoſition of Mercy.

(1.) Conſider, that Man is here exhorted to be merciful, as God is: and tho he in his Exhortation mainly inſtanceth in Works of Mercy, which Man ſhould perform, yet I demand, Doth not the Exhortation chiefly intend, that Men ſhould be moved by an inward Principle of Mercy, (compared therefore to Bowels, which are called the Inwards) that ſhould move the Heart to Works of Mercy? Col. 3. 12. Put on therefore (as the Elect of God, holy and beloved) Bowels of Mercies, Kindneſs, Humbleneſs of Mind, Meekneſs, Long-ſuffering. And when Chriſt pronounceth that Bleſſing upon their Souls, Mat. 5. Bleſſed are the Merciful, &c. doth not the word ἐλεήμονες import inward Mercy and Pity more than outward? as Spanhem hath obſerved upon it. And if God were not in like manner filled with merciful Diſpoſitions moving thereto in his ſhewing Mercy, why is his Mercy ſet before them as the excellent Pattern, when yet according to them it reacheth not to this, to be a Pattern of inward Mercy?

(2.) If God were not thus merciful ab intra, his Inwards moving him thereto, do not they that affirm this make Man more merciful than they would have God to be; ſeeing Man is merciful with an inward Affection of Bowels, beſides his Works of Mercy; but God ſhould be merciful only quoad effectus, only becauſe he doth Acts of Mercy without the Affection or inward Principle of Mercy?

And, 2*dly*. Whereas they ſay, Mercy is ſpoken of God, after the manner of Man, or in like Senſe only as that God is ſaid to grieve, repent, &c. But, 1. Here in Chriſt's Exhortation on the contrary, Man is called upon to be merciful after the manner of God; Be ye merciful as your Father is merciful. And, 2. If it were otherwiſe according to that Opinion they have of God, Man ſhould only be exhorted here to exerciſe and put forth outward Acts and Effects of Mercy; for God, ſay they, doth only ſo. Again, 3. That Mercy which is there exhorted to, is that which is the Perfection of Mercy: And certainly to be merciful inwardly, and of a merciful Nature, is that which is the Life, the Height, the Perfection of Mercy.

I finally cloſe up all with this ſummary Argument; That Grace and Vertue, that in Man is a Perfection, and a piece of the Divine Nature in him, and Likeneſs to what is in God, (he being created after the Image of God in Truth, as the Apoſtle's Words are) and which ſame is likewiſe attributed to God, as a Perfection of him, and a Pattern to us of the ſame; that muſt be acknowledged to be in God, as his Divine Nature and Being. But ſuch this Grace or Vertue of Mercy is; it is in Man a piece of his Divine Nature, created after the Image of God in Truth; and it is aſcribed unto God, as a Perfection of his Godhead, and made the Pattern of our Perfection: Therefore as it is attributed to God, it muſt be his Divine Nature.

CHAP. XII.

Some of the principal Objections, why Mercy ſhould not be a natural Attribute of the Divine Nature, anſwered out of the Proofs and Parallels in the foregone Chapter.

THE Proofs in the foregone Chapters, eſpecially the paralleling of Power with Mercy, and then of thoſe other Attributes, Grace, &c. as they confirm the thing, ſo they will moſt aptly ſerve to anſwer the greateſt Objections that are alledged againſt it.

Deus non uritur naturalibus, ſay they.

Object. 1. The firſt Objection lies thus, That is not natural wherein God is arbitrary and free in working any Effects thereof, or in the uſing of it, and puttings of it forth: but ſuch is Mercy, as even in theſe very Paſſages unto Moſes which are alledged; I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful; which is adjoined to this Proclamation. Compare Exod. 33. 19. I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee, and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will ſhew Mercy on whom I will ſhew Mercy. In brief, That they ſay is not natural, the Working and Operation of which depends upon God's free Will.

Anſw. The Anſwer is ready, and clear, and home, as it may be taken from the Inſtance of God's Power; for according to this Rule and Meaſure, Power it ſelf in God ſhould not be a natural Attribute; for all things (which he worketh by his Power) he worketh after the Counſel of his own Will, Epheſ. 1. 11. (and therefore it is he doth not all he can do, Mat. 3. 9. ch. 26. 53.) which is the ſame with the Exerciſe of his Mercy; of which it is in like manner ſaid, they are according to the good Pleaſure of his Will, again and again, Epheſ. 1. 5. His Will keeps the Operations both of Mercy and Power, as it were under Lock and Key, and lets them out as God himſelf pleaſeth. Yea, and further, you have both of theſe at once put together: and, as you have heard, Mercy and Power in themſelves parallel'd, they are ſo in their Operations too, as being like Inſtances of this very thing, as appears in the Apoſtle's Allegation, and putting into one thoſe two Speeches of God; Rom. 9. 17, 18. For this ſame purpoſe have I raiſed thee up, that I might ſhew my [POWER] in thee, and that my Name might be declared throughout the Earth: Therefore hath he Mercy on whom he will have Mercy, and whom he will he hardneth. So then both are ſaid to depend, and to be guided in their Actings by his Will alike. Again, look, that although the Acting and Effect of Power is but voluntary, yet ſtill that Effect proceeds from that Vis, Force, Strength, or Power, that is natural to God, and which in God is infinite; which Power ſets it ſelf to the effecting every thing, only his Will ſtill orders that putting forth of it, where, and when, and the Meaſure of it. And therefore it is all one to ſay, Who hath reſiſted his Will? as the Apoſtle; as to ſay, Who hath hardned himſelf againſt his Power? as in Job 9. 4. for his natural Power immediately is that in him which exerts it ſelf in every ſuch Act of his Will, and without that nothing would be done, or hath been done. And in parallel unto this, the Manifeſtation of Mercy, in all the Works of our Salvation, depends upon his good Pleaſure, and yet in and unto the effecting or endowing us with any and every Benefit or ſaving Work thereof, the whole of the Riches of his Grace that is intrinſical to him, doth immediately put forth themſelves; and without a Mercy ſo infinite and natural to God, none of them would be beſtowed or effected. Moreover, look, as if you ſhould deny Power to be in God eſſentially, becauſe it is put forth by his Will and Pleaſure, and affirm it to be but a metaphorical Attribute, you ſhould thereby make him no God at all; for a weak God is no God: So if you take Mercy from him, denying it in the Reality and Principle of it to be in him, you deſpoil and rob him of his greateſt Riches, and make but a poor God of him to all that ſhall call upon him, and ſo in effect no God at all, either to be feared or worſhipped.

The Miſtake of the Argument proceeds on this, that becauſe Acts or ſhewing of Mercy do hold of his Will, therefore his very being merciful, the Principle of thoſe Acts, muſt do ſo too. We grant his acting graciouſly to be arbitrary in him, and from his Will, but not his being merciful and gracious, that depends not on his Will, though with his Will; that depends not upon an Act of his Will, though it be with Will.

But the true Reſolve of all is, that indeed his Will (take it for the Power of willing, or that whereby he willeth) is the very immediate Subject of Mercy, which Mercy, as it is in his Will, is but a Propenſeneſs, a ſtrong and ready Inclination in his Will, that moves and ſways him to thoſe merciful Actings, which is not from an Act, but an inherent Diſpoſition in his Will, and natural to it, that it ſhould be readily ſo diſpoſed.

Object. 2. A ſecond Objection is, that Mercy imports and ariſeth from the Weakneſs and Deficiency in Man's Nature, as from an Apprehenſion that Men themſelves being ſubject to the like Miſeries, ſhew Mercy to the miſerable, and ſo Mercy is always joined with a Paſſion, (which we call Compaſſion) Trouble or Grief, in the Heart of a Man that is merciful; all which Infirmities and Paſſions Man only, not God, is ſaid to be ſubject to with difference from God, Acts 14. 15.

Miſericordia eſt compaſſio ſuper alienâ miſeriâ, & in tantū miſeretur in quantū dolet. Aquinas 22. q. 30. Act. 2*d*.

Anſw. This is utterly an heatheniſh Imagination, and had its Original from them. Ariſtotle ſays, that ‖ it is uncouth, not agreeing to, or becoming the Being of God, to ſay he loves. He thought it ſtood not with his Greatneſs, nor was compatible with it. And Epicurus before him ſaid, The Divine Nature was not penetrable by Mercy or Pity, becauſe theſe find no Entrance into the Hearts of Men, but through ſome Defect or Want. I may ſay of them in this Point, (as Chriſt of the Sadduces denying the Reſurrection) They erred, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the Power of God. For whereas they would that Mercy and Pity ſhould ſpring out of Weakneſs and Deficiency, as in Man it doth ſince his Fall, or at leaſt is always accompanied with it; ſuch as Grief and Trouble, and the like Paſſions: On the perfect contrary in God it ariſeth from and is accompanied with his infinite Power, All-ſufficiency, and Bleſſedneſs. And by how much he is above all and utterly uncapable of any Defect, the more able he is to ſuccour and relieve us in Miſery, and alſo by ſo much the more his glorious Will is the more diſpoſed and propenſe to Mercy. Kings who live in an higher Region, and are not ſubjicible to the common Guſts of innumerable Miſeries, which their Subjects in the lower Regions are yet out of the Greatneſs and Generoſity of their Spirits are often-times mercifully diſpoſed, and forbearing unto thoſe that apply themſelves to them under ſuch Miſeries which themſelves never had, and of which they have not the leaſt Apprehenſion that they ſhall fall under them. The Lion's Strength and Courage makes him ſometimes to ſpare a poor Lamb's Life that lies proſtrate at his Feet; which holds a Semblance of what is in Kings, and in God more tranſcendently, tho both theſe indeed are but imperfect Shims and Glimmerings of what to an Infinity is ſupereminently in God. I betake my ſelf, for the Proof of this, to Moſes his unfolding the Myſtery of God's joining Power and Mercy: Let the Power of my Lord be great as that thou haſt ſpoken, The Lord is long-ſuffering and of great Mercy, forgiving Iniquity and Tranſgreſſion: Forgive, I beſeech thee, this People; which is as to ſay, Let thy Mercy which is thy Power, or which proceeds from and is ſtrengthned by the Almighty Power that is in thee, be ſhown in pardoning: or, thou, O God, which declareſt thy Almighty Power chiefly in ſhewing Mercy and Pity, forgive thy People.

‖ ἄτοπον γὰρ ἂν εἴη εἴ τις φαίη φιλεῖν τὸν Δία. Ariſtot. mag. Moral. lib. 2. cap. 11. Tom. 3. oper. Edit. Du Val, Paris 1639.

Part I. But be it ſo, that Want, and Weakneſs, and Paſſion, as in Man, are Furtherances unto and Companions of, yea and the very riſe of Mercy in Man; yet that the ſame muſt hold in God ſo as he cannot be inwardly in his Soul merciful, unleſs he be merciful from the ſame Principle that Man is, muſt be denied. How oft is it ſaid, that God is not merciful as Man is, but infinitely beyond all that the Thoughts and Apprehenſions of Man can reach to, either in his own Mercies he thinks himſelf to ſhew, yea or that he is not able to think what Mercy is, or what it ſhould be in God, they are of ſuch an infinite Extent beyond his poſſible Imaginations, as Heaven is above the Earth? Shall then Man's Mercies, or the Imperfections and Paſſions of them be made the meaſure of what Mercy it ſelf is in God? God forbid. Man loveth not without a Paſſion, and therefore ſhall not God who is Love (becauſe he loves not as Man doth) be ſaid properly to love his Creatures out of a pure and perfect Principle of Love in himſelf, as truly as to love himſelf or his Son? It is ſaid, the Weakneſs of God is ſtronger than Man: and ſhall the Weakneſs of Man be the meaſure to him that is the God and Strength of Iſrael, which in 1 Sam. 15. 29. is ſo highly proteſted againſt? The Strength of Iſrael is not as Man, &c. O that ever the Weakneſs of the Creature ſhould have been thought to have been a Rule for the Strength of Iſrael!

Again, in what doth the true Subſtance and Reality of Mercy lie and conſiſt? Not in an Apprehenſion of ones own ſelf to be ſubject or expoſed to the like Diſtreſſes, or in being troubled and grieved, as the Conſequents of that Apprehenſion, eſpecially if he cannot help. Theſe are but accidental unto Mercy, and but as it is in ſuch or ſuch a Subject that is ſubjected unto Infirmities, as in a Man it is who alone is capable of thoſe foremention'd Paſſions: For Mercy, and that more truly, is in Chriſt glorified, yea in the Angels and Spirits of juſt Men made perfect; and therefore perfect in this Vertue, but without any of theſe Paſſions and Diſturbances as Requiſites to move them to be merciful. In what doth the Subſtance, yea the Height of Mercy lie and conſiſt, but in a Readineſs and Promptneſs of Affection in the Will of God to relieve and ſuccour thoſe that are in Miſery whom he loves, joined with Fulneſs of Power to relieve them? Which latter Clauſe [with Fulneſs of Power] doth eſpecially render him moſt truly and highly merciful.

I ſhall further proceed to ſhew how the Parallel of thoſe other Attributes, Grace, Goodneſs and Truth, as well as with Mercy, will abundantly put to Silence another Objection.

Object. 3. How can that (ſay they) be an eſſential Attribute in God's Nature, which if Man had never been miſerable, had not been in God? For Mercy ſpeaks a relation unto Sin and Miſery; and if it depend on ſuch a Condition of ours, or the Creatures being firſt miſerable, then it muſt be in God but contingently and occaſionally, and not naturally.

Anſw. The Anſwer is from what the Parallel of thoſe four Attributes afford, as likewiſe many other Attributes which might be inſtanced in.

1. Power or Might in God relateth unto external Effects, as unto the Creation of this Frame of Heaven and Earth, &c. Rom. 1. 20. Now before God ever made any of them, or ſuppoſe he never had made any, ſhall we ſay he had not eſſential Power inherent in him, whereby he was able to make them, and in reſpect thereunto was truly a God Almighty?

2. Again, his Power relates unto all he is ſtill able to make or effect, and not to be confined unto what he hath done. There are an Infinity of things poſſible to be done by him, which his Power will never produce, but ſhall remain in a State of mere Poſſibility; and yet his being ſtiled Almighty, includes a Power to be in him, in reſpect to thoſe, as when 'tis ſaid, God is able to raiſe up out of theſe Stones Children to Abraham, Mat. 26. 53. Luke 19. 40. Mark 14. 36. His Divine Ability is expreſly ſaid to extend to theſe, and ſhall we affirm he had no ſuch radical Power in reſpect to theſe, becauſe he will never put it forth in bringing them to Exiſtence? nay it muſt be ſaid, that things thus poſſible are only and merely called ſuch in reſpect of the Power of his Nature, but things which he cauſeth actually do reſpect his Will and good Pleaſure joining with the Power of his Nature; Pſal. 115. 3. But our God is in the Heavens, he hath done whatſoever he pleaſed.

3. In like manner the Parallel of Grace and Goodneſs evinceth the ſame. Had not God been good, (who is Goodneſs it ſelf, both as he is God, and in reſpect of a communicative Diſpoſition in himſelf, who is the Fountain of Goodneſs) altho yet he had never made a Creature to communicate any good things to? Surely yes. Then likewiſe he is gracious, tho his Pleaſure had been never to have had one Angel or Man exiſted whom he would be gracious unto. The Root of this Matter had been in him, tho never no Effect or Fruit of it had appeared above ground. His Grace muſt be acknowledged to reſpect the Creature only, for he is no way gracious to himſelf; and would not he thus have been, though no Creature had been? Muſt he of neceſſity have made Creatures, if he would be truly gracious? A Man is to be acknowledged one of a liberal Diſpoſition, who is ſo in his natural Temper, tho he lives alone in a deſolate Wilderneſs uninhabited, where there are no Poor, nor any one Perſon to beſtow his Alms, or communicate his Riches to. The great Element of Fire is Fire, and ready to burn, tho it never yet had any Fuel to prey upon. The like is to be ſaid of Truth, God cannot lie, Tit. 1. 2. and 'tis impoſſible, Heb. 6. 8. 'tis contrary to his Nature, and therefore Truth (the contrary thereto) is his Nature; and this had been ſo eternally, altho he had never given forth one Word of Promiſe or Threatning, or the like, for the Performance of which he might have been ſtiled True. Now yet it is apparent it was purely at his Will and Pleaſure, whether to have given forth any ſuch Word or not. And thus God alſo was truly and really merciful, and ready to forgive, altho he never had pardoned one Sin, nor ever had promiſed Pardon to any one Sinner. What need we ſay more?

Object. 4. If any further object that word [merciful] (רחם Racham) here uſed is a Metaphor taken from Bowels; but God hath no Bowels, and therefore it is but a metaphorical Attribute. I anſwer; Anſw. 1. That ſome, as Polanus, render the word רחם Racham, diligere, to love, to be the Root of it; and to be ſure Love in God is no metaphorical Attribute.

Anſw. 2. According to the meaſure of this Argument, becauſe this Almighty Power or Strength in God is expreſſed by an Arm, as Pſal. 103. 13. Luke 1. 51. or that his all-ſeeing Knowledg is ſet forth by an Eye, and Eyes that run thorow the Earth, 2 Chron. 16. 9. that behold the Nations, Pſal. 66. 7. yea, behold all things in Heaven and Earth, Pſal. 113. 6. Doth this put any Prejudice that Power and Knowledg in him ſignified thereby ſhould not be eſſential? No more doth the aſcribing Bowels to him exclude Mercy from being ſuch. God ſpeaks to us hereby in our own puerilis, in our own childiſh Language, ſo to affect us the more, yet ſo as there is ſubſtantial Reality in his Heart anſwering to, yea tranſcending what Metaphors can expreſs. And ſhould he ſpeak theſe heavenly things in their own Language, we could not receive them, as Chriſt tells us, John 3. 12.

And certainly the Pſalmiſt's Argument is ſo convincing, that as himſelf prefaceth of it, none of the moſt brutiſh among the Heathens ſhould be able to gainſay it, Pſal. 94. 9. namely, why God as God muſt have an Omniſciency or an All-knowing Power within himſelf, which the Scripture expreſſes by an Ear, or an Eye: He that planted the Ear, ſhall not he hear? He that framed the Eye, ſhall not he ſee? He that teacheth Man Knowledg, ſhall not he underſtand? This as certainly holds undeniable in this Point of Mercy; Shall not he that planted the Inwards of us Men, and Bowels of Mercy and Pity in them, a natural Storge in Parents to their Children, and hath taught us to love, 1 Theſſ. 4. 9. and be good, and kind, and merciful to one another after his own Example: Col. 3. 12, 13. Put on (as the Elect of God) Bowels of Mercies, Kindneſs, Humbleneſs of Mind, Meekneſs, Long-ſuffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, &c. Shall not he have eminently and tranſcendently the Perfections of all theſe towards them he intends to love and make his Children? Like as a Father pitieth his Children, ſo doth the Lord them that fear him, Pſal. 103. 13. The Foundation of the Pſalmiſt's Reaſoning lies in this, that it is impoſſible any Excellency ſhould be in the Creature, of which God is and muſt be the Author, but the ſame muſt be virtually and in an higher Reality in God himſelf. 'Tis true indeed, that God hath neither Eyes nor Bowels of Fleſh, as Job ſays of him, and to him; Haſt thou Eyes of Fleſh, or ſeeſt thou as Man ſees? that is, by the means of ſuch Organs or Inſtruments of that Senſe; Job 10. 4. So ſay I, Hath he Bowels of Fleſh? that is, ſuch dolorous painful Pangs of Grief and Trouble as we frail Men clothed with Fleſh uſe to have, when moved with Pity? or is he merciful only as Man is? Wo were then to us. I am God and not Man, ſays he, Hoſ. 11. 9. and he ſpeaks it upon occaſion of his being moved to Mercy, as ver. 8. and yet he profeſſeth himſelf moved to Mercy as God, tho not as Man; and yet as infinitely beyond us as the Godhead; from whence he argues his tranſcending Mercy exceedeth what is in Man as that Speech inſinuates. So as whilſt in ver. 8. he ſpeaks of himſelf after the manner of Men, as of his Heart and Bowels being turned within him; yet there in the 9th he avoweth of himſelf, that he is moved hereunto as God, and not as Man is; in ſo high ſublime a way as is proper to him alone as God, and yet with a Mercy (repreſented by Bowels and Heart) which is as infinite as his Godhead is, yea it is his very Godhead. For ſo that Speech that he aſſumes to himſelf, and this which I have brought forth by way of Anſwer to an Objection, I might have improved into two ſtrong Arguments for the thing in hand, that Mercy is ſubſtantially and properly in him.

Anſw. 3. That Bowels, tho a Metaphor, yet in its Analogy is peculiarly fitted and adapted ſingularly to expreſs what the inward natural Diſpoſition of any one is. For,

1*ſt*. It imports a natural Affection, for it is put to expreſs that which we call Storge, or the natural Affection that is in Parents.

And, 2*dly*. With all the moſt Inwardneſs and Depth of that Affection. The Eye that ſerved to expreſs God's Omniſcience, the Arm his Omnipotence; theſe are outward Parts: but the Bowels are of all moſt inward, and therefore of all other ſpeak what is moſt inward in God himſelf, and imports a Principle of being merciful moved from within himſelf.

CHAP. XIII.

That in every Object there is ſome ſpecial Attractive to affect the Faculties and Principles in Man's Heart, to excite them to act on it. That this General Maxim holds true, as to all the main Acts of Faith, for Forgiveneſs: And that the Mercies of God have the moſt proper Influence into the Faith of Forgiveneſs of Sins, of all other Attributes in God. This Aſſertion carried thorow, and made good, in all the eminent Acts of Faith.

WE all know and acknowledg, that in the Nature of the thing the whole Being and Subſiſtence of all ſorts of Mercies vouchſafed to us, hold of thoſe Mercies that are in God; ſo as were it not that Mercy is with him, our Faith would be in vain, and we ſhould have no ſuch things or Subject-matter at all for us to believe. But that which I endeavour to demonſtrate is, that take all ſorts of Mercies with the particular Promiſes made of them, as they come to be made Objects of our Faith, and in that reſpect the original Mercies in God's Nature are the great Fundamental which doth give and contribute an eſſe credibile, a Credibility, or a Believeableneſs unto all the Promiſes of Mercies, and a Hopefulneſs to obtain them: So as not only an Apprehenſion that God who is faithful in his Nature, hath made ſuch Promiſes, and uſeth to beſtow ſuch Mercies, but the Thought that there are ſuch Riches of Mercy in his Heart and Nature plentifully and naturally to afford them, wonderfully addeth to the Credibility and Believeableneſs (as I call it) of thoſe Promiſes and particular Mercies, to be derived from that Fountain which we need or deſire. For as all particular Mercies promiſed have their Dependance upon the Mercies of God's Nature, in eſſe rei, in the Nature of the thing, (for they have their Being thence, as from the Father of them); ſo further, our Knowledg and Apprehenſions, that ſuch a Treaſure of Grace is in his Nature, mightily ſtrengthneth, and encourageth, and enhanceth Faith in us. There is that in all other Objects, whether of Senſe or Knowledg, which Philoſophers term Motivum objectum, viz. that thing or Conſideration in the Object propoſed or apprehended, which is apt, and fitted moſt properly to move, affect, and make Impreſſion upon that Faculty, Principle or Habit, that God hath made for it, and ſuted to it; as that beautiful Colours ſhould affect the Sight or Fancy. The like by Analogy holds in the Objects of Divine Faith. And what thoſe Naturaliſts term the objective Motive, or that which in the Object moveth, that in Divine Objects propoſed to Faith, the Holy Ghoſt

Quod conſtituit objecta divina in eſſe credibile: nam credibile, ut credibile, eſt ratio objectiva. Suarez de fide.

Ghoſt (as we ſhall ſee) uſing the ſame Language, ſtiles Perſuaſivum fidei, the Perſwaſives of Faith. There are ſome ſpecial things in theſe Objects that chiefly perſwade the Soul unto believing them, or bringing the Heart over to believe, and ſo to embrace them accordingly. We find in Scripture the great Act of believing to be from our being firſt perſwaded; as Heb. 11. 13. Having ſeen the Promiſes afar of, (there's the Object) they were perſwaded ('tis ſaid) and embraced them. And again, the ſame word is uſed of Abraham's Faith; Being perſwaded, &c. Rom. 4. 21. The Schoolmen do therefore accurately enquire, what in Divine Objects principally it is that conſtitutes them in eſſe credibile, or that gives their Being of Credibility to them.

To bring this down to our purpoſe: From hence it follows, That what thing or things in Divine Objects revealed, are found to be the moſt fit and powerful in the way of Object, to make a Perſwaſion in the Heart to a believing or Embracement of them, when they are propoſed to us; that thing or thoſe things we muſt acknowledg to give unto them their eſſe credibile, or their Being of Believeableneſs. Let us therefore now conſider if that the View of the Sight, and Light of the Mercies in God's Nature, let into the Soul, and ſhining upon the Promiſes of Mercy, like as the Light upon Colours, do not ſuperadd a Luſtre and Life upon them, and impregnate them, as the Sun doth the Plants, and all things below that have either Life, Spirit, or Virtue in them. Let us try if the Thoughts of theſe Mercies in God will not put Life into, and quicken the Soul of him that views them together with thoſe Promiſes; yea, and contribute ſo much to perſwade to the Faith of them, altho the Promiſes be but indefinite Promiſes or Declarations of God's Will touching the Forgiveneſs of Sins, altho theſe Promiſes be indefinite (I ſay) as to Perſons, not naming who, nor excluding any; yet let us, if the Thoughts of God's Mercies do not contribute and bring with the Conſideration of them the moſt of what is or may be ſuppoſed Motivum, or Perſuaſivum fidei, that which may perſwade or draw out a Faith on ſuch Promiſes. The Truth of this will beſt appear by a Survey made of what are the moſt eminent Acts of Faith. There are three more eminent Acts of this Faith for Forgiveneſs, and all other ſpiritual Bleſſings.

1. There is a Sight of the things promiſed, or to be believed, but then that Sight muſt be ſuch a Sight as hath an ὑπόστασις or Subſiſtence of the things promiſed, made, and given to the Heart of a Believer, together with the Propoſal of them.

2. There is a diſcerning of a Goodneſs in them, to allure the Will and Affections to embrace them, and cleave to them.

3. There is a truſting on God, and a relying on him, for the Performance of them.

I need not quote Scriptures that theſe are the Acts of Faith. Two of them, viz. Sight and Embracing them, you have ſeen in the forementioned Heb. 11. 13. The other of Truſting you meet with every where almoſt where Faith is ſpoken of. I ſhall carry the Reaſons of the preſent Aſſertion thorow each of theſe three Acts, and ſhew how it holds good in each of them.

1ſt. The firſt Act of Faith is a Sight of the things believed, with a real Subſiſtence given to them in the Soul until the time of Performance. Now the Mercies in God apprehended, do give the moſt real Subſiſtence unto Forgiveneſs, and all other Benefits whatſoever.

The Nature of Faith requires that its Object be preſented to it, not with bare Knowledg thereof only, but with a Subſiſtence and Reality given to it in the Heart of a Believer; for Faith is defined to be the ὑπόστασις, the Subſtance or Subſiſtence of things hoped for, Heb. 11. 1. and likewiſe the Evidence or Sight of things tho not ſeen. For which compare Heb. 11. v. 1. v. 19, 27. God in the mean while, during the Space and Time that comes between the Promiſe and the Performance it ſelf, is pleaſed to vouchſafe an afore-hand Image and ſubſtantial Impreſs or ὑπόστασις, to the end to ſupport the Heart. Look, as the Son of God, the ſecond Perſon, being at laſt actually to be made Fleſh, it was meet and proper for him in the mean time, while he was but in the Promiſe, that he above any other of the Perſons ſhould be the Perſon who ſhould vouchſafe theſe precurſory forehand Apparitions unto the Fathers of the Old Teſtament, which gave an ὑπόστασις unto their Faith, until the great Promiſe of his Coming in the Fleſh, perſonally united, ſhould be performed: So in ſome Analogy it is in the Matter before us. I have alledged this but by way of Illuſtration only of God's gracious Diſpenſation to his People in reſpect of a Subſiſtence vouchſafed to their Senſe, which bears ſome Reſemblance unto that Subſiſtence vouchſafed to Faith inwardly, whereby the things as yet remaining in the Promiſe are ſet before the Soul. Which things therefore when believed, muſt be ſome way made real and ſubſiſtent, otherwiſe indeed it is not a true Sight or ſpiritual Faith; but vaniſheth with its Object propoſed into an empty Notion and Speculation. It is therefore that thing in God, the Revelation of which gives a Subſiſtence to the Object of Faith, that doth put it into an eſſe credibile, a Being of Believeableneſs.

I now proceed then to demonſtrate that our firſt real believing the Mercies in God do give a Subſiſtence unto Forgiveneſs in the Promiſes.

The Subſiſtence that any Divine Object hath, is from a real and true Knowledg of God himſelf made ſubſiſtent, firſt to the Soul, and then explicitely or implicitely it concurreth to every true Act of Faith of any other particular Object. Our Saviour therefore inſtructing them in particular Acts of Faith, Mark 11. 23, 24. firſt propoſeth this general Rule to them requiſite to all true Faith; ver. 22. Have Faith in God, or, have the Faith of God, becauſe into that Faith of him, or ſomething in him, (as his Power or Truth, &c.) is the Subſiſtence of every particular thing promiſed, reſolved. He that comes to God muſt believe that he is, &c. Heb. 11. 6. This is general to all true Faith, but more particularly that Attribute or Relation in God which is the moſt proper and direct Cauſe of the thing promiſed, in eſſe rei, in the Being thereof; that very ſame Attribute being viewed by Faith, together with the Promiſe, is of all other fitted moſt properly to give this Subſiſtence to our Faith. Thus when Abraham found that his Body was dead, and Sarah's Womb dead as to Procreation, Rom. 4. 19. and that yet God had promiſed him a Son; that Attribute in God, on which this thing promiſed did moſt directly and proximately depend, that Attribute accordingly was with the Promiſe preſented to Abraham's Faith, and he was perſwaded that what he had promiſed, he was able to perform, and ſo became ſtrong in Faith, giving Glory to God, Rom. 4. 20, 21. Where we ſee that Perſwaſion the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, the moſt proper Ratio credendi, or ultimate ground of Believing, and perſwaſive of his Faith in that very particular thing, was that ſpecial Attribute that in God was the moſt proper Cauſe of the thing promiſed; and the ſame was it which gave the Subſiſtence to the thing, and to his Faith.

Now therefore, to come home to the thing in hand: It is hence to be obſerved by this general Rule or Maxim, that whenſoever the Heart of a Sinner ſhall attempt to believe the Forgiveneſs of Sin, there is nothing can be ſuppoſed to be in God, or concerning God, revealed, that ſhould give a greater Reality, and Subſiſtence, and Certainty of the Promiſes in and to the Heart of a Believer, than the Conſideration of thoſe Mercies in God, which are the moſt eminent Cauſe of that Forgiveneſs, which is the thing promiſed. When the Soul conſiders, that he who is ſo great a God, and ſo greatly merciful and gracious, is the ſame God who hath promiſed it, and hath means in him to make it good; what other thing (I ſay) can be ſo great a Perſwaſive to believe as the Light hereof? And the greater the Light thereof is, which is brought down into ſuch a Promiſe, and with the Promiſe ſhines into the Heart, the more, and in the greateſt degree, doth the Light of the true Subſiſtence of Forgiveneſs ſhine with it, and becomes realized to the Soul, and appears clothed with ſuch an Evidence and Subſiſtence as will efficaciouſly ſtrike, move, and draw out real Faith, that being the Principle which is properly and ſpecially ſuted to that Object. And ſeeing it is the Light of God himſelf ſhining in ſome Attribute or other, either habitually or actually, implicitely or explicitely, immediately or remotely, that muſt be the Bottom of Faith, and accompany Faith always, and in every Promiſe give that Subſiſtence ſpoken of unto Faith, (whether it be his Truth, Faithfulneſs, Goodneſs, or the like;) then certainly that which of all other muſt needs be moſt effectual and genuine, in this caſe of Forgiveneſs, is this Light and Faith into God's Mercies; for they are thoſe which move God moſt to forgive, and therefore move us moſt to believe in God for it.

And the Reaſon of this further is, that although all Benefits whatever are the Effects of Mercy, and ſo ſtiled, (as the Call of the Gentiles is, Rom. 15. 9. and the Gentiles glorify God for his Mercy, and the Splendor of the whole of their Salvation from Converſion downwards, as a People that had not obtained Mercy, but now have obtained Mercy, 1 Pet. 2. 10.) yet Forgiveneſs of Sins doth of all other moſt purely, immediately, and directly, depend upon Mercies. Forgiveneſs is a pure Act of and from Grace; as old Zachary ſpeaks in his Song; Luke 1. 77, 78. To give the Knowledg of Salvation by the Remiſſion of Sins, through the tender Mercies (or Bowels) of our God. To give other things, or to do for us in another kind, may require the calling in the Help of ſome other Attribute immediately to effect it; as the Reſurrection of our Bodies, and glorifying of us, which (though it be a Work of infinite Mercy) requires the Aid of Power to effect it, even that Power whereby he is able to ſubdue all things to himſelf, Phil. 3. 21. But Forgiveneſs and Pardon of Sin peculiarly and immediately hold of Mercy, and own and adore Mercy for their immediate Founder and Benefactor. Pardon and Forgiveneſs are a pure Emanation from Grace, and iſſue in the Glory thereof, above all other in God; Epheſ. 1. 7. In Chriſt we have the Forgiveneſs of Sins according to the Riches of his Grace; Exod. 34. 7. The Lord God, gracious and merciful; and then, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin. This is a Stream that ſprings and flows out immediately from that Fountain; Pſal. 86. 5. The Lord is good, and ready to forgive; plenteous in Mercy. His being ready to forgive, flows guſhing forth from his Goodneſs, and his being plenteous in Mercy. God is the Father of Mercies, all Mercies beſtowed being the moſt natural and immediate Children of Mercy in himſelf; and he thereout giving Exiſtence and Being to them, as a Father doth to his Children. And from hence the Heart of an humble Sinner, when it is to ſeek any Mercies at the hand of God, or hath received any, may and will readily know and acknowledg mere Mercy, infinite Mercy, to be the Father of them. But above all other, Pardon (when either we come to ſeek it, or to be thankful for it, this Forgiveneſs of Sins being the firſt-born of Benefits in our Calling) will own and know its Father, the Father of Mercies, and cauſe the Heart to fall upon its Knees, and ask Bleſſing for it.

The Truth of that general Maxim holds in any other Attribute, as touching that particular Dependency which its proper Effects have upon it; as when God is ſtiled the Father of Lights, in relation unto Wiſdom to be asked and given; and when he is called the Lord of Hope, when Joy and Peace in believing are ſpoken of; and the God of all Comforts, and Father of Glory, when Comfort and Glory are to be beſtowed. But there is a farther Reaſon why this or that Attribute in God, that gives the Subſiſtence to the Performance, ſhould above all other moſt properly conduce to give the Subſiſtence to the Faith of a Believer, (although the Subſiſtence of the Performance is differing from the Subſiſtence given to Faith in the mean time) becauſe that hereby Faith doth ſee all along (even until the Performance of the promiſed Bleſſings) the Exiſtence of them in what are their native Roots and direct immediate Cauſes. Thus it is ſaid, Heb. 11. 13. They ſaw the Promiſes afar off, and were perſwaded. That Phraſe AFAR OFF, refers not wholly or altogether to an importing the diſtance of time to come e're performed, (tho take that in alſo) but alſo to the Words that went before, they ſaw them afar off: that is, tho the Mercies were at a diſtance as to their individual Exiſtence, which was afar off, and remote out of ſight; yet however this Act of their Faith was a Sight, for they ſaw them really ſubſiſting, or elſe their Faith had not been worthy the Name of Sight. So then they were preſented as if really ſubſiſting afar of. Now wherein or whereby ſhould it be that they ſaw them thus ſubſiſting afore-hand, when the things had not any actual Exiſtence? There certainly was a ſeeing them in God, and in God by viewing thoſe Attributes eſpecially that were to be the moſt direct and native Cauſes of them. The Knowledg of Philoſophy holds ſome Reſemblance, or like kind of Exiſtence with this. Philoſophy inſtructs us, that tho Roſes in Winter have no Exiſtence, and tho Tulips have no Flower nor Stalks above Ground for the greateſt part of the Year, and ſo they have not an actual Exiſtence for ſo long time, yet that in a true Senſe they may be ſaid to have a real Being and Exiſtence in Nature, the Mother and Womb of all things. If vulgar Apprehenſions might be Judges of this, they will ſay, where is it? they are not, for we ſee no ſuch things extant. But a Philoſopher, or a wiſe Gardener, will tell you, that they have a Being in their Roots; yea, and that each and every kind of thoſe Flowers have a ſeveral Being in their ſeveral Roots proper to their kind; in which, as in their Cauſes, they have a latent hidden Exiſtence and Being, which Reaſon aſſures them to be true. And therefore a Gardener doth (before Summer comes) put a high Value upon ſuch Roots, as thoſe that will bring forth ſuch Flowers. He ſees them afar off in thoſe Roots, as their Cauſes, many Months before, and expects their growing up in their Seaſons: Even thus, and more ſatisfyingly doth Faith ſee in God a Subſiſtence of the Promiſes, whilſt it views them in thoſe Attributes which are the proper Originals of them, according to their kind.

I ſhall now conſider the ſecond Act of Faith, which is, Embrace the Promiſe; and I ſhall demonſtrate, that an enlarged Conſideration of the Mercies of God's Nature do wonderfully perſwade the Heart to embrace the Promiſes of Forgiveneſs. The Promiſes do thus perſwade by Mercy's ſuperadding a real Taſte of tranſcendent Goodneſs and Sweetneſs, an overcoming Sweetneſs, unto this grand Benefit of Forgiveneſs, and the Promiſes thereof, by which the Will and Affections are demulced, and effectually drawn to embrace them. That theſe Benefits of Salvation are in themſelves good, and muſt needs be moſt welcome, or (as the Apoſtle expreſſeth it, 1 Tim. 1. 15.) worthy of all Acceptation by a Sinner ſenſible of its own ſinful Miſery, we may very well and readily conceive, for they are ſuted unto all Self-love in ſuch a Soul. But farther, that unto a truly broken humbled Sinner, the Mercies that are in God (out of which he pardons) ſhould have (as needs they muſt) infinitely more of Goodneſs and Sweetneſs in them than Pardon, or all things elſe that are in the Promiſes, or apprehended with them, is that which a Soul, that hath taſted how good the Lord is, will inſtantly acknowledg. A Promiſe of Life to a condemned Man is ſweet; for Life is ſweet, (as we ſay) but thy Loving-kindneſs (ſaid David, who had taſted how good the Lord is) is better than Life, and infinitely ſweeter, Pſal. 63. 3. And again, ſays David, Becauſe thy Mercy is good, deliver thou me, Pſal. 109. 21. Deliverance was good; yea, but the Mercy in God apprehended therewith, was infinitely more good to him, which was the greateſt Inducement to him to ſeek Deliverance. And indeed God's Mercy doth eminently bear the Stile of Goodneſs. Thus God himſelf ſays to Moſes, (Exod. 33. 18, 30. compared) I will make all my Goodneſs paſs before thee: I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious. And David in this Pſalm firſt laid hold on the Goodneſs that is in the Mercy of God, and then prays and pleads, Deliver me. The ſame again you have, Pſal. 69. 16. Hear me, for thy Loving-kindneſs is good: that is, it is ſweet, 'tis pleaſant. And when the thing ſought for comes to be granted and obtained, a Believer rejoiceth more in the Mercy and Loving-kindneſs he finds to be in God's Heart towards him, than in the Benefit vouchſafed, and that is it which takes his Heart; Pſal. 31. 7. I will be glad and rejoice in thy Mercy: for thou haſt conſidered my Trouble, thou haſt known my Soul in Adverſities. That God's Mercy and Kindneſs ſhould own his Soul at ſuch a time, was more than the Deliverance. And as the Mercy of God ſtirs up the Soul thus to a rejoicing at the Performance, ſo it pleaſantly allures and obligeth the Soul to truſt on the Promiſe in hope of Performance; as thoſe Words (1 Pet. 2. 3.) imply, If ſo be you have taſted that the Lord is gracious. As we find them in the Apoſtle they do refer unto the Pſalmiſt's Speech, (Pſal. 34. 8. O taſte and ſee that the Lord is good!) for his Grace and Mercy are his Goodneſs; for ſo the Apoſtle renders it, If you have taſted that the Lord is gracious. The Vulgar Tranſlation, whenever the Pſalmiſt ſays God is good, do ſtill render it ſuavis eſt Dominus, the Lord is ſweet; and his Mercies indeed are the primum dulce, the original Sweetneſs of all other which diffuſe Deliciouſneſs both into the Promiſes and the Benefits vouchſafed, and make them to be as Honey to the Taſte; and it is that Taſte of his Graciouſneſs which cauſeth us joyfully to receive and embrace them, and then to truſt in him, (which is the next Act) for it follows in the next Words of that Verſe of that Pſalm, Bleſſed is the Man that truſteth in him. The Apoſtle in that Place mentioned inſtanceth in thoſe that were and are but new-born Babes in Chriſtianity; of whom yet he ſays, if ſo be you have taſted that the Lord is gracious. What is it eſpecially that Chriſtians, whilſt Babes, do from the firſt of their Faith ſeek out in the firſt and chief Place for? It is the Forgiveneſs of their Sins, and that Benefit it is which God firſt vouchſafes them as to their Senſe: And therefore moſt ſutably to that State of theirs the Apoſtle ſpeaks thus to them, with difference from others grown up; I write unto you Babes, becauſe your Sins are forgiven you, 1 John 2. 12. He writes it as the moſt welcome News to them, and as that which whilſt Babes they are in the moſt eager purſuance of, and thence they ſeek out in the Word for Promiſes that ſpeak Forgiveneſs, and thoſe they ſuck and lie tugging at, even as Infants uſe to do the Breaſt for the Milk that is in it, and this from the firſt of their Birth next after Crying. And if they could come at Variety of Breaſts, they would and do affect the ſweeteſt Milk: and hereto they are led by a Taſte of that Sweetneſs. And the Apoſtle's Alluſion is unto this, whilſt he exhorts us as new-born Babes, to deſire the ſincere Milk of the Word; and ſubjoins, if ſo be you have taſted that the Lord is gracious, namely, in his having forgiven you all your Treſpaſſes which ſo earneſtly you then ſought. And he joins theſe two together; for whilſt we are ſeeking or ſucking of Forgiveneſs out of particular Promiſes of Forgiveneſs, we find God come at laſt, and his Mercy and Grace that forgive we meet with therein, and feel them to flow in with the Promiſe, for they are the Fountain of Forgiveneſs, and of the Promiſes alſo. It is God you ſee who is ſaid to be taſted, and the Sweetneſs of his Mercies. It is not ſaid ſo much that the Sweetneſs of Pardon, or that Salvation, or the Promiſe, are taſted: but over and above all it is God's Grace that is taſted in and with them all, and that is it which makes us ſo greedy and deſirous to ſuck Comfort out of thoſe Breaſts of Conſolation. For that Deſire the Apoſtle ſays flows from Taſte, and this our ſucking and taſting are thorow Faith, and in the Exerciſe of that we taſte the Grace that is in God's and Chriſt's Heart towards us, whereof that Grace in God's Nature is the Spring or Ocean rather, and we find that to be the moſt delicious of all other. My Advice therefore to thoſe that ſeek to believe, is to put in all of this Sugar they can gather and graſp out of the original Cane it ſelf, as in the Scriptures they find it ſprouting up, and therewith to ſweeten all the Promiſes they do or would lay hold on, as that which will moſt overcomingly perſwade their Wills to embrace them.

We will now conſider the third Act of Faith, which is Truſt in God, and will prove that the View and Intuition of the Mercies in God doth mightily ſtrengthen the Heart to truſt and ſtay it ſelf upon God for Forgiveneſs. And I ſhall ſhew how this is done, by perſwading the Heart even of the very Truth and Faithfulneſs of God in the Promiſes, and of the aſſured Performance of them: and how they give the moſt real Evidence; 1*ſt*. Of God's real Intention: And, 2*dly*. Of Ability in the Event to fulfil them. Which two are the main Cauſes of Truſt on the Truth of any Promiſe. And God's Mercies do ſufficiently alone aſſure us of all theſe, tho we had no other Evidence thereof.

It is needleſs to inſiſt, that Truſt is an Act of Faith, and an eminent Act thereof, and how a Saint is characterized to be one that hopes in God's Mercy, Pſal. 33. 18. Pſal. 147. 11. and one that truſteth in his Mercy, Pſal. 13. 5. and Pſal. 52. 8. I truſt in the Mercy of God for ever and ever. That which is eſpecially incumbent on me is to give Demonſtration that the ample Meditation of God's Mercies will prove moſt effective to cauſe (as David's Word is, Pſal. 119. 49.) the Heart to truſt in God over and above the Conſideration of the Promiſes alone.

It may be thought, that God having once given forth Promiſes of Forgiveneſs in his Word, we ſhould need the Conſideration of his Mercies no more; for out of Mercy it is that the Promiſes are given, and of Mercy it is they ſpeak, and carry it in the Mouth of them. Of what Uſe then can it be to have a diſtinct View of theſe Mercies, (whereof we treat) in order to draw forth Truſt on them, ſince the Ground of that is the Truth of God? If therefore our Faith needed an Eſtabliſhment in thoſe Promiſes, it may have Recourſe rather unto the Truth of God, or unto the Aſſurance that God is true in his Word, and faithful in his Promiſes; and as for Mercy, that is ſufficiently ſuppoſed in his Promiſes themſelves.

I acknowledg that theſe other Attributes of Truth and Faithfulneſs have their ſhare, and a great ſhare too, in influencing the Support of our Faith. We cannot want the Knowledg of any of his Attributes, but our Faith will be the weaker for it. We cannot be without the knowledg of Truth eſpecially, which is therefore ſo frequently mentioned with Mercy. But yet ſtill our Hearts being too ſlow to believe, (as Chriſt hath told us) when deeply humbled once, do foment and harbour ſo many Jealouſies of God, and are as full of dark Cells of Fears, Doubts, Suſpicions of God, as full of Unbelief, carnal Reaſonings againſt it ſelf, as the Earth is of Damps, ſtifling Vapours contain'd in vaſt Caverns within the Womb of it: Our Hearts (I ſay) do therefore ſtand in need of the moſt ſpiritual Cordials, (as thoſe that dig in Mines, and work in the Earth's Caverns, are wont ever and anon to take) which Cordials, the moſt Sovereign to ſuch a fainting Soul apt to Sinkings, are the rich Mercies in the Heart of God, which like to a Box of the moſt coſtly Ointment, do, when opened, fill the whole Houſe (the Heart) with the Savour thereof; a Savour (if any) of Life unto Life, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Cor. 2. 16. But over and above what Spirit of Life and Conſolation God's Mercies in themſelves immediately afford, my Undertaking farther is to ſhew, that an ample View of theſe infinite Mercies entertained by us doth by Inference or Conſequence wonderfully conduce to our very Belief of the Truth, and Faithfulneſs, and Willingneſs of God manifeſted in thoſe Promiſes to forgive and pardon us, upon that Account. And I ſhall alſo ſtill continue the proſecution of my began-Exhortation, to preſs and urge this Practice and Courſe upon the Spirits of Believers, or Souls endeavouring to believe, viz. to fill and poſſeſs their Souls with the moſt comprehenſive Apprehenſions of the Mercies of God, as to the drawing forth of Truſt or Affiance on the Promiſes of Forgiveneſs, to be the moſt behoveful of all other. It is certain that in all Truſt and Confidence upon another, whether in humane Matters on Man, or divine on God, the Knowledg of the Perſon whom we truſt, and the inward Qualifications, and Diſpoſitions, and Habilities that are in that Perſon, are a greater Baſis and Ground for Truſt than all or any ſorts of Declarations of that Perſon, or any Obligations by Promiſes, Oaths, &c. can be ſuppoſed to be; 2 Tim. 1. 12. I know whom I have believed, or truſted, as it is varied in the Margin. His perfect Knowledg of the Perſon, viz. of God, did weigh above all with him, unto which fully accordeth that of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 9. 10. They that know thy Name, will truſt in thee. And tho Promiſes are the Means by which we believe, yet it is the Promiſer that is the Baſis or the Foundation on whom our Hearts ultimately and quietly reſt for the Performance. All our Confidence is therefore reſolved into the Perſon, and what he is. Indeed the Greatneſs of the Sum or Thing promiſed, and the Security given (whether it be by Bond or the like) do greatly conduce to chear the Heart of one that truſts; but ſtill all theſe are in the Virtue of what we apprehend the Promiſer to be in his inward and innate Diſpoſition and Habilities.

Part I.

There are two things eſpecially that give the real Truth to any Promiſe made, and chiefly beget the Adherence thereto in the Soul of any that confide thereon.

1. The Honeſty of the Promiſer in reſpect of a real Intention in him, when he made the Promiſe, and ſtill continuing in him to perform it.

2. That in the Event it will aſſuredly de facto be performed.

The Reaſon why I add the latter to the firſt, and join both together, is, that the Truth of a Promiſe notes a Reſpect and Relation unto an actual Performance, as that without which the Promiſe cannot be ſaid to be, or at leaſt will not prove true in the Reality of the thing, though it ſhould be never ſo faithfully intended by him that promiſed. Hence then he that doth believe the Truth of the Promiſes of Forgiveneſs, muſt neceſſarily be aſſured of the latter as well as the firſt; and indeed of both thoſe two things forementioned.

I ſhall ſpeak to each particularly, and ſhew how much our Faith on theſe two is confirmed, even by our Belief of this, that ſo great and infinite Mercies are in the Heart and Nature of God.

1. As to the Truth and Faithfulneſs of God's Intention in theſe Promiſes, that (ſay I) is as abundantly, if not more confirmed to us by our firm Belief of the Mercies in God, than by any other Arguments whatſoever; for it was Mercy in God that wholly made thoſe Promiſes, and was the Founder of them, and God had no other Motive to make them than his Mercies, and could have no other or greater Deſign in the making, but firmly to reſolve to perform them to the glorifying of his Mercy, which is the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and ending of all therein. And therefore the Belief of his Mercies muſt needs have as great an Influence into our Belief of the Truth of the Promiſes, as any other thing whatever.

1ſt. Mercy, pure Mercy, Tenderneſs of Mercy, made the Promiſes, and cauſed him firſt thus to declare of himſelf, I will be merciful, as Rom. 9. Exod. 33. Yea, and his Mercy was utterly free in his doing this. The Grace we are ſaved by is the freeſt Principle in God's Nature. He might have choſen whether ever or no he would have let fall'n a Word of Mercy to any of Mankind, and yet to chooſe he did it. And it was Mercy, pure Mercy, that was the Head of, and Leader on of all the reſt of the Attributes to concur in this Deſign.

Nor, 2dly. Had he any other End to attain upon the Sons of Men, which he ſhould have aimed at, or would obtain by his giving and uttering thoſe Promiſes, but that truly and really he ſhould forgive, muſt be all and the whole of his Intent, and utmoſt of the Deſign. Forgiveneſs of our Sins is wholly aſcribed unto Mercy, as being from the Riches of his Grace, Epheſ. 1. 7.

Nor indeed, 3dly. Could he have any other Deſign but this, it could not be to gain or bring us unto himſelf under the Pretenſions of Offers of Mercy, and the Overtures thereof; for himſelf knew and foreknew that we all were and would be ſuch wretched rechleſs Creatures in our ſelves, that all the Promulgations and Offers that ſhould or could be made, would not ſtir or move our Hearts a jot unto the leaſt Attempt of nearer Acceſs unto God, unleſs himſelf firſt moved us thereunto. Mercy it ſelf muſt work with the Promiſes, or we ſhould ſit ſtill and move not; Epheſ. 2. 4, 5. But God who is rich in Mercy, for his great Love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in Sins, hath quickned us together with Chriſt, (by Grace ye are ſaved) and hath raiſed us up together, &c. And Faith it is the Gift of God, and not of our ſelves, as there it follows. And therefore it had been in vain to have made Pretenſions of Promiſes in hopes or expectation of our being willing, or of our coming in, if God himſelf were not really reſolved; no, the Apoſtle hath reſolved us, it muſt be God himſelf muſt ſhew us that Mercy to cauſe us to will and run, Rom. 9. 16. Therefore as Mercy was the firſt and ſole Mover, ſo it muſt it ſelf be the Performer, or all is in vain.

4thly. Beſides this, let us weigh that our great God did long before he put forth thoſe Promiſes, both know and perfectly conſider with himſelf what Riches of Grace and Mercy lay by him, whereby he found his own Sufficiency over and over-abundantly to perform ſuch Promiſes, (which to perform is more eaſy for him than for us to think or ſpeak a word; I ſay unto thee, (ſays Chriſt, ὁ λόγος, the Word) thy Sins are forgiven thee, Mat. 9. 5. 'twas but a Word of his Mouth.) The All-ſufficiency of his own Heart told him how merciful he could for ever find in his Heart to be, (as our Phraſe is of our ſelves) and he firſt reckoned with himſelf, and told over what his Riches in Mercy were, and to what an infinite Sum they aroſe, and found by the Largeneſs of his Heart therein, that he could never be diſenabled or impoveriſhed in the Expence of them, nor his Heart grow narrower or ſcantier in proceſs of time afterwards, when Men ſhould have acted and perpetrated their Sins, than now it was when he made the Promiſe before they had ſinned. I know my Thoughts towards you, Thoughts of Peace,&c. Jer. 29. 11. And thereupon and withal there declares how in the End and Event (as I have phraſed it) the thing will aſſuredly be fulfilled which he had promiſed: ſo it follows, to give you an expected End: For I know my Thoughts towards you, (ſays he) I have ſumm'd and caſt up all. I know what I have reſolved, I am able to do, and therefore wait you, and expect the Iſſue: And likewiſe he found in himſelf, that he had for ever the abſolute and full Power of his own Will. And upon this and ſuch Fore-thoughts within himſelf, it was that he both took up thoſe Purpoſes of Forgiveneſs, and iſſued out from thence thoſe Promiſes adequate thereunto. When the Covenant of Grace and Mercy, the ſure Mercies, were given forth to David under the Type of him and his Houſe, but ſignifying his Seed Chriſt, and thoſe that were to be of him; David, in totum, and in the whole, reſolveth all thoſe Promiſes into God's own Greatneſs and All-ſufficiency within himſelf, as that from which alone, together with the Conſideration of his Chriſt, he was moved to make thoſe Promiſes; 2 Sam. 7. 21. For thy Word's ſake (which I would interpret of Chriſt, ὁ λόγος, the Word) and according to thine own Heart haſt thou done all theſe great things. And the great things he ſpeaks of done by God were his uttering thoſe Promiſes by Nathan, ver. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. which David indigitates, v. 19. But thou haſt ſpoken, &c. all which was in the Reality intended of Chriſt, and thoſe Children whom God gives him, (as the Apoſtle calls them) ſo Pſal. 89. 38, 39. Iſa. 55. And the Conſideration that God made theſe Promiſes ſo freely, and out of his own Heart, was that great Foundation which confirmed David's Heart in the Faith of thoſe Promiſes, and may abundantly ſtrengthen ours. Yea, the Promiſes themſelves that were made being ſo high and illuſtriouſly great, this became an invincible Argument to David's Faith, that God that made them was the true God, and he alone: So ver. 22. Wherefore thou art great, O Lord God: for there is none like thee, neither is there any God beſides thee: For he conſidered with himſelf, that it could not enter into the Hearts of Men, or of any mere Creature, to make ſuch Promiſes, of ſo large and ample Extent, of ſuch and ſo great Mercies and Forgiveneſs; Is this the manner of Men, O Lord God? ver. 19. And therefore if there were no other Evidence, this alone ſufficiently teſtified to him the Greatneſs of God; Thou art God alone: And his Heart being thus filled and enlarged with the Mercies of God, and the Greatneſs of God in them, he thereupon readily gave up his Faith to the Belief of the Truth of them. And no wonder if we find in that firſt Proclamation, Exod. 34. 7. The Lord God gracious, merciful, abundant in Goodneſs or Kindneſs, ſet firſt, and then to follow abundant in Truth alſo: For the Abundancy and Overflowing of that Kindneſs and Mercy that God in thoſe Declarations profeſſeth to be in himſelf, is that which aſſures us of the Truth and Reality of God's Heart in the whole of it, as alſo of thoſe Promiſes which next do follow, of pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin. His Truth in his Promiſes doth ſpring, and hath its Riſe from that Fountain, his Super-abundancy of Mercy. And as the Promiſes are ſaid to be true in Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 18, 20. becauſe he purchaſed them; ſo upon the like Ground they may alſo be ſaid to be true in God, becauſe Mercy is the Founder and Maintainer of them. And from hence it follows, that as God's own knowing his own Heart, and Riches, and All-ſufficiency, to perform what he ſhould promiſe, cauſed him to engage his Truth at firſt in making theſe Promiſes; ſo anſwerably it is operative in the Soul of a Believer, the more it comes to believe the Truth of thoſe Promiſes, as there is a good Reaſon it ſhould do ſo. For this is a ſure and undeniable Rule, that what moſt moves God's Heart to do a thing, that when declared and revealed by God, muſt needs be moſt efficacious to cauſe the Heart of a Sinner to believe that he will do it.

Compare with it Pſal. 89. 28, 29. Jer. 55.

Part I.

The 2*d* thing I propoſed, as that which goes to make up the Truth of a Promiſe, is the aſſured Reality of the Performance of it in the Event, or as the Prophet ſpeaks, that tho it tarry, wait for it, becauſe it will ſurely come, it will not tarry, Hab. 2. 3. that is, that it will certainly, in the Iſſue, be fulfilled, for otherwiſe the Promiſe is not re ipſa true, as to the thing it ſelf, and ſo not ſuch as he that is to confide in it, may build upon it. And the Reaſon of this is not only that the Subſtantialneſs and Eſſentiality of a Promiſe relates to the actual Execution of it, but farther likewiſe, becauſe often it falls out that the Perſon promiſing may have honeſtly and faithfully intended it, and promiſed it, and yet in the Iſſue prove unable to perform, as we ſee amongſt Men it often falls out; and then in that caſe and reſpect the Promiſe doth in Reality fall ſhort of its eventual Truth. Hence therefore to conſtitute a Promiſe true, there muſt be added unto the Sincerity of the Intention of the Promiſer, the Reality of making the Promiſe good; and that as neceſſarily doth farther depend upon a full and ſufficient Ability in the Promiſer to perform it, as it doth upon the Honeſty of his Intention. Hence therefore in like manner it muſt be acknowledged, that in and to the full Confidence of Faith of him that depends upon the Promiſe of another, there muſt neceſſarily alſo be a Perſwaſion of the full and perfect Ability of the Promiſer in the Iſſue certainly to perform it; ſo that on his part it ſhall not, nor can any way be hindred. And this Belief of the Ability of the Promiſer to accompliſh, is as great an Ingredient into Truſt as any. This we may ſee in the Apoſtle's Faith; 2 Tim. 1. 12. I know whom I have truſted, that he is able, &c. Thus that wherein God's greateſt Sufficiency and Ability de facto or actually to forgive our Sins doth lie, the Apprehenſion and Belief thereof muſt needs be judged the ſtrongeſt Inducer of us to truſt on God for the Forgiveneſs. Now it is evident that his All-ſufficiency and Ability to forgive, doth properly and peculiarly conſiſt in his being merciful. Not to cite many Scriptures, this 34*th* of Exodus may ſuffice, The Lord ſtrong, merciful and gracious, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin. Likewiſe Pſal. 86. 5. (which is an Extract from this) For thou Lord, art good, and ready to forgive, and plenteous in Mercy, unto all them that call upon thee. You ſee here that his Readineſs to forgive, flows from his Goodneſs and his being plenteous in Mercy. And in analogous Reaſon this may be ſeen in its Shadow, the Mercy that is in Man. What is it that enables a Man to forgive? merely the Goodneſs and Mercy that is in him, ſo as a weak Woman, or the pooreſt, and otherwiſe moſt impotent Man (if they abound in Bowels of Mercy, and be of tender Hearts and Natures) are able to forgive an Injury, when yet they are utterly unable to do any other good thing, eſpecially not any great thing for the Party whom they forgive: But the Mercy that is in them alone ſufficiently impowreth them unto Forgiveneſs, when to nothing elſe. So then if a firm Belief of the Ability of the Perſon be the ſtrongeſt Perſwaſive unto Truſt and Confidence, joined with that of his honeſt Intention, further to confirm us of the certain real Performance it ſelf; then altho from other Topicks we may come to believe that God is true in thoſe his Promiſes of Forgiveneſs, yet more abundantly (as the Apoſtle ſays in a like caſe) this Belief ſprings from the Intuition of the Abundancy of the Mercies that are in God, than from any other whatſoever; and the firm Belief of the Ability to perform, is that which moſt of all cauſeth Truſt. Thus it was in the Faith of Abraham, that he ſtaggered not at the Truth of the Promiſe, as to the real Performance, becauſe he chiefly believed God's All-ſufficiency to make it good; Rom. 4. 20, 21. He ſtaggered not at the Promiſe of God thorow Unbelief, but was ſtrong in Faith, giving Glory to God, and being fully perſwaded that what he had promiſed he was able to perform: And ſo was aſſured thereby that the Event would be accordingly. If a great Perſon that had promiſed to give ſuch or ſo vaſt a Sum of Money as is neceſſary to furniſh a private Man's Houſe with Houſhold-ſtuff and Utenſils, Wares and Proviſions of all kinds, and to ſtock the Man's Ground, and had given his Word and Truth for the Performance of all theſe; but together therewith had led that poor indigent Perſon into all his Treaſures, and ſhewn him his Riches, and where it was that all thoſe kinds of ſuch Furniture do lie; and then had carried him into his Fields, Barns and Warehouſes, where he ſhould alſo ſee ſtock for Cattel, Corn, and Wares of all ſorts lie piled up; how would this hearten that Man, or any of you, to believe that great Perſon, the Promiſer in his Word and Promiſe given! ſo 'tis here. Now conſider thoſe great Riches of God which the Scriptures predicate ſo much, and out of which he pardons, they properly conſiſt in his Mercies; theſe are they that are his Subſtance, and give him Ability to forgive: He is plenteous in Mercy, and ready to forgive, Pſal. 86. 5. It is Mercy that is even the principal Obligee in the Promiſe or Bond, and Truth and other Attributes come in but ſecondarily, (as to this Buſineſs of Forgiveneſs) and rather but as Witneſſes to confirm what Mercy had declared and ſigned before them.

CHAP. XIV.

The Uſes of the Doctrine. That the Thoughts of the Mercies in God's Nature ſhould encourage us to come to him for Salvation and Life. That the Conſideration of them ſhould cauſe any Soul to hope that God will pardon him in particular.

Uſe 1. LET the Thoughts of theſe Treaſures of Mercies (which have been deſcribed and demonſtrated to be in God's Nature) encourage us to come to him. Let us conſider that there is no other Uſe of all theſe Riches of Mercy in God, but to be given all forth unto Sinners for his Glory: Whereas all his other Attributes are to himſelf, and for himſelf. Thus his Wiſdom is the Perfection of his own Being: his Love is that whereby he loves himſelf: his All-ſufficience is that which makes himſelf bleſſed: but his Mercies redound not in this manner unto or upon himſelf, (for he is not merciful unto himſelf, or for himſelf) but the ſole Improvement and Glory of them conſiſts in extending them to others, ſo as otherwiſe they would lie uſeleſs by him. Now then as a Man's having a great Eſtate lying by him, is the greateſt Provocation that can be to him to make him willing to lay it forth unto an Improvement; ſo theſe vaſt Treaſures of Mercies which God poſſeſſeth, are a Motive unto him to expend them upon Sinners. Full Breaſts love to be ſuck'd and drawn, their Fulneſs otherwiſe becomes a Pain. It is the greateſt Vanity to have Riches, and not to know on whom to beſtow them. Do but poſſeſs thy Heart then with the Thoughts, that there is this Fulneſs of Grace, theſe great Riches of Mercy in God, and it will make thy Soul eaſy of Belief, that there is a Willingneſs in God to beſtow them, and that he is reſolved to give them out to thee whenever thou comeſt to him, eſpecially ſince himſelf hath ſet them forth, and proclaim'd them on purpoſe to us; as we find in the Scriptures, that where God doth ſet himſelf to perſwade Sinners to come to him, he thinks it ſufficient to give Promiſes of Mercy and Pardon.

When convinced Sinners come to have the Proſpect of their Hearts, and of their Lives paſt, and of their Sins therein, in the great Aggravations of them, ſet in order before them, when the Account of their ten thouſand Talents comes in; then, unleſs the ſuperabounding Mercies in God which ſhould pardon them, ariſe up to their Faith, and are in ſolido told out before their Eyes, and their Faith prevails to aſſure them in good earneſt that there are ſuch infinite Mercies in God, they cannot entertain a thought of Hope or Comfort. Till they ſee how the Mercies of God are ſuperaboundingly able to forgive all theſe there hainous and aggravated Sins, and to remove thoſe heaps upon heaps of them, they will not be brought to believe: But as Jacob's Heart fainted, and he believed not till he ſaw the Waggons which Joſeph had ſent to carry him, and then his Spirit reviv'd, Gen. 45. 26, 27. So neither will theſe Sinners believe till they ſee the Mercies which God hath ſent forth to carry them to Heaven. Till then they are apt to cry out (as Cain did, Gen. 4. 13.) My Sin is greater than I can bear: or as thoſe in Jer. 18. who, when God had invited them to turn from their evil Ways, ſay at the 12*th* Verſe, There is no hope, or our Caſe is deſperate: And ſo they forſook their own Mercies, (as Jonah expreſſeth it) and left the everlaſting and never-failing Spring thereof, ver. 14. and forgot the Lord, ver. 15. and betook themſelves to lying Vanities to give them Comfort and Eaſe. And other Souls who are preſerv'd from Deſpair, yet think within themſelves, and ſay, O! where are the Mercies to be found that ſhould pardon all thoſe Sins? Is it poſſible, that God ſhould find in his Heart to do it? Is it poſſible that God ſhould find in his Heart Mercy and Grace enough to pardon ſuch, and ſo great a ſum of Sins committed againſt Grace it ſelf? And in this lies the Stop and Obſtruction of Faith, as it did in like manner with them in the Wilderneſs, who ſaid, Can God furniſh a Table in the Wilderneſs? Pſal. 78. 19. Their doubt (when Matters came to a ſtreſs) was more of his Power and Ability, than of his Will. The Queſtion is, Can God? They do not ſay God will not. And truly there is as much Unbelief in Mens Hearts about his Mercy, when it comes to a pinch, as about his Power; tho Men ordinarily ſay that they queſtion neither, and indeed till they are put to a Diſtreſs, they queſtion neither, but take them in an overly way for granted. But ſtill there is the ſame reaſon of Mens queſtioning the All-ſufficiency of God's Mercy, as there was in thoſe Jews (and is in us upon any the like occaſion) of queſtioning his Power. Accordingly we find theſe two in like manner expreſly join'd as parallel, and as Points of like difficulty to be believ'd, Pſal. 62. 8, 11, 12. and indeed in doubting one we queſtion the other, eſpecially when we hear that God's Ability to forgive lieth in his Mercy; for then to limit his Power is as to this Particular all one as to limit his Mercy. And when Mens Conſciences are throughly awakened to ſee their Sins, then Unbelief on the other hand awakens Thoughts in them to limit God's Mercies, which is another Phraſe uſed Pſal. 78. 41. For Mens narrow Spirits, if not enlarged by Faith, do much meaſure God's Heart by their own, and ſo think God to be like themſelves, Pſal. 50. 21. They cannot imagine how a Perſon ſo high, ſo great, and ſo grievouſly provok'd, ſhould be able to forgive, and therefore apprehend that he cannot be willing; and hence a thouſand Jealouſies of God do ariſe in Mens Souls, which are as full of dark Cells of Unbelief as the Earth is of vaſt Caverns within the Womb of it. We may judg that the Diſeaſe lies here by the Remedy and Application the Scriptures make, which, to ſatisfy Mens Souls in theſe very Scruples, do ſet forth God in the Greatneſs and prerogative Power of his Mercies as the Mercies of ſo great a God, and proportionable to his Greatneſs. As Mens Hearts riſe not up to glorify God as God, Rom. 1. 21. ſo nor to believe Mercies to be in him as a God ſo great and infinite, proportionable to his Greatneſs. God hath therefore in the Scriptures taken ſeveral ways, and at ſundry times hath ſet forth his Mercies to perſwade Men: Sometimes they are ſet out by way of Admiration and Wonderment, Mic. 7. 18, 19. Who is a God like our God, pardoning Iniquity, and paſſing by the Tranſgreſſion of the Remnant of his Inheritance, and that delighteth in Mercy? Sometimes they are diſplayed by comparing his Thoughts and Heart in pardoning, with what may be ſuppoſed to be in the Thoughts of the largeſt and moſt tender-hearted Parent, Father or Mother, and with the Bowels which all Men put together may be ſuppos'd to have in them: and God's Heart is declar'd to exceed them all in Mercies and Thoughts of Forgiveneſs, as much as the Heaven exceeds the Earth; Iſa. 55. 7. Let the Wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous Man his Thoughts; and return unto the Lord, and he will abundantly pardon. Yea, but the Sinner will ſay, my thoughts of ſinning have for time paſt already been infinite, only evil and continually, evil from my Infancy, and my Ways have been continually perverſe and froward, ungracious and oppoſite to God and his Mercies that ſhould pardon me. Humbled Sinners Thoughts will go on ſo far in a Belief that God may pardon them, tho they have gone out ſo far in ſinning, as to think that if they had only at ſuch a time of their Lives ſinned ſo and ſo againſt him, and been falſe to him, and not continued to ſin out of the Preſumption of that Grace that now ſhould pardon them, then they might have hope of Mercy. But they think that becauſe they have ſo long provok'd him, that now he may have ſworn againſt them in his Wrath, and that he cannot find in his Heart to forgive ſuch a Wretch, tho he may otherwiſe pardon as much as all Men and Angels putting their ſtock of Mercies together, and making up one great Purſe of Mercy, as would be ſufficient to extend to forgive and diſcharge great Debts. O but, ſays God, meaſure not my Thoughts in pardoning, either by the Evil in your Thoughts, or by your ways in ſinning; nor yet meaſure them by what the Thoughts and Ways of your ſelves, Men or Angels, have or can have to forgive withal! For my Thoughts are not your Thoughts, neither are my Ways your Ways, ſaith the Lord. As the Heavens be higher than the Earth, ſo are my Ways higher than your Ways. My Ways of Mercy are both above your Ways of ſinning, and they alſo exceed all the thoughts of Mercy which the beſt natur'd of you can have in pardoning others. My Ways and Deſigns that I have upon you, and Dealings I purpoſe towards you, tranſcend them all in oppoſite Goodneſs, Graciouſneſs and Forgiveneſs, as much as the Heavens do the Earth. And alſo (ſays God) my Thoughts are not as your Thoughts, he ſpeaks all this of his exceeding them all in pardoning. Nay further, it riſes higher to this, meaning that the Mercies of God do not only exceed Mens Thoughts in what any, or all of them could find in their Hearts in their proportion to pardon, but that alſo if you extend the Compaſſes of your Thoughts, that you or any Believers have had of what Mercies of God, and what Thoughts of Grace have been exerciſed in pardoning themſelves or other Sinners; yet the merciful Thoughts of God in reality do exceed, and are above all ſuch Apprehenſions that you or any can take up, as much as the Heavens are above the Earth, and are ſtill higher alſo, ſince his Mercies are above the Heavens: For lo! theſe are but parts of his Ways, but how little a Portion is heard of him, or apprehended by us Men, or that can be ſpoken by himſelf, unto what is in himſelf? Job 26. 14.

I have enlarged upon theſe Reaſons not ſo much for Conviction (which in ſo plain a Point needed not) as to ſtir up Believers to the frequent Exerciſe of this ſo uſeful an Experiment, wherein when Faith is verſed it will find an abundant entrance into every Promiſe that belongeth unto Mercy in any kind, as well as in the Point of Forgiveneſs; and yet this Practice is neglected by Chriſtians, for the want of which their Faith continues weak and narrow, and their Joy and Comfort in believing kept low and ſmall, and God himſelf bereft of much of the Glory would ariſe unto his Mercy, if together with the Promiſes laid hold on, they would have recourſe unto the Spring and Fountain, the Mercies of God. But the narrowneſs of their Spirits in believing cauſeth them to content themſelves with a ſingle and bare view of the things promiſed, and of the Promiſes of them under the Notion of being the Word of God, but they enlarge not in conſidering the rich Mercies of God that moved him to make thoſe Promiſes. They have the Conſideration of the Truth of God in them to perform, but expatiate not to the Mercies that both gave the Promiſes, and is the Cauſe of all the Cauſes of the Performance.

My Advice to Believers is, to meditate much upon, and to ſtudy the infinite Riches of God's Mercies, as the Scriptures ſo frequently (and therefore call for the like frequency of thoughts upon them in our Hearts) have ſet them forth unto us. Let us ſtill join them all together upon any great and ſolemn occaſion of exerciſing Faith on Promiſes; and as in the Point of Thankſgiving after Mercies received, we have many Precedents of Saints recounting the Loving-kindneſs of the Lord according to all he hath beſtowed on them, according to his Mercies, and according to the multitude of his Loving-kindneſſes, Iſa. 63. 7. ſo in like manner our Faith ſhould in its purſuit to obtain Mercies, collect and make the like Catalogue, as we have been even now abundantly inſtructed: For hereby we ſhall greatly honour God, and ſtrengthen our own Hearts.

1. We ſhall honour God greatly, (to give Glory unto whom in the moſt ample manner, is the moſt proper uſe of Faith, Rom. 4. 20.) for thereby we acknowledge and do Homage to his Mercies as the univerſal Cauſe of all: for this is an undoubted Maxim, that what is firſt in any kind, is the univerſal Cauſe of all that kind. Conſider then in God all that is Mercy in any kind, and he being originally and only merciful as well as only good, all elſe of Mercy muſt hold its Tenour of that Mercy that is in him. This I underſtand to be the full of that Title given him by the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 1. 3. The Father of Mercies, i. e. he being a Fulneſs of Mercy in himſelf firſt, he became the Father of all Mercies, of what kind ſoever. He is the firſt in that kind; Mercy it ſelf is his Nature, and all Mercies purpoſed, promiſed, performed, held forth, or applied to Faith, are all his immediate Children, and not one of them have any Exiſtence but from him, and that conſidered as he is merciful Jam. 1. 17. too. Thus in another reſpect he is ſtiled the Father of Lights, in reſpect of Heavenly Gifts from above, they holding in chief of him as ſuch in that kind of Effects; like as the Sun (to which the Alluſion manifeſtly there is) may be called the Father, or firſt Original of all Heavenly Light that comes down upon the World from it ſelf, or from Stars that have their Light from it.

2. And alſo this courſe of meditating on the Riches of God's Mercies will prove moſt comfortable to us, for 2 Cor. 1. 3. now cited, where he propounds him to our Faith as the Father of Mercies, he adds this other immediately, the God of all Comforts: for in exerciſing our Faith on him as a Father of Mercies, we ſhall find him to be a God of Comfort to us, whilſt we are but Expectants and Waiters on him by Faith all along until the Performance.

3. And by virtue of his Mercies being the univerſal, ſupream and ſoveraign Cauſe of all Mercies, Promiſes, &c. it holds good that our Faith may have a free, ample and immediate Recourſe unto them in all Caſes, or Occaſions whatſoever. For the Law or Privilege that accompanies his being the firſt Cauſe in other kind of Effects, doth by Analogy hold in this. Take him as he is primus Motor, the firſt and univerſal Cauſe of all Being and Motion, and it is a Maxim univerſally conſented to by all Divines, That altho there be a Chain of Second Cauſes ſubordinate one to another, that have a Power each to bring forth their proper Effects, (as the Sun brings forth Light, and that Light Heat and Warmth, and that Warmth quickens and enlivens the Seeds and Roots in the Earth, and they bring forth Herbs, which Herbs and Flowers have divers Colours and Qualities they are adorned withal) yet God, who is the firſt and univerſal Cauſe, hath an immediate Influence and Concurrence into all and each, (as immediately into the very laſt as into the firſt) and that a far greater than they have all or ſeverally into their Effects; ſo as God not only works by them, but with them, and he as immediately cauſeth the Light to quicken Plants, as to ſend out Light, and as immediately he cauſeth the Plants to bring forth Flowers, yea and that laſt Effect too, thoſe Orient Colours with which the Lilies (that are our Tulips) are array'd above Solomon in all his Royalty; yet theſe Particulars are immediately attributed unto God more than unto their Second Cauſes, If God (ſays our Saviour) ſo clothe the Graſs of the Field, Mat. 6. 28, 30. Luke 12. 17, 28. and indeed he works all in all, 1 Cor. 12. 6. I need not inſiſt on it further, being it is but for Illuſtration; be you only exhorted to hold this Golden Chain and Deſcent of Mercies let down to your Faith to lay hold upon: See his Thoughts and Purpoſes to have Mercy immediately flowing from the eſſential Mercies of his Nature, and then regard his Promiſes of beſtowing ſuch, and Mercies, as another Link let down from his Purpoſes. And tho the Faith of a Believer lays hold on theſe Promiſes as on what are next it, yet thoſe firſt and eſſential Mercies (ſo celebrated in his Word) do immediately touch, influence and reach unto all and each of theſe, unto the laſt as well as the firſt, to give Subſiſtence to them, and to make all good to the Faith of a Sinner. And hence the Faith of Believers, whilſt it claſps it ſelf into the Promiſe of Forgiveneſs, or any other Promiſe in the Word, may not only remotely depend on God's Mercies, (as a Man that hangs his whole Weight upon the loweſt Link of a Chain, may be ſaid to hang alſo upon the uppermoſt, to which all are in Subordination faſtened) but he may in and with the Promiſe have an immediate recourſe to the top and ſupream Mercies themſelves, for they are ready and preſent with the Declaration of his Word, to make them good and real to the Faith of a Sinner, for whoſe ſake and comfort they are and were written. He may bring down the Conſideration of all theſe Mercies into every ſuch Promiſe, &c. to ſtrengthen his Heart in believing, and in treating with God for Forgiveneſs, for they are the original Cauſe of thoſe Promiſes, and all Promiſes of Mercy are immediately conjunct unto, and dependent on the Mercies in God's Nature; even as all particular Rivers depend upon the univerſal Ocean from which they all come, and into which they run, as Solomon tells us, Eccleſ. 1. 7. and each of them have the whole Sea to maintain and feed them: And as they flow alſo into the Sea, and every Veſſel ſmall or great that floats in any of thoſe particular Rivers hath an open Paſſage into the Main, keeping to the courſe of that River; ſo is it here between the Mercies of God, the Ocean, and the Current of Promiſes of Salvation, and the Faith of a Believer. And in this caſe there is that Privilege which often falls not out in ſuch as we have alluded to, viz. that the ſmalleſt Rivolet of Salvation running in the Promiſes may bear up a Veſſel of Mercy, and may be for his Supply, if he thinks or finds he wants Water, and ſticks in the deeps of Mire and Quickſand. The Believer's Faith hath the freedom and liberty to ſuck and draw in the Ocean of God's Mercies, to draw (if it were poſſible) the whole of the Sea it ſelf to make a full Stream for its Support, and to help it off a ground, and to help its being born aloft above all Mire of Temptations. Nor are there any Stints ſet how much or how little it may let in; and to confirm this, why ſhould not Faith as well have this immediate recourſe (in and with the Promiſes whilſt yet unperformed) unto theſe eſſential Mercies afore-hand, to beſtow and give forth the things promiſed, as well as after in thankſgiving (when we have received the Mercies as performed unto us) we bleſs God for them, and we celebrate all thoſe eſſential Mercies in God as the original and immediate Cauſes of them? Thus Nehemiah did, Neh. 9. 17, 18, 19, 20, &c. The great return which the Gentiles, and all the Nations in the World are ſaid to bring into God (when converted by the Goſpel) as the richeſt Preſent of Thankfulneſs, is ſet out by this, to glorify God for his Mercy, Rom. 15. 9. Now there is the ſame reaſon for one as for the other, and we ſhall find that in the Exerciſe hereof, and treating with God thereby, there will flow in upon our Souls an abundance of Strength and Conſolation, even Spring-Tides of them, to fill the Channels of the Promiſes, and alſo of our Hearts that give themſelves up to them.

Uſe 2. I ſhall yet farther, by way of Uſe and Application, enlarge this Head, by adding, that this Comprehenſion or Intuition of the Mercies in God's Nature, will alſo prove a great Perſwaſive and Encouragement to a bringing on an Hope in Mens Souls, an Hope of God's Willingneſs to pardon themſelves in particular. And this is a matter of great moment, it being found in ordinary and common Experience, that whilſt humbled Souls are helped ſo far on in their way of believing, as to acknowledg the truth of God's Intentions in the Promiſes of Forgiveneſs, and the reality of the Performance to ſome or other, yet ſtill they ſtick or waver, whether God be willing to pardon them in particular. Now whatever other Encouragements unto ſuch a Soul others will alledg, whereof there may be many, yet I ſhall inſiſt on this one, and that alone, it lying in my way, and being ſutable to the Deſign of my Diſcourſe; That if God but poſſeſſes and fill thy Soul with an ample and enlarged Apprehenſion of the Mercies that are in himſelf, this will create withal an Encouragement to thee, that he intends good to thy Soul in particular. As the Flood when it roſe higher and higher, did lift up together with it ſelf the Ark; ſo an inuring thy Soul to thoſe Comprehenſions will inſenſibly elevate and raiſe up thy Soul to a Confidence, that God doth intend all Good to thee. Look as if one that is timorous and unuſed to travel in great Waters, ſhould be ſet in never ſo ſafe a Veſſel in the midſt of the Sea, or great Over-flow, where he ſaw himſelf environed about with nothing but Waves, he would fear his being drowned and caſt away; ſo on the contrary, if you ſet the moſt weak and fearful Soul in the full view and proſpect of God's Mercies, and the vaſt Ocean thereof, that he ſees neither Shore nor Bottom, this poor, but otherwiſe tumbled Soul, will ſoon take Heart and Courage to it ſelf. For,

1. The full and clear Revelation of any Divine Truth in a way of Subſiſtence to a Man's Soul, doth leave ſome Application of it ſelf to a Man's Soul. And if a Diſcovery be made of good things, the Manifeſtation thereof doth uſually leave an Encouragement in the Heart, that they belong and appertain unto ones ſelf. The very Manifeſtation that God makes of them (when God makes it) carries ſo much

engraven in it. As this is found true in Experience, ſo that Definition of Faith, Heb. 11. 1, 2, confirms it, even that the main of Faith lies in a Conviction of the Subſtance of the things themſelves, which when it is made in the abundancy of the Object revealed, the very ſight and preſence thereof is that which mainly draws in the Heart to apply it, and cleave and adhere unto it for its eaſe in particular. The truth of this might be abundantly made out, and it holds good in the particular Point before me in a more eſpecial manner, by how much the infinite Sweetneſs of God's Mercy hath a Magnetick or a Loadſtone-Virtue in it, by alluring (as Hoſea's Phraſe is, Hoſ. 2.14.) to attract and draw in the Heart unto them, and cauſe Men to think that they may come to have a part and portion in them. Whilſt they deeply conſider that there is ſuch an height and depth of Mercy, a bottomleſs Gulf in God's Heart, it induceth the Soul to caſt Anchor within the Vail, as Mariners do their Anchors in the bottom of the Sea blindfold: Which Anchor is an hope of Mercy for a Man's ſelf upon what he clearly as yet ſees not to belong unto him.

2. For the Confirmation hereof (beſides this general Ground) I obſerve, that when God himſelf doth ſet himſelf to draw Men unto him, to turn to him, and ſo to believe and lay hold on his Mercy, and would perſwade them thereunto, the moſt efficacious courſe he takes is, in the moſt ample manner that may be in the firſt and chief place, to poſſeſs the Hearts of thoſe he addreſſeth his Invitations unto of thoſe infinite Riches of Grace that are in his Heart and Nature, only in a general Declaration of them only, whilſt yet in applying of them and of the Promiſes to the Perſons, he is pleaſed to give but imperfect Intimations and ſuſpenſive Diſcourſes of what he will do for them in particular. That one Inſtance in Joel 2. 13, 14. may ſufficiently ſerve for many others; for the thing he there inſtantly exhorts unto is this, Therefore alſo now, ſaith the Lord, turn unto me with all your Heart, &c. But what are the Encouragements or Invitations by which he would induce them to it? What Grounds doth he propoſe unto their Faith? They are two. The firſt and great one is, the Royal Declaration of the Mercies that are in the Nature of God barely propoſed, and it is the ſame in the very words with that of his old and firſt Proclamation ſo often repeated throughout all Ages (which he will for ever abide by) Exod. 34. for ſo he begins, For he is gracious and merciful, ſlow to Anger, and of great Kindneſs, and repenteth him of the Evil. 2. There are and uſe to be in the Word more particular Promiſes, wherein he far more utters what his Will and Reſolution is for ſhewing Mercy unto thoſe whom he ſpeaks to. Now indeed you will find that ſome Promiſes are alſo annexed hereunto in this his Exhortation, and both intended to provoke them to believe and turn to God; but I beſeech you to obſerve the vaſt and ſtrange difference, that is, the manner of his declaring the firſt and the latter.

The firſt, viz. magnifick Deſcription of his Nature, he utters in the fulleſt and moſt enlarged, abſolute, aſſertory way that poſſibly might be. He proclaims that with open Mouth, and ſpeaks plainly without Reſervation or Heſitation: That Magnifick Deſcription of himſelf he utters with open Mouth in the fulleſt and ampleſt manner that poſſible might be: But the ſecond, viz. the Promiſe made to the Perſons, and the Things promiſed, he is pleaſed but to mutter, (as I may ſo ſpeak) and concerning this he ſays no more but, Who knows if God will repent and leave a Bleſſing behind him? He is ſparing and reſerved (you ſee) in this way of the Declaration of his Will: yea, and elſewhere, the hope he gives as to this part is yet more ſlender; for but to an It may be, Amos 5. 15. Zeph. 2. 3. yea, but to an If there may be hope, Lament. 3. 29. To ſay that there is hope, gives us a ſight but a far off: but to ſay, If there may be hope, gives a far more uncertain Sound; yet this is what God doth in this ſort of Declaration concerning what his Will in Promiſes to theſe Perſons lets fall to them.

By all which we may clearly ſee, that it is the certain and clear Conviction and Evidence of the Grace in God, tho joined but with ſuch Promiſes that ſpeak but indefinitely, and contain but imperfect obſcure Hints and Intimations, and that give but a ſlender hope (as one would give of good-will to a Man in his particular) that it is this Conviction which hath the Strength and attractive Influence in it, and is ſufficient with thoſe Promiſes to draw in the Soul to caſt it ſelf upon God, and to hope in his Mercy. And this Inference from that fore-mentioned Paſſage in Joel is ſtrong and clear, for it muſt not be denied, that God in thoſe Treaties and Propoſals to Men, did apply himſelf to work Faith in them, and accordingly gave forth what was moſt effective, at leaſt ſufficient, to beget Faith in Mens Hearts, and to bring them in to him. And further, it muſt be own'd, that the great God (the Propoſer here) knowing our Frame, and what it is wherein the Unbelief in Mens Hearts doth moſtly lie, did therefore apply himſelf, and frame his Exhortations up of ſuch things as would be moſt effective of Faith in us, and beſt able to remove the contrary Obſtruction of Unbelief. Now we plainly ſee, that in theſe Paſſages he ſpreads the Plaiſter thickeſt and deepeſt with that Medicinal Salve, viz. of the Diſplay of the Mercies of God's Nature, and but thinly with that other of ſuſpenſive Intimations of his good Will to the Perſons in the Promiſes annexed. And therefore that which is the moſt hardned Core of Unbelief in us, muſt be underſtood to conſiſt chiefly in the doubting of the Plenteouſneſs and Fulneſs of Mercies that are in him to pardon us. This is the great and deep Sore of Mens Hearts, if Men would but know it in themſelves, as Solomon ſpeaks; and the Virtue and Influence of this ſovereign Plaiſter mentioned, is it which doth diſſolve that Core and Work of the Devil; and in our believing of theſe things of our God it is that the main ſtreſs of Faith doth lie, (though Men diſcover it not) and in that Point their Faith needs moſt to be ſtrengthned and relieved, rather than in the other. And this one thing apprehended once, tho but with ſlender half Promiſes of that Mercy to us, which are but Intimations rather than Promiſes, will yet be abundantly effective to perſwade the Heart, and beget in it a good Hope through Grace, of Mercy for it ſelf, and thereupon to come in and turn unto God, who thereupon will reveal himſelf in other Promiſes more fully to his Soul. 1 Kings 8.

CHAP. XV.

That God, conſider'd as juſtifying the Ungodly, is the Object of Faith. How we may be ſaid to be juſtified from Eternity. In what Senſe it is to be underſtood that we were juſtify'd upon the Reſurrection of Chriſt. How we are ſaid to be juſtified when we believe.

ROM. viii. 33.

Who ſhall lay any thing to the Charge of God's Elect? It is God that juſtifieth.

IN ſeeking Juſtification our Faith muſt have Recourſe to God, as juſtifying alſo. Thus in the Words of the Text it is expreſs'd; It is God that juſtifies. And upon this the Apoſtle builds his Confidence, as well as upon that, that Chriſt died. Therefore we find, that as Chriſt dying, ſo God as juſtifying is made the Object of Faith: Rom. 4. 5. That believeth on him that juſtifieth the Ungodly: i. e. who believeth on God the Father, imputing Chriſt's Righteouſneſs to Perſons ungodly. And therefore you ſhall find that the Righteouſneſs we are juſtified by, is called as often the Righteouſneſs of God, as of Chriſt. Thus Rom. 1. 17. The Righteouſneſs of God is revealed from Faith to Faith. For as Faith looks at this Righteouſneſs as purchaſed by Chriſt, ſo appointed by God, and beſtowed by him, and imputed by him; 2 Cor. 5. 21. For he hath made him to be Sin for us, who knew no Sin, that we might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him. We ſee Chriſt there to be the meritorious Cauſe of that Righteouſneſs, for his Soul paid for it: but his Father was the original Cauſe of all, for he made him Sin for us, and he makes his Righteouſneſs ours: It is call'd the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, as he is the Worker of it, but the Righteouſneſs of God as he is the Appointer and Imputer of it. So Rom. 3. 25, 26. it is called the Righteouſneſs of God, for a double Reaſon; becauſe God ſent forth and appointed Chriſt, ver. 25. and becauſe he is the Juſtifier by it, ver. 26. It is called the Righteouſneſs of Faith, as the Apprehender of it; Rom. 4. 13. It is call'd Man's Righteouſneſs, (Job 13. 26. He will render to Man his Righteouſneſs) becauſe it was extended to him, and paid for him. Yea, let me add this farther, that God juſtifying is the main and ultimate Object of your Faith. Chriſt, though he is the firſt and next to you, yet God is the ultimate, in whom Faith reſts. Therefore Believers (1 Pet. 1. 21.) are ſaid by him to believe in God, that their Faith and Hope might be in God. Thus as the Promiſe brings you to Chriſt, ſo Chriſt brings you to God.

The Reaſon of this is, becauſe God hath as great a hand in juſtifying you as Chriſt; yea he is the principal in it; 2 Cor. 5. 18. And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, and hath given to us the Miniſtry of Reconciliation. Therefore in the Matter of Juſtification (Iſa. 53. 11.) God calls him his Servant; My Servant ſhall juſtify many. It was God againſt whom principally our Sins are committed, and unto whom the Satisfaction of Chriſt was paid, and by whom it was ordained, and by virtue of whoſe Decree it hath Power to juſtify. As the Value of it to juſtify us depends on the Worth that is in Chriſt, ſo the Acceptation of it for us depends upon God's Will. By which Will ye are ſanctified through the offering of the Body of Jeſus, Heb. 10. 10. It is the Will of God ſpoken of before, which Chriſt came to accompliſh. It was God that appointed the Perſons for whom Chriſt died, and Chriſt as Mediator put not in a Man but whom his Father gave him; and then the great Bleſſing of Pardon comes to be beſtowed; God guides and directs, and orders the beſtowing of it, and ſets his Hand to the Act of Grace, e're Pardon comes down. Chriſt's Merits have their Efficacy to juſtify us ex compacto, from Agreement between the Father and the Son. For tho the Merits are in themſelves ſuperabundant, ὑπερεπλεόνασε, 1 Tim. 1. 14. the Apoſtle therefore ſhewing how the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt is more to us than Adam's Sin, tells us alſo, that Free Grace muſt put in before it can be accepted for us, Rom. 5. 17.

There are two things in Juſtification.

1. The Righteouſneſs imputed, and that is Chriſt's, and to him we go for it.
2. The Act of Imputation; the accounting it mine or thine, and that is the Act of God primarily.

Juſtification is attributed as much to free Grace as to Chriſt's Righteouſneſs; for both are joined; Rom. 3. 24, 25. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt: Whom God hath ſet forth to be a Propitiation, through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of Sins that are paſt, through the Forbearance of God. Therefore Faith looks as much to free Grace ordaining and imputing, as to Chriſt performing. In a word, God's free Grace is the Original; Chriſt's Righteouſneſs is inſtrumental to the Manifeſtation of Free Grace; and Faith is the Inſtrument of apprehending all, and yet God ſtill is in all, 2 Cor. 5. 18. and Chriſt is all in all, Col. 3. 11. And Faith as it is our Act, is nothing at all in our Juſtification but only as it apprehends all.

Now for a Direction concerning God juſtifying as the Object of your Faith, you are to conſider all the Acts and Ways of God juſtifying, and to direct you to a right conceiving of God as juſtifying, you muſt know that there are tria momenta, or three Stages of Motion in this way: I do not ſay that there are three Parts of Juſtification it ſelf; which, as it is applied to us, is actus individuus, an individual Act; but three ſeveral Steps, three Paces and Progreſſes of God, (as I may call them) tho in reſpect of the Materials which Juſtification conſiſteth of, it is actus totalis, an entire Act, a compleat Diſcharge from all Sin, and a perfect Inveſtiture with the whole Righteouſneſs of Chriſt. God pardons not the Debt by halves, nor beſtows Chriſt's Righteouſneſs by parcels, but entitles us to the whole in every of thoſe Moments of Juſtification: yet in regard of our Inveſtiture into this, there are ſeveral Pauſes, or ſeveral Iterations of this Act; as in paſſing over an Eſtate in Land when the Deeds are drawn, written and ſealed, there is a Title or Intereſt given in to the whole Eſtate; and then again when Poſſeſſion is further given, it is not an Intereſt into any new Parcel, but both convey the whole Eſtate, yet they may be called ſeveral Acts of Conveyance, and of Title and Admiſſion into it; and ſuch ſeveral Acts of Inveſtiture of us into this whole Grace of Juſtification, were performed towards us by God, which go to the Accompliſhment of it. This alſo anſwers to the diſtinct Works of the three Perſons, who as they have a diſtinct Hand in the whole Work of Redemption, ſo alſo in this main Point of our Juſtification.

1. The firſt Progreſs or Step was at the firſt Covenant-making and ſtriking of the Bargain from all Eternity. We may ſay of all ſpiritual Bleſſings in Chriſt, what is ſaid of Chriſt, that their Goings forth are from everlaſting. Juſtified then we were when firſt elected, though not in our own Perſons, yet in our Head, as he had our Perſons then given him, and we came to have a Being and Intereſt in him. You are in Chriſt, (ſaith the Apoſtle) and ſo we had the Promiſe made of all ſpiritual

Bleſſings in him, and he took all the Deeds of all in our Name; ſo that in Chriſt we were bleſſed with all ſpiritual Bleſſings, Epheſ. 1. 3. as we are bleſſed with all other, ſo with this alſo, that we were juſtified then in Chriſt. To this purpoſe is that Place, Rom. 8. 30. where he ſpeaks of all thoſe Bleſſings which are applied to us after Redemption, as Calling, Juſtification, Glorification, as of things already paſt and done, even then when he did predeſtinate us; Whom he hath predeſtinated, them he hath called, them he hath juſtified, them he hath glorified. He ſpeaks it as in the time paſt; neither ſpeaks he thus of theſe Bleſſings, as paſt ſimply in regard of that Preſence, in which all things ſtand before him from Eternity, all things both paſt, preſent and to come, being to him as preſent. Nor doth he ſpeak it only in regard of a Reſolution or Purpoſe taken up to call and juſtify, he calling things that are not as if they were, Rom. 4. 17. For thus it may be ſaid of all his other Works towards the Creatures in common, that he hath created and preſerved them from everlaſting; but in a more ſpecial Relation are theſe Bleſſings decreed ſaid to have been beſtowed, becauſe tho they exiſted not in themſelves, yet they exiſted really in a Head that repreſented them and us, who was by, to anſwer for them, and to undertake for them, which other Creatures could not do; and there was an actual Donation and receiving of all theſe for us, (as truly as a Feoffee in Truſt may take Lands for one unborn) by virtue of a Covenant made with Chriſt, whereby Chriſt had all our Sins imputed unto him, and ſo taken off from us, Chriſt having then covenanted to take all our Sins upon him, when he took our Perſons to be his; and God having covenanted not to impute Sin unto us, but to look at him for the Paiment of all, and at us as diſcharged. Of this ſeems that Place, 1 Cor. 5. 19. evidently to ſpeak, as importing that everlaſting Tranſaction, (as I have ſhewn) God was in Chriſt reconciling the World unto himſelf, not imputing their Treſpaſſes unto them: i. e. not imputing them then when he was reconciling us unto himſelf in Chriſt. So as then God told Chriſt as it were, (for it was a real Covenant) that he would look for his Debt and Satisfaction of him, and that he did let the Sinners go free; and ſo they are in this reſpect juſtified from all Eternity. And indeed if the Promiſe of Life was then given us, (as the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaks, Tit. 1. 2.) then alſo Juſtification of Life, without which we could not come to Life. Yet this is but the Inchoation, tho it be an eſtating us into the whole Tenure of Life.

2. There is a farther Act of juſtifying us, which paſſeth from God towards us in Chriſt, upon the Paiment and Performance by Chriſt at his Reſurrection: for Jeſus Chriſt, (who as he was one with us by Stipulation before, ſo then by Repreſentation) at the time, the Fulneſs of the time of Paiment appointed, (which the Apoſtle therefore calls the due time, Rom. 5. 6.) came into the World as our Surety, and as repreſenting our Perſons, as Adam once did; and at ſeveral Paiments for three and thirty Years and upwards, at laſt finiſhed all at his Death, and laid down the laſt Paiment when he laid down his Life and his Body in the Grave, Sin and the Curſe all the while holding him in Bands as a Debtor: but at that Inſtant when he aroſe, God then performed a farther Act of Juſtification towards him, and us in him, admitting him as our Advocate, into the actual Poſſeſſion of Juſtification of Life, acquitting him from all thoſe Sins which he had charged upon him. Therefore we read, that as Chriſt was made Sin in his Life and Death, ſo that he was juſtified alſo, 1 Tim. 3. 6. After he had ſaid, that he was manifeſted in the Fleſh, i. e. the Likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, he ſays, he was juſtified in the Spirit, when by the Power of that eternal Spirit he was quickned, and ſo declared to be that righteous one with Power; at which time as he vindicated himſelf before Men, of all thoſe Imputations laid on him by Men, as being an Impoſtor, (which when he was under the Curſe, he lay under, but now was juſtified to all the World) ſo alſo before and by his Father he was diſcharged, and juſtified alſo from all thoſe Debts he had before charged him with, as now having fully paid the utmoſt Farthing, and ſo received him up into Glory, as it follows in that Text. I ſay then, in the ſame Senſe that God made him Sin, in the ſame Senſe he is ſaid to have juſtified him; and therefore Heb. 9. 28. it is ſaid, he ſhall at the latter day appear without Sin; implying, that when he appeared here, he appeared with Sin: therefore there was a time when theſe Sins were taken off, and the firſt Moment of it was when he roſe from under that State of Humiliation, (whereof the laſt Part was his lying in the Grave) and when he began to enter upon a glorified State, which was at his Reſurrection. And that he ſhould be thus juſtified, is not ſpoken of him abſtractly conſidered in himſelf, but as he hath us conjoined in him, and as he connotates us; this new Title to Life, and of being righteous, he entred not upon for himſelf alone, but he was an Attorney, took Poſſeſſion, and was admitted for us, and we by him as our Advocate: which I take to be the Meaning of that Place, Rom. 4. 25. He died for our Sins, and roſe again for our Juſtification. When he died then he paid our Debts, and God received from him the Price, and therefore the Matter of Juſtification is indeed the Merit of his Obedience and Death; but at his Riſing then the formal Act and Deed of Diſcharge was delivered to him by God, and that for our Juſtification: He roſe for our Juſtification. And our Juſtification is attributed to his Reſurrection, not only becauſe he roſe again to apply it, but principally in this reſpect, becauſe at his riſing he received it for us, for he being juſtified then, we were juſtified in him: and therefore as Juſtification in reſpect of the Matter imputed is attributed to his Death and Blood, (we were juſtified by his Blood) ſo the formal Imputation of it to us may be aſcribed to his Reſurrection, when the Diſcharge of all was reckoned to Chriſt. And in this reſpect, when the Apoſtle would ſhew them the Benefit and Neceſſity of Chriſt's Reſurrection in reſpect of themſelves, he ſays, 1 Cor. 15. 17. If Chriſt be not riſen, your Faith is in vain, ye are yet in your Sins: i. e. that altho Chriſt died for your Sins, and you had Faith in that his Death to be juſtified from your Sins, yet this Faith would be in vain, and neither it nor Chriſt's Death would juſtify you; and your Title to Juſtification were nothing worth, if Chriſt be not riſen: for tho you did believe, and could ſay the Money was paid for you, if Chriſt had not riſen to take Delivery and Seiſin of the Eſtate in your Names, your Plea would have been made void, the Formality of Juſtification being wanting. Now all this argues that our Juſtification hath a farther Dependance upon his Reſurrection than merely as to working Faith, and that he roſe not only to give us Faith, but that ſuppoſing we could have Faith in his Death, yet without his Reſurrection it had been in vain. For indeed this preſent State of our Juſtification by Faith depends upon that fore-paſſed Juſtification of his in our ſtead then: and as when he aſcended we aſcended with him, (and therefore we are ſaid now to ſit together with him in heavenly Places, Eph. 2. 6.) ſo when he was juſtified we were juſtified alſo in him; and as it may be ſaid, Adam condemned us all, and corrupted us all, when he fell, ſo did Chriſt then perfect us all, and God juſtified us all, when he died and roſe again.

But theſe two Acts of Juſtification are wholly out of us, immanent Acts in God; and tho they concern us, and are towards us, yet are not Acts of God upon us, they being performed towards us, not as actually exiſting in our ſelves, but only as exiſting in our Head, who covenanted for us, and repreſented us: So as tho by theſe Acts we are eſtated into a right Title to Juſtification, yet the Benefit and the Poſſeſſion of that Eſtate we have not without a farther Act to be paſſed upon us, whereby we have not as exiſting in our Head only (as a Feoffee in Truſt for us, as Children under Age) this excellent Grace given us, but are to be in our own Perſons, tho ſtill through Chriſt, poſſeſſed of it, and to have all the Deeds and Evidences committed to the Cuſtody and Apprehenſion of our Faith. We are in our own Perſons made true Owners and Enjoyers of it, which is then done at that Inſtant when we firſt believe; which Act is the Completion and Accompliſhment of the former, and is that great and famous Juſtification by Faith which the Scripture ſo much inculcates, and almoſt only mentioneth; yea, and ſo ſpeaks of it, as if we were not juſtified at all till then: So 1 Cor. 6. 9. Such were ſome of you, but now ye are ſanctified, now ye are juſtified: which before they were not; and therefore the Apoſtle ſpeaks of a now of Juſtification, being now juſtified, Rom. 5. 9. that is, now we believe, ver. 1. and ſo ver. 11. By whom we have now received the Atonement, becauſe tho it was given in Chriſt afore for us, yet then only we receive it; and therefore before Faith the Scripture pronounceth the very Elect, even thoſe whom Chriſt died for, Children of Wrath as well as others, till they believe, Epheſ. 2. 3. So as when we are ſaid to be juſtified by Faith, it is not only becauſe then Faith apprehends that Juſtification which was in God's Breaſt before, and that then we are juſtified merely foro conſcientiæ, tho before we were ſo in foro Dei, as much as ever (as ſome expreſs it); but further it muſt be ſaid, that even in foro Dei, in God's Court, and according to the Judgment of that open Court which God hath ſet up in his Word, and according to the Proceedings of his Word, (which is the Rule he profeſſeth to judg Men by, and therein he keeps to the Rules of his Word, as Chriſt ſays, I judg no Man, but the Word I ſpeak ſhall judg you, John 12. 47, 48.) God doth judg, and pronounceth his Elect ungodly and unjuſtified, till they believe; yea and by the Spirit of Bondage he teſtifies to their Conſciences, that before Faith they are ungodly, unjuſtified, and Children of Wrath. If it were not a real Truth, the Spirit of Truth would not evidence this to them: ſo therefore when we are ſaid to be juſtified by Faith, it implies more than a Juſtification in our Conſciences, and cauſing us to apprehend our Juſtification, for upon believing there is an Act paſſeth from God which makes a real Change in our Eſtates, from a State of Ungodlineſs to an Eſtate of Juſtification; which is a real moral Change, as truly and as really as Sanctification is a phyſical Change, and that not only in our Apprehenſion and judging of our ſelves, but in the Courſe of God's Proceedings of Judgment upon us; that whereas before he by the Rules of his Word which he keeps to, would and muſt have proceeded with us as Perſons ungodly, out of Chriſt, now according to thoſe Rules he doth pronounce us juſt, and we come actually to have a real Claim, Title and Intereſt, according to Courſe of Law, (as we ſay) in Juſtification, which till now we were debarred of.

But the Queſtion may be put, How could they be ſaid to be juſtified afore, both from Eternity, and in Chriſt, if they may be truly ſaid even in God's Judgment to be juſtified but now, and that they were till now unjuſtified?

The Anſwer is, That theſe ſeeming Contradictions, in diverſe reſpects, are both true.

1. That before God, according to the Rules of his Word, (which are the Rules of his Proceedings before Men, being God's revealed Will) they are as yet unjuſtified; but according to thoſe ſecret Paſſages of his ſecret Will tranſacted with Chriſt, and to which he is privy, they are juſtified Perſons before him.

2. Tho the Perſon abſtractly conſidered is always juſtified before God, yet the Perſon concretely taken, as inveſted with, and remaining in an Eſtate of Unbelief, is in relation to that Eſtate, according to the Rules of his Word, unjuſtified: So as the Change is firſt, and primarily in regard of the State of the Perſon from Unbelief to Faith, and then it looks towards the Perſon himſelf.

3. Their Juſtification before Faith, coram Deo, in the ſight of God, is of them not as actually exiſting in themſelves, but only as they were repreſented in their Head; for their Perſons, as conſidered as repreſented in Chriſt, did in him, as their Head, receive Juſtification, and all Bleſſings elſe, but not in themſelves do they receive them actually as exiſting until Faith; as we are ſaid then to be condemned and corrupted in the firſt Adam, when he ſinned, as repreſenting us, but we are in our own Perſons not actually corrupted till we exiſt and are born from him. So as to conclude this, they are ſaid before Faith to be juſtified in Chriſt by Repreſentation only, and not as in themſelves: They are ſaid to be in themſelves actually juſtified through Chriſt after Faith, but they cannot be ſaid to be juſtified of themſelves without Chriſt neither, before nor after Faith. As the Cloſure of theſe three Advancements and Paſſings forth of our Juſtification, take theſe two Obſervations concerning them all.

Obſ. 1. That each of theſe being in and through Jeſus Chriſt, who is our Righteouſneſs, and ſo they all depend upon him, therefore theſe three Progreſſes of God going on to juſtify us, depend upon three ſeveral Acts of Jeſus Chriſt, which as he puts forth, ſo doth God alſo anſwerably put forth a new Step in this Work.

1. When Chriſt did but undertake for us, and took by Covenant our Sins off from us, and indented with and entred into Bond to God for our Debts, God then diſcharged us in his ſecret Purpoſe; and knowing Chriſt able and faithful, expected all from him.

2. When in the Fulneſs of Time he had performed what he undertook, as Chriſt did a new Act, ſo did God alſo therein juſtify both him and us.

3. When Chriſt by his Spirit knits us to him, and works Faith in us, to look towards that Satisfaction and Juſtification wrought for us, then doth God put forth another Act, (and it is the laſt Act, and the Accompliſhment of all) and pronounceth us righteous in our ſelves through him.

Part I.

Obſ. 2. All theſe Acts of Juſtification, as they depend upon Chriſt, ſo upon our being one with Chriſt; and look what kind of Union there is, anſwerable is the Act of Juſtification paſt forthwith. From all Eternity we were one with Chriſt by Stipulation, he by a ſecret Covenant undertaking for us, and anſwerably that Act of God's juſtifying us was but as we were conſidered in his Undertaking. When Chriſt died and roſe again, we were in him by Repreſentation, as performing it for us, and no otherwiſe; but as ſo conſidered we were juſtified. But now when we come in our Perſons, by our own Conſent, to be made one with him actually, then we come in our Perſons through him to be perſonally and in our ſelves juſtified, and receive the Atonement by Faith.

OF Juſtifying Faith.

BOOK II.

The Second Object of Faith, Jeſus Chriſt. Of our being drawn to him by the Father, and our treating with him for an Intereſt in his Perſon and Salvation by him. That Chriſt as God-man in one Perſon, is the Object of our Faith. That as a ſpiritual Meſſiah and Saviour he is propounded to our Faith. That not only Chriſt in his Perſon, but in all that he hath done and ſuffer'd for our Salvation, and now doth for us in Heaven, is the Object of our Faith.

CHAP. I.

That the Mercies in God's Nature are not the Object of our Faith, but as they are conſidered together with Chriſt. That God's Mercies, and Jeſus Chriſt, are accordingly propounded jointly to our Faith.

THERE are two grand Objects our Faith doth act upon; God the Father, and Jeſus Chriſt; the Holy Spirit being the Perſon who anoints us, generally teaching us all things. Our Saviour Chriſt therefore, John 17. 3. having ſpoken of giving eternal Life to them that believe, ſuperadds, This is eternal Life, to know thee (the Father) the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent: Thereby ſetting forth them two as the Objects which our Faith and Knowledg are carried out unto for eternal Life; which eternal Life is begun in this World, by the Knowledg of Faith, and perfected by the Knowledg of Sight, in the World to come.

That which in the Father our Faith doth eſpecially act upon, are the Riches of his Grace: And Free Grace is indeed, and in Reality, but the Love of God in Election, tho uttered in abſolute Promiſes and Declarations, yet expreſſed indefinitely as to Perſons. God indeed abſolutely declareth in the Promiſes and Covenant of Grace, what his Heart was, and is, unto an Elect Company, but conceals the Perſons, (which Promiſes I therefore term indefinite) thereby aſcertaining us, that there are ſome of Mankind he ſo loves reſolvedly and unchangeably, whom he intends tends therein; which Promiſes ſhall infallibly take hold on them: And that Covenant, and thoſe Promiſes I call abſolute, becauſe they promiſe to give the very Conditions required to Salvation in that Covenant. The other Object of our Faith is Jeſus Chriſt, both in his Perſon, and his Suffering, Death, Reſurrection, Interceſſion; and likewiſe the Benefits that are the Fruits of all theſe. And our Faith is to aim at the having Fellowſhip with him in all theſe, as the Object of Faith, as well as the Free Grace of God the Father. In all which Benefits which our Faith ſeeks from theſe two, I might quote many Scriptures, wherein Chriſt and the Free Grace of the Father are ſtill joined, and go hand in hand. I Inſtance particularly in Juſtification for all the reſt; in which there is both the Grace of the Father, and the Righteouſneſs of the Son, that concur both thereunto; and our Faith is diſtinctly to exerciſe it ſelf upon both theſe, for obtaining Juſtification. This Conjunction you ſee in Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Chriſt Jeſus. You have it alſo in Rom. 5. 15. The Grace of God, that is, of God the Father, and the Gift by Grace, (the Gift of Righteouſneſs and Juſtification thereby) which is by one Man Jeſus Chriſt, hath abounded unto many. And again he ſays at ver. 17. They which receive abundance of Grace, and of the Gift of Righteouſneſs, &c. A Righteouſneſs by which we are made righteous, ver. 19. There is both the Grace of God in the Heart of the Father; and there is the Gift of Righteouſneſs by Grace, which is by one Man Jeſus Chriſt, as by whoſe Righteouſneſs we are made righteous; and theſe concur to our Juſtification of Life, as it is termed in ver. 18. Now there being theſe two grand Objects of the Faith of all Believers for the firſt Benefit they are brought to ſeek at firſt, all Converts under the Goſpel are therefore brought to a diſtinct Communion and Fellowſhip, (through Faith) both with the Father, and alſo with the Son, to obtain both Grace and Righteouſneſs from both, and afterwards in the Courſe of their Lives they enjoy a diſtinct Fellowſhip with both Father and Son; 1 John 1. 3. Theſe things I write to you, that you may have Fellowſhip with us; and truly our Fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt: With theſe two objectively is our Fellowſhip tranſacted. The Holy Ghoſt is he who (1 John 2. 20.) is ſtiled the Anointing of us and our Eyes, to converſe with theſe; and by whom we know all things; but our Fellowſhip is objectively with the Father, and with his Son. In the Old Covenant there were two grand Utenſils placed at the uppermoſt End of the Holy of Holies, (which the believing Jews had their Eyes upon, whilſt they look'd towards the Holy Temple) the Ark, and the Mercy-Seat: The Ark was the Type of Chriſt's Perſon; the Mercy-Seat, as the Apoſtle denominates it, Heb. 7. was the Type of God's Grace joined with Chriſt's Perſon, as atoned and made propitious by Jeſus Chriſt: for the word in the Hebrew ſignifies Expiation, which alone was made by Chriſt, but imports therewith pardoning Mercy through his Expiation; and ſo it reſpected at once both the Grace in God atoned, and alſo Chriſt; who is therefore, Rom. 3. 25. ſtiled the Propitiation for our Sins. And yet withal that Propitiatory hath the Name of Mercy-Seat given it by the Apoſtle himſelf, Heb. 9. 5. by which Name our Tranſlators have therefore, in Exod. 25. 17. rendred the Hebrew. Thus 'twas in the Type; and the thing ſignified thereby is that Throne of Grace whereat Chriſt officiates; as the ſame Apoſtle in Subſtance ſtiles it, Heb. 4. I cite it to ſhew, that theſe two, Ark and Mercy-Seat, were immediately and inſeparably conjoined together, and the one ſet upon the other; as if you ſhould ſet two plain Cheſts one on the top of the other immediately, and nothing between. The Mercy-Seat was uppermoſt on the top of the Ark, as you read Exod. 25. 21. this being imported thereby, that all the Grace in God's Heart flowing to us is through Chriſt, and as ſupported by Chriſt, and his Mediation and Expiation, ſo as it is God's Grace and Mercy as in Chriſt. And unto theſe two the Eyes of the believing Jews were caſt, and had their Expectation fixed for Grace and Mercy, as appears by the Inſtance of that humbled Publican, Lord be merciful to me a Sinner: Whoſe Coming to the Temple to worſhip, as it doth ſhew him to be a Jew or Jewiſh Proſelyte, ſo the word wherein Chriſt forms that his Petition is Old Teſtament-Language; as of one who looking towards the Propitiatory, or Mercy-Seat, prays to God to this effect; Lord, be mercifully propitious to me, from thy Mercy-Seat; which in Goſpel-Language is from thy Throne of Grace. And furthermore obſerve, that theſe two were both of a like Size and Proportion, as long, as broad, as deep, the one as t'other, (Exod. 25. 10, 17. compared) to ſhew that however the eſſential Grace and Mercy in God's Nature is eſſentially infinite; yet his diſpenſatory Mercy, and Grace laid up for us, and intended towards us Sinners of the Sons of Men, are of the ſame Extent and Commenſuration with Chriſt, and his Merits and Righteouſneſs, &c. becauſe all that Grace which God hath intended to beſtow upon us, for the Matter, Manner, or Meaſure, is but commenſurable, and of like Extent with all that Chriſt purchaſed and procured, and is no more nor no leſs: As alſo becauſe that theſe two muſt never be ſeparated; for God hath conjoined them thus cloſely and immediately one to the other, only God's Grace is uppermoſt, and the Fountain of us, and Chriſt, and all; and the Glory of it is the ſupreme End of all, Epheſ. 1. 5, 6. Some Converts indeed more diſtinctly, and withal amply and abundantly, have their Hearts run out ſometimes to God the Father, and purſue after the Attainment of his Love and Grace; and have their Hearts drawn and ſet more largely to treat with the Father, and his Grace, and to ſeek the obtaining more frequently the Manifeſtations of his Grace, and have their Hearts more intent upon what his Work for their Salvation in his Heart is. They conſider that it was he who firſt decreed Chriſt, and our Salvation through him, and called Chriſt to die for us, and gave us to Chriſt, &c. and with a peremptory and unchangeable Love ordained the Salvation of ſome through Faith and Holineſs: And accordingly they deſire to have the Manifeſtations of his Grace made forth upon their Souls. But others have the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in their Eye, and treat with him through his Death, Redemption, and the Works which he performed towards it, in a more large and abundant manner. But tho his Heart goes out thus more amply to Jeſus Chriſt, and hath Communion with him and his Righteouſneſs, yet he believeth alſo on God the Father, that ordained and ſent his Son out of his Grace, and believes on him as the Pardoner of his Sin, & è contra. He that hath Communion with God the Father in ſeeking his Love, he doth it in Chriſt impliedly, as through whoſe Mediation he hath Acceſs unto the Father. But ſtill the Eyes of either may be more ſetly and wiſtly ſet, and fixed upon one of them, as on Chriſt, or the Father more explicitly, than on the other. It is what the Apoſtle intimates, 1 John 2. 13. (I cite it to this very purpoſe, to ſhew that ſometimes the Heart of one Chriſtian runs out more to the Father, and at other times more to the Son) I write unto you Fathers, becauſe you have known him that is from the Beginning. (Who is that? Jeſus Chriſt; cap. 1. 1. That which was from the Beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life: that is apparently Jeſus Chriſt.) Then again ſays he, I write unto you little Children, becauſe ye have known the Father. Here the Spirits of the one run out at differing Seaſons, ſometimes more to God the Father, ſometimes more to Jeſus Chriſt. I will not ſtand to explain whom he means by Fathers, and whom by Babes, (nor need I do it as to my purpoſe) it's enough for the preſent that it is aſcribed to the ſame ſort of Perſons at different times, that when they were Babes, they knew the Father; when Fathers, they knew Chriſt more intently. The Reaſon of which different Intentions of our Spirits is, that our Souls are narrow Veſſels, and uſe not to be intent on two ſo eminent Objects at once, which therefore take their turns in our Hearts, that we take in ſometimes the one, and ſometimes the other.

There muſt alſo be allowed a great Variety of God's Method herein. The Apoſtles, tho living under Chriſt's Miniſtry, yet their Faith had acted a long while on God, far more than unto Chriſt, of whom then they had but the Old Teſtament-Notion and Conceptions, tho they believed he was he, the Meſſiah already come; John 14. 1. Ye believe on God, believe alſo on me. And ſo it is now with many Chriſtians, who at firſt have Recourſe to Old Teſtament-Promiſes, which ſpeak of Grace and Mercy in God for Pardon of Sin, through a promiſed Meſſiah, and ſo treat with God for their Salvation: and tho they do it with an intermingled Knowledg of Chriſt, yet not ſo much applying themſelves to him. And the Reaſon is, becauſe it is God in whoſe Name the Arraignment for the Guilt of all our Sins is in Scripture drawn: And therefore the Nature of the thing when we are convinc'd of Sin, calls for it, that we apply our ſelves to him, whoſe Grace and Mercy is to forgive us: And Repentance being that Grace, which in a ſpecial manner is called for towards God, Acts 20. 21. hence therefore (tho with imperfect Actings of Faith, and Hopes of Mercy from God) it is taken for granted, that it is in and through Chriſt, in whom God alone is merciful. Tho according unto John the Baptiſt's Miniſtry, (who directed to believe on Chriſt, in the Cloſe and Iſſue of it) we come to Chriſt at laſt, yet at firſt we attend far more unto Repentance towards God; but God leaving us unto a Failure of Comfort from the Evidences thereof, (as to our diſcerning them) the Father ſets our Hearts a going unto Jeſus Chriſt amain, as ſenſible how much we had neglected him, and his Intereſt in our Salvation: and he ſets us a work to ſeek and look for Juſtification from him with might and main; and then to come to God himſelf again for Mercy. But there are others who at firſt daſh do believe, and faſten on Chriſt, at the Work of Humiliation; as the Jailor (in Acts 16. 31. where his firſt Converſion is recorded) comes to Paul trembling, being ſtruck with a Sight of, and Terror for Sin, and cries out, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? The Apoſtle puts him upon Jeſus Chriſt at very firſt: Believe (ſays he) on the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved. The Apoſtle took the ſhorteſt Courſe with him; and thereupon his Heart entertained the Lord Jeſus. But then read on the Story at ver. 34. and you will find that his believing on Chriſt brought him to God; for 'tis ſaid, He rejoiced, believing in God, with all his Houſe: whereby was anſwerably fulfilled that of 1 Pet. 1. 21. Who by him (namely Chriſt) do believe in God, who raiſed him up from the dead, and gave him Glory, that your Faith and Hope might be in God. And Rom. 5. ſhewing the Fruits of Faith, how that being juſtified by Faith, we have Peace with God, thorow our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ver. 1. And going on to other Effects of Faith, the laſt Fruit he mentions is in ver. 11. Not only ſo (ſays he) but we alſo joy in God, thorow our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

CHAP. II.

That when we come to Chriſt, and believe on him, there is a Concurrence and Conſent of all the three Perſons in the Godhead unto that great Work.

JOHN vi. 44 & 65 Verſes compared.

No Man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him: and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.

And he ſaid, Therefore ſaid I unto you, that no Man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

I Deſign to prove from theſe Words, that as Chriſt is the Object of Faith, ſo when any Soul is converted, and drawn to believe on him, there is the Concurrence of all the three Perſons in the Trinity to that Work, and that they all put forth conjointly a renewed Act of Agreement in it. I confeſs in this Text there is mention only of the Father, and his Conſent in it, (for indeed it is hard for me to take a Text that will hold forth all three Perſons together) but in this Chapter you have all three. You have the Father's Conſent here in theſe Words; No Man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him. You have the Son's Conſent; ver. 37. Him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out. And you have (as ſome interpret it) the Holy Ghoſt's alſo at the 33*d* Verſe; It is the Spirit that quickneth, the Fleſh profiteth nothing; the Words that I ſpeak unto you they are Spirit, and they are Life. Tho I think by Spirit is there rather meant the Godhead quickning the humane Nature of Chriſt. This is a Subject of great and weighty Moment, and will be of uſe to you many ways, to quicken your Hearts: I will firſt open and prove it to you, and then make uſe of it.

When God doth convert and draw our Souls on to believe, we uſe to look upon the Work it ſelf as a great Work wrought in our ſelves; and it is true (as I ſhall after ſhew) but there is more done for us in Heaven, than is done in our Hearts at that time. At that great Union which is made between Chriſt and the Soul, and the drawing on of the Heart to cloſe with Chriſt, there is a ſpecial Council called; there is a Concurrence, a Conſent, a joint Meeting of all three Perſons to this great Work, and that in a ſpecial manner. Tho they concur in all Works, yet where a Council of them all is profeſſedly call'd, there is a plain Note and Character of a more ſpecial and remarkable Concurrence. Thus at the making of Man eſpecially they are all nam'd, as you read in Gen. 1. 26. that when God made Man, he called a Council; Let us make Man, (ſaith he) and all the three Perſons did concur and join in that great Work. Now at the making of the New Man there is the like Council held, there is the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. The Father draweth, the Son accepteth, and the Holy Ghoſt is the Inſtrument of both, and quickneth and enliveneth the Heart. Such a great Conjunction is a Matter of infinite Wonder; if you look into the Heavens you ſhall not ſee great Conjunctions of Planets every day. There hath been but ſeven ſince the Creation it ſelf, and the Creation it ſelf began with one of them. But here is a greater Conjunction in the Heaven of Heavens, when there is an Influence of all the three Perſons into a Soul at its firſt turning to God.

There are four great Conjunctions (as I may ſo ſpeak) of theſe three Perſons.

1. The one was from everlaſting, at our Election, in which both Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt had a hand.

2. The other was at our Redemption, when Jeſus Chriſt himſelf was ſealed up to be the Son of God; and at his Baptiſm the Father from Heaven appears and owns him, and the Holy Ghoſt deſcendeth like a Dove, and lighteth upon him. And there was the Son of God, the ſecond Perſon, dwelling in the humane Nature. Thus did all theſe three meet together at that time. And upon the Croſs likewiſe they did the like, for the Father's Hand bruiſed him; therefore he cries out to him, My God, my God, &c. but all that while the Holy Ghoſt ſupported and upheld him, and he was filled with the Spirit beyond meaſure for Strength to ſtand under the Weight of the Father's Wrath, for no created Strength could have done it. And he himſelf alſo, through the eternal Spirit, the Godhead dwelling in him, offered up himſelf as a Sacrifice to his Father, Heb. 9. 14.

3. The third Conjunction of them is, when Faith is wrought, when the Sinner is called to Chriſt, which I am now to ſpeak of.

4. The laſt Conjunction is in Heaven, when God and all the three Perſons ſhall be all in all for evermore; which is the great Conjunction indeed, and to which all the reſt tend, and where they all center.

I remember, in Acts 14. 2. Faith is called the Door of Faith. Truly there are three Keys to open this Door, and they are ſeverally in the Hands of thoſe three Perſons of the Trinity, and they all concur and bring their Keys with them when the Heart is opened, and the Soul is drawn to Chriſt.

Tho I dare not ſay that Faith on our Parts is always explicitely a Marriage-Act, or that the Soul did at firſt take Chriſt under the Nature and Conſideration of a Husband explicitely ſo conſidered; yet the thing in it ſelf, in the Nature of it, is a Marriage, and it is the Solemnization of the greateſt Marriage that ever was but one, and that was when the humane Nature and the Son of God were married together, whereby that Man Chriſt Jeſus became the natural Son of God. Now at this Marriage all the Trinity are preſent; and altho Chriſt is offered to the Soul at other times in the preaching of the Word, yet now he is actually given and beſtowed. The Souls of all Believers were given to Jeſus Chriſt from everlaſting, John 17. 6. and Jeſus Chriſt was given for thee upon the Croſs; but when thou comeſt to believe, and God cometh to reveal Chriſt in thee and for thee, then he is actually given to thee even by the Father.

That I may expreſs it to you, and tell you what great things are done in Heaven for you when your Hearts are drawn to believe, and then make it out when I have done:

1. Let me tell you, that when your Souls are firſt turned to God, and when you believe, tho perhaps you know neither the time nor the thing I now ſpeak of, yet notwithſtanding even at that time, firſt God the Father riſeth up in Heaven, (as I may ſo expreſs it;) and as Jeſus Chriſt ſaid to his Mother when he hung upon the Croſs, Woman, behold thy Son; ſo ſaith God the Father, Son, yonder is a Soul which I gave thee from everlaſting, which thou diedſt for upon the Croſs, and now is the Fulneſs of time come for to have Mercy upon that Soul, go take him, and own him for thine, and actually now poſſeſs him. This you have here in John 6. 37. All that the Father gives me, ſhall come to me. Here is, you ſee, a Giving before our Coming, and it is a giving de præſenti, at preſent, to diſtinguiſh it from that of everlaſting; a Deed of Gift made, and that by the Father; an actual Delivery and Seizin, whereby the Soul is put into the Hands of Jeſus Chriſt. And the Father likewiſe he whiſpers to the Heart of the Sinner, wooes the Soul to come to Chriſt; and therefore the 43*d* Verſe ſaith here, that they ſhall be all taught of God, that is, the Father: and that no Man can come unto Chriſt, except the Father draw him, ver. 44. It may be thou art at Church, or in the Aſſembly of the Saints, and there thou heareſt the Word preached, and perhaps ſtandeſt in the Crowd mingled among many others; or it may be thou art at home, and there art weeping and bewailing thy loſt Condition: ſaith God the Father unto Jeſus Chriſt, Son, behold thy Spouſe, behold yonder Soul that ſtands in ſuch a Place, I'll marry you two before ſuch time as this Soul ſtirs out of the Place. It is as if a King, when his Son comes into an Aſſembly, ſhould riſe up from his Royal Throne, having ſpied out a Beggar all in Rags, ſtanding in the midſt of the Crowd, and ſhould ſay, Son, yonder is your Wiſe, go and take her and marry her here preſently before me. So it is here, for there is none comes to Chriſt but thoſe to whom he is thus given. And then Jeſus Chriſt is glad that the Hour is come, This is the joyful Day (ſaith he) that I have long expected; and ſo he goes and embraces that Soul, tho perhaps the Soul knows not this.

2. Our Lord and Saviour Chriſt knows all his by Name, John 10. 14, 15. which Place indeed is very emphatical; for he ſaith, that look as the Father knows him, and as he knows the Father, ſo he knows his Sheep, and is known of them, (for known of them he ſhall be in the end) and he knows them all by Name. And when the Father hath thus commended and actually given a Soul unto him, Jeſus Chriſt looks upon that Soul, and thinketh with himſelf, yonder Soul I ſhould know, that is the Soul that my Father preſented unto me in all that Beauty from everlaſting, which I now am to be the Author of, and muſt beſtow upon it. Ay, but doth Chriſt know the Soul in all her Sins? Yes, and by a good Token (ſaith he) I ſhould know that Soul tho in her Sins, for I remember ſhe was brought to me in all her Sins, when I hung upon the Croſs to die for her; and together with her was the Catalogue of theſe very Sins preſented to me, when I was in the Garden, and when I hung upon the Tree. And what doth Chriſt now do? He apprehends this Soul, (as the Apoſtle ſaith, Phil. 3. 12.) takes it, and takes it as commended unto him actually by the Father: That I may apprehend (ſaith Paul there) that for which alſo I am apprehended of Chriſt Jeſus. He had ſpoken before of a Race which he was to run; now ſaith he, Jeſus Chriſt took me by the Hand when I entred into this Race. It may have an Alluſion to that, or it may allude to the Mother's apprehending the Child in the Womb, which ſhe doth, tho the Child apprehends not her. However this is certain, that he ſpeaks of Converſion and Entrance into the Race of Chriſtianity; and that before we apprehend Jeſus Chriſt he apprehends us, and takes us upon the Gift of his Father, as his: even as we love God, becauſe he loved us firſt; ſo we apprehend Chriſt, becauſe he apprehends us firſt. And Jeſus Chriſt doth this with the greateſt Gladneſs that can be: for as he longed to die for all our Souls, (now is my Soul troubled, ſaith he, John 12. 27. and for this Cauſe came I unto this Hour) ſo when the Fulneſs of Time is come that the Father hath appointed for him to receive a Soul, how glad is he of that Hour! If he ſits in Heaven, expecting when his Enemies ſhall be made his Footſtool, much more doth he expect when a Soul which he hath loved and paid ſo dear for, ſhall be brought unto him.

3. And then when the Son hath thus owned and acknowledged this Soul anew, the Holy Ghoſt, who is the third Perſon, and who is privy to God's Election, and to the Heart of Jeſus Chriſt when he died, and knows for whom he died, and had a Hand in all, he is ſent down from Heaven by Jeſus Chriſt; Gal. 4. 6. Becauſe you are Sons (Sons by Election) God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying, Abba, Father. And as there was a Fulneſs of Time, and when that Fulneſs of Time was come, (as it is Verſe the 4*th*) God ſent forth his Son made of a Woman, made under the Law: And as the Holy Ghoſt did come and overſhadow the Virgin Mary, (as you have it in Luke) and did unite that Man, that Beginning of an Infant, (how ſhall I expreſs it? for Jeſus Chriſt was in the Womb as we are, as ſmall and as little as we) as there was a Fulneſs of Time in which that Nature was formed by the Holy Ghoſt, and was united to the Son of God; ſo there is a Fulneſs of Time whenas the Holy Ghoſt thus ſent by Jeſus Chriſt having taken and apprehended the Soul, cometh down into the Heart. In Iſa. 53. 11. the Holy Ghoſt is called the Arm of the Lord: and why is he called ſo? but becauſe he is the Arm of the Son of God by whom he takes hold of the Soul. Now this Spirit, when he comes down thus into the Heart, works Eyes, and Feet, and Hands, and all, for to look upon Chriſt, and to come to Chriſt, and to lay hold upon Chriſt; for Faith is expreſſed by all theſe, by ſeeing of him, and coming to him, and receiving him, and laying hold of him: And Faith is Eyes, and Hands, and Feet, yea and Mouth, and Stomach, and all; for we eat his Fleſh, and drink his Blood by Faith. It is compared to all the Members, for the New Man is originally nothing but Faith. Thus now as Jeſus Chriſt takes hold of us, ſo by the Work of the Holy Ghoſt we come to take hold of him, and we embrace him, as the Phraſe is in Heb. 11. and we embrace him gladly, as it is in Acts 2. 41.

And all three Perſons having thus ſeverally and apart agreed together in it between themſelves, the Father beginning the Buſineſs in commending us to the Son, and the Son ſending his Spirit into the Soul, and the Holy Ghoſt working Grace in us, he leads us from one Perſon to the other back again. And therefore in our Coming unto God you have all the three Perſons mention'd together; Eph. 2. 18. Thorow him we have Acceſs by one Spirit unto the Father: Here is Chriſt, Father, Spirit. The word there which we tranſlate Acceſs, in the Original it is a Conduct, a Leading us by the hand, προσαγωγὴν: for as Jeſus Chriſt took us, and took us by the hand as it were, and led us into that Race, and took hold of us by his Spirit, ſo what doth the Spirit do? He leads us by Chriſt to the Father, for we come to God by and through Chriſt, being led in the Hand of the Spirit. Thus the Soul comes to have Communion with all the three Perſons, Fellowſhip with the Father, and with the Son, and with the Holy Ghoſt, till this Fellowſhip is perfected in Heaven. And tho you ſee not theſe things, tho you ſee not what the bleſſed Trinity do for you then at that time when you believe, as that the Father thus gives you to Chriſt, and that Chriſt himſelf apprehends you, and that the Holy Ghoſt is ſent down into your Hearts, and takes you by the hand thus, and carries you back again through Chriſt to the Father; yet all theſe things are done, and they are done for you; and when God cauſeth your Souls to cloſe with the Lord Jeſus, they are thus tranſacted in Heaven for you.

I will give you ſome Inſtances of this in the Converſions of Men in the New Teſtament, and I'll take Paul's firſt: and altho his Story has this extraordinary in it, (which indeed is all the Privilege he had in this above us) that Jeſus Chriſt appeared viſibly from Heaven unto him, and the Holy Ghoſt likewiſe in a viſible manner fell down upon him; and the Story tells us diſtinctly, that Chriſt and the Holy Ghoſt did thus and thus appear in it, and in that I ſay the Story is extraordinary; yet notwithſtanding whatſoever was done at his Converſion by God the Father, and by Jeſus Chriſt, and by the Holy Ghoſt viſibly, the like is done by the three Perſons between themſelves inviſibly at the Converſion of every Soul that is drawn to believe in Chriſt. For in matter of Redemption, and of Salvation, and of Converſion, and of Faith, and the like, the Apoſtles themſelves had no Privilege which we have not. Now ſee how all three Perſons met at his Converſion. Firſt, in Gal. 1. 15. you have the Father; he had appointed a Time when he meant to give Paul to Chriſt, and to reveal Chriſt unto Paul. Mark the Phraſe, WHEN it pleaſed God, (that is, when the Time was come) who ſeparated me from my Mother's Womb, and called me by his Grace, to reveal his Son in me. When it pleaſed God, (ſaith he) i. e. God the Father, (for he ſaith, it pleaſed God to reveal his Son in him) ſo that it was he who appointed the Time, and who at that Time began anew to act for him. And tho God had Paul in his Eye from his Mother's Womb, yet there was a Time appointed to call Paul in, and until then (ſaith he in the Verſes before) I lived as other Jews: but then when it pleaſed God, namely God the Father, to reveal his Son in me, then it was thus and thus with me: Here now is God the Father. You ſhall ſee likewiſe the ſecond Perſon, Jeſus Chriſt, coming in. When Paul was journying towards Damaſcus, (Acts 9. 6.) Chriſt from Heaven appears to him, and thus ſpeaks to him, I am Jeſus whom thou perſecuteſt, ariſe and go into the City, and it ſhall be told thee what thou muſt do. And as Jeſus Chriſt himſelf ſpeaks to Paul, ſo likewiſe Chriſt goes and ſpeaks to Ananias, ver. 11. The LORD ſaid unto him in a Viſion, Ananias, Ariſe, and go into the Street which is called ſtraight, and enquire for one called Saul of Tarſus. You ſee both that Chriſt knew Paul fully, and took notice of him, and knew him by Name, and ſo he doth every Soul that is turned to him. And he names the Houſe too, he vouchſafeth to do ſo; Go (ſaith he) and enquire in the Houſe of Judas. This was to ſhew what notice he takes of all Circumſtances when a Soul is converted to him. And he tells Ananias likewiſe what Paul is doing, Behold (ſaith he) he prayeth, he is mourning and bewailing his Condition. And he takes notice too of his Election, and under that Notion ſends Ananias to him; He is (ſaith he, ver. 15.) a choſen Veſſel unto me: You ſee how withal he orders every Circumſtance. Thus now you have firſt the Father appointing the time, and at that time putting forth his Act, (when it pleaſed the Father to reveal his Son in me) and you have the Son likewiſe appearing from Heaven to Paul, telling him, that he would ſend Ananias to him; (ſo ver. 12.) and appearing to Ananias likewiſe, and telling him that he muſt go to Paul. Now at the 17*th* Verſe you have the Holy Ghoſt, the third Perſon, for he in a viſible manner falls upon Paul when Ananias came to him, and had laid his Hands on him. Here then in this Inſtance of Paul's you have all three Perſons concurring in this great Work. Now that which was thus acted in this extraordinary and viſible manner towards Paul in his Converſion, (I mean viſibly by the Son, and by the Holy Ghoſt) the like is done inviſibly, that is, undiſcernably to thee. Paul's Converſion had a Pattern in it, and it is a Pattern of the extraordinary Converſion of the Jews his Countrymen, who 'tis thought ſhall be called after the ſame manner, and it is moſt likely they ſhall be ſo. But yet notwithſtanding, if you take that in this Converſion of Paul's, which is the Privilege of all Believers, namely, to have then the joint Conſent of Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, ſo far his Converſion is a Pattern of all Converſions, and of the Work of Faith in all God's People to the end of the World. And do but mark it, that which was done here viſibly, in the Converſion of Paul, and by expreſs Direction from Heaven, is in effect oftentimes done as plainly in ordinary Converſions here below. You ſhall find a Soul guided by a ſecret Providence to go to ſuch a Church to hear ſuch a Man: Tho it's true indeed he is not directed by an extraordinary Revelation, as Paul was to Ananias, yet moved and guided he is to go to ſuch a Place, and there he goes, he knows not why; and when he is there, God directs the Miniſter to ſpeak that to the Soul which ſhall moſt nearly concern it, even as in a Viſion he directed Ananias to ſpeak to Paul what concerned him. Now when he hath brought the Heart and the Word thus together by his Providence, (for what he did then viſibly, he doth now by his Providence) the Holy Ghoſt falls upon the Heart, and draws it to Jeſus Chriſt. You ſhall find the like in the Story of Cornelius, Acts 10. which likewiſe is an Inſtance of the ſame thing, while Peter was ſpeaking thoſe Words, (namely, preaching of Chriſt to him, for ſaith he, ver. 43. To him give all the Prophets witneſs, that through his Name whoſoever believeth in him, ſhall receive Remiſſion of Sins) while Peter yet ſpake theſe Words, (ſaith the Text) the Holy Ghoſt fell on all them which heard the Word. And you have the ſame Story repeated again by Peter himſelf, Acts 11. 15. As I began to ſpeak, (ſaith he) the Holy Ghoſt fell on them. And as the Spirit fell on them thus in their hearing the Word, ſo Chriſt himſelf bad Peter go, for he had a Viſion from Heaven, and the Lord ſpake to him to that purpoſe. Here now is both the Son and the Holy Ghoſt viſibly concurring in the working of Faith, yea of that diſtinct degree of Faith which Cornelius had to believe evangelically, tho he had a Faith before in the Meſſias to come. Now look what extraordinarily the three Perſons did thus in Heaven, and from Heaven by Revelation then, the ſame thing, tho in an ordinary and in a ſecret inviſible way doth the Holy Ghoſt, and the Son, and God the Father, now do for all Souls that are turned to Chriſt. They do by a ſecret Providence guide thee, and caſt thee to live in ſuch a Family, and there thou receiveſt this and that Inſtruction; or they guide thee to ſuch a Miniſtry, or to ſuch a Paſſage of Scripture, and then the Holy Ghoſt falls on thee. Jeſus Chriſt hath as much hand in this, and the Holy Ghoſt as ſtrong a hand, and it is as great and ſtrong a Fruit of the eternal Decree of God, as it was to Paul and to Ananias. Tho many do not know the time of their Converſion, yet by the Story of it you ſhall have as ſtrange and as extraordinary Providences of God, in bringing them to the Means of Comfort, and the Means of Comfort to them, and in bringing them to the Means of Faith, and ſetting it on upon their Hearts; and you ſhall herein have as ſtrong a Providence as this was of ſpeaking viſibly from Heaven to Paul and Ananias. And the Reaſon of it is plain; for what is our Calling and Believing? It is but the acting, or rather fulfilling of Election; and accordingly it hath the Name of Election given to it oftentimes in the Scripture. Now what the three Perſons did at thy Election, the ſame is done when thy Soul is called and believeth; tho perhaps thou haſt not the Knowledg of the time when, much leſs of the thing, yet all this is done for thee, and that in Heaven, when God doth draw thy Heart firſt to believe.

CHAP. III.

The Uſes of the Doctrine. We ſhould conſider Faith on the Lord Jeſus, as a Matter of the greateſt Importance, ſince all the Perſons of the Godhead concern themſelves in it. We ſhould not neglect this great Buſineſs of Believing. We ſhould glorify all the three Perſons for the great things which they do for us at the time of our believing.

THE Doctrine which I have explain'd and prov'd in the former Chapter, affords us theſe great and uſeful Inferences.

1. You ſee that Salvation is no ſlight thing, and that believing and turning to God is no ſlight Matter, when all the three Perſons do thus concur in it. The converting and drawing of a Soul to believe, is a Buſineſs of infinite Moment, and why? Becauſe all Heaven, and all Hell, and oftentimes Earth, or much on Earth, are ſtirred about it, even as they uſe to be at great Tranſactions. What a ſtir there is in the Spirits of Men, when a great Tranſaction falls out in State-Affairs? There is much more in this. All in Heaven are ſtirr'd; for you have ſeen that the three Perſons move in it; and Chriſt tells us, there is Joy in Heaven even amongſt the Angels, when a Soul is turned to God. And all in Hell are ſtirr'd about it too, for all the Devils rage and come forth, and are all in Arms. The ſtrong Man when he is bound and caſt out, is in a Rage, and therefore pours forth all the Floods of Perſecutions, and Diſgraces, and Temptations, and Violence upon the Soul. And Earth is ſtirred about it too, for you ſhall have carnal Friends and Companions, and this World, ſtand amazed at it, and think it ſtrange, as the Apoſtle ſaith. Herein the Soul is conformed to the Image of Chriſt himſelf. When Chriſt was born, they were all ſtirr'd at it. Heaven was ſtirred at it, for the Father ſent the Holy Ghoſt down; and the Angels came and ſung the News of it, and the Shepherds come and bring the News of it; and Herod was troubled, and all Jeruſalem with him, Mat. 2. 3. Luke 2. It is a great Buſineſs, and God gives Evidence of it, that it is a great Buſineſs; for all Heaven, (I ſay) and Earth, and Hell, are ſtirred when God doth thus bring a Soul home to Chriſt.

2. We therefore ſhould not neglect the great Buſineſs of Salvation, nor the time of God's ſtirring of us. Tho God offers Chriſt at all times in the Miniſtry of the Word, yet you never come actually to believe till all three Perſons thus concur in it, and till they join in a ſpecial Concurrence together for your Turning and Converſion. Conſider with your ſelves, you that think you can believe and repent when you will, can you call this great Council together in Heaven? Can you appoint God the time when it ſhall be done? No. It pleaſed the Father (ſaith the Apoſtle) to reveal his Son in me. It is the Father draweth, and it is the Son that muſt take hold of you, and it is the Holy Ghoſt that muſt come down into your Hearts: And it is not in Man's Power to call this great Aſſembly together, thus to join Votes together. Is it in the Power of Subjects to call the three Eſtates, of King, and both the other Eſtates when they pleaſe? No. So neither is it in the Power of any Creature to call together this great Council of Heaven; you may as well order the Conjunction of the Stars, and call the Planets together when you will, which is impoſſible, Job 38. 31. He ſpeaks under the very Alluſion that I now mention it for; Canſt thou bring forth Mazaroth in his Seaſon? or canſt thou guide Arcturus with his Sons? He meaneth Stars which have theſe ſeveral Names given them. Knoweſt thou the Ordinances of Heaven? Canſt thou ſet the Dominion thereof in the Earth? that is, Canſt thou appoint when the Stars ſhall meet, and by their Conjunction have great Influences upon Men? Can you go and ſet that Clock? No, ſaith he, you muſt wait upon God at his time to do it. When therefore the Spirit of God moves you, then think, now I will follow, and now it may be is the time that God will reveal his Son to me; and becauſe thou knoweſt not the time, therefore I ſay wait upon God at all times. Tho God in the Miniſtry of the Word offers at all times, and ſtands ready to beſtow (if thou couldſt come) Faith upon thee, and to draw thy Heart, and actually to beſtow Chriſt upon thee, yet for this there is a Fulneſs of time, a ſpecial time which thou muſt wait for, even as the World waited for the Fulneſs of time when God ſhould ſend his Son in the Fleſh. This Conjunction is not towards the Elect at all times, it is but then when the Fulneſs of time comes in which God means to turn them. And this is the Reaſon why the Elect, tho they are moved often before-hand, and have many Motions in their Hearts, yet there is not an effectual Faith wrought till ſuch a time appointed by the Father. And this ſhould make no Man neglect, but ſtir him up rather, becauſe Salvation is ſo great a Buſineſs, and the time is not in our own hands. Canſt thou move God to give his Son to thee actually, when thou wilt? Or canſt thou move Jeſus Chriſt to come and take Poſſeſſion of thee when thou wilt? Or canſt thou move the Spirit of God to come and give thee Faith when thou wilt? No, all theſe are in the Gift of the three Perſons, and no Man receiveth any thing except it be given him from above, John 3. 27. Therefore you ſhould wait upon the Lord, and obſerve his time, and that with Fear and Trembling, (if I may ſo expreſs it by the contrary.) They that ſerve the Devil, as Conjurers and Witches, wait for the falling of Fern-Seed, as they call it, Night after Night, when it is told them it is in the Poſſeſſion of ſuch and ſuch Angels; which when they have got, they think they can do great Wonders by it. Are they in this Dependance upon their Head, Satan, that damneth and undoeth them? How ſhould we then wait upon God for the Droppings and Influences of Heaven, and for the ſending of the Holy Ghoſt into us to work Faith in us?

3. Thou that art a Believer, do but look back upon the Work of thy Converſion and turning to God; tho perhaps thou canſt not tell the time when it was done, yet it may be thou canſt tell when it was not done. Do but think with thy ſelf (I ſay) what great Matters were done for thee in Heaven when thou waſt firſt brought to Jeſus Chriſt, which it may be thou never takeſt notice of. Perhaps thou haſt been ſearching into the Work of God within thee, and thou haſt done well ſo to do: and it may be thou haſt ſeen and took notice of the great Difficulty of that Work, and what a great many Lifts were put to thy Heart, and a great many Knocks, before ſuch time as it was driven home to the Lord Jeſus. But haſt thou withal conſidered that there was as great things actually done for thee then in Heaven, as when thou waſt firſt choſen, or as when Jeſus Chriſt hung upon the Croſs? The Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, were all ſet on work to make up the Marriage between thy Soul and Chriſt, and they all ſet Providences on work to that purpoſe. If a Condemned Man were not to have a Pardon till three Kings met, and there were no more but three Kings in the World, and theſe muſt all concur together for the ſealing and ſigning of it, how would he value that Pardon? Thou lookeſt it may be on the Difficulty of the Work in thine own Heart only, and how thou wenteſt from one Ordinance to another, and what rubs there were in the way, and thou haſt Conſiderations what was done upon Earth in thy own Heart: but look up higher, and conſider what was done in Heaven as the Original of all, and let that be the thing for which thou praiſeſt and bleſſeſt God. Go home, and down upon thy Knees, and thank theſe three Perſons that have done all this for thee, tho thou ſaweſt it not when thy Heart was firſt drawn to Chriſt. For God doth give thee Aſſurance, that all the three Perſons concur, 1 John 5. 7, 8. there is the Father from Heaven, and the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, and all theſe give a Teſtimony: and the truth is, a Teſtimony is to be had diſtinctly from all theſe apart; for the Apoſtle would never have mentioned them there, unleſs the Witneſs both of Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, was to be given apart: even as Water, and Spirit, and Blood, are diſtinct, tho they all concur, ſo are the Witneſs of all theſe three Perſons in giving Aſſurance.

I have known them who when they have been turned to God, have looked back upon the Greatneſs of the Work to be ſuch, as that for ten hundred thouſand Worlds they would not have it to be done again, Why? for fear it ſhould not be wrought. I would not have you to do ſo, for that God who did work it out of his eternal Love, he repents not, and therefore he would do it again if it were not done, or if it were to do again, ſo well he loveth you. Only in this imitate them, to ſet an high Price and Value on it, and conſider, that e're this Match was made, the Father ſaid Amen in Heaven, and the Son ſaid Amen, and the Holy Ghoſt ſaid Amen, before ever thy Heart ſaid Amen: And withal conſider, that all the three Perſons are likewiſe engaged, and will everlaſtingly carry on this Work.

4. You ſee the reaſon why, tho the Goſpel is preached, and ſets forth Chriſt the great Object of Faith, yet all do not believe: Our Saviour reſolves it even into this, that the three Perſons do not concur in the doing of it, as you may obſerve it here in Joh. 6. v. 36, 37. I ſaid unto you (ſaith he) that ye alſo have ſeen me, and believe: What is the reaſon? look the next words, All that the Father giveth me, ſhall come unto me: and the reaſon why you do not come is, becauſe my Father hath not beſtowed you upon me: And therefore he goes on in like manner, ver. 44. No Man can come to me, except the Father draw him; which he brings in to anſwer the murmuring of the Jews (for ver. 41. it is ſaid they murmured amongſt themſelves) and to ſhew the Reaſon why they did not believe; No Man can come to me (ſaith he) except the Father draw him. And ſo likewiſe afterward, ver. 64. he gives the reaſon why, when he had twelve Diſciples, yet one of them believed not; For Jeſus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and he ſaid, Therefore ſaid I unto you, that no Man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father. You ſhall ſee it evident (ſaith he) among your ſelves, all among your ſelves do not believe; Why? becauſe thoſe only believe that are drawn by the Father, and are given to me by the Father, and to whom the Father doth give Power to believe.

5. Therefore by this alſo mangnify the free Grace of God in calling you, and in working Faith in your Hearts. Do not only conſider that you had the three Perſons thus concurring, but likewiſe that they have called you out, and not others; and that tho the ſame Goſpel is preached to others that is preached to you, who come and hear the ſame Sermons which you do, yea and it may be their Hearts are mightily moved by the Holy Ghoſt; yet thou haſt Faith wrought effectually in thee, which is not in them. What is the reaſon? becauſe that was done in Heaven for thee by all three Perſons which was not done for them; and they were not given to Jeſus Chriſt by the Father, and therefore he did not give his Spirit effectually to dwell in their Hearts. By this Conſideration alſo magnify the free Grace of God.

CHAP. IV.

Of a Believer's being drawn unto Chriſt by the Father. The Reaſons why it is the proper Work of the Father to draw the Soul unto Chriſt.

JOHN vi. 44.

No Man can come unto me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him: and I will raiſe him up at the laſt Day.

THE Subject I have next afore me, is, a Believer's being drawn to Chriſt, and that by the Father, and the Soul's treating with Chriſt for its Salvation. My Aſſertion is, That Chriſtians are to make it one great Exerciſe of their Faith, diſtinctly to treat with the Perſon of Chriſt for their Salvation, as well as with God the Father through Chriſt: And this, as at their firſt Converſion to obtain Salvation, ſo afterwards all along in their Lives, to maintain Fellowſhip both with the Father and the Son. But I ſhall firſt diſcourſe how it is the Father who teacheth us to know Chriſt, and draws us to him; and alſo ſhall ſhew how the Father teacheth.

1. I ſpeak not of the working the Principles and Habits of Faith, the hearing Ear, and the underſtanding Heart; but of the Actings of Faith, which the Father draws out in the Soul towards Chriſt.

2. I limit it not unto the Actings of Faith at firſt Converſion, but I mean thoſe which are continued all a Man's Life long, which are all aſcribed to the Father, as well as thoſe at ones firſt Converſion, as in *Mat.*11.25,26,27. you find it, where all that is revealed of the Son, is aſcribed unto the Father. And indeed at our firſt Converſion, our treating with Chriſt is eminently for pardon of Sin, and Juſtification, which are the uſual Inducements of our firſt coming to him: But that's too narrow, for Chriſt in the whole Latitude of him, in his Perſon, and in whatever belongs to him, is that which the Father goeth on to teach us all our Lives long.

3. I yet limit it to the Attainments by Faith of Recumbence, (a ſort of Faith which is common to all Chriſtians) and my reaſon is, becauſe in the Text 'tis that Faith whereof he ſpeaks, which all ſhall be taught: And ſo in Iſa. 54.13. and in Jer. 31. 34. (which two are the Prophets which our Saviour here refers to, ſpeaking in the plural) the Promiſe runs, They ſhall be all taught from the leaſt to the greateſt. I ſhall not therefore ſpeak of that Faith which only ſome particular Chriſtians arrive to, as Faith of Perſonal Aſſurance, accompanied with Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory, for that's the Spirit's Work as he is the Comforter: But I ſhall diſcourſe of that Faith which is common to all the Children, as in *Iſa.*54.13. they are called; and as Salvation is called the common Savation, Jude 1. ſo that Act of Faith is the Act that is common to all Chriſtians in all States, whereby the Soul caſts it ſelf on Chriſt to be ſaved and juſtified; and ſuch is the Apoſtle's Faith ſaid at firſt to have been, *Gal.*2.16. It is a believing in Chriſt, that we may be juſtified; we believed in Chriſt (ſays he) that we might be juſtified: So they began thus to treat with Chriſt, to have Salvation from him. This is the Faith which I intend, whereby I come to Chriſt, (tho I know not I am the Perſon deſign'd by him in his dying) my Heart being drawn from its being taken with what it knows of Chriſt in order to its Salvation; all which I plead to move him to receive me; and to plead which my Heart is ſtrengthned, truſting on him to obtain it.

4. I animadvert here about this Faith of Recumbency, that there may be many Attainments in the courſe of this ſort of Faith, which every ſuch Believer arrives not at. So as my meaning is not, that unleſs all and every one hath experimented in themſelves all and every ſuch Actings, that they ſhould not have a true Faith of Recumbence; but my intent is to mention no other Acts than what ſuch a State and Elevation of believing is capable of, and ſo may be attained by all, tho their Faith for their Salvation riſes not up to Perſonal Aſſurance, which much tends to the Comfort of ſuch Believers, and ſerves to provoke them to ſeek thoſe Attainments.

5. I animadvert, that I aim not to ſet down in a method theſe Workings, and Actings of Faith on Chriſt in ſuch an Order as to ſay, this is firſt wrought, then follows that, and ſo a third: For God himſelf in his Workings doth not always uſe one and the ſame Method, but according to his good Pleaſure. God's ways of wooing us to his Son, and Chriſt's winning of our Hearts to himſelf, are as the way of a Man with a Maid (as Solomon ſpeaks of their Wooings) various; and as occaſions lead on to their Diſcovery, Temptations being divers, the Diſcoveries which anſwer them are various. So as what I for my Method's ſake may handle firſt, God may have wrought laſt in thy Soul; and what I ſhall mention laſt, or in the middle of this Diſcourſe, God may have wrought firſt in thee. But firſt and laſt ſuch Dealings of his as follow uſe to be tranſacted with us, and in us, in the way of believing.

6. When I limit it thus to Faith of Recumbency upon Chriſt, where may fall out many Experiments I ſhall mention, which every particular Perſon hath not yet attained to, who yet is a true Believer; for they are the Experiments of a Man's whole Life in this way of Treaty which I aim at; yet ſome or other of theſe Experiments will ſute the loweſt of all, in that lower Form. But however, tho a Man ſhould continue all his days but a Recumbent, he is yet capable of them at one time or another.

7. Into this drawing of our Souls to Chriſt by the Father, I ſhall not draw in the handling of the preparatory Works: As the work of Humiliation for Sin, Contrition, Self-emptineſs, Regeneration, and the like, which yet the Father in drawing us unto Chriſt maketh uſe of; but the Work it ſelf is properly the Spirit's, to whom our firſt Regeneration is attributed; That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit, John 3. 6. This is alſo the Effect of John Baptiſt's Miniſtry, who baptized with the Spirit, as with Water, which Spirit did regenerate: Luke 1. 16. Many of the Children of Iſrael ſhall he turn to the Lord their God. And in Iſa. 40. (in which Chapter his Miniſtry is propheſied of) the Effects of it on Mens Hearts are expreſly attributed to the Spirit; ver. 7. The Spirit of the Lord blows upon it, blaſting through the ſight of Sin all the Excellencies that Men glory in. And this Miniſtry, as preparative to the Actings of Faith, muſt laſt to the end of the World: As Chriſt himſelf preached it, Mark 1. 15. to repent, in order to receiving the Goſpel; ſo when he ſent his Apoſtles out, he gave this Commiſſion, that Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins ſhould be preached in his Name among all Nations, Luke 24. 47. that is, Repentance in order to receiving Remiſſion of Sins by Faith. But the working the Acts of believing, and to teach and inſtruct Souls to come to Chriſt, this is the Work of God the Father, and is my Subject.

Obſ. That to teach and inſtruct Souls to come to Chriſt, and to draw them to Chriſt, is the Father's Work; even as to make known the Father in his Love and Grace, ſo as to draw us to believe on him, is the Work of Chriſt the Son. It is the Honour our Saviour Chriſt hath given his Father in this Text, John 6. 44. interpreting that great Promiſe made to the Church of the New Teſtament, (Iſa. 54. 13. that they ſhall be all taught of God) to mean, that it is God the Father who teacheth, and draweth Souls to come to Chriſt himſelf; And he repeats it again, ver. 65. of this Chapter, that none do come, unleſs it be given them of the Father. We all know that all three Perſons do concur in every outward Work; but yet ſo as ſome one Work is more eminently attributed to one Perſon, and another to another. And this of revealing Chriſt, and drawing to Chriſt, is more properly attributed to the Father; as to reveal the Father is attributed to the Son; and to reveal both Father and Son in the way of perſonal Aſſurance, is attributed to the Spirit, who is therefore called the Comforter. I ſhall give a Scripture or two to prove it; Mat. 11. 27. All things are delivered unto me of my Father; and no Man knoweth the Son but the Father; neither knoweth any Man the Father, ſave the Son; and he to whomſoever the Son will reveal him. And whereas you may object, that it is not there affirmed, none knows the Son but the Father, and he to whom the Father ſhall reveal him; and that this laſt Clauſe is not added in Chriſt's Speech: The Anſwer is, That there being that Addition concerning the Son's knowing the Father, that none knows the Father but to whom the Son reveals him, it doth by the Law of Parallels imply, that the like is alſo to be added to that of the Father's knowing the Son. But the ſecond Anſwer is, it is expreſly affirmed before, and was the Occaſion of this his Speech; for he had ſaid, Father, I thank thee that thou haſt revealed theſe things to Babes. And the things revealed were himſelf, and Faith to lay hold upon himſelf: for he doth upbraid the City, that they had not entertained his Miniſtry in his preaching the Goſpel; the Subſtance of which was his preaching himſelf; and to believe on him; which thoſe Babes had received. And the Apoſtle aſcribes it expreſly to the Father that had revealed it to him; Gal. 1. 15, 16. When it pleaſed God who ſeparated me from my Mother's Womb, and called me by his Grace, to reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the Heathen. He ſpeaks eminently of God the Father's revealing his Son at his firſt Call; which alſo the Father continued to do, and went on further and further to do all his Life long: for it was to this end, that he might preach him among the Gentiles, which the Apoſtle went on to do, and accordingly grew in Knowledg, and in the Revelation of Chriſt all his Life long, that he might ſo preach him. You have the ſame, 1 Cor. 1. 9. where the calling of us to Fellowſhip with his Son is eminently attributed to the Father: God is faithful, by whom we were called unto the Fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. And his Calling there is not only by Commiſſion, as when a Man is called to an Office; but operatively; and it is unto the whole Fellowſhip of Chriſt, from firſt to laſt, that we enjoy. And it is the Father who is meant in both Places, for he calls Chriſt his Son.

There is a great Harmony in Theological Reaſon, why this working of Faith in the Soul to Chriſt, why this wooing Work ſhould belong to the Father.

1. The Father was he that choſe our Perſons for his Son; Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me, ſays Chriſt, John 17. 6. It was the Father that commended us to his Son at firſt, and preſented us to his Son in all the Glory of which Jeſus Chriſt, if he would but take us and own us to be his, ſhould be the Auther. He did it to allure him, he did ſpeak to his Heart to die for us, as you have it, Pſal. 40. 6, 7. 8. which is quoted in Heb. 10. 7. Lo, I come to do thy Will, O God. It is added in the Pſalm, Thy Law is in my Heart. It was God the Father commanded him; alſo it was he moved him to it, and drew him to it, (to ſpeak in the Words of the Text) and did write the very Law of it in his Heart, for the Law written in his Heart hath reference to his dying for us, and being Mediator for us. He wooed him, and told him, he would love him, if he would die for us; John 10 17. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my Life. Now then who ſo fit a Perſon as the Father to woo us, when we are to be won, and our Hearts to be brought to Chriſt? and to whom is it more proper to woo for his Son than the ſame Father that commends his Son to us? And who is fitter alſo than the Father to move the Matter to us, to teach us and inſtruct us, and commend his Son to us, and to draw us to take him, and to write this Law in our Hearts, as the greateſt Obedience we can perform to him? I ſpeak not of the Miniſtry of Humiliation in that Work going before, but of the wooing Part, which is proper to God the Father.

2. Our believing is a receiving Chriſt, it is a giving our ſelves up to him as to our Lord and Husband, and it is proper for the Father to woo for him, becauſe all other Fathers have the Power of beſtowing their Sons or Daughters, and therefore God hath it much more. Hagar, tho but a Woman, yet had a Right, and exerciſed the Power of getting a Wife for her Son. To give in Marriage is oft ſpoken of in Scripture to be by Parents, and thus it is here in Pſal. 45. (where Chriſt is repreſented as the Husband, and the Church his Wife) Who is it that ſpeaks to the Church, to love her Husband, to worſhip her Husband, and to forſake all for him? It's God the Father, ver. 10. Harken O Daughter, and conſider, and incline thine Ear, &c. This is God the Father ſpeaking of Chriſt unto his Church. But you will ſay, this is not found amongſt other Fathers, that they ſhould condeſcend to woo the Wife for their Sons, but it is enough for them to give their Conſents, and leave it to their Sons to gain the Heart themſelves. Thus it is amongſt Men, and the Reaſons for it amongſt Men are plain, which will not hold as to God.

1*ſt.* Fathers are Strangers to the Perſon whom the Son is to woo, and ſo leave it to his liking, it is enough for him to give his Conſent and Leave to get the Perſon's Heart. But the Caſe here is otherwiſe, for every elect Soul is the Daughter of God, even in Election, before Converſion; and as he knows his Son, ſo he knows the Soul, he knows his Daughter too, not only as made his Daughter by Marriage to his Son, but as originally choſen by him. As Eve is ſaid to be the Daughter of God by Creation, as Adam was the Son of God by Creation, (Luke 3. 38.) ſo it is here. Therefore he leaves it not to his Son only to ſpeak for himſelf, and gain her, but he out of the ſame fatherly Intereſt which he hath in the Soul, as well as in his Son, (tho he hath Intereſt in her as his Daughter, which is a lower Intereſt than what he hath in his Son) wooes her.

2*dly.* Marriages amongſt Men ſtand upon equal Terms, and Perſons of a like Rank uſe to marry together; and the Father will not condeſcend in that caſe to woo for the Son; no, it were uncouth if he ſhould, and not proper. But the Church, and every poor Soul, is the unworthieſt Creature to be match'd ſo glorioufly to Chriſt that ever was. Nay, it was an Enemy before, an utter Enemy, utterly averſe; ſo that it becomes a Matter not only of Love, but of Grace and Mercy, for to have this Soul gained and brought in to Chriſt. And it is Fulneſs of Mercy and Grace to woo ſuch a Soul, and an infinite Condeſcenſion ſo to do, and none greater but that of God's giving his Son to die. And ſince it thus belongs to Grace, the Father will have the Honour of it as well as the Son, for you read of the Grace of the Lord Jeſus, and of the Father, and ſometimes both put together, 2 Theſſ. 1. 12. Is it a Matter of infinite Grace, the Perſon being ſo low and unworthy? In that caſe ſaith the Father, I'll be your Spokeſman, for it is Matter of Grace. It is not matter of pure Affection as a Husband hath to a Wife, but it is a matter of Grace which I have to ſuch a Soul; I will therefore ſhew it in this my wooing ſuch a Soul. O! this is infinite Condeſcenſion in the great God.

3*dly.* The Father doth ingage to woo us to come to Chriſt, becauſe he promiſed his Son when he wooed him to die for us, and gave us to him; and he promiſed that when we came to be converted, he would give us, and would draw us to his Son; John 6. 37. All that the Father giveth me ſhall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out. Our Saviour Chriſt doth not ſpeak like a Wooer there, for all he ſaith is, I will not refuſe them if they come. He hath indeed an hand in drawing the Soul; When I am lifted up (ſays he) I will draw all Men after me, John 12. 32. but he doth it ſecretly, and thoſe thou haſt given. But what is the Meaning of thoſe Words, John 6. 37? It is reſolv'd into this, That his Father in giving them promiſed they ſhould come to him, and therefore the Father draws them; and it is therefore the Work of the Father. In Pſal. 110. the Father ſpeaks to Chriſt, and he promiſeth there, that they ſhall be a willing People to him, *ver.*1. The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, (i. e. God the Father ſaid to his Son, the great God Jehovah ſaid to his Son) Sit thou at my right Hand until I make thine Enemies thy Footſtool; and I will deſtroy thine Enemies for thee. And ver. 3. God the Father makes this Promiſe to him, Thy People ſhall be willing in the day of thy Power. It is the Father's Promiſe; I will bring the Will and Heart of thy People off to thee, and thy People ſhall be willing in the day of thy Power, when the Goſpel comes.

Uſe 1. Let us then encourage our ſelves in the Hope, that the Match is like to go on, if God the Father thus ſtrikes in, and God the Son alſo. Hath God begun with thy Soul to repreſent Chriſt to thee, to take thy Heart? Doſt thou ſet thy ſelf to ſeek him, to have him? thou haſt not only thy Husband Chriſt to draw thee, but thou haſt his Father to draw thee; and he is thy Father too; and that Match will thrive, and muſt go on.

Uſe 2. Wouldſt thou ſee and know who it is that is at work in thy Heart? (thou poor Soul that lay at God day and night to give thee Chriſt, and have thy Heart inflamed towards the Lord Jeſus) doſt thou know who it is that is at work in thy Heart all this while? who? It is the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Perhaps we have had little Knowledg of this, to return the Thanks to our God, and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whereas indeed it is he does it. Thou haſt not one degree of Fellowſhip with the Son, but God the Father draws thee to it. Not that any Man (ſaith Chriſt, John 6. 46.) hath ſeen the Father: None ſeeth the Father while he is doing of it, for he doth it ſecretly, and doth not tell you, I the Father am drawing of you. No, but ſtill he holds up Chriſt to you, and Chriſt will come and tell you of his Love afterwards. The Father does not come in to me here as an Object of Faith in his Work. When he works, he doth not ſay, I am he that works it: He doth not come with Authority and tell thee, I thy Father draw thee, but he is the Efficient that draws, tho he propoſe not himſelf objectively nor authoritatively. As Chriſt ſaid to Peter when he waſh'd his Feet, What I do to thee, thou ſhalt know hereafter: So God the Father comforts himſelf (if I may ſo ſpeak) with this, or reſerves this Glory to himſelf, that we ſhall know one day what he is doing. In that day (ſays Chriſt, John 16. 25.) I will ſhew you plainly of the Father. The Father had wrought all this while, but ſecretly, and had not diſcovered himſelf; and tho Jeſus Chriſt in his Doctrine had taught the Apoſtles, and inſtructed them about the Father, yet alas poor Creatures, they did not underſtand it! they did not take it in; it was but as a ſpeaking to them in Proverbs; But in that day (after his Aſcenſion) I ſhall ſhew you (ſays he) plainly of the Father, ver. 25. What do I quote this for? To ſhew that tho theſe poor Diſciples had heard ſay, It was the Father that drew them to believe, and they found the Work upon them to be powerful and effectual: Yet it was obſcure to them, that it was he that did it, but he tells them, that the Time cometh (which Time muſt be after his Aſcenſion) when he would tell them plainly, It was the Father did it. It was the Father (tho now unſeen, and ſpoken of in Parables and Proverbs) that drew thy Soul in Morning by Morning; and thou wilt give all the Glory to the Father one day. O what manner of Love is it (viz. of the Father) that we ſhould be call'd the Sons of God! 1 John 3. 1. O what manner of Love is it, that the Father ſhould woo us to be his Children, and to receive his Son, and ſo to be his Sons; for herein he gives us Power to become the Sons of God, John 1. 12. It is enough for other Fathers to give Conſent, and leave it to their Sons; but here in this caſe, as Jeſus Chriſt came down from Heaven to redeem and purchaſe his Church and Spouſe, ſo God the Father comes down into the Hearts of Men, and draws them, and does it immediately. I do not ſay he doth it by his Spirit, as if himſelf did it not. 'Tis true, the Spirit doth join in it,

Part I. and ſo doth the Son, but the Father does this himſelf immediately. Is it not a mighty thing that the Father ſhould teach us to woo his Son, and become a Tutor to us, and an Inſtructor of us. What Condeſcenſion would it be in Kings to tutor their Children. Poor Creatures! we are no more able to woo Jeſus Chriſt, than the meaneſt Country Creature, one that walks up and down the Streets in all Rags and Poverty, is able to woo a King. But the Father comes and teaches us to woo Jeſus Chriſt, and makes Repreſentations of Chriſt to us. He made the Match with Adam and Eve; and as Adam was his Son, and Eve his Daughter, he wooed her Heart for him. And he who created her Body and Soul, and made her a Woman, and gave Adam her Heart, gives the Heart of every Chriſtian to his Son. You then that know the Lord Jeſus, magnify the Father for ever, that hath called us to Fellowſhip with his Son.

CHAP. V.

That the Father teacheth us to know Chriſt as the great Object of our Faith. That he inſtructs us that eternal Life is to be found, and obtain'd only in Chriſt his Son. That he teacheth us to ſeek this Life only in him. That he teacheth us to look to the Perſon of Chriſt, and to ſeek and deſire an Intereſt in himſelf, as well as Salvation by him. How God the Father teacheth us to know Chriſt his Son, and what are the Effects which his Inſtructions have upon us.

I Come to the other Part of my Subject; as I told you it was the Father drew you to Chriſt, ſo the other Part of the Subject is this, That the Father teacheth us to know Chriſt as the Matter of his teaching, and inſtructs us in what concerns him that may woo us, and teach us to come to Chriſt. As he draws us, ſo he uſeth Variety of Cords, or Motives, or Perſwaſions, to draw.

I ſhall firſt ſhew what it is materially that the Father teacheth us, and then I ſhall ſhew you the Manner how he teacheth. It were infinite to run over all the Particulars concerning Chriſt that the Father teacheth. There is a great Variety herein, and ſomething takes hold on one Man's Heart, and ſomething on another, as they are ſcatter'd up and down. All the Doctrines which Chriſt delivered that we read of in the Goſpel of John, and which perſwade to come to himſelf, are all of them the Words of the Father. The Word which you hear is not mine, but the Father's which ſent me, John 14. 24. And thoſe Words doth the Father himſelf ſpeak inwardly to the Soul of a Man. It is a large Field to ſhew you what he teacheth concerning his Son Chriſt: I think it therefore the beſt way to give you what is ſaid in one Scripture, which expreſly ſets down what is the Father's Record, 1 John 5. 11, 12. This is the Record that God hath given us eternal Life; and this Life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath Life: and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not Life. This is the great Record of God the Father concerning his Son: And he that believes not the Record God gives of his Son, makes God a Liar. Here is the great doctrinal Record ſumm'd up to you, and it is ſhort and brief. But you may ask me, Was this Record given to draw Men to believe? Is it ſo intended? I anſwer, that tho it intends Aſſurance, yet it intends alſo the Matter which God hath recorded to cauſe Faith, and to bring Men on to believe. This is plain from v. 13. Theſe things have I written to you that believe on the Name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal Life, and that ye may believe on the Name of the Son of God. There is Aſſurance, but ſuppoſe you want Aſſurance, yet there is what may draw you to believe, that you may believe on the Name of his Son. It is to bring Men on to believe, and therefore in the Words before he ſaith, He that believes not makes God a Liar, becauſe he believeth not the Record God gave of his Son. That which cauſeth them that believe further to believe, cauſeth one that doth not believe to come in to believe. It is not deſign'd for them that have Aſſurance: How is that prov'd? Becauſe the Apoſtle ſaith, He that hath not the Son, hath not Life: and therefore what he ſpeaks is to draw Men on to believe. Let us ſee what things they are God hath recorded of his Son for to believe concerning him, that we who do believe may believe further.

1. The firſt Record is, that the Father hath given us eternal Life. By US here is not meant only US that believe already, but it is as well intended to induce others to believe. He hath given US, i. e. US Men: He hath given amongſt us (give me leave ſo to expreſs it) eternal Life. As if a Man goes to a College, they of the College tell him, ſuch a Founder hath given us ſuch a Fellowſhip or Exhibition, tho every one is not capable of that Fellowſhip or Exhibition, but yet it is given to the College, and they all can ſay, it is given to US, i. e. to that Body amongſt us for ſuch Uſes. Thus to give is taken plainly, John 6. 32. My Father giveth you the true Bread from Heaven. He ſpeaks to them that never did believe; Yet (ſaith he) my Father gives to you eternal Life; to you the Sons of Men, that Grace, that Mercy is given before the World began, 2 Tim. 1. 9. It is made known to all the Sons of Men to whom the Goſpel is preached, as that which is given amongſt them; and there are thoſe among them which hear this Grace of the Goſpel to whom it ſhall be given effectually, and therefore it may well be indefinitely expreſſed, that God intends eternal Life to the Sons of Men. This is a great thing in the Heart of God, which God the Father doth reveal to a poor Soul, that his whole Purpoſe, Intention, and Reſolution, which he will never be fruſtrated of, is to give eternal Life unto the Sons of Men. This is his Heart, his whole Heart, and thus much of his Heart he doth reveal of himſelf, that his Purpoſe is in and thorow Jeſus Chriſt to give eternal Life, John 3. 16. He hath given eternal Life with the moſt ſerious Purpoſes and unchangeable Reſolutions to the Sons of Men. Tho he doth not tell you the Names of the Perſons, and ſo declare who they are, yet he declares that he gives it to them that believe; therefore you that hear it, believe and come in.

2. He ſays, I have given eternal Life, but how muſt you have it? This Life is conveyed to Men in my Son, (ſaith God) and by my Son, and there is no means elſe whereby you may have eternal Life. Jeſus Chriſt is the common Receptacle of Life eternal, for God hath made Jeſus Chriſt his Son to be the Fountain of Life, to be the Bread of God that ſhould give Life to the World; John 6. 39. I am the Bread of Life that came down from Heaven, and giveth Life unto the World. This Life is only to be had in his Son; and if you will have Life, you muſt go to him, for it is in him. God the Father did never vocally preach the Goſpel in the New Teſtament but once or twice, and then he ſpake from Heaven himſelf, and not his Spirit: and what ſaid he? Mat. 17. 5. This is my beloved Son, hear him; i. e. take him, receive him, go to him. Well, tho God doth not ſpeak vocally now with an outward Voice, but ſecretly in the Souls of poor Sinners; yet he ſays, This Life is in my Son, there I have laid it; you cannot have it from me, but him: He gives his Fleſh for the Life of the World, and there is not any thing elſe in Heaven or Earth will give you Life: Nay, I can give you Life no other way (i. e. according to his own Appointment in the New Teſtament) but by having my Son. The Soul ſees its not having Grace, as Humiliation, Contrition, but it muſt have the Son if it have Life. I have ſometimes thought that if I had the Life of Grace in me, I had the Son; but it is contrary here, you muſt have the Son if you have Life. You muſt not go to God for the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt only, and not go to the Son himſelf. You muſt do more, you muſt go to Chriſt for Life; This Life is in my Son, ſays God. You muſt not go to God for Chriſt's ſake only, but you muſt go to Chriſt. I do not ſay that you have no Grace elſe, for you may have gone to him for his Son's Righteouſneſs, and for his Favour; but yet you muſt take his Perſon in too; John 6. 53. Except ye eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye have no Life in you. The Father cauſeth Souls to ſee a neceſſity of coming to his Son at laſt. If you could ſuppoſe you could give your Body to be burnt, and had all Faith, and knew all Myſteries, all would be in vain; if you have not the Son you have not Life: Except you eat my Fleſh (ſays Chriſt) you have no Life in you. The Father puts Souls upon a neceſſity of going to Chriſt.

3. I obſerve, that the Father doth allow in his Record, that a Man ſhould, out of Love to himſelf, ſeek Life in Chriſt, and Salvation in Chriſt. He allows thee to go to him to be ſaved, for it is what God bids thee do, and prompts thee to it. His Record doth declare it to thee; nay, it is the firſt thing he mentions: for before he tells you, Life is in my Son, he tells you, eternal Life is given amongſt you; and

bids you ſeek it. That Aim of going to Chriſt for Salvation, is an allowed Aim by God the Father in the Record concerning his Son: Nay he threatens you, that you ſhall not have Life if you do not go to him; You will not come to me (ſays Chriſt to the Phariſees) that ye might have Life; Joh. 5. 40. Every Soul that comes to Jeſus Chriſt, comes at firſt for Life; We believed in Jeſus Chriſt (ſays the Apoſtle, Gal. 2. 16.) that we might be juſtified: it was a ſelf-aim in them, You will not come to me to be ſaved; this the Father ſets on in a Conviction to the Heart, and he puts Men on a neceſſity to come to Chriſt, and allows ſelf-love in coming. The Argument is invincible, God in ordaining your Salvation did ordain it chiefly for his own Glory, and yet he had infinite Love to you: and doth this Love of God to you ſtand with God's Glory? then certainly your aiming out of Self-love at your own Salvation ſtands with the Glory of God in ſaving of you, and this is in order to believing. But withal he tells Men this, This Life is in my Son. If you aſk, where doth it lie? it lies in my Son (ſays God) and in having him you have Life, for Eternal Life lies not in any thing out of the Son of God; no, it lies in himſelf: Therefore there is no danger in any Man's ſeeking Jeſus Chriſt for his own Salvation, for he ſeeks it in Chriſt himſelf: For if thou ſeekeſt Happineſs in the Son of God, and Life in him, thou mayſt make Self-love thy Aim as much as thou wilt, he is your Life, Col. 3. 2, 3. and Chriſt lives in you, Gal. 2. 20. People deſire Heaven, do you know what Heaven is? it is to live in God and with God for ever, and you place in God glorified above your ſelves that Happineſs you ſeek.

4. He puts you upon ſeeking his Son, and puts you on coming for his Son as that which above all concerns your ſelves. How is that proved? He that hath the Son, (ſaith he) it is a powerful Phraſe, it is a Marriage Phraſe: To have him, to enjoy his Perſon, (ſays a poor Virgin that truly loves him) is more than all. I deſire to have him to ſave me, to have him that I may have Eternal Life, but I principally deſire to have himſelf. This is the Record which God the Father gives concerning his Son, to draw Men on to believe.

5. God the Father directs us to ſeek to have Chriſt as the Son of God, as well as a Saviour. He that hath the Son (ſaith he) hath Life; we muſt then come to him as the Son, and give up our ſelves to him as the Son, as well as regard him as the Author of Life and Means of Salvation to us: It is not having the Redeemer only, but it is having the Son; as he lives by the Father, ſo we live by him; and as Chriſt ſays, My Father is mine, and I am his: So the Soul comes to be Chriſt's, and Chriſt becomes its Salvation and Life. Obſerve what the Apoſtle ſays, Gal. 2. 20. the Life I lead in the Fleſh it is by Faith of two things, or of Chriſt conſidered in two Notions, as Son of God, and as Redeemer, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me. If you rightly examine the Story of the Diſciples believing in Chriſt, recorded in the 1*ſt*, 2*d* and 3*d* Chapters of John, you will find that ſometimes they ſay, they had found the Saviour of the World, ſometimes they would ſay they had found the Son of God, and ſometimes the Son and Saviour: You are therefore to have him as Son of God, and to believe in him, and to love him as God loves him. What doth God love him for? What, only becauſe he died for you? No, he loves him above all becauſe he is his Son. Now you are to have the Image of God's Heart in your Hearts, you muſt have an Heart after God's Heart toward the Lord Jeſus. You love him becauſe you come to him to be ſaved by him; but if you love him as God doth, you muſt come to him as the Son, and love him as the Son, the Glory of whoſe Perſon is infinite. This is the Record God gives of him, that you muſt not only look at Chriſt as an Ordinance to ſave you, but as the Son. I do not ſay all this is done for a poor Soul at firſt Converſion, but this is the Record God teaches you and will bring you to, viz. not only to ſeek his Redemption, but to have his Son, and to have your Hearts flaming in Love after his Son.

Secondly, I come now to ſhew how God doth teach theſe things concerning his Son. Will you know how the Father teacheth, and when it is his Teaching? His Teaching is not to teach you the Doctrinals of Salvation and of the Son, for he leaves that to Miniſters, and to the Bible, to teach you the Doctrinals only in a doctrinal way. But God the Father's Teaching,

1. Is to bring the Knowledg you have of Chriſt home to your Souls, to ſay to your Souls, Pſal. 35. 3. to ſpeak to your Hearts, Hoſ. 2. 14. They all heard Chriſt's Sermons, but thoſe come to me (ſays he) that have heard and learned of the Father,

Joh. 6. 45. The Father doth not ſpeak to us of his Son vocally, as I told you he ſpake of his Son to Adam, (the giving of the Ten Commandments was by the Miniſtration of Angels) but he teacheth your Hearts. What is the meaning of that? Among all the Notions which you have of Chriſt as the Object of Faith, if there is but one Notion of Chriſt ſet home upon the Soul, (I call it an intuitive Beam of Light of the Knowledg of Chriſt) that is the Notion the Father teaches; and all the Knowledg thou haſt otherwiſe is not the teaching of the Father, nor will ſave thee: No, it is what he teaches thy Soul, what he opens thy Heart to receive, that is ſaving. If you would go to Chriſt with all the Knowledg that notionally you have, and ſpread it before him, and woo him, it would not take effect; but if thou feel ſuch a Light brought into thy Soul concerning Chriſt that comes to thy Heart, go to Jeſus Chriſt with that one Notion, and he knows his Father's Voice in thy Heart, and he accepts thee, and liſtens to thee. When a Man comes to die that hath a great deal of Knowledg, 'tis one little Promiſe, one Beam of Light that comforts him, and he hath that Inſtruction ſealed to him, Iſa. 50. 4. He wakeneth Morning by Morning; he wakeneth my Ear to hear as the learned. It is a Prophecy how God the Father taught Jeſus Chriſt, he did not know every thing at once, but Morning by Morning he knew ſomething ſtill of himſelf: Thus the Father comes and awakens thine Ear, and cauſeth thy Soul to be attentive, and brings home ſomething to thy Soul: Thou mayſt read the Bible all the day afterward, and not underſtand ſo much as to have it brought thus home, and thy Heart awakened.

2. A ſecond thing he teacheth; he doth take thy Heart with what he ſaith thus to thee, by an intuitive Beam. I compare this to the Beams of the Sun in a Burning-glaſs, as they burn the thing they fall upon, ſo this Beam from God takes and inflames the Heart. The poor Diſciples (Luke 24. 32.) talked with Chriſt, and knew not that it was Chriſt, till he opened their Underſtandings, v. 45. and then (ſay they) Did not our Hearts burn within us? &c. There is an Inflammation of the Spirit, a taking of the Heart that accompanieth ſuch Teachings as the Father teacheth. A Father's teaching imports Affection, which doth draw, 1 Cor. 8. 3. If any Man love God, the ſame is known of him; i. e. is made to know God, (ſo Beza and Auſtin read it) whom God hath made to know; ſo that ſtill when God teacheth, there goeth Affection with it. As there he ſpeaks of Love, I ſpeak of believing; when the Father comes and teacheth, and brings in the Light of Chriſt, then the Affections, the Will, the whole Heart follow, there is longing, thirſting, eager Deſires.

3. The manner of his teaching is expreſſed, Eph. 4. 20, 21. If ſo be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the Truth is in Jeſus. He ſpeaks of ſuch a teaching as all Chriſtians have, for he ſpeaks it of ſuch a teaching as makes them holy. It is ſpoken of Chriſt himſelf, of Chriſt properly, therefore he ſaith, as the Truth is in Jeſus. The words are a plain diſtinction of a double Knowledg: There is a Knowledg which is not as the Truth is in Jeſus; but if you have been taught the Truth as it is in Jeſus, that is the Father's teaching, and that is his Son's teaching. Truly, if the Goſpel of John had been written before Paul writ this Epiſtle, I would have ſaid Paul had alluded to thoſe words of John, for he hath all three words, Heard, Read, Learned of the Father.

But you will ſay, is it a falſe Knowledg which Carnal Men have of Chriſt, who are not taught of the Father? Truly, I ſay, it is not a true Knowledg, it is falſe in regard it is not as the Truth is in Jeſus: It is not a Fantaſtical Knowledg, but it is a Fantaſmatical Knowledg. Now what is it to be taught Chriſt as the Truth is in Jeſus? It is a real Knowledg, 1 John 5. 20. He hath given us an Underſtanding to know him that is true: He ſpeaks it of the Father, but it follows of Chriſt too, to know the true Chriſt: There is a Parelion of Chriſt, you call it a falſe Sun, but the true Sun always out-ſhines it, and the other is but a Shadow; but this is to know Jeſus Chriſt in the Subſtance of himſelf. If you ſee the Picture of a Man, it is a knowing the Man, but it is not a knowing the true Man indeed whoſe Perſon it repreſents. As God the Father did beget his own Son from Eternity, ſo he begets that real Idea of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in a poor Believer that never entred into the Heart of any other Man: So that the Believer can ſay, I have been with Chriſt to day, as one ſaid, Jeſus Chriſt and I have been together this day, I ſaw him this Morning. He who ſees the Son and believes on him hath Life, John 6. 40. it is a real, ſolid, ſubſtantial Sight, ſo that we have an Underſtanding given anew to know the true Chriſt: It is not the Phantaſma, but it is ſomething let in from the Perſon himſelf, that begets that Idea that is taken from the Perſon himſelf. Tho it is hard to expreſs it, yet our ordinary Compariſon thus illuſtrates it. When a Man is aſleep, we call them Phantaſms which in a Dream repreſent Images of Fathers and Mothers, and Perſons that are dead; but if you ſee the Perſon himſelf, you ſay, Man, I am ſure that this is he, this is not a Dream, as the poor blind Man ſaid, Behold, I ſee; therefore this is put in by Chriſt and his Apoſtles themſelves, We know aſſuredly thou art the Son of God, and that thou cameſt from God. Thus the Father's teaching ſhews you the true Chriſt, whom the Apoſtles have ſeen, heard, and felt, 1 John 1. 1, 2. When Chriſt roſe again, ſaid he to his Diſciples, Feel, here is Fleſh and Bones, a Spirit hath them not; a Spectrum hath them not. When Chriſt is repreſented to the Soul by the Father, the Soul is not deceived, tho it hath not Aſſurance perſonal of its own Intereſt; his Preſence is real, and it is called the real Preſence of the Lord Jeſus; and this is to teach the Truth, as the Truth is in Jeſus.

2. It is ſo to teach you, as to perſwade you that all you know of him is for his Glory, that all tends to the glorifying of him. Look what Particulars the Father teacheth you concerning Chriſt, there goes along with and accompanies that Light, that which tends to glorify the Son; and if you cannot believe that he is yours, there will be ſecret Veins and Strains of holy Affections accompanying your glorifying him in your Hearts, 2 Theſſ. 1. 12. That the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the Grace of our God, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore if the Father teach you any thing about his Son, his Perſon, Sufferings, Juſtification, or the like, there is ſomething in the Heart doth riſe up to the glorifying this Jeſus, 2 Cor. 3. 18. We behold the Glory of the Lord, which is meant of Chriſt. Thus when Thomas would not believe, (John 20.) our Saviour, as a means to make him believe, ſhews him his Hands and Feet; his Heart falls down, tho his Knees did not, and he cries out, My Lord, and my God. You read in the Evangeliſts of many that receiv'd Cure from him, came to him and worſhipped him with their Bodies and Souls too, as 'tis commanded Pſal. 45. 11. He is thy Lord, worſhip thou him, ſays the Father to his Church. O when there comes in but a Beam of the Excellency of Chriſt's Perſon, that makes the Believer to glorify him: O how precious is this Lord Jeſus! and the Soul doth ſanctify him in his Heart, in his Will and Affections, and the Soul comes to him for his Blood, and the Father hath taught it ſo to do. O how precious is that Blood, ſaith the poor Soul, if I might have a part in it, that can make Sinners righteous, that can bring in Everlaſting Righteouſneſs, that Sin ſhall never undo me, that can juſtify me from all my Sins in a moment! Perhaps the Soul cannot ſay, I have a Portion in it, but yet it can ſay, I come to him to have it ſo. 1 Pet. 2. 7. No Cordial ſo precious as this Blood of Chriſt to juſtify the Soul; and tho the Soul cannot ſay, I have part in this Righteouſneſs, yet it doth ſay, if I had all the Righteouſneſs of Men and Angels, I would account it Dogs-meat, fling it away that I might have his Righteouſneſs. The Soul falls down agaſt at this Righteouſneſs in an Admiration, O how glorious is this Righteouſneſs! So that altho the Soul knows not its Intereſt in it, but remains in Doubts, yet it hath the higheſt Value of it, and ſtands adoring, as John did when he ſaid, Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the Sins of the World! Joh. 1. 29. In ſeeing this Jeſus that hath Sufficiency to take away Sin, the Soul ſtands agaſt, and worſhips him; and tho it doth not fall down on its Knees, yet adores him in its Heart. Theſe are the Teachings of the Father, which have ſuch Effects; and thus you have ſeen how he teacheth. He brings home the light of the Knowledg of God and Jeſus Chriſt to the Soul, he induceth a ſpecial Light, he wakens the Soul Morning by Morning, affects the Heart, takes the Soul, repreſents all in the Truth, in the Reality, as the Truth is in Jeſus, and teacheth the Soul ſo to know Chriſt, as to give Glory to him. For when Chriſt is repreſented as he is a Jeſus, there is a Glory that accompanies that Repreſentation, a Glory which ſo raiſeth the Soul above it ſelf, that it ſtands amaz'd at him, and falls down before him, and glorifies him.

CHAP. VI.

Chriſt our Saviour typified by Noah's Ark. As Noah was inſtructed by God to enter into the Ark for his Safety, ſo God in the Covenant of Grace teacheth us to know Chriſt, and to come to him for Salvation. That our Faith looks both to the Free Grace of God bringing us to Chriſt, as well as to Chriſt. Without Chriſt the Grace of God doth not, nor can ſave us; and therefore it is neceſſary that we explicitely act Faith on him for Salvation.

ISA. 54. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

For this is as the Waters of Noah unto me: for as I have ſworn that the Waters of Noah ſhould no more go over the Earth; ſo have I ſworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee.

For the Mountains ſhall depart, and the Hills be removed, but my Kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the Covenant of my Peace be removed, ſaith the Lord, that hath Mercy on thee.

O thou Afflicted, toſſed with Tempeſt, and not comforted: behold, I will lay thy Stones with fair Colours, and lay thy Foundations with Saphires.

And I will make thy Windows of Agates, and thy Gates of Carbuncles, and all thy Borders of pleaſant Stones.

In Vol. 2. of his Works

I Have in a Diſcourſe on this Scripture ſhew'd the Parallel betwixt Noah's Covenant about his Entrance into the Ark to be ſaved from the Flood, and the Covenant of Grace: I came to an Uſe, which hath been this, That the Example of Noah in his Entrance into the Ark, and making of the Ark, and the like, was a Figure of the Saving-work that God effects upon the Hearts of his People, in bringing them under the Covenant of Grace, and within the ſafe Bounds of it. I ſhall accordingly conſider the Work of Faith wrought in Noah, he being made Heir of the Righteouſneſs of Faith. Noah was inſtructed by God in two things as Objects of his Faith: The firſt was the Grace of God; Thou haſt found Grace in my ſight. The other was the neceſſity of his Entrance into the Ark, which was to him the Type of Chriſt: hence correſpondently to anſwer the Type we have what is ſaid in ver. 13. They ſhall be all taught of God. The Covenant of Grace did undertake, (Jer. 31. 34.) that God would teach them to know him, and that they ſhould not need any other to teach them. The Grace under the Covenant of the Goſpel teaches us to know two things. The firſt is, to know God in his Grace; Jer. 9. 24. Let him that glorieth glory in this, that he underſtandeth and knoweth me; As to what? It follows, That I am the Lord that exerciſeth Loving-kindneſs, Judgment and Righteouſneſs in the Earth, for in theſe things do I delight. To know God in his Loving-kindneſs, this is what God doth inſtruct his People in, and teacheth them to exerciſe Faith about it. The ſecond thing which the Covenant of Grace teaches us, is, to know Chriſt who is our Ark; John 6. 45. It is written in the Prophets, And they ſhall be all taught of God. Every Man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me. So then theſe two things before me are naturally deduced from the Text and Example of Noah. God teaches his People to know him in his Free Grace, and he teaches them to know him in his Chriſt, and inſtructs them in the Nature of Faith in him. From God's inſtructing Noah to enter into the Ark, we may infer, that God doth alſo in the Covenant of Grace (which this is a Prophecy of) inſtruct us to know his Son Chriſt, and to come unto him. When the Ark was prepared, God invites Noah into the Ark; Gen. 7. 1. And the Lord ſaid unto Noah, Come thou and all thy Houſe into the Ark. Which Words I ſhall by and by tranſlate into pure Goſpel; and I will ſhew you that the very ſame Language is uſed concerning our believing in Chriſt only. I muſt firſt ſhew you this thing, that that the Ark was the Type of Chriſt, for that is the firſt thing I muſt turn into Goſpel, the Ark into Chriſt. The antient Writers of the Church, the Fathers, (as they call them) ſay, that by Ark is meant the Church. Now it is true that one and the ſame Type often ſignifieth two or three things: As for example, the Temple ſignified the Body of Chriſt, (deſtroy this Temple, ſaith Chriſt) it ſignified the Church univerſal, the Body of Chriſt myſtical; it ſignified every particular Soul; Ye are the Temple of the Holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. 6. 19. But this let me ſay, When you ſhall find a Parallel made between the thing, and the thing ſignified, and in particular applied to one thing, you muſt only underſtand it ſo, and there you muſt not underſtand it as a Type of the other. In 1 Pet. 1. 21. you have Noah's Ark made a Type of Chriſt, as he is adminiſtred to us in Baptiſm. The like Figure whereunto, (having ſpoken of the Ark) wherein few, that is, eight Perſons, were ſaved through Water. The like Figure is Baptiſm, whereby we are ſaved: but here Baptiſm, ſignified by the Ark, bears not the Figure of the Church, and that plainly for this Reaſon, becauſe the Ark is the Figure of that wherein we are ſaved (wherein few were ſaved, eight Perſons). Now the eight were the Perſons ſaved, and ſaved in the Ark, and they bare the Reſemblance of the Church in being ſaved; but it is the Ark that bears the Reſemblance of that wherein we are ſaved, who is Jeſus Chriſt the Saviour of the World, ſignified and applied to us in Baptiſm. You will ſay it is Baptiſm that ſaves us; but how doth it ſo? Becauſe we are baptized into Chriſt, Rom. 6. 3. and it is ſaid to be therefore by the Reſurrection of Chriſt that it ſaves; altho he mentions the Reſurrection as ſignified in Baptiſm, he means his Death too, for he puts that Part, the Reſurrection, for the whole. Baptiſm unto the Perſon baptized under the Water, (whether by pouring it upon it, or dipping under it, it is all one, for Baptiſm is called Sprinkling) implies a covering under the Water, and riſing again. How doth Chriſt ſave? He died for our Sins, and roſe again for our Juſtification, Rom. 4. 25. And we are ſaid to be baptized into his Death, as well as into Chriſt and his Reſurrection, Rom. 6. 3. It is the moſt lively Example that ever was; we are baptized into Chriſt, and into his Death, and into his Reſurrection, as ye have it there expreſſed. This Baptiſm thus repreſenting Chriſt is ſaid to be figured out by the Ark. As for the Ark, Ainſworth, that holy Man, well obſerves concerning it; Every Chriſtian (ſaith he) is baptized with Chriſt; and as Noah was in the Ark, ſo we were all in Chriſt repreſentatively, when he hung on the Croſs, and when he roſe. And ſo we were in the Ark; when that was under Water, we were under Water; when the Ark got up, we roſe up upon the Water. It was impoſſible for the Ark to be overwhelmed, becauſe God took care of it: So it was with Chriſt, God upheld him; and Death, altho he was laid in his Grave, could not have Dominion over him. It was impoſſible for Death to hold him. The Ark too kept Noah and the Church, the Ark bare off all, (I need not ſtand to inlarge upon it) there is no Example or Figure (as I know) ſo lively. Moſes's being baptized in the Cloud, and the Red Sea of Baptiſm, (becauſe it was the Figure of it) is nothing ſo lively as this. Now the Ark being thus prov'd to be a Type of Chriſt, wherein we are ſaved, we ſhall next conſider God's Invitation of Noah to come into the Ark; Gen. 7. 1. Come thou, enter into the Ark. I ſhall decipher this out into Goſpel-Language, and give you plain Words for every tittle of it. Come thou and thy Houſe, and enter into the Ark. Here is,

1. An Invitation to come into the Ark, like to Chriſt's inviting Sinners to come to him; Mat. 11. 28,29. Come to me (ſaith Chriſt) all ye that are weary and heavy laden. And Rev. 22. 17. The Bride ſaith, Come; and the Spirit ſaith, Come, and take of the Water of Life freely.

2. What is this Coming? It is that which is applied to Chriſt; John 6. 33. He that comes to me ſhall never thirſt. Coming is believing, for to believe is to come to Chriſt to be ſaved. You will not come to me (ſaith Chriſt) that you may have Life, John 5. 40.

3. The Words of God's Invitation to Noah are, Come and enter. The Expreſſion is anſwerable concerning Faith; Heb. 11. 3. Through Faith we underſtand that the Worlds were framed by the Word of God, ſo that things which are ſeen were not made of things which do appear. Thus it is likewiſe expreſs'd, Mat. 11. 28. Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you Reſt. By coming to Chriſt, and believing in him, we enter both into him, and alſo into Reſt.

4. We are ſaid to enter into Chriſt only by coming and believing, whereas we were out of Chriſt before: He was (ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 16. 7.) in Chriſt before me. When he did believe, he entred into Chriſt, he came to be in Chriſt, as Noah was in the Ark, and ſo was ſaved. Sutable hereunto is alſo that Text in Rom. 8. 1. There is no Condemnation to them that are in Chriſt, no more than there was Deſtruction unto them that were in the Ark, for they were brought ſafe to Land. As we thus enter into Chriſt by Faith, ſo we dwell in Chriſt, and continue in Chriſt; 1 John 2. 23, 24.

5. Yet it falls well, as God invited Noah to come into the Ark, ſo he invited his Family too; Come thou and thy Houſe. The Goſpel-Invitation runs thus in theſe very Words, Acts 16. 11. when the poor Jailor came, and knows not what to do to be ſaved, Believe thou on the Lord Jeſus (ſays the Apoſtle): Do but come into the Ark, and thou ſhalt be ſaved and thy Houſe. Thus the Goſpel was preached, (as might apparently be ſhewed at large) ſo that I have demonſtrated unto you, that Gen. 7. 1. is plain Goſpel, and the word about believing anſwers it. Chriſt is your Ark, and Faith is your Coming, and by Faith you enter into Chriſt, and continue in him (anſwerably as Noah did in the Ark) till thou arriveſt ſafe to Land, thou and thy Houſe. Thus you ſee that ſtill the Parallel holds on about Noah in his Covenant, and the Work of Faith. I ſhall now proceed to ſhew in ſome proportion, that God teaches us to believe upon Chriſt, as he taught Noah to enter into the Ark.

1*ſt.* I ſhall firſt anſwer a Caſe or two: I told you, that Chriſt is the Object of your Faith, diſtinct from Free Grace, or that we are to believe on Chriſt, and treat with him as well as with God's Free Grace. Now the Caſe to be reſolv'd is this: Many Souls (ſome ſuch Souls I am ſure I have known) have been mightily carried out to treat with God the Father and his Free Grace, and they have found an open Door if they will go in at that Room. If they will go to the Father, they find all the Love in his Heart in giving Men to Chriſt, and commanding him to die for them; and they find all this Love to be free and unchangeable, and they find the Thoughts of it to be a Support of Faith; and altho they have not found Aſſurance, yet they are ſo much aſſured of the Will of God, as to know that he is reſolv'd to ſave Sinners, and they know that Salvation muſt flow from it, and that makes them ſeek God, and apply themſelves to Free Grace; and they can turn all other Conſiderations of Chriſt into Motives and Pleas, and ſo lay themſelves at the Feet of God: Yet while they do this, they take it for granted, that all God's Love is through Chriſt, and that he was God in Chriſt reconciling the World to himſelf, or that he had never done it elſe: and ſo tho Jeſus Chriſt is implicitely honoured by them apart and diſtinctly, yet they do not explicitely apply themſelves in a diſtinct manner to the Lord Jeſus. They do not make uſe of Chriſt ſo diſtinctly, altho they go to God through Chriſt. The Anſwer to this Caſe is uſeful and profitable.

1. I ſay, that here are two Objects of Faith, and they are equal Objects of Faith at leaſt, and equally neceſſary: But I ſay too, that where the Father is, there is the Son; John 14. 10, 11. I am in the Father, and the Father in me, and I in you: And you ſhall know this one day; and my Father and I am one, and we agree in one, John 10. 30. Their Hearts are not divided: So that if thou canſt find the Heart of God open to thee, and that there is a full Door open, and that thy Heart is ſtrengthned to go in at it, then for certain thou haſt alſo a Senſe of the Love of Chriſt, and thou takeſt it for granted, that all that thou haſt is through Chriſt, and is from the Heart of Chriſt; and ſo far thou giveſt him the Honour of it. Thou mayſt be ſure of it by this Token, that Chriſt himſelf hath to do with his Father in ſaving us more than with himſelf. He eyes his Will, and regards what he hath ſaid to him about our Salvation, and the undertaking of it, and the carrying of it through; John 6. 37. I came down from above, not to do my own Will, but the Will of him that ſent me; (thus ſaith Jeſus Chriſt himſelf) and this is my Father's Will, that he hath ſent me, and that of all that he hath given me I ſhould loſe none. Now canſt thou go unto the Heart of the Father, and regard him as the Fountain of all that Chriſt hath done; and look on him as giving to Chriſt them that he would have ſaved? Doſt thou ſee that Chriſt hath undertaken to him for thee, and that he hath ſuch and ſuch a Love in his Heart to ſave thee, and that thou haſt a Declaration of it, and the indefinite Promiſe of it in the Goſpel? and do theſe Thoughts take thy Heart, and doſt thou thus treat with the Father, and his Will, and Free Grace for Salvation? Thou herein in honoureſt Chriſt, for it is no queſtion but Chriſt that came to do his Father's Will agrees to it, and hath it always in his View. He tells us, that he doth his Father's Will, as to the Perſons who are to be ſaved; John 6. 37. All that the Father giveth me ſhall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will not caſt out, for I came not to do my Will, but the Will of him that ſent me, i. e. to ſave the Perſons that God the Father gave me. Doſt thou go to God, altho he doth not tell thee immediately that he loves thee? This is the Will of the Father, and Chriſt came to do the Will of the Father unto Perſons, and therefore to thoſe Perſons whoſe Hearts are taken with his Grace: And this is a ſign Jeſus Chriſt hath ſatisfied for thee, and makes Application to the Father for thee, Joh. 5. 24. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, he that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting Life, and ſhall not come into Condemnation; but is paſſed from Death to Life. You muſt know this, that one great End of Chriſt's Preaching was to diſcover the Father, and to ſhew how much the Father's Heart was engag'd in ſaving Man by him, and in ſending him into the World. Now ſuppoſe that in his Preaching, a good Soul had been taken with this Love of God the Father that gave his Son, and that this Soul was drawn out upon that to apply it ſelf to the Father; it herein heard Chriſt, and applied it ſelf to him alſo. He that heareth my words (ſaith Chriſt while he is magnifying God the Father, Joh. 5. 24.) and underſtandeth, and believeth on him that ſent me (i. e. believes upon him as having ſent me) that Man (ſaith he) hath Everlaſting Life, altho eminently thus his Heart is carried unto the Father that ſent him.

2. The Soul of Man is apt to be intent upon one Object, and ſo to be more flat in another: this is undeniable matter of Experience. O! that I were humbled, ſays the Soul ſometimes, when the Heart goes out to be abaſed for Sin; at another time the Heart is as much drawn out for Chriſt and for his Grace; and while it is drawn out that way, a zealous Love for Holineſs comes in, and then it runs out to that. We cannot be intent upon many Objects with Intenſeneſs of Thought, through a Narrowneſs of Mind. Sometimes all about the Father and his free Grace takes up our Thoughts, and the Soul runs out that way; and ſometimes the Son and ſometimes the Spirit employ all our Thoughts, as indeed we muſt adore every Perſon in his Office: Sometimes we are carried to Communion with the Father, and ſometimes to enjoy it with the Son, and ſometimes to have it with the Holy Ghoſt. Now all this ariſeth from the Narrowneſs of our Minds, and therefore Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt are feign to take their turns, and to be entertain'd by Viciſſitudes.

3. Is the Father diſcovered to thee in his free Grace to draw thy Heart into Communion, while Chriſt is not ſo free to thee when thou attempteſt to go to him? Know this for a truth, that whatever is diſcovered of the Father's Heart, it is done by Chriſt; and whatever is diſcovered of the Son's Heart in dying and riſing, it is done by the Father: therefore thou mayſt be ſure that the Father is with thee when thy Heart is drawn to Chriſt, for that drawing is from the Father; and if thou haſt thy Heart drawn to the Father, it is effected by Chriſt, Mat. 11.27. How is it that thy Heart is drawn unto the Son, and thy Heart is all ſet upon Chriſt? it is the Father that doth it, and he doth it ſecretly in the Word he doth teach thee; yet no Man hath ſeen him, he doth it, and doth it ſecretly; and ſo likewiſe no Man cometh to the Father but by Chriſt; thou art no ſooner with Chriſt, and haſt put forth a few Acts of Faith, but he ſends thee to the Father, or thou couldſt not come to him, as thou couldſt not come to Chriſt but by the Father, and as the Father diſcovers him: And therefore be aſſured, that he who hath the Father hath the Son, and he that hath the Son hath him by the Father.

4. It is beſt to have the Heart both drawn out to the free Grace that is in the Father's Heart, and to have the Heart drawn out to Jeſus Chriſt and his Fulneſs. It is beſt for thee to have thy Heart from the beginning (as ſome have had) to know both the Father and the Son, and to continue thy Addreſſes to either. O that is beſt! I will give you a great many Scriptures for it: Thus it was with Paul from his firſt Converſion, 1 Tim. 1. 14. The Grace of our Lord was abundant, with Faith, and Love, which is in Jeſus Chriſt. By our Lord there is meant the Father, for he is made diſtinct from Jeſus Chriſt in the next words: Paul had an abundant entrance both to God the Father in his free Grace at his Converſion, and he had abundant entrance unto Jeſus Chriſt with Faith and Love drawn out unto him. To the ſame purpoſe is 1 John 2. 13. I write unto you, Fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young Men, becauſe you have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little Children, becauſe ye have known the Father. Let that therefore abide in you which you have heard from the beginning, let it remain in you, and you ſhall continue in the Son and in the Father. You knew the Father at firſt, and believ'd on him and Chriſt, and if you will cleave unto your firſt Works, to what you have heard and had from the beginning, to what you have known of God the Father, and of the Son, you will continue in both, and there lies your Comfort; and if you caſt it off, as thoſe Hereticks did, (who knew the Father, but not the Son) thou haſt not the Father nor the Son. Thy Caſe indeed may be ſuch, that tho thou knoweſt both, yet thy Heart is not ſo taken with the one as the other; but yet while thou goeſt unto Chriſt, it is becauſe the Father hath ſent him, and it's his Will that thou believe on him. If thou doſt go unto the Father, it is becauſe Jeſus Chriſt hath died, and they both agree in one: It is beſt to join both, Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt. It is beſt to join the Grace of God and Faith on the Blood of Chriſt, and to have our Hearts equally carried to the one and the other, altho the Father muſt have the Preheminence. This is the trueſt and righteſt Frame of a Chriſtian.

But you will ſay, is not the Knowledg of the Father and his Grace alone ſufficient, altho I have not the other? Is not the ſaving Knowledg of the Mercy and Grace of God ſufficient, altho I do not know Chriſt nor believe on him, and ſo on the contrary?

1. I anſwer, No; Grace alone would not ſave you without a Chriſt, for he is to ſatisfy the Juſtice of God, that ſo Grace may ſave thee, and that God might be juſt, and the Juſtifier of thoſe that believe. I will not enter into that Diſcourſe, that through the whole Old Teſtament there was a glimmering of Chriſt, that it began in Adam (that Chriſt ſhould deſtroy the Works of the Devil) and in Enoch's Miniſtry, and in Noah's Miniſtry, who as he was Heir of Righteouneſs by Faith, ſo he was the Preacher of it, and is ſaid to preach Jeſus Chriſt in his day. Peter, ſpeaking of the Jews how they were ſaved, ſaith, Acts 15. 11. There was a Yoke that neither we nor our Fathers could bear: yet if we believe in the Lord Jeſus, we ſhall be ſaved, as they were; and how? by the Grace of Chriſt, and by believing on him, and having an Eye to Chriſt. They knew not the way how Chriſt would ſave them, they did not dream it ſhould be by dying, but they had an Eye to him as ſhewed in the Type: There was the Temple, and they looked towards it, and the Mercy-ſeat, &c. The Ark was Chriſt, and the Mercy-ſeat was the Favour of God, and the Mercy-ſeat and the Ark were equal. Thus look what purpoſe of Grace he hath to ſave, the Ark which is Jeſus Chriſt, is as large: You have the Mercy-ſeat, the Favour of God; and the Purchaſe of Chriſt, who is the Ark, is equal to it.

2. The Neceſſity of coming to Chriſt was more clearly inſiſted on after the time of Chriſt's Aſcenſion, and the Publication of the Goſpel to all Nations. They are required to believe on Chriſt diſtinctly, and to treat with him diſtinctly, as well as with the Father; and ſooner or later the Elect ſhall do it, and have ſome Glances to Chriſt. Chriſt anſwerably prays, Joh. 17. I pray not for theſe only, but for all that ſhall believe on me through their Word; we all believe through their Word to this day. How doth Jeſus Chriſt characterize his Church that was to come? he doth it by this mark that they ſhould believe on him, and (ſaith he) I pray not for the World. Can you think then that any Man ſince ſhould have Knowledg to grow up to Salvation from a Principle of Nature without Jeſus Chriſt? No, they are left out in Jeſus Chriſt's Prayer. Thus likewiſe Chriſt ſaith, John 8. 21. If you do not believe that I am he, if you do not come to me that ye may have Life, that ye may be ſaved, you will die in your Sins. There muſt be an abſolute treating with Jeſus Chriſt, a flaſhy Faith is not ſufficient; nor is it enough that you have purpoſed ſuch an Act, but you muſt come to Chriſt, and treat with him, and continue to do ſo to the end. In Noah's Covenant (for I follow the Figure, and I have ſhewed in another Diſcourſe how it was a Type of the Covenant of Grace unto the Church in the New Teſtament) it was neceſſary for Noah and his Family to come and enter into the Ark if he would be ſaved; and ſo it is as neceſſary for us to come and enter into Chriſt by Faith to be ſaved: as Noah entred into that Ark to be ſaved from the Waters, ſo we into this Ark to be ſaved from the Wrath of God. All that Grace which Noah found in God would not have ſaved him by way of his Ordination, but in and by the Ark. I have ſav'd you and you. Tho he was acknowledged by God to be a righteous Man, and tho he had been a Preacher of Righteouſneſs, yet all this Righteouſneſs, and all the good Sermons which he had made would not ſave him from theſe Waters, but he muſt have drowned with the reſt had he not entred into the Ark. Thus tho thou wert as righteous as Noah, yet if thou art ſaved, it muſt be by coming into the Ark. Say what you will of your ſelves, being puffed up with vain Hopes, you muſt be ſaved by Jeſus Chriſt alone. And therefore it is ſaid that Noah and his Houſe entred into the Ark. If you take the Church in general there is no Salvation out of the Church (ſo ſome have applied this Figure of the Ark): Ay but I ſay there is no other Name by which we can be ſaved, but that of Jeſus, and no other Benefit but Faith, nulla ſalus extra Chriſtum, no Salvation out of Chriſt. If thou art without God and without Chriſt, thou art in a deſperate caſe.

My Deſign is to ſhew the neceſſity of Faith on Chriſt, by going over the Story of the Progreſs of the Goſpel from the firſt and earlieſt beginning of it, when the Goſpel began. When John the Baptiſt began it before Chriſt preached, his Work was to point and direct Men to believe on Chriſt. You find that the Goſpel began with John, Luke 16. 16. The Law and the Prophets were until John: when he baptized Men, he ſaid to the People, I baptize you, but ſaith he, believe on Chriſt. John verily baptized Men with the Baptiſm of Repentance and Humiliation: tho he taught them Repentance, he yet enjoins them to believe on Chriſt, Acts 19. 4. he did join Faith with Repentance; he pointed Men to Chriſt, and told the Phariſees there was ſuch a one among them, whoſe Shoe-latchet he was not worthy to unlooſe; and ſets forth the Fame of Chriſt's Miniſtry. He baptized, to make Chriſt manifeſt unto the People of Iſrael, Joh. 1. 38, 39, 40, 41. and his Diſciples Simon and Andrew fell to Chriſt. It is alſo ſet down in the very beginning of the Goſpel, that Faith on Chriſt is the only way of Life, Joh. 3. 36. He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting Life: and he that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee Life; but the Wrath of God abideth on him. When the Goſpel began, this was ſtill put into it, that we muſt believe on Chriſt. It is evidenced alſo by the Care that our Lord and Saviour is at to make himſelf known to poor Souls, that they may believe on him, altho he preach the Father's Love too. The poor blind Man had his Eye-ſight given him, but he knew not who did it, yet there was ſomething within him that did defend Chriſt againſt the Phariſees, and Jeſus Chriſt takes occaſion to meet him again, and tho even then he did not know him, yet afterwards he did make himſelf manifeſt. There were ſome that did know him, as Nathanael, but they did not believe diſtinctly on him; but Chriſt takes care that this poor blind Man ſhould. There is a poor Woman alſo, Joh. 4. 26. to whom Chriſt reveals himſelf, I am he, I am the Chriſt that ſpeaks to thee (ſaith he); and then there were others too who did believe on him, as ye read there. He would go out of the Nation of the Jews, to a place where an elect Woman was, on purpoſe to reveal himſelf to her. When the time was come for the Canaanitiſh Woman to believe on him, he went out to the Coaſts of Tyre and Sidon: And ſo he never went out but once to the Coaſts of the Gaderens, and then he came to that poor Woman to diſcover himſelf to her: and yet how averſe was ſhe at firſt, but at laſt ſhe followed him, and found that he was the Meſſiah, and Chriſt did approve and own her Faith. The Eunuch (Acts 8. 37.) came to Jeruſalem to worſhip, and believed on Chriſt to come, but did not know that he was come; yet what Care doth Chriſt take that he ſhould know him? He was devoutly reading in the Scriptures in his Chariot, (he imploys his time well) and he reads that full Text of the Old Teſtament concerning Chriſt. Providence ſo orders it that Philip is going the ſame way, and is commanded to join himſelf to him to do that work of inſtructing him, and he preacheth Chriſt to him, and the Eunuch's Heart is taken, and ſtraitway he believeth. As Chriſt calls poor Fiſher-men, and they ſtraitway left their Nets and followed him; ſo this Man ſtraitway believed on Jeſus Chriſt, and goes home and rejoiceth.

What is the reaſon that after Chriſt's Suffering, and that the Goſpel was thus preached, God would have us, in order to Salvation, to know Chriſt, and come to him?

1. It is that all may honour the Son, as they honour the Father; Joh. 5. 23. In honouring Chriſt, they honour the Father and his Grace: In looking to the Grace of God that was in his Heart to ſave, they honoured the Father, they believed on him, and ſo honoured him; but you muſt believe alſo on the Son and honour him, and how is that but by believing? Joh. 5. 23. Chriſt having ſpoken of believing, brings the other in, God will have all Men to honour the Son, by believing on him, as well as on the Father. Salvation runs on in the Knowledg of God the Father and the Son, Joh. 17. 2, 3. 2 Pet. 1. 2.

2. Another Reaſon is, becauſe now God had fully manifeſted his Son unto the Apoſtles who preached him; whoever therefore upon their preaching did not believe on Chriſt, it was a ſign the God of this World had blinded their Minds. For God now had ſent his Son, he hath in theſe laſt days ſpoken to us by his Son, (Heb. 1. 1.) immediately after his taking Fleſh, and therefore he would have the Knowledg of his Son to take place. Joh. 6. 37. Chriſt ſpeaks to the ſame purpoſe, Him that comes to me I will not caſt out; and all that the Father hath given me ſhall come to me, for my Father ſent me. And he ſent Chriſt on purpoſe that he might be known and manifeſt unto all the World. He therefore that doth not now believe on the Son, doth fruſtrate the end of God's ſending him, for he did it with an Intention that thoſe Souls that are ſaved ſhould believe on him.

3. It is the Ordination of God, it is the Will of God that it ſhould be ſo, Joh. 6. 36, 37, 38. our Saviour Chriſt doth uſe a very ſweet Argument and Parallel. The reaſon (ſaith he) that I muſt receive all that come unto me, is becauſe the Father ſent me, and gave me them before I came into the World, and I was ſent to do his Will anſwerably. That you ſhould come to me, this is the Father's Will, becauſe he hath ſent me on purpoſe to be made known to all that ſhall be ſaved, Joh. 6. 40. All that the Father hath given me, ſhall come to me. The Text doth plainly ſhew this, that God himſelf that gave his Son, doth not ſave Men unleſs they come to his Son; and therefore if he will have them (whom he did give unto Chriſt) to be ſaved, he is feign to draw them to come to him. In Marriage you have the Father uſually to give the Daughter unto the Husband, but if ſhe doth not give her Conſent, it is not the Father's giving that makes it a Marriage: thus it is not our Father's Gift, but our Conſent unto Chriſt, that makes a Match with our Souls. All the Scriptures, and all in the Scriptures will not ſave you, if you have not Faith in Jeſus Chriſt. If you ſhould ſuppoſe that you had all the Scripture in your Mind and Heart, it would not ſave you, 2 Tim. 3. 15. Tho thou art a Timothy, brought up from a Child to read the Scriptures as he did, and knoweſt them, yet they are able to make thee wiſe unto Salvation, only through Faith which is in Jeſus Chriſt: If thou haſt not Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, all that Wiſdom in the Scriptures will not ſave thee, nor have Power to ſave thee: If they ſave thee, it is through Faith on Chriſt revealed in them. Search the Scriptures, (ſays Chriſt, Joh. 5. 39.) for you think therein ye have Salvation; but ſearch them, for they ſpeak of me more than of any thing elſe, and ye ought to know me, or ye ſhall die in your Sins. But you will ſay, May not a Man have Love to God the Father upon the thoughts of his free Grace alone, and may he not then repent for Sin? I ſay, No; you cannot repent unleſs you believe on his Son Chriſt, Rom. 1. 5. Love to God, and turning to God will not ſave you, if you ſwerve from the means of Grace, and the way of Faith. What ſays Chriſt? Joh. 5. 42, 43. But I know you, that ye have not the Love of God in you. I am come in my Father's Name, and ye receive me not: if another ſhall come in his own Name, him ye will receive. I know that you have not the Love of God in you; why? becauſe you want Faith in me. Love to God ſprings from Faith in Chriſt, and therefore never talk of Love to God, if you have not treated concerning Salvation by Faith in Jeſus Chriſt. Acts 26. 17, 18, 19. what ſaith Chriſt himſelf from Heaven when he gave Paul his Commiſſion? I ſend thee (ſaith he) to open the Eyes of the Gentiles, to turn them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God, that they may receive Forgiveneſs of Sin, and an Inheritance among them that are ſanctified. Will not all this do? Will not turning unto God from Self-love, and loving God, and being ſanctified ſerve to ſave us under the Goſpel? No, read the next words, it muſt all be (ſays Chriſt) through Faith that is in me: Chriſt ſaith it from Heaven, this is his Commiſſion, and he declares it that under the Goſpel, Remiſſion of Sins and turning to God, Forgiveneſs of Sin and Sanctification were all through Faith in him. Be convinced then, that if ever you be ſaved, there is a neceſſity that God teach you to come to the Son. You think it is an eaſy thing to come to Chriſt, and to look to him and to his Name for Pardon, and to go to him for Forgiveneſs and Sanctification: But let this be preached to you, and inculcated to you, to go to Chriſt; let it all be urged upon you, yet you will not come to Chriſt that you may have Life, and you will die in your Sins, unleſs God the Father draws you to him. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt gives a great Inſtance of this, John 6. 63, 64. It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the Fleſh profiteth nothing: the words that I ſpeak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are Life. But there are ſome of you that believe not. For Jeſus knew from the beginning, who they were that believed not, and who ſhould betray him. He doth give the greateſt Inſtance in the World, that let Men live under the higheſt Preaching of the Goſpel, and the powerfuleſt Miniſtry that ever ſpake, even the Preaching of Chriſt himſelf, yet a Man will not come to Chriſt. Whom doth Chriſt pitch upon for an Inſtance but upon Judas, that had been with him from the Beginning, and had heard him preach all his Sermons, and heard his Parables, and yet he is a Devil for all this? For he knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who ſhould betray him: Therefore I ſaid, (ſays he) that no Man can come to me except it were given unto him of the Father, ver. 65. Therefore there muſt be a Teaching from God, and none but thoſe that are taught by a ſecret Work beyond what any powerful Miniſter in the World can make, will believe. A Man otherwiſe will never do it, he will never give up himſelf to God and Chriſt, but there will be a Heart departing from the living God, Heb. 3. 12. that is, from Chriſt, as the Coherence of the Words ſhew. So that it is a plain caſe, that thoſe that live in Goſpel-times, muſt all of them be taught of God, if they ever come to Chriſt. They that live under never ſo powerful Means, if God doth not touch their Hearts, they will never come. O bleſs the Lord that hath taught you to know his Free Grace, and to believe on his Son, which is the great Work of God, as Chriſt calls it, John 6. 29. It is inſtead of all elſe to believe on God, and him whom he hath ſent. To him to whom the Gathering muſt be, to him you muſt come as Members to a Head, and as loſt Creatures to a Saviour: Do not come to this and that Sign, and think you have none of Chriſt, becauſe you cannot find them; but come to him, and dwell with him, and remain with him Day and Night.

CHAP. VII.

That Jeſus is propos'd to our Faith as a ſpiritual Chriſt and Saviour. That unleſs he was the Son of God, he could not be a quickning Spirit to us.

IN the 6th Chapter of John our Lord makes it the ſet Subject of his Diſcourſe, to draw his Hearers unto a true ſpiritual Faith upon himſelf: And to that end propoſeth himſelf altogether (as indeed he was) a ſpiritual Meſſiah, and inculcates it over and over. The Occaſion which he took was the falling ſhort of this ſpiritual Faith, in that Faith which thoſe of Capernaum had of him. They acknowledged him indeed upon the Miracle of the Loaves, (ver. 14. This is of a truth that Prophet that ſhould come into the World) a Prophet, and a far greater Prophet than Moſes, who had given their Fathers Bread from Heaven in the Wilderneſs, ver. 31. But Chriſt ſpeaking of a living Bread which his Father would give, and which himſelf would give, ver. 27, and 32. and that it was the true Bread typified by Moſes his Manna, and which endured to eternal Life; they had upon that Speech a farther Advance of Faith concerning him, viz. That he was able, by his Intereſt in God his Father, to procure a Bread whereby their Bodies might live for ever; as Adam's ſhould have done by eating of the Tree of Life; ver. 34. Then ſaid they, Lord, evermore give us this Bread: Thus far they went in believing on him. But when they heard him ſay that he himſelf was that living Bread that came down from Heaven, and that he who eateth that Bread ſhould live for ever; yea, and that it was his Fleſh, as he was Son of Man, which they muſt eat, and that which he would give for the Life of the World; there they ſtopp'd and left him, and were offended, (ver. 61, and 66.) as at Sayings which were too hard to bear, ver. 60. That glorious Sermon wherein he makes this very Argument his Subject, you may read from ver. 27, to the very end of the Chapter. At ver. 63. he opens and unriddles all, and diſcovers the Myſtery to them to lie in this: It is the Spirit that quickneth, the Fleſh profiteth nothing: The Words that I ſpeak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are Life: thereby explaining, how and whence it was that he was living Bread, and what made his very Fleſh or humane Nature to be eternal Life; and gives a perfect Reaſon why thoſe who do eat it, and receive it, and himſelf therewith, (in that manner as he and his Father intended in the giving of it, and agreeably to the Nature of it) ſhould live. The Words are the Key to all that Sermon foregoing, and unto what follows after: And it is as if he had ſaid, You muſt all know that my very Perſon, whom you do not yet truly underſtand, and fully believe in as you ought; for you ſee and behold me but as a Man who works theſe Wonders; (as ver. 36. Ye have alſo ſeen me, and believe not) you muſt yet know, that this my Perſon conſiſts of more than a mere Man conſiſting of Body and Soul, (which you only look at, and whom you ſuppoſe God is preſent with, more than ever with any Man that hath been in the World) but know, I am God in my Perſon as well as Man; and it is that Spirit or Godhead, which is that which gives the Life that I ſpeak of; It is the Spirit that quickens, which elevates and advanceth my Fleſh or Humanity to that high State of Life, as to give Life to Men, in that I who am God united unto that Fleſh in one Perſon, and giving and offering it as a Sacrifice to my Father, for the Life of the World, (they being Sinners) as his words are, ver. 51. And the Bread that I will give is my Fleſh, which I will give for the Life of the World. I who am God have ſublimated and ſpirited this ſacrificed Fleſh (by Reaſon of this Union) to be a ſpiritual Food to your Spirits and Souls; which Fleſh alone, if it had been never ſo often given and offered, if it had been ſeparated from, and not thus united to this Spirit, would have profited nothing, as to giving that Life I have been ſpeaking of; and therefore you muſt underſtand all my former Words I have been ſpeaking about eating my Fleſh, &c. ſpiritually, and of a ſpiritual eating, for ſo the Nature of the thing requires; for I am a ſpiritual Chriſt, and a ſpiritual Saviour, and not a fleſhly. And hence it is that my Words which I have uttered are Spirit and Life, and do become ſuch to any of you that hear and underſtand me aright: (and there were ſome preſent, who at that time, and in that manner, underſtood thoſe Words, and found him and theſe his Words to be ſpiritual Life unto them, as ver. 67, 68. ſhews) And as my Fleſh is by virtue hereof the Procurer of Life unto you as Sinners; ſo my Perſon conſiſting of God-man, is eternal Life in it ſelf to them who, as Sinners, do eat my Fleſh by Faith. And they have not only eternal Life from me, but I am in my Perſon eternal Life unto them in their Communion with me.

This Paſſage, as thus interpreted of his Godhead and humane Nature, is the Center into which all the Lines of that Sermon do run, and will approve it ſelf to be the true and genuine Meaning; as wherein he doth at once not ſimply give an Explanation of what his Scope and Meaning was, namely, that this eating his Fleſh, &c. was in a ſpiritual way to be underſtood by Faith, and not of a carnal eating, (which his laſt Words of that Verſe do import, My Words they are Spirit and Life) but chiefly beyond that, it is to give the Account and Ground why it was ſo, in thoſe firſt Words; It is the Spirit that quickens, &c. which putting Life into the humane Nature, and offering it up to God, to give us Life, made his Fleſh and himſelf to be altogether a ſpiritual Food, (tho the moſt real of Foods, Meat indeed, as ver. 55.) unto the Souls of Men: And alſo, becauſe thereby he anſwers all their Cavils, Queries, and Exceptions, they had before made. And the View of all theſe have confirmed me in the foreſaid Interpretation of his Godhead to be meant by Spirit, and by Fleſh his humane Nature, which was the Senſe of the Antients. And I have wondred that the moſt of our lateſt Interpreters have diverted from it, and betaken themſelves wholly to expound this Scripture to deſign the manner of eating to be ſpiritual, (as Beza, and after him divers) and have reſted ſolely in that Senſe as full and adequate; whereas this other Interpretation I have given, not only takes in that of theirs, but beyond it gives the Reaſon of it, why it can be no other than a ſpiritual eating; for the Life the Godhead gives cannot be corporeally eaten. And then the Concurrence of other Scriptures, uſing the ſame Words to expreſs the Godhead's dwelling in his humane Nature perſonally, doth further confirm me in it. And laſtly, the Diſciples Words which they return in anſwer to this Diſcourſe of Chriſt's, (which ſhews how they underſtood it) doth put me out of all doubt that this was indeed his Meaning: and I am more confirm'd in it by the Concurrence of other Scriptures.

1. We have the Concurrence of Rom. 1. 3, 4. Concerning his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, who was made of the Seed of David according to the Fleſh; and declared to be the Son of God with Power, according to THE SPIRIT OF HOLINESS, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. Where, as his Fleſh is his Humanity, ſo that Spirit of Holineſs is the Godhead of him, as he is the Son of God, and termed here the Spirit of Holineſs, as (Heb. 9. 14.) it is called the eternal Spirit, the Son of God being the Fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in that Fleſh; which (as he adds) he was declared to be, by the Reſurrection from the Dead, that Spirit or Godhead of his raiſing him up again by his own Power. For which Cauſe he is alſo ſaid to be quickned in the Spirit, or by the Spirit, having been put to Death in the Fleſh, 1 Pet. 3. 18. and likewiſe juſtified in the Spirit, 1 Tim. 3. 16. namely, to be God as well as Man, as himſelf had declared himſelf to be. But would you have this of the firſt Chapter to the Romans more plainly deciphered? the ſame Apoſtle doth it in plainer Words in the ſame Epiſtle. That Parallel in the ſame Epiſtle, *Rom.*9.5. relates to what hath been ſaid; Whoſe are the Fathers; and of whom, as concerning the Fleſh, Chriſt came, who is God over all, bleſſed for ever. Amen. As in that firſt Chapter he had diſtinguiſhed about his Perſon, ſaying, as concerning the Fleſh, that is, his humane Nature received from David his Forefather, as his Seed. So in this chap. 9. he uſeth the ſame again; Of whom (viz. the Fathers) as concerning the Fleſh, Chriſt came. And in his ſo cautious diſtinguiſhing in both Places, as concerning the Fleſh, doth evidently import he had ſomewhat elſe, ſome other Thing, or Nature beſides, which his Perſon (the Chriſt) conſiſted of: And what that other Nature ſhould be, required a farther Declaration, and might be expected he ſhould ſay it; which the Apoſtle doth with the higheſt Solemnity and Adoration of him, when he addeth, Who is God bleſſed for ever, Amen: Which Godhead acknowledged in the 9*th* Chapter, he had ſtiled Spirit in chap. 1. and which you find alſo in John 6. in Chriſt's Speech; It is the Spirit that quickens, the Fleſh profiteth nothing, that is, of it ſelf alone. And this Spirit or Godhead thus united into one Perſon, is ſaid to be made a quickning Spirit to us, *(*1 Cor. 15. 45, 46.) in Similitude to Adam his being a living Soul; that is, a Perſon conſiſting of a reaſonable Soul, united to a Body which it dwelleth in, and inſpireth; and then by Generation propagateth us the like unto him therein: ſo here in Chriſt typified by him, his Godhead or Spirit dwelleth bodily in his Fleſh or humane Nature, and thereby doth firſt quicken and ſpirit that Fleſh even by the Inhabitation of that Spirit in it, and raiſeth up thereby that humane Nature to a Spiritualneſs and Heavenlineſs above all that is communicated to mere Creatures: and therefore he is himſelf there ſtiled a ſpiritual and heavenly Man, who in the virtue hereof is then made by a Regeneration both of our Souls and Bodies, a quickning Spirit to us. And tho this there ſpoken of him (as to us) is particularly in relation to his quickning and raiſing our Bodies, yet his ſo doing muſt firſt and more ſpecially be underſtood, that he is a quickning Spirit to the Souls of thoſe in this Life, whoſe Bodies he raiſeth at the Reſurrection; as Epheſ. 2. 1. the Phraſe is uſed.

2. This Interpretation doth alone ſolve all the Riddles and Quarrels which had been rais'd before by the Capernaites; and this Senſe therefore containing a ſufficient Anſwer unto all and each of them, muſt needs have been intended and directed as an Anſwer to them, whereas that other narrowed Senſe mention'd falls ſhort of this Scope. They murmured, ver. 41, 42. becauſe he ſaid, I am the Bread which came down from Heaven: And they ſaid, Is not this Jeſus the Son of Joſeph, whoſe Father and Mother we know? How is it then that he ſaith, I came down from Heaven? Now this one Speech of his, It is the Spirit that quickneth, is a ſufficient Account how both might ſtand: I am God, (ſays he) the Son of God, and the Godhead (which he calls Spirit, and is the Spirit of that Son) is in me, and it was that which came down from Heaven; but my Fleſh, my humane Nature, that indeed I had from my Mother, whom you knew: And yet let me withal further tell you, (ſays he) that this Son of Man, whom you think only to be a mere earthly Man, ſhould, by the Right of natural Inheritance had from his being united into one Perſon with the Godhead and Son of God, have been in Heaven at the firſt Inſtant of that Union, and by due never have lived upon Earth in frail Fleſh, but only to that end, to redeem you by giving his Life for the World, ver. 51. and this Chriſt tells them in the very Words before; ver. 61, 62. When Jeſus knew they murmured at it, he ſaid unto them, Doth this alſo offend you? What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up where he was before? i.e. in his due Right: And accordingly in 1 Cor. 15. it is from this very Ground of his Union with that Spirit, the quickning Spirit, his Godhead, ver. 45. that he, the Man, is ſaid to be the Lord from Heaven; ver. 47. The firſt Man is of the Earth, earthy; the ſecond MAN is the Lord from Heaven; and an heavenly Man, ver. 48. for in the Right of that Union he was to have been in Heaven; and in that reſpect he is ſaid to be from Heaven, here in John 6. as alſo in this to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 15. becauſe that his due was to have been there before ever he came on Earth. They had alſo quarrell'd with him, how he being but a mere Man, could be the living Bread that came down from Heaven, as he had ſaid, ver. 41, & 52. and that he that eateth of that Bread ſhall live for ever, ver. 58. Now this word quickning Spirit, reſolves the Difficulty, for it was his Godhead united to that Fleſh, that was the Principle of that eternal Life which we partake of from him: therefore he that eateth me, (ſaith he) even he ſhall live by me, ver. 57. and yet ſo as it was that his Manhood and Fleſh, as it was united to the Godhead, which made him to become Bread and Food to us, without which his Godhead alone, ſimply, would not have been fit Meat either for Soul or Body: nor would his Fleſh alone, if it had been ſeparated from the Godhead, have profited any thing. And thus the perſonal Union between both Natures is not only aſſerted, but made the Ground of all he had ſpoken of himſelf.

3. Again, that Queſtion, ver. 52. How can this Man give us his Fleſh to eat? is by this Myſtery unfolded, even that he is in his Perſon Spirit united to Fleſh. And 'tis the Spirit that gives the Life; and therefore it was that his Fleſh muſt be underſtood to be a ſpiritual Food, made to be ſuch by the Spirit in him: And this alſo ſhews his Speeches to have been ſo intended, that thence and therefore anſwerably their eating muſt be a ſpiritual eating of the Soul or Spirit by Faith; and that any one hearing and underſtanding thoſe his Words which he had uttered concerning it, and receiving them by Faith, their Souls ſhould find them to be Spirit and Life to them, by conveying himſelf (who is eternal Life) to them through Faith on him, who as a quickning Spirit is their Life: And thus their Cavil (how can this be?) is ſolved; for thus it might and could well be, according to ſpiritual Principles rationally ſuted to and correſponding one with another. And moreover, it further appears, that he meant it not at all of a corporeal eating, (as our Bodies do our ordinary Food) by that Saying he ſubjoineth, ver. 56. He that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him: for no Man is ſaid to dwell in his Meat, tho for a while, till concocted, his Meat may be ſaid to be in his Body: But ſays he, He that eateth my Fleſh dwells in me, and lives in and by me, even as I live in the living Father, as it follows, ver. 57. Thus this Interpretation anſwers all their Exceptions.

4. That Confeſſion which his Diſciples hereupon made, (which is the laſt Part of the Chapter) is indeed but a ſhort Sum of all this; even a brief Expoſition and Confirmation of Chriſt's whole Sermon, but eſpecially of this, ver. 63. The Print and Impreſſion on their Souls who had ſavingly believed, punctually anſwered to this his Doctrine: For when our Saviour ſaw that his new Diſciples of Capernaum had ſo ſoon left him, (ver. 66. From that time many of his Diſciples went back, and walked no more with him) he turneth himſelf to his old Diſciples, Peter, and the reſt of them that had ſtood by, and heard all the Diſcourſe; thus ſpeaking to them, v. 67. Then ſaid Jeſus to the twelve, Will ye alſo go away? And now hear them ſpeak according to their experimental Senſe; ver. 58, 59. Then Simon Peter (in the Name of the reſt) anſwered him, Lord, to whom ſhall we go? Thou haſt the Words of eternal Life; and we believe, and are ſure, that thou art that Chriſt, the Son of the living God. They had by bleſſed Experience found him to be a Fountain of ſpiritual Life to their Souls, becauſe he was God's Son: They had found, they had felt him to be their Life, becauſe that Fleſh, that is, that Man, whom they ſaw with their Eyes, whom they had convers'd with, and had heard ſo many Words and Sermons from, (and this among the reſt) was indeed in his Perſon, the Son of God, and united to the Son of God perſonally; and that the Spirit or Godhead in him the Son, had quickned their Souls full many a time: for they had found that his Words he had ſpoken concerning himſelf, in declaring that he was the Son of God, and GOD, had been Eternal Life to them. They therefore cry out as Men that ſhould be undone, if they ſhould ever come once to leave him; Whither ſhall we go? (ſay they) thou haſt the words of Eternal Life: And this Life he had in his very Perſon, and in his being God's Son, which therefore Simon, v. 69. ſuperadds, And we believe, and are ſure, that thou art that Chriſt, the Son of the Living God. If therefore there ſhould be a parting of us and Thee, farewel Eternal Life, and let go our Souls, and all, for thou art the Soul of our Souls, the Life of our Lives; which Life he withal affirms to be conveyed to them, and maintained in them, by and through their believing on him, as the Son of God.

And now obſerve the full and expreſs Correſpondency which the words of this their Confeſſion holds, in reference unto Chriſt's words, ſpecially thoſe in v. 63. Our Lord had in the 57*th* Verſe aſcended higher in ſetting open the Fountain, and original Source, or Cauſe of his own bleſſed and eternal Life; to the end that carrying their Thoughts to the Well-head of all Life, they might know to whom ultimately to attribute the Glory of this Life, together with himſelf; and might diſcern the Bleſſedneſs of that Life it ſelf derived to them, and the Deſcent and Derivation of it: His words are, As the living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father; ſo he that eateth me, ſhall live by me: It is as if he had ſaid, The Father is the primum vivens, the original Principle of all Spiritual Life; being a Spirit (as *Joh.*4.24.) the Fountain of that Life which is in me, and from me let down to you: whence it is that the Life with which I quicken you, and other Believers, is a Communication of the Life that is in my Father himſelf through me; and the Foundation of my own Life in my ſelf, and of being Life unto you, or any Believers, lies in this, that I am his Son: The Son of God having the ſame, the very ſame Life eſſentially in me who am God, that is in my Father; ſo as there is the ſame Spirit, and Godhead in both. I am the Living Son of this Living God, who, as ſuch, is my Father, and have Life in my ſelf, tho from him; and he ſent me who am this Life, down from Heaven in this Fleſh, which you behold with your bodily Eyes, to give Life to the World: And therefore I am able through and by means of this my Fleſh, who is one Perſon with me, to derive and let down this Life to you, and the Life which my Father himſelf hath, even Eternal Life; for he is the Eternal God, and therefore I am Eternal Life alſo: And therefore it is that the Life I can and do communicate from him to you, is Eternal Life likewiſe. And again, as my Father is a Spirit (as John 4. 24.) ſo am I; and therefore it is a ſpiritual Life which I make Souls Partakers of, which is conveyed to thoſe Souls by a ſpiritual means, wrought on purpoſe by my Father in their Hearts, unto whom he hath appointed to give this Life; which Means is believing on me with their whole Hearts, and by that Faith entertaining my Words, which I ſpeak of my ſelf, who am Life to them.

Now let us come to their ſhort and ſummary Confeſſion fore-mentioned, ver. 69. We believe and are ſure, thou art that Chriſt, the Son of the living God. This they alledg as the Ground and Reaſon why they found that he was Eternal Life to them. Concerning which Confeſſion, I note three things, anſwering to what had gone afore in Chriſt's Speeches.

1. That he is God; which is evident they acknowledg, by ſaying, the Son of the living God, the natural Son of the living Father, as he had ſaid before, ver. 57. Creatures that are living themſelves, Animals, (as we call them) do beget living Creatures too, endowed with a Life like their own, and they beget in their Kind, as a Lion begets a Lion, and a Man begets a Man: Thus God begetting this Son, (and he is his only begotten Son) he begets him like himſelf, a God: And therefore to ſay he is the Son of the Living God, imports that he is God, and that Living God.

2. Obſerve, (which in ſubſtance is the very ſame) he had ſaid of himſelf in ver. 63. It is the Spirit, or the Godhead in me, that quickeneth.

3. Obſerve, that it was by Faith on him, and his Word, that they had Life eternal derived unto their Souls from him. We believe (ſay they) which is in return unto all that Chriſt had ſpoken of believing, and eating his Fleſh, to be that ſpiritual eating by Faith, throughout that Sermon, from ver. 14.

4. And let me caſt in this to this Confeſſion of theirs. One of thoſe Apoſtles that then ſtood by (the Apoſtle John, who ſurvived, and wrote his firſt Epiſtle after all the reſt of them were dead) reviveth this very ſame Confeſſion of theirs (here made) in his own Name, and in the Names of them all (as Peter here) tho dead, and alledgeth that their general Senſe and Experience they had of the ſame of which they here ſpoke. Thus in 1 Joh. 1. 2. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life: For the Life was manifeſted, and we have ſeen it, and bear Witneſs, and ſhew unto you that Eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifeſted unto us. We, by which he means theſe his Fellow-Apoſtles that had been, not himſelf only, nor other Fellow-Chriſtians then alive; for he ſpeaks of thoſe who had ſeen, heard, and handled of the Word of Life, viz. the true Chriſt; and how they had all found that he was that Word of Life, and Eternal Life that was with the Father, afore the World was; whom after often in that Epiſtle he ſtiles his Son, and God, and concludes the Epiſtle with the ſame, (even as he had begun) This is the true God, and Eternal Life.

Thus we have ſeen the truth of all this juſtified by Wiſdom's Children, and ſealed to by their Experience.

Now in the laſt place, take notice, (and it is to our purpoſe) that in the midſt of this Sermon it is that Chriſt lets fall the words of my grand Text, (for a part of this Sermon it is;) and that for this Cauſe, and on this occaſion it was that becauſe he is ſo ſpiritual a Meſſias, that therefore it is neceſſary, that every one that believes in Chriſt, ſo as to have Life, muſt be taught, and have learned from the Father, that grand Teacher of his Son: And that all this is put upon this very ground, becauſe they are to know and receive him ſpiritually, (ſpiritually I ſay, in both thoſe reſpects fore-mentioned at the entrance) for he is a ſpiritual Chriſt, (who is the Object) and the Faith he is to be received withal (in the Subject) muſt be ſpiritual, ſuted unto the true Spiritualneſs that is in this Object; his Perſon, as God-man, or a quickning Spirit in Fleſh, and as he is a Saviour, giving his Fleſh for the Life of the World (both which he treats of in that Sermon) in the real ſavoury eating whereof, and in whom Eternal Life conſiſts, and is deriv'd; neither of which no Man can do, unleſs firſt taught by the Father to know him, and then drawn by God to him, as to a ſpiritual Saviour. And for Confirmation of this, you may again obſerve, how that preſently after he had uttered theſe words, ver. 63. from the Doctrine thereof he infers, ver. 65. Therefore ſaid I unto you, that no Man can come unto me, except it were given to him of my Father. Which Speech and Particle [Therefore] plainly refers unto the words of v. 63. we have been upon, and is as if he had ſaid, Becauſe I am to be believed on as a Spirit, or God, dwelling in this Fleſh, to be the Quickner of all that believe, Therefore, or for that Reaſon it is, that no Man can come to me for Life, unleſs taught by the Father ſpiritually: For to believe on me in a ſutable manner, (that is ſpiritually) ſutably unto what I am in my Perſon; and alſo in my Salvation, and Life (that I do give to others, and in both which I am a Spirit quickning) and correſpondently to believe on me, and on the Godhead dwelling in my Fleſh perſonally, this is above the reach of Nature, or of Fleſh and Blood, and therefore this muſt be given by my Father, who ſeeks ſuch Profeſſors and Diſciples of me as believe on me in Spirit and Truth.

From all which we may conclude, that to know Chriſt ſpiritually, both in himſelf, 1. As he is a Spiritual Chriſt: And, 2. A Saviour in the true Spiritualneſs of him: And, 3. In a ſpiritual manner to underſtand him in both, and come to him, under the true Repreſentation thereof, is that teaching of the Father meant, as the Truth is in Jeſus; and for want of which, or falling ſhort of which, it is that Men periſh. This therefore muſt be accounted a Point of greateſt moment to us to know, and to be ſearched into.

CHAP.

CHAP. VIII.

That Chriſt repreſented as a Quickning Spirit, is a proper Object of our Faith.

MY next work therefore ſhall be to ſhew, that Chriſt as repreſented a Quickning Spirit, in that latitude of Senſe which the Scriptures in that Notion of him intend, and revealed by the Father as the Truth thereof is in him, and taken in and underſtood by us accordingly, doth become and prove as proper and full an Object for our Faith to exerciſe it ſelf upon, as any other Notion whatſoever wherein he is repreſented.

I have in this large Title comprehended the main Materials that follow; and in laying open the Spiritualneſs of our Chriſt, (the Object, which in Scripture is expreſt by Spirit that quickens) the Spiritualneſs of the Faith and Heart of a true Believer, with difference from common Faith in a Carnal Heart, will all along appear, and appear by this, that when the Spiritualneſs that is in the Object is ſpiritually diſcovered, if the Actings of the Soul be really, and in Verity conformable, and anſwerable thereto, then it is ſpiritual Faith in us alſo. For it is a certain Rule, that the Spiritualneſs of the Subject, viz. the Soul, lieth in a ſutableneſs unto, and cloſing with the Spirituality of its Objects, as repreſented in their bare and naked true Spiritualneſs, abſtracting from other Reſpects, for then they attinge and affect that Object as it is in it ſelf. So here in this caſe, when the true Spiritualneſs of Chriſt is preſented, and apprehended as the Truth is in Jeſus, the Spiritualneſs, or Fleſhlineſs of the Heart will be diſcovered thereby, as the Heart ſhall be found to fall in with, or bear off from what is in that Object purely ſpiritual. I ſhall not then need to diſcourſe any more, than to diſcover to you what a Chriſt you have, and how ſpiritual, and then do you lay your Hearts to the naked Apprehenſion thereof, and ſee how your Hearts agree with him, and are affected accordingly towards him; and what it is in him cauſeth you to deſire him (as the Prophet ſpeaks) as ſuch a Chriſt, comparing Spiritual Hearts with Spiritual Chriſt, ſee how they agree and like each other.

Other Ways and Modes out of Scriptures are and have been taken by others, unto a great ſucceſs in their Diſcoveries of Chriſt, and the truth of ſaving Faith thereby, and for Subſtance they are the ſame with this of mine that follows. But I choſe this, as that which my Saviour's Sermon in this ſixth Chapter of John, hath led me to, and which hath fallen into my own Heart, and hath animated my Purſuances after Chriſt in a more ſpecial manner than any other Apprehenſion of him whatſoever. I limit my ſelf unto what this Notion, viz. a Quickning Spirit, will afford herein. For it is made a kind of Definition of him (if I may ſo ſpeak) or the moſt proper Deſcription, whether in his Perſon, or of what he is made to us, in two words, a Quickning Spirit, 1 Cor. 15. 45. Chriſt's Speech, God is a Spirit, (Joh. 4. 24.) is as proper a Definition of God as can be given (for he paſſeth our Logick) it expreſſing the kind of his Being, as his Name Jehovah, that he is Fulneſs of Being. And this Definition of Chriſt is like it given firſt by Chriſt himſelf in this 6th of John, and then by the Apoſtle, The Lord is that Spirit, 2 Cor. 3. 17. and again, a Quickning Spirit, 1 Cor. 15. 45. and I call it a Definition of him, or rather the exacteſt Deſcription of him, becauſe it is uſed to illuſtrate both his Perſon and his Work as a Saviour, 1 Cor. 15. 45, to 50. The firſt Man Adam was made a living Soul, the laſt Adam was made a quickening Spirit. Howbeit, that was not firſt which is ſpiritual, but that which is natural, and afterwards that which is ſpiritual. The firſt Man is of the Earth, earthy, the ſecond Man is the Lord from Heaven. I think I may, without the hazard of being confuted, undertake to ſay, that this is a more perfect Definition, or at leaſt an exacter Character of Adam the firſt Man, given him by God himſelf, from and upon his very Creation, than ever any Philoſopher gave of Man, whilſt they went about to make a Definition of him: And I may anſwerably affirm the like of this Definition of Chriſt, that he is a Quickening Spirit: It denotes his Perſon to be God, The Lord from Heaven, and withal a Man in one Perſon with God, the ſecond MAN. That the word Spirit in the New Teſtament is often ſet to expreſs his Godhead, as his Humanity Fleſh, is ſo well known (Rom. 1. 3. 1 Tim. 3. ult. 1 Pet. 3. 18, 19. Heb. 9. 14.) as it needs not be inſiſted on. The Parallel then between our Chriſt, and the firſt Adam, by way of ſupereminent Comparative on Chriſt's Part, will run thus: Look, as Adam the firſt Man was in his own Perſon firſt and originally made a living Soul, having that animal rational Soul, the Breath of Lives, infuſed by God into a Body organized for that Soul to act and enliven, as our Souls do our Bodies, and ſo make up one Perſon with it; ſo the Godhead of the ſecond Perſon, united into one Perſon, was thereby made a quickning Spirit unto that Fleſh of his aſſumed: Only we muſt here abate of the Parallel, (for it is but a Type, and ſo holds not in all things) that the Godhead in Chriſt is not the Soul of his Body, for he hath a Soul which makes up with his Body an entire humane Nature, but his Godhead is that which makes up one Perſon with that humane Nature, and infinitely enliveneth and ſpiriteth it above what our Souls do, or can do our Bodies. And he uſeth the word Quickning to expreſs that ſuperceleſtial Life by: not that Chriſt's humane Nature was dead before, but that it was called up to, and raiſed from what it was not, (and God's calling things that are not as if they were, the Apoſtle parallels with a Reſurrection, Rom. 4.) nor never would have been, if he had been but a mere Man, tho made by a new Creation, beſtowing never ſo excelling a Soul and Body, above the Soul and Body which the firſt Man Adam conſiſted of. But here the Spirit or Godhead elevated that Soul and Body of Chriſt's humane Nature into a State of Life, of an higher Kind and Rank, infinitely ſurpaſſing the Life which any Soul or Body, if but mere Creatures, could have been capable of; or than even God's Power (without making a perſonal Union thereof with the Godhead) could have raiſed ſuch a mere Creature unto. It is a divine and ſuperceleſtial Life, above all that of Angels in Heaven, peculiar to him through that Union by Inheritance, as being now become by Inheritance the Lord of Heaven, and in taking Fleſh, the Lord from Heaven; which to have been was his Right at the firſt Inſtant that he was Man. The Apoſtle therefore, being to expreſs that Life, which by the Godhead the ſecond Adam was raiſed unto, doth it by a term of Superexcellency, in a way of compariſon unto the firſt Man's being but a living Soul, but calls this, and gives it an higher term of quickning, denoting this high and tranſcending Elevation of it above what by mere Creation could have been communicated. And he uſeth the word Spirit in the way of Supereminency unto that of Soul: That look, as the Godhead in Chriſt's Perſon excels the Soul or Spirit in Man, ſo proportionably doth that Life, flowing from that Spirit or Godhead in Chriſt, excel the Life that was in Adam by Creation, or that could have been in any mere Creature. And becauſe it is a raiſing it up unto a Life, (that was not, nor never would have been in any mere Creature, but is wholly a ſupercreation Life) he therefore deſervedly calls it a quickning even of the humane Nature of Chriſt. And whereas it is ſaid, he was made a quickning Spirit: The Meaning is not, nor can be, that the Spirit or Godhead it ſelf in him was made: No, far be it from me ſo to interpret it; but the Meaning is, That by that Union of the Godhead with that humane Nature, the Godhead was made a quickning Spirit thereunto. And ſo the Parallel, as to Chriſt's Perſon, runs no further than to this, that as Adam's Soul breathed into his Body, and becoming one Perſon with it, did inſpire and impregnate it, and he became a living Soul: ſo the Godhead inſpirited this his humane Nature with a divine Life, ſutable to the Glory of that Godhead which dwelt in him. And the Reaſon why this Parallel, as in reſpect to Chriſt's own Perſon, is intended to extend no further, is, becauſe this of Adam's State is alledged but as a Type and Shadow, and therefore not in all things holding a Likeneſs unto the Subſtance typified out thereby. Thus it is true firſt of the Perſon of Chriſt, that his Perſon as God-man is conſtituted or made up of a quickning Spirit; and certainly as the firſt Man Adam is in his Perſon intended firſt in this, of being a living Soul, ſo Chriſt's Perſon in that of quickning Spirit.

But, 2. As Adam is ſaid to be made a living Soul alſo in reſpect of conveying a like Life and Image unto us Men his Sons, as the next Verſes do plainly expreſs the Scope to be: ſo the Parallel of Chriſt's being made a quickning Spirit, aims to ſignify alſo what he is made (by virtue of that his perſonal Union) to be unto us; of which there can be no doubt. From this Notion of his being a quickning Spirit, (as it hath been explained) the Spiritualneſs of this our great Chriſt, as he is made and ſet forth the ſpiritual Object of our Faith, and accordingly taught by the Father, as the Truth is in Jeſus, to all Believers, hath theſe two Branches in it: In the handling of which diſtinctly I ſhall accompliſh this Task I have undertaken.

1. You have the Spiritualneſs that is in his Perſon, as the Word was made Fleſh; or what he is in himſelf, Son of God, and God dwelling in our Nature perſonally, and quickning thereof.

2. The Spiritualneſs of him as a Saviour, or in what he is and hath done for us as Sinners, that were dead in Sins and Treſpaſſes. And altho the particular Occaſion of the Apoſtles introducing theſe Words was what he is to us in the Reſurrection of our Bodies; yet it in general reacheth to all that he is to our Souls, for our eternal Salvation. I divide this Argument into theſe two Heads; for theſe two were the two eminent Titles or Deſcriptions given him, as he was the CHRIST, by thoſe Diſciples that firſt believed on him, from the Beginning of his Manifeſtation to Iſrael. John the Baptiſt (from whom Chriſt's other Diſciples learned him to be the Meſſias or Chriſt) in a Sermon to his Diſciples, recorded by the Evangeliſt John, chap. 1. firſt repreſents him to their Faith, as a Saviour for Sinners: Behold, ſays he, the Lamb of God that takes away the Sins of the World; ſo at the Beginning of it, ver. 29. but in the Cloſe of it, ver. 34. And I ſaw, and bare Record, that this is the Son of God; and the Son of God conſiſting of two Natures: As a Man he was conceived after the Baptiſt himſelf; (as by the Story, Luke 1. appears) but he had another Nature, in reſpect of which he ſays he was afore him; that is, as God, and Son of God: Thus ver. 30. This is he of whom I ſaid, After me cometh a Man which is preferred before me: for he was before me. So then Chriſt as God-man, the Son of God, and Saviour from Sin, is ſet forth to a Believer's Faith, and this from the firſt by John. And ſometimes ſome of thoſe firſt Diſciples utter their Faith on him as Son of God; ſometimes others ſpeak their Faith on him as Saviour of the World. 1ſt. Some expreſs their Faith on him as Son of God: ſo Nathaniel upon his very firſt ſeeing and hearing of him; John 1. 49. Nathaniel anſwered and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael. The Faith of the Samaritan Diſciples, chap. 4. is thus expreſſed, John 4. 42. Now we believe, for we have heard him our ſelves, and know that this is indeed the Chriſt, the Saviour of the World. And Peter, in the Name of the Diſciples, expreſſeth the ſame, Mat. 16. 16. Thou art Chriſt, the Son of the living God: juſt as here in John 6. 69. you find. And the Revelation of this, in that ſpiritual manner that you have heard, was that which cauſed them to cleave to him, and ſay, Whither ſhall we go? &c. And it was from the Father teaching, ver. 17. Bleſſed art thou Simon, for Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed it unto thee; but my Father which is in Heaven. It was the Father had taught him ſo to believe on his own Son; and upon this Rock, ſaith Chriſt, ver. 18. I will build my Church: for all the Saints of the New Teſtament did all come to the Unity of Faith, and Knowledg of the Son of God, Epheſ. 4. 13. And in their ſo believing he was the Son of God, they believed that he was ſuch a Son of God as was God, or that Son of God who was God, which their confeſſing him the Son of the living God imported, as was obſerved. And therefore Chriſt in his arguing with the Jews (who quarrell'd with him, that he being a Man ſhould make himſelf God) makes the Concluſion of an Argument, wherein he proves he was God, to run thus; John 10. 33, 34, 35, 36. The Jews anſwered him, ſaying, For a good Work we ſtone thee not, but for Blaſphemy, and becauſe that thou being a Man, makeſt thy ſelf God. Jeſus anſwered them, Is it not written in your Law, I ſaid, Ye are Gods? If he called them Gods, unto whom the Word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken: Say ye of him whom the Father hath ſanctified, and ſent into the World, Thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid, I am the Son of God? that is, ſuch a Son as was true God: for the thing wherein they had ſaid he blaſphemed, ver. 32. was, that he ſaid he was God; yet he concludes that he was the Son of God: ſo that to believe he was the Son of God, was all one as to believe he was God. And hence it alſo was, that in other Scriptures, to believe on him as God, and on him as Saviour, are alſo joined in the Apoſtle's Confeſſion by the ſame Peter, 2 Pet. 1. 1. Simon Peter, a Servant and an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt; to them that have obtained like precious Faith with us, through the Righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. And they are alſo by Paul joined together, Tit. 2. 13. The great God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

CHAP. IX.

That Chriſt's Perſon, as Son of God, in one Perſon with the Man Jeſus, is the prime Object of Faith, and taught by the Father, as the Truth is in Jeſus.

TO evidence that Chriſt's Perſon, as the Son of God in one Perſon with the Man Jeſus, is the great Object of our Faith, two things are to be conſider'd. 1. That the Spirits of the firſt Believers on Chriſt were generally taught by God, and carried out to him, to receive, obtain, cloſe with him as ſuch, that is, under the Apprehenſion of his Perſon, Son of God, and God-man, (which properly is called his Perſon) not God ſimply in his Divine Nature ſingly conſidered, but God manifeſt in Fleſh, or the Son of God made Fleſh. You heard before the Baptiſt's Confeſſion, who was the Leader on unto this diſtinct Faith on him in this Particular: as alſo the Confeſſion of the Apoſtles, even long before Chriſt's Aſcenſion.

Other particular Inſtances may be given; as you find this to have been at the bottom of Martha's Faith, when Chriſt himſelf ranſack'd and ſearch'd into it, John 11. Chriſt puts her Faith to it by way of Queſtion, ver. 25, 26. Jeſus ſaid unto her, I am the Reſurrection and the Life; he that believeth in me, tho he were dead, yet ſhall he live. And whoſoever liveth and believeth in me, ſhall never die: believeſt thou this? But ſhe anſwers not in terminis and directly; ver. 27. She ſaith unto him, Yea, Lord! I believe that thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God, which ſhould come into the World. She brings forth the very bottom of her Faith, and Ground of all; the chief, the primary thing which ſhe believed about him, which carried all the reſt. She utters what lay moſt near her Heart. Thus alſo unbelieving Thomas, when his Faith had obtained a Reſurrection, upon occaſion of Chriſt's being riſen from the dead, (whereby he was declared to be the Son of God, and God, Rom. 1. 3, 4.) whither runs his Faith thereupon? My Lord, and my God, John 20. 28. The Eunuch heard Philip expound to him the 53*d* Chapter of Iſaiah, which treats of Chriſt's being a Saviour, and bearing our Sins; Acts 8. 32, 33. The Place of Scripture which he read was this; He was led as a Sheep to the Slaughter, and like a Lamb dumb before his Shearer, ſo opened he not his Mouth. In his Humiliation his Judgment was taken away; and who ſhall declare his Generation? for his Life is taken from the Earth. This Text muſt needs lead Philip to preach Jeſus to him, as a Saviour for Sinners; but he beginning (as 'tis there ſaid) but with that Scripture, proceeded to add many more; ver. 35. Then Philip opened his Mouth, and began at the ſame Scripture, and preached unto him Jeſus. And whereas there was but one Paſſage in that which he read that gave occaſion to preach him to be the Son of God, viz. Who ſhall declare his Generation? or whoſe Son he was? yet that neceſſarily fell in, and deciphered who the Perſon was that was to be the Saviour. Now obſerve how the Eunuch's Faith took hold of that above all other; for when Philip told him, ver. 37. If thou believeſt with all thine Heart, thou mayſt be baptized: The Eunuch's Heart tells us what 'twas above all other which his whole Soul cloſed in with; and that was, I believe that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God. And yet we may well ſuppoſe that Philip's Diſcourſe had run mainly upon his being a Saviour, and his bearing our Sin, for 'twas the main Argument of the Text (which the Eunuch gave him to expound, and ſure he kept to it) He was led as a Sheep to the Slaughter, and as a Lamb dumb before the Shearer; which the Baptiſt referred to in his, Behold the Lamb of God, that takes away the Sins of the World, John 1. 29. But the Spirit of God (did we ſee) ſet that other Character of his Perſon, which the Baptiſt alſo gave him, Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God.

But to give over the Purſuit of any more ſingle Inſtances, let us ſee the univerſal Effects of this Doctrine, both in the Baptiſt's Miniſtry, and of the Apoſtles, upon the whole Lump, Body, and Generality of Believers. What the Effect of John Baptiſt's Miniſtry was, is propheſied of, Iſa. 40. 3. The Voice of him that crieth in the Wilderneſs, Prepare ye the Way of the Lord; make ſtreight in the Deſart a High-way for our God: which is undeniably applied by three Evangeliſts to mean, that that Lord and God, (to make way for whom in Mens Hearts that Preparation was) is evidently our Lord Chriſt, as appears in the ſame Evangeliſts. And what was the Iſſue and Conſequent of it, that Chriſt coming and preaching after John, The Glory of the Lord (Chriſt) was revealed, and all Fleſh, (that is, believing Fleſh, whoſe Eyes Satan had not blinded) ſaw it together: that is, they all entertained him by Faith, as their Lord and their God, (as Thomas profeſs'd him) when he began to manifeſt his Glory, John 2. 11.

Then again, what was the Effect of the Apoſtles Miniſtry, who after Chriſt's Aſcenſion were ſent forth to preach him? It follows in the ſame Prophecy, Iſa. 40. 9. O Zion, that bringeſt good Tidings, get thee up into the high Mountain : O Jeruſalem, that bringeſt good Tidings, lift up thy Voice with Strength ; lift it up, be not afraid : ſay unto the Cities of Judah, Behold your God. This Goſpel-Meſſage was, Behold your God! that is, your Chriſt, who is your God, Son of God in his Perſon, the Ruler, the Rewarder, in whom is Eternal Life ; and the Shepherd of his People, v. 10, 11. Behold, the Lord God will come with ſtrong Hand, and his Arm ſhall rule for him : behold, his Reward is with him, and his Work before him. He ſhall feed his Flock like a Shepherd: He ſhall gather the Lambs with his Arm, and carry them in his Boſom: and ſhall gently lead thoſe that are with young. The Voice of the Crier, the Baptiſt, had cried him up ; Behold, the Lamb of God! the Son of God ; and the eminenteſt Meſſage which the Apoſtles delivered, was, Behold your God! that is, we preach a Saviour unto you, who is God: So they preach'd, and ſo they believed that heard them, 2 Cor. 4. 5, 6. For we preach not our ſelves, but Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, and our ſelves your Servants for Jeſus ſake. For God who commanded the Light to ſhine out of Darkneſs, hath ſhined in our Hearts, to give the Light of the Knowledg of the Glory of God, in the face of Jeſus Chriſt : In the Face, that is, in the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt, who is God, and the Image of God, v. 4. And when the Vail was taken off from all Nations, and ſpecially when it ſhall be taken off from the Jew, (which in the third Chapter, v. 15, 16. afore, he had applied the Prophecy of Iſaiah unto) O how will they ſtand aſtoniſh'd at the Faith and Revelation of this very thing, that the Perſon of their Meſſias, they ſo long waited for, proves to be their God, Iſa. 25. 7. When the Vail ſhall be taken off from all Nations, &c. then v. 9. It ſhall be ſaid in that day, Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him. O wonderful (will they ſay) this Meſſiah we waited ſo for, is our God, he is ſo in his Perſon, he will ſave us ; he is our Saviour alſo, and his Name is Jeſus, that ſaves his People from their Sins : this is the Lord, and he will ſave us. God and Saviour, you ſee again, Son of God, and Saviour joined, and this is the Faith of Believers, this is he they believe upon, and this univerſally. What one Saint is there diſtruſting it, or queſtioning it? For it found the moſt general Acceptation in the Hearts of Believers, when he wrote to Timothy, 1 Tim. 3. 16. And without Controverſy, (ſaith he, or with one Conſent) great is the Myſtery of Godlineſs : God was manifeſt in the Fleſh, or made Fleſh ; juſtified in the Spirit : i. e. His Godhead manifeſted in the Reſurrection ; preached to the Gentiles, and believed on in the World. This laſt is that which proves that Chriſt is God-Man, Son of God in the Fleſh, and was, as ſuch, the prime grand Object of all the Believers Faith that were in that Age of the World, and he is the great Myſtery and Foundation of all Chriſtian Religion ; and therefore under that Notion and Apprehenſion of him, made lively and real to our Souls, it is that we muſt come to him. I have not alledged theſe places ſingly to prove that Chriſt is God, tho they ſerve for it, but that as ſuch he is the primary Foundation of a Believer's Faith.

2. The ſecond thing is, (which I carry with me ſtill along) that to teach and reveal to Souls, that Chriſt is the Son of God, is the Work of the Father, which he doth in ſuch a manner, as no Human Underſtanding doth arrive at, nor can attain unto, without his teaching: this is expreſs and recognized by our Saviour, as his Seal of Approbation, ſet to that Confeſſion of Peter's; Thou art Chriſt, the Son of the Living God; Matth. 16. 16. And Jeſus anſwered, ver. 17. and ſaid unto him, Bleſſed art thou Simon Bar-jona ; for Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. It was a Revelation which made him bleſſed, and ſuch as was peculiar to them that are ſaved, and which all that are ſaved were to have, and it had not been taught him by Man, and by Education alone, &c. nor from his own natural Underſtanding (by which Men that live under the Knowledg of Divine Truths, come to profeſs them, but without the ſpecial Revelation of the Father they cannot attain to the Bleſſedneſs of true Faith) but wholly it was to be aſcribed to the Father's Revelation, which is there oppoſed to Fleſh, or fleſhly ways of Diſcovery. And laſtly, it is the Father of Chriſt, his Son; My Father (ſaith Chriſt) hath revealed this to thee, to whom principally this belongs, to reveal this Point of all other, that I am his Son, for he begat me, and he diſcovers me to them whom he means to bleſs. He is thy Lord, worſhip thou him, Pſal. 45. 11. The Point the Father inſtructs her in is, that Chriſt is her Lord, and means her God withal, (My Lord and my God, ſays Thomas, inſtructed by the ſame Hand) as the following Words, Worſhip thou him, evince; for it is God alone whom we are to worſhip.

CHAP. X.

The Uſes of the foregoing Doctrine. How we are to exerciſe Faith on the Perſon of Chriſt God-man.

Uſe 1. ONE End of mine in enlarging upon this Head, is to direct your Faith, in your Approaches and Addreſſes to Chriſt, viz. to pitch your Souls upon his Perſon of being God-man: and under the Notion and Apprehenſion thereof, taken in and formed up in your Minds, ſtill to act all the other ſeveral Exerciſes of your Faith upon him. I do not ſay you have no true Faith, unleſs you have explicite Thoughts hereof in all ſuch Actings: for Foundations (as this is one) firmly laid in the Soul, do implicitely work, when they are not in actu exercito, or explicitely thought upon, but an habitual Apprehenſion thereof carried along in the Soul may have a true and real Efficacy in it: yet the more you have of explicite, enlarged Conceptions thereof, and Reflections thereupon, and the oftner they are renewed, you will find them the more powerful and working: For it being ſo great a Truth, that in the Reality of the thing it ſelf, his Perſon in being God and God-man, is that which gives the Ground and Foundation, Influence and Virtue into all we believe upon him for; then the explicite Acting of Faith hereon (and thorow the Faith of it) upon all elſe he doth for us, muſt needs have a proportionable Effect in all. You all know and profeſs, as touching his Perſon, that he is God, Son of God, &c. and volant or flying Thoughts thereof run thorow your Minds at times; but do your Hearts dwell upon the Meditation of it, as that which puts Life into your Hearts, in all you believe concerning him? For this his Perſon is not only eternal Life (taken abſtractedly, as it ſhall be poſſeſſed in Heaven) in the Sequel alone, but it is the Life of your Faith exerciſed on his Death for Forgiveneſs of Sins for ſaving from Wrath. Many in their Judgments think that the Doctrine of the Trinity, and the Doctrine that Chriſt is God, is but a Matter of Speculation and Contemplation; and tho it is a Truth, yet it is ſuch as they think one might let lie by him, as that which will do them no Hurt nor Good: And moſt Men in the Practice of their Faith make little more Uſe of it than this comes to; whereas it is ſuch a Truth as thy Life lies in it, even eternal Life. And ſuch the Apoſtles and thoſe Believers accounted it, and did cleave to Chriſt accordingly thorow the Faith of it, and of him under the Contemplation of it. Chriſt having ſaid he was the Bread of Life that came down from Heaven, and 'twas his Godhead made him to be that living Bread, (John 6. 56.) uſeth this Phraſe, He that eateth my Fleſh, &c. dwelleth in me, and I in him. As a Man firſt chews with Delight, and then takes down his Meat, and by its abiding, its dwelling in him, and his digeſting it, it turns into his own Body, and ſo gives Life and Strength to him; ſo muſt it be with our Knowledg of Chriſt; he muſt dwell in us by Faith, and we in him, and this will quicken you to purpoſe. Hath the Father thus taught and inſtructed thee, to live upon him, and to come to him for Life, as ſuch? It is his Participation of Life from the Father, and ſo his being Son of the Living God, that gives him Life; and ſo thorow him thou comeſt to have that Life of the Father in thee, by dwelling in him, as the next Verſe, ver. 57. ſhews; As the living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father; ſo he that eateth me, ſhall live by me.

Part I.

Uſe 2. The next Uſe is for Information of the right State of this Aſſertion I have been upon; That the Perſon of Chriſt as God-man is the principal Object of Faith. You'l ask me; Do all that truly believe on him come to him under that Apprehenſion, ſimply for his Perſon's ſake, as moved thereunto by the Conſideration ſimply of his Perſon? This is a ſpiritual Pitch indeed: but do all Believers at firſt come to him under this Apprehenſion, and cleave to him for it?

I anſwer, That there are two Scopes or Purpoſes that I drive at, in my having preſſed this, that Chriſt's Perſon is the Object of Faith.

1ſt. That the Faith on his Perſon as God-man is the Foundation of all elſe we believe upon him for, as he is our Saviour: And as that is it which makes him able to take Sins away, and to give us a Righteouſneſs to juſtify us, and which puts that Power in Force which his Death hath, to kill Sin, and which himſelf hath to quicken us; ſo all that we have to deal with him for, and all that our Faith is carried out to him, and to God through him for, is all in the Virtue and Force of this Faith firſt begotten in you, that he is God-man, the Son of God; 1 John 5. 5. Who is he that overcometh the World, but he that believeth that Jeſus is the Son of God? And ſo in the Force, and Virtue, and Strength of this, that Jeſus is the Son of God, it is, that we have Victory over the World. It is remarkable, that when Chriſt had utter'd theſe faithful Sayings about himſelf (John 11. 25, 26.) unto Martha, I am the Reſurrection and the Life: He that believeth on me, tho he were dead, yet ſhall he live: and whoſoever liveth and believeth on me ſhall never die: Believeſt thou this? He then puts her Faith ſtrictly to it to anſwer to theſe Particulars, (as one puts a Catechiſt to anſwer Catechetical Queſtions.) Now we ſee that ſhe doth not anſwer, as one would have thought ſhe ſhould, directly and diſtinctly unto theſe particular Points of Faith in queſtion put unto her, but ſeems to divert unto another Head, unto the great Article of Faith: She ſaith unto him, ver. 27. Yea Lord, I believe that thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God, which ſhould come into the World. This Anſwer ſhe utters in full, and upon the whole Matter, unto the Queſtion he had put; and tho it was in expreſs terms, not in terminis, nor in the Particulars; but yet fundamentally it was a comprehenſive Anſwer, and moſt direct: for therein ſhe ſhews ſhe believed, that that was the Foundation of all theſe Particulars, and of many more things that ſhe believed of him; and indeed of whatever elſe that Chriſt might ask her. I believe (ſays ſhe) that thou art the Son of God; and this ſhe conceived, and moſt rightly, to be a full Anſwer unto theſe Particulars; for ſhe ſaith, Yea Lord, I believe them all, I believe all that thou haſt asked me, by believing this one thing of thee, that thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God; and ſo art the Cauſe of all theſe, and of whatever elſe is attributed unto him that is the Chriſt, in the Prophecies of him, that he ſhould come into the World. In the Virtue and Strength of this ſhe believed he was the Reſurrection of Souls dead in Sins and Treſpaſſes, and of Souls that had begun to believe on him; and then of their Bodies at the Reſurrection, and that he was eternal Life, ſo as they that believe on him ſhall never periſh, and their Souls ſhall never die, whatever their Bodies for a while did. And ſhe believ'd all in the Strength of this, that he was the Son of God; ſo that the believing of this is fundamentally neceſſary for every Chriſtian to know.

Only I add this, that Foundations, tho they bear up the whole Building, yet oftentimes lie hid under ground, after they have been firſt laid: And ſo it is in our Faith of Principles and Foundations: Tho they remain in the Heart, and bear up all of our Faith elſe, about what we do believe, yet they are not always drawn out in our Thoughts, into formed-up Propoſitions, tho at firſt they were inlaid as ſuch. They bear the Weight of all, and to have the Faith of them is common to all Believers, and is univerſally aſſented to as a Foundation; 1 Tim. 3. 16. This is the great Myſtery of Godlineſs, (that is, the great Ground of all Godlineſs, the Pith of it) God manifeſted in the Fleſh, believed on in the World. And Epheſ. 4. 13. They all come to the Unity of the Faith that ſhall be ſaved through all Ages; all that either are now converted, (ſaith the Apoſtle) or that are to be converted, (take the loweſt Chriſtian) ſtian) and have theſe things in their Faith about Chriſt's Perſon, that he is God, and the Son of God.

So that, 1. in coming to him for that which will ſave them, they come to his Perſon in ſo doing. They would not have his Righteouſneſs and Blood, and the Fruits of either, Pardon of Sin, &c. without having himſelf alſo: and ſo it is his Perſon they believe on for their Salvation.

Yet, 2. They may be at preſent moved rather with that in his Perſon which will ſave them, than with his Perſon himſelf.

And yet withal, 3. Even that alſo, to come to his Perſon for it ſelf, as the principal Motive wherewith to cloſe, is in radice, in ſemine, in the Bud, but not in the Bloſſom. There is that in the Heart (if drawn out) which is prepared to it, diſpoſed to it, and ſuted to it.

2dly. A ſecond End and Purpoſe for which God firſt inlays in the Heart the Knowledg of Chriſt's Perſon, and the Fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling perſonally in our Nature, and for which end alſo I have preſſed it, is, That firſt or laſt it ſhould become the greateſt Motive and Inducement of our coming to Chriſt, and to cloſe with him, and cleave to him as ſuch, rather than as a Saviour: That the Thought of it ſhould be above that of Saviour; yea, and abſtracted in the Conſideration of it from that of Saviour; and this explicitely, the Heart being drawn to him upon that account, and accompanied with Affection anſwerable.

Thoſe that will urge, that either this is the firſt Inducement, or the more common Inducement to come to him, principally to have his Perſon, conſidered in it ſelf, and for it ſelf, do preſs too hard upon weak Believers, and urge that to be at firſt which they are growing up to all their Days, and perhaps attain it not in this Life. Alas! at firſt our Hearts are taken up with the Thoughts of Sin, and with Chriſt as the Remedy and Saviour from Sin. John's Miniſtry began there in the Hearts of his Diſciples, and he called upon them to behold the Lamb of God that took away the Sins of the World: And the great Apoſtle pronounceth this to be the moſt faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners. And I am induced to think that in his propoſing of it in that Place, (where he ſpeaks of his own Converſion) he had an Intent to inſinuate that himſelf had that Sentence in his Eye at firſt Converſion chiefly or mainly. Dr. Preſton's Similitude is the beſt to expreſs this by, (I mention him, for I think he was the firſt that uſed it of any other) That as when a Marriage is propoſed unto a Woman, that which may move her at firſt to liſten to it may be the Hear-ſay of an Eſtate, and paying her Debts with which ſhe is incumbred; theſe may perſwade her to view and ſee the Perſon, and to entertain a Viſit from him, and to acquaint her ſelf with him; but after ſome long Converſe her Heart is ſo taken with his Perſon, that if he had nothing ſhe could beg with him all the World over, for ſhe is ſatisfied with his Perſon alone. And thus it is between our Souls and Chriſt: We come to Chriſt at firſt, as the Lamb of God that takes away our Sins, that will ſave us from Wrath, and pay our Debts: (And the truth is, we muſt always come ſo to him, to cleanſe us from Sin every Day) But thorow acquainting our ſelves with him, (as the Phraſe in Job is) there often appears that to us in his Perſon which takes our Hearts more than his being a Saviour to us. Eſt aliquid in Chriſto formoſius Salvatore; There is ſomething in Chriſt more beautiful than a Saviour: and our Hearts in time may riſe up to this. The beſt Compoſition of this Matter is that in the Prophet Iſaiah, which takes in both, which ſpeaks the Hearts of Converts from whom the Vail was taken off, ch. 25. 7. who thereupon (in that ver. 9.) are brought in ſaying and uttering the bottom of their Hearts; Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will ſave us. They looked at Chriſt, and received him both as God, and as their Saviour: (for of Chriſt it is ſpoken; compare 2 Cor. 3. 16, 17, 18.) and it follows, We will rejoice in his Salvation. God allows us we ſhould aim at, and hope for, and rejoice in our Salvation by Chriſt, and come to him upon that Account, as well as on the Account of his being our God, and Son of God. God and Chriſt love us ſo well, as they love we ſhould love our ſelves in coming to the Son, and therefore would have us come to him as a Saviour, as well as for his Perſon; yea, and to be glad, and rejoice in his Salvation. And truly there is good Reaſon that we ſhould Part I. do ſo, both on our Part, and on his alſo ; for it coſt Chriſt's Perſon ſomething to ſave us, for he humbled his Perſon, and gave away himſelf, for he gave away the preſent Glory of his Perſon due to him, that he might ſave and redeem us, and no leſs would have done it. And he hath no Reaſon to have his Love herein loſt or forgotten, or ſwallowed up only in his Perſon.

Nay further, let me add ; You being Sinners, cannot come to rejoice in his Perſon, or to think with your ſelves what a Husband you have of him in himſelf, till you believe on him for Pardon of your Sins, and the Salvation of your Souls ; (and therefore Faith for Juſtification is in that Epiſtle to the Romans preſſed firſt) and after you have ſeen your ſelves loſt by reaſon of Sin, then you are directed to come to Chriſt as a Propitiation for Sin : This he doth diſcourſe in ch. 3. from ver. 21. and in ch. 4. and we muſt have Peace with God as Sinners, being juſtified by Faith, (Rom. 5. 1.) e're we can rejoice in God. But then to rejoice in God is made a further Attainment and Fruit of this Faith in the Iſſue, in theſe words, ver. 11. But we joy in God thorow our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Yet ſtill take this along with you, that if you come to him as to a Saviour, you may and muſt come to him as God, and the Son of God, and believe on him as the Perſon who as ſuch is your Saviour, and is the Foundation of your whole Faith on him for your Salvation : yea, and tho you come as moved chiefly becauſe he is Saviour, as that for which you come at firſt ; and in doing ſo are accepted of God, and juſtified and pardoned ; yet let me tell you, you will be more accepted by God, after your Faith riſeth up to take his Perſon, as in it ſelf, and as moved to love him from what you ſee in his Perſon alone, or chiefly conſidered. God the Father loves it more, that you ſhould love the Perſon of Chriſt in and for himſelf ; John 16. 27. The Father loveth you, becauſe ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God : which is all one as to ſay, You have believed on and loved me, becauſe I am his dearly and only beloved Son ; than which nothing can endear you more unto him, nor be a higher Exerciſe of Faith in you. Some Strains of ſuch Thoughts and Affections as theſe, tho but in the bud, have (as was ſaid) ſome Puttings forth intermingled in weaker Believers, that are drawn to him by the Faith and Hopes of his being their Saviour. Such Spirits may run in the Veins of your Hearts, whilſt yet you are moſt eager to ſeek Salvation ; but then they are but as in the Bud, they are not fully bloſſom'd. A Soul may find he hath ſome ſuch things offering to riſe, and mix themſelves with his Faith and Hopes for Salvation ; and this will make your Prayers accepted wonderfully, as the Words before ſpeak in that John 16. 26, 27. At that Day ye ſhall ask in my Name ; and I ſay not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you ; for the Father himſelf loveth you, becauſe you have loved me. And this will more obtain with God than your Faith that your Sins are pardoned, and that Chriſt died for you ; yea far above it. I uſe to ſay, Chriſt's Love in ſuffering is more to be valued by you than his Suffering, or the Fruits of it ; but his Perſon more than all of them. You muſt know, that 'tis his Perſon you muſt ultimately abide by ; for in the Enjoyment of him in his Perſon will be the Top and Height of your eternal Life, and ſo conſequently you have to do with him for evermore ; and therefore to have him ſo revealed to you, as to have your Hearts taken therewith at preſent, in ſome leſſer Taſtes and Glimpſes, is the moſt ſpiritual teaching by the Father of all other. And this is attainable in this Life, for it is in Grace as in the Root, and will be drawn out and ripened by the Father. And ſurely the Diſciples had the Seeds of ſuch Diſpoſitions in their Hearts, that did look forth ſometimes into actual Exerciſes, as appears in that Speech that Chriſt uſeth of them, The Father loveth you becauſe you have loved me. And ſure ſome ſuch thing was in Peter's Heart, when he ſaid, Lord thou knoweſt that I love thee : and that becauſe he was the Son of God ; for that is the main thing they expreſſed why they cleaved to him, as was ſaid before. And the Imperfection of this, and that it abounded no more in them, made Chriſt complain, that they ſhould mourn for themſelves, becauſe of his Departure from them to Heaven ; whereas (ſays he) if you had loved me (that is, my Perſon it ſelf, as the next Words ſhew) you would rejoice becauſe I go to my Father. I put this Gloſs upon that Text : for it is all one as if he had ſaid ; If you loved my Perſon for it ſelf, you would love my perſonal Good and Happineſs more than your own, and ſo have rejoiced more for this, than have mourned for your own ſuppoſed Loſs, and want of preſent Comfort in me. And many of thoſe primitive Chriſtians had ſuch Goings forth of Spirit towards the Perſon of Chriſt, as thoſe had whom Peter wrote to, 1 Pet. 1. 8. On whom believing, tho you ſee him not, ye rejoice with Joy unſpeakable, and full of Glory. This muſt be chiefly in and for his Perſon; for his Perſon it is whom we ſhall one Day ſee, and rejoice in Glory with him: and 'tis Faith in the mean time riſing to ſuch a pitch as ſupplies the room of the Sight of him, with a Joy ſpringing from ſomething which is anſwerable to that Sight. And ſure Paul had it, who above all, and in the firſt place, expreſſeth his Deſires to be to win Chriſt, that is, Chriſt himſelf, his Perſon, and to be found in him; and then to have his Righteouſneſs, and the Power of his Death, &c. And I have been induced to think, that ſome ſuch ſtrain of Heart was ſomewhat more prevalent in that Eunuch, Acts 8. The Man was truly godly before, and therefore he came to worſhip; and you read his devout Employing of himſelf whilſt he was a travelling. He had the 53*d* of Iſaiah preached over to him by Philip, for the Words of the Chapter he gave Philip for his Text to preach on. And in that Chapter we read how that God laid upon Chriſt the Iniquity of us all, and made his Soul an Offering for Sin; and that he was led as a Sheep to the Slaughter, to take our Sins away, as the Baptiſt had interpreted it. And ſo Philip preaching to him Jeſus, (as the Text hath it) it lay in his way principally to ſet out Jeſus Chriſt as a Sacrifice for Sins; and ſurely Philip did keep to his Text. There is but one Paſſage in the Chapter, and in the Words which the Eunuch read, that gave occaſion to him to preach his Perſon to be the Son of God, and that is thoſe Words, Who ſhall declare his Generation? Yet we read, that when he deſired to be baptized, and Philip ſaid to him, If thou believeſt with thy whole Heart, &c. (as if he had ſaid, what is there in thy Heart which thy Heart moſt cloſeth with, concerning this Chriſt that I preached to thee?) The Eunuch ſays, I believe that Jeſus is the Son of God: So as he pitcheth upon that as that which his Heart was moſt on. And tho he cloſeth with him as a Saviour, according to Philip's Preaching, yet that is not mentioned by him; but this, that he was the Son of God: and ſo 'tis ſaid he went away rejoicing, being baptized into Jeſus Chriſt, upon that Account.

But tho this is attainable, yet Chriſtians are a growing up to it ordinarily, but by degrees, for poor Creatures as we are, we learn Chriſt by piece and piece, as when we look upon the Moon through a Telleſcope, it appears ſo big, and vaſtly great, beyond what we can take in at once, that we muſt travel over it with our Eyes, firſt taking a view of one Part, and then removing the Glaſs to another, and ſee perhaps but a quarter of it at once. And thus it is with our knowing Chriſt; that is, with ſuch a Knowledg as affects us, and draws our Hearts to him; with ſuch a Knowledg we know one thing of him in one Year, and another in another. For one Stage of our Lives our Hearts run after him for his Blood to waſh away our Sins, and for his Righteouſneſs to cover us in the Preſence of God: In another Stage we purſue after Holineſs to be had from him, for the ſubduing Corruption through the Power of his Death, and quickning our Hearts with his Life: And in another way we purſue after him for the Lovelineſs of his Perſon; and it is that we ſhould make the top of our Deſires, why we ſhould deſire him (as the Prophet Iſaiah ſpeaks unto Believers) we are perhaps a growing up to this all our Life long, and attain it not till we come to the being of a more perfect Man, and to the Fulneſs of our Stature in Chriſt, which we ſhall have in this Life in the Knowledg of him as the Son of God; whereof the Apoſtle there ſpeaks, Epheſ. 4. 13. Yet this let me add, that Faith of Recumbence may be capable of this, and yet remain in the Courſe of a Faith of Recumbence; that is, want ſettled Aſſurance that Sins are pardoned. And they may remain ſuch to whom Chriſt hath not yet ſaid, Your Sins are forgiven; and thou art the Perſon that I died for: and ſo they have not an Aſſurance that he is their Saviour, tho they continually exerciſe Faith on him to be ſaved through his Death, yet their Souls in this Poſture or Diſpenſation are capable of being raiſed up under this Faith, to cleave to him, and follow after him for his Perſon, more than as a Saviour. And the Reaſon is, not only becauſe God often works works one way, and diſcovers one thing more to take the Heart than he doth another, according to his good Pleaſure, and ſo he may give a Beam of the Knowledg of Chriſt in his Promiſe (2 Cor. 4. 6.) more bright, to inflame their Hearts towards him, than the Apprehenſion that he is a Saviour. There is not only this Reaſon of it, but God alſo deals thus with them, that ſuch may be aſſured with a clear and certain Light that his Perſon is thus amiable, and glorious, and lovely in himſelf, which cauſeth them to cleave to him ſo as they would not part with him, no not with his Perſon, for ten thouſand Worlds; when yet, whether he died for their Sins, or will pardon them, is doubtful to them. But the other Truth they may have no doubt of, but a Diſcovery of it, and the Notion of it lieth more open to ſuch a Spirit than the Attainment of the Aſſurance of the Pardon of his Sins.

Juſtifying Faith.

BOOK III.

The Free Grace of God as declar'd and propos'd in the Covenant, is the Object of Faith. Of the Soul's applying it ſelf unto the Free Grace of God, and treating with it for its Salvation. That the abſolute Declarations of this Free Grace, or the abſolute Promiſes of the Goſpel, are the Object of Faith of Recumbence, or Adherence. That Election-Grace, and the Immutability of God's Counſel as indefinitely propos'd in the Promiſes, are alſo the Object of Faith. How the believing Soul may conſider and regard God's abſolute Decree of Election.

CHAP. I.

How the Soul may for its Salvation treat with the Free Grace of God as declar'd in the Covenant.

I Shall firſt diſcourſe of a Soul's treating with the Free Grace of God as it is propoſed to us in the Covenant of Grace, before I conſider what kind of Promiſes they are which are the Object of our Faith. There is a great crying up of Free Grace, as that which in the way of Believing Mens Souls rely upon: But ney who have travers'd the Paths of it, ſo as to arrive at a free and familiar Interourſe therewith, find it exceeding difficult, until God guides them into it by a reight and direct Line. And there are many dangerous Miſtakes in the Applicaon of our Souls unto it in the ſeeking of it: I ſhall therefore treat of it in a way of iving Directions about it. (1.) We muſt lay hold on Free Grace according as it is t forth in the Covenant of Grace. The Covenant you have at large in Jer. 31. nd in Ezek. 36. cited in Heb. 8. Now the Covenant of Grace is but the pure Relutions of Grace in the Heart of God put into written Promiſes. It is a tranſlating f the pure Grace in the Heart of God and Purpoſes thereof into Promiſes, into inefinite Promiſes, not naming the Perſons to whom they are deſign'd: They are Exreſſions of Purpoſes as they lay in his Heart. Men think it an eaſy thing to deal ith the Grace of God for Salvation, and that they need no Directions and Teachings, ings, for God (ſay they) is merciful in his Nature, he is a merciful God, and it is but going to him for Mercy, &c. But the Free Grace of the Purpoſes of God, as it is ſet forth in the Covenant, is a further thing than a Declaration that God is merciful in his Nature; and a Man needs teaching how to treat with Free Grace, as it is in God's Heart ſet forth in the Promiſes, in the immediate and abſolute Promiſes; 2 Theſſ. 3. 5. The Lord direct your Hearts into the Love of God. He ſpeaks of that Love which is in the Heart of God himſelf towards us: Rightly to go to, and cloſe with, and lay hold on that Grace, needs Direction, and that from God. The Lord (ſays he) direct your Hearts into the Love of God. He ſpeaks to thoſe that already had been in ſome meaſure acquainted with that Love. All of you whom God ſaves, one piece of the Indenture of his Covenant is, that he will teach you to know him; to know him in what? To know him in the Pardon of your Sins, and how to obtain it at his Hands; for ſo it follows, I will forgive their Sins, and their Iniquities will I remember no more: And to know how to deal with the Grace of God for Pardon of Sin upon Grace's own terms; for this Mens Souls need Direction in. The Lord direct your Hearts into the Love of God.

I ſhall ſhew you ſome of God's Teachings: You ſhall be all (ſays he) taught of God; taught of God in his Free Grace. When Free Grace comes to teach the Heart to treat with Grace, it teacheth it,

1. To renounce all Self, or elſe Free Grace will have nothing to do with you. From the very firſt Purpoſe Free Grace had to ſave Man, it laid that for a Foundation, that the Salvation ſhould not be of Works, but according to the Purpoſe of his Grace given us before the World was, 2 Tim. 1. 9. There you have it purely ſet down as it was in God's Heart. And the Holy Apoſtle when he ſpeaks of Grace, and of our being ſaved by Grace, he ſtill puts in this Negative, not of Words, as the oppoſite of Grace, Rom. 11. 5, 6, 7. And whereas Faith is required wherewith to cloſe with that Grace, (Epheſ. 2. 8. By Faith you are ſaved, through Grace, it is the Gift of God) a Man muſt renounce all Power in himſelf to believe, and all Helps to believe, but what are drawn from the pure Grace of God. Hoſ. 14. 2. See there God's Inſtructions, Take with you Words, (ſays he) and turn to the Lord, and ſay to him, Take away all Iniquity, and receive us graciouſly, &c. Here you have Free Grace (as Free Grace) inſtructing and teaching Men that would turn to God, how to apply themſelves unto it. It is a Treaty of Free Grace's here that is recorded, Receive us graciouſly.

I will love them (ſays he) freely, ver. 5. Now he teacheth you upon his own Terms how you muſt deal with his Grace. And that it is upon his own terms, it is clear by this; for he bids them take theſe Words in their Mouth. So that 'tis a ſure way to know how to treat with the Free Grace of God. It muſt be done with a Renunciation of all that is oppoſite to it, and which will ſpoil the Treaty, and enervate and make it void. Accordingly they ſay, Aſhur ſhall not ſave us, we will not ride upon Horſes, &c. Aſhur ſhall not ſave us. He expreſſeth it in Old-Teſtament-Language under the Figure of a temporal Deliverance. We will not (ſay they) call in the Help of Aſhur, nor think to ride upon Horſes. You muſt be helpleſs, you muſt not think to deal with Free Grace on Horſeback, for you ſhall not prevail ſo; no nor on Foot neither, for it is not in him that willeth, or that runneth, but in God that ſheweth Mercy, Rom. 9. 16. And ſo the Cloſe is here, It is not our Hands in which we truſt, we will not ſay, the Work of our Hands ſhall ſave us; but how then? With thee the Fatherleſs find Mercy: As if he had ſaid, The ſtrengthleſs, the helpleſs, the utterly deſolate of all Helps by Means, but only the Free Grace of God and Chriſt, the Fatherleſs ſhall find Mercy. For the Soul to give up it ſelf to the Graciouſneſs of Grace to accept it, to receive it graciouſly, to give up it ſelf to the Efficacy and Power of Free Grace to work what it will with Renunciation of all elſe; this is the firſt Leſſon Free Grace teacheth, when a Man will come to have Salvation by it. I will not meddle with you elſe, (ſays God) lay that for the Foundation of your Treaty, or my Grace ſhall not treat with you at all. What is Free Grace? God tells you in theſe Words, I will love them freely. What is Grace? It is Love; I will love them freely, (ſays God) and all their Backſlidings ſhall be no Diſcouragement to me. Now you ſee God bids you take Words, he hath put the Subſtance and Efficacy of thoſe Words into your Mouths, and they are his own terms. I have oft ſaid, If a Soul would but go and take the very Words (underſtanding them) as they are recorded where the Covenant of Grace was penn'd, (Jer. 31. 33, 34. and the like in Ezek. 36. I will give a new Heart: and in Jer. 32. I will put my Fear into your Hearts, and you ſhall not depart from me: This is pure abſolute Grace.) If a Man ſhould take theſe Words that God hath put into his Mouth and uſe them, or the Effect of them to God, ſaying, Lord I preſent them to thee, and beſeech thee to make them good to my poor Soul, and ſhould ſeek God Day and Night, the Lord would own and accept that poor Soul.

2. God teacheth the Soul to treat with the Grace of God in the free Sovereignty of it. There is the Grace of God's Nature which you read of in Exod. 34. The Lord God gracious and merciful, &c. The 33*d* Chapter was a Preface unto what follows in the 34*th* Chapter concerning the proclaiming his Name; and ſaith God, I will proclaim my Name before thee, and I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful, and I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious. This is a plain Declaration that that Grace of Salvation he would not ſhew to any body. It is a Limitation, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, I will be merciful, &c. I will have Freedom and exerciſe Dominion in doing of it. Are you to treat with Grace? you are to treat with this ſame Declaration, I will be gracious, &c. and I will be merciful to, &c. and you are to apply your ſelves to the Sovereignty of it. This is to treat Free Grace upon its own terms. When a poor Soul ſees it ſelf loſt and comes to God, to the Free Grace of God, he doth not come on Horſeback, nor on Foot neither, but he falls flat down at that Throne and Sovereignty of God, He will be gracious to whom he will be gracious, &c. He hath to do with this ſame Will of the great God, and the Soul acknowledgeth that he is abſolutely free, and that he may chooſe whether to do it to me or any ſuch poor unworthy Wretch as I am; he may if he pleaſe not ſhew me any Mercy; Whom he will he hardens, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 9. And I am a poor Creature, (ſays he) and I lay down my ſelf at thy Feet, if thou wilt be merciful here I am; I throw my ſelf upon thee, thou mayſt give me up to Hardneſs. If Souls come thus nakedly to him, he then hath a Dominion to caſt them off as fully as to accept them: If thou comeſt thus nakedly to him, thou haſt nothing to ingratiate his Grace but his own Grace, which he ſhews to whom he will, and that Will hath a Will, I will be gracious becauſe I will be gracious. Becauſe Mercy pleaſeth him, and Mercy and Grace hath taken thy Heart, poor Creature, thou comeſt to him to caſt it that way. The abſolute Freeneſs and Dominion of Grace is the Glory of it, and God will have our Hearts brought to ſeek it, as it lies in his Heart; God loves to have it acknowledged, at one time or other, by every Soul he ſaves. Tho I dare not ſay, that there is an abſolute Neceſſity of ſuch a Diſpoſition of Soul, yet to be ſure when the Soul thus applys it ſelf in treating with Grace, there is true Faith and Dependance on God. There is not only an acknowledging that God may refuſe me if he pleaſe, but the Soul ſays, If thou haſt no Pleaſure in me, here I am; My Will is made ſubject as well as my Underſtanding; it muſt be thine own Pleaſure purely muſt caſt it on me: this is Faith of Submiſſion. And yet withal thinks the Soul, who knows but he may be merciful, and merciful to me, and that keeps it at the Throne of Grace, and will not let it go away.

3. Free Grace loves to be treated according to the Fulneſs of its own Freeneſs, and the Extent of its own Freeneſs. The Meaning is, it is abſolutely as free to God to ſave any ſort of Sinner, one as another, it is as indifferent to him to ſave out of any Condition. So that put what Caſe you will, put what Condition you will, Free Grace hath a Freedom to extend it ſelf to it. It is not only ſaid, I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful, as for the Perſon, but there is a Nobleneſs of Liberality, ſo that there is no ſort of Sin (the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt excepted) but may be pardon'd; no ſort of Condition, be it poor, weak, contemptible, what you will, but a Man may be ſav'd in it. Now when the Soul ſees this, he honours Free Grace mightily: he comes not to be accepted, becauſe he hath fewer Sins, that were to derogate from Grace; nor is he diſcouraged becauſe of the abundance of Sin; no, for there is an Amplitude in this Grace; Rom. 3. 22, 23, 24. As to the Point of being ſaved by Grace, Grace knows no Difference: So for thy outward Condition, be it what it will, there is no Condition any one is in, but one or other have been in it, and ſaved; for God is no Accepter of Perſons, but is rich to all that call upon him. Now to have a Soul poſſeſs'd with the Thoughts of the Freeneſs of his Grace, and to treat with God accordingly, this honours his Grace, and this God loves, and this he delights in.

4. We muſt treat with this Grace as that which is abſolute, unchangeable, irreverſible, where it is once pitch'd. If I in ſeeking God can find this Grace of God to own me and imbrace me while I ſeek it, then what do I come to? To a State of irreverſible Grace, of Grace that will carry on the Work, that will undertake all for me, that is faithful, and will do it. What ſays God? Pſal. 89. 28, 29. Tho they break my Laws, I will viſit their Tranſgreſſions with the Rod, and their Iniquities with Stripes; nevertheleſs my Loving-kindneſs will I not utterly take from them, nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to fail. You have it alſo in Iſa. 54. 10. With everlaſting Kindneſs will I have Mercy on thee: The Mountains ſhall depart, and the Hills be removed, but my Kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee. Noah's Waters may as ſoon overflow to cover the Earth, as thy Sins overflow thy Heart. When the Soul ſhall thus have the Amplitude of Grace, of Grace paſt, preſent, and to come, before it, and turns it ſelf round about, and ſees no end, O ſays the Soul, that my Heart may be the Subject of this Grace! that I may come under the Dominion and Protection of this Grace! for this Grace will do the Buſineſs, it will do it throughly; it anſwers all my Objections, makes Proviſos for them, it ſatisfies all the Deſires that I have or can have. Now ſuppoſe that God yet carries it concealed towards thee, yet thou art happy if he fires thy Heart with this Grace, and cauſeth thy Soul to ſeek after it, and teacheth thy Heart to come to God, and to ſpread all theſe Properties of his Grace before him, whereby he ſaves Men, and thy Heart is ſtrengthned to plead, that God would caſt them upon thy ſelf, and thou canſt by the Hour relate between him and thee, how by this Grace thou deſireſt to be ſaved, and by no other; tho thou heareſt of other Ways, of Free-Will Grace, where God moves, but leaves thee to will, yet if thou hadſt ten thouſand Souls thou wouldſt not venture one that way. Doſt thou heartily ſay to God, Lord, I had rather go upon this way of Free Grace than upon that way of Free-Will-Grace, tho offered to all? O ſave me this way! Lord, I have nothing to return, but I ſhall render the Calves of my Lips, I ſhall adore thee and bleſs thee: O that there ſhould be ſuch Purpoſes of Grace, and that they ſhould thus take my Heart, I am reſolv'd to be ſav'd no way, if not ſaved this way, and by this Grace. To be thus taught and inſtructed, you had need have the Lord direct your Hearts, 2 Theſſ. 3. 5. In the Original it is to direct by a right Line; it is an emphatical Expreſſion to ſignify ſuch a Direction as that they ſhall not go about, but go ſtreight and immediately into the Heart of God, and Love of God.

What do Men do? They come with their Conditions to ingratiate themſelves with God when they come to treat with Grace, which is to bring to Grace what ſhould ingratiate their Souls to it. We uſe to ſay, God's Grace is a preventing Grace, preventing what is in Man; but by this way Men would prevent the Grace of God, and be aforehand with it. Do not go round about, but go by a right Line, and venture thy ſelf tho thou knoweſt not whether thou beeſt the Perſon or no, and lie at God's Feet. To bring Conditions whereby thy Faith ſhould be raiſed to Free Grace, is not agreeable to the Mind of Grace. The truth is, you will find Free Grace will ſay to your Souls, I will not be thus dealt withal.

Object. Would you have us uſe no Endeavours, Means? &c.

Anſw. This I ſaid is ſo remote from it as nothing is more. In Noah's Inſtance, tho God ſaid to him, Thou haſt found Grace in my ſight, yet he prepared an Ark. And in Phil. 2. 12, 13. we are commanded to work out our Salvation; for it is God that worketh, &c. But how work out our own Salvation? We are to uſe thoſe Endeavours which we find we have Power to uſe in Subordination to the Grace of God that works the Will and Deed; and we are to wait in the Uſe of Means, renouncing all we do, as to any Purpoſe of ingratiating our ſelves with God, yet we are to uſe theſe Means in Subordination to God that works the Will and the Deed.

Object. But would you have a Man treat Free Grace thus, and leave out Holineſs?

Anſw. God forbid: for if you ſeek the Grace of God in truth, and as it is in it ſelf, and in the Heart of God; then if your Heart know the Grace of God in truth, it will teach you to be holy, and to make gracious Returns to God again; 2 Tit. 11. 12. The Grace of God hath appeared, &c. teaching us to deny all Ungodlineſs, &c. It is ſpoken of the Goſpel and Doctrine of it, which thus teacheth you. But if God the Father do inſtruct your Heart, and make known to you his Free Grace as it is in his Heart, and draws you to depend upon it, wholly upon it, if ſo be you have learnt from the Father, what it is for God to be gracious, and how he is gracious to a poor Soul, (or as it is in John 6. 45. If you have learnt of the Father) you will be taught to be holy, yea it is part of your Indenture when you come to plead the Covenant of Grace. The Grace of God is the greateſt Teacher of Holineſs that ever was: ſays God in that Covenant of Grace, Jer. 31. I will write my Law in their Heart. Of all Laws elſe he will write the ſupreme Law which Free Grace hath to write: What is that? To have the Grace in God anſwered with Grace in you; to have your Hearts ingenuouſly wrought upon to comply with his Grace, and not to abuſe it; Col. 1. 6. If you have known the Grace of God in Truth, &c. There is a true Knowledg of the Grace of God; and there is a counterfeit one: but if it be true, it teacheth all Holineſs, it ſtamps a Frame of Heart upon you, it teacheth you how to apply your ſelves to Grace in its kind, and therefore to return Grace for Grace, and Love for Love. It is the Law of the Thing, it is the Law of Nature to love thoſe that love you, and on whoſe Love you depend. It is the Law of pure Nature, and it is the pure Law of Grace; 1 John 2. 4. He that ſaith, I know him, and keepeth not his Commandments, is a Liar, that is, doth not know God. Not know him! in what? Doth not know him in his Love, ver. 13, 15. For it is the Love of the Father he ſpeaks of. I tell you, no Man ſeeks Grace in this manner I ſpeak of, but he profeſſeth to God and his own Soul that he would not be ſaved by that Grace unleſs it wrought Holineſs in him. It is part of the Indenture he draws with God. I acknowledg that to be made holy ſimply upon the ſight of the pure Grace of God, it is a high and ſpiritual thing, and our Hearts are carnal. The Law is holy and ſpiritual, the Terms of Free Grace are holy and ſpiritual, and we poor Wretches are carnal and ſold under Sin, and cannot come off to the Motives thereof, to be acted by it continually. It is true; but yet when the Soul lay at God's Feet to obtain it, and humbled it ſelf, that Soul thereby kept on a Plea for Holineſs, as well as for Grace, and doth obtain it, and hath it wrought in his Soul. He that hath the Love of this World, hath not the Father's; 1 John 2. 15. A Man whoſe Heart is taken with the Grace of God to be ſaved by it, if he loves the World inordinately, or more than God, the Love of the Father is not in him, he knows it not: But of a gracious Soul the Apoſtle ſaith, (Rom. 6. 14.) Sin ſhall not have Dominion, for Grace will break the Dominion of Sin. Thoſe curſed Men (Jude 4.) turn'd the Grace of God into Wantonneſs, (they were Simon Magus's Followers, and the Devil was his Maſter) and what did they profeſs, that a Man was ſaved wholly by Grace, do what he would, and that that was the Grace of the Father? O how doth the Apoſtle fly out againſt theſe Men, and follow them with all the Curſes that God brought upon wicked Men in the Old Teſtament, and upon the Angels that fell! Men that have nothing but Self-righteouſneſs in them to be wrought upon, they wonder to hear that the Grace of God ſhould work a Man above himſelf, to love God above himſelf; that a Man ſhould be taken with Free Grace, and not abuſe it; for the Nature of Self-love is to run away with Free Grace, and be unthankful. But what is the Grace we ſpeak of as it is in the Heart of a Chriſtian? If Self-love only, it were the worſt Direction ever was given to teach Self-love to ſerve its turn, and to run away with Salvation, and let Self do as it pleaſeth. But the Doctrine of Free Grace which we profeſs to Salvation, is a Principle of Love to God above a Man's ſelf; there is that at the bottom. If it be ſo, then the more pure and clear you can bring this Grace in the Heart of God towards a poor Soul, you move that Man ſo much the more, you boil up Grace to a height. If there be Love and Grace in the Soul, and that Grace be prevailing, it will work anſwerably, it will make the Grace of God its greateſt Intereſt, becauſe it is God's. We profeſs this is the Principle of Grace, and therefore to teach Men thus to follow the Grace of God, is to teach them that Principle that muſt be put into them by the Holy Ghoſt.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

What high Regards the Faith of the Apoſtle Paul had to the Free Grace of God the Father as the Object of it. How he magnifies and celebrates this Free Grace diſcover'd to his Apprehenſions and Thoughts.

1 TIM. 1. 13, 14.

I obtained Mercy, becauſe I did it ignorantly, in Unbelief: And the Grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, with Faith and Love which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

THE Holy Ghoſt hath declared Paul a Pattern in his Converſion to thoſe that are after to believe, (1 Tim. 1. 16.) and as a Pattern of Encouragement and Hopes to the greateſt of Sinners that were to come after him to believe. And ſo likewiſe in the very Work of Converſion he is propos'd as an Example alſo unto them, altho he indeed at firſt attained unto that Perfection therein, which other Converts are growing up unto in their whole Lives. But yet the Seeds of the whole being ſown, and Foundations laid in their firſt Work, they are ſpringing up to a full Growth throughout their whole Lives. As every Child that comes into the World by ordinary Generation hath the ſame Parts eſſential to Mankind, both of the Inwards of Bowels and Ventricles of the Head, in a leſs Size and Proportion than Adam had, who was made a Man of full Stature by an extraordinary way of Creation, and therefore had all in the full Proportions of a Man grown up to Perfection, and alſo each part acting in their full Vigour and Activity from the firſt: So is it here, Every Convert receives all the ſame Principles of Faith and Love at firſt, only the Actings and Increaſe thereof do in many things grow up into an actual Energy, and yet ſo as at the firſt thoſe Principles do neceſſarily ſo far act in all Converts, as is requiſite to put them into a State of Life and Salvation. And this in the Point of the Actings of Faith upon God and Chriſt for Juſtification and Salvation, is in a ſpecial manner ſeen, ſome Mens Spirits being more intenſely carried out unto God the Father for Grace and Mercy, others more unto Chriſt Jeſus for his Righteouſneſs, altho whilſt they act Faith more upon the one or the other, they yet implicitly take in the other; whilſt they look more on God's Grace and Mercy, yet ſo as they regard it in and through Chriſt, and è contra.

But our great Convert here in this Narration of his Converſion is propounded unto us as an high Example of Faith drawn forth in an intenſe manner unto each, both the Grace of God and Chriſt, in the moſt abounding Workings of it. In the Book of the Acts we find an hiſtorical Relation of the outward Circumſtances and manner of his Converſion, twice related by himſelf: In this Epiſtle to Timothy he acquaints us with the moſt intimate working Impreſſions and Sentiments of his Spirit, and what principally his Heart was taken up about at the Time thereof: The Senſe whereof he retained unto that day, and theſe eſpecially he utters in ver. 14. And the Grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, with Faith, and Love, which is in Chriſt Jeſus. He had begun to give ſolemn Thanks to Chriſt, (the great Doner and Endower of all Gifts unto Men, Epheſ. 4.) ver. 12. for putting him into that Office and Dignity of the Apoſtleſhip, and this from the Time of his Converſion. And I thank Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, (ſays he) who hath inabled me; for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the Miniſtry: which Bleſſing he greatneth from the Conſideration of his having formerly been ſo great a Blaſphemer of Chriſt, and a Perſecutor of his new created Chriſtian Church, and Profeſſors of him; ver. 13. Who (ſays he) was before a Blaſphemer, a Perſecutor, and injurious. But then in the middle of that ver. 14 he proceeds more particularly to magnify the Mercy and Grace of his Converſion for the Salvation of his own Soul, without which tho the Grace of Apoſtleſhip might have ſaved others, yet himſelf had proved a Caſt-away, as was the Caſe of Judas: That therefore is the great Mercy which he centers in in the following Verſes: and therein firſt (as I take it, and humbly ſubmit it, together with this my Analyſis of the whole Paragraph to ver. 18.) he predicates the Grace and Mercy of God the Father ſhewn to him in and through Jeſus Chriſt: But I was bemercied, (ſays he) or was endowed with Mercy, becauſe I did it ignorantly, in Unbelief: And the Grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, with Faith, and Love, which is in Chriſt Jeſus. Then, Secondly, he magnifieth Jeſus Chriſt for his Mercy alſo in coming into the World to ſave him the chief of Sinners: ver. 15, 16. This is a faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the World to ſave Sinners, of whom I am chief: Howbeit for this Cauſe I obtain'd Mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all Long-ſuffering, for a Pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe on him to Life everlaſting. And then, laſtly, he ſhuts up the whole with this ſolemn Doxology, or giving Glory to God the Father; ver. 17. Now unto the King eternal, immortal, inviſible, the only wiſe God, be Honour and Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

And when he enters upon this Narrative of his Converſion, he at firſt uſeth a word ſomewhat uncouth, whereby to expreſs the Mercy of it: a word whereof in the Engliſh Tongue we cannot give the full and proper Force in one word, (which the Greek it ſelf is) I was bemercied, (if we may ſo ſpeak) miſericordia donatus, endowed with Mercy, encompaſſed with Mercy. It is a like word unto that ſpoken to the bleſſed Virgin, Luke 1. 28. κεχαρίτωμένη, gratiouſed, or one whom God's ſingular Grace owned, embraced, and ſo here ſays the Apoſtle, I was mercified, endowed with Mercy, I had nothing but Mercy, and was all over Mercy. There was not only nothing of Merit, but no Fitneſs or any Diſpoſition in me towards it, to make way for it, but the contrary; only there was a Capacity, a Poſſibility left of having Mercy beſtowed on me, (that was all) becauſe I did it ignorantly, ſays he, and in Unbelief: which imports that if he had purſued thoſe Injuriousneſſes, and perſecuted Chriſt and his Saints, having firſt had a Conviction of Sight that accompany thoſe Actings, they had been that unpardonable Sin, and would have rendred him incapable of all Grace and Mercy. And he uſeth this word this firſt time (for 'tis after alſo) in relation to God the Father's Mercy then vouchſafed him in calling him by Grace, (as he elſewhere ſays, Gal. 1. 17. ſpeaking of the Father) which proceeded from his electing Love, Grace and Mercy towards him, which there, Gal. 1. you have alſo expreſſed in thoſe Words, When it pleaſed God who had ſeparated me from the Womb: [That that is an Election-Phraſe ſee Æſtius on the Words, and others.] And this Separation of him had ordered all things all along from the Womb about him, and in his Courſe of Life before his Converſion had taken care to keep and prevent from falling into that unpardonable Sin, upon the very Brink of the Pit whereof he had (at laſt) walked. And then called me by his Grace, (ſays he there) the wonderful Mercy of which he (here alſo narrating his Converſion) celebrates; and indeed our firſt Calling, as it is the breaking forth of Election-Grace and Mercy, ſo it bears the Image and Pattern of it. I was then bemercied, (ſays he) drench'd, and covered all over with the abundant Mercies thereof. It was poured forth upon my Soul by whole-ſale, and on the ſudden, and at once. This was the Execution of Election, and this firſt mention of this word I in my Interpretation refer to God the Father's Grace, to whom both Calling and Election are every where peculiarly attributed.

Now obſerve how he again repeats the ſame Word, (for he uſeth it twice on this Occaſion and in this Place, for he delighted in it, and in the very thinking of it) and inſerts it, when Chriſt's Part at his Converſion comes to be related; ver. 15, 16. This is a faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the World to ſave Sinners, of whom I am chief: Howbeit for this Cauſe I obtained Mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all Long-ſuffering, for a Pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe on him to Life everlaſting.

Now in this ver. 14. he proceeds to magnify this Grace of God the Father (diſcovered at and in his Converſion) with the higheſt Elogy and Epithets that could be given it, (and the Grace of our Lord (ſays he) was ſuperabundant) and together therewith to acquaint us with the principal inward Workings of his Heart, and moſt intimate Exerciſes and Actings of his own Spirit towards that ſuperabundant Grace that ſhined on him at his firſt Converſion; and to declare with what Entertainment or Acceptation (as his word is ver. 15.) he received that, and took in that Grace then diſcovered, he adds theſe Words, With Faith and Love, which is in Jeſus Chriſt, which are the two Graces that anſwer (by way of Return and Reception) unto the Grace of God when diſcovered, and are exerciſed about, and act thereupon. He ſpeaks not here of the Work of his firſt Humiliation for Sin, which is the firſt Work in all true Converſions, (tho he hints that he had deep and thorow Impreſſions that way, in ſaying, ver. 15. Me the chiefeſt of Sinners) but here he omits it, and mentions only the Work of Faith and Love, the principal Object directly acted upon, being the Free Grace of God. And to ſet forth theſe Actings of his Soul thereupon, I take to be his principal Scope in this Verſe. The chiefeſt Queſtion about this Interpretation is my referring thoſe Words, and the Grace of our Lord, unto God the Father, becauſe the Title our Lord is more frequently given to Chriſt in diſtinction from the Father, and is given unto Chriſt in ver. 12. afore, and alſo Chriſt is only mentioned in ver. 15, 16. afterward. I find ſome Interpreters, as Calvin and others, on this 14*th* Verſe, call it the Grace of God, without the mention of Chriſt here: and ſome others ſay, Gratia Dei in Chriſto, the Grace of God in Chriſt, which ſtill denotes the Grace of God, tho in and through Chriſt. And many of thoſe that carry the Words to Chriſt, yet ever and anon put in alſo the Grace of God, and (as it were) could not forbear but to do it. But the Reaſons of my Interpretation (which will alſo ſerve to ſolve the Objection) are,

Calvin, Dickſon, Illyricus.

1. Becauſe Grace is moſt frequently aſcribed to the Father in the Point of Juſtification and Salvation, (which is the thing he ſpeaks of here, as ver. 15. ſhews) and that in diſtinction from Chriſt, as out of Rom. 5. and ch. 3. may be obſerved. Tho alſo it is ſometimes given to Chriſt, yet moſt uſually I ſay unto the Father: (even as the Title of our Lord is ſometimes given the Father, tho more commonly to Chriſt, which ſolveth part of the Objection.) But beſides, to ſpeak more cloſe to the Point, thoſe other Places wherein Paul gives the Account of his Converſion, (which I call Parallels to this, and therefore argue from them as ſuch) he ſtill entitleth the Grace thereof unto the Father. Thus Gal. 1. 15, 16. But when it pleaſed God who ſeparated me from my Mother's Womb, and called me by his Grace, to reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the Heathen. And the very ſame you find, 1 Cor. 15. 9, 10. For I am the leaſt of the Apoſtles, that am not meet to be called an Apoſtle, becauſe I perſecuted the Church of God: But by the Grace of God I am what I am; and his Grace which was beſtowed upon me was not in vain: but I laboured more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the Grace of God which was with me.

2. There did always riſe up to me in the reading of this Scripture, a Diſtinction implied in the Verſe it ſelf, of Jeſus Chriſt, from him whom he calls our Lord, to whom the Grace is aſcribed: The Grace of our Lord (ſays he) was exceeding abundant, with Faith, and Love, which is in Chriſt Jeſus. That laſt Clauſe, and Love which is in Jeſus Chriſt, ſpeaks of Chriſt as of another Perſon from our Lord ſpoken of afore: He ſays not, and Love unto Jeſus Chriſt, but in Jeſus Chriſt, noting that Love of his to have been born to ſome other Perſon, in and through Chriſt: And if ſo, then unto whom more properly than unto that Perſon of whom he had immediately before ſpoken, and whoſe Grace (he ſays) had been ſo abounding to him? which Perſon muſt be the Father, if a Perſon diſtinct from Chriſt; and ſo he ſpeaks of a Love return'd unto him in and through Chriſt, for his Grace ſhewn him in Chriſt, as all the Father's Grace is ſaid to be, who hath choſen us in Chriſt.

3. Tho he from thence runs the reſt of his Diſcourſe upon Jeſus Chriſt, (in the two following Verſes 15, 16.) magnifying him for his Hand, and Mercy ſhewn in his Converſion, yet in the Concluſion he iſſues all in giving Glory to God the Father, (ver. 17.) and as one not having Words to ſet forth that Grace any further, he chooſeth to break off, and falls to adoring God the Father: Now unto the King eternal, immortal, inviſible, the only wiſe God, be Honour and Glory for ever and ever. Amen. Wherein he ſpeaks in the uſual Stile of Doxologies given to God the Father upon ſuch ſolemn Occaſions. Thus in the ſame Epiſtle we have it, *ch.*6.15,16. Who is the bleſſed and only Potentate, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; who only hath Immortality, dwelling in the Light which no Man can approach unto; whom no Man hath ſeen, or can ſee: to whom be Honour and Power everlaſting. Amen. Wherein this Honour and Praiſe is given to God the Father diſtinct from Chriſt, as by the comparing the laſt Words of the Verſe afore it appears. Now this Glory thus ſolemnly given in this firſt Chapter, all acknowledg to refer to the Grace of his Converſion before related, and ſo to ſignify him to have been the Perſon, whoſe infinitely abounding Grace had done all this for him. He had begun to thank Jeſus Chriſt, ver. 12. but he ends with Glory to the Father: and in reaſon that being the grand and ſolemn Concluſion of this his Narrative, it may well be thought that an expreſs mention of the Father his Grace therein ſhould be found ſomewhere in the Premiſes, and where elſe if not in theſe Words of ver. 14. for all the reſt did run wholly upon Chriſt. Yea and if it be not there, then that of the Mercy of God the Father is wholly left out, unleſs argued by way of Inference in this Narrative of the greateſt Converſion that ever was in the World; and alſo that when he ſets himſelf to celebrate the Grace towards him ſhewn therein in Words ſo high, as ſuperabundant, &c. the like to which are not any where elſe to be found, unleſs in that Rom. 5.20. ὑπερεπερίσσευσεν ἡ χάρις, and there it is apparently ſpoken of the Grace of the Father in diſtinction from, tho in conjunction with Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs, as Verſe the laſt, and thoſe afore ſhew. The Grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, ὑπερεπλεόνασε, it flowed over, or iſſued forth with an abundancy, yea Overplus; ſo in Rom. 5. it overfill'd Paul, and ran over and over, as more than enough. He compares himſelf to a Veſſel, (and we are ſtiled Veſſels of Mercy and Grace) into which on a ſudden were poured forth from above Spouts and Floods by whole-ſale, that not only fill'd it brim-full, but to a running over on every ſide. Yea, he ſpeaks as if the Windows of Heaven, the Floodgates thereof, even of the Heart of God, fill'd with that infinite Treaſury of Love and Grace towards him, had been ſet open, and had poured down the Streams thereof into his Soul.

The next Inquiry may be in what manner it is he intends that this Grace of God had ſo ſuperabounded, whether in the way of Effects, that is, in ſo ſtupendous a Work of converting ſo prodigious a Sinner unto God, in implanting in his Soul the Principles of Faith and Love, and of the whole new Creature, in one ſo confirmed and hardned in Unbelief, and ſo reſolute in ſuch a violent Fury againſt Chriſt and his Saints: So that the abundance of that Grace was demonſtrated in ſo mighty and wonderful Effects, (which is all, or the main that Interpreters here take notice of, as wherein this ſuperabounding Grace was ſeen) or whether withal he intends not to ſpeak apprehenſivè, that is, in reſpect of the Diſcovery of that Grace it ſelf, as it was, and had been born towards him in the Heart of God, and now broke forth upon his Soul in and to his own Apprehenſions. To this Query I anſwer;

1ſt. That it is true, that the Superabundancy of God's Grace muſt needs have been diſcovered to him in ſo great and wonderful a Change and Work wrought upon him, for it was unparallel'd Grace to work it, and there was a juſt Ground for him to adore it as he doth. Yet,

2dly. In the Knowledg of it barely by ſuch Effects, the Cauſe it ſelf remains hidden, and might ſtill not have been known in it ſelf no otherwiſe than in what is different from it ſelf, (for ſo the Effects are from their Cauſes) and ſuch a Knowledg is but ſecondary. And,

3dly. It would not have been ſaid that the Grace of the Lord had been over-full, or more than enough, in reſpect of the Works of Faith and Love; for the Works thereof themſelves were yet imperfect in him: but we may ſay of the Grace as it is in God's Heart, and as it is apprehended and laid hold on by us, by immediate Faith, that ſo indeed it ſuperabounds, both as to what it hath wrought, and in all which it hath undertaken to work for us: And this is infinite, and ſtretcheth it ſelf, and extendeth to all Eternity. And this Grace thus taken in as it was by Paul (that choſen Veſſel, Acts 9.) might well be deemed to be infinitely more than he could take in, and ſo to overflow, as hath been ſaid.

But further we may know that there is a flowing of the Grace and Love that is in God himſelf to Mens Souls in manifeſtation made by it ſelf, and of it ſelf: which the Apoſtle calls a ſhedding abroad the Love of God into the Heart by the Spirit, Rom. 5. and it is one after-Fruit of Faith which many attain to. There is a Taſte of the pure unmixed Sweetneſs in and of the Grace of God, as it comes from out of his own Heart, and is immediately conveyed thorow thoſe Breaſts of Conſolation, the abſolute Promiſes, whereof even new-born Babes do oft partake; 1 Pet. 2. 3. As new born Babes deſire the ſincere Milk, &c. If ſo be you have taſted that the Lord is gracious. Which ſurely this our Apoſtle (if ever any) had at this his very Infancy of Regeneration: And that was it, and the Experience thereof was it that drew him here to declare, that the Grace of our Lord was ſuperabundant; not re ipſa only, as it reſides in God's Heart unknown to us; nor as demonſtrated only by thoſe gracious Effects it had wrought in him, but apprehenſivè, or in his own Apprehenſions and Sentiments of it; and in that ſenſe it is he eſpecially utters this here. He ſaw and laid hold of, and took in that Fulneſs of the Grace of God born towards him, and as it now was and had been from everlaſting; a Grace which was over-full, as his word is, that is, as to his own Thoughts and Comprehenſions. What he prayed for the Epheſians, that they might comprehend with all Saints, the Height, the Breadth, Length and Depth of God's Grace towards them, and know the Love of Chriſt which paſſeth Knowledg; the ſame himſelf found in his meaſure, in the glorious Sight, Senſe, and Taſte of this ſuper-abounding Grace, which he found was not only ſufficient, (as 2 Cor. 12.) but more than enough for his turn; and to be ſure more than enough for his Soul to take in. It came upon his Spirit as a mighty Sea, which had neither Shore nor Bottom: He ſaw there was an Infinity of it, which he was no more able to take in into his Comprehenſion, no more than a narrow Veſſel is able to take into it ſelf the main Ocean: and in this reſpect it is he terms it ſuch abundant Grace. To conclude, in a word, it is objective ſpoken, as to the Grace it ſelf, as it was preſented unto him for the Object of his Faith, but apprehenſive as to his Soul; and not efficienter only, that is, as an efficient Cauſe of that Work of Faith God had wrought upon his Heart; unto which moſt would needs narrow it. It was not a mere Reflection upon the Operation of the Grace of Faith and Love, as in his Heart, but a far more enlarged Contemplation and Admiration of the Height and Depth of the Grace it ſelf, as it was in God's Heart, now manifeſting it ſelf unto him, how ſuperabundantly and how greatly he was beloved, (as the Angel ſays of Daniel) or how abundantly he was graciouſly accepted by God in his Beloved, as in Epheſ. 1. 6. And the Grace in God himſelf was its own Reporter of it. Paul firſt had ſeen how Sin had abounded in himſelf the chiefeſt of Sinners, (ver. 15.) and then that that Grace born in God's Heart to pardon, love and accept him, had abounded much more for the Pardon of it. And Grace as juſtifying him without any thing in himſelf, was the Object his Heart was now taken up withal at his Converſion.

CHAP. III.

That Abſolute Declarations about GOD and Chriſt, and Abſolute Promiſes of Salvation, are the moſt proper and only Objects of that Act of Application of Faith, we call Faith of Recumbency or Adherence.

BY Abſolute Declarations, &c. I mean ſuch as are not made unto Conditions or Qualifications, which firſt ſhould be viewed by the Soul to be in it ſelf as a Ground to believe upon God and Chriſt for Juſtification.

Ger. de Juſtif. §. 134.

Gerard in his Controverſy with Bellarmine puts this Meaning upon the terms abſolute Promiſes and conditional. "The Promiſes (ſays he, ſpeaking of the Goſpel-Promiſes) "may be called Abſolute as in oppoſition unto our Works and Merit, "and yet Conditional in that God requireth Faith, and ſo no Works being requir'd "to Juſtification, they are in that reſpect not conditional. But granting as well as he, that Faith is requiſite, and Faith alone, I do withal affirm that there are Promiſes that are abſolute, holding forth no Condition, as they are the Object of Faith. And Faith viewing merely what is in thoſe Promiſes, (which ſpecify no Condition of Faith it ſelf) lays hold on God's Grace and Chriſt as therein manifeſted. And thus abſolute Promiſes ſtand in a full Oppoſition unto all conditional Promiſes, as thoſe abſolute Promiſes may be ſuppoſed, and objected firſt unto Faith's View, and as they are the Raiſers up of it thereupon, ſo as upon the Sight thereof the Soul is brought to apply the Salvation made known in ſuch Promiſes. Now the Promiſes are ſuch as theſe; Jer. 31. 33. This ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael after thoſe Days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and I will write it in their Hearts, and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. Which being immediately made to the Elect, and being an abſolute Undertaking on God's part, to perform the Conditions themſelves, I therefore call them moſt abſolute. That Declaration alſo is abſolute in John 6. 37. All that the Father hath given me ſhall come to me. Likewiſe Heb. 4. 6. Some muſt enter in, whereunto God hath bound himſelf with an Oath (as there) to perform it. Now as for the Perſons concerning whom theſe Promiſes are made, they are only known to God: The Lord knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Some detract from the Abſoluteneſs of theſe Promiſes, in ſaying they are made upon other fore-ſuppoſed lower and ſubordinate prerequiſite Conditions to be perform'd firſt by Men, as to improve natural Helps well, &c. But this were to embaſe the Covenant of Grace by ſubjecting it to the Covenant of Works, as that which muſt take its Riſe from former Actings of ours, prediſpoſing to the Gifts of Grace. From all which Works in that very Place in Jeremy the Prophet diſtinguiſheth thoſe Promiſes of that Covenant of Grace.

Thus Abſolute Promiſes in the Controverſies with the Remonſtrants are on all ſides underſtood: Quæ non habent annexam Conditionem, which have not a Condition annexed: As upon the ſight of which our Faith on thoſe conditional Promiſes ſhould any way depend.

I join unto Promiſes of Salvation the Abſolute Declarations in the Word, becauſe there are many ſuch Manifeſtations of God and Chriſt delivered in the Word, as they are the Objects of our Faith, which yet we do not ordinarily term Promiſes, tho they are tantamount thereunto, as they are objected to our Faith. And indeed all ſuch Truths and Declarations may be taken for, and turned into abſolute Promiſes, and abſolute Promiſes into ſuch naked Declarations, ſuch Declarations I mean as theſe, That Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners, &c. which is delivered in way of a Saying, This is a faithful Saying, or grand Aſſertion of the Goſpel, rather than in a direct promiſory way: And in terming theſe Declarations rather I conform to the Language of the Holy Ghoſt, who when he moſt ſettly propoſed God and Chriſt as the Objects of our Faith, uſeth that Expreſſion to do it by; Rom. 3. 25. Whom (i. e. Chriſt) God hath ſet forth to be a Propitiation through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteouſneſs, &c. Then again, ver. 26. To declare, I ſay, at this time his Righteouſneſs, that he might be juſt, and a Juſtifier of him which believeth in Jeſus. It is uſed you ſee both of God and Chriſt, as in relation to our Faith. You have the like alſo, 1 Tim. 2. 5, 6. For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and Men, the Man Chriſt Jeſus, who gave himſelf a Ranſom for all to be teſtified in due time. And 2 Tim. 1. 9, 10. the like: Who hath ſaved us, and called us with a holy Calling, not according to our Works, but according to his own Purpoſe and Grace, which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus before the World began, but is now made manifeſt by the appearing of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who hath aboliſhed Death, and brought Life and Immortality to light through the Goſpel. Where not only God and Chriſt as Saviour, &c. but the very eternal Purpoſes and Grace of God and Chriſt of Saving, (as they are properly and only to be limited to the Elect) are ſaid to be the Matter of the Goſpel. And the Manifeſtation and naked Declaration of this according to its plain Intent and Purpoſe, is the Goſpel in its Height and Eminency, and the Seed and Head of all the Promiſes of Salvation, from which they are all derived and flow, and into which they all do again run, as Rivers into the Sea: And therefore by abſolute Declarations I intend all in the Word wherein thoſe Purpoſes of Grace are indefinitely reveal'd; I ſay indefinitely, becauſe there is no naming the Perſons of the Sons of Men to whom they are intended, and yet they are in that manner revealed, and with that Intent, to draw Men in to believe for their particular Salvation, as well as any other Promiſes whatever. And this I hope will appear plainly in this Diſcourſe, but eſpecially in that which follows it, unto which this is but introductory, the profeſſed Subject thereof being to ſhew, how Faith of Adherence may make uſe of the abſolute Revelation of electing Grace, tho wanting Aſſurance thereof: Which I have long ſince in Print promis'd to publiſh.

In my Preface unto Chriſt ſet forth, in 4o.

Mr. Bulkely in that New-England-Controverſy ſeems to be an Oppoſer of this Opinion, that abſolute Promiſes are the Means and primary Object of full Aſſurance of Faith, through an immediate Teſtimony of the Spirit, without conditional Promiſes;
“ By which only, ſays he, in the ordinary Courſe, if we will have any Trial of our “ Eſtates by the Word, we muſt have it by the conditional Promiſes; yet would I not “ (ſays he further) make the Abſolute Promiſes uſeleſs. I acknowledg they are of “ ſingular Uſe; 1*ſt.* In that they ſhew us the only Cauſe of our Salvation, even “ Free Grace and no other. 2*dly.* They are a Foundation for the Faith of Adherence “ or Dependance to ſtay upon. There be two Acts of Faith, ſaith he, one of Adhe-

Diſcourſe of the Covenant, p. 149.

“rence or Dependance, another of Aſſurance: There be alſo two kinds of Promiſes, Abſolute and Conditional: mark now how theſe do fit and anſwer one another, the abſolute Promiſes to the Faith of Adherence, the conditional to the Faith of Aſſurance; for example, God comes and ſays, For mine own ſake will I do thus and thus unto you in an abſolute Promiſe: Here is a Ground for the Faith of Adherence to cleave unto, tho I be moſt unworthy, yet I will hang upon this Promiſe, becauſe it is for his own ſake that the Lord will perform this Mercy, that he may be glorified. There be alſo conditional Promiſes, (He that believeth ſhall be ſaved) by means of which (we have the Experience and Feeling of ſuch Grace in our ſelves) we grow to an Aſſurance that we are of thoſe that he will ſhew the Free Grace upon. And thus the abſolute Promiſes are laid before us as the Foundation of our Salvation, (which is wrought in the adhering to the Promiſe) and the conditional as the Foundation of our Aſſurance. And tho I do not wholly fall in with this latter part of his Concluſion, as if conditional Promiſes ſerved only for a Foundation of Aſſurance, yet with the former Part, that abſolute Promiſes are ſuted and fitted unto Faith of Adherence, or of the Act of Juſtifying Faith, properly and truly ſuch, I fully cloſe with, and do add, that it is they that are the moſt proper Objects for ſuch a Faith, and not conditional Promiſes: And I ſhall endeavour to demonſtrate this, in the caſe of one who is now a beginning firſt to believe: For as every thing muſt have a beginning, ſo muſt a Man's Believing; and of that caſe it is I now ſpecially treat, tho I do withal judg that the true Act of Faith as Juſtifying, doth throughout the whole of a Man's Life, even of him that hath Aſſurance, lie not in an Aſſurance I am juſtified, but in that of Adherence only, as I have elſewhere ſhewn.

It is not unknown, that beſides thoſe Believers who have through Grace attained unto a full Aſſurance of Faith, there are two Ranks of other true Believers whoſe Faith doth fall ſhort of Aſſurance: 1. Such as are now a beginning to believe, as the Jailor, Acts 16. And, 2. Such as have had for ſome long time true Faith already wrought, and many Fruits thereof in the Courſe of their Lives, and yet walk in Darkneſs, and have no Light, and are fain to betake themſelves to live by a pure and bare Faith of Recumbency, or of mere caſting themſelves on God and Chriſt, renewed afreſh (even as they did at firſt) for their Salvation. And ſo they do as good as continually begin to believe, as if they had never believed before; and this they do altho they have ſome Glimpſes of good Hope at times, which yet not riſing up to over-power and ſilence Doubts, they return to make that kind of Faith their ſole Life. And altho there may be found ſome Difference between theſe two, yet I put them both into one Bag, (as we ſay) and range them together in my enſuing Diſcourſe, which I ſhall proſecute in the Perſon of one who is now but a beginning to believe. Concerning whoſe Caſe there is the moſt Difficulty, how to inſtruct ſuch an one, to make uſe of ſuch abſolute Promiſes and Declarations, and how he ſhould come to cloſe with them, and with what Faith. And ſo whilſt I ſhall ſpeak to this Caſe of the one, I ſhall but ſpeak to the Caſe of the other. That which we enquire after is, what Object he that is firſt to believe may find to ſet his Foot firſt upon, and which may become a Ground to him of that ſpecial Act of Faith whereby he lays hold on Chriſt for his own Salvation.

I ſuppoſe him humbled for Sin, and convinced that unleſs he have a Ground for his being ſaved from ſomething elſe than what is in, or from himſelf, he muſt periſh. I ſuppoſe him looking about him into the World, and crying out thereupon, (as they in Acts 2. and the Jailor) What ſhall I do to be ſaved? I ſuppoſe him alſo to ſee and apprehend his way to be to believe, and caſt himſelf on God and Chriſt, looking about him for a Ground or Foundation in the Word, unto that his Faith.

Now then I ſhall proceed:

And here I ſhall proceed both Negatively and Poſitively.

1. Negatively, I ſhall ſhew, that no Qualification in a Man already wrought can be a Ground and Object for his firſt Act of Faith, ſo that in the ſight of it he ſhould be certainly and perſonally perſwaded to act that Faith on God and Chriſt.

1*ſt.* It is not his Humiliation or Sight of his Sin, or of his being in a loſt Condition, wherein if he remains he muſt periſh. For the Sight of that but leaves him where he was, and it is Faith by which his Condition muſt be altered. The Sight of Sin and Miſery may and doth indeed put a Neceſſity upon his Soul to look out for Salvation, and that is it which makes him cry out, What ſhall I do to be ſav'd? And it is ſuch a Work, as without it he would never ſeek out for Chriſt, nor go to him to ſave him. But for him to build on that Sight as that which he having had wrought in him, he may with Confidence believe in Chriſt, is all one as to ſay, that a Malefactor's being convicted, and caſt, and condemned at the Bar by a Judg, and his own Conſcience, ſhould be a Ground for his Hopes of Pardon and Salvation, whereas the Procedure ſo far with him is clean contrary, tho it be indeed a Preparation to quicken him to ſeek for a Pardon, yea and makes him capable of it in this reſpect, that as by our Law none is capable of a legal Pardon, until he be legally condemned, ſo nor is ſuch a Man of a Goſpel-Pardon till he is thus convicted. The proper Work or Effect of ſuch a Humiliation is wholly and altogether to poſſeſs the Soul with the Apprehenſions of no other Objects than what belonged to his unregenerate and unjuſtified Eſtate, and which would argue him ſtill to be in that Eſtate; and the Proſpect of this fills his Mind, having nothing elſe in his Eye: and tho there is and may be ſomewhat of what is ſpiritual in that Sight of his; yet as Chriſt ſaid to him, (John 13. 7.) What I do (to thee) thou knoweſt not now, but thou ſhalt know hereafter; ſo we may ſay of the preſent Work that is upon ſuch a Man, that after ſome Light and Dawn of Faith is broken in upon his Spirit, he may afterwards come to ſee what God was then a doing with him, but not at that preſent when nothing but Darkneſs is upon the Face of that Earth.

It's true alſo that thoſe Words of Chriſt's, Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you Reſt, do contain a particular Invitement to ſuch, rather than any other Sinners, who alſo doth invite all others: and it is a ſpecial Condeſcenſion in Chriſt to ſpeak thus particularly to thoſe that are heavy laden, becauſe of all others they are apt to be diſcouraged: yet ſtill that Weariſomneſs is not a Ground or Foundation for that Act of his firſt believing to build it ſelf upon it for his being ſaved. He that will reſt in the ſight of that, and not come to Chriſt, will ſit down ſhort of Salvation, nor is this a Ground of his Faith, or of his coming to Chriſt. But when ſuch do come to Chriſt out of a ſight and ſenſe of their Burden, yet it is not upon the ſight thereof as a ſpiritual Qualification which ſhould render them more acceptable, but it is the ſight of their Sins with which they are burden'd, and the ſenſe of the Load thereof, and thereupon of their need of Eaſe that drives them to come upon Chriſt's ſo gracious Invitation. They poor Creatures look at nothing but themſelves, and their Sins, and Loads, and are taken up wholly therewith, and with deſire of Eaſe.

That great Maxim of the Apoſtle (Rom. 4. 5. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the Ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteouſneſs) doth confirm all this, and withal doth exclude the ſight of any other Work wrought, or Qualification whatſoever, that may put in to be a Ground to any Man's Faith. Under theſe Words [to him that worketh not] I underſtand all Qualifications, and Holy Diſpoſitions, and Actions, for they are included under the Name of Works, as in oppoſition to Faith, and ſo in Scripture-language inward Works as well as outward. And the Root or Principle inherent in the Soul of either, are accordingly here excluded from having to do either as Ingredients into Juſtification it ſelf, or into a Man's Faith or Believing for Juſtification.

Alſo, 2*dly*. By him that worketh not is there meant, not he that worketh not at all really, but who when he comes to be juſtified, looks at no Work of his, or any thing in or from himſelf, but ſingly believes on him that juſtifies the Ungodly.

And ſo, 3*dly*. Inſtead of looking to any Good in himſelf, he views nothing but the contrary, Ungodlineſs, as in himſelf conſider'd, at that time, and the preſent Buſineſs he is taken up about, namely, to be juſtified, and to believe that he may be ſo. And altho this is ſpoken of them that are in their State godly and holy, for this is a Maxim fetch'd from Abraham's Example after he was converted many Years; even Abraham when he came to be juſtified, in that Point look'd upon himſelf as ungodly, and viewed no Works at all in himſelf, and was in his own Eyes as if he had had none: Yet this Maxim doth much more punctually ſute one that is now coming forth of his natural State, and hath nothing but Ungodlineſs to view. And unto the ſenſe of thoſe things a Man's Humiliation brings ſuch a Man, and therein doth the proper Work of it lie; and our Suppoſition being of one that begins to believe, it cannot be otherwiſe with him.

2. We are now to conſider what poſitive Grounds, or Motiva Fidei, what Motives of Faith, or what Drawings forth of Faith are here; or wherein doth the Hope concerning this thing (as the Scripture ſpeaks) lie? My Aſſertion is this, that it muſt be ſome abſolute Declaration or Promiſe (which are tantamount) about what is ſimply in God and Chriſt as touching our Salvation, the Light of which coming into the Soul is and muſt be the Objectum motivum, the moving Object, the Perſwader (as Heb. 11. ſpeaks) of a Man's Faith to draw in his Soul thus at firſt to cleave to God and Chriſt for a Man's perſonal Salvation in particular, and hereon his Faith is built. And the Reaſon is evident from what is foregone; for if no preſent or precedent Qualification in ſuch a Soul can prove an effectual Perſwaſive or Incourager in part or whole, as a Condition or Qualification in the Perſon, then it muſt remain that what is abſolutely declared to be in God and Chriſt, without reſpect to ſuch Conditions as firſt wrought, muſt be the Ground and Objectum motivum of his Faith.

Object. But ſome will here ſay, A Promiſe that mentions the Condition of Faith it ſelf is a ſufficient and obvious Ground to draw on Faith at firſt, which is uſually ſet forth in this Syllogiſm, Whoſoever believeth on him (meaning Chriſt) ſhall never periſh: But I believe, ſaith the Soul, therefore I ſhall not periſh. And is not this a conditional Promiſe (will they ſay) which a Man may at firſt cloſe with? and thus to cloſe with ſuch a Promiſe in the former way of ſuch a Syllogiſm Men uſually are taught.

Anſw. An Anſwer unto this I return, firſt in general, that when I exclude conditional Promiſes from having an Influence into our firſt Act of Believing, my Intention is not, nor can it ſo be underſtood as to exclude our believing it ſelf from being a neceſſary requiſite Qualification, Condition, (call it what you will) for I have already ſuppoſed it abſolutely neceſſary to our being eſtated into the actual and perſonal Poſſeſſion of thoſe good things in thoſe Promiſes or Declarations which I call Abſolute. Yea, my very Queſtion, and the State thereof, as I have propoſed it, preſuppoſes ſo much, and takes it for granted, for it is queried with what Faith a Soul is to cloſe with ſuch a Promiſe? So as my Inquiſition runs after this, whether ſuch abſolute Promiſes be not a proper Object of Faith which indeed is required neceſſarily to our inſtating into Salvation? And whether thoſe Promiſes be not propoſed with an Intention in the Scriptures as ſuch? My Search is after an Object of Faith, what it is, and on what Inducement a Man doth ſo believe, or what is the Object of that Faith: every Act muſt have an Object, and ſo juſtifying Faith muſt have ſo too, and what that muſt be is my Inqueſt. And my Affirmation is, that abſolute Declarations of God and Chriſt, (in the Promiſes and otherwiſe) as Saviour and Juſtifier, are the proper Object of ſuch a Faith. And therefore when I exclude all conditional Promiſes, my Excluſion in this Argument only is of a conditional Promiſe that ſhould be the Object of that firſt Faith, as that which the Soul firſt viewing to be in it ſelf already wrought, ſhould thereby be heartned and perſwaded to begin to believe on God and Chriſt for its perſonal Salvation. The meaning of that Promiſe, Whoever believeth on him ſhall be ſaved, is but to ſhew that an Act of Believing is abſolutely and neceſſarily required to be put forth by him that will come to be Partaker of that Salvation. But ſtill this will remain firm and indubitate, that it is thoſe abſolute Promiſes or Declarations that are the Objects or Foundation, and ſole Ground of that Act of Believing; and ſo abſolute Promiſes are the Objects of Faith, as the conditional Act whereby we are to be eſtated into the Poſſeſſion of thoſe Promiſes: So as this Objection is no Prejudice to my Aſſertion, it touches it not. More ſummarily take my Aſſertion, thus it is: Not that thoſe abſolute Promiſes (objectively ſuch) require not Faith in us e're we be Partakers of the Salvation in them, for that were to ſay that God ſaves his Elect abſolutely, without requiring any thing to be wrought in them, which Senſe we have before abhorr'd; but the meaning is, that they require not any intervening Condition unto Faith it ſelf, upon the ſight of which as a Ground-work Faith ſhould come to lay hold upon them, but they are expoſed barely and nakedly unto Faith as Objects to be laid hold upon (that is, God and Chriſt in them) for our Salvation, ſo as tho thoſe Promiſes (whoever believes, &c.) and the like, in which Faith is mention'd, are but conditionally in this Senſe that they hold forth an Act on our Part to be put forth as that without which no Man ſhall obtain Salvation, yea, by which he is inſtated into it; yet let the whole Scripture be ſearched, and there is not, nor can there be any Inſtance brought of Promiſes that do mention the Condition of Believing, wherein a preceding Condition is firſt mention'd as that which muſt firſt be ſeen and viewed by the Perſon (who is to believe) to be in himſelf, and which he ſhould build his firſt Act of Believing upon: And in the Argument we have in hand, as hath been ſtated, that only can be call'd a Condition which is a Condition to Believing it ſelf, and which is ſuppoſed to be propounded to that end, that Faith ſeeing ſuch and ſuch Qualifications wrought in the Soul, ſhould thereupon be induced to believe, ſo as that Condition ſhould be an Evidence to him to take or challenge that Promiſe as his own, and thereby belonging to him, as if he had been perſonally named. Such Qualifications I find ſet out indeed in Promiſes for the Faith of Aſſurance, after a Soul's firſt having believed, as being Signs of a Man's being in the Faith, and of his being juſtified by his Faith foregone. But no ſuch Qualifications can be or ought to be built upon by one that comes firſt to Chriſt, or ought to be Ingredients to his firſt Act of Juſtifying Faith, nor indeed to any Act of true pure Juſtifying Faith as ſuch: for that were to make what is in our ſelves after Faith to be the Foundation of it, and to mingle with it, and to make the firſt Act of Faith to be aſſurance that I am in the State of Grace already, and thereupon I do believe that I am ſaved and juſtified.

This Aſſertion our later and more knowing Divines have more generally declined, which yet the Papiſts would impoſe upon us Proteſtants, as an Abſurdity generally maintained by us, whenas 'tis the Lutherans only that do at this day affirm the Act of Juſtifying Faith to be an aſſured Perſwaſion that our Sins are pardoned.

I have often therefore reflected upon the Application of ſuch like Promiſes, Whoſoever believes, ſhall be ſaved; as it is ordinarily formed up into this Syllogiſm, Whoever believeth hath, &c. but I believe, therefore I have eternal Life. I have often reflected upon it, as fearing leſt that this Aſſumption, but I believe, out of which they fetch a Concluſion of Aſſurance, therefore I have eternal Life, be not ſo well underſtood, but miſtaken by many to be the firſt Act of Juſtifying Faith.

I would therefore in the ſecond Place examine into what Act of Faith or Belief that Application of Faith in the Aſſumption, in the Syllogiſm but I believe, is to be reſolved into.

1. Firſt the moſt Judicious do take the meaning of that, but I believe, to be only this; I ſeeing and finding by Experience with my ſelf that I have a true Faith wrought in me, and ſuch a Faith as the Scripture deſcribes to be true and unfeigned, therefore I apply that Promiſe, whoever believes, &c. with an Aſſurance to my ſelf, which is the Concluſion. And this indeed I take to be the moſt proper Senſe and Mind hereof, as it comes in that Syllogiſm, that can be given of it, and, ſo underſtood, it is not to be diſallowed. And I find it in that Senſe to be interpreted by our greateſt Divines; but then let me give this Animadverſion upon it, that ſo underſtood, it cannot be that firſt Act of Juſtifying which an humbled Sinner doth put forth, (which is the Point we ſeek for) nor can this be the genuine Act whereby the Sinner is juſtified, and ſo not the Act of Juſtifying Faith it ſelf; and the Reaſon is undeniable, becauſe this Believing is indeed but the Sight and Experience of a former, foregone, or forepaſſed Act of Faith, which the Soul muſt have firſt put forth. It is that which in this Senſe given, is the Object of his Aſſumption, but I believe, and ſo we are ſtill to ſeek as much as at firſt, and put to a new Inquiry what that firſt formal Act of Believing was, and what it ſhould be; for to be ſure this, but I believe, is and muſt needs be another Act than that firſt was, yea and of another kind. Firſt, it is another Act, for it is an Act of Faith after another, namely a former; nor is it a mere repeating or renewal of the firſt Act, but a ſight of that other which was the firſt Act thereby expreſſed, yea and is founded upon the Intuition of the firſt, in the Strength of which Intuition the Soul ſays, but I believe. It's a ſecondary and after-Act ariſing upon a firſt. Secondly, it is another kind of Act, for it is a reflex Act of the Mind upon its own Act, but juſtifying Faith is a direct Act on Chriſt. And again, it is an Act of another kind, for my ſeeing I believe is an Act of Experience, which hath Sight and Senſe in it of what is in a Man's ſelf; whereas the firſt Act of Faith muſt be a mere pure Act of Faith, and not of Sight. And ſo, Thirdly, they differ in their Objects; for the Object of my ſeeing I believe is my own Believing; but the Object of my Faith at firſt, when I began to believe, was and muſt be God and Chriſt as the Objects, John* 3. 16. *Whoever believes on him hath everlaſting Life.

2. Others have apprehended the meaning of this, I believe, to be a preſent Act of Aſſurance that I am juſtified, (as ſuppoſing that Faith of Aſſurance hath for its Object, I am juſtified) and ſo that very firſt Act to be the Condition of the Covenant. This Opinion differs from the former, for in the Syllogiſm before, it is the Act of Aſſurance that I am ſaved, which made the Concluſion and the Senſe that I believe is ſeeing and finding I put forth ſuch an Act. But this ſecond Senſe cannot ſtand.

For, 1*ſt*. In ſuch a Syllogiſm, Whoever believes, ſhall be ſaved; but I believe, therefore I ſhall be ſaved: This but I believe, if it be underſtood of Aſſurance, doth make the minor Propoſition all one with the Concluſion it ſelf.

2*dly*. That actual Juſtification which a Sinner hath on God's part through Juſtifying Faith, is a Conſequence of that Faith, or follows or enſues upon that ſpecial Act of Faith, which is properly ſtiled Juſtifying Faith put forth on our part. And that God endows a Soul with his Juſtification upon that Act, and not after this, the Scriptures do expreſly affirm; Acts 10. 43. To him gave all the Prophets witneſs, that through his Name whoſoever believeth in him ſhall receive Remiſſion of Sins. This receiving Remiſſion of Sin is made the End or Iſſue of our Believing. Thus alſo, Acts 16. 30, 31. What ſhall we do to be ſaved? or, put into a State of Salvation? Believe on the Lord Jeſus (ſays the Apoſtle) and thou ſhalt be ſaved. Which at preſent thou art not, until thou doſt believe, nor until thou believeſt ſhalt be; but on the contrary, without Believing, a Man remains in a State of Condemnation, according to what our Saviour had declared; He that believeth not, is condemn'd already. The like you have in John 8. 24. All which Places, and many other, might be alledged to ſpeak, that as an actual Juſtification there is obtained and received, ſo to be beſtowed upon Believing with ſuch a Faith, which the Scripture therefore calls Juſtifying, and a Man is therefore required thus to believe, to that end that he may obtain and receive it. This being an aſſured Truth, it will then follow, that not only Faith of Aſſurance that my Sins are forgiven, is not an eſſential ſpecifical Act of Juſtifying Faith as ſuch, but that it is impoſſible it ſhould be ſuch; yea, and that it is a Contradiction, that that Act of Faith whereby we believe our ſelves juſtified, ſhould be one and the ſame individual Act with that which is called Juſtifying Faith, but eſpecially it is a Contradiction that this ſhould be one and the ſame Faith with the firſt Act of Faith. And, Firſt, the Impoſſibility of it appears in this, that that Faith whereby a Man is really and actually juſtified, is in order of Nature firſt, and muſt be ſuppoſed firſt before a Man be juſtified, becauſe thereupon or therewith it is that God doth juſtify him, and endow him with that Benefit, Rom. 5. And this is our Juſtification, which is according to the Rule of the Word which we have by Faith, and which God will proceed by at the laſt Day, and without which he will not own any Man to be juſtified and ſaved. But that other Act of Faith of Aſſurance, whereby I believe, or apprehend that I am juſtified, muſt neceſſarily firſt ſuppoſe this Act of Juſtification on God's part, according to the Rules of his Word, to have been firſt paſſed upon a Man, and therefore muſt ſuppoſe alſo that he hath believed already; and by a former Act of Faith hath obtained Juſtification, which till then he had not, but remained in a State of Condemnation. Which firſt Act of Believing muſt therefore be ſuch a Believing with an Aim and End that I may be ſaved and juſtified, and that my Sins may be remitted in ſuch a manner as hitherto they have not been remitted, and without which Faith I muſt die in my Sins, periſh eternally, for ſo the Word of God which God will proceed by every where tells me. And therefore it is that a Sinner that firſt believes (as ever after alſo) doth apprehend ſuch a Neceſſity of Believing, as was ſaid, and doth at firſt therefore neceſſarily look on, and hath in his Eye that Juſtification that is according to the Rules of his Word, and which he aims at as upon a thing to be obtained, and which he is to receive, and ſo to be a thing to come upon his Believing; which was evidently the Caſe of the Jailor, and upon thoſe terms required of him by the Apoſtle. Whereas in the other Act of Faith of Aſſurance, whereby a Man believes and apprehends that his Sins are forgiven, he within that Act doth ſuppoſe and look upon his Juſtification as a thing obtained, and therefore it is impoſſible that the firſt Act of Believing, (whereby a Man is juſtified, and whereof Juſtification is a Conſequence) and that I am juſtified, ſhould be one and the ſame individual Act, but they are neceſſarily two, not only in Order of Nature, but in Time, one before the other. Yea, it would be a vain Confidence, nay a Falſhood, for any Man to believe with his firſt Act of Faith which he puts forth that he is juſtified; for he cannot truly and juſtly believe it until he be juſtified. A thing muſt firſt be and actually exiſt e're it can be apprehended, or elſe it is but Fancy to him that believes it, unleſs by way of Prophecy.

(2.) Upon the ſame or the like Ground it is no leſs than an apparent Contradiction, that I ſhould by my firſt Act of Faith believe that I may be juſtified, and withal to be firſt juſtified thereby, and by the ſame individual Act believe I am juſtified from the ſame Sins, for that would make one and the ſame Act, and one and the ſame Object of that Act, to be at once an Antecedent and a Conſequent of it ſelf, to go before it ſelf, and to follow after it ſelf, which to me are a Contradiction.

1. The Object, namely, Juſtification, ſhould according to this Opinion be beſtowed upon a Man before he can believe he hath it; and muſt actually exiſt, when yet Juſtifying Faith is declared to be that Act upon which, and by which Juſtification is beſtowed upon us, and firſt comes to be exiſtent, which is a Contradiction in one and the ſame Object.

2. The Act of Faith if it ſhould be exercis'd and have a Tendency upon both theſe Objects at once, muſt be before and alſo after it ſelf; for all Acts are diverſified by their Objects, and their Tendency thereunto. Now then to affirm the firſt (or indeed any) Act of Faith juſtifying, to be a Belief that a Man is juſtified, is to make Juſtification the Antecedent to ſuch a Faith; for a thing muſt be before we believe it to be. And then on the other hand, that the firſt Act ſhould be the Act whereby a Man is juſtified, neceſſarily makes Juſtification the Conſequent of its Faith, and therefore theſe two would be a Contradiction, and cannot conſiſt together.

But it may be objected, That there is a Juſtification in God's Heart and Intention from all Eternity, and in Chriſt repreſentatively dying and riſing as a common Perſon, before a Man believes; and ſo Faith is but to believe that which is already extant, and a Man's Juſtification by Faith is but a Juſtification in foro Conſcientiæ.

Anſw. It's ſufficient to ſay, Let that Juſtification or Salvation after a Man believes be what it will, yet to be ſure it benefits no Man without that Juſtification of Application to his Perſon, as I may call it: for that, which brings a Perſon into a State of Juſtification, according to the Rules of the Word, is done by God upon Believing, and until then a Man remains under Condemnation, and may truly ſay, God will not, nor cannot own him to be a juſtified Perſon, no not in his Court, the open Court which he will keep and proceed by at latter Day, according to the Rules of which he will then reckon a Man to be under Condemnation whilſt he was an Unbeliever. And if a Man had died in that Unbelief, he muſt have condemned him, as he doth all other Unbelievers that ſhall then appear before him; For ſhall not the Judg of all the World do right? Gen. 18. God will not look upon him as juſtified from all Eternity, but as one that remains under Unbelief, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks. He will not alledg of any that he had juſtified him from Eternity, and therefore ſave him, for his own declared Word (which is the Rule he judges by) would interpoſe and cauſe him ſo to pronounce and condemn that Perſon that is under Unbelief: And Chriſt hath ſufficiently informed us in what he ſays, John 12.48. The Word that I have ſpoken, the ſame ſhall judg you at latter Day. And he ſpeaks it upon occaſion of the very thing in hand; ver. 46. Whoſoever believes in me, ſhall not abide in Darkneſs. Thus he ſpeaks affirmatively; And he that believes not on me, there is one that judgeth him, ver. 47, 48. Thus he ſpeaks negatively: And who is that that will judg him? God. And by what will he judg him? Even by this very Word that Chriſt had ſpoken, ver. 48. And indeed that Juſtification, according to the Rules of God's Word, is that which is the Aim and Drift of a humbled Sinner, which he makes after, for it is that which he hears and underſtands, God calling upon him in his Word for to ſeek it; Believe, and thou ſhalt be ſaved. In anſwer hereunto the Soul ſays, Lord, I believe that I may be ſaved: and it is God according to his Word that he hath to deal withal herein.

It is in vain to ſay, I am juſtified by Faith only in reſpect to the Court of mine own Conſcience. It is in vain to ſay that a Man's Apprehenſion and Faith that he was juſtified from Eternity, is all that Juſtification which the Scripture ſo conſtantly ſpeaks of to be by and upon Believing: for according to that Opinion a Man was as much juſtified before he believed as after, and his Faith would add nothing new to his State but only his own Apprehenſion of it; whereas the Scripture ſpeaks of a Man's Juſtification by Faith as of a real thing, and as a thing done anew: for being juſtified by Faith firſt we have then Peace with God, and Peace with God is that Juſtification which is in a Man's own Conſcience, which there is made a Fruit of Juſtification by Faith firſt, and whereof Faith is alſo firſt the Inſtrument. And we have Acceſs by Faith into this Grace wherein we ſtand, ſo that we are actually put into the State of Grace before God, conſidered as he is the Judg of all Men, and thereupon we come to rejoice in hope of the Glory of God. But yet how far a Believer wanting Aſſurance, or one that begins to believe, may make uſe of God's eternal Purpoſes as they are declared in the Word, that he will juſtify Sinners of the Sons of Men; and how far ſuch a one may urge and plead this as a Motive which God hath declared to have been in his own Heart, upon which he is moved to juſtify us in time; and how far a Soul may plead, that therefore God would be pleaſed accordingly thereunto to exert and put forth this Juſtification of Application, or indeed now actually to give it, which ſuch a Soul ſeeks for as yet to come, and cometh unto God for to obtain it: How far I ſay the Conſideration of theſe Decrees or Purpoſes indefinitely made will promote and help forward ſuch a one's Faith, this is matter of another Diſcuſſion; but in the mean while what hath been at the preſent ſaid may ſerve for an Anſwer to the aforeſaid Objection.

Theſe things having been thus on the Negative cleared, both in ſhewing that no prerequiſite Condition in us is the Object or Ground for the firſt Act of Faith, as alſo that that Act is not nor cannot be an Aſſurance of our being juſtified: It comes next to be treated of Affirmatively, what that firſt Act of Faith Juſtifying ſhould then be, both as to the Object of it, as alſo for the kind of the Act, &c. and then after that I ſhall ſhew, that this Act of Faith is and may be ſuted to the firſt ſort of Promiſes of Salvation which I have termed abſolute, and how it may and is to apply it ſelf unto them, which is the deſigned Iſſue I drive all unto.

I ſhall therefore propoſe and purſue the Senſe, which may rightly be and is the Mind of one that doth now firſt ſet himſelf to believe: but I muſt give this Caution concerning it, that it is not to be underſtood as any part of that forementioned Syllogiſm, nor to be made the minor of it in thoſe terms, but I believe; and yet is a true Application of thoſe Promiſes foremention'd, Whoever believes ſhall be ſaved: For there is this Difference between this Senſe and the two former, and the Drift of the forementioned Syllogiſm formed up by Divines on the behalf of Chriſtians that have already believed, which is made for, and ſerves to expreſs their Aſſurance in which it ends; for the Soul thereupon infers, therefore I ſhall be ſaved. But this Expreſſion, I believe, expreſſes what he doth, and what he attempts to do, and doth not at laſt terminate it ſelf upon its own Act of Believing as the other did, but ſpends its Intention wholly upon God and Chriſt, who are to be the Juſtifiers of him, to whom he therefore hath recourſe for his Juſtification. This firſt Act of Believing then is not a ſtudying of, or Reflection upon its own Act, as ſeeing that he believes; but it is a doing the thing in a direct manner. He believes he doth the thing by a direct Act, and carries the Soul forth of it ſelf unto thoſe who are his Judges, and to be the Juſtifiers of him, and doth this in a Correſpondency and an immediate Anſwer or Obedience unto that Faith the Promiſes call for, which directs him to, and requires of him to believe. Now then affirmatively to ſet forth this direct Act of Juſtifying Faith as properly ſuch, in order to clear how abſolute Declarations or Promiſes about Salvation do ſute it, and it reciprocally ſuteth them, let us fully examine and conſider theſe three things about it.

1. What is the proper Object of ſuch an Act.
2. What kind of Act it is that he then may put forth.
3. What is the Aim and Drift of him in his Faith's acting upon that or theſe Objects.

Which three do comprehend, as I take it, all that belongs to the Subſtance of that Act of Believing: for as to the Adjuncts of it, that it be unfeigned Faith, ſpiritual Faith, and that all theſe are in a ſpiritual manner to be put forth, all theſe are ſuppoſed in all true Faith; but it is the Subſtantialneſs of the Act which we now inquire into.

The Object of ſuch a Faith is God and Chriſt, according to what they have declared themſelves to be, conſider'd as in relation to their ſaving and juſtifying of the Sons of Men; God conſider'd as declared to be Juſtifier of Sinners, and Chriſt as a Saviour; theſe two, or either of them believed as ſuch, come all to one, as to our obtaining of Salvation on either: which I obſerve as from many other Inſtances, ſo in that of the Jailor, Acts 16. (which I have had and ſhall have occaſion often to have recourſe unto) for here, as the Apoſtle had at firſt propounded Jeſus Chriſt to him as a Saviour, (Believe on the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved, ver. 34.) yet when actual Believing unto Salvation comes to be ſpoken of, (ver. 36.) it is only mention'd that he believed in God: For whilſt we believe on the one in a more diſtinct manner, we know the Intereſt that either have in our Salvation, and it is interpreted that we believe in both; and the Believing on the one in ſo explicite a manner is ſo far from excluding the other implied by it, as in conceſſo it involves both, and the Soul knowing the Intereſt of both, his Faith may be really reſolved into a Faith of both, or either of them.

I ſhall therefore give Inſtances of God and Chriſt apart, being ſet forth in the Promiſes to our Faith.

1. Chriſt under the ſimple and abſolute Conſideration of being a Saviour, is repreſented to us in the Promiſes as the Object of our Faith; Iſa. 45. 22. Look unto me, and be ye ſaved all the ends of the Earth: for I am God, and there is none elſe. Chriſt is here ſpoken of, as appears from what follows in ver. 23. He is ſet forth as the only Saviour. There is no God elſe beſides me, (ſays he) a juſt God and a Saviour. And we ſee him as ſuch nakedly propos'd to our Faith, as theſe Words ſhew, Look unto me, &c. We have a Place parallel to this in the New Teſtament; John 6. 40. And this is the Will of him that ſent me, that every one which ſeeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlaſting Life: and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. He that ſeeth the Son, i. e. with a ſpiritual Light, ſo as to believe on him. Theſe are Acts purely acting upon him as he is the Chriſt and a Saviour: and the believing on that Object requires no Conditions firſt to be look'd at by him that is to believe. And Chriſt had propoſed himſelf before in like manner, as lift up on the Croſs and crucified, (and thereby being become a Saviour) as the naked Object for Faith to look at; John 3. 14, 15. And as Moſes lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderneſs, even ſo muſt the Son of Man be lifted up: That whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have eternal Life. We have another Inſtance of his being declar'd and ſet forth as a Saviour, 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the World to ſave Sinners, of whom I am chief. The Words are a bare Propoſal of him, wherein he is ſet forth as the immediate Object to a Sinner's Faith. His being a Saviour, and his Intent to ſave Sinners of this World, (not Devils) is nakedly declar'd ſimply ſo conſider'd. He terms the Manifeſtation of Chriſt ὁ πιστὸς λόγος, a faithful Saying, ſpeaking of that Faithfulneſs upon which Faith may build; for unto Faith doth Faithfulneſs relate as an Object fitted for it, holding on this Chriſt as a ſure Foundation for Faith; 1 Pet. 2. 6. Wherefore alſo it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief Corner-ſtone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him, ſhall not be confounded. And the Apoſtle Paul in that Text (1 Tim. 1. 15.) aſſerts this faithful Saying to be worthy of all Acceptation. He means that it deſerves hearty Entertainment, and receiving by Faith. And of this Faith on Chriſt the Apoſtle had propoſed himſelf an Example in the preceding ver. 14. ſo that this faithful Saying had been the Ground of his own Faith.

2. God the Father as a Juſtifier of Men ungodly, is declar'd and ſet forth as the Object of a Sinner's Faith; Rom. 4. 5. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the Ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteouſneſs. It is a bare and abſolute Declaration of him what a God he is in and of himſelf in juſtifying, and he is propoſed as abſolute as abſolute can be, in oppoſition unto all or any prerequiſite Qualification which the Perſon to be juſtified ſhould view in himſelf, collaterally to induce him to believe.

1ſt. The juſtified Perſon, or the Subject, is the Ungodly; and God is ſet forth by this Attribution, that he is a God who juſtifies the Ungodly.

2dly. Therefore the Man is ungodly in the Perſon's Eye who juſtifies. God looks on him as ungodly, as one without any Work, or Diſpoſition, or Qualification, which he reſpects in juſtifying.

3dly. The Perſon who comes to be juſtified is ungodly in his own Thoughts and Apprehenſions of himſelf, as the foregoing Words, viz. he that worketh not, but be- lieveth, &c. do ſhew. The meaning is, he is ſuch an one who looks at no Work in himſelf, on the account of which he ſhould be juſtified, or for which, and upon which he might believe that he ſhall be juſtified. Yea he is one who views nothing but the contrary, viz. mere Ungodlineſs in himſelf, for which he ſhould be condemned. It is true indeed that an Act of Believing is requir'd of him, but that is but now a putting forth by him, and therefore he builds not upon any former Act of Faith, for all in himſelf is in view nothing but Ungodlineſs, and ſo there is an utter want even of Faith it ſelf as any way ſeen by him to induce him to believe on God. Hence then it is that he believes on God nakedly, as viewed to be a Juſtifier of Men ungodly, and it is under that Conſideration he believes on him. And this is the Faith which is imputed for Righteouſneſs, that noble and heroick pure Faith which gives Glory to God. And herein his Heart in Believing anſwers unto God's Heart in Saving. For look as God doth not chuſe him unto Salvation upon Faith foreſeen, or good Works foreſeen: ſo nor doth the Soul believe in God upon Works foreſeen, or Faith foreſeen. Such a firſt Choice of us by God upon the Foreſight of our Faith and Working would derogate from the Freeneſs of that Grace which is in his Heart; Rom. 11. 6. And if by Grace, then is it no more of Works: otherwiſe Grace is no more Grace. But if it be of Works, then is it no more Grace: otherwiſe Work is no more Work. That it is ſpoken of Election appears by ver. 5. Even ſo then at this preſent time alſo there is a Remnant according to the Election of Grace. God then looks into his own Heart only for that which ſhould move him to do this. And yet withal it muſt be ſaid, that he actually ſaves no Man without Faith. As God thus looks in Election at no Faith or Works in us; ſo the Soul's firſt Act of believing knows not, nor looks at any in his own Heart to move or induce him to believe on God, but the Soul only looks at what is in God's Heart as declar'd in the Promiſes, and at his ſole Free Grace in Juſtifying: and yet he knows withal that Faith is requiſite that he may be juſtified, and that without it all the Grace which is in God's Heart would never juſtify nor ſave him, whilſt yet he hath nothing in his Eye view'd in himſelf either directly or collaterally to move him to believe. He hath nothing which either with a direct or ſquint Eye he ſhould conſider, but only and merely God as juſtifying.

We have in the Old Teſtament a Parallel to this Rom. 4. 5. of God's being a Juſtifier of the Ungodly purely conſider'd; Iſa. 43. 25, 26. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy Tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and will not remember thy Sins. Put me in remembrance: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayſt be juſtified. This Promiſe Mr. Bulkly acknowledgeth to be an abſolute Promiſe, as ſuch are thoſe wherein God ſays I will do thus or thus for mine own ſake. And that it is parallel to this Text, Rom. 4. 5. is evident:

1. Becauſe it is ſpoken of God as a Juſtifier both in ver. 25. where he ſays, I am he who blotteth out Tranſgreſſions, and in ver. 26. where Juſtification is expreſly mention'd.

2. He inſtructs the Perſons who are to be juſtified to apprehend their own utter Ungodlineſs; ver. 22, 23, 24. But thou haſt not called upon me, O Jacob, but thou haſt been weary of me, O Iſrael. Thou haſt not brought me the ſmall Cattel of thy Burnt-offerings, neither haſt thou honoured me with thy Sacrifices; I have not cauſed thee to ſerve with an Offering, nor wearied thee with Incenſe. Thou haſt bought me no ſweet Cane with Money, neither haſt thou filled me with the Fat of thy Sacrifices, but thou haſt made me to ſerve with thy Sins, thou haſt wearied me with thine Iniquities.

3. Which when God had ſaid he ſets forth himſelf barely, nakedly, and abſolutely, and as alone conſider'd in what is in himſelf, as the Juſtifier of them. For this is imported by thoſe Words, ver. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy Tranſgreſſions. Whereby he emphatically calls in all the Thoughts and Intentions of their Minds to be firſt on himſelf, as he is in himſelf and of himſelf a God pardoning Sins, and juſtifying their Perſons, as the Apoſtle with the like Emphaſis expreſſeth it, when he ſpeaks of him as juſtifying the Ungodly.

4. God tells us, that he blots out Tranſgreſſions for his own Name's ſake, and for that alone, and that he doth it upon no other Motives or Ground but only what is in his own Heart. That he doth it only for the ſake of that great Name of his, utter'd and proclaim'd on purpoſe (Exod. 34.) to ſhew what inwardly moves him to be God pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin. I, even I (ſays God) who am Jehova hovah gracious, merciful, abundant in Kindneſs and Truth, pardoning Iniquity, &c. do blot out your Tranſgreſſions for this mine own Name's ſake.

I remember that Zanchy ſays, that that Text, Exod. 34. 7. is alſo ſpoken of Chriſt who is God with God, and the Juſtifier of us alſo for his own ſake, and Righteouſneſs ſake. However, according to my former Rule given, that God in Chriſt is always to be underſtood, Chriſt muſt be taken in, as the Perſon in whom, and in whoſe Righteouſneſs God juſtifies. So that when I ſay that God, and what is in God alone repreſented in the Promiſes, is the Object of Faith, it is to be underſtood only in oppoſition unto what is in us, and not as oppoſed to Chriſt, who is Copartner with God in this his Glory, and who alſo was his Counſellor: and in like manner, God is not excluded when we ſpeak of Faith in Chriſt alone.

Laſtly; To fix their Hearts on himſelf alone when they would ſeek to be juſtified, he adds in that Iſa. 43. 26. Put me in remembrance: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayſt be juſtified. As if he ſhould ſay, if you can think of any other way of being juſtified than only me, tell me of it, but indeed there is none.

And theſe and ſuch I call, 1. Declarations and Promiſes, for theſe two in this Matter come all to one as to our Purpoſe. And we uſe that Expreſſion of God and Chriſt's being declar'd and ſet forth as the Objects of Faith, becauſe it agrees with thoſe Phraſes uſed by the Apoſtle to the ſame purpoſe, (as was obſerv'd) Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt. Here both God and Chriſt are mention'd as the Cauſes of our Juſtification. He firſt ſpeaks of Chriſt, ver. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth, (ſays he) viz. as an Object of our Faith as Juſtifying, to be a Propitiation through Faith in his Blood. And then he ſpeaks of God the Father in thoſe Words; To declare his Righteouſneſs for the Remiſſion of Sins that are paſt, through the Forbearance of God. He means the Righteouſneſs of God juſtifying, which he again repeats, ver. 26. To declare, I ſay, at this time his Righteouſneſs; that he might be juſt, and the Juſtifier of him which believeth in Jeſus.

2. I call them abſolute Declarations and Promiſes, becauſe as they are the propounded Objects of Faith in this matter of Juſtification, ſo they are ſimply and abſolutely to be viewed by us, and no Conditions or Qualifications are to be conſider'd in us, as upon the Intuition of which we ſhould come to believe in them.

And now give me leave to caſt in my Thoughts concerning that great Convert Saul: for which if you will not take what follows as Proofs, yet admit them as Conjectures.

(1.) His firſt ſaving Faith on Chriſt was but a bare Act of Recumbency at his firſt Converſion. So that tho he ſaw Chriſt in Heaven appearing to him, yet this Sight at that Inſtant wrought not a ſaving Act of Faith: but Chriſt left that for his Spirit to work. The Viſion ſtunn'd him indeed, and put a ſtop to his Career, and convinced him (as great Miracles did others) that he was the Meſſiah whom he had perſecuted. But the true and thorow Work was done within his own Soul, when he was retir'd alone with God and Chriſt. And my Reaſon why he had not by that Viſion a true ſaving Faith, is, becauſe he makes his having known Chriſt viſibly with his bodily Eyes to be a not knowing him, if compar'd with the Knowledg which is the Effect of the new Creature; 2 Cor. 5. 16, 17. Wherefore henceforth know we no Man after the Fleſh: yea, tho we have known Chriſt after the Fleſh, yet now henceforth know we him no more. Therefore if any Man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature: old things are paſt away, behold, all things are become new. Which Scripture ſome Interpreters have applied to this very thing. And the ſame is evident alſo by this chief Reaſon, inaſmuch as he had that Conviction (which firſt aſtoniſh'd him) by the Law, which was preparative to an Act of ſaving Faith wrought in him after, for ſo himſelf gives the Account, Rom. 7. 7. where he ſays that he had not known Sin but by the Law. The Phariſees Principle was, that Luſt was no Sin, and therefore he ſays, (ver. 9.) I was alive without the Law once, viz. before my Converſion, while a Phariſee; but when the Commandment came in the true Light of it, Sin reviv'd in my Conſcience, (ſays he) and I died. He then ſaw himſelf in a State of Death, which wrought a Death in the Apprehenſion of his Soul; Rom. 7. 10. And the Commandment which was ordained to Life, I found to be unto Death. His meaning is, that that Law which he verily thought he ſhould live by, was found by him unto his utter Confuſion to be unto Death. And this Apoſtle then in the beginnings ginnings of his Converſion lying under ſuch Apprehenſions with that great Account of Sins coming in withal, may very well be thought to have no mind to eat or drink, but to ſpend his time in humbling himſelf under the mighty Hand of God. And then if we bring it to that Account which he gives of the Work of Faith in him, (Gal. 2. 15, 16.) he there including himſelf with the reſt of the Chriſtian Jews, yea and with his Fellow-Apoſtles, it ſhews that they altogether with him had come in but with ſuch a Faith. And it is certain that thoſe Converts during John the Baptiſt's and our Saviour's time, had but a Faith of Recumbence, for they receiv'd not the Holy Ghoſt as a Comforter, and as an Aſſurer till after the Aſcenſion. And it was they who were the Poor, the Meek, the Captives, &c. to whom Chriſt at firſt preach'd; Mat. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4. and who were the weary, and heavy laden, Mat. 11. 28, 29. and who were wrought upon by John the Baptiſt's Miniſtry, ver. 12. and then they cleaved to Chriſt: Whither ſhall we go? (ſaid they) with thee are the Words of eternal Life, John 6. 68. They had Aſſurance that he was the Meſſiah. And the Faith that Paul and the other Apoſtles were juſtified by, was their believing on Chriſt that they might be juſtified, (the Words in Gal. 2. 15, 16. are expreſs) and not a believing that they were juſtified already, and therefore it was not an Act of Aſſurance.

(2.) My 2*d* Reaſon is from the Narrative of his Converſion, Acts 9. It is firſt ſaid that he did not eat nor drink for three Days, ver. 9. Now that he was faſting all that while, and neither ate nor drank, ſhews his humbled Condition, and that his Sins came in upon him all that time. And that Conviction you read him mention of himſelf, (Gal. 2.) that by the Works of the Law he could not be juſtified, which Conviction in him was, as it is in us now, preparatory to Faith in Chriſt.

(3.) And yet that Chriſt ſhould ſay of him, Behold he prayeth, (ver. 11.) doth as clearly argue that he had true juſtifying Faith begun, ſuch, viz. as (Gal. 2. 16.) he mentions. The firſt Part exactly agrees with his Relation, Rom. 7. And withal the Proofs that he had ſaving Faith then is, that he pray'd, and ſo pray'd, as Chriſt gives an eminent ſignal Approbation, and ſo an Acceptation of it with a behold to it, Behold, he prayeth. And how ſhall they call on him on whom they have not believed? ſays himſelf afterward, Rom. 10. 14. and yet both his Faith and Prayer in Faith ſeems not to have been an Aſſurance, for it had not riſen up unto that yet, and my Reaſons for it are:

1*ſt.* That he had not receiv'd the Spirit as a Comforter till Ananias was ſent to him to put his Hands upon him, and to tell him he was a choſen Veſſel unto Chriſt, ver. 15. and therefore Ananias as it would ſeem breaking in upon him, calls him Brother at firſt daſh, ver. 17.

2*dly.* Had he had Aſſurance of Faith before the Coming of Ananias, he would not have continued without eating and drinking ſo long, but would have receiv'd Food to ſtrengthen him, as he did upon his receiving the Holy Ghoſt, ver. 19.

(4.) A Diſtinction of this double Work of Faith of Recumbency firſt, and of perſonal Aſſurance after, you may obſerve in Gal. 2. and that both were in our Apoſtle, that of Recumbency firſt, and then that of Aſſurance expreſs'd afterward, will appear by comparing ver. 16, & 20. together.

1. He had a Faith that he might be juſtified, and a Faith it was upon a Work of Conviction in the firſt place, for it was wrought firſt, and was common to them all.

2. There was Faith of Aſſurance; ver. 20. I am crucified with Chriſt, nevertheleſs I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me; and the Life which I now live in the Fleſh, I live by the Faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me.

The laſt Obſervation is, that it was the indefinite Declaration that Jeſus Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners, and ſo was the Meſſiah which was revealed to him as the Ground of that his firſt Faith of Recumbency, that he might be juſtified, and it was that drew him in. And my Conjecture for it is, (if you will not allow it to be a Proof) that after he had propos'd his Example, (1 Tim. 1. 15.) he commends that faithful Saying, that Chriſt came to ſave Sinners, after the Story of his Converſion that went before, in which he at once propounds his own Example or Pattern of obtaining Mercy, and alſo the very Ground of that his Faith to all that ſhould afterwards believe, as it follows, ver. 16.

Object. But you may ſay, that his Expreſſion, whereof I am chief, argues his Faith to have been Aſſurance.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer, 'tis true that he had now Aſſurance, and ſo could add it, that Chriſt came actually and perſonally to ſave him.

2. Yet his end in doing it was not ſo much to expreſs his Faith as his Sinfulneſs, and thereby to prevent and remove a great Diſcouragement that keeps Souls off from Believing, viz. the Greatneſs of Sins, which in my Example you may ſee (ſays he) is taken away, and ſo is no hindrance at all to Believing. For that the Scope of that Addition centers in that Scripture, 1 Tim. 1. 16. ſhews: Howbeit, for this Cauſe I obtained Mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all Long-ſuffering, for a Pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe on him to Life everlaſting. And therefore ſtill it may remain firm that the Object of his and all Believers Faith at firſt is this Saying or the Subſtance of it, as worthy of all Acceptation, that Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners: which, ſay I, is clearly an abſolute indefinite Declaration in the very Sound of it.

(1.) That both the Work of Humiliation and of Faith wrought in him, were for the Acts and Objects conformable to the Work of Faith in all other Believers, tho the outward Means and other Circumſtances were extraordinary.

(2.) By a Faith of bare Recumbency that we might be juſtified, founded upon an indefinite Promiſe or Declaration, we may likewiſe pray in Faith for Pardon acceptably before Aſſurance obtain'd. Our Faith and Prayer both may be grounded upon no other than an indefinite Promiſe, Declaration and Example; yea and we may from thence be able to plead for the Pardon of the greateſt Sins.

CHAP. IV.

What Act of Faith it is which thoſe that want Aſſurance may exerciſe upon ſuch abſolute Declarations and Promiſes, and of the Sutableneſs between that Act and ſuch Objects.

ALL Acts do receive their Specification or Kind from their Objects and their Tendency thereunto; and ſo we muſt next diſcern the kind of the Actings of thoſe Mens Faith from that (with difference from that other perſonal Aſſurance) by their Sutableneſs unto thoſe their Objects, viz. theſe abſolute Promiſes. In ſuch abſolute Declarations and Promiſes for Salvation there are eminently two things to be attended.

1. The Matter of them, or things contained in them, and abſolutely promiſed or declared, and that are expoſed to be the Object and Aim of Faith.
2. The Tenor of them as they reſpect Perſons.

1*ſt.* The Matter of them promiſed is either Salvation it ſelf, which is expreſſed in thoſe Promiſes of God's pardoning a Man's Sins for his Name's ſake, and of God's being our God, and writing his Law in our Hearts; and his ſaying, I am a Saviour, and there is none beſides me, and many the like. Or there are the Cauſes thereof which do expreſs the Motives moving God thereunto, ſuch as are the Declarations of the Riches of his Mercy and Grace, his free Love, the good Pleaſure of his Will for his Name ſake, &c. Altho theſe in the Matter of them are thus abſolutely declared or promiſed, yet the Tenor of them to Perſons is not univerſal, as if God intended all and every Man in ſuch Promiſes, (as was ſaid) but they are indefinite only and promiſcuous, yet are to be promulged or made known to all. This may ſuffice as to the Object.

Again, 2*dly.* There being two Faculties in the Soul, the Underſtanding and the Will, each of theſe have a proper Acting and Exerciſe of Faith towards God and Chriſt, as they have revealed themſelves in theſe Declarations and Promiſes, that ſo a Soul may obtain the things therein. And we muſt allow even in them that firſt believe, as well as in any other that want Aſſurance, Actings of Faith both in the Underſtanding, and alſo in the Will. For every Man that believes muſt believe with his whole Heart, as the Eunuch, (Acts 10.) and with the Heart Man believeth to Salvation, (Rom. 10.) and that with reſpect towards theſe abſolute Promiſes.

Part I.

(1.) And in the firſt place it muſt be granted that there is both an Aſſurance of Faith in the Underſtanding, and in the Will a firm adhering to the things revealed in the Promiſes. In the Underſtanding there muſt be an Act of Aſſurance, but how? and of what? namely of and about that firſt thing we noted in the Promiſes, viz. the Matter or Things contained in them. And as in reſpect thereunto look as the Promiſes and Declarations are abſolute, Yea and Amen: ſo every Believer muſt have as abſolute an Aſſurance of Faith thereof. As for inſtance, a Soul muſt be aſſured concerning Chriſt, that he is a Saviour, and that there is none beſides him, and that he came into this World with a moſt abſolute Purpoſe to ſave Sinners of Mankind, (for they are only the Dwellers in this World to which he came) which Elogy or Saying the Apoſtle doth therefore propoſe and commend to the Faith of Men as the moſt ſure and faithful Saying that ever was uttered, 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the World to ſave Sinners, of whom I am chief. I ſay, he propoſeth it to be entertained with all Acceptation of Faith, and Aſſent by them, and to be abſolutely believed by them without wavering or doubting. And Chriſt himſelf impoſeth the Faith thereof as eſſentially neceſſary to Salvation; John 8. 24. If ye believe not that I am he, the Meſſiah, or Saviour of the World, (as I have often declar'd my ſelf to be) you ſhall die in your Sins. Thus likewiſe concerning God we muſt abſolutely believe that he is a God of Mercies, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, a Juſtifier of the Ungodly, a God of Pardons, Neh. 9. 17. (ſo it is in the Hebrew.) Theſe things muſt be as verily and indubitably believ'd with full Aſſurance of Underſtanding, (as it is termed, Col. 2. 2.) as that we believe there is a God. For by the ſame Neceſſity that he that comes to God muſt believe that he is, by the ſame parallel of Neceſſity he that cometh to God or Chriſt to be ſaved and juſtified, muſt as abſolutely believe that he is a Juſtifier of the Ungodly. There muſt be fixed likewiſe in every believing Soul a firm Perſwaſion of the full Reſolvedneſs of God's and Chriſt's Will, Purpoſes and Intentions to ſave ſome of the Sons of Men effectually, concerning which there are likewiſe ſo many Teſtimonies and abſolute Declarations in the Word.

Rom. 4. 5.

Laſtly, There is neceſſary a Belief of the infinite Riches of Mercy that are in the Divine Nature, which are as the Sea that feeds and maintains the Springs of thoſe his Purpoſes and Intentions, and the Streams iſſuing from thoſe Springs in overflowing Promiſes with abundant Kindneſs and Truth. And the more the Soul comes to be perſwaded and poſſeſſed of all theſe things, in the aſſurance of Underſtanding, the deeper Foundation is laid, and the ſtronger Hold and Obligation there is upon his Will to draw it to truſt on God for a Man's particular Salvation.

(2.) In the Will there is to be in every Believer a firm and fixed Adherence or cleaving unto God and Chriſt, and unto the good things promiſed by them; Pſal. 63. 8. My Soul cleaveth unto thee; (ſo the Hebrew word is, it being the ſame that is uſed, Deut. 10. 20. and chap. 13. 4.) it is further added, my Soul cleaveth to thee behind. The Meaning is, that when God ſeemed to turn away from him, and to leave him, yet the Soul will not part ſo with him, but takes hold of him tho behind, when yet it cannot ſee his Face and Favour. A Soul that hath Aſſurance, and ſees the Face and Favour of God to ſtand towards him, may be ſaid to cleave unto God before; but when God turns away his Face, that Soul cleaves to him behind, that is, it both will and doth lay hold on him through Adherence of Faith, as it reſolves never to leave and forſake him, however he ſhould ſeem to deal with it. Thus Ruth is ſaid to cleave to Naomi, Ruth 1. 14. which Act of Cleaving to her, when Naomi bid her return, Ruth thus expreſſeth, ver. 16. Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee, for whither thou goeſt I will go; and where thou lodgeſt I will lodg: thy People ſhall be my People, and thy God my God. And ver. 17. Where thou dieſt I will die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do ſo to me, and more alſo, if ought but Death part thee and me. Which Cleaving, ver. 18. is further termed a being ſtedfaſtly minded to go with her, analogically unto which this Cleaving of the Soul by Faith to God is termed a Cleaving with Purpoſe of Heart, that is, a ſtedfaſt fixed Reſolution of Heart not to part with him, Acts 11. 23. And thus doth the Will of a Believer cleave firmly and ſtedfaſtly unto God, when yet God makes as if he would

ſhake it off, and to depart therefrom. And whereas Ruth ſaid, Nought but Death ſhall part thee and me; Job he ſays, Tho thou kill me, I will truſt in thee; that is, Death it ſelf ſhall not part me from thee, will this Soul ſay unto God in his ultimate Reſolves. Nay the Soul ſays to God, Hell ſhall not part thee and me; for thou art there, and I will cleave to thee if thou throweſt me thither. Thou ſhalt never be rid of me, for that is my Reſolution. The Reaſon of this Fixedneſs of the Will is from that ſpiritual Sight and Aſſurance that (as we ſaid) is in the underſtanding of the things themſelves contained in the Promiſes, the Underſtanding being thereby invincibly poſſeſſed of thoſe Riches of Mercy and Goodneſs which are in God, of that Mercy and Forgiveneſs that is with him, and that is there to be had, and of that abundance of Grace and Righteouſneſs which is in Chriſt, and plenteous Redemption for the Salvation of Sinners, (Pſal. 130.) and all theſe ſhining in thoſe abſolute Declarations and Promiſes, and through them into the Soul. Faith in the Underſtanding lets down into the Will the abſolute and compleat Goodneſs of the Salvation promiſed, and that in the Cauſes of it; and the Will is drawn thereby with as invincible a Reſolution to cleave unto God for the Obtainment thereof. And then again, another Reaſon of this its Cleaving is, that God, tho he hide his particular Favour and Grace from this Soul, and holds it yet in ſuſpence as to that, yea, and turns away, as was ſaid; yet in the mean time he ſecretly by his right Hand upholds that Soul, and draws it by that his efficacious Power to cleave to him, and that alſo follows in the next Words of that Verſe in that Pſalm fore-cited; Thy right Hand (that is thy Power) upholdeth me, and cauſeth me thus to hang upon thee, tho it be but behind: and if he ſeems to go away, yet then the Soul is carried to follow hard after him the more, as our Tranſlators have render'd it, My Soul follows hard after thee. And hence it is that tho God ſhould defer him long, yet he continues to ſeek him. And thus you ſee as to the Matter of thoſe abſolute Promiſes, there is both an Aſſurance in the Underſtanding, and a Firmneſs of Adherency in the Will, even in him that at preſent wants Sight and Aſſurance of the Face and Favour of God, which was the Caſe of the Pſalmiſt at that time, and therefore the ſame may be in any that wants that Aſſurance.

And theſe two Acts are (tho in a greater or leſſer degree) common unto all Believers.

But, 2*dly*. There is further the Tenor of thoſe Abſolute Promiſes, which comes to be conſidered as they reſpect Perſons, and from thence it is that ſo great a Difference is between the Faith of him that hath a perſonal Aſſurance of his Intereſt therein, and the Faith of theſe other Believers that want it. As alſo from hence it is that Difficulty ariſeth, how ſuch Souls wanting perſonal Aſſurance, may yet come to lay hold on ſuch abſolute Promiſes for their own Perſons, and with what kind of Faith.

1. What is the Difference between that Act of Faith, (which the Apoſtle to the Hebrews calls full Aſſurance of Faith, (Heb. 10.) as comprehending not only an Aſſurance of the Things and Matter of the Promiſes, as that God's abſolute Will is to ſave Sinners, &c.) but together therewith an Aſſurance that I am the very individual Perſon whom God means to ſave, &c. Between this Faith, I ſay, and the Faith of ſingle and ſimple Adherence, the Difference lies herein; inaſmuch as Faith in the Underſtanding of him that is an Adherent only comes ſhort in this, that he doth not as yet firmly and prevailingly over his Doubts believe that himſelf is the individual Perſon intended by God in the Promiſes, concerning which the other is fully ſatisfied, and accordingly can and doth with Aſſurance apply thoſe Promiſes to himſelf, that they are his, &c. So as indeed the former hath a whole or compleat Aſſurance both of the Matter, and alſo of his own perſonal Intereſt; but this other poor Soul hath but an half Aſſurance, namely, of the Matter, &c. but not of the ſecond, viz. his perſonal Intereſt therein: touching which God is as yet pleaſed not to reveal that to him.

2. As to the Difficulty mentioned, viz. how ſuch Souls may yet have Recourſe to ſuch abſolute Promiſes, and with what kind or rather degree of Faith: For anſwer hereto I ſtill take that Rule along with me, that Faith is to be ſome way or other anſwering and conformable to what is in the Promiſe, or it is not Faith; and that if it comes up to the Tenor of it, (as we ſee it hath done to the Matter thereof) it muſt needs be true Faith. And my grand Aſſertion here about it is, that there is and may be Place for Actings of true Faith both in the Underſtanding and the Will

Part I. of ſuch an one anſwering and conformable unto the Tenor of theſe Promiſes, as we heard there was in each of thoſe Faculties towards the Matter of them. And this Correſpondency muſt be diſtinguiſh'd by its Tendency towards that Tenor of them. Now this Sutableneſs and Conformity between this Faith wanting perſonal Aſſurance, and the Tenor of theſe Promiſes (which I call Abſolute) lies thus.

1. On the part of the Promiſes the Tenor of them is indefinite to Perſons, and not univerſal to all Men. 'Tis true thoſe ſecond ſort of Promiſes forementioned, which expreſs a Condition whereunto Salvation is annexed, are univerſal, that is, to all and every one that hath the Qualifications in them. And in that ſtrain they run, Whoſoever believeth ſhall be ſaved: And more emphatically (Rom. 3. 22.) the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Righteouſneſs of God, which is by Faith of Jeſus Chriſt unto all, and upon all them that believe, where he ingeminates the Univerſality to all, and upon all them that believe, but not to all Men abſolutely: Promiſſiones Evangelii univerſales ſunt, non abſolutè, ſed reſpectu credentium, ſays Paræus very well in his Commentary on that Text: The Promiſes of the Goſpel are univerſal, not abſolutely, but with reſpect to Believers. But in abſolute Promiſes it is not ſo, for they mention no ſuch Qualifications already wrought.

In this very Tenor of them which thus reſpecteth Perſons, we muſt conſider that they have yet ſomething of Abſoluteneſs, or of Certainty, concerning Perſons, which is as certainly to be believed, and yet ſomething that is but indefinite; both which I ſhall ſpecify, to the end that I may by and by ſhew the punctual Conformity of Faith wanting perſonal Aſſurance unto the Tenor of thoſe Promiſes.

1ſt. That which is abſolutely or certainly declared in thoſe Promiſes concerning Perſons, for all Faith as of a Certainty to build on is this.

(1.) It is moſt certain and abſolutely declared in ſuch Promiſes concerning Perſons, that ſome ſhall have thoſe Promiſes fulfill'd on them; Heb. 4. 6. It remaineth therefore that ſome muſt enter in. Which Declaration made thus under the Goſpel, ſpeaks the true Intent of all abſolute Promiſes, as to Perſons, ſhewing they are underſtood but only of ſome, and yet certainly and abſolutely of ſome. The Expreſſion is, they muſt enter in, for which alſo the Apoſtle there alledgeth an Oath of God, than which nothing could make the Promiſe more abſolute. Likewiſe thoſe Paſſages of Chriſt's evidence the ſame thing; John 10. 16. Other Sheep I have which are not of this Fold: them alſo I muſt bring, and they ſhall hear my Voice, &c.

(2.) It is abſolutely certain alſo in thoſe Promiſes, that theſe Perſons are, (1.) Of all ſorts of Sinners, and all manner of Iniquity ſhall be forgiven, except that againſt the Holy Ghoſt, (ſays Chriſt) to ſome or other. (2.) Of Perſons in all Ages or Succeſſions of Times. (3.) In all Nations, and of all Places. Look unto me all the Ends of the Earth, and be ſaved. And thou haſt redeemed us out of all Nations, Tongu and Kindreds, &c. Rev. 5. 9. (4.) Out of all Ranks and Conditions, bond and free, poor and rich, Kings, and all in Authority. By all Men, all ſorts of Men are intended.

2dly. Yet theſe Promiſes are withal ſtill indefinitely uttered as to Perſons: For if ſome, and but ſome (that I may win ſome, ſays the greateſt Converter of Souls) are ſaved, then ſtill not all; if out of all Nations, then not all in or of a Nation. And truly in their ſaying, thou haſt redeemed us out of all Nations, Tongues and Kindre, he makes the very Redemption of Chriſt to be but of ſome in all, and they that ſpeak this, ſpeak it not of themſelves, as they had been juſtified, called and ſanctified, No, they ſay not, thou haſt called us out of all Nations, &c. but plainly thou haſt redeemed us with thy Blood out of all Nations, ſo limiting it to Redemption. They ſpeak of thoſe namely on whom Chriſt in ſhedding his Blood for them (they ſpeaking it to Chriſt) had his redeeming Eye, which he had not in redeeming unto the reſt of thoſe Nations, which are therefore diſtinguiſhed from theſe even by a Redemption of them which is not of thoſe other. And there is a vaſt Difference between ſaying, Thou haſt redeemed all Nations, as the Univerſaliſts ſay, and, Thou haſt redeemed us a ſelect Company out of all Nations, as they ſpeak here. There is no ſuch Univerſality the Promiſes are made unto, tho theſe Promiſes are to be promulged to the Univerſality of all Mankind. And the Promiſes are then to be ſtiled Indefinite, whilſt they abſolutely and certainly declare that ſome muſt and ſh enter in; and that all ſhall not, and yet do no way ſignify who they are, either b any diſcernable Mark or Character of Difference, or by naming thoſe Perſons, (Go reſerving that to himſelf, and leaving it in ſuſpence) until the Qualification of Faith and ſuch other Graces are wrought in them. And thoſe Promiſes which are made unto ſuch Qualifications we call conditional Promiſes, which are in their Tenor univerſal, but not ſo theſe abſolute of this ſort which we ſpeak of; for they can bear no other Title (as they reſpect Perſons) but of Indefiniteneſs, tho they be otherwiſe never ſo Abſolute. If we will take an impartial Survey of all abſolute Declaraions and Promiſes of Salvation, they will be found thus indefinite as in reſpect to Perſons, as they are propoſed for Objects unto our Faith. Thus it is in that grand Proclamation which was made on purpoſe as the Foundation of Old Teſtament-Faith, (wherein the Riches of the Mercy in the Divine Nature are diſcovered and xpoſed) The Lord gracious, merciful, &c. Deut. 34. 6. This, as it reſpects Perſons, to whom God means to be gracious, have this profeſſed Reſtriction premiſed hereto by God himſelf the Promulger, I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful, h. 33. v. 19. I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee, and will be gracious o whom I will be gracious, and will ſhew Mercy on whom I will ſhew Mercy. The Import of which, what is it other than that he will abſolutely be merciful unto ſome, ven thoſe whom he will, but not to all? And who thoſe are to whom he will be merciful, he reſerves within himſelf, and yet profeſſeth to proclaim this, that all the People might know it; and accordingly Moſes publiſhed it to all. And this was of ll other the firſt moſt ſolemn Promulgation of Mercy publickly made that ever was made before, and ſo the Tenor of it is menſura reliquorum, the Meaſure of the reſt. hat God alſo will blot out (or pardon) Tranſgreſſions for his Name's ſake, (Iſa. 3. 25.) is an abſolute Promiſe fitted to the Faith of any one that hath a Will to beieve. It ſpeaks to no Condition or Qualification but the contrary, v. 22, 23, 24. But thou haſt not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou haſt been weary of me, O Iſrael. Thou haſt not brought me the ſmall Cattle of thy Burnt-offerings, neither haſt thou honoured me with thy Sacrifieces; I have not cauſed thee to ſerve with an Offering, nor weaied thee with Incenſe. Thou haſt bought me no ſweet Cane with Money, neither haſt thou illed me with the Fat of thy Sacrifices; but thou haſt made me to ſerve with thy Sins, hou haſt wearied me with thine Iniquities. He names no Perſon but Jacob, that is, is People elect, as elſewhere he calls them; yea and there alſo, (ver. 21.) The eople he had formed for himſelf to ſhew forth his Praiſe: who are in other Scriptures ermed before their Calling Children of God, John 11. 52. His People, Acts 15. 14. nd Acts 18. 10. But who theſe are till they believe none knows. Yea, and he limits this Pardon unto them; Micah 7. 18, 19. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth Iniquity, and paſſeth by the Tranſgreſſion of the Remnant of his Heritage? He reaineth not his Anger for ever, becauſe he delighteth in Mercy. He will turn again, he ill have Compaſſion upon us; he will ſubdue our Iniquities; and thou wilt caſt all their ins into the Depths of the Sea. The Words are purely what are in Exod. 33, & 34. nd they whom they concern are but the Remnant whom he hath choſen for his Heitage, which who knows but he? The like we have alſo in that Declaration concerning Chriſt's Intention of Coming into the World to ſave Sinners, commended or ſuch a faithful Saying, for all our Faith to receive and accept; 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the World to ſave Sinners, of whom I am chief. 'Tis Sinners in the World indefinitely, e ſays not all, not all univerſally, which the very Sound and Tenor of the Speech hews. And it is of great Force to confirm it to be ſo, that he ſpeaks of that Redemption by Chriſt, and that ſort of Purpoſe therein to ſave theſe Sinners, to be every way one and the ſame with that which he had of ſaving the Apoſtle himſelf, which the Apoſtle came then to find and diſcern, when Chriſt had by ſuch an Overlow of Love and Almighty Power wrought Faith in him: ver. 14. And the Grace f our Lord was exceeding abundant with Faith and Love, which is in Chriſt Jeſus. And herefore he was now able with Aſſurance to put in his own Name in ſaying, Of hom I am chief. And in ſaying ſo he puts himſelf (we evidently ſee) into the ſame ank and Number, Sort and Heap, of all the Sinners that were redeem'd, and all f them redeem'd with the ſame Grace and Intention that Paul himſelf had been redeem'd with, and made the Subject of in Chriſt's Heart. He himſelf was redeem'd ith no other Aim than they all were. That which did put the Difference was, that e was the chief of that rank in Sinning. And ſurely Chriſt's Aim and Eye at him dying for him was out of a ſpecial Grace and Love, whereby he died not only to

Part I. make him ſalvable, as ſome would dilute Chriſt's Intention in dying for the non-elect, affirming, that Chriſt died for all Men thus far, barely to make this Propoſition true of all Men, That if they would believe they ſhould be ſaved. It is certain that he died for Paul with a further Intention of Love than ſo, even efficaciouſly to give him Faith, and invincibly ſave him. For that Grace in converting him effectually, it is he there ſo predicates, ver. 14. The Grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with Faith and Love, &c. and magnifies Chriſt for having come into the World to beſtow it on him. Chriſt did not die with one Intention for Paul, and another Intention for others, for he ranks the other Sinners for whom Chriſt died in common with himſelf, together in one Rank with his own Perſon. He puts himſelf and them in the ſame Rank. Now Chriſt died for him as a choſen Veſſel to himſelf, &c. as Chriſt himſelf that died for him, from Heaven ſpeaks of him, Acts 9. 15. and in dying bore the ſame Love to the reſt of thoſe Sinners he died for, that he did to Paul; he dying for him and them conſider'd in one Body, (Epheſ. 2.) whereof Paul was but a Member. And therefore Paul propounds himſelf as a Pattern of this Grace unto all that ſhould by virtue of Chriſt's dying come to believe; ver. 16. For this Cauſe I obtained Mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all Long-ſuffering, [for a Pattern] to them that ſhould hereafter believe on him to Life everlaſting. And withal commends this faithful Saying thus indefinitely utter'd, that Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners, as the moſt accommodate Object to their Faith, (upon which they ſhould embrace and lay hold on Chriſt) as it had been ſo to him, when in his Humiliation he had ſeen himſelf to be the chiefeſt of Sinners. To conclude this, I will ſay, that after all the wringing, and writhing, and turning things this way and that, and when Men have ſaid all that they can, it will be found that the World which is the adequate Object of Chriſt's Aim in dying, (which he is elſewhere ſaid to have come to ſave, and is thereupon proclaim'd to be the Saviour of the World, John 4. 42.) is no otherwiſe to be underſtood than of Men in the World indefinitely taken. Yea, and that other Phraſe of all Men, of whom likewiſe he is ſaid the Saviour, will after all Agitations iſſue in and come to its being but an indefinite Expreſſion, (as we have explained it) noting out Men in all Nations, of all Ranks, Ages, Conditions and Sorts of Sinners over all the World. And ſo it imports an Indefiniteneſs, and not an Univerſality of Perſons to have been intended in it; and ſo all theſe Declarations and Promiſes of Salvation which are abſolute, are to be underſtood.

I come now to demonſtrate the Suitableneſs of the Faith of one that knows not of a Certainty of himſelf to be intended unto the Tenor of the Promiſes, as it reſpects Perſons. Let us ſee then what Actings of Faith there may be in ſuch an one for his own perſonal Salvation, altho he is not aſſured of his perſonal Intereſt, and view withal, (which I mainly intend) the Correſpondency which Faith in ſuch an one doth hold with the Tenour of ſuch Promiſes (as it hath been opened) which will at once evince that ſuch a Faith is ſaving, (for if Faith anſwers the Promiſe, it is certainly true Saving Faith) as alſo make way to inſtruct us how in ſuch a caſe we may apply our ſelves unto abſolute Promiſes, which is the Point I ultimately drive at.

I ſhall, as I have done before, (when I ſhewed the Correſpondency of ſuch a Man's Faith to the Matter of the Promiſes) go over the Actings of the Soul towards the Tenor of them, and that as to both the Underſtanding and Will.

1. Theſe abſolute Promiſes do in the Tenor afford and lay before Faith in the Underſtanding of ſuch an one, theſe great Truths that follow, which are productive of Faith in his Will, and do draw on his Will to cloſe with God and Chriſt, with Acts therein ſuitable to the Tenor of the Promiſes for his particular Salvation. They preſent to Faith in his Underſtanding; 1*ſt.* That there are ſome (and thoſe not a few) Perſons whom God certainly and undoubtedly intends to ſave, and whom he will effectually give Faith unto. And altho the Man may yet be ſuſpenſive whether his own Perſon or no be included, yet in the mean while Faith may and doth meet with and come up to this part of the Promiſe, In that he fully believes that ſome ſhall be ſav'd. And he may and doth believe this piece of the Tenor of it, (notwithſtanding his wavering as to his own Perſon) even as abſolutely as the Promiſes themſelves, viz. that God is abſolutely (that is, certainly) reſolved to ſave ſome with free and efficacious Grace. There are that ſhall come to me, ſays Chriſt, John 6. 37. And again, There are thoſe that are the Children of God, (in God's purpoſe) who ſha hear my Voice, John 11. 41. And the Belief of this at once gives Hope as concerning this thing. For if the Example of that one Perſon Paul is propoſed by himſelf, and the Holy Ghoſt ſpeaking in him as a Pattern and Flag of Mercy, held out to toll and invite others in, who were after to believe, (as in that 1 Tim. 1. we may read) then much more are we encourag'd when we hear that there are a many for whom Chriſt came into the World with an abſolute Intention to ſave them. Thus Chriſt ſpeaks; My Blood (ſaid he) that is ſhed for many for the Remiſſion of Sins, when now he was to die, Mat. 26. 28. And when they ſhall come together in that laſt great general Aſſembly, it is ſaid of them, Rev. 7. 9. Lo, a great Multitude which no Man could number, of all Nations, and Kindreds, and People, and Tongues, ſtood before the Throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white Robes, and Palms in their Hands. And likewiſe the Belief of thus much concerning Perſons in a Matter of ſo near and great Concernment as a Man's Salvation is, will, through the Spirit's drawing, quicken and ſtir up the Will to put in for it for a Man's ſelf, (altho he knows not certainly that he is the Perſon intended) and accordingly to indeavour after the obtaining of it. This we manifeſtly may find in the Coherence of the 6th and 11th Verſes of Heb. 4. Seeing therefore it remaineth that ſome muſt enter therein, (namely, that Reſt) and they to whom it was firſt preached, entered not in, becauſe of Unbelief; (the Confirmation of which he proſecutes in the following Verſes:) In the 11th Verſe he draws forth this Inference from that his former, Let us labour therefore to enter into that Reſt, (ſays he in ver. 11.) leſt any Man fall after the ſame Example of Unbelief. Which punctually anſwers in the way of Exhortation unto both Parts of his foregoing Doctrine in that ver. 6. And the true Reaſon of ſuch an Inference may be ſeen in the ordinary Practice of Men. For if when Men know aforehand that one, yea but one ſhall in running a Race obtain a Crown, yet all (that are habilitated for a Race) will venture their Ability and Skill to run for it, and this when it is but for a corruptible Crown, (as the Apoſtle enforceeth his Exhortation, 1 Cor. 9. 24, 25.) Then how much more when we know that not one only, but many, and ſo great a Multitude ſhall obtain; and that the Gage or Price at ſtake is not a corruptible but an incorruptible Crown, as the Apoſtle (ver. 25.) further heightens and raiſeth his Motive and Argumentation to this our very purpoſe in hand.

2. Theſe abſolute Promiſes and Declarations do lay before the Underſtanding of ſuch an one, that theſe ſome or many are of all ſorts (as was ſaid) out of all Nations, Ages both of Succeſſion of Times, and Ages of Perſons, and alſo of all Sinners of all ſorts, in all the Degrees, and Sizes, and Proportions of Sinnings, even the chiefeſt, as the Apoſtle's Viſion ſhews, Acts 9. 12. All manner of Beaſts, wild and creeping things, from the baſeſt Worms to the moſt loathed and monſtrous Beaſts, were involved in that Sheet, which was the Figure of the Church Catholick, repreſented unto Peter, as thoſe that were to be called and converted out of all ſorts of Sinners, even the vileſt. Theſe Declarations in like manner hold forth that it is God's very Deſign to comprehend and take in of all theſe, whatever their Sins, their Ranks, their Conditions be. He would have ſome of all Kindreds, Families, Callings; that he might be ſaid to extend his rich free Grace unto an [all], all in ſome reſpect. And this opens the Door of Hope to the Soul (we are ſpeaking of) yet far wider. For he now looking upon himſelf round about in all Circumſtances whatſoever, and viewing himſelf all over, may ſee, that whatever Rank, Condition, or Sinfulneſs we can ſuppoſe him to be in, or he finds himſelf to be in, yet he finds that his own Condition is not only not to be excluded, but taken in in that indefinite way mention'd in the Promiſe. The very ſame Condition and Degree of Sinfulneſs that he ſtands in, is to be found in the Perſons of ſome or other, whom in the Promiſe God intends, and ſo comes to be comprehended in the Promiſes. And further, he may thereby ſee, in ſuch abſolute Declarations all Objections of all kinds that can any way be made by carnal Reaſon, (which is ſo jealous of God) or that can be alledged either from his Sins, or Circumſtances, or Conjectures, wholly to be removed and anſwered. And all this theſe abſolute Promiſes do ſuggeſt and prompt him with. And tho ſtill he demurs whether his Perſon ſingly and particularly conſidered, be certainly the Man whom God will own ſtill further, yet even as to that Point, namely his Perſon ſingly conſidered, he hath this to ſay, that ſeeing God hath no where, nor by any fatal Mark or Brand, as upon Cain, ſet him out for Deſtruction; why then (may he not well think thereupon) ſhall I exclude my ſelf?

There is no Difference, (ſaith the Apoſtle) for all have ſinned, being therefore all alike, whoever they be that have ſinned, they are capable alike of being freely juſtified by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. 3. 22, 23, 24. The meaning is, that there is no Difference of Sins, ſmall or great (as to the point of God's Free Grace to juſtify a Man) which is any Bar that ſhuts any Man out. He finds likewiſe, that as there is nothing of Good in him that ſhould move God to be merciful to him ; ſo nor on the contrary, nothing of Evil that will be of Power to divert God from his declared Reſolution to pardon all manner of Sin de facto, (but that one againſt the Holy Ghoſt) as Chriſt that bore our Sins, and paid the Price for us, tells us. So as his ſingle individual Perſon ſtands free of all Incumbrances, of all quare impedits, of all that ſhould prejudg him, and let him. He ſtands as free for free Grace, as freely to accept and receive him, as ever any Man did whom it hath accepted, any thing in the whole Word of God notwithſtanding. It is not that ſuch or ſuch Sins, or manner of Sinnings after Illumination, &c. ſhall be a Croſs-bar, or Spoke, or Hindrance againſt a Man, no more than Sins before. For whenever a Man cometh to God to be juſtified, whether after Calling or before, he comes and ſues it ſub formâ Impii, as looking upon himſelf as an ungodly Perſon, whilſt he is a ſuing for Juſtification, and appears in that Court. He is not to conſider his being already godly ; there is no Difference, no not in that reſpect neither. He may ſee that it is pure free Grace in God's Heart he hath to deal withal and to treat with God by, and to try what quarter it will give ; and it is the Glory thereof that moves God to be merciful where he will be merciful ; and where he proves to be gracious he is to an ὑπερεπλεόναμα, he is to an overflowing ſuper-abounding Fulneſs gracious to them. Thoſe that run in a Race, or ſtrive for Maſteries, have the Confidence of their own Skill or Strength, or Uſe, and accuſtomed Agility for their Confidence, and do venture thereupon ; but this Soul hath the abſolute Grace of God before him to rely upon, and ſo ventures upon what it ſhall be willing to do for him.

Interrogo nunc crediſne O peccator Chriſto? dicis, Credo. Quid credis? Gratis univerſa peccata tibi per ipſum [poſſe remitti.] Habes quod crediſti. Aug. Gerard. de Juſt. p. 1050.

3. Theſe abſolute Promiſes do, together with all theſe Conſiderations, hint to him an it may be, that is, that he may be one God will be merciful unto. If it muſt be ſome body's Lot, (in that Language the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Epheſ. 1.) then, ſays he, why not mine? So prompts the Holy Ghoſt often ſuch Souls ; and this, tho but afar off, Apprehenſion hath brought many a Soul near, and drawn and encouraged them to come to God for their particular Salvation. The People of Niniveh believed God in his Threatnings, Jonah 3. 5. And this Thought withal fell into them by the Suggeſtion of the Spirit ; ver. 6, 9. Who can tell if God will return and repent, and turn away from his fierce Anger, that we periſh not? And ſays the Prophet, Joel 2. 14, 15. The Lord your God is gracious and merciful, ſlow to Anger, and of great Kindneſs, and repenteth him of the Evil : Who knows if he will return and repent, and leave a Bleſſing behind him? In the Caſe of the Child David ſought the Lord ; for, ſays he, I ſaid, (that is, I had this Saying or Apprehenſion of Faith in my Mind) Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me? 2 Sam. 12. 22. in ſparing his Life ; and yet the Prophet had told him it ſhould die ; but David thought it might be but of the nature of a conditional Threatning, which by Prayer might have been diverted. And in other Scriptures Promiſes are uttered in the ſlender Stile of an it may be, as Zeph. 2. 3. It may be ye ſhall be hid in the Day of the Lord's Anger. Some of theſe were Promiſes and Apprehenſions in caſe of temporal Deliverances ; others of eternal Salvation connex'd with them. However my Argument is ſtrong from either, for theſe ſo indefinite Expreſſions utter'd in temporal Promiſes with but an it may be, and who can tell but that God, &c. did yet however draw them in to ſeek God with a true Faith for the obtaining the things promiſed, (the Faith in them anſwering to the Utterance and Tenor of the Promiſe from God) then much more in the caſe of eternal Salvation, if the Promiſes thereof ſpeak or whiſper rather, but an it may be, and who knows, ſhould we be drawn to believe. And ſo much (for certain) theſe abſolute Promiſes do ſpeak of Hope to ſuch a Soul before us, yea or any Soul whatever that hears and obſerves them. And if they leave but ſuch a Hint or Impreſſion upon the Soul as David had and ſpake of, (I ſaid, who can tell but God will be gracious to me?) that ſo ſuch a Soul comes but once to ſay within it ſelf, Who can tell but God will be gracious to me, in pardoning and ſaving of me

This it may be in the Soul's Apprehenſion may and will have, through the Spirit's ſſiſting, and God the Father's drawing, (without which never ſo certain and di-ect Promiſes made to all univerſally, or particularly to any one by Name, would ot have any drawing Virtue in them to work Faith) I ſay theſe it may be's, or I ay be the Perſon, may have as much Power and Force in them to win the Heart to elieve, and by Faith to put in for them, and to pray to obtain them, as in temporal alvations they had. For the Reaſon is the ſame in both, yea and the Weight far the ore on this ſide of Salvation eternal, by how much a Man's Salvation (the Subject-atter of ſuch ſpiritual Promiſes) is infinitely nearer to ſuch a Man's Soul to move nd ſtir him, than all or any temporal Salvation is or can be ſuppoſed to be to any. his the Apoſtle hath inſtructed us in, as touching the very Point before us; They rive for a corruptible Crown, (ſays he) we for an incorruptible: 'Tis an Inference rom the leſs to the infinitely greater. And a Soul once made apprehenſive to pur-oſe (as we ſay) of the Weight of Salvation, the maſſy Import and Concernments hereof joining all their Forces with theſe ſo weak it may bees, will yet, as ſmaller nd more weak Cords twiſted with greater and ſtronger, have together a mighty ower in them to draw the Soul, when withal God ſhall be at the end of theſe Ropes nd draw with them. And how ſlender theſe Hopes, and however contemptible ome may and do account them, which theſe it may be's do afford, yet they are from od, who is pleaſed to ſpeak in that Stile to us Men; and the Weakneſs of God hen he comes to work upon Souls by them, is ſtronger than the greateſt Power of en. He can draw a mighty Whale to ſhore with a twine Thread. He can hold ſt the greateſt Ship in the moſt tempeſtuous Storm, by the Cable of a ſlight Straw.

Now behold the Correſpondency and Conformity of ſuch an Apprehenſion of Faith n ſuch a Soul unto the Indefiniteneſs of theſe Promiſes in the Word; juſt as God peaks, ſo they believe. God is a gracious and merciful God, (that's abſolute) and may be God will be gracious to you, and who can tell? So ſays the Promiſe on od's part, as it is ſpoken unto us, that is, it is but indefinitely ſpoken. And then ys the Soul, who can tell but he will be gracious to me? (as David ſaid, It may be od will bleſs me for Shimei's Curſing to day) ſo ſpeaks the Heart as it were in an Echo o the other Voice in the Promiſe.

4. There is a fourth Act of Faith may be in the Underſtanding of one that is not et aſſured of his preſent perſonal Salvation, and it may be an Act of Aſſurance too, s for the future, namely, that if that Faith which in his Will he is now a putting rth (of which next) prove true ſpiritual Faith, and that he hold faſt the beginning f his Confidence unto the end, then it is an abſolute Certainty that he ſhall be ved. And this is a great Addition that crowneth all the former Conſiderations ith a further Hope; and who is there that is at the very brink of Believing would ot, upon this and the other Conſiderations, caſt himſelf in upon God's Mercy? He that ploweth, ſhould plow in Hope: and he that threſheth in Hope, ſhould be Partaker f his Hope, 1 Cor. 9. 10. The Apoſtle ſpeaks it to another Buſineſs, but I may thus r apply it to this in hand, that as it is a comfortable Incouragement to a Plow-an to plow and to caſt in his Seeds into the Ground, becauſe he is in an ordinary ay hopefully aſſur'd he ſhall (if his Corn take root) have an expected and deſired rop, and with that Hope he plows, and in the Hope of it doth at the preſent hrow away his Seed: Do Men take Pains to plow, and venture to ſow their Corn Hope, then how much more ſhould we? We endeavour (as the Apoſtle's word) and take Pains to believe, knowing that if our Seed that is caſt come to have a oot, (as Chriſt in oppoſition to the thorny Ground inſinuates) it will bring forth ruit unto Perfection, and in due time we ſhall reap if we faint not. And this is a owing far more certain for the Hopes of it than that other, and yet we ſee Men or-inarily venture both their Labour and Seed-Corn. Yea, this venture to believe for ſo I call it as to the Soul's own Apprehenſion) upon theſe it may be's of Salva-ion, are far more ſure and certain than our exerciſing Faith, and ſpending Prayers pon thoſe (it may be's) it may be's of temporal Promiſes for things outward. For aith (altho it be true Faith) doth often prove uncertain and iſſueleſs as to the ob-aining of the particular thing we aimed at in ſuch Promiſes for outward things, which was David's Caſe in that Inſtance mentioned) but this Adventure of Faith, nd of our Souls on theſe it may be's for Salvation, (if it prove true Faith in the end, ho in the loweſt degree) will never be unſucceſsful as to that Salvation we ſeek for.

For

Part I. For Chriſt hath ſaid, He that ſeeks (continues ſo to do) ſhall find, and to him that knocks, it ſhall be opened.

2. I ſhall now conſider the Acts of Faith in the Will in ſuch a Believer, and how conformable thoſe alſo are to the indefinite Tenor of abſolute Promiſes. Let us next conſider what Acts of Faith in the Will (that are true Acts of Faith) ſuch a Soul may put forth, and which may ſtand with theſe indefinite Apprehenſions, when very far ſhort of an Aſſurance that he is the Perſon for which the pure abſolute Promiſes afford him no further Ground.

(1.) There may be a coming unto God and Chriſt. That Act of Coming which is ſo often uſed to expreſs Believing both on God and Chriſt, (as Chriſt himſelf expreſſeth it in his Sermons, and we read of Coming unto God through Chriſt, Heb. 7.) is an Act of the Will, (as Rev. 22. 17. Let him that is athirſt come, and let him that will, &c.) And the ſaving Act of Faith is expreſſed by it; John 7. 35. If any Man thirſt, let him come unto me and drink: and it follows, (as explaining what he meant by coming) He that believeth me, &c. And the Aim, End, or Errand of ſuch a Soul in its Coming, and for which it comes, is ſaid to be that it may be ſaved, that is its Buſineſs it comes unto God and Chriſt for. Now ſuch an Act may well ſtand with the forementioned indefinite Apprehenſion as concerning his own Perſon, and with that ſuſpenſive Uncertainty, (as I may term it) for in that reſpect he may yet come to have it given and made good to him, altho he knows not that he hath, or certainly ſhall have a ſhare in it. And therefore undeniably the ſaving Act in the Will may be put forth without ſuch a perſonal Aſſurance. That Phraſe of Coming is taken from what is ordinary with Men, and is on purpoſe choſen out to expreſs the Aim of ſuch a Faith in ſuch a Condition. For a Man uſeth to come to another for a thing that is in that Man's Power to beſtow whom he comes to, when yet he utterly hath no Aſſurance from him that he ſhall obtain it, and yet ventures to come. Nothing is more ordinary in common Practice than this, and therefore the Act of Faith which is without Aſſurance is moſt aptly ſet forth thereby. And truly that Speech of Chriſt's, Him that cometh unto me I will in no ways caſt out, (John 6. 36.) was ſpoken as on purpoſe to the Heart of many an one that comes, (eſpecially at firſt) to hearten him againſt, and obviate this very Fear of being rejected; and who therefore ſo comes as in his own Thoughts, he may remain ſuſpenſive in himſelf, whether he ſhall be received as to Salvation, which is his Errand, yea or no, eſpecially in the Caſe of him who but now firſt comes, ſeeing that until he hath come and put forth ſuch an Act, he cannot come to know whether it will be a true and ſpiritual Act of Faith, or coming with a true Heart, yea or no. Yet however at his firſt Coming the Intent of his Soul in Coming is, that he may be receiv'd. And come he muſt firſt in a direct Line to Chriſt, e're he can reflect upon his Coming, whether it be with a true Heart, (as Heb. 10. 'tis explained) nor will he know his Welcome unto Chriſt until he actually comes, or hath come.

And that the Aim of ſuch an Act of Coming to God or Chriſt, or God in Chriſt, is purely that he may be juſtified, and that this is that genuine Act whereupon a Man is indeed juſtified; the Example and Inſtance of the Apoſtles themſelves, as it is alledged by one of the greateſt of them in the Name of himſelf, and all the reſt of them, doth manifeſtly declare; Gal. 2. 16. We knowing that a Man is not juſtified by the Works of the Law, but by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt, even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the Faith of Chriſt, and not by the Works of the Law. In which Words he tells us plainly, that by ſuch a Faith having ſuch an Aim or Tendency in it, that they might be juſtified, it was that they came to Chriſt. And it is ſpoken of their having renounced Works for Juſtification, (which the Jewiſh Principles did lead unto) and their betaking themſelves unto Faith, that they might be juſtified, from the firſt of their Converſion unto Chriſt. Thoſe Words, even we, do point unto the other Apoſtles, together with himſelf; even we that were the firſt Fruits of Chriſtianity, and eminenteſt among Believers, had yet but the ſame like Faith at firſt, which all Believers elſe have, viz. that which was pitch'd upon, the Righteouſneſs of God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, (as Peter, 2 Pet. 1. 1. ſpeaks) which he ſtiles like precious Faith, which was then and is to be for ever common to all Believers, both ſmall and great, at firſt; which Faith (as by comparing this in the Galatians appears) was not a believing at the firſt daſh, that they were juſtified, but a believing that they might be juſtified, and ſo a Coming unto Chriſt

vith this Aim and Errand, that I may be juſtified, as to the future. And if any vould queſtion, whether it were ſpoken of all the Apoſtles or no, yet however to e ſure, it was Paul ſpeaks it of himſelf, and Peter of himſelf, who was the Chief f the Apoſtles; and of Peter, who profeſſed his Faith in the Name of all the Apotles, Mat. 16. For, if you obſerve, it is the Continuation of a Speech he had bean to make unto Peter perſonally; ver. 14. I ſaid unto Peter, &c. and this is part f what he ſaid to him, We who are Jews by Nature, and not Sinners of the Gentiles, nowing that a Man is not juſtified by the Works of the Law, but by the Faith of Jeſus hriſt, even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the Faith of hriſt, and not by the Works of the Law; for by the Works of the Law ſhall no Fleſh be uſtified. In which he proceeds to confute and reprove Peter, who by Judaiſm had xpoſed no leſs than the great Point of Juſtification by Faith. But Paul appealeth to is own Experience at and from his firſt Converſion, and often after, by what a Faith e had lived to be juſtified by it, and preſſeth it on him before all that were preſent, as he relateth it in ver. 14.) as a commonly received Principle amongſt Believers, ea and even amongſt us too (ſays he) that are Jews, and not Gentiles. And hat the Act of Coming to Chriſt (whereby Faith is expreſſed) includes this as the End and Intent of that Coming, and is indeed in the Form of it, viz. that I may be aved, or that I might be juſtified, that Speech of Chriſt's ſhews, (altho ſpoken to Phariſees, and yet ſpoken of the contrary Act of Unbelief in them, and ſo as the ontrary illuſtrates, wherein the Spirit of true Faith lies) Ye will not come to me that e might have Life, John 5. 40. that is, you will not believe, which is a Coming to ne with that Intention, to have Life from me; which all thoſe whom I ſave do ut forth and exerciſe towards me, and do come unto me for; but theſe proud Juſtiiaries did ſcorn to do it, and would not thus come. That Particle ἵνα, that, deotes out the End or Aim which he is to take up, who would come to Chriſt, or elieve on him ſavingly; and imports not only what is the Event or Conſequent upn Believing. And as the ſole Aim of a Soul in Believing is, that he may be ſaved; o likewiſe God's Will and Intention in requiring Faith is declared to be, that he hat believes may have Life, (John 6.) God's Aim anſwering that of the Believers. And again, that this is the Aim and Buſineſs of the Soul in Coming, Chriſt's Inviation to come ſhews, Mat. 11. 28, &c. Come to me ye that are heavy loaden, and I ill give you Reſt. Which Promiſe in the laſt Words doth at once ſpeak to what heir Souls were burthened for the want of, and moſt of all deſire, namely, Reſt; nd alſo guides and directs thoſe Souls with what they ſhould intend and deſign in oming to obtain from him, even Reſt: And you ſhall find Reſt to your Souls. Now as his Act of Coming with this Intention, that I may have Reſt, doth and may well tand with a ſuſpenſive Uncertainty, that I am the Perſon; ſo it may and doth anwer to the indefinite Apprehenſion the Underſtanding of ſuch an one hath. The Underſtanding tells him from the Promiſe, that he may be the Perſon whom God may juſtify; then in Correſpondency, ſays the Will, I do believe, or come to God nd Chriſt, that I may be juſtified, and ſo he exactly comports with the Indefiniteneſs of the Promiſe, as to his Perſon; for as that holds forth an it may be God will, &c. o the Aim of his Coming is, that he may be ſaved. And it is certain in experience, that with ſuch a poor and ſlender it may be at the firſt, many a Soul hath caſt Anchor within the Vail blindfold, (as Seamen caſt their Anchors when yet they ſee ot the Earth at the bottom of the Sea, or know that their Anchor will take hold, or yet know how to trail it or apply it certainly to that Earth, ſo as to be able to y, it ſhall without peradventure faſten and take ſure hold thereon, but a long ime perhaps comes back to them again) and yet have in the end found a firm and ure hold-faſt in the Heart of God, and Grace of Chriſt, to hang upon with the whole Weight of their Souls, the Weight of their Sins hanging upon them alſo, with all the Pondus of them.

ἵνα [ut] ſignificat finem, non ſolum conſequentiam. Brugenſis in verba.

CHAP. V.

That Election-Grace, and the Immutability of God's Counſel indefinitely propos'd in the Promiſes, is the Object of Faith.

HEB. 6. 13——20.

For when God made Promiſe to Abraham, becauſe he could ſwear by no greater, he ſware by Himſelf, Saying, Surely, bleſſing, I will bleſs thee, and multiplying, I will multiply thee.

And ſo after he had patiently endured, he obtained the Promiſe.

For Men verily ſwear by the greater: and an Oath for Confirmation is to them an end of all Strife.

Wherein God willing more abundantly to ſhew unto the Heirs of Promiſe the Immutability of his Counſel, confirmed it by an Oath:

That by two immutable things, in which it was impoſſible for God to lie, we might have a ſtrong Conſolation, who have fled for Refuge to lay hold upon the Hope ſet before us:

Which Hope we have as an Anchor of the Soul both ſure and ſtedfaſt, and which entreth into that within the Vail.

Whither the Forerunner is for us entred, even Jeſus, made an high Prieſt for ever after the Order of Melchiſedec.

THE 11th Verſe begins an Exhortation, whereof all that follows is the Proſecution. The Words of that Verſe are theſe; We deſire that every one of you do ſhew the ſame Diligence, to the full Aſſurance of Hope unto the end. Here are two things diſtinct: 1ſt. An Exerciſe, and Diligence. 2dly. This is directed towards the Attainment of full Aſſurance of Hope unto the end; which is ſomewhat parallel to that of Peter, 2d Epiſt. 1. 10. Brethren, give Diligence to make your Calling and Election ſure. To exhort them to all Diligence, he lays before them the Examples of the eminent Saints that they had known in their times; ver. 12. That ye be not ſlothful; and that refers unto uſing that Diligence he ſpeaks of: Be Followers of them who through Faith and Patience inherit the Promiſes, that is, that have got Poſſeſſion, and obtained and have arrived unto eternal Glory. And by Patience he doth not only mean Patience in ſuffering, but Conſtancy in well-doing, eſpecially waiting by Faith for the Attainment of the Promiſe, as Patience is taken in Rom. 2. 7. Who by patient Continuance in well-doing, ſeek for Glory and Immortality. As for that other part, the full Aſſurance of Hope unto the end; he begins at ver. 13. to propound the Example of Abraham more particularly and eminently; and ſhews how God, to aſſure him in his Hope, did give him a Promiſe and an Oath, both which you have in ver. 13. that is, he arrived at the end of his Days at the Enjoyment and fulfilling of the Promiſes, as thoſe other Saints he ſpake of, ver. 12. are ſaid to have inherited the Promiſes. Some refer his obtaining the Promiſe to what was in this Life, in having Iſaac given him, &c. and by having the Comfort of it ever after while he lived. But he had obtained the Promiſe of Iſaac before this Oath was given, and therefore 'tis rather to be underſtood to mean it after that Oath given, upon his offering up Iſaac, he having patiently endured to the end of his Days as his Exhortation, (ver. 11.) had ſaid, that then he attained the full Poſſeſſion of it.

The Aſſurance which was given to Abraham was the greateſt that Heaven could afford, a Promiſe and an Oath. I ſay the greateſt, as, 1ſt. The Apoſtle himſelf argues, ver. 16. If amongſt Men an Oath, when they ſwear by God that is greater than themſelves, is of ſuch Authority, as it ends all Strife, tho Men be Liars, and may be ſuppoſed even in Swearing to lie; yet an Oath taken by God, or by their Gods, whoever they be, is accounted ſo ſacred, and of ſuch Authority, as all Men reſt in it, and there is an end of Strife: much more when God ſhall take an Oath. This you have, ver. 16. For Men verily ſwear by the greater, and an Oath for Confirmation is to them an end of all Strife. For that God himſelf ſhould ſwear, the Apoſtle ſays, ver. 18. that 'twas impoſſible for God to lie therein. It cannot be ſuppoſed of him, tho of Men it may; ſo ver. 18. But, 2dly. Whom did God ſwear by?

He ſware by himſelf; ver. 13. Becauſe he could ſwear by no greater he ſware by himſelf: he ſtaked himſelf; as if he had ſaid, I will ceaſe to be God if I do not perform this.

The thing he ſware to was, to bleſs Abraham with all Bleſſings, and that unto the end; Surely bleſſing I will bleſs thee. And if he ſware by himſelf to perform this, then all the Power in God, and Long-ſuffering of God towards Abraham, were engaged to the uttermoſt to work upon Abraham's Soul, and to bear with him effectually to attain this. And whereas thoſe that ſhould read but hitherto what Paul ſaid of the Oath to Abraham, would expect of Paul he ſhould declare how this Oath did concern thoſe whom he exhorted, or otherwiſe it had been in vain, and an Example not applicable to his purpoſe, which was to exhort them to the full Aſſurance of Hope unto the end, ſuch as Abraham had: And whereas becauſe it was a Voice from Heaven, they might think that this was ſingular and proper to Abraham alone, he therefore proceeds in the 17*th* and 18*th* Verſes to apply it to them to whom he wrote, to all the Heirs of Promiſe and Salvation, and together therewith expounds what was the Matter intended in the Oath and Promiſe. Thus he applies it in theſe Words; ver. 17. Wherein God willing more abundantly to ſhew unto the Heirs of Promiſe the Immutability of his Counſel, confirmed it by an Oath. (1.) Obſerve that word, ver. 17. wherein God willing, &c. Wherein, or in which Oath and Promiſe he had ſpoken of before. (2.) It is made to the Heirs of Promiſe, and therefore to all that are Heirs with him, which all that are Chriſt's are ſaid to be; Gal. 3. 29. And if ye be Chriſt's, then are you Abraham's Seed, and Heirs according to the Promiſe. (3.) In ver. 18. he ſhews the Intent of the Oath to be, that we all do believe that have the Faith of Abraham; which Faith he doth deſcribe by ſuch Acts and Terms as might include the weakeſt of Believers, unto that end that all ſuch might have ſtrong Conſolation. So as we are to look upon Abraham in this manner of Diſpenſation (tho it was ſo ſingular an Example in him) to him perſonally, as that he therein was (Rom. 4. 16.) the Father of us all. As in the caſe of Imputation of Righteouſneſs by Faith, it is ſaid in the ſame Rom. 4. 22, 23, 24. It was imputed to him for Righteouſneſs, ver. 22. Now it was not written for his ſake alone that it was imputed to him, ver. 23. But for us all to whom it ſhall be imputed, &c. ver. 24. And indeed this is held forth in the very Promiſe which was then given him, and which the Oath confirmed. The Promiſe is in Heb. 6. 14. Surely bleſſing I will bleſs thee. Now in Gal. 3. 14. the ſame Bleſſing that was given to Abraham, is ſaid to come on the Gentiles that were after to believe; and ſo in bleſſing Abraham, he bleſſed us all that are Heirs of Promiſe; and we have the ſame Promiſe with him and them. For in the latter part of the Promiſe, in multiplying I will multiply thee, all the ſpiritual Seed are included. In multiplying I will multiply thy Seed, or all Seed to thee, (ſays God, Gen. 22.) which were the ſpiritual Seed, Heirs of Promiſe of Salvation with him, and Children of the Promiſe with his Iſaac, Rom. 9. 7, 8.

Let us next conſider what is the Matter of that Promiſe and Oath. 1*ſt*. In the Letter of it, 'tis to bleſs him and us with all ſpiritual Bleſſings in heavenly things, imported in this doubling the Words; In bleſſing I will bleſs thee; and ſo thy Seed. I will bleſs thee with Faith, with Holineſs, with Perſeverance to the end, and Salvation at the end. But, 2*dly*. The Apoſtle brings forth a deeper and higher Matter that this Oath and Promiſe did intend, and that is the Immutability of his Counſel confirming the Promiſe by an Oath; ſo then his own Counſels about Abraham's Salvation, and of us all, are the ſame kind of Decrees for the Salvation of us all that was for Abraham's.

1. If you ask what is meant by his Counſel here: I anſwer, It is his everlaſting Decrees and Purpoſes taken up within himſelf concerning Abraham's Salvation, and of us all; and it is the ſame kind of Decrees for the Salvation of us all that was for Abraham's.*

1*ſt*. I ſay God's Decrees and reſolute Determinations concerning our Salvation, are imported by the word Counſel. Concerning Jeſus Chriſt to be crucified, the Apoſtle utters himſelf thus; Acts 4. 28. that the Jews did but whatſoever God's Hand and Counſel determined before to be done. His Counſels then are his Determinations and Purpoſes.

And,

* Jacobus Capellus doth analiſe the Matter of theſe 17 and 18 Verſes. Cujus duo ſunt præcipua capita. 1. Quæ-
am electionis: oſtendere hæredibus ſalutis, ii ſunt electi. Immutabilitatem, quam ſit firmum & immutabile ſuum prædeſtinationis decretum, Conſilii ſui ſecundum electionem ſcilicet. Capellus in verba.

Part I. And, 2*dly*. They are his Purpoſes within himſelf, and ſo differ from a Promiſe. A Promiſe made, is God's outward Declaration to do ſo and ſo for us, but his Counſel are his Purpoſes within himſelf, decreeing ſo and ſo, as in Epheſ. 1. 9. and v. 11. compared.

3*dly*. His Counſel imports theſe his Purpoſes which have been from everlaſting; Acts 4. 28. What thy Counſel determined to be done aforehand. And ſo it imports the ſame that Fore-knowledg doth, which in matter of our Salvation is ſaid to have been before the World began. And what other is this Counſel of his in matter of Abraham's and our Salvation, but the very ſame we find, Epheſ. 1. 3, 4, 9, and ver. 11? Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual Bleſſings in heavenly Places in Chriſt Jeſus, according as he hath choſen us in him before the Foundation of the World, in whom alſo we have obtained an Inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the Purpoſe of him who worketh all things after the Counſel of his own Will. What is the Counſel of God here, is Election and Predeſtination there.

2. As his Counſel ſhews it to be his electing Love and Purpoſes, ſo the Oath ſhews theſe to be immutably fix'd and pitch'd, and that to ſhew forth the Immutability of the Promiſe the Oath was given, as ver. 17. of my Text imports. God's Oath ſhews an Unchangeableneſs, not a Peremptorineſs only, but an Irreverſibleneſs, and that the Matter ſworn to ſhall never be recall'd. Therefore in Pſal. 89. when God mentions his Oath to David, the Type of Chriſt, and to his ſpiritual Seed, (the ſame that was here made to Abraham's Seed) ſays God there in the 35*th* and 36*th* Verſes, Once have I ſworn by my Holineſs, that I will not lie unto David, his Seed ſhall endure for ever. Ver. 34. My Covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my Lips; it having been thus confirmed by an Oath. Our Divines have generally owned this Notion, and from thence in the caſe of our Redemption by Chriſt, that he ſhould ſuffer in our ſtead, have obſerved, that all God's Threatnings of the Law (as the Law it ſelf alſo) was given without an Oath added, and that ſo God might diſpenſe with any Commination or Exchange of the Perſons threatned, and put Chriſt in their ſtead, for all thoſe Threatnings were without an Oath. For if they had had an Oath annexed to them, we had been everlaſtingly undone and loſt, and Chriſt's Redemption would not have ſaved us. But now the Goſpel coming, and Promiſes thereof, becauſe God intended them with an Immutability, he hath therefore confirmed them by an Oath, Heb. 7. 21. Thoſe Prieſts, viz. of the Law (ver. 19.) were made without an Oath, and therefore were changeable: as (ver. 12.) he ſays, both Law and Prieſthood were to be changed, becauſe made and given without an Oath, but this with an Oath, and an Oath irreverſible by him that ſaid unto him, (unto Chriſt namely) The Lord ſware and will not repent, thou art a Prieſt for ever. Where he gives an Oath, he will never repent, nor make Alteration of it, viz. of what he hath ſworn unto.

3. I add, that ſuch an Oath is abſolute; and tho there are Qualifications that God will work, which are neceſſary to our Salvation, and unto the compleat Performance of the Oath, yet theſe Conditions God ſuppoſes and includes in the Oath, and by the Oath undertakes to work them, and effect them in us. When therefore God took this Oath concerning Abraham's Bleſſing, I bleſſing will bleſs thee, &c. (which alſo takes in the Salvation of all the ſpiritual Seed) God did abſolutely ſwear and undertake to perform and accompliſh it, and to that end withal to give all theſe Qualifications requiſite to the full Performance. God doth not ſwear by halves in it, but to do the whole as to Abraham and our Salvations. Why now I appeal unto all ſober Spirits that will conſider things, whether they will or dare ſay, that God ſhould make an Oath for Abraham's Salvation, when yet according to the Principles of Free-Will-Grace, as they ſtate it, the Performance of this Oath muſt depend upon Abraham's Will, and to the end of his Days, and his Will muſt caſt the Iſſue of it, and God would only have been to give him ſuch Aſſiſtance as he ſhould have a Power to do ſo and ſo. It was Abraham's Will that muſt have caſt the Event, which is ſo mutable and changeable as any of ours is, or can be ſuppoſed to be. Can we think that God in Swearing that he would ſave Abraham, and bring him to obtain the Bleſſing, as the Phraſe is here, ſhould depend upon the Mutability of ſuch a Man's Will? He was to live many Days after this; and if God in his Oath had not undertaken to carry on his Will effectually and invincibly, as well as to ſave him in the end, if he went on to will, there is a Suppoſition and a Poſſibility that his Oath might have failed, and that God ſhould have taken his own Name in vain. I might ſay the like concerning Iſaac, who was included in the Oath, who was a young Man at this time, he being the firſt of the Seed, the Pattern of the reſt. He was included in the Seed abſolutely, and God's Promiſe was abſolute as to give him Iſaac, ſo to continue Iſaac, that his Covenant might continue with him for ever as it was. And do we think that God would betruſt an Oath, ſuch an Oath, as to ceaſe to be God, if it were not performed upon any Creature's Will? What tho they ſuppoſe he ſhould foreknow certainly their Wills would hold out unto the end, yet would God honour a Creature's Will, ſo mutable a thing as they ſay 'tis, as to venture and pawn an Oath upon it, and ſwear for their Salvation in this manner, ſo as to ſay if Abraham be not faithful Abraham to the end, I will not be God. Do you think that God would debaſe himſelf ſo much, if that the keeping Abraham and Iſaac, and by conſequence us all unto the end, had not depended upon his Will ſo as to overcome and carry on theirs and ours infallibly unto the end? If God ſware by himſelf, then certainly he ſware by all himſelf, and will therefore put forth all in himſelf to the utmoſt, whereby to make good his Oath, and therefore his Will and Power to the utmoſt whereby to make good his own Word, nay to make good himſelf. Their Principles put God upon theſe Straits, that tho God will vouchſafe ſuch Means and Helps as by the Laws of Free-Will-Grace they ſay he doth uſe; yet if the Will of Abraham in the Freedom of it, or of any or of all the Saints, ſhall be deficient on its part, then God cannot ſave him, for he hath tied himſelf up unto the Principles of the Liberty in the Will, to act or not to act according to its innate Liberty, and ſo according to this Principle he ſhould ſwear by his Holy ſelf to work what he is not able to work, nor can undertake to work. It may be objected, that ſomething in Abraham was made the Cauſe of that Oath, ver. 16. By my ſelf have I ſworn, ſaith the Lord; for becauſe thou haſt done this thing, and haſt not with-held thy Son, thy only Son, that in bleſſing I will bleſs thee. And therefore it was not an irreſpective or an abſolute Oath, but founded upon an Act of Abraham's. 1*ſt.* I anſwer in general, The Papiſts (as Pererius) would draw this Particle becauſe, (ſet before the Promiſe and Oath, ver. 17. and then again repeated, v. 18. and put after the Oath) to favour their Merits. And truly the Force of thoſe Particles will as ſoon, yea rather make for their Merits than for God's having in his Decrees had a ſimple Fore-reſpect unto this famous Act of Abraham's Obedience as foreſeen, and upon the Foreſight of which he ſhould have thus immutably reſolved, and taken up ſuch a purpoſe in his Decrees: but it will ſerve the turn of neither.

1. Becauſe the Promiſe or Matter ſworn unto was given to Abraham long before this his high Act of Obedience, and therefore it cannot be the Merit of this Obedience, nor yet could the Foreſight of this Obedience after to come, any way be the Ground of making that Promiſe; for it is the Promiſe that contains the Matter of the Oath ſworn to. Now God long before this Oath gave the ſame Promiſe to Abraham without an Oath, which here he confirms with an Oath; Gen. 12. 2. I will bleſs thee, and thou ſhalt be a Bleſſing, and in thee (that is, in thy Seed, as here, Gen. 22.) ſhall all the Families of the Earth be bleſſed; (as here in Heb. 6. it is ſaid, all the Nations, &c.) and the ſame again is in Gen. 18. 17, 18. And the Apoſtle alſo (Heb. 6.) affirms the ſame, by ſaying that the Promiſe had teſtified the ſame thing that this Oath did, and that the Oath was but a Confirmation thereof. If indeed the Promiſe had been but now firſt given upon his Obedience, there might have been ſome Colour for Merit, or a reſpective Decree, but ſo it was not. And it is inconſiſtent to think a Promiſe declar'd a long time before, ſhould be in reſpect unto an Act that was to come after; for it muſt be ſomething that had at that preſent been performed by Abraham, upon which, as foreſeen, (if any thing foreſeen had been the Ground of it) the Promiſe ſhould have been declared. For it being ſo that at the giving of the Promiſe he was actually and indubitately eſtated thereinto, and poſſeſſed of it, it therefore muſt have been ſome preſent or former Act of Obedience, upon the reſpect of which (if any ſuch Reſpect had been) the Promiſe ſhould have begun to be uttered to him. Now in that Gen. 12. thoſe Promiſes are ſaid to have been given him at, and together with God's firſt Command and Invitement of him to go out of his own Country, and as antecedent to any Act of Obedience firſt put forth by him.

Part 1. Thus we have the Account in ver. 1, 2, 3. Now the Lord had ſaid unto Abraham, Get thee out of thy Country, and from thy Kindred, and from thy Father's Houſe, unto a Land that I will ſhew thee. And I will make of thee a great Nation, and I will bleſs thee, and make thy Name great; and thou ſhalt be a Bleſſing. And I will bleſs them that bleſs thee, and curſe him that curſeth thee: and in thee ſhall all the Families of the Earth be bleſſed. There you have the Promiſes and the Date of them; and then his Obedience follows after as the Effect of thoſe Promiſes uttered to him, and moving his Heart thereunto. Thus expreſly (ver. 4.) it follows, So Abraham departed as the Lord had ſpoken to him, &c. So that of the two it muſt be ſaid, that Abraham had rather an Eye and Reſpect unto the Promiſes firſt given abſolutely unto him, than that God had a Reſpect unto Abraham's Obedience foreſeen, and that he did thereupon declare them. And it will remain that God's eternal Counſels had firſt reſolved to do ſuch and ſuch things for Abraham out of mere Grace, and from thence put them into Promiſes, and utter'd them to Abraham without mention of reſpective Conditions, upon which he ſhould give forth theſe Promiſes as foreſeeing Abraham would do ſo or ſo, and thoſe Promiſes drew his Heart to that Obedience upon the Manifeſtation of them.

But, 2. Altho we grant that theſe Promiſes and this Oath after them might have been given with a reſpect unto ſome former or preſent Act of Obedience, yet ſtill the Decree or Counſel that determined to give thoſe things promiſed, might ſtill be, yea and was, abſolute, that is, without reſpect to thoſe Acts. Even as a Father may and doth often abſolutely reſolve within himſelf to give ſuch and ſuch good things to his Child, and yet defers giving the Promiſe of them to him until ſuch or ſuch an Act or Acts of Obedience are performed by him, and then in giving the Promiſe of them profeſſeth an high Approbation of that Obedience, and as a Gratification or Remuneration of it to him, makes the Promiſe, altho the Counſel and Determination of it in his Heart had been abſolute. And ſo indeed in Subſtance and Effect the Apoſtle ſpeaks here, that both the Promiſe and Oath were but to ſhew or declare the Immutability of his Counſel and abſolute Determination taken up before, ſo as ſtill the Decree and the Immutability of it was fixed firſt, and God did but by theſe utter and declare it. It was not his Oath made his Counſel for the future immutable, but his Counſel being immutable, he did by his Oath ſhew it, and gave Demonſtration thereof.

3. That ſingular Obedience was the Occaſion of the Oath, as Rivet ſpeaks. By my ſelf have I ſworn it, (ſays God) becauſe thou haſt done this, and haſt not withheld, &c. But it was the Immutability of his Counſel that was the ſupreme Cauſe why Abraham Did that thing. It was that which was the Cauſe of that Obedience in Abraham, and of the Oath and all; and if he had not been greatly ſtrengthned by the Promiſe before-given, which had abſolutely declared and ſhewn what his Counſel was, Abraham had never arrived at ſo high an Act of gracious Obedience as this was.

Nor, 4. Would God for one ſingular Act of Obedience have ſworn then his perpetual Perſeverance, which was to conſiſt in ſo many other Acts of Grace to ſucceed for ſo many Years yet to come till after Abraham's Death, had not his own Grace immutably decreed it firſt, and therefore it was that he did not ſtick to make Declaration of it by an Oath irreverſibly, which if it had been left to Abraham's Will, only aſſiſted with Power to perſevere or not to perſevere, (as 'tis ſaid of all other Believers by the Arminians, that ſo they are left) God would never have ventured an Oath thus.

But, 5. What he ſware to Abraham here, therein did God in Perſon ſwear to all Abraham's Seed, the Heirs of Promiſe with him, whoſoever they be, and therefore their Salvation and Perſeverance is as ſure as Abraham's, tho they never do or did perform any ſuch an high Act of Self-denial as Abraham here did. And therefore this muſt wholly flow from the Immutability of God's Counſel both towards Abraham and them all alike, or elſe Abraham had this promiſed him upon more hard and higher, yea unnatural Terms, than the reſt have.

The Corollary which I infer from hence is, That the Promiſes of Abraham's Salvation and ours are but Extracts, Tranſcripts of God's everlaſting Decrees concerning Man's Salvation. His Counſels within himſelf are the Original, and thoſe are the Types. The Matter of the Promiſes are the Decrees of Election. Promiſes re but God's inward Counſels put into Words and into Writing: As when a Man makes his Will which he had contrived within himſelf, he ſets it down, and ſeals r ſwears to it before Witneſſes. Or Promiſes are but the Expreſſions of Election ut concerning Perſons and things only. There is this differing Caſe between the Caſe of Abraham and Iſaac in this Particular, that the Perſon of Abraham by Name was expreſſed in the Promiſe made of them. But the Promiſes made of the reſt of he Seed are as to Perſons made indefinitely, concerning whom the Perſons are not amed, but yet intending them very Perſons, and them only, and therefore they re called Children of Promiſe as well and as much as Iſaac was. And in that Place ſaac is called a Child of Promiſe, as he was an elect Child of God, and declared by romiſe ſo to be, to prove Election, which is the Subject of that Chapter; and firſt ſaac, then Jacob's Inſtance brought for the Proof of it.

It is next to be conſider'd, how doth this Oath, as to the Matter of it, belong to s?

1*ſt*. It doth, re ipſa, in the Nature of the thing, belong to us as well as to Abra-am, and our Salvation is ſworn to as well as Abraham's, and therefore it is made re whether we have attained the Aſſurance of it or no, if we be true Believers. nd indeed I deſire my Salvation to be no ſurer than Abraham's was, and it is as re by this Oath as his was.

2. Yet it tends to the ſame end that it was made for to Abraham, which was for he Confirmation of him in his Faith, and to us to give Aſſurance of Hope, Heb. . 11. for that is the Head of this Diſcourſe, and he carries it along in his Eye, ver. 17.) to give a ſtrong Conſolation, even as it ſerved to give Abraham Aſſurance, o it ſerves to give us.

As for Obſervations upon this Oath, as it relates to us, and Abraham's Example herein in the Tendency of it, to give us Aſſurance, I would conſider this Oath wo ways.

(1.) In the Matter of it, as it is to be made uſe of by all Believers as a Ground for hem to attain Aſſurance by.

(2.) In the Circumſtances of it, as by the Story it appears it was perſonal and ngly given to Abraham, and God's Dealings with him in doing of it, are to be conſider'd, which are not common to all Believers, but yet hold ſome parallel with od's Diſpenſations to ſome eminent Saints in the New Teſtament, as in relation to is giving Aſſurance to them, as he gave to Abraham.

My Obſervation upon the Oath in the Matter of it, as 'tis common to all is this, hat the Immutability of God's Counſel in his electing Grace doth in the whole of t lie as a fit Object to all Believers, even the weakeſt, ſo as it is not only warrantable for them to have Recourſe to it, and apply it to themſelves, but it is their Duty. ſhall prove and explain this by Parts.

1. That it belongs to all Believers, we have ſhewed before from ver. 17, & 18. ut,

2. That which I obſerve for this purpoſe is, That his Scope was to relieve even he weakeſt. Do but obſerve how (ver. 18.) when he deſcribes Believers, his Deſcription of them is ſuch as includes the weakeſt, and ſuch as have not attained a aith of Aſſurance but of Recumbency, altho the Faith of thoſe that have Aſſurance ay be included in that Deſcription. Yea, in the general it may be obſerved in hat Verſe, that he ſpeaks of Conſolation, and ſtrong Conſolation, as of a thing hich yet might be obtained as diſtinct from the Faith which he doth deſcribe, for o the Words run. He ſpeaks of their Conſolation as of a thing which they might ave for the future. But the Faith which he deſcribes is that which in the time aſt all thoſe had already attained, and might now attain to this ſtrong Conſolaion, ſo that their ſtrong Conſolation is a diſtinct thing from their firſt Faith exerciſed at Converſion; and he chuſeth to decipher all Believers by the Acts that were t firſt, tho continued ſtill, that ſo he might be ſure to include all the Seed. But et us examine every Word whereby he doth deſcribe their Faith, and it will be ound to be ſuch as I have ſaid, and which the weakeſt, even they that want Aſſurance, have.

1*ſt*. His firſt Expreſſion, We that have fled for Refuge: This ſpeaks the very Heart and Condition of one who at firſt begun to believe, and doth not neceſſarily mport Aſſurance that he is ſaved, or that he ſhall certainly be ſaved. For it ſpeaks but his running and flying for Refuge and Shelter to be ſaved. And, as I ſaid, it ſpeaks the very Heart and Condition of ſuch a Man at that time, and in his firſt Act of Believing, (tho he exerciſeth it all his Life, whether with Aſſurance or without it) but his Condition at firſt is that which this holds forth. (1.) He hath a Senſe of preſent Danger, and that the extremeſt, as a Man in danger of Death by reaſon of his own Sins that come upon him, together with an Apprehenſion that the Wrath of God abideth on him in the Eſtate he hath thereunto continued in. And ſo, (2.) Flies out of, and from that Condition, (and that word imports a terminus à quo) or, if you will, he flies à Deo irato, from an angry God, (or from out of that Dominion wherein there remains nothing but Wrath to him, if he continue therein) unto a God of Grace, and his Dominion of Grace in and through Chriſt, as the Scripture expreſſeth it, Rom. 5, & 6. And this his then Condition, and this Act of flying for Refuge thereupon, doth not neceſſarily contain in it Aſſurance of being ſaved, &c. but only a Hope that he may be ſaved from the Wrath to come, even as Coming to Chriſt imports a Believing on Chriſt, that we may be ſaved, (as Chriſt ſpeaks when he ſays, Come unto me that ye may have Life) as alſo a Believing on Chriſt that we may be juſtified, as the Apoſtle's Speech is, which imports not a Knowledg that we are juſtified, or that we have Life. And thus much the Metaphor here barely inſinuates, whether it be taken for one that is in danger of his Life, and ſeeks to ſave it by flying to another Dominion, or to a Privilege-place, as the Murderer fled to the City of Refuge, Numb. 35. not as then knowing he ſhould be able to arrive thither, or whether the Gates would be ſet open to him, or whether it be taken for ſuch a Flight as that of Joab to the Horns of the Altar. And all we Believers may from our Experience well know that the firſt Acts of Faith at Converſion, and perhaps for a long while after, were but ſuch as theſe: And yet we can all ſay, we (ſeeing our loſt Condition) have fled for Refuge all of us.

2*dly*. If we conſider what it is to lay hold on the Hope ſet before us, the Queſtion here may be about the word Hope, whether the thing hoped for ſhould be that intended, or the Hope which out of the Goſpel offers it ſelf to, and riſeth up in and to a Man's own Heart and Apprehenſions, from what is in and out of the Revelation of Grace made therein. And thus we may take Hope for the Grounds thereof ſet before the Soul in the Goſpel, together with the Hopes which they beget in Mens Hearts upon the Revelation of them, that the Salvation ſpoken of may be theirs, and he or they may be the Perſon that ſhall obtain it. This I find to be the Senſe of Calvin, and of the moſt conſiderative late Interpreters, and my main Reaſon (as theirs alſo ſeems to be) is, that in the next Verſe he ſays, which Hope we have as an Anchor, &c. Now the Hope there compared to the Anchor of the Soul muſt be the Hope which a Man hath in his own Heart for himſelf to obtain it, and it cannot agree to the Object of Hope or thing hoped for, ſince the things hoped for are ſuch, for which this Anchor is caſt into within the Vail. And I add not ſimply the Act of Hope in our Hearts, but withal the Grounds of that Hope, as ariſing from out of the Revelation of the Goſpel: Or as Calvin doth moſt aptly expreſs it, confidendi materiam, the Matter of Hoping, there being in the word Hope, as he ſays, a Metonymy of the Effect for the Cauſe, and ſo the Promiſe on which Hope bears up it ſelf and is grounded, is connotated in that word Hope. So then I expound the Words thus, That to a Man truly a working upon by the Spirit of God, the ſame Spirit (as he is a Spirit of Faith to him) doth begin to raiſe up in his Heart a Hope from ſome Declarations or other in the Goſpel, about the Grace of God, and the Intent of Chriſt coming into the World, and the Tenor of ſuch Promiſes laying forth this before him, that there is an Hope for him that he may be ſaved, notwithſtanding his ſinful Condition; as 'tis ſaid, There is Hope in Iſrael concerning this thing. And he is ſaid to lay hold on this Hope, which the Spirit of God hath thus raiſed up to him and in him, as a Man is ſaid to lay hold on the Hopes of ſuch a Preferment, which the Intimations of the Perſon in whoſe Power it is, ſet before him, and he reſolves not to let ſlip the Opportunity of it, but to put in and ſeek it with all his Might. So here, this Believer lays hold faſt upon the Hopes that have been begotten in him, and the Grounds thereof, and will not caſt them away, but holds them faſt, and that ſtrongly too (as the word ſignifies) with all his Might, and he will not at any hand forſake those Mercies which he hopes may be his own.

Certè in vocabulo ſpei eſt metonymia, effectus pro cauſa accipitur: Ego promiſſionem intelligo cui ſpes innititur; neque enim iis aſſentior qui ſpem accipiunt pro re ſperata. Calvin. in verba. Thus alſo Cameron, Jacobus Capellus, Gomarus.

Hope is taken here, as Cameron would have it, in oppoſition to an utter Deſpondency, whereby a Man doth caſt away all Hope, and lets all go; as they in the Prophet, who ſaid, there is no Hope. Now then this alſo does not neceſſarily ſpeak full Aſſurance, but a Faith rather that wants it. For,

1. Becauſe that 'tis barely and ſimply called Hope, with diſtinction from full Aſſurance of Hope, in ver. 11. here is the Hope of the Recumbent expreſſed, but there the Hope of one fully aſcertained and enſured. And again, this Hope is diſtinct from Conſolation in the ſame ver. 18. And Hope thus ſingly taken in this Diſtinction, (ver. 11.) ſpeaks a lower Matter than Aſſurance: and we uſe in ordinary Phraſe to ſay of a Matter we are not fully certain of, I hope well. Under the Old Teſtament, when Aſſurance was ſo rare a thing, for they were generally under Bondage, their Faith was expreſſed by this, thoſe that hope in his Mercy. I obſerve there is Hope, as it is in us ſometimes ſingle and ſimply ſaid, and there is a good Hope, which is riſing up to ſome Degrees of Aſſurance. And in all Languages when we would expreſs Hopes that are exceeding promiſing, we call them good Hopes, when yet we are not ſure; and this word we have, 2 Theſſ. 2. 16. Now our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and God even our Father, which hath loved and given us everlaſting Conſolation, and given us good Hopes through Grace, comfort your Hearts; that is, more and more with further Degrees. And that Conſolation which is already vouchſafed but under good Hopes, is yet called Everlaſting, becauſe it is ſuch as will not (finally) be taken from us, tho ſuffering many Interruptions at preſent. The Conſolation under ſuch good Hope is everlaſting Conſolation, but it riſeth not up to ſtrong Conſolation, which the Apoſtle ſays they may here attain, and which thoſe that have an Anchor that holds faſt may yet want.

2. This Hope is ſaid to be ſet before them to lay hold on, becauſe the Groundwork and Foundation is in the Promiſes, and the Things declared in the Goſpel, which give the Heart this Hope for its own Salvation. As for example, the Promiſe being indefinitely expreſſed concerning ſome; and that there is a Seed ſhall be made Partakers of it; and that Chriſt died for Sinners; by ſuch Promiſes as theſe indefinitely expreſſed doth the Spirit of God work a Hope in the Heart of the weakeſt Believer, and cauſes the Heart to think with it ſelf, why may not I be the Man that ſhall obtain? And from ſuch Expreſſions ſet before us, the Heart doth gather it ſelf up into Hope, and by the Power of God lays hold on them in ſuch Goſpel-Manifeſtations that may give it Hope. As to Benhadad's Servants, a Word, tho afar off, did give them Hope concerning the Life of their Maſter, and they laid hold upon it: and ſays the Soul, take away this Hope and you take away my Life. The Devil comes and perſwades a Man to caſt it away; but ſays the Soul, I have laid hold on it, and I will never let it go; I will hold it and keep it, and hold to it: And tho neither of theſe Words either of laying hold, or that it is ſaid to be ſet before us, do expreſs that we have poſſeſſion of it, or Apprehenſions that it is ours already, but that we view it before us; and likewiſe the word to lay hold, or to retain ſo faſt as I will not let it go, is ſhort from being a Perſwaſion that it is already mine, but argues indeed that I would have it mine, and therefore lay hold upon it, and ſeek it that it may be mine, and that I would keep it for mine, yet with Hopes it ſhall never be taken away.

3. That Similitude of an Anchor, tho it would ſeem to expreſs an Aſſurance of Hope, in that it's called ſure and ſtedfaſt, is more enclining to expreſs the Hope of a Recumbent, than Aſſurance of Hope: for he that caſts Anchor, caſts Anchor in the dark, blindfold as it were in the bottom of the Sea. It expreſſes a pure Act of Faith, joined with Hope of what a Man ſees not, and it is uſually caſt in Extremities, juſt as when a Man fears he may be caſt away, knows not but he may; and when he caſts it, he knows not whether it will take hold of the Ground or no; and ſometimes it comes back again. And whereas 'tis ſaid, 'tis an Anchor ſure and ſtedfaſt, it follows not that he ſpeaks in reſpect of a Man's own Apprehenſion, but 'tis ſo re ipſa, in the nature of the thing it ſelf, through God that ſecretly ſtrengthens it. That weak Hope which a poor Believer hath doth ſtay it, and but ſtay it, as a Ship in a Storm, that it ſhall not ſplit upon Rocks of Deſpair. God makes a mere it may be, and who knows but that God will be merciful to a Man, which is as ſlender a Hope as may be, and as a weak Straw for holding the Heart in a great Extremity of Temptation, and yet God makes it as ſtrong to hold the Heart that it ſhall not ſink or be caſt away, as the ſtrongeſt Cable that is. It is ſure, becauſe it breaks not, ſnaps not aſunder as the Ropes of the Anchor uſe to do; and it is ſtedfaſt, becauſe where it hath took hold, there it ſticks, and holds the Will as firm to cleave to God, that he will not let him go till he bleſs him and aſſure him, when the Aſſurance in the underſtanding of the Party, that God will certainly ſave him, may be fluctuating, and in that reſpect his Soul be caſt up and down, and ready to ſink, and that in the Storms of Doubtings to the contrary. Therefore it doth not neceſſarily imply Fulneſs of Aſſurance.

CHAP. VI.

How abſolute Election and abſolute Promiſes are the Ground of Faith of Recumbency.

THE Ground of all Faith is an Expreſſion of God in his Word, which is either a Command or a Promiſe. Now the Grounds of Juſtifying Faith are accordingly the Promiſes of Juſtification and Salvation by Chriſt contained in the Word, and the Command of God to reſt on them for their Salvation. Now that which I would eſtabliſh is this, that indefinite Promiſes may be and are ſufficient Ground to draw the Heart in to believe. By indefinite Promiſes I underſtand ſuch as are not made univerſally to all Men, as ſome would have the Promiſes run, as that God hath loved all, and Chriſt died for all; nor ſuch as particularly deſign out the Perſons that ſhall be ſaved, or are intended, (as conditional Promiſes do, and the Promiſe firſt made to Abraham perſonally did deſign out himſelf as intended): but they are called Indefinite, becauſe they mention that only ſome of the Sons of Men are intended by God, not all; and that without mentioning particularly or perſonally who thoſe Perſons are. So as they are not indefinite as leaving the thing promiſed uncertain, for Salvation is abſolutely pronounced unto ſome of the Sons of Men, but only becauſe they deſign not the Perſons who are certainly intended. Such are thoſe Promiſes, Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners; God was in Chriſt reconciling the World; which is made the Matter of the Goſpel's Miniſtry. And tho the Promulgation of this be made to all Men, (Preach the Goſpel to every Creature) yet this is not the Goſpel to be preached that God hath promiſed to ſave every Creature, tho upon this Promulgation of them it becomes the Duty of every one to come to Chriſt, and a Command is laid on Men to do it. Now a Soul that is newly humbled looks out for a Promiſe upon which he may come to Chriſt. He cannot reſt on Promiſes conditional, for he ſees no Qualifications of Faith or any Grace in himſelf. 'Tis true, ſays that Soul, He that believeth ſhall be ſaved, but I am now to begin to believe, and have not Faith yet; and what Ground will you give me of Believing? For this there is no Anſwer, but to lay ſuch Promiſes before him; God ſo loved the World, that he gave his only Son; Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners, &c. But how (will the Soul ſay) ſhould I know I am one? That, I ſay, all the World cannot yet aſſure thee of; no Promiſe is ſo general as certainly to include thee, none ſo certain as to deſign thee. How then, ſays the Soul? Say I, they are all indefinite, and exclude thee not, they leave thee with an it may be thou mayſt be the Man; and it is certain ſome ſhall be ſaved, and there is nothing in thee ſhuts thee out, for God hath and will ſave ſuch as thou art, and he may intend thee. As therefore there is in ſuch Promiſes a Certainty of the thing promiſed, that it ſhall be made good to ſome, ſo there is an Indefiniteneſs to whom, with a full Liberty that it may be to thee. Now if the Heart anſwer but the Promiſe, two things are begotten in it.

1. An Aſſurance of the thing promiſed, that the Promiſe is as true as that God is, which is the Aſſurance James requires, ch. 1.

2. But then concerning the Party's own Intereſt that is to believe, the Soul is not aſſured, nor can be, that he is one intended, till he hath indeed believed; but the Indefiniteneſs of the Promiſe begets only an Hopefulneſs that he may be intended, and that is all that can be required of ſuch a Soul, and enough to draw forth (if his Aſſent be ſpiritual) true Acts of Juſtifying Faith, of truſting, waiting, coming to Chriſt, &c. which when the Command ſhall alſo back and urge him in particular unto it, and make it a neceſſary Duty to him, (tho yet he knows not certainly he ſhall be accepted) all this ſerves to draw him on to Faith through the Power of the Spirit accompanying both.

Now that ſuch indefinite Promiſes back'd with the Command, are Grounds ſufficient enough to draw on ſuch Acts of Faith, there are theſe Proofs.

1. We have the firſt in Heb. 4. 11. Let us labour therefore to enter into that Reſt, eſt any Man fall after the Example of Unbelief. By entring into Reſt there, he means Faith; ver. 3. We who have believed do enter into Reſt. It appears alſo from the Opposition when he ſays, Leſt any fall after the Example of Unbelief; ſo as he evidently xhorts unto Faith. Now this Exhortation, Let us therefore endeavour to enter in, r truly to believe, and ſo take heed of a falſe Faith, is an Inference of ſome thing aid before. Now what was it the Apoſtle had mainly driven at in all his Diſcourſe efore? even this, that there was a Promiſe of Reſt, (ver. 1.) and of a Reſt that emains for the People of God, ver. 9. More particularly if you examine what Promiſe this is upon which he exhorts to Faith, it is expreſſed plainly in the 6*th* Verſe; eeing it remains that ſome muſt enter into Reſt, let us therefore endeavour, &c. This as not an univerſal Promiſe that all Men might enter in and be ſaved, nay it is the ontrary, for this Promiſe was fetch'd by the Apoſtle out of an Oath God had made gainſt ſome that they ſhould not enter in, for ſo it is in the 5*th* Verſe, If they ſhall nter into my Reſt. It is ſuch a Promiſe as ſhews that ſome are excluded with an Oath, it is a Promiſe that in the Letter of it hath Swearing in it that ſome ſhall not nter, and is but by Implication or Illation a Promiſe that ſome ſhall. It is indefinite, for he ſays, that only ſome muſt enter in, not naming who, but only ſpeaks of ome, and ſo leaves it, yet with a Certainty of the thing promiſed unto ſome, in ying ſome muſt enter in. There is a muſt put upon it, that ſome ſhall and muſt: n the 9*th* Verſe he calls thoſe, for whom the Reſt remains, the People of God, the lect, and yet upon this indefinite Promiſe he exhorts every one. He ſays not only, et us (viz. all) endeavour to enter in; but (ver. 1.) he ſays more expreſly, Let us ar leſt a Promiſe being left, (or forſaken of us) any of you ſhould come ſhort of it: So s tho it is but an indefinite Declaration of God's Mind to ſave ſome, yet every one bound to put in for it, and to take heed that not any one fall ſhort.

2. I ſhall prove this by Reaſon. 1*ſt.* If the Indefiniteneſs of God's Mind declared oncerning his Intent of ſaving but ſome be not ſufficient Ground to Faith, then all hoſe Divines whoſe Judgments having been for particular Election and Reprobation, and ſo they muſt needs underſtand the Mind of God's Promiſes not to be univerſal, could never have come to have believed ſavingly, which would be too hard a enſure. Since therefore the Indefiniteneſs of the Promiſe was the Ground of their elieving, this alſo may be Ground ſufficient to any Man's Faith.

2*dly.* Faith in us is to be but anſwering unto, and conforming to the Promiſe in e Word; and if it be, it may be true Faith: Now there are Promiſes in the Word at ſpeak but indefinitely, that ſpeak but it may be's. Thus Moſes propounds the romiſe to the People when they had ſinned, I will go to the Lord, (ſays he) peradventure I ſhall make an Atonement for you. Thus the Ninevites reaſon too, Jonah 3. 10. Who knows but the Lord may be merciful? And yet this wrought Repentance, Chriſt tell us. So likewiſe ſpeaks Joel, ch. 2. 13, 14. Turn unto the Lord, for is gracious and merciful, and repenteth him of the Evil; who knows if he will return d repent?

3*dly.* In temporal Promiſes Believers exerciſe true Acts of Faith, and it is required them to believe about them; and yet theſe Promiſes are but indefinite, not abſolute to their Perſons, tho it is certain that God will perform them to ſome: Now erefore why may it not be as well thus in matter of Salvation?

4*thly.* Anſwerably the Acts of Faith themſelves required of us, are ſutable to ſuch romiſes. Truſting, and waiting, and coming to Chriſt, and caſting ones ſelf upon him, are the Acts of Application in our Faith. Now theſe are indefinite Acts of e Soul, i. e. which are and may be performed when we know not certainly that hing ſhall be ours, or that we ſhall obtain it. They are often performed by Men other caſes with the greateſt Venture that may be, as in Benhadad's Servants that t Ropes about their Necks, and Sackcloth on their Loins, Peradventure (ſay ey) he will ſave our Lives. Thus Men come to Chriſt, John 6. 37. when they know not but they may be caſt out. Yea, ſuch a Submiſſion is an Act of Faith, and hath its chief Exerciſe in caſe of not knowing that a Man is certainly intended.

5thly. Where there is but a true Hopefulneſs, there may be Faith; 1 Pet. 1. 21. That your Faith and Hope might be in God. And to beget an Hope, the indefinite Promiſes do ſerve ſufficiently. This Saying, that Chriſt died to ſave Sinners, I not knowing but I may be one, may breed Hope. If you had no Promiſe, then indeed you were without Hope; Epheſ. 2. 12. Without Hope, without Promiſe: But where there is but a Promiſe indefinitely revealed, there may Hope be begotten; and where Hope is, there may and ought Endeavours to be, and ſo an endeavouring to enter in and to believe: when thou canſt not ſay to the contrary, then there is Hope concerning this thing, Ezra 10. 2. And if there be ſo, then there may be Faith of Recumbency, or truſting on Chriſt to perform it to me.

6thly. Where Love may be begotten, there may Faith or Truſt alſo, for Faith works by Love; but Love may be begotten when there is not a Certainty that we ſhall obtain. How many fall in love that are taken with a Perſon's Excellency and Beauty, and Sutableneſs to them, tho they have but little Hope, no Aſſurance they ſhall obtain the Party's good Will? This we ſee daily in humane Experience, and why may it not be ſo in this Caſe? Yes, we ſee it to be in many that love God for his being good to Sinners, &c. tho they apprehend not certainly that he will be ſo to themſelves. And if Love to God is thus produc'd, why may not Faith or Truſt be ſo begotten? Yea, is not the pureſt and greateſt Truſt ſhewn in putting ones ſelf into the Hands of a Spirit whom we know to be noble, tho we certainly know not how he will deal with us?

7thly. The main thing that is in Faith, and which draws on the Heart to cleave to the Goodneſs of the Promiſe, is the Sight of the things promiſed in their Reality. Thus it appears through the whole 11*th* Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, that Faith being the Evidence of things not ſeen, they ſaw and were perſwaded of them, and embraced the Promiſes. Now therefore if there be but a ſpiritual Sight, and Aſſurance, and Perſwaſion of the Exiſtence, and Worth, and Excellency of the Things promiſed, (as Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, Juſtification, &c.) tho the Aſſurance of the Intereſt be wanting and be left but indefinite, this will cauſe the Heart to venture all for them, and to rely on God, and come unto Chriſt, and this is enough. On the other ſide, if it were a Truth that God intended and had promiſed to ſave all, and this were preached and believed, yet if Men ſaw not the Excellency of things promiſed, the Perſwaſion of their Intereſt would not move them.

8thly. It is plain Peeviſhneſs not to come in to Chriſt upon ſuch indefinite Promiſes. It is ſuch an obſtinate Temper as was in them who would not believe unleſs he would come off the Croſs. Thus Men will not come to him unleſs he will aſſure them by a general Promiſe that all may be ſaved, and are intended, and ſo themſelves particularly. 'Tis as if Men ſhould ſay, We will not go to Church, for there is not room for all; and unleſs a Church be built into which all may come, we will not ſtir. You do not ſo in caſe of Advantage or Preferment: Men uſe all Endeavours for a Place or a Living which many put in for, and but one can obtain it. Tho all run, ſays the Apoſtle, yet but one obtains; and yet the Worth and Glory of the thing moves, becauſe it is a Crown, 1 Cor. 9. 25. So why ſhould it not be here? Yea, if you be affected with the things themſelves, you will be glad to venture.

9thly. Upon ſuch indefinite Promiſes it becomes a Duty to come to Chriſt for Life, and God may back ſuch Promiſes with a Command juſtly, and therefore Faith may be wrought, and Men are to come in upon ſuch Promiſes. Many Duties are commanded upon mere Uncertainties: Thus the believing Wife is commanded to ſtay with her Husband; For what knoweſt thou (ſays the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 7. 16.) but thou mayſt ſave thy Husband? In like manner doth God command thee to go to Chriſt for Salvation, altho his Promiſe holds forth but a what knowſt thou but thou mayſt ſave thy Soul, and wilt thou not go to him? So then altho the Promiſe were but uncertain in reſpect of its Performance to thee, yet it is certain that God commands thee upon this to go to Chriſt and truſt on him, and give thy Soul up to him; and this Command is not indefinite but univerſal, and therefore a Soul eying both, hath full Ground to come in.

But yet let me add this, that together with the indefinite Promiſe to ſave, God, where he works Faith, conveys a ſecret hint to the Soul whom he draws to believe, of his Mind, and good Will, and Inclination towards it. Chriſt doth ſome way or other break his Mind to it, and God gives the Heart a ſpecial Ticket of Favour from himſelf over and above that indefinite Revelation in the Word e're the Soul will come at him, which is part of that teaching of the Father, meant John 6. 45, 46. He that hath heard and learnt of the Father, comes unto me. God whiſpers in a Man's Ear that which doth ſpecially incourage him, and ſo Chriſt alſo doth by his Spirit. Thus it is ſaid, (John 10. 3.) that Chriſt calleth his own Sheep by Name, and they hear his Voice. The meaning is, that whereas there is a general Invitation goes to Mens Ears to come to Chriſt, and a general indefinite Proclamation, which all Men living in the Church do hear or may hear; and this is the Voice of us Miniſters, and God's Voice in and by us; yet there is conveyed with this a ſecret Voice, and private Ticket, and Impreſs on their Hearts whom God means to ſave, of ſpecial Mercy towards them: which Voice only his own Sheep hear, whom alſo he is ſaid to call by Name, to ſhew it is thus particular, it being a ſpecial Intimation, as if a Man were called by Name, as Cyrus was call'd by Name: and as of Moſes, God ſays, that he knew him by Name, i. e. took ſpecial notice of him; ſo doth Chriſt of thoſe whom he calls by Name, and that makes them follow him. And the want of this is given as the Reaſon (John 10. 26, 27.) why the Jews believed not; for Chriſt ſays, They were not his Sheep: and therefore in the diſpenſing the Promiſes he did not thus ſpeak to their Hearts as to Believers he did, for he adds, My Sheep hear my Voice, (the Voice before-mentioned) and I know them, and they follow me. He brings this as the Reaſon why he diſpenſed not that Voice to them, and the want of that he aſſigns to be the Cauſe why they believed not. And if you conſider ver. 16. it will appear that the Reaſon they are not called his Sheep, is not becauſe they believe not already: for there he calls thoſe his Sheep whom he had not yet brought in, whom yet I muſt bring in, (ſays he) and how will he bring them in? They ſhall hear my Voice; he will call them by Name too, as he had done others. And therefore (ſays he) this is the Reaſon why you, being not of my Sheep, believe not, for if you were, I would ſpeak to your Hearts, and cauſe you to hear my Voice, and to come in; which becauſe I vouchſafe not to you, therefore it is ye believe not.

Now concerning this ſecret Hint or Ticket given, which I make to be in Faith, let me add this to prevent miſtakes. I do not mean that it is always ſo loud a Voice as ſhall quell and prevail againſt Doubts in a Man's Senſe, ſo as to triumph with Aſſurance that Chriſt is his: no, that is not the Extent of it; for we ſhould condemn a Generation of righteous Men, if I, or any other ſhould teach ſo; but it is ſuch a ſpecial Intimation as really gains the Heart, and incourageth it to come to Chriſt, and carries it on againſt Diſcouragements, and it doth the Deed ſo prevalently, as that they follow Chriſt where-ever he goes, and will never leave him. To explain my meaning further, you muſt conſider, that in the ſpeaking of a Spirit in and to our Spirit, tho the Voice be entertained, yet it is not always diſtinctly diſcerned to be from another. Satan when he works effectually on the Children of Diſobedience, (2 Theſſ. 2. 9, 10.) ſo as he makes them believe the Lie of Popery, yet their Souls perceive not a Voice of Satan diſtinct from their own Thoughts, for then they would not believe the Error, but their Hearts cloſe with the Suggeſtions of the Devil; and as ſoon as caſt in, they are entertained as their own Thoughts, yet upon Satan's effectual working. Thus when the Spirit of Chriſt from Chriſt ſpeaks the Mind of Chriſt to the Soul to cauſe it to believe in him that is true, it follows not it ſhould diſcern that Voice diſtinct from its own Thoughts in its own Senſe, but his own Thoughts from it effectually entertain ſuch an Apprehenſion ſo as to carry him on to Chriſt. And the Reaſon is, becauſe every Thought in a Spirit, ſuch as the Soul is, is a kind of Speech, it is called λόγος, and therefore the very Speeches of the Spirit caſt in are often not diſcerned from the Man's own. Thus if a Man's Ear did form Sounds in it ſelf, and Voices in it ſelf, then a ſecret Whiſper would not be diſcerned from its own Noiſes, as a loud Voice would be. There is a loud Voice of the Holy Ghoſt coming as a Witneſs to aſſure, and then he ſpeaks ſo loud and ſo diſtinctly as a Man diſcerns it to be diſtinct from his own Spirit, and infallibly to be the Voice of God; and it is as if a Voice from Heaven ſhould ſay, Thy Sins are forgiven: but this firſt Voice of Chriſt in the Extent of it being to carry the Heart on to Chriſt, and not to aſſure it; therefore it is not always diſcerned as Part I. diſtinct, yet ſo as the Heart is taught effectually this Leſſon to go to Chriſt; and that other Voice is therefore call'd a Witneſs, becauſe it hath relation to this Hint given to put it out of queſtion. It is like the ſecret Scent a Blood-hound hath gotten of the Hart that is ſtruck, when the Maſter hath bad it go ſeek, which tho he ſee not the Hart, yet it carries him on till he find him out: So this ſecret Voice of the Spirit, tho it prevails not againſt Doubts in a Man's Senſe, yet it carries him on againſt Diſcouragements, there being an Impreſſion of Chriſt's ſpecial Inclinableneſs to it, which cannot be worn out by any Temptation.

Now if this be in Faith, (as you ſee it is) then it is not an eaſy Work; for you ſee Chriſt vouchſafes not this to all to whom the Goſpel is preach'd, he did not vouchſafe it to thoſe Jews who heard the outward Voice of his Mouth as a Miniſter of Circumciſion, and who believed not becauſe they heard not his ſpecial Voice, which he did not vouchſafe becauſe they were not his own Sheep. Can all the Angels in Heaven, or Miniſters on Earth, procure this Voice to you? or bring you News of it? No, and yet without it the Heart makes not out after Chriſt; and therefore Paul makes this to be the great Difficulty to bring a natural Man in to believe, becauſe all his Underſtanding cannot know God's Mind in the Word unleſs the Spirit reveal it; Who knows the Mind of a Man but the Spirit that is in him? ſo nor doth any know the deep things of God but his Spirit, who is a Privy-Counſellor, and is in his Boſom: And therefore he concludes to ſhut Nature out herein; Who hath known the Mind of the Lord? but we have the Mind of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 2. 16.

CHAP. VII.

How the Faith of a Believer ſhould depend on Electing Grace for Salvation.

THO a Believer views God's electing Love, and depends on it for his Salvation, yet he doth not ſo commit his Soul to that one ſingle Act of God's chuſing Perſons, as ſo to rely on it, that God having choſen Mens Perſons on his part, they themſelves ſhould care to do nothing as on their Parts. No, this is the higheſt degree of Profaneneſs and Contempt, and a perverting of our whole Chriſtian Religion, and to bring in that of Simon Magus, and indeed the Devil's Divinity, for he was the moſt famous Sorcerer in the World; Acts 8. 9, 10, 11. It was DEPTHS, as they themſelves termed their Doctrine; but the Holy Ghoſt, who penn'd the Epiſtle, animadverts upon it, and calls them Depths, Rev. 2. 20, 25. The Gnoſticks took no other part of the Chriſtian Profeſſion but that, By Grace ye are ſaved; and ſo left Men unto a licentious Liberty, which Peter ſpeaks of, 2 Pet. 2. 19. Whilſt they promiſe them (i. e. their Diſciples) LIBERTY, they themſelves are the Servants of Corruption: That was the latter part of their Doctrine; and Jude ſupplies the fore-part in ſaying, (ver. 4.) that they turn'd the Grace of our God unto Laſciviouſneſs: And yet even this hath been affixed as a Calumny upon them that profeſs the Doctrine of irreſpective Election. I will therefore explain in theſe following Particulars the true Dependance of a believing Soul upon electing Love for Salvation.

1. A Soul who hath begun to be wrought upon by taſting how good the Lord is in his Electing Grace, or (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Col. 1. 6.) ſince the Day he firſt heard of it, and knew the Grace of God in Truth, hath been affected with it, caſts himſelf upon it to be ſaved. And ſo quick and ſpeedy, and operative was the Power of God in the Miniſtry of thoſe firſt times; and to ſuch a height did their Convert-hearers aſcend, as to apply themſelves unto a Dependance on that Grace for their Salvation. Where God hath thus begun it in us (and we cannot begin any good thing unleſs God himſelf begins) we may look toward his electing Love: Nor is any Man fit to look towards the Grace of God in Election, till God awaken him with the gracious Knowledg of it, no more than a Sinner not yet convinced of his Sin by Nature, and his being under the Wrath of God for Sin, will ever look after Chriſt as a Saviour.

2. It is not my Deſign to conſider whether all Saints, from their firſt Converſion, know this Grace of God in Election, as that Grace upon which Salvation doth depend; but whether ſooner or later (as God pleaſeth to diſpenſe greater Diſcoveries of Grace to him) and whenever his Soul begins to take in the Senſe and Savour of this Grace, he ſhould follow on with might and main in his Inqueſt after it. Let him follow on to know the Lord and his Grace, and God will rain down Righteouſneſs upon him, as the Prophet ſpeaks in the Pſalmiſt's Words. Let him follow hard after him, where the Words in the Original are, follow him behind, i. e. If thou ſhouldſt loſe that ſight of his Face, and the Taſte that he is good begins to grow leſs and leſs in thy Heart; yea, and he to try thee, turns away his Face from thee; yea, and turns his Back on thee, as offering to go away, then down on thy Knees, and like an importunate Beggar follow him behind, and with the moſt vehement Earneſtneſs deſire him to give thee his Grace, and that Manifeſtation of his Face again, that overcame and took thy Heart at the firſt, and then thou ſhalt be ſaved.

3. Let ſuch a Soul be ſure to look at and take all along with him, the whole Complex of God's Methods and holy Purpoſes and Decrees of Grace belonging to the Doctrine of Election. Now there are two ſorts of Decrees, the firſt is an Act of Abſolute Election of the Perſons that are elected unto Salvation; the other is of the MEANS by which and through which God brings Men unto Salvation, who are in that manner elected. And both theſe are decreed with the ſame Peremptorineſs, as to the decreeing of each, and with like Abſoluteneſs indiſpenſably: ſo as no Man ever was or will be ſaved, without his diligent Attendance to the Decree of the Means, as well as to that of his Salvation, which is the Decree of the End, as we call it. And the putting theſe two together doth pave the way of ſeeking God according to Election, compleat. Theſe two ſorts of Decrees we find diſtinguiſhed and ſtated to our Hands; 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. God hath from the beginning choſen you (viz. your Perſons) to Salvation. With that he begins, and this is that Election firſt mentioned, Epheſ. 1. 4. And it is our Foundation, that is, of our Perſons elected, and alſo of all things elſe, (the Means) decreed in order to our Salvation: and theſe two Decrees are alike fixed, and made abſolutely neceſſary to be attended to; but the latter as ſubordinate, or rather ſubſervient to the other, and ordained to accompliſh and bring unto effect that firſt Original Act, the Election of our Perſons, by bringing us to that Salvation which was ordained to us. And this Decree of the Means the Apoſtle ſubjoins in thoſe Words, Through Sanctification of the Spirit, and Belief of the Truth, that is, of the Goſpel, which in New-Teſtament-Speech has that Title, the Truth, by way of Eminency. Which two Means are indeed no other than a true ſaving juſtifying Faith, and Holineſs of Heart, and new Obedience. And theſe two, as they are the decreed Means to bring us to that end of Salvation, ſo they are Parts or Pieces of that Salvation it ſelf, which we were choſen unto by the firſt Decree, and which God has ordained, not as Conditions of that original Act, of which he had ſaid before, He had choſen us from the beginning unto Salvation. Conditions they are not, in any Senſe, either of the Arminians, who would have a Man acknowledg when he has truly believed that then he is actually elected, and not before: (Now according to our Doctrine, God chuſes no Man for his Faith, but unto Faith, and through Faith;) Or of thoſe other Divines that orthodoxly do hold Election of Perſons, who do call them quaſi Conditions, but as it were Conditions, no more than a Pepper-corn, if it be required, as an Acknowledgment of a Rent-Farm, which is the loweſt diminutive Term. But I am afraid to give it, leſt it ſhould diminiſh from the Praiſe of the Glory of God's Free Grace, and leſt he ſhould not brook it.

There are two Points which God is eſpecially tender of; that of Juſtification is the one, and his Free Grace in Election is the other. But God is eſpecially tender in point of Election; for that Act is wholly within himſelf, wherein he has no Creature to look on, but the Ideas of us which himſelf hath formed, and repreſents us to himſelf by. In which firſt Act alſo within himſelf, his Grace, the higheſt Principle in him, aſſumes to himſelf the moſt ſovereign abſolute Freedom. If you come to that Point with him, (and it is of that Point he ſpeaks it) God in his Soveraignty proclaims, (Rom. 11. 35.) Whoever hath firſt given him, he ſhall be recompenſed, be it but a Pepper-corn. I am afraid to diminiſh an Hair from God, in ſpeaking what will have the Sound or Preference of the leaſt ſuch appearance in the point of Juſtification. It is not the proud Notion of MERIT only, (tho the Primitive Fathers uſed the Word in a good Senſe, but our Proteſtants have generally avoided it) but of Works too muſt be exploded. God loves not Faith as a Work, tho it ſaves his Children whom he loves, much leſs will he admit it to be conſider'd Part 1. in Election, which is a purely pure Act of himſelf within himſelf. Beſides, I cannot ſee that what is a part of Salvation it ſelf (at leaſt the beginning of it) ſhould have put upon it the Nature of a Condition. If a Father ſhould ſay, Marry my Daughter, upon a Condition that you marry her, I ſhould think he at leaſt ſpeaks not ſo properly; for to marry her is to have the Perſon her ſelf, and not the Condition of having her. And whereas the Scripture ſays, Look unto me all the Ends of the Earth, and be ye ſaved: Looking (there) unto him, is not the Condition of being ſaved, but that whereby we are ſaved, and ſo he that believes hath eternal Life. Marrying a Man's Daughter (in the caſe mentioned) is not a Condition, but an eſſential Ingredient into the conſtitutive Nature of the thing, and the Means of enjoying her Perſon.

Both the Decree of, and Production of the Means decreed, is in Scripture-Expreſſion termed the FRUITS which flow from his original Decree of the Election of the Perſons, in the virtue of which God beſtows them; and God's Choice of the Perſon is the Cauſe of our performing them, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, (Pſal. 65.) Bleſſed is the Man whom thou chuſeſt, (there is the firſt Decree, and then follows) and CAUSEST to approach unto thee. So as the beſtowing of theſe Means which we are to obſerve and perform, are ſeminally contained in the Choice of the Perſon, and in the Love out of which he is choſen. Yea, the Love that God bears to the Perſon choſen, is that which moveth God's Heart to appoint the Means, and then to work the Means in the Heart. Yea further, this Love moves God to the Act of Election it ſelf, and is therefore the original Grace of all Grace, even as that we call Original Sin is the Cauſe and Matrix of all Sin. Let no Man therefore (this being the Order of God's Decrees) ſeparate what God hath inſeparably and unalterably joined.

5. Hence, and above all, the principal Object which I propoſe to your Eye and Purſuance, is this Love and Grace which was and is in God's Heart, and is that Love which is the Cauſe of all, but eſpecially of working Faith, and quickning at the firſt, and ever after, according to Epheſ. 2. 3, 4, 5. Yea, this Love and Grace is the Cauſe of Election it ſelf, and of all the Fruits of it; Epheſ. 2. 3, 4, 5. But God who is rich in Mercy, for his great Love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in Sins, hath quickned us together with Chriſt, (by Grace ye are ſaved;) and hath raiſed us up together, and made us ſit together in heavenly Places in Chriſt Jeſus. It hath been even his Love from everlaſting which hath done it, according to that in Jeremy, ch. 31. I have loved thee with an everlaſting Love. Let the Soul then infinitely admire that Love, and poſſeſs his Heart with all the royal and glorious Properties of it, as that it is Free, Abſolute, Unchangeable, Everlaſting, &c. as follows in thoſe Royal Titles in which the Scriptures do array and preſent it to the Sons of Men; and let him admire and adore, that the Great God ſhould love ſo well his mere Creatures; out of which Love that abſolute Decree of Election did then flow, and all thoſe Purpoſes concerning the Means, which that Love all along continued unto a Man's Converſion, and doth then work, and put them in execution, unto Salvation it ſelf: (for this Love is Actus continuus, as the eternal Generation of his Son is, and yet from everlaſting, both:) So as at and before (yea, unto the very Moment before) a Man's Converſion, it is one and the ſame Love, for the Subſtance of it, that at any time was or ſhall be, and it is the ſame Love which wrought Converſion it ſelf, and which works every good Work in us that belongs unto Salvation; tho according to the general Rules of his own Word he hath obliged himſelf from diſcovering it any way, no, not to the Men themſelves, until that Fulneſs of time be come, appointed by his ſecret Will, for every elect Man's firſt Converſion and Calling. And therefore this Love is the Principal, Principle, and Object, which is to be addreſſed unto and pleaded, and God plied with the utmoſt Intenſneſs of a Man's Soul and earneſt Diligence, both for the Manifeſtation of it ſelf after Converſion, and alſo to convert a Man who is as yet to be converted. And this I eminently propoſe to be noted in this ſeeking of God in the way of Election; and my Propoſal of it is for two Uſes or Improvements of it, in the matter of Election.

1*ſt.* That the Soul may implore this Love and the Grace of it, to manifeſt and diſcover it ſelf unto the Soul of the Perſon by an intuitive Light of the Spirit, joined

vith a Word of Promiſe, with an overpowering Efficacy, as when in Prayer God ometimes anſwers, Thou art a Perſon ſo beloved!

2dly. That the Soul may alſo wait with the moſt vehement Expectations and ongings, (with a Neck ſtretched out, as the Apoſtle's Word is) how the Work of od goes on in him, and how the Diſcoveries of God's Grace do riſe and ſpring up him unto a more perfect Day.

3dly. That the Soul may humbly beſeech that pure Free Love, both to fulfil all d each of thoſe deſigned Graces and Bleſſings decreed together with that Act of lection; to fetch and dig out every Grace thou wanteſt, or art deficient in, in the xerciſe thereof, and to draw it forth out of that full and inexhauſtible Mine of lory which is in God's Grace; Phil. 4. 19. God ſhall ſupply all your need according to e Riches of his Glory by Jeſus Chriſt. And the Soul is to regard all and each of theſe conſequential Fruits that ſpring from ſuch a Love, and were as peremptorily de-eed to be in a Subordination, as Fruits of that great Act of the Election of Per-ns.

For a Concluſion, let me but lay open the Heart of one Scripture; Col. 1. 5, 6. Whereof ye heard before in the Word of the Truth of the Goſpel, which is come unto you it is in all the World, and bringeth forth FRUIT as it doth alſo in YOU, ſince the Day ye heard of it, and knew the Grace of God in Truth. The Grace of God principally meant (ver. 6.) is the Grace of elective Love, which is properly in God's eart toward us. But what ſhould be meant by the Grace of God made known by reaching by their faithful Miniſter, and which being known by them in Truth, rought forth Faith and Love in them from the Day they heard it? The Grace of od, as it ſtands in this Coherence, muſt be either the Grace which was by the Goſpel made known to be in God's Heart toward Sinners to move them to come in to God, and ſo to work Faith in them, whereby to be reconciled to God, or elſe it is e laying open what the Grace of God required to be wrought in them; and ſo to irect them how they ſhould turn to God, or elſe both of theſe, which is the Truth. is not what the Grace of God requir'd to be wrought in them that only or chiefly hould be intended by Grace; becauſe that Grace of God intended is that Grace (if ou obſerve the Series of the Words) which after it is known, brings forth that Fruit oken of, Fruit in YOU, ſays the Apoſtle. Now that cannot be underſtood chiefly only of inherent Holineſs or Faith, for that Grace it ſelf is the thing that is the ery Fruit it ſelf, ſaid to be brought forth, and that in them (as the Phraſe there is). nd therefore it is not the Grace, or the knowing of that Grace begun experimentally to be in them, that is wholly or chiefly meant. There muſt therefore be another race of God that was the Cauſe of that Grace or Fruit in themſelves, which could e no other than the Grace in God's Heart towards them, taught and diſcovered to hoſe Coloſſians by the preaching of the Truths of the Goſpel, ver. 5. which Goſpel ſelf is therefore ſtiled the Grace of God which bringeth Salvation, that is, the bleſſed News to ſinful Men, of Salvation by the ſole Grace that is in God's Heart towards hem, Tit. 2. 11. And this doth moſt properly and principally bear the Name of race, and of the Grace of God, and is in God himſelf, who is the God of all Grace, Pet. 5. and is the Cauſe of all Grace in us, and that by its appearing, being made nown to us in Truth. This is gratia gratians, the Grace that makes us gracious.

But now, the Inquiſition will be, What Grace of God born to us Men ſhould be ere meant, whether to all Men alike in common, a Love of God alike to all Men; r the Grace of Election exerted at Election of ſome Men choſen out by God out of the eſt of Mankind, deſigning particularly Salvation to their Perſons, but promulged nd proclaimed to all Men, ſo as his Love to Mankind hath appeared to all Men, ut is not intended to all Men. That this Grace ſhould be intended here, there are heſe Reaſons which prove it.

(1.) Becauſe the Truth and Reality of God's Grace indeed is but to a Remnant, Rom. 11. 5. Even ſo then, at this preſent time, (when the Apoſtle wrote) there is a Remnant, according to the Election of GRACE, ver. 5. Whoſe very Perſons (God's Choice carries the ſway in it) are ſtiled the Election, The Election hath obtained, and the reſt that are not elected were blinded, ver. 7. And this Election is but of a Remnant whom God had reſerved to himſelf, or they had all gone alike to the Fire, and been as Sodom and Gomorrah, if they had been left to their own Free Wills.

(2.) I find Election it ſelf expreſſed by finding Grace in God's ſight, whilſt others of the Sons of Men are not vouchſafed it. Thus Moſes his Election is expreſs'd, Exod. 33. 16. Wherein (pleads Moſes to God) ſhall it be known that I (Moſes my ſelf) and this People, have found Grace in thy ſight? The Phraſe is uſed to expreſs the being God's own choſen People. And as for Moſes, God owns it, and expreſſeth it to himſelf; ver. 17. I will do as thou haſt ſpoken, for thou haſt found Grace in my ſight: And he ſpeaks more expreſly for Election yet, And I know thee by Name. And as for the People of the Jews, (Jer. 31. 2, 3.) the choſen Elect among that People are ſaid to have found Grace in the Wilderneſs, the reſt being cut off by the Sword; and thereby their being an Elect People is alſo expreſſed, for there it follows, I have loved thee with an everlaſting Love, and that I am ſure you will ſay imports their Election. And as for Moſes, whereas he grew bold upon that Encouragement, I know thee by Name, to ask of God to ſee his Face and his Glory; God gave him this Anſwer, I will make all my Goodneſs to paſs before thee, and will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee, The Lord, the Lord God, gracious and merciful, &c. viz. all the Attributes of his gracious Nature. But to whom ſhould the Attributes be applied for their Salvation? God there makes a Reſerve of the ELECT only to be the Perſons who ſhould have the Benefit of theſe Attributes for their particular Salvation; and therefore adds, I will be gracious to WHOM I will be gracious, and I will be merciful to WHOM I will ſhew Mercy. As if he had ſaid, I have indeed proclaimed all the Attributes of Grace and Mercy that are in my Nature, in common to all the People, but with this Reſerve to my ſelf, that as to my WILL which governs the Management of thoſe Attributes unto Perſons for their Salvatian, this I keep the Counſel of it unto my ſelf, according to the Counſel of my own Will, Epheſ. 1. 11. And ſo anſwerably it is in Exod. 34. I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful. And the Apoſtle Paul alledgeth theſe very Words, I will, &c. to prove the Point of Election to be by ſpecial Grace, and the good Pleaſure of his Will, in the caſe of Moſes his Election, and in the caſe of hardening Pharaoh. And that Phraſe, they found Grace, doth not import a Grace inherent or diſcover'd in them, but a Grace from God without them, or dwelling in God's Heart towards them, and coming from without upon them, not in them. And it is to be obſerv'd, that that is the Phraſe God himſelf in expreſſing his ſhewing Mercy to the Perſons whom he there chuſeth, (as hath been opened, Exod. 33. 19.) I will be merciful ON WHOM I will be merciful. And to bring this home yet nearer to theſe Coloſſians, and what is ſpoken of their receiving the Grace of God without them, which was the Cauſe of their ſo quick Converſion, as I obſerved; this was truly the Grace of God inventa & non quaſita, in Iſaiah's Words, I am found of them that ſought me not, as he promiſed. And of whom and what ſort of Men did he propheſy it? Expreſly of thoſe Heathen Gentiles that had been Heathens to the time of their Converſion; Iſa. 65. 1. it follows in that Verſe, And I ſaid, Behold me, Behold me, unto a Nation that was not called by my Name: which was punctually fulfilled in this City of Coloſs, who were Heathens, till the day they heard the Goſpel of the Grace of God, but from that time brought forth Fruit, and the like was in all the World. We poor Miniſters in theſe times ſtand picking the Lock, which asketh often much time, but the Apoſtles and Primitive Miniſters broke open the Door of Faith, as 'tis called.

Of the Acts of Faith.

BOOK I.

The Acts of Faith in the Underſtanding is a Sight of Chriſt, a Diſcerning and Knowledge of his Excellencies, and a hearty Aſſent to the Truths of the Goſpel concerning Him. That this meer Aſſurance of the Object, or a General Aſſent to the Truth of the Promiſes, is not the Act of Faith juſtifying, but an Application is Neceſſary. What the Acts of the Will are, which are exercis'd on Chriſt in Believing.

CHAP. I.

That Faith in the Underſtanding is a ſpiritual Sight and Knowledge of Chriſt. That it is a Sight diſtinct from Bodily Senſe, and from Reaſon, and other ways of Knowledge. That this Sight hath the greateſt Certainty in it, and realizeth to the Mind the Things believ'd. That the true Believer ſees the Spiritual Excellency and Glory that is in Chriſt, ſo as to have his Heart affected with it: That he ſees an Alſufficiency of Righteouſneſs in Chriſt: That he is perſwaded of Chriſt's readineſs to ſave ſinners, with ſome ſecret intimation that there is Mercy for himſelf, tho' a ſinner.

JOHN VI. 40.

And this is the Will of him that ſent me, that every one that ſeeth the Son, and believeth on him, might have Everlaſting Life.

THE Subject I intend to Treat of, is to ſet forth to you thoſe ſpecial Acts of Juſtifying Faith exerciſed upon and towards our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And (that I may be diſtinctly underſtood) when I ſay the Acts of Faith, I do limit my ſelf ſimply and meerly to thoſe Acts which are of Faith as juſtifying. There are the Offices of Faith, (as you call them) which are many and divers, each whereof have ſeveral Acts; as for example, It is the Office of Faith to juſtifie, it is the Office of Faith to ſanctifie, it is the Office of Faith to enable you to live in Communion with God and with Chriſt in all your wayes, &c. in all Conditions. Now I ſingle out one of thoſe Offices of Faith, and that is, as it Juſtifies, as it treats with Chriſt about Juſtification: And I ſhall conſider the Acts that it performs as ſuch. There are likewiſe ſeveral Degrees in Faith, in which every one of thoſe Offices is performed: There is weak Faith and ſtrong Faith, there is Faith of aſſurance, and Faith of recumbency. Now in diſcourſing of the Acts of Faith, my Scope is not to ſpeak of the high Degrees, but thoſe that are more eſſential, and are Ingredients in the loweſt degrees of Faith of recumbency, wherein a Sinner treats with Chriſt about Juſtification. There are alſo the Effects of Faith, as it purifies, and ſanctifies, and conformeth the Soul to Chriſt, and bringeth Joy and Peace, and worketh Love, and the like: My Scope is to handle none of theſe now. And thus by ſhowing you what my Scope is not, I do thereby open to you particularly what it is that I pitch upon. Now there is no one Scripture that puts all the Acts of Faith, as it treateth with Chriſt about Juſtification, together; neither ſhall I be able it may be to ſpeak of all, but I purpoſe to follow the Method that is here in this Text: And I begin firſt with that of ſeeing, He that ſeeth the Son, &c.

I purpoſe in a brief way to lay open thoſe Acts of Faith (as it juſtifies a Sinner) whereby the Soul doth pitch upon Jeſus Chriſt as the Object thereof. There is no one Scripture that mentions all, neither ſhall I be able to mention all to you; yet thoſe that are more eminent, and may come under what is here in the Text, I ſhall go over with as much brevity as I can.

In theſe Words, compared likewiſe with the 37*th. Verſe* of this Chapter, you have three ſeveral ſorts of Acts of Faith:

1. Seeing the Son: Every one that ſeeth the Son.
2. A coming unto him; ſo Verſe 37. (for you may take that Verſe in likewiſe) Him that cometh unto me.
3. A Believing on him: And believeth on him.

Now it is to be remark'd, that that Faith by which we are ſaved, (which the Apoſtle calls believing to the ſaving of the Soul) is ſeated in the whole Heart, ſo you have it in Act. 8. 37. If thou believe with thy whole Heart: And indeed every Faculty, and every Power of the Soul in believing doth put forth a ſeveral Sprig, a ſeveral Fibra into Jeſus Chriſt: As you ſee in the Roots that are in the Earth, every root ſhoots a ſmall ſtring into that by which the Tree and the Root is united thereunto: Thus are we rooted in Chriſt, and grounded in him, as the Expreſſion is in Coloſ. 2. 7. which is then when the Faculties do thus ſhoot forth ſeveral Acts, ſuitable to themſelves, into our Lord Chriſt, and then the Soul believeth on him.

I will begin firſt with the firſt Act of Faith here, and that is Seeing; which Notes out that Act of Faith which is in the Underſtanding, which we call the act of Knowledge. Hence we find that in Scripture our being juſtified by Chriſt is aſcribed to the Knowledge which we have of him; you have it in Iſa. 53. 11. By his Knowledge ſhall my righteous ſervant juſtifie many: When he ſaith by his Knowledge, he doth not mean that we are juſtified by the Knowledge that is in Chriſt, (though perhaps in ſome ſenſe that might be ſaid) but it is by the Knowledge we have of him. The Word His there is taken objectively: It is called you ſee here a ſeeing the Son: Here is the Act, and here is the Object: The Act it is Seeing, the Object is the Son. In this Sight of Chriſt there are four things which I would ſpeak to:

1. It is a Spiritual Sight or Knowledge of him.
2. It is a Sight in diſtinction to Bodily Sight, and in diſtinction from Reaſon, and other ways of Knowledge.
3. It hath a Certainty in it.
4. It hath a Reality in it.

It is 1. A Spiritual Sight, which doth diſtinguiſh it from all Knowledge of Chriſt after the Fleſh: For there is indeed a ſight of Chriſt, and a real ſight of Chriſt, which is contra-diſtinct to Faith, a ſight of the Bodily Preſence of Chriſt, and this the Apoſtle ſpeaks of in 1 Pet. 1. 8. In whom, though ye ſee him not, yet ye believe: And the truth is, our Faith ſhall end in ſuch a ſight, for we ſhall one day ſee him as he is; and to be believing in the mean time, having not ſeen, is that Bleſſedneſs which is pronounced Joh. 20. 21, 29. When Paul was Converted he ſaw Chriſt, his Eyes were elevated to ſee Chriſt, whether as in Heaven or in the Air I will not diſpute, as ſome do; but certain it is that he ſaw him, and yet that was not a ſight of Faith. Now in 2 Cor. 5. 16, 17. he prefers that Knowing of Chriſt after the New-creature, by that ſpiritual ſight the New-creature hath of him, to all the Knowledge of Chriſt after the Fleſh, in any ſuch viſible manner: Thus wicked men ſhall ſee him at the latter day, and be never the better for the ſight of him; but it is a ſpiritual ſight of Chriſt by the Eye of Faith that ſaveth a Man. In 1 Cor. 2. 14. the Apoſtle tells us, that Spiritual things are not known by the Natural Man, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned, ſo that the Knowledge of a Spiritual Man is a Spiritual Knowledge: The meaning is this, It is ſuch a Knowledge and Sight of Chriſt as is ſuitable to the ſpiritualneſs that is in him, it takes in a genuine Notion of him. Spiritual things may be ſet out by words to the Reaſon, and to the Fancies of Men, ſo as to take with them, but we do not know them, nor ſee them, till we ſee them purely and nakedly, by an impreſſion the Holy Ghoſt makes upon us; that conveys the proper, and native, and natural Image to us. As for Example, Go take a Song in Muſick, that is ſet, or written, or prickt upon a Book, a Man may be taught the Art of Muſick, ſo that he may know the proportions and harmony, according to the Rules of Art, that are in this Leſſon, as it is ſet, or prickt upon the Book; this artificial Harmony of it he may know, but yet notwithſtanding, the real, natural harmony, the Ear only taketh in when this Leſſon is ſung: Why? becauſe the Ear is that ſenſe which is ſuited to take in the harmony and ſound of Muſick. Thus, as God hath given us an Underſtanding to know ſpiritual things thereby, the Reaſon that is in them, the rational Excellencies of them, ſo far forth as they may be ſet out by words, all this the Natural Man takes in, but ſtill there is that which is natural and proper to the things themſelves, which he underſtands not.

2. It is in the ſecond place called a Sight, to diſtinguiſh it from Reaſon and other Knowledge: So Faith is expreſs'd, He that ſeeth the Son; and in Heb. 11. They ſaw the Promiſe afar off; and Abraham ſaw Chriſt's day, Joh. 8. 56. And though Chriſt is now come, and exhibited, and is taken again out of our view, yet it is the ſight of him that ſaveth us. It is not meerly knowing him, but it is knowing him in a way of ſight; for we may know him in a way of Reaſon, we may gather one thing out of another, and ſo have the knowledge of him, and yet not have that which is Faith about him; though whatſoever a Man doth believe he hath reaſon for it, Reaſon ſubſerveth and comes in to confirm it, yet the act of Faith lyes in a Sight, rather than in a Knowledge that is made up out of Reaſon.

The Holy Ghoſt ſtill when he ſpeaks of Faith, expreſſeth it to us by the Knowledge of the Senſes: Phil. 1. 9. Spiritual Knowledge is there called Senſe; the word is ſo, if you read your Margent, and it is ſo in the Original, That your Love may abound in Knowledge, and in all Senſe; ſo the word is. It's true indeed, that Faith is ſaid to be of things not ſeen, Heb. 11. 1. but yet it ſelf is ſaid to be a ſight: The things themſelves are not ſeen, that is, to Reaſon, and to the bodily Senſes they are not ſeen, but the Mind hath a New Senſe as it were put into it, by which it ſees them otherwiſe than either Reaſon or Senſe could preſent them to a Man.

The Holy Ghoſt (to make this a little out to you) when he doth work Faith in us, and reveal Chriſt and Spiritual things to us, doth two things:

Firſt, He doth firſt give us a New Underſtanding, a New Eye as it were, on purpoſe, that is as truly ſuited to behold Spiritual things as the Natural Eye is to behold Colours, 1 Joh. 5. 20. He hath given us an Underſtanding to know him that is true; that is, a New Eye to ſee Chriſt with; he puts a Spiritualneſs into the Underſtanding: He doth not create a New Faculty, but endues this with a New Activity, which is as much as if he gave us a New Underſtanding.

Secondly, When he hath done ſo, himſelf comes with a Light upon this New Underſtanding, which Light conveys the Image of Spiritual things in a ſpiritual way to the Mind, ſuch an Image of the things as is taken off from the things themſelves, ſuch as no form of words, no reaſoning, not all the Wit and Parts of a Man, no Diſcourſes about Chriſt and Spiritual things would ever form in him. The Angels, who have ſeen Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven, in his Glory, if they ſhould all come down, and uſe all their Art, all their Rhetorique, come with all their Pencils to paint and ſet out Jeſus Chriſt to us in the moſt lively manner that can be, yet all they could do, or could ſay, would not beget (without the Power of the Holy Ghoſt, without his art joined with it) ſuch a ſight of Chriſt as Faith gives us: If they ſhould all ſet themſelves to beget an Image of Jeſus Chriſt in our Minds and Underſtandings, it would be but a Parelion, as they call a falſe Sun. As we cannot ſee the Sun but by his own light, ſo we cannot ſee Jeſus Chriſt but by his own light, and by the light of the Holy Ghoſt.

There is a ſeeing of ſpiritual things meerly by the Effects, and there is a Faith wrought thereby; for the Devils they have a Senſe, and they have a Knowledge, and a real Knowledge too, (ſo far forth as Effects go) that there is a God, for they feel the laſhes of his Wrath upon their Spirits, yet notwithſtanding this is not Faith, this is not that Faith which is the Spiritual Faith, which is the Faith of ſight, which here this Text and the Scripture ſpeaks of. So that now it is a Spiritual Sight of him which is in the Nature of Faith: And the Truth is, it is ſuch an Image of Chriſt framed in the Heart; (and when I ſay an Image, I mean not the Image of Chriſt in Holineſs, but the Image of Knowledge of him; for a Man knoweth nothing, but there is an Image of it framed in his Mind;) ſuch a ſight of him by which we know him, as all the Creatures, and all the Knowledge, and all the deſcription of him in the World, would never work: As you have it in 1 Cor. 2. 9. Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, nor hath it entered into the Heart of Man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. He ſpeaks there of the things of the Goſpel, (and ſo of Jeſus Chriſt eminently above the reſt,) and of the Knowledge of them: There are ſuch Images of theſe things created there by a peculiar Artifice of the Holy Ghoſt, as never entered into the Heart of Carnal Men: It is his peculiar Art, (that's the truth of it) which is in no Knowledge elſe, that is thus in Faith. It is not that which we ſhall have in Heaven, for that is ſeeing him face to face; it is not ſuch a Knowledge only as we have of other things here below, which yet we believe really, though we never ſaw them; but I ſay, there is a peculiarity in it, which the Holy Ghoſt works in the Hearts of the People of God, which is the ſight of Faith. It is therefore called in 1 Cor. 2. 4. The demonſtration of the Spirit. There are two Principles in Scripture which all Knowledge, even of Spiritual Things, is reduced unto: The one is called the Revelation of fleſh and blood, Mat. 16. 17. the other is called the Demonſtration of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 4. Fleſh and Blood (ſaith Chriſt to Peter) hath not revealed theſe things to thee: Implying that there was a Knowledge which fleſh and blood works in us, which is the way of Man's Nature. But then there is another Knowledge which ariſeth from the demonſtration of the Spirit: It is light (as the Apoſtle tells us in Eph. 5. 13.) that makes all things manifeſt. How comes your Eye to ſee Colours, or to ſee any thing elſe? Why there is a light comes, and that light takes of the Image of the Colours, and of the things you ſee, and brings them to your Eye. Now Spiritual things are all nothing elſe but light, now God himſelf and Jeſus Chriſt is nothing elſe but light, and ſo is Heaven, it is called the Inheritance of the Saints in light. Now the Holy Ghoſt comes with the Beams of this Light, and every one of thoſe Beams doth bring the Image, the natural, native Image of the thing to the Eye, to the Underſtanding; and therefore the apprehenſion of it is called ſight, and we are therefore ſaid by the Pſalmiſt to ſee Light in his Light, Pſal. 36. 9. the Beams of the Sun you know convey every of them an image of the Sun, and ſuch an image of the Sun whereby you ſee the Sun ſo as nothing elſe can repreſent the Sun to you; and ſo the Holy Ghoſt he doth cauſe the Beams of God, and of Chriſt, (who as I ſaid is nothing elſe but light) for to ſhine into our Hearts, and all thoſe beams which he letteth and bringeth in, they convey the image of God and of Chriſt to us, and ſo we ſee him. In 1 Pet. 2. 9. We are ſaid to be tranſlated into his marvellous light: It is called marvellous becauſe it is above Reaſon, or the Natural Knowledge of a Man; and it is called His light, not only becauſe Chriſt works it, as in Eph. 5. 14. it is ſaid, Chriſt ſhall give thee light; but becauſe it is the light of himſelf, it conveys the Image of himſelf to the Heart.

Yea, let me tell you this, the ſight of Faith is ſo genuine a Knowledge, that tho' it differ in degrees, yet the very ſame Knowledge that Chriſt's Humane Nature hath of himſelf, the ſame Knowledge in its degreee doth the Holy Ghoſt

work of him in the Heart of a Chriſtian. This is a great ſpeech, but it is true, The Knowledge whereby Jeſus Chriſt knows and ſees himſelf, you muſt needs ſay is a natural knowledge of himſelf; that is, he ſees himſelf as he is in himſelf, not by hear-ſay. Now look what Spiritual Repreſentations Jeſus Chriſt hath of God, and of himſelf, and of his own Righteouſneſs, in his Mind, the Holy Ghoſt coming freſh from the Heart of Chriſt, ſtampeth the very ſame upon the Heart of a Chriſtian in his Meaſure. You will ſay, How prove you that? the Text is clear for it, in 1 Cor. 2. 16. We have the mind of Chriſt: He ſpeaks there of ſpiritual Knowledge; that whereas other Men have the letter, the litteral knowledge, yet they have not theſe thoughts, have not that Mind ſtamped upon their minds which is in Chriſt himſelf: But ſuch we have, (ſaith he) we have the Mind of Chriſt, we have thoſe ſpiritual thoughts as it were from his heart, becauſe we have the Spirit which works in us, impreſſeth upon us the ſame thoughts of him that are in his own Heart of himſelf. All other Enlightnings that Men have, they are from Chriſt indeed, he is ſaid, John 1. 9. to be the Light that enlighteneth every Man that comes into the World with all ſorts of common knowledge. As now go take the light of the Night, all the light you ſee in the Night by the Moon, it is all the light of the Sun, but yet it is not that light whereby the Sun conveys its beams to the Eye when it riſeth, and when a Man beholds it. So Men that are not regenerated, that have but a temporary Faith, they have a light from Chriſt, ſuch as is the light of the Sun ſhining in the Moon; they have a light, as from the Effects; they have a light alſo which the Letter of the Scripture, and the Spirit ſhining upon it, begets in them; but ſtill it is not a ſight of the thing it ſelf, it is not Seeing the Son, it is not ſuch as when the image of the Son himſelf is conveyed into the Mind and Underſtanding by the Holy Ghoſt. We may know there is a Sun by what light we ſee in the Moon, but it is another thing to have a beam of the Sun it ſelf ſhine into a Man's Eye, whereby the very Image of the Sun is conveyed into his eye. And therefore this ſight of Faith it is called ſight, becauſe it is thus elevated above all rational knowledge of Chriſt whatſoever; it is a further thing, though joined with it; it is (I ſay) ſuperadded to reaſon, let it be elevated and enlightned never ſo much by the Holy Ghoſt in a rational way. Go take a Temporary Believer, it's true he ſees thoſe things by the help of the light of the Spirit which Nature would never help him to ſee, and yet it is but by natural Underſtanding, remaining natural, and reaſon elevated, and reaſon improved, and reaſon enlarged and convinced. But Faith goes higher than all this, Faith is more than a Man's having an Optique Glaſs ſet before his Eye, to ſee that which elſe he could not ſee, becauſe it is ſo far off; the Eye of it ſelf is capable of it, if it ſtood nigh it. There is more than all this in Faith, it is as it were a new Eye, to ſee thoſe things in ſuch a manner as all the Optique Glaſſes in the World would never help a dim Eye to ſee at a diſtance. Therefore now Faith (as I ſaid afore) is called the demonſtration of the Spirit, all other knowledge is but by derived Images of the things of Chriſt, by hear-ſay; ſo much of Chriſt as may be conveyed to us by words, and by rational Diſcourſes, the Holy Ghoſt enlightning them: In all this there are but ſecondary Images conveyed to the hearts of Carnal Men, more or leſs, as they are more or leſs enlightned; but to ſee the Son as he is in himſelf, as here the Text holds it forth, this is proper to Believers. So that take any Man that hath been never ſo much enlightned in the knowledge of ſpiritual things, and not ſavingly enlightned, when that Man comes to turn to God, and to believe in earneſt, he will ſay he never ſaw theſe things before, he will ſay, he doth now ſee Chriſt ſo as he never ſaw him before, and that he ſees God in that manner as he never ſaw him before. And though he knew never ſo much before, yet now after he is turned unto God, he ſees That old things are paſt away, and all things are become new; as the Apoſtle ſays in 2 Cor. 5. 17. and he ſpeaks it in reſpect of Knowledge. Let now a Carnal Man ſpeak of Chriſt, and let a Holy Man who ſavingly believes, ſpeak of the ſame Chriſt, and of ſpiritual things, they ſhall both ſpeak of the ſame things, yet the knowledge, that is, the ſight which the Believer hath of Chriſt, and of ſpiritual things, is clearly differing from that of the other. I ſhall open but one Scripture to you to expreſs this, it is in Joh. 3. 12. Our Saviour Chriſt had been diſcourſing with Nicodemus codemus, about the point of Regeneration, which is a thing belonging to the Kingdom of Heaven; Now (ſaith he) if I have told you earthly things, and you believe not, how ſhall you believe if I tell you of heavenly things? What is his Meaning there of having told him of Earthly Things? He had ſpoken of Heavenly Things, and why doth he call them Earthly? Becauſe he had expreſs'd them under Earthly Words, and he had not given light, he had not gone forth with what he ſpake in a Spirit of Irradiation to Nicodemus his Heart; hence therefore Nicodemus clean miſtakes Chriſt. But now when Jeſus Chriſt doth enlighten a Man, whilſt he or the Miniſters of his Word ſpeak Earthly Things, he ſtamps the Impreſs and Image of the Heavenly themſelves upon the Heart, and then a Man believes; he conveys them in their Heavenly Hew, conveys them in that Notion and Apprehenſion that his own Heart hath of them, and therefore John 3. 11. (ſaith he) We ſpeak that we know, and teſtifie that we have ſeen: And We too who are Believers have the mind of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 2. 16. So that a Believer hath ſuch a kind of knowledge of Heavenly things as Jeſus Chriſt himſelf hath, ſuch a knowledge of the Son as Jeſus Chriſt hath of himſelf, in his meaſure; it differs indeed in degrees, but it is of the ſame kind.

Hence it is that a Believer is ſaid when he believeth, to witneſs to the truth of God, To ſet to his ſeal that God is true, John 3. 33. What is the Reaſon? Becauſe he knows the truths of God, the great truth eſpecially about Chriſt, which is the thing eminently he witneſſeth unto, and he knows it not by reaſon, but by ſenſe, by ſight, and therefore he is a Witneſs. For you know, if any Man give a Teſtimony meerly by hear-ſay, we account it as no Witneſs in compariſon; but if a Man ſpeak by ſenſe and by ſight, then he ſpeaks like a Witneſs. Now becauſe a Believer takes in ſpiritual things by a ſpiritual ſenſe, by a ſpiritual ſight, therefore he is ſaid to Witneſs when he doth believe.

And the ſight of Faith, though it is joined with reaſon, yet it is intuitive. We do not gather the knowledge of Chriſt out of other things, but it is a ſight of himſelf, in 1 Cor. 13. 12. We are now ſaid to ſee thorough a Glaſs, darkly, yet we are ſaid to ſee. Rational Knowledge is to gather one thing out of another, but the knowledge of Faith, ſo far as it is a knowledge of Faith, is to ſee a thing in it ſelf, to ſee Jeſus Chriſt in himſelf.

That I may demonſtrate this yet further, you ſhall find that the knowledge of Faith in the ſouls of Men, is not proportioned to the compaſs of their Natural Underſtanding; Why? Becauſe it is a way of Knowledge above what the Underſtanding naturally hath, or can be improved, or raiſed up unto, remaining natural; it is therefore a way beyond it, it is by way of ſight. What is the reaſon that God hath choſen Fools, rather than the Wiſe Men of the World? You ſee your calling, (ſaith the Apoſtle) how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, &c. 1 Cor. 1. 26. If God had meant to convey the knowledge of ſpiritual things only to thoſe that know him here in a rational way, and by reaſon, elevated by the Holy Ghoſt, certainly He would have choſen the Wiſe Men of the World, becauſe they by knowledge would have glorified him more in ſuch a way of knowledge: No, but he choſe the Fools of the World, becauſe he hath a way of conveying himſelf to their Underſtandings beyond the way of Reaſon, and that is by way of ſight. Therefore you ſhall obſerve, Men who are ignorant in a rational way, that cannot make out a rational diſcourſe of ſpiritual things, that cannot lay before you a rational Connexion of one truth with another, and when they ſpeak of them (though they have otherwiſe much Grace and Holineſs) they will ſpeak incoherently of them in their Expreſſions, and yet it is apparent that yet theſe Men, as being godly, have as ſtrong and deep a knowledge of Heavenly things as thoſe who have infinitely more ſtrength of natural reaſon: Why? becauſe Faith goes by way of ſight, it goes in a way beyond and above Reaſon, and the knowledge of God and of Chriſt in a rational way. When we come to Heaven, will God then proportion to you a knowledge of himſelf (and degrees of Happineſs depend upon greater degrees of knowledge of him) according to Men's Parts and Underſtandings which they had in this rational way here? No, but he lets in a light of himſelf, a light of Viſion, which he that hath the loweſt Parts, if God let in no more light to him, ſhall know more of him than theſe of far greater Parts, into whom he hath not let in ſo much light. And ſo doth God here, becauſe that Faith is ſight, and is the Prelibation, the Beginning of Heaven.

This is clearly (as to me) alſo the difference between that way of knowing God which Believers have now, and that which Adam had in Innocency; if Adam had ſtood, he amongſt his Children that had the moſt parts (thoſe parts being all carried in a rational way) ſhould have known more of God than he that it may be was more holy, and had lower parts. But it is not ſo in the ſecond Adam, becauſe he hath a way of letting things into the Mind beyond the way of Reaſon, by the way of ſight and ſpiritual light, conveying Beams of himſelf to us, which conveyeth thoſe Images of himſelf and of ſpiritual things to us, which neither Eye hath ſeen, nor Ear heard, nor ever entered into the Heart of Man remaining natural.

I will only give you a Caution, that I may not be miſunderſtood; for as this is a great truth, ſo I would clear it from Miſtakes: The Light of Faith doth not deſtroy Reaſon, but makes uſe of it, ſubordinates Reaſon to it ſelf, reſtoreth, rectifies it, and then uſeth it; even as Reaſon maks uſe of Senſe, though the Acts of Reaſon, the thoughts of a Man in a rational Soul are clean differing to what he hath in the ſenſitive Soul, yet Reaſon makes uſe of Senſe. And thus the Holy Ghoſt makes uſe of all the Rational Diſcourſes and Deſcriptions of Chriſt in the Word, makes uſe of the Letter of the Word, but by them conveys thoſe ſpiritual Thoughts of Chriſt, which all that Letter cannot hold forth to a Man: And as I ſaid afore, if the Angels from Heaven ſhould come and preach Jeſus Chriſt to us, ſhould with all their Pencils go and paint out what Knowledge they have of Jeſus Chriſt, they could not beget one ſuch ſight of Chriſt in the Heart as the Holy Ghoſt doth when he comes to work Faith. And yet the Apoſtle tells us it comes by hearing, and in hearing; the more rationally the Preacher diſcourſeth out of the Word, and lays open the Meaning thereof in a rational way, ſo much the better, becauſe it is ſuited to the Minds of Men; yet where the Holy Ghoſt works Faith, he conveys a light beyond all that Reaſon, though he makes uſe of that Reaſon too; this Word of God hath an Harmony of Reaſon in it, and if a Man would open a Place of Scripture, he ſhould do it rationally, he ſhould go and conſider the Words before, and the Words after; but yet ſtill if the Holy Ghoſt comes not with a further light than all this rational opening of the Word affords, a Man will never believe, for Faith is a ſight beyond it; the Holy Ghoſt uſeth Motives to move you to Holy Duties, but then he comes with a Power join'd with thoſe Motives, beyond the moral force of them; he uſeth ſigns out of your own Hearts to comfort you, but he comes with a light over and above thoſe ſigns; for if you ſhould ſtick there, you would never have comfort; ſo he uſeth Reaſon; he deſtroyeth it not, but ſubordinateth it.

The Apoſtle ſaith, that the Scripture is not of any private Interpretation, 2 Pet. 1. 20. If the Scripture might be known by the light of Reaſon, (it's written rationally, and ſuiting to Reaſon, I acknowledge) but if the Scriptures might alone be known, and the meaning of the Holy Ghoſt therein, by the light of Reaſon, they were of Private Interpretation, for Mans reaſon is but a Private Interpreter in compariſon of the Holy Ghoſt the Author; yet notwithſtanding he uſeth Reaſon to interpret it: But when he hath done, he himſelf comes and ſeals up to a Mans ſpirit that this is the meaning of the Holy Ghoſt in it, or elſe a Man never believes. So that it is the light of the Holy Ghoſt now that caſteth the Ballance, and he doth this not only in the Principles of Religion, but in deductions of Principles too; for though a Man gather by Reaſon one thing from another, yet if he have not the light of the Spirit to ſeal up thoſe Deductions, he doth not believe in a ſpiritual way, therefore it is called in Job 33. 15. Sealing of Inſtruction. If the Holy Ghoſt do not go, and by a ſupernatural light reveal the truth to a Man, all the Reaſon in the World will never work ſpiritual Faith in his Heart. Hence now you ſee why it is called ſight.

The End why I have inſiſted ſo long upon this, is as to open it, ſo to take you off of your ſelves, and all your own Knowledge, that you may therefore ſeek out to the Holy Ghoſt to make ſpiritual things evident to you by their own light, in their own hew, that you may not reſt in rational knowledge, and in notional knowledge of the things of the Word, for you may go to Hell with all that, unleſs you have a ſpiritual ſight of the things themſelves.

Thirdly, As Faith is a ſpiritual knowledge, and as it is a ſight beyond that of Reaſon, though of ſpiritual things, which yet are ſuited to Reaſon, ſo the knowledge of Faith is a certain Knowledge: So you have it in Heb. 11. 13. They ſaw the promiſes afar off, and were perſwaded of them: That is, they had a knowledge of Aſſurance of the things they did believe. I ſay, the Knowledge of Faith it is a certain knowledge; and why? Becauſe it is a knowledge of ſight; what a Man ſees, it is certain that he ſees it, when he ſees it; what's the Reaſon? Becauſe, Senſus non fallitur circa proprium objectum, Senſe is never Deceived about its proper object; therefore if it be a ſpiritual ſight and a ſpiritual ſenſe, it hath a certainty join'd with it: The knowledge of Faith it is called Aſſurance, in Heb. 10. 22. but in Col. 2. 2. as you do increaſe in it, you are ſaid to increaſe in all Riches of the full aſſurance of underſtanding, to the acknowledgment of the Myſtery of God, and of the Father, and of Chriſt. It is very emphatical, he tells us in the following Words, that there are hidden in Chriſt all the Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge; and his Scope is to preſer the Knowledge of the Goſpel, and of Chriſt therein, to all other knowledge: Nay, ſaith he, it doth not only excel all other Knowledge in regard of the Object of it, but it is a Knowledge that when it is genuine, when it is ſaving, it excelleth as to the Riches of Aſſurance in the Knowledge it ſelf: It is ſuch an aſſurance, and ſo rich, as you cannot have from your ſenſes, or any thing elſe. The Apoſtle heaps up Expreſſions, he calls it Aſſurance, he calls it Full Aſſurance, he calls it Full Aſſurance of Underſtanding, he calls it Riches of full Aſſurance, and he calls it an Acknowledgment; words enough one would think to make Knowledge ſure.

But let me here add a Caution too: My Meaning is not, that every Man that is a true Believer hath an aſſurance that Jeſus Chriſt is his, or that he hath the aſſurance of his own Salvation; No, many Believers have not that, neither is that eſſential to Faith, or to the act of Application. This doth not lye in Believing that Chriſt is mine, for if it did, God would give it unto every Saint; but the act of Application is real Application, giving my ſelf up unto Chriſt that he may be mine, and I his: But now though there is not an act of Aſſurance of my own Intereſt, yet there is an act of Aſſurance of the thing I believe on; I do never truly believe, unleſs there be an aſſured Perſwaſion of the truth of the things on which I believe, and which I believe. Thus you muſt underſtand thoſe Scriptures where you have Mention of the Aſſurance of Faith, as in Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with a true heart, in full Aſſurance of Faith: And ſo in Jam. 1. 6. If any man pray, let him ask in faith, without wavering, for he that wavereth is like a wave of the Sea, driven with the Wind and toſſed. Of which place many have miſtook the Meaning; for is the Meaning this, that when a Man comes to ask a Promiſe at the hands of God, he muſt believe without wavering that he ſhall have it? No, if this were the Faith that James here meant, when he ſaith, If any man pray, let him ask in Faith, without wavering; who almoſt is there (unleſs in ſome ſpecial manifeſtations of God to him) that doth thus ask in Prayer, or can ask temporal Promiſes with ſuch a Faith, without wavering? But yet there is a Faith which is without wavering, that is, there is an aſſured Belief of the Truth of thoſe Promiſes, that God made them, and that he is faithful to perform them, according to the Intention of them: Here now is a Perſwaſion of the thing, and an asking in Faith without wavering; and ſaith the Apoſtle, He that wavereth is as a wave of the Sea, driven with the wind and toſſed; a double minded Man is unſtable (ſaith he) in all his ways: What is the Reaſon that Carnal Men are unſtable, and that they do not walk fully up in the Ways of Religion? it is becauſe that their Faith in the things do not riſe up to a ſtableneſs, it hath a wavering in the Belief of the Principles themſelves, ſo far forth as they are Principles of Practice. Whereas now if theſe things were ſpiritually and prevailingly rooted in their Hearts, above the Natural Darkneſs of Unbelief, that there is a God, who is a Rewarder of thoſe that ſeek him, and that Jeſus Chriſt is the Saviour of the World, and that he hath made theſe and theſe Promiſes, and is thus gracious and willing to receive thoſe that come unto him; if theſe things, I ſay, were believed in a real and ſpiritual manner, and that the Hearts of Men were without wavering perſwaded of them, without Queſtion it would draw Mens Hearts, and cauſe them to walk anſwerably, and keep them from being driven with the Wind and toſſed. So that this is the Apoſtles Meaning, (which is the thing I drive at) that in all Faith there is a fixedneſs, an aſſuredneſs, a Perſwaſion, namely, of the things that I do believe, but it doth not follow that it ſhould be an aſſured Perſwaſion of my own Intereſt in the things themſelves, for ſo who asketh in Faith? Many poor Souls that even ask Salvation at the Hands of God, they do not ask it as fully believing, and being aſſured that they ſhall be ſaved, and yet in the mean time they fully believe that Salvation that God hath made known to them, and with which their Hearts are taken, and that is the Perſwaſion and Aſſurance of Faith. I ſhall give you ſome Scriptures, that this Faith is a Knowledge that riſeth up to a Perſwaſion, to an Aſſurance, Joh. 6. 68. Peter there in the Name of all the Apoſtles confeſſeth his Faith, and the Faith of all the Apoſtles; We believe, (ſaith he) and are ſure; of what? that we ſhall be ſaved? No, but That thou art that Chriſt the Son of the living God. Of this a Man muſt be ſure, or it is not Faith, and ſo likewiſe he muſt be ſure of all other things that are fundamental unto Faith; the things which he lays hold on, and which his Soul purſues after, he muſt believe with a certainty that they are. When Jeſus Chriſt was to go out of the World, what was it that he thanks his Father for? and why? I can (ſaith he ) comfortably leave the World, and leave theſe Diſciples in the World, for I have given unto them the Words which thou gaveſt me, and they have received them, Joh. 17. 8. Wherein now lay their receiving them, and their believing them? (for that is the Meaning of receiving; They have recieved them, (ſaith he) and have known ſurely that I came out from thee:) He had begotten in them that Faith which riſes up to Aſſurance, and he diſtinguiſheth them thus from the World, I pray for them, (ſaith he in the very next verſe) I pray not for the world; for indeed the World do not ſurely know, or are perſwaded of the things that are in the Word; for if they were, certainly that Perſwaſion would alter the frame of their Lives, and would make them walk anſwerably, and cauſe them to be holy. If a Man be unſtable in his ways, it is becauſe he is unſtable in the belief of the Principles he profeſſeth to walk by, and ſo indeed hereby Chriſt diſtinguiſheth the Faith of the World, and the Faith of thoſe that were his Diſciples, whom he had wrought upon; They have ſurely known (ſaith he) that I came out from thee, and for theſe (ſaith he) I pray, but I pray not for the World. And the Truth is, this full Perſwaſion, or Aſſurance of the thing, it is an effect of the former property I mentioned, viz. of ſpiritual ſight; for if I ſee a thing, and ſee it really, (which is another property of the Knowledge of Faith, and which I ſhall ſpeak to by and by) it always begets a certain Perſwaſion in me that the thing is: Perhaps I may not reflect upon my own Knowledge, yet notwithſtanding an Aſſurance, and a full Perſwaſion doth always and moſt neceſſarily follow a real ſight of a thing. Take a Man that is awake, he can and doth ſay with himſelf, and ſay it by way of difference and diſtinction from one being aſleep, I know aſſuredly ſuch a Man is before me, I know aſſuredly that the Sun ſhines; why? becauſe he ſees the Man, and he ſees the Sun; whereas if a Man be aſleep, and in a Dream, it may be he thinks he doth the ſame, but ſtill there is no certainty in it: But now look where there is a reality of ſight, there is alſo always accompanying it ſo far a full Perſwaſion and Aſſurance, and the Man is able to ſay, that that Knowledge he hath is different from all other Knowledge. So that, I ſay, this is the third thing in this ſight of Chriſt which a Believer hath, he hath an Aſſurance of the thing; this even the pooreſt and maneſt Believer hath, take him out of thoſe Temptations and Doubts which the Devil may ſuggeſt to him; take him when he is himſelf, he hath an aſſurance, that is of the things themſelves; and the reaſon is clearly this, becauſe he ſees ſpiritual things by their own light, and the ground of Faith, the very Formalis Ratio is the light and demonſtration of the Spirit. Now that is more infallible than all that a Man knows by his outward Senſes, or by reaſon, by how much the Witneſs of the Spirit is above the Witneſs of Nature, and the Light of the Spirit above the Light of Nature; as an Oath hath more certainty in it than a Promiſe, ſo the Light and Demonſtration of the Spirit hath more certainty in it than all the rational apprehenſions a Man hath of Chriſt. In a word, the Heart of a Believer by the light of the Spirit ſees more reaſon to believe that theſe things are ſo and ſo which the Word ſaith, that there is ſuch a Chriſt, ſo glorious, and ſo good; he hath, I ſay, more reaſon to believe it, than he could have by all the demonſtrations that ſenſe or reaſon can afford. As when a Man ſees the Sun by its own light, it hath riches of evidence in it, hath it not? ſo when a Man ſees Chriſt by his own light, it produceth riches of aſſurance, namely that the thing is; I ſay not that it carries with it riches of aſſurance that Chriſt is mine, or that I ſhall be ſaved, for that's another thing; all the Torches in the World cannot give that Light which the Sun it ſelf gives, no more can all the rational Apprehenſions a Man hath, give him ſuch a ſight of Chriſt as a Believer hath by the demonſtration of the Spirit.

Fourthly, This Knowledge of Faith is a real Knowledge, a real ſight of Chriſt and of Spiritual Things. I do not ſpeak of Viſions and Revelations extraordinary, but it is ſuch a Knowledge as doth give a Man a real Poſſeſſion of the things, and doth make the things themſelves really ſubſiſting to a Mans Spirit, and he feeleth really that there is ſuch Glory, and Excellency, and Sweetneſs in Jeſus Chriſt as the Word holds forth, and indeed as is in Jeſus Chriſt himſelf; for now the Spirit of Chriſt is preſent, and joineth with his Spirit, for always ſight hath as a certainty ſo a reality joined with it. A Man may have by way of Reaſon a Conviction that things are, he may know that things do exiſt, as now a Man may know by the Light of the Moon, and by the Light of the Stars that there is a Sun, which ſhines upon them, and that this Sun exiſteth; but when a Man ſees the Sun it ſelf, here is a Knowledge ſub eſſe præſenti, here is a preſence of that Sun to him, which makes it realy exiſting to him; ſuch is the Knowledge of Faith, and therefore in Heb. 11. 1. Faith is called ὑπόστασις, the Evidence, that which gives a Subſiſtance to the things not ſeen; that is, by the outward ſenſes, or by the light and dictates of Reaſon. Now ſuppoſe that there were an artificial Inſtrument made, by which things that we never ſaw or never took in with our Bodily Eyes might be really coveyed into our Minds and Fancies, ſuch (if it were poſſible) as might ſtamp the Image of them upon our Fancies, we would ſay this were a very ſtrange kind of Inſtrument. Optick Glaſſes they do not ſo much, they indeed will preſent a thing to you which you glimmeringly diſcern afar off, but you muſt firſt diſcern it with your bodily eye; but now if there were an Engine as could preſent a thing afar off, which your bodily eye never beheld, and ſtamp it upon your Fancy, this you would ſay were ſtrange. Now the Holy Ghoſt hath an Art to do this, and he doth do it, though he uſeth the Word, and the deſcription of Chriſt in the Word, and uſeth the Promiſes, yet that Image of Chriſt and of Heavenly Things which he works in the Heart of a Believer is by a peculiar Art of his own which he uſeth, and it is far beyond, infinitely beyond what we can take in by our Fancies or Senſes, or any thing elſe, and therefore becauſe the Knowledge of Faith hath this reality in it, you ſhall find that there is almoſt no ſence but in the Scripture Faith is compared to it, and this is meerly, I ſay, becauſe it is ſuch a Knowledge as hath a reality of the things known convey'd to a Man's Soul, though they be abſent: It is compared to hearing, Joh. 10. 16. My ſheep hear my voice; and they hear it ſo as to diſcern it from the voice of a ſtranger: It is compared to eating, Joh. 6. 54. Whoſo eateth my Fleſh, &c. And elſewhere it is compared to taſting, Pſal. 34. 8. Taſte how good the Lord is; hence in Joh. 6. 55. Chriſt ſaith, His fleſh is meat indeed, and his blood is drink indeed: That is, the Soul finds a reality in it, and it is not as when a Man dreams he eats, but Chriſt and the Promiſes, and the things that the Soul feeds upon, they have a reality in them, they are meat indeed, and drink indeed, and the Soul finds them ſo. They that are temporary Believers have a ſhew of this, both of a ſight, and of a reality of ſight, and they are ſaid to taſte of the Powers of the World to come; but yet let me ſay this to diſtinguiſh it from this other.

1. They do not ſee Spiritual things in their Spiritual Nature, as they are in themſelves, tho' they may ſee an accidental goodneſs in them, and ſo be taken with them, and ſo may taſte of the Sawce of that fleſh of Chriſt which it is ſawced up in, as I may expreſs it; that is, that accidental goodneſs which it is preſented to us in, with thoſe benefits that accompany it, as freedom from Hell, and the like; but the ſpiritual, the genuine, the native Excellency that is in Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, this they do not ſee, nor is it made real to them. Now to ſee a thing, or to know a thing in the Effects, or in the Accidental Goodneſs of it, is not to ſee or to know the thing properly and truly; but to ſee a thing in its own true genuine Notion, to ſee the ſpiritual Excellency that is in Jeſus Chriſt, and ſo to have the Heart taken with him, conſidered in all his ſpiritual Excellencies, this is ſpiritual ſight, and indeed this is only to know the things themſelves, which the other doth not.

2. And then again, though there be a ſeeming reality in the Knowledge and Impreſſion that is made upon the Heart of a Temporary Believer, yet it is but as the Knowledge one hath that is aſleep, and dreams that he ſees and converſeth with a Man, which ſight then ſeems to be exceeding real, and indeed is more real than the Picture of a Man is, becauſe in his fancy he ſeems to have the reality of the Man preſented to him with whom he converſeth, and his Image ſeems as it were to be ſtamped upon his Fancy; but yet it is but a Phantaſmatical Knowledge, it is not that Knowledge and Sight of a Man which Men have that are awake, that giveth a Subſiſtance, as the Knowledge and Sight of Faith doth, which is ſuch a Knowledge as is ſuited to the things themſelves, a Spiritual Knowledge, and a real Knowledge alſo. I told you before, that the Knowledge of a Believer is to have ſuch thoughts, in his Meaſure and Degree, as are in the Heart of Chriſt himſelf; now thoſe things which yet are not, (as the day of Judgment is not yet) yet are preſent to the Heart of Chriſt, and therefore it is ſaid, God calleth things that are not as if they were, Rom. 4. 17. If now I have the Mind of Chriſt, if I have that ſpiritual Notion of things to come, of Heaven that is to come, ſtamped upon my Heart, that is in the Heart of Chriſt, that I know them in that manner he knows them, in my degree and proportion, then it is preſent to my Heart as it is to his. Jeſus Chriſt doth not only know things, but they have a Subſiſtance, they are preſent to him, All things are preſent and naked with him with whom we have to do, Heb. 4. 13. So much Faith then, ſo much openeſs and nakedneſs, and ſo much preſence of the things we believe. You ſhall find in 1 Cor. 2. 9. That the things of God are ſaid to enter into our hearts: It is not only that we know the Images and Notions of things, but we have the Preſence of the things themſelves, therefore in Heb. 11. 13. Believers there are ſaid to Embrace the Promiſes: What is the reaſon they are ſaid to embrace them? Becauſe they ſo ſaw them as having a reality in them, they did not embrace a cloud, but they felt a Preſence, a Subſiſtance in the things promiſed, in God, and in Chriſt, on whom they believed, though Chriſt was not then incarnate. And in Joh. 6. 47, 51, & 54. When a Man is ſaid to believe, he is ſaid to eat the Fleſh of Chriſt, and to drink his Blood; as truly as a Man eats Meat, or drinks Wine, and he feels a Preſence, even as a Man feels the preſence of the Wine he drinks to ſtrengthen his Spirits: He doth not only know that there is Wine, and ſees it, but he feels a Power and Virtue joining with his Body, and with his Spirits; ſo a Man knows and feels the preſence of Chriſt, and of Heavenly Things in his Spirit, while he believes, and finds a reality in them; My fleſh is meat indeed, (ſaith he;) to ſhew that Faith feels as true a reality in the things believed, as a Man doth in the Meat he eats. And indeed what is the reaſon that Carnal Men leave Chriſt for the Pleaſures of the World? Becauſe the Pleaſures of the World are real things to them, therefore unleſs God make the things of another World real too, a Man will never leave Realities for Notions: All that Reaſon or Notions can repreſent of Chriſt, will never take a Mans Heart off from the real things he ſees here below; and therefore God comes, and he weighs down the reality of the things of this World by the reality of the things of the other World. And ſo much now for this firſt thing in Faith, viz. that it is a ſight; He that ſeeth the Son; ſaith he, and ſo you have the Act Seeing, with the kind and properties thereof.

I come now to the Acts of Faith in the Underſtanding, as terminated on the Great Object of Faith. I ſhall confine my ſelf to Chriſt, becauſe he is the Great Object of our Faith; and for that I ſhall ſay theſe few things to you.

Firſt, The Soul that God doth give Faith to, ſees the Spiritual Excellency and Glory that is in Jeſus Chriſt, and the Heart is taken with it; in 2 Cor. 3. 18. ſaith the Apoſtle, ſpeaking of the beholding of Chriſt, We ſee as in a Glaſs the Glory of the Lord. I mention it for this, that it is called a Seeing of his Glory; that is, that ſurpaſſing Excellency, even to a Glory, that is in Jeſus Chriſt. Every one whom God draws in to believe, he doth ſooner or later cauſe ſome Glympſe of the Glory of Chriſt in a ſpiritual and real way to paſs before him, which takes the Spirit, ſo that he is like one that is ſallen in Love with one at firſt ſight, when the Party is paſt by, but there is a ſight, a glympſe that has taken the Heart; ſo though that Glympſe of Jeſus Chriſt ſeems to be gone, yet there is that impreſſion upon the Soul, and upon the Heart, that other Beauties and Glories are but as Shadows in compariſon of that which is in Jeſus Chriſt: And ſuch a ſight of the thing, though it be but in tranſitu, takes the Heart for ever; the Church in Cant. 5. 9. had ſuch a ſight of Chriſt, for ſee how mightily ſhe magnified him; and though that ſight was vaniſhed, yet ſhe was ſo taken with it as ſhe ſeeks all the World over for him, in ſo much as others ſtand wondring at her; What is thy Beloved, (ſay they) more than another Beloved? They ſaw no ſuch Beauty in him: O, (ſaith ſhe) my Beloved is ſuch a Beloved as is thus and thus; and ſo ſhe falls a ſetting out of his Glories and Excellencies. It is ſuch a ſight as doth put out a Mans Eyes to all things elſe for ever doting upon them as formerly he did. Even as they that go on Pilgrimage to Mahomet's Tomb, after they have been there they uſe to burn out their Eyes, that after that ſacred ſight they may never behold Creatures more. Such a thing now is really wrought in the Heart of a Chriſtian, in ſome meaſure; as Chriſt ſaith, He that drinketh of this water ſhall never thirſt any more, Joh. 4. 13. So he that hath thus ſeen Jeſus Chriſt, he never ſees any thing more as he ſaw it before; he may have his Heart taken with Folly and Vanity, yet not ſo as before, becauſe he hath ſeen the Lord Jeſus, there is that impreſſion made by that ſight of the Glory and Excellency which is in him; you have this in 2 Cor. 5. 17. If I have known things after the fleſh, (ſaith he) henceforth know I them no more; that is, I can never value carnal things at that rate I have done, I ſee through them all, ſaith he, I do not value them now by a fleſhly Sight and Conſideration; if I have ſeen them ſo, I ſee them now ſo no more; why? Becauſe I have ſeen Jeſus Chriſt by the knowledge of the New-Creature, and now old things are paſt away, and all things are become new. Even as God has moulded Fancies to Faces, ſo he hath framed and moulded the knowledge of Chriſt to Chriſt, and even as the Eye is framed to Colours, ſo is the New Underſtanding ſuited to Jeſus Chriſt, it is a ſpiritual Underſtanding, and ſo ſuited to a ſpiritual Chriſt; that having taken in the Image of Jeſus Chriſt in the real and ſpiritual Notion of him, the Heart is moulded into it, and that Heart can never be taken with any other Beauty or Carnal Thing of what kind ſoever that is here below, 1 Joh. 5. 20. He hath given us an Underſtanding, that we may know him that is true.

Secondly, When God draws the Heart to believe, it ſees alſo an All-ſufficiency of Righteouſneſs in Jeſus Chriſt, and in his Satisfaction, Pſal. 130. 7. With him is plenteous Redemption; and in Rom. 5. 17. it is ſaid, They receive abundance of Grace, and of the Gift of Grace; you have the like in Phil. 3. 8. I count all things (ſaith he) but loſs and dung for the Excellency of the Knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord; and next to the knowledge of Chriſt, what is moſt valued by him? The Righteouſneſs of Chriſt; and therefore ſaith he in the next verſe, That I may be found in him, not having mine own righteouſneſs, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt. Now a Man ſees that ſatisfaction, and that worth and fullneſs in the Righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus, that if he might have the Righteouſneſs of Adam, or the Righteouſneſs of the Angels, or as great a Righteouſneſs made his, to be his, and be inherent in him, and he to be juſtified by it, he would throw it all away as Droſs and Dung in compariſon of the Righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus, which he ſees held forth to him.

The Third Thing that the Soul ſees, and is perſwaded of, when God draws the Heart to him, it is the graciouſneſs that is in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: And that in two things, Firſt, In the general: In his readineſs to recieve ſinners. Whatſoever thoughts a Man had before of Chriſt, (as when a Man is firſt humbled, he is apt to have hard and ſower thoughts of Chriſt) yet when he comes to know the mind of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 2. 16. that is, to know his gracious inclination, God doth make an impreſſion and ſtamp of the gracious Heart and Inclination that is in Jeſus Chriſt to receive ſinners, and ſets it as it were upon the Heart, and he perſwades them better things of Chriſt than either what they naturally, or when they are firſt humbled think of him.

Secondly, There is ſtamped upon the Heart of a Chriſtian ſome ſecret hint or whiſper of Mercy to him: I do not ſay it riſeth to aſſurance, for then it would quel all Doubtings, but in every one that God takes to himſelf, as he lets him ſee the readineſs that is in Chriſt to receive ſinners indefinitely, ſo there is ſome ſecret kind of wiſper of Mercy and Grace to him, a ſecret hint, as I uſe to call it. In Joh. 10. 3. it is ſaid, that Chriſt calls his ſheep by name, even as he called Moſes by name, and Cyrus, which implys a ſpecial intimation: And Chriſt he doth diſtinguiſh, and ſaith, the reaſon why others that were not his ſheep do not come, is becauſe they do not hear his Voice. Now that you may not miſtake me, though it be a whiſper, yet it is but a whiſper, and a hint, which the Soul often-times in it ſelf doth not ſo diſcern as to reflect upon it; but yet it is full enough to carry the Heart after Chriſt, and never to leave him. I uſe to compare it to the ſcent of a Blood-hound, when he is ſent to ſeek, though he finds not, yet having once had the ſcent he never leaves, but hunts up and down till he finds it; and though he knows not where it is, yet it is enough to carry him on. So the Soul, when it hath wound Jeſus Chriſt, as we may ſo ſpeak, this hint, this whiſper is enough to carry on to Chriſt, ſo as never to leave him, and that with ſome Encouragement, though it doth not riſe up to Aſſurance, and prevail over Doubtings: I diſtinguiſh it thus, Aſſurance is when the Spirit of God ſo ſpeaks to a Man that he ſpeaks as a Witneſs, when he comes in and evidenceth to a Man the truth of his Eſtate, and that Jeſus Chriſt is his; and when he ſpeaks as a Witneſs, he will ſpeak ſo loud as to prevail over all Temptations, and over all Doubts, or elſe he will loſe his End; for a Witneſs muſt ſo ſpeak as to put the thing out of doubt, or elſe he is no Witneſs. But now in this ſecret whiſper of Faith he doth not ſo, he doth not come then to ſpeak as a Witneſs, but he comes to ſpeak then as one that would work the Heart into Jeſus Chriſt, and carry on the Heart to Jeſus Chriſt, and in this caſe a ſecret whiſper (which he himſelf doth really back) is enough to carry on the Heart, though it is not enough to quel all Doubts and Temptations. Inſomuch now as when a Man is humbled, and ſees his Miſery, and the like, and when he is walking alone, or is in Prayer, he thinketh in himſelf, Well, I may find Mercy from God, Jeſus Chriſt may pardon me, &c. This he may take for his own thoughts, becauſe it doth not riſe to that height as when the Holy Ghoſt ſpeaks as a Witneſs, in ſuch a diſtinct manner from his own thoughts, as that he ſhould reſt ſatisfied in it. Nay, a Man is apt to take ſuch thoughts, and to fling them away, and diſcerns them not from other thoughts put into his Mind about other things; yet for all that, the Holy Ghoſt that puts them in, leaves them not, but carries them on in a way of Encouragement and Hopefulneſs, and never leaveth him till they have boil'd up either to the Viſion of Chriſt, or to the Aſſurance of Jeſus Chriſt's being his.

CHAP. II.

That the meer Aſſurance of the Object, or a general Aſſent to the Truth of the Promiſes, is not the Act of Faith juſtifying, but Application is neceſſary: This proved by ſeveral Reaſons.

AS I have explained the Nature of the Act of Faith in the Underſtanding, ſo now I will ſhew that true Juſtifying Faith includes more in it, or that it is not a bare general Aſſent to the Truth of the Promiſes, though never ſo ſpiritual; for ſtill in Scripture the Act of Faith that juſtifies is call'd Believing on him, ſo Rom. 4. 5. and every where almoſt we find it thus, He that believes on him that juſtifies the ungodly; it is not he that believes only that God will juſtifie the ungodly. It is an ancient received Maxime of Divines, Aliud eſt credere Deum, & in Deum; for to believe on him implys a Particular Application. Thoſe that are for general aſſent, urge thoſe Scriptures moſt, Rom. 10. 9. If thou believe with thine heart that God raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved; and that in 1 Joh. 5. 5. He overcometh the world that believeth that Jeſus is the Son of God; and ver. 10. He that believeth not the Record God hath given of his Son, makes God a Lyar. But it is obſervable, that in both places Believing on him (which is an Act of Application) is added, as that which makes this general aſſent a compleat Act of Faith: Thus Rom. 10. 11. he confirms his ſaying by the Scripture, (which withall interprets his meaning) For the Scripture ſaith, he that believeth on him ſhall not be aſhamed; and ſo in 1 Joh. 5. 10. He that believeth on the Son of God: He leaves it not therefore in a general aſſent. I ſhall now give the Reaſons of my Aſſertion.

Reaſon 1. Faith doth not conſiſt meerly in Aſſent, becauſe a Man in believing comes not in ſimply as a Witneſs to a Truth, for ſo the Angels do believe and teſtifie the Truth, and might be ſaid to have Faith juſtifying, Rev. 19. 10. They are ſaid to have the Teſtimony of Jeſus, they teſtifie that God is true in his Promiſes. But when Men believe, they come not in barely as Witneſſes to the New-Teſtament, but as Legatees for a Portion in it, they therefore reſt on it for themſelves, and ſo their Faith makes an Application of it. When ſome have reaſoned againſt general Aſſent to be Faith, in that the Devils believe, as James ſays, it hath been anſwered, that the Devils aſſent though it is operative to cauſe Terrour, yet it is not a Spiritual Aſſent and Sight of it, ſuch as a Believer in the general hath of the things he believes; and they ſay true, for there is a difference in a regenerate Man's believing there is a God, and it is another ſight than Devils have. But yet ſtill the Argument will hold, if fetcht from the good Angels, for they do in as ſpiritual a manner as the Saints believe the Truth of the Promiſes, and aſſent to their Goodneſs, and ſee the Excellencies of Chriſt, and adore them, and yet do not believe with a juſtifying Faith: And why? becauſe theſe Promiſes not concerning their Salvation, they truſt not in them, they come not in as Legatees, but as Witneſſes and Admirers. Now then if an act of general aſſent ſpiritual be common to them with Believers, ſurely God hath not put the act of juſtifying upon what is common to both, (when as it is in them, it juſtifies them not) but rather upon ſuch an act as is proper to Man, and not in them, and that is truſting, relying on the Promiſes, and on that Chriſt whom they believe to be the Son of God, for their Salvation.

Reaſon 2. Juſtifying Faith is ſeated in the whole Heart, as he ſaid in Acts 8. 37. If thou believeſt with thy whole heart, thou ſhalt be ſaved: Yea, and ſo it is in this, Rom. 10. 9. If thou ſhalt beleive with thy heart, that God hath raiſed up Jeſus, &c. Now if only a general aſſent (though never ſo ſpiritual) in the underſtanding (which is but one faculty in the Heart) were that act that juſtified, then the Will ſhould be excluded, which if Faith be with the whole Heart it is not. And now if the Will come in to put forth an act, then an Act of Application muſt be alſo added to that general aſſent, ſuch as indeed is to truſt in Chriſt, to caſt my ſelf on him, to wait upon him, which are all acts of the Will; tis true indeed that in the Underſtanding-part there is no other act of Faith required abſolutely unto Juſtification than a ſpiritual ſight of, and aſſent to the Truth and Goodneſs of the things believed: This is all God exacts of the Underſtanding, (for an aſſent or aſſurance that theſe things are mine is not of the eſſence of Faith) but there are acts of the Will beſides that go to make up Faith, therefore Heb. 11. 13. there are three things attributed to Faith: Firſt, A real ſight of the Promiſes; They ſaw them. Secondly, A Perſwaſion or Aſſurance of their Truth and Goodneſs; They were perſwaded of them; and theſe two make up a ſpiritual general aſſent in the Underſtanding. But then Thirdly is added their embracing them; They embraced them; which is an act of the Will, or an act of Application, ſo Rom. 4. 5. To believe that God juſtifies the ungodly, is the act of general aſſent, but to Belive on him that juſtifies the ungodly, is an act of Application; it is an act of the Will, reſting on him for a Man's own particular Salvation.

Reaſon 3. Yea, by this act of the Will is the Union on our parts compleated between Chriſt and us, and we are thereby made ultimately one with him. Now one main end of Faith is to make an Union with Chriſt on our Parts, and that as it is done without aſſurance that Chriſt is mine, ſo it is not chiefly made by a general Aſſent; and to the Union made on Chriſt's part, it is not neceſſary I ſhould then apprehend it when Chriſt firſt doth it, becauſe it is a ſecret Work done by his Spirit, who doth Firſt apprehend us e're we apprehend him; as he firſt loves us e're we love him, Phil. 3. 12. But for the making a real Union with him (ſo far as on our part it is made) it lyes not primarily in believing Chriſt is mine, or that Chriſt is, but in joining my ſelf to his Perſon, in the ſhooting in of my Will into him, in taking him, and conſenting to be his; to believe he is mine is indeed to apprehend that Union, and to believe ſpiritually he draws in the Heart to it, but to have my Will drawn to him, to reſt in him, to cleave to him as the Fountain of Life, Deut. 30. 20. 'tis that makes the real Union: As in Marriage, Conſent makes the Match, ſo the Conſent of the Will to have Chriſt as my Lord, King, Head, Husband, makes the union; for the main Subject by which we are united to Chriſt is the Will, for by the Will we cleave to thoſe things we apprehend good, and ſhoot our Souls into them. But if that which united on our parts were ſuch Apprehenſions whereby we perceive we are made one with Chriſt, it ſhould be in the Underſtanding moſt, and ſo that which makes the Union ſhould be Aſſenſus de Deo, a believing ſomething of God, not a cleaving to God, and that which I am united to ſhould mainly be a Propoſition. Indeed when I apprehend my ſelf united unto Chriſt, then my Will cleaves more to him, is drawn out more to him, as thoſe that are new married, when a Man can ſay, I am my beloved's, and he is mine; but he muſt be my Beloved afore. As he that luſts after a Woman commits Adultry, and ſo is made before God one fleſh with her, though not afore Men, ſo he whoſe Heart is taken with the Beauty of Chriſt, and cleaves to him, hangs on him, is united to him, for a Marriage-glance makes afore God a Union with Chriſt: Such acts of Faith make the Union, and therefore upon ſuch acts of Recumbency Chriſt ſheds Grace and Life into the Soul, having recourſe to him as the only fountain of Life; but when aſſurance comes, then a Man can plead this Union to fetch ſtrength from Chriſt by vertue of it, and ſo then a Man diſcerns the Connection between Chriſt and his Grace, how it flows from him, but it flow'd before.

CHAP. III.

What the Nature is of this Special Faith of Application. That beſides a Spiritual Faith or Wiſdom to know all other Divine Truths ſavingly, there is a Special Faith on Chriſt and God's Free Grace for Juſtification: Or, that God in Chriſt as a Saviour and Juſtifyer is the Object of that Special Faith which is juſtifying.

2 Tim. III. 15.

That from a Child thou haſt known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wiſe unto Salvation, through Faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

IT is of Juſtifying or Saving Faith that I profeſs to Diſcourſe: It conſiſteth of two Words: 1. Juſtifying, or Saving. 2. Faith. And ſo it calls for two things to be handled by him that will handle it throughly, as diſtinct common place Heads. The Firſt is the Doctrine of Juſtification through Faith, as it is an act of God upon us, upon, or through our believing. And, Secondly, Part II. There is the Doctrine of the Nature of that Faith it ſelf, and which of theſe two a Man begins to handle firſt (we living under the Sun-ſhine of the Goſpel) it is not much material.

Under that Head of the Doctrine of Juſtification it ſelf by Faith, there are theſe things:

1. Whether upon a Man's Believing there is an act of Juſtification paſſeth from God, ſo as in a true ſenſe a Man may be ſaid to be then juſtified, ſo as not before? And how that this may ſtand with God's juſtifying of us with Chriſt when he roſe, and with God's juſtifying of us in Chriſt from everlaſting? or if you will, Whether that Faith be only for the manifeſtation of a Man's Juſtification to himſelf, or, it be not alſo for the alteration of a Man's Condition before God?

2. That nothing but Faith in Man is that Principle which God hath ordained to receive this Bleſſing, and Faith only, and Faith without Works.

3. Under this Head of Juſtification comes the treating alſo of this, How it is that Faith is ſaid to juſtifie, or how God looks at it, whether as an Habit, or an Act, or an Inſtrument, or a Condition, or what.

4. There are the Objects of this Faith, both Jeſus Chriſt as the matter of Juſtification, (which I have at large diſcours'd of in thoſe Treatiſes long ſince publiſhed to the World.) And, Secondly, There is God, as juſtifying, for the Soul believes on him that juſtifieth the ungodly: So that as Jeſus Chriſt is the Author, and Cauſe, andMatter of Juſtification in his Death, and Reſurrection, and Aſcenſion, and Interceſſion, &c. ſo God in his Grace and Mercy, and in all his Acts therein, is alſo the Object of Faith; and a glorious Juſtification it is, wherewith God juſtifies us: How great, how free, how unlimited is it, and ſuch as no ſins can hinder! A Juſtification total at once, and eternal for ever. Theſe things I have diſcourſed of before in the Firſt Part.

Now concerning Faith it ſelf, by which we are juſtified, (I taking it at preſent for granted that we are juſtified through Faith, which is the language of the Scripture) that which now we are to do, it is to make the Enquiry, What this Faith is?

The firſt thing in the general which I pitch upon towards the Enquiry, after the true Nature and Notion of Faith, is this, That the Faith by which we are ſaved and juſtified is a Special Faith, pitched upon God's Free-grace, and Chriſt as matter of Juſtification to us as its ſpecial Object; as you ſhall ſee out of this Scripture and many others alſo in the proof of it.

The proof of this great Truth I might have founded upon many Scriptures, as you ſhall ſee anon, but I did chooſe out this, becauſe it clearly diſtinguiſheth a ſpecial Faith from a general Faith, and diſtinctly puts the Buſineſs of Salvation upon that Special Faith. If you mark it here, he tells us, (ver. 16.) That all Scripture is given by inſpiration, and is profitable for Doctrine, &c. And that all the things revealed in the Scripture, be they what they will, are all of them able to make a Man wiſe unto Salvation, and ſo to beget in him A Wiſdom, which indeed is nothing elſe but Faith. Take it in the general Notion of Aſſent, what Prudence is to all Virtues, that Faith is to all Graces, it is Wiſdom to Salvation. But yet there is in it a Special Faith, without which all the Knowledge a Man hath, yea, all the Knowledge that is unto Salvation, would not be unto Salvation, were it not for this; and that is, (as the Text hath it) Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, which is able to make thee wiſe unto Salvation, (ſaith he) through Faith which is in Jeſus Chriſt. So that theſe Words which I have now read, they hold forth to us a twofold Faith or Wiſdom, as you may call it, for the Scripture calls Faith Wiſdom ſometimes, and Wiſdom Faith.

There is Firſt of all a General Faith, reſpecting all Divine Objects, which is here called Wiſdom, and Wiſdom unto Salvation; (in that ſenſe unto Salvation as Repentance is unto Salvation, and as other Graces are ſaid to be unto Salvation) which is a Belief and Knowledge of the Scriptures, and all things revealed in them, and a having a Man's Heart ſuitably affected with the things,

ccording to the Nature of them ; as to believe a God, and all the Attributes f God, all the Promiſes, and all the Threatnings, or whatſoever elſe is con-ained in the Book of God, which being taken by Faith into the Soul and Heart of a Believer, makes him wiſe unto Salvation: This, I ſay, is properly cal-ed general Faith. Faith (as I ſaid before) is often called by the Name of Wiſdom in the Scripture, as in Luk. 1. 17. it is ſaid, that John Baptiſt ſhould go efore him in the Spirit and Power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the Fathers
o the Children, and the diſobedient to the Wiſdom of the juſt; that is, he ſhould ring them to the Faith of their Fathers, to the ſame Knowledge, joined with Wiſdom, to the ſame Creed (for the Materials of it) which the Prophets and Fathers held, and were ſaved by, and the Doctrine of which the Jews in thoſe imes had generally corrupted. All theſe ſpiritual things are taken into the Soul, and apprehended by ſuch a Principle of Wiſdom in Heavenly Affairs
s Humane Wiſdom ſerves to in Earthly Affairs; Faith is thereſore rightly call-d Wiſdom, becauſe it ſuperadds unto Notional Knowledge in things ſpiritual, s Wiſdom in Men ſuperadds unto Knowledge Notional in Worldly Buſineſſes.
That Knowledge which conſtitutes a Man a Wiſe Man, as ſuch, in worldly maters, beyond a Man ſimply knowing, is ſuch a degreee or kind of Knowledge as ver and above the Notion affects and ſtrikes the Spirit of a Man to act accord-ngly, and puts him on to practice; whereas the like knowledge in others (tho' t may be more clear and diſtinct for the Notion) is overly, and affects not he Man, nor is ſtrong enough to overcome his affections to the contrary.
Now look what difference there is in this twofold Knowledge about Temporal Things, the like there is as to Spiritual, there is an Enlightning of the Holy Ghoſt, which clears up the Notion of all things Spiritual to be known, unto which Faith is a farther Special Gift, ſuperadded to affect and ſtrike the Heart with them, as the Gift of Wiſdom added to Knowledge uſeth to affect in outward affairs. Take then Faith as it hath thus all the Scriptures, and all in them or its Object, and as it thus ſtrongly makes an Impreſſion on the Heart to act accordingly, and it is a Wiſdom unto Salvation.

But yet Secondly, There is a Peculiar, or a Special Faith, without which the ther is not, nor would be of its ſelf alone effectual unto Salvation, and that ou ſee is Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, a Faith of the Promiſe of Grace and Salvation n and thorough Jeſus Chriſt, as it is ſeveral ways expreſt in the New Teſta-ment.

Now you ſee the Apoſtle doth not only hold forth this Diſtinction, but he doth withall ſhew, that all the Faith, and Knowledge, and Wiſdom we have, though never ſo ſpiritual, (for even of ſuch he ſpeaks) will not make us wiſe unto Salvation, but only through Faith which is in Jeſus Chriſt.

So that the Obſervation to the Scope in hand which I raiſe out of theſe Words, and purpoſe to diſcourſe of, is this, That that Faith which doth ſave,
(the other may be unto Salvation, as all Graces are) that which truly ſaveth and putteth me into the ſtate of Salvation, or upon which I am put into that ſtate, is a ſpecial Faith, which here is ſaid to have Jeſus Chriſt for its Object, or (which is all one) that hath the Grace of God in Chriſt to rely upon. Faith on the Promiſes of Salvation and Juſtification thorough Chriſt, and thorough the Free-grace of God in him, is that ſpecial Faith without which all the true Wiſdom, the ſpiritual Wiſdom, ſpiritual Faith, believing all things elſe whatſoever, would not otherwiſe be unto Salvation. This, I ſay, is clearly the Scope of the Words, that beſides that Faith whereby we believe, and believe ſpiritually (yea, and unto Salvation too) all the things revealed in the Word of God, there is a Special Faith by which we are ſaved, and by means of which all the reſt of our Faith in all other things is Wiſdom unto Salvation; Is able to make thee wiſe unto Sal- vation, (ſaith he) through the Faith which is in Jeſus Chriſt.

Now in the Opening and Treating of this Point I ſhall do theſe things:

1. Give you ſome Explication of it.
2. I ſhall deliver ſome Conceſſions, ſome things that may and muſt be yielded unto, and granted, concerning this general Faith, and the difference between it and ſpecial Faith.
3. I ſhall offer ſome Proofs of Scripture for to make the Point good.

Part II. 4. I ſhall urge ſome Reaſons, why that God hath not ordained to ſave any Man by the moſt ſpiritual Faith of all things in the Word. If a Man could be ſuppoſed to have it without this other ſpecial Faith of Application; if a Man, I ſay, did believe all the Scriptures, and all things in them, and that with an affection anſwerable, and ſuitable to ſuch Objects themſelves thereon reveal'd, yet that Man would never be ſaved without a ſpecial Faith, which hath Jeſus Chriſt and the Grace of God in him for its Object.

You ſhall find in your Proteſtant Writers a great deal to do about this Faith; I would open to you that which I concieve to be the Nature of it, and the ſence wherein I would preſs it upon you. And,

1. To begin with the Explication of it: I do not call it a Special Faith, becauſe it hath a ſpecial Root and Principle, created on purpoſe in the Hearts of Men to be the Root of it, ſo as that that general Faith we ſpeak of ſhould have one Root, and this ſpecial Faith another: No, but the ſame Faith, for the Root and Principle of it, in the Spirits of Men, whereby I believe all things elſe in the Word of God, the Power of God, the Juſtice of God, or whatever elſe; that Wiſdom whereby a Man knows ſavingly all things in the Scripture, all Truths whatſoever, and the goodneſs of them; that Faith whereby I truly and ſpiritually believe that there is a God, is alſo the Root of that Faith whereby I am poſſeſt of Salvation, or whereby I am juſtified; with the ſame Principle of Faith whereby I believe all things elſe unto Salvation, with the ſame Principle alſo I believe on Jeſus Chriſt, and on God as juſtifying. It is clearly the Scope of Heb. 11. I will not ſtand now to open it: You know the ordinary Scope that is given, it was the ſame Eye by which the Iſraelites beheld all the things in the Wilderneſs, and wherewith they did behold alſo the Brazen Serpent, and yet notwithſtanding they were cured by beholding the Brazen Serpent, and by nothing elſe. I confeſs this Similitude will not in all things hold, but yet it is that by which it is illuſtrated; I only ſpeak now by way of clearing of this Term, Special Faith, and not by way of Confirmation: Abraham by the ſame Faith whereby he did believe in the promiſed Meſſias, In the Seed in whom all the Nations of the Earth ſhall be bleſſed, (Rom. 4. 21.) by the ſame Faith he is ſaid to have believed the Power of God, that he was able to give him a Child.

Secondly, It is not called Special in this ſence, that only a Faith on Chriſt, and on Gods Free-grace, is proper to the Elect, but that Wicked Men and Devils, and Men that ſhall be damned, may have a true general Faith upon all Objects elſe whatſoever: It is not, I ſay, meant in that ſenſe neither, it is not meant ſubjectively ſpecial; there are they who ſay, that as for the belief of all things in the general in the Word of God, that is common to Devils, becauſe in James it is ſaid, They believe there is a God, and tremble, Jam. 2. 19. But ſay they, to have a ſpecial Faith to believe in Jeſus Chriſt, this is proper to the Elect: But it is evident, that in every man that ſhall be ſaved, the Faith whereby he believeth all things in the Word of God is a new kind of Faith, and all things become new to him. The ſpiritual man judgeth all things ſpiritually, knoweth them ſpiritually, and ſo believeth them ſpiritually, as you have it in 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. And as the Devils know there is a God, and believe that, ſo they know and believe that Jeſus Chriſt is a Saviour, Mar. 1. 24. I know who thou art, (ſaith the Devil) even the Holy One of God; yet he did not know this ſpiritually, as a true Believer.

Thirdly, It is not called Special, in reſpect of any ſpecial act that is proper to it, and it alone, that is not the ſpecialneſs neither which I intend: Some by Special Faith mean that ſpecial act of Aſſurance of a Man's Salvation, and make that to juſtifie. The Truth is, there are many Proteſtant Writers, and Holy and Godly Men, that have in all their Oppoſitions againſt the Papiſts urged a ſpecial Faith in this ſenſe. But not to inſiſt on a long Confutation, the Faith of the Apoſtles at firſt was not a Faith of Aſſurance; They believed, that they might be juſtified, Gal. 2. 16. Others by Special Faith underſtand that other act of Truſt or Confidence, and going out of a Man's ſelf, and they ſay, that therein lyes this ſame ſpecialneſs of Faith: Now I grant indeed, that an act of Truſt, and Confidence, and Reliance, is required to Faith, it is that which I would rather call the act of Particular Application, as hereafter may be ſhewn: And they contend for this as that ſpecial Faith, in Oppoſition to thoſe which hold that the General Faith, the belief of the things themſelves, as that Chriſt is the Son of God, and the Saviour of the World, and that God juſtifies the ungodly, being ſpiritually believed, is that act upon which God juſtifies us. But I would not make the ſpecialneſs of Faith to lye in reſpect of any act which this Faith hath proper to it, ſince there are none ſuch, but what we find common to our Faith on other Objects: For if it be ſaid, that the act of ſaving Faith is a Truſting upon this Object, viz. the Grace of God, for Salvation; why this act of Truſting is not proper and peculiar only to Faith juſtifying, nor hath only the Grace of God juſtifying for its Object, but it is common to this Faith to pitch upon other Attributes of God: I rely upon God for all ſpiritual things elſe beſides Salvation and Juſtification, I rely upon him for his Spirit; I go out unto Chriſt for Holineſs, and Strength againſt Sin, and for Duty; I rely on him, and truſt on him, and come unto him for Temporal Things; I truſt him for to ſanctifie me; in a word, all the Promiſes of good things are the Object of that act of Truſt on God. The like may be ſaid of Aſſurance, I may have aſſurance from God of other things as well as of my Juſtification: So as ſpecial Faith, whereby we are ſaved or juſtified, which the Apoſtle here ſpeaks of, is not ſo called, becauſe it hath a peculiar act appropriated to it.

Fourthly and Laſtly therefore, That I call (and I think it ought to be called, and only ought to be called ſo) a Special Faith, whereby we are juſtified, which hath 1. An Eminent Special Object, proper and peculiar, appropriated to it; which hath 2. A Special Aim. And, 3. Which hath a Special Effect, or a Special Conſequent rather, or if you will Concomitant, or that which doth accompany it.

Firſt, I ſay, It is to be called Special Faith, in reſpect that God hath framed on purpoſe a peculiar and ſpecial Object for it: Whether the act be believing the thing or object it ſelf, in the truth and goodneſs of it, or relying upon it, or call it what you will for the act of it, now that is clear in the Text to be Faith in Jeſus Chriſt. Look over all the Scriptures, and all the Divine and Spiritual Truths in them, the belief of thoſe things is not Special Faith, though they may ſanctifie the Heart, though the Heart may be anſwerably affected thereto, Till it come to Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, or to truſt in the ſpecial Mercy and Grace in God for pardon and juſtification: I will put both theſe together: It is either, I ſay, the Free-grace of God, who is our Juſtifyer, (for God as juſtifying is as much the Object of Faith as Chriſt himſelf, and more) which is the Object of this Special Faith, or elſe Jeſus Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs, as the matter of our Juſtification and Salvation, and Faith as it reſpects theſe two as they are Objects, and that for Juſtification, that I call, I ſay, Special Faith. I will not ſtand much to ſhew you, as I might do, that what in the Old Teſtament is called truſting in the Mercy of God, and believing on the Mercy of God, that in the New is called believing on Chriſt, and how that both come to one. If therefore you will have the Language of the New Teſtament, the ſpecial act of juſtifying Faith is to believe upon God as juſtifying, To believe on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, ſo Rom. 4. 14. and to believe on the Righteouſneſs, or on the Blood and Satisfaction of Chriſt, or on Jeſus Chriſt as for Righteouſneſs; ſo the Text ſpeaks here, Thorough Faith in Jeſus Chriſt. Theſe two make up the ſpecial Object of Faith.

And Secondly, The believing theſe, and on theſe, as for Salvation, and having that ſpecial aim and intent, ſo conſidered alſo, is called, and ought to be called Special Faith. It is not coming unto God, or to Chriſt, for any thing elſe temporal and ſpiritual, but as coming for Salvation and Pardon of Sin, Believing that a Man may be juſtified, as it is expreſt Gal. 2. 16. This, I ſay, is the peculiar aim of Special Faith, and in that reſpect it ought to be called ſpecial, as it comes to God for Juſtification.

And therefore Thirdly, There is a ſpecial Conſequent, or Concomitant, which doth accompany or follow upon it, and that is, it doth in a ſpecial manner juſtifie and ſave a Man, which no Faith elſe, though never ſo ſpiritual, upon any other Object is ſaid to do: In Rom. 3. and in Rom. 4. this is clearly made out; the Apoſtle ſpeaks there, as you all know, of Faith as it doth juſtifie, and that Faith alone juſtifies without Works; and as Faith doth thus juſtifie, what doth he make there to be the Object of it? Firſt, Jeſus; ſo Chap. 3. 22. The Righteouſneſs of God, (ſaith he) which is by the Faith of Jeſus unto all, and upon all them that do believe; Namely, on Jeſus: And ver. 26. He is ſaid to be the Juſtifier of him which believeth in Jeſus: And ver. 28. he concludeth, that by ſuch a Faith, and no other, a Man is juſtified. And as he makes Jeſus thus to be the Object of it, ſo God as juſtifying too, ſo Chap. 4 v. 5. To him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly; Namely, on God, who is the Juſtifier, whoſe Righteouſneſs it is; and ſo call'd, becauſe he is the Beſtower, the Imputer of that Righteouſneſs, as you may read in the 21*ſt.* & 22*d.* Verſes of the 3*d.* Chapter; The Righteouſneſs of God which is by the Faith of Jeſus, (ſaith he) whom God hath ſet forth (ver. 25.) to be a propitiation thorough Faith in his Blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, &c. And therefore this Denomination of Special Faith (ſay I) it ought to have from theſe three things: 1. Becauſe it hath a ſpecial Object made and appointed for it, viz. The grace of God juſtifying and ſaving, and our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs the matter of our Salvation and Juſtification. And, 2. In reſpect of the Aim the Heart hath in believing, that it comes to theſe as for Salvation and Juſtification. And, 3. That upon thus coming God is ſaid to juſtifie, as Faith genuinely and ſpiritually pitcheth on theſe Objects: You have all theſe in that one place, Gal. 2. 16. Knowing this, that a man is not juſtified by the works of the Law, but by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt; even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the Faith of Chriſt, and not by the Works of the Law; for by the Works of the Law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified. Here is Firſt, you ſee, Faith deſcribed by a ſpecial Object, and therefore called The Faith of Jeſus Chriſt, the Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, and again, the Faith of Chriſt; it is three times ſo mentioned, in relation to this ſpecial peculiar Object, ſo that the Faith which juſtifies us is a Special Faith in reſpect of the Object. Secondly, It is a Faith which hath a peculiar Aim, which believeth in Jeſus that the Soul may be juſtified; We believed in Jeſus, that we might be juſtified, ſaith he: To come to Jeſus Chriſt for any thing elſe then for Salvation, and for Juſtification, is not a ſpecial Faith. And then Thirdly, There is a ſpecial Concomitant, or that which doth accompany it, a ſpecial Effect, or call it what you will, and that is, that we are juſtified though not by the act of believing, yet upon believing, which is evident by this, for how elſe did they believe That they might be juſtified? And it follows after, By the Works of the Law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified; but oppoſitely by and upon believing a Man is. And it is this Special Relation to its Object which makes this Faith (to ſpeak in the Scripture Language, and if you will you may call it by that Name inſtead of Special Faith) to be called Precious Faith: What is it that makes it ſo more precious than the belief of all things elſe whatſoever? either of the Truth, or Power or Faithfulneſs of God, or be the thing what it will be, what is it that makes it excel all ſuch Faith of any kind? It is the Object of it; ſo you have it in 2 Pet. 1. 1. He writes to them (becauſe none elſe are true Chriſtians) That have obtained like precious Faith with us: We tranſlate it thorough the Righteouſneſs, it is ἐν, in, or on the Righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; Faith as it is pitched upon this as its ſpecial Object, hath a ſpecial Excellency, and is precious Faith; and in this reſpect every Man's Faith is as precious as that of the Apoſtles themſelves was, though they might excel in degree, yet its preciouſneſs is not from its own degree of acting, but from the Object that it is pitched upon, even becauſe it is Faith in God, and in our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

And let me add this too, it is not only Special as we ſay of Remedies of a Diſeaſe, that there are many Remedies for ſuch a Diſeaſe, Oh, but this is a ſpecial one, not only a Soveraign one above all the reſt, but it is the only ſpecial Remedy; for Faith only as it is pitcht upon the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and the Free-grace of God in him, ſo it only juſtifieth.

So now I have expreſſed to you by way of Explication what I mean by Special Faith, in that ſenſe wherein it doth differ from ſome who would have it called Special in other reſpects: Now the Conſideration of this point is of exceeding great moment, both to direct your Hearts what Faith eſpecially continually to exerciſe, as will appear in the uſe of it, and alſo eſpecially to clear the Doctrine of Saving Juſtifying Faith. The Papiſts and Popiſh Spirits, what have they done? they ſay that there is a General Faith; that is, that Faith which a Man hath of all the Scriptures, and the Things revealed in them, which they call Fides Catholica, Catholique Faith, and this they affirm to be the Faith that juſtifies: They ſay, That Faith ſaveth and juſtifieth, or God doth ſave and juſtifie me upon my believing that he is true, that he is Omniſcient, that he is All-powerful, as well as upon believing on his Grace and Mercy, and upon God as juſtifying: They ſay, That Faith doth juſtifie and ſave as well when it looks to the Law, when it believes that God created the World, when it doth believe the firſt Adam, as well as when it believes the Second Adam: They ſay, That to believe truly the Juſtice of God condemning, is ſaving and juſtifying Faith, as well as to believe the Mercy and Grace of God pardoning and ſaving. The Truth is, according to their Doctrine, to believe the Devil to be an Accuſer, is a part of Juſtifying Faith, as truly as to believe that Chriſt is an Interceſſor and a Saviour; to believe that of Moſes, That curſed is every one that continueth not in all that is written in the Book of the Law to do it, is part of Juſtifying Faith, as truly as to believe that Jeſus Chriſt was made a Curſe; and indeed to hold this, is conſonant to all their Principles: For how do they aſſert that Faith juſtifies? Say they, Faith doth not juſtifie us in relation to its Object, but either as it is a Diſpoſition, and ſo to believe the Threatnings of the Law, diſpoſeth, ſay they, to Faith, or elſe it juſtifies as all other Graces do: Now Love to Man they ſay juſtifieth, as well as Love to God: So the belief of all the Stories in the Bible, they ſay, that juſtifies a Man, as well as to believe in God that juſtifies, or in Jeſus Chriſt that dyed. It agrees, I ſay, with the Principles of their Doctrine, they make all to be parts of Righteouſneſs alike; the whole Wiſdom whereby Timothy did know the Scriptures (as they ſay) ſaved him, as well as Faith in Jeſus Chriſt; whereas here the Text is clear, that all the other were made Wiſdom to him unto Salvation, but Through Faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus; that had he known all the reſt never ſo much, or never ſo ſpiritually, they would not have ſaved him, had he not had Special Faith in Jeſus Chriſt. In a word, That Faith that ſanctifies alſo juſtifies with them: Now the belief of all things in the Scripture is a means of ſanctifying, (as muſt be acknowledged) but that which doth juſtifie us is a Special Faith, pitcht upon the Grace of God juſtifying, and upon our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. So much now for the Explication of this Thing.

I come next, for the further Explication of it, to ſome Conceſſions, as I call them, or Grants, ſome Things that may and muſt be yielded to, as concerning Faith upon theſe Objects.

1. That all other ſpiritual Faith, pitched upon any other Object beſides God as juſtifying, and Chriſt as for Righteouſneſs and Salvation, is a ſaving Faith in a large ſenſe. I ſay, that Spiritual Faith which hath all the Scriptures, and all things in the Scriptures for its Object, may be called a ſaving Faith in this ſenſe, that it is unto Salvation; ſo the Text is clear, The Scriptures, they are able to make thee wiſe unto Salvation. All things delivered in the Scriptures being believed, the Faith and the belief of them is unto Salvation, it tends unto Salvation; but how? As all things elſe are ſaid to be unto Salvation that are true Graces in a Man, ſo it is called Repentance unto Salvation, Repentance unto Life: Unto Life it's true, without which God ſaveth no Man, and which are in order to it; but Special Faith pitcht upon Jeſus Chriſt, and upon the Grace of God, is ſaving in a higher ſenſe than ſo; for if you mark it, thoſe other are ſaid to be unto Salvation, only becauſe and by reaſon of Special Faith; they would not be unto Salvation, but only becauſe joined with, or ſubſervient to, or ſpringing from Faith in Jeſus Chriſt: They are able to make thee wiſe unto Salvation, (ſaith he) through Faith which is in Jeſus Chriſt. It is called Wiſdom unto Salvation, but yet in a more peculiar manner this Special Faith is the Faith which ſaveth us; for the other is called only Wiſdom unto Salvation, even thorough this Faith. Now if that the other be unto Salvation, as thorough the Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, then the Faith in Jeſus Chriſt muſt be in a ſpecial manner ſaving: Now how is that in a ſpecial manner ſaving, but becauſe there is nothing elſe in Man that doth receive Salvation, and the right to Salvation, as I have ſhewn elſewhere? All other General Faith, that is, Faith upon all other things elſe ſpiritually and truly apprehended, is a Wiſdom unto Salvation, but it is not peculiarly ſaid to be ſaving, or to be that which ſaveth us; we are only ſaved thorough Faith on Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs. To clear by the way likewiſe another thing, you ſhall find that the Apoſtle doth apply that place (Hab. 2. 4. The juſt ſhall live by Faith) both unto that Special Faith in Man which lays hold on the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt for Juſtification and Salvation, and likewiſe to that General Faith, whereby we believe all things elſe in the Word of God: He applyes it firſt unto Juſtifying Faith clearly in Rom. 1. 17. where ſpeaking of the Goſpel, he ſaith, It is the power of God unto Salvation, to every one that believeth, for (ſaith he) therein is the Righteouſneſs of God revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, the juſt ſhall live by faith. Now in Heb. 10. 38. he likewiſe ſaith, The juſt ſhall live by Faith; but the Faith he there means is a General Faith, as believing that there is a God, and all ſpiritual Objects elſe, as he opens it throughout that Chapter, which in the General Notion of it he calls The Subſtance of things hoped for, and the Evidence of things not ſeen, in the following Chapter Heb. 11. 1. So that I ſay, in a large ſenſe, it may be ſaid that all Graces as well as this are unto Salvation. In a large ſenſe we may be ſaid to live by that general Faith, (as I may ſo call it) to live by the belief of any thing elſe in the Word of God, with affections ſuited to that Knowledge, and that Faith. It helps us to mortifie Luſts, it helps us to quicken many Graces in us; whatſoever God ſanctifies us by, that Faith takes it in, and ſo in a ſenſe it may be called a Life of Faith; in Temporal Temptations it upholds us by many Temporal Promiſes, a thouſand Conſiderations there are in the Word which are not the Objects of Special Faith; but now the Faith by which we live the Life of Juſtification and of Salvation, the Faith by which we live in God's ſight (as the Scriptures Expreſſion is) is only a ſpecial Faith, which in Rom. 5. 18. is called Juſtification of Life; and indeed this very Diſtinction and Difference doth ſalve a great Objection of the Papiſts, and doth reconcile thoſe two places Rom. 1. 17. and the whole Eleventh Chapter of the Hebrews.

2. The Second Conceſſion, or Grant, or Caution, (call it what you will) which alſo is a great Truth) is this, that it is the ſame Principle of Faith by which we believe all things in the Scripture thus ſavingly, and unto Salvation, and by which we believe on Jeſus Chriſt too: It is the ſame Principle, or Seed, or Habit of Faith, by which we believe that Chriſt is the Son of God, and by which we believe on him for Righteouſneſs; it is the ſame Principle of Faith by which we believe that God is, (as the Apoſtle ſaith Heb. 11. 6.) and by which we believe on him for Juſtification. You have an inſtance in Abraham, by the ſame Faith whereby he believed, and looked at the promiſed Meſſiah, in whom all the Nations of the Earth ſhould be bleſſed, whereby he was juſtified, and which was accounted unto him for Righteouſneſs; by the ſame Faith he believed the Power of God, That God was able, as the Expreſſion is in Rom. 4. 21. And this anſwers another Objection alſo, a great one, which is uſed to be made; for, ſay they, ſaving Faith is commended to us in the Scripture by other acts than by the act of juſtifying, it is ſaid to overcome Kingdoms in Heb. 11. 33. and to have done all thoſe great acts which were done in the Old Teſtament, which yet were not acts of juſtifying Faith; and the Apoſtle doth make juſtifying Faith, and the Faith that did all thoſe great acts, to proceed from one and the ſame Root. We anſwer, indeed it is true, that juſtifying Faith is commended to us by other acts which it hath done, beſides that of ſaving Men; and the Apoſtles Scope in Heb. 11. is to ſet out that Faith whereby we are juſtified, by all things elſe which it doth, thereby to commend it the more as juſtifying us, as indeed it muſt needs do. Juſt as the Scripture doth, it ſets out Jeſus Chriſt not only as a Saviour, but it ſets him out alſo in a World of Excelencies elſe, as that in him and by him all things were created alſo, and that he is the Judge of all the World, and of all Mankind, that he is the Head of all Principalities and Powers, of all the Angels, and by a thouſand Excellencies beſides, and all theſe are to commend him ſo much the more to us as a Saviour: So the Apoſtle ſets out Faith in this Heb. 11. (and you ſhall find it likewiſe in other Scriptures) that the Faith that juſtifies us is ſaid to do a World of Exploits for us beſides juſtifying. But yet it doth not juſtifie us as doing any of thoſe things; as Chriſt he doth not ſave us as he is a Head of all Principalities and Powers, or as all things were created in him, and by him, but he ſaves us as dying upon the Croſs, only it is the ſame Saviour that doth the one and the other, and therein lies his Excellency. So it is here as to Faith, and that anſwers what the Apoſtle's Scope is in that Heb. 11. It is not ſo much to treat of Faith as juſtifying, as to ſhew forth the Excellency of that Faith which doth juſtifie in other things, which it continually doth for them it juſtifies.

3. There is this alſo to be granted, That Special Faith it is not true in any Man, and therefore ſaveth no Man, if joined with Unbelief, and deny all of many other things beſides believing on Chriſt for Righteouſneſs. There are, I ſay, many things, which if a Man ſhould deny, and not believe, beſides believing on Chriſt and on God that juſtifieth, he would not be ſaved, nor could he believe ſavingly with this Special Faith I now mention, unleſs he believed them: In 2 Tim. 2. 18. the Apoſtle ſaith, that denying of the Reſurrection did overthrow the Faith of ſome; for, ſaith he in 1 Cor. 15. 13. If there be no Reſurrection, then is Chriſt not riſen, and if Chriſt be not riſen, then is our preaching vain, and your Faith is alſo vain, and ye are yet in your Sins, and ſo you overturn the Faith in Chriſt for the pardon of ſin: So that now a Man cannot have a right ſaving juſtifying Faith upon God as juſtifying, or upon the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, if he deny many other things. There are thoſe that ſay they believe on Chriſt as a Saviour, believe on him as an Interceſſor and Mediator, and yet notwithſtanding deny him to be God: Now although we are not ſaved by believing that Jeſus Chriſt is God, but by believing on his Righteouſneſs, and on his Satisfaction and Obedience, as the Scripture expreſſeth it, yet notwithſtanding we cannot ſavingly believe the one if we deny the other. And the Truth is, thoſe that deny Jeſus Chriſt to be God, they do clearly (be they who they will be) take away the Goſpel, and the Foundation thereof, and the Satisfaction of the Wrath of God for ſin made by Jeſus Chriſt, which the Goſpel holds forth, and which is the Object of our Faith. That place in 2 Pet. 1. 1. which I quoted before to another purpoſe, is a place that affordeth abundance in it to the preſent purpoſe; To them (ſaith he) that have obtained like precious Faith with us, in, or on the Righteouſneſs of God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt: Here you ſee he deſcribeth the Faith of the Primitive Chriſtians, that ſpecial peculiar Faith (which yet was common to all them that were true Believers) it was upon the Righteouſneſs of our God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. Now here is the Queſtion, Whether that our God, and our Saviour, be two diſtinct Perſons, or whether it be meant only of Jeſus Chriſt? for in the Original it is, and ſo Beza reads it, Our God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. To decide this, it is clearly meant one Perſon, viz. Chriſt. For, Firſt, The Article τοῦ clearly carries it; it is not ſaid twice, as it would have been if two Perſons had been intended; it is not ſaid of our God, and of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, but of our God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. And then Secondly, You ſhall find that this is the ſtile of the New Teſtament, That when it ſpeaks of God the Father, he is called God and the Father, and when it ſpeaks of Chriſt, he is called God and our Saviour: As for Example, ſpeaking of God the Father in Eph. 1. 3. ſaith he, the God and Father; God and Father there are one perſon, and he ſpeaks not of two, but of one; for (which alſo confirms the firſt Reaſon) the Article ὁ it is put before God, but not before Father, it is not the God, and the Father, but the God and Father, ſpeaking of one; the like you have in 1 Cor. 15. 24. and in Col. 2. 2. This (I ſay) is the proper ſtyle of the New Teſtament concerning God the Father. Anſwerably, when the Scripture ſpeaks of Jeſus Chriſt, he is called God and our Saviour; ſo you have it expreſly in Tit. 2. 13. Looking for the appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt: As by God and the Father is meant God the Father, ſo by God and our Saviour is meant Jeſus Chriſt. Here now is the Faith, the Common Faith of the Primitive Chriſtians, it is Faith on the Righteouſneſs of him who

Part II. is our God, and our Saviour, and Men can never truly believe upon his Righteouſneſs unto Salvation, unleſs they believe that he is a God as well as a Saviour, for he had never elſe been a Saviour had he not been God, and his Righteouſneſs had never been the Righteouſneſs of a Saviour had it not been the Righteouſneſs of God; and therefore to deny him to be God, is to deny his Satisfaction, and he that denies the one denies the other; Denying the Lord that bought them, ſaith he in 2 Pet. 2. 1. Now then though Special Faith hath for its Object Jeſus Chriſt as a Saviour, and his Righteouſneſs as that of a Saviour, yet a Man muſt believe other things too concerning Jeſus Chriſt, as here he muſt believe that he is God alſo. There are many other things a Man muſt believe, and believe them ſtrongly too, which fall under the nature of General Faith, which yet are neceſſary to Special Faith, ſo that he who denies them cannot have true Special Faith. Take away Chriſt as being God, and you even take away the Saviour too, for they go both together, and accordingly it was the general Faith of all thoſe Primitive Chriſtians to believe in the Righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt as God, and as our Saviour.

4. The Fourth Conceſſion or Grant which I ſhall mention (which though it ſeems to be all one with the other before, yet hath a Difference) is this, That to this Special Faith on Chriſt, and on the Grace of God, there is the Faith of other things requiſite, either implicitely or explicitely. It is not only that he who denys ſome things which are believed with a general Faith cannot have a true Special Faith, ſince the denial of the one cannot ſtand with the truth of the other, (which was the meaning of the foregoing Conceſſion) but that unleſs a man believe many things, which yet are but the objects of a General Faith, either implicitely, or explicitely, he can never come to have true Special Faith: We may ſee this in the inſtance of the Eunuch in the Confeſſion of his Faith, Acts 8. 37. He ſays no more, but that he believed Jeſus to be the Son of God, but yet withall his Faith was pitch'd upon Chriſt as a Saviour dying for ſinners; for the occaſion of his believing was Philip's interpreting to him the 53*d*. Chapter of Iſaiah, which openly mentions Chriſt's being wounded for our ſins; and the Eunuch adds in his Confeſſion, that he believed Jeſus to be that Perſon who was intended, and he believed too that this Perſon was the Son of God, as that which alone made his Death and offering himſelf for ſinners ſatisfactory unto God, for he accordingly deſires to be baptized for remiſſion of ſins as obtain'd by Chriſt: His believing him to be the Son of God is indeed only mention'd, becauſe this was the great thing neceſſary in order to his believing on him as a Saviour, but yet this laſt is as ſtrongly implied and intended. To the ſame purpoſe we have another Scripture, Heb. 11. 6. He that cometh to God muſt believe that he is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him: He that cometh to God is he that cometh to believe on him, cometh to him for Salvation, for Faith is often ſo expreſt, tho' Special Faith lies in coming to God for Mercy, believing upon his Grace, believing on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, yet a Man muſt believe firſt that God is, and that ſpiritually, and he muſt be wiſe in that Point ſavingly too; a Man muſt believe alſo that God is juſt, and the Juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus; that he is true and faithful in his Promiſes, therefore a Man is ſaid when he believeth to ſet to his Seal that God is true: Yet, to believe the Truth of God, to believe the Juſtice of God, to believe that God is, all theſe belong to general Faith, to the ſame Faith wherewith I believe a thouſand things elſe in the Scripture. Only let me ſay this, it is not neceſſary that a Man ſhould believe all theſe explicitely, that is, in diſtinct Propoſitions, eſpecially not in a Method and Order, firſt this, and then that; as to ſay, firſt I came to believe that God was, and then I came to believe that God was true: But when God comes to reveal himſelf as a Juſtifier, then, as when the Sun in one Beam ſheweth the whole Sun to the Eye, ſo it is here, that often at once when God reveals himſelf as a Juſtifier of the ungodly, to be believed on, he alſo with that Beam enlightens the Soul with the Knowledge of what other Perfections are in him, which may conduce to repreſent him to us as a Juſtifier of the Ungodly. To illuſtrate this by the Inſtance of Adam's firſt ſin, as in that there were many ſins concurred, but that one ſin which the Scripture reckoneth, that one Diſobedience by which we all fell, was, Eating the forbidden fruit; ſo it is here, tho' there are many Acts of believing, yet the one Act which juſtifies is that which regards Chriſt, and his Blood and Righteouſneſs. When Abraham was to believe in the promiſed Meſſiah, in the promiſed Seed, In whom all the Nations of the Earth ſhould be bleſſed, he believed in the power of God too, as I ſaid even now out of Rom. 4. 21. and it was abſolutely neceſſary for him ſo to do; for he knew, according to the Promiſe, that the Meſſiah could not come unleſs he had Iſaac. Now though his Faith looked at Chriſt eſpecially, yet to ſupport this Faith that the Meſſiah ſhould come, he believed in the Power of God to give him Iſaac; his Special Faith was ſupported by his belief on the Power of God, and yet his belief on the Power of God, that God was able to do thus and thus, was not that which juſtified him, for it was but a general Faith, and yet I ſay it ſupported his Special Faith. You have the like in Heb. 11. 19. when he thought to offer up Iſaac, his Eye was then upon Chriſt, whom God would raiſe from the dead, but yet he believed that God was able to raiſe up Iſaac, without which he ſhould never have Chriſt, nor Chriſt ſhould never have come. Abraham's Faith was twice put to it, in believing on the power of God concerning Iſaac, the one was for his being conceived and born, and the other was when he offered him up; you have the one in Rom. 4. 19. and the other in Heb. 11. 18.

So that now Faith in the general of theſe Truths, that the Word of God, or the Promiſes of God are true, that God is faithful, that he is juſt, that he is powerful, all theſe they are the Supports of Special Faith, but yet ſtill that Special Faith which I am juſtified by, is only that whereby I believe upon the Grace of Chriſt, and upon the Grace of God as juſtifying. Therefore that which Divines do ſay to clear the Point of Faith juſtifying alone, may be applied here, Faith (ſay they) doth not juſtifie alone, as if it were unaccompanied with other Graces, as the Eye though it ſees alone, yet if it were alone, if it were out of the Head, it would not ſee: Now the ſame do I ſay of this Special Faith, it would never come to juſtifie us, if it were not ſupported with Acts of general Faith. A great many of ſuch Nerves meet in this Eye of Special Faith upon the Grace and Mercy of God, and concur therewith, and tho' they are before that Act, yet are in order unto Juſtification. When Men are humbled for ſin, upon the ſight of ſin as ſin, they could never be thus ſpiritually humbled for ſin, if they did not know God ſpiritually, and the Goodneſs of God: I mean, take Goodneſs in the general ſenſe, as God is good, and Sin is evil, they could not ſee ſin to be the greateſt evil, except they ſaw God to be the chiefeſt good; (for as God knows ſin by knowing himſelf, (as the School-men ſpeak) ſo we know the evil of ſin in that light whereby we know the Goodneſs of that God againſt whom we have ſinned, and from whom ſin hath drawn us) but now a thouſand of theſe Acts, if you could ſuppoſe ſo many to preceed, are not thoſe whereby we are juſtified, but they are in order to Juſtification. A Man is never juſtified till he be wrought upon to a ſpecial throwing of himſelf upon Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs, and upon God as juſtifying.

CHAP. IV.

That a Special Act of Faith on the Free-Grace of God as juſtifying Sinners, and on the Blood and Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, is the only true Juſtifying Faith: This prov'd by ſeveral Arguments. What are the Reaſons why God hath ſingled out this Special Faith to be that Faith upon which he juſtifies. The Uſes.

HAving explain'd the Nature of Special Juſtifying Faith, and what Acts conduce to it, I come now to demonſtrate, that it is only by this Special Faith that we obtain an Intereſt in Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs unto Salvation and Juſtification.

1. You know that there is a ſpecial part of God's Word, which is the Go-

ſpel, even as Chriſt the grand Subject of it is called eminently ὁ λόγος, the Word, Joh. 1. 1. Now what is the Goſpel? Truly it is nothing elſe (take it ſtrictly in the ſpecial ſenſe and meaning of it) but that Doctrine which holds forth the Grace of God juſtifying, pardoning, and ſaving Sinners, and which holds forth Jeſus Chriſt made Righteouſneſs to us. Now then this Goſpel it is call'd in a peculiar reſpect The Word of Faith; and for what reſpect but this? becauſe it is a ſpecial Object of a Special Faith which God ſaveth us by: The Apoſtle in Rom. 10. 8. ſpeaking of the Goſpel, in diſtinction from the Law, and from all elſe in the Scripture, ſaith, This is the Word of Faith which we preach: What is that ſame ſpecial Word of Faith? He tells us, ver. 9. That (ſo we read it, but ſome tranſlate it Nempe, or,) Namely this, if thou ſhalt confeſs with thy mouth the Lord Jeſus, and believe with thy Heart, thou ſhalt be ſaved; and the Scripture ſaith, (ver. 11.) Whoſoever believeth on him ſhall not be aſhamed: This is called the Word of Faith, which holdeth forth this ſpecial Object of the Special Faith of a Believer. And then again in Gal. 3. 1, 2. the Goſpel it is called the Hearing of Faith, having ſpoken of Chriſt being crucified before their Eyes in the Words before; ſo alſo in 1 Tim. 3. 9. it is called The Myſtery of Faith. Now as the Goſpel is called in a ſpecial manner the Word of Faith, ſo in us that Faith is called Special Faith which relateth to this Word, and the reſt is rather called Wiſdom to Salvation, whereby we know all things elſe in the Scripture, but this carries the name of Faith, and is called Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, and therefore it is called Faith of the Truth, 2 Theſ. 2. 13. that is, of the Goſpel; it is not only Faith of Truth, take it in general any Truth revealed in the Word, but Faith of that Truth; God hath choſen you to Salvation (ſaith he) through Faith of the Truth. As the Goſpel is called the Word of Faith, ſo on the other ſide Faith is called The Faith of the Goſpel, Phil. 1. 27. Thus it is a Special Faith, becauſe it hath this Special Object.

2. Then again add this to it, That tho' the Apoſtles were to Preach all the Word of God, yet they had a ſpecial Miniſtry; The word of Faith which we preach, ſaith Paul in Rom. 10. 8. Now the Faith that is to be in Chriſtians, it is to be ſuited to their Miniſtry; So we preach, and ſo ye believed, 1 Cor. 15. 11. Now then if that Preaching of Remiſſion of Sins in the Name of Chriſt, if Preaching the Righteouſneſs of God through Faith, the Righteouſneſs of Faith which is in the Son of God, if this were the ſpecial proper Miniſtry of the Apoſtles, then that is the Special Faith of a Chriſtian which is ſuited to this Miniſtry: Now it is evident that this was the ſpecial thing that they preached in Acts 20. 24. thus ſaith the Apoſtle, So that I might finiſh my Courſe with Joy, and the Miniſtry which I have received of the Lord Jeſus: What was that? To teſtifie the Goſpel of the Grace of God. Take the Goſpel as it holds forth the Grace of God, that is, that ſpecial Grace of God, his Free-grace in pardoning, ſaving, and juſtifying ſinners, this is the ſpecial Miniſtry (ſaith he) which I received of Jeſus Chriſt. You have it likewiſe elſewhere often profeſſed by the Apoſtle.

When Jeſus Chriſt began to Preach, he began with this, Mar. 1. 15. Repent, and believe the Goſpel; the Goſpel of Grace, and the Goſpel that holds forth Chriſt: And as he began, ſo he ended with it, Mar. 16. 15. Go and preach the Goſpel, and he that believeth ſhall be ſaved: And when he was in Heaven, what was the Commiſſion he gave to Paul? Paul ſaid, in the place I cited even now, that his Miniſtry was to Teſtifie the Goſpel of the Grace of God: Now what was Paul's Commiſſion given him by Chriſt from Heaven? ſee Acts 26. 18. I ſend thee to the Gentiles, to open their Eyes, and to turn them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveneſs of ſins, and an inheritance among them which are ſanctified by Faith that is in me.

3. Conſider this likewiſe, That when any of the People came to Chriſt, or came to the Apoſtles, to know what to do to be ſaved, ſtill they directed them to Faith upon a ſpecial Object for Salvation. What ſaith Paul to the poor Jaylor in Acts 16. 31. when he asked what he ſhould do to be ſaved? He gives him the moſt ſoveraign, ſpecial, only Remedy, Believe on the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved: He doth not bid him believe on God ſimply, and believe that God is powerful, juſt, &c. but he points his Faith to that which is the Special Object of it, Believe on the Lord Jeſus, ſaith he. You may have in the Scripture, and in the New Teſtament, Deſcriptions of one that ſhall be ſaved by Faith on other things beſides believing on Jeſus Chriſt, but you ſhall never have a Direction (when a Man comes to ask what he ſhall do to be ſaved) unto any thing elſe: So in Joh. 6. 29. Chriſt himſelf, when they asked him, what they ſhould do, that they might work the Works of God? He directs them to this, Believe on him whom he hath ſent.

4. Conſider, That all the Saints from the beginning of the World, eſpecially under the New Teſtament, do profeſs their truſting upon the ſpecial Grace and Mercy of God, as the ſpecial Object of their Faith. You have them brought both together, both the Saints in the Old and in the New Teſtament, in Acts 15. 11. and they both meet in this Center, in this ſpecial Faith. The Apoſtle there had in the very Words before ſpoken of their Fathers under the Old Teſtament, and he had ſaid, that the Law was a Yoke, which neither we nor our Fathers were able to bear; how ſhall we be ſaved now? and how were they ſaved then? Mark what follows, But we believe that thorough the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt (I take it, that by the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is not meant the Grace perſonally in Jeſus Chriſt, but that Grace which God beareth us thorough Jeſus Chriſt) we ſhall be ſaved, even as they, or, (as the Word is in the Greek) after the manner they were; and all by believing, and that for Salvation, having that ſpecial aim, and acting our Faith upon the Grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt. This (as I ſaid before) was the Special Faith of all the Primitive Chriſtians, 2 Pet. 1. 1. To all them, ſaith he, (for none elſe are true Chriſtians but thoſe) that have obtained like Faith (even this ſpecial Faith) on the Righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; and in 1 Pet. 1. 21. there you ſhall ſee what manner of Chriſtians they were, and what their Faith was upon, Who by him do believe in God that raiſed him from the dead, and gave him glory, that your Faith and Hope might be in God. This is the Deſcription of the Primitive Believers, they believed in God thorough Jeſus Chriſt, in God juſtifying thorough Jeſus Chriſt; and this was the Faith of the Apoſtles themſelves, Gal. 2. 16. We (ſaith he, ſpeaking of the Apoſtles) have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified; and there [in him, and the Faith of Jeſus] is three times mentioned, as being that which only we are juſtified by; and in Rev. 14. 12. you have all the Saints deſcribed by this, that they keep the Faith of Jeſus; they are deſcribed by this ſpecial Faith.

Laſtly, It appeareth that it is thorough this Special Faith that we are thus ſaved, having this Special Object, becauſe it is not ſaid only, that all that do believe ſhall be ſaved thorough him, which you have in Acts 13. 39. By him (ſaith he) all that believe ſhall be juſtified, and receive forgiveneſs of ſins. But whereas ſome might ſay, (and truly it might be objected) ſuppoſe I believe, tho' it be on ſomething elſe, yet I may be ſaved by Chriſt, and for Chriſt's ſake meritoriouſly; therefore to obviate this there are two Places more, which if you do but add, you will ſee that it is not only All that believe ſhall be ſaved thorough him, but, Through him all ſhall be ſaved, that believe on him alſo; that is, as none but Believers, and ſuch as have Faith, are ſaved, and ſaved through Faith, ſo their Faith muſt be on him too by which they are ſaved, for ſo it is expreſly ſaid in Acts 10. 43. Thorough his Name whoſoever believeth in him ſhall receive remiſſion of ſins. The like you have in Acts 26. 18. By Faith which is in me: And therefore now here is the thing wherein the ſtrength of the Argument lies, the Scripture doth not only ſay, He that believeth ſhall be ſaved; for ſo it ſaith too, He that repenteth ſhall be ſaved, and Faith is not only ſaid to be unto Salvation, for ſo Repentance is ſaid to be unto Salvation; but it is plainly expreſſed, He that believeth is ſaved by believing on him; Qui credit & credendo quidam ſalvatur; Who believes, and is indeed ſav'd by believing. And this is yet more expreſs, Rom. 3. 22. This (ſays he) is it that is witneſſed by the Law and all the Prophets, even the Righteouſneſs of God which is by Faith of Jeſus Chriſt to all, and upon all that believe: He contents not himſelf to have ſaid On them that believe, but more emphatically alſo adds, by Faith; ſo as this Righteouſneſs is not only ſaid to be on them that believe, for 'tis on them that repent too, but it is alſo expreſs'd that it is by believing; It is the Righteouſneſs of God, which is by Faith on them that believe; and this Faith is the Faith of Chriſt. Add to this that place in Gal. 3. 22. where there is the like Duplication, The Scripture hath concluded all under ſin, that the Promiſe by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt might be given to them that believe: It is given, and by believing on Chriſt: And all argues, that as Salvation is by Faith alone, ſo that it is by Faith upon this ſpecial Object, upon Jeſus Chriſt.

But you will ask me, What is it in Chriſt that is the Special Object of this Special Faith?

I ſhall give you an Anſwer out of the Scripture in a Word or two: You ſhall find it to be Faith in his Blood, and Faith in his Righteouſneſs, or in his Obedience: Faith in his Blood you have in Rom. 3. 15. and Faith in his Righteouſneſs you have in that Place I have ſo often quoted, 2 Pet. 1. 1. Theſe are the matter of our Juſtification, which the Soul hath recourſe unto, to be accepted for, and to have them imputed to it.

If you ask anſwerably to both theſe, For what it is that the Soul comes to Chriſt, believeth on his Blood, believeth on his Righteouſneſs, to obtain what?

I Anſwer, It is to obtain two things, the one anſwering his Blood, and the other anſwering his Righteouſneſs, viz. Remiſſion of ſins, and an inheritance among them that are ſanctified, (theſe being the two Legacies which the Soul comes for) and both by Faith, that is, in me, ſaith Chriſt, in Acts 26. 18. So that indeed there is the whole Obedience of Chriſt, active and paſſive, Blood and Righteouſneſs, for remiſſion of ſins, and for an inheritance, as thus you have them ſingly mention'd in ſeveral Scriptures; and to give you them both in one Scripture, Rom. 5. firſt at the 9th. verſe, ſaith he, Being now juſtified by his Blood, and what doth his Blood ſerve to juſtifie us from more peculiarly? From Wrath; Being juſtified by his Blood, (ſaith he) we ſhall be ſaved from Wrath through him; and elſewhere we are ſaid to be juſtified from Sin and from Wrath; and then in ver. 18, 19. of that Chapter, As by the Diſobedience of one many were made ſinners, (viz. That Act of Adam's Diſobedience imputed to them) ſo by the obedience of one many are made righteous, (ſo the Word is) they are conſtituted righteous by that Righteouſneſs and Obedience: He had ſpoken of his Blood before, ver. 9. he now ſpeaks of his Righteouſneſs, for he oppoſeth it to that actual Diſobedience of the Law which Adam committed, which conſiſted of one Act, but this is abundance of Grace, and of the Gift of Righteouſneſs. My Brethren, we are not made righteous by the act of Believing, No, we are conſtituted and made righteous by that Obedience of Chriſt on which we believe; the Text is expreſs for it. Now obſerve it, as [juſtified by his Blood] takes away Wrath, as you have it ver. 9. ſo our being made righteous by his Obedience is for Juſtification of Life: Read the very Words of the 18*th. verſe*, where ſpeaking of Juſtification of Life, which is diſtinct from remiſſion of ſins, and freedom from Wrath, he ſaith, it is by having the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt made ours, we being made righteous by his Obedience. So that, I ſay, this is the ſpecial Object of Faith, and this was the Faith of the Primitive Times.

I now come to ſhew the Reaſons (which have the greateſt Harmony in them with all other Truths, and have as much Conviction in them, being added unto Scripture, as any) to make this thing good, Why that God ſhould ſingle out this Act of Faith, as having in a ſpecial manner his Grace, and Chriſt's Righteouſneſs for Salvation in its Eye; Why God, I ſay, ſhould ſingle out this Act of Faith, as that upon which he is ſaid to juſtifie; ſo that let a Man have never ſo much Faith concerning God himſelf, under all other conſideration, be it a Belief of the Power, Juſtice, Truth, or whatſoever it be that doth glorifie God never ſo much, if it be not (if we could ſuppoſe them ſevered) Faith towards God as merciful, ſaving, juſtifying, &c. it is not juſtifying: Or, let a Man believe never ſo much of Jeſus Chriſt, and that ſpiritually too, if he do not believe in Chriſt as a Saviour, for Righteouſneſs and Pardon, on his Blood for Juſtification, and on his Righteouſneſs to be ſaved by it, all the other Faith will do him no good, neither is any other Faith ſaid to ſave or to juſtifie. Now the Reaſons why God hath ſingled out this ſpecial Act of Faith in ſuch a peculiar manner, as that which ſhould be peculiarly ſaving, and upon which he ſaveth Men, they are theſe:

1. Conſider what is the End of Faith? It muſt needs be this, to bring us o God, that we may come to him, and cloſe with him; and ſo may fear him, bey him, or whatever elſe you will put upon it: Without this all the World uſt yield that the End of Faith is not attained, therefore in the Scripture at Faith that ſaveth us is every where expreſt by a Coming to God, and a oming to Jeſus Chriſt: You have the Expreſſion frequently in Joh. 5. & Joh. 6. on the contrary Unbelief in thoſe that have the Goſpel preached to them is xpreſt by Not coming to Jeſus Chriſt, and by departing from the living God; ſo ou have it in John 5. 40. & Heb. 3. 12. Now none will come to God unleſs pon a ſpecial ground of Confidence in God juſtifying and accepting. To believe l of God elſe, to believe that God is true in his Word, in all his Promiſes, nd not to have the Subſtance of that Promiſe in the Eye, viz. That God is Juſtifier and a Saviour, will be ineffectual: All other Promiſes, and believing n God under all other Notions, will never bring a Man to God, or make him ome unto him, Heb. 11. 6. None cometh to God but he that believeth that there a God, and that he is a Rewarder of them that ſeek him: Special Faith is here xpreſt by Seeking of God. You have the like in Iſa. 11. 10. the which if you ompare with Rom. 15. 10. they both will open to you that in Heb. 11. 6. in a. 10. 11. ſaith the Prophet, In that day (ſpeaking of Chriſt) there ſhall be a oot of Jeſſe, which ſhall ſtand for an Enſign to the People, and to him ſhall the Gen- les ſeek: Mark the Expreſſion, [ſeek] and now compare with this Rom. 15. o. and ſee there what the Apoſtle renders and tranſlates the Prophets ſeeking nto: And again (ſaith he, quoting this place in Iſaiah) Eſaias ſaith, There ſhall e a Root of Jeſſe, and he ſhall riſe to reign over the Gentiles, and in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt: Mark it, Seeking and Truſting they are put all for one; I alledge it for this, that the Notion of Seeking in that Heb 11. 6. is believing on God, nd expreſt both by Seeking and by Coming to him: Now ſaith the Apoſtle Heb. 11. 6. there muſt be a twofold Apprehenſion in a Man for the ground f his Coming to God. 1. An Apprehenſion, and a Spiritual Belief that God is. That he is the Rewarder of them that ſeek him, or, (if you will in the Apo- les Language elſewhere) of them that truſt in him, or believe in him. It is not herefore ſimply the Belief of all things concerning God that will bring a Man's oul to ſeek to him, or to come to him, unleſs God be conſidered as he promiſeth himſelf a Reward, as he did to Abraham: The Bleſſing of Abraham in forgiving his ſins, and giving him Heaven, whereby was it expreſt? I will be thy Reward, ſaith God in Gen. 17. 1. or it may have relation to that in Pſal. 9. 10. hey that know thy Name will put their Truſt in thee, for thou haſt not forgotten hem that ſeek thee: Thou art a God that doſt regard, and haſt a ſpecial regard o them that ſeek thee, and do truſt in thee; for ſeeking and truſting are put both r one in that Pſalm likewiſe. Now what was the Name of God in the Old Teſtament which did draw in the Hearts of all his People to truſt in him, and o ſeek him? It was, The Lord God gracious and merciful, pardoning Iniquity, Tranſgreſſion and Sin, Exod. 34. 6. This was his Name, and thoſe that new it and believed it ſpiritually, they truſted in him, and looked upon him as one that was a Rewarder, and not forgetful (which is all one, for a Diminutive Expreſſion implies more than it expreſſeth) of them that ſeek him. o that now if a Man would come to God, and be brought to him, it is not ll the General Faith about God that the Soul of Man can take in, let him now never ſo much of it, that will do it, unleſs he withal know him in his pecial Promiſe of favour, and of being a Reward to them that truſt in him: Otherwiſe Men are driven away from God, Men will never come to him, if t were not for a Promiſe of ſpecial Mercy, pardoning them, accepting them, and rewarding them; There is mercy with thee that thou mayeſt be feared, ſaith the Pſalmiſt in Pſal. 130. 4, 7. No Man would fear God, would come to him, would ſeek to him, or worſhip him, or meddle with him, let him have never ſo much Faith in all things elſe, if it were not that there is Mercy with him, and plenteous Redemption, as it follows there. Men would not ſeek God, nor come to God, but under the Notion of a God promiſing Reconciliation in Chriſt, promiſing to be a Reward in Chriſt, and to be favourable in Chriſt.

The Papiſts (that I may ſhew you the Deceits and Miſtakes of Men all along Part II. as I go in this great Point) they tell us that it is General Faith, Faith to believe all things elſe of God, as well as to believe upon God giving of himſelf out to us in Special Promiſes, that is juſtifying Faith; and therefore they do find fault with Calvin, and blame him and others of our Proteſtant Writers, for ſaying that the School-men erred in making God (ſimply conſidered) the Object of Faith; and for ſaying that God in Chriſt, God as juſtifying, God as rewarding, and pardoning ſin, as he is thus, is the Special Object of Faith: And they ſeem to argue ſtrongly for their Opinion. I ſhall mention their Argument, and Anſwer it in a word. Say they, The primary Object of Faith muſt needs be God himſelf, ſimply conſidered in all his Attributes, and not in any ſpecial manner, God in Chriſt, or God in reſpect of Grace and Mercy; becauſe, take God as juſtifying, and God revealed in Chriſt, that's but a ſecondary thing to God himſelf, it is but Attributum ſecundarium, an Attribute at ſecond hand, by reaſon of his own purpoſe tooken up to ſhew Mercy to Sinners; therefore, ſay they, that which is not the primary thing in God, cannot be the primary Object of our Faith. And then farther they argue thus too, Viſion in Heaven ſucceedeth Faith, but to know God in himſelf, or God to be all in all, to know God in all his Excellencies, this, ſay they, is the Perfection of Heaven, therefore God ſo conſidered muſt needs be a more Perfect Object of Faith, than to conſider God as juſtifying us, or God revealed in Chriſt: For, ſay they, Faith and Viſion have the ſame Object, only with this variation, that God is revealed obſcurely to our Faith here in this life, but clearly in the World to come.

For Anſwer to this, and ſo to clear this firſt Reaſon that I have mentioned before I go off of it, I ſay, God himſelf, ſimply conſidered in himſelf, is not the primary Object of our Faith; for Faith cannot ſee God as in himſelf, none can ſee God and live, that is appointed indeed for Viſion in the World to come. We muſt therefore make that the primary Object of our Faith which is ſuited to us, and ſuited to the way of believing by God's Ordination, and to a Man's Mind and Spirit here in this life, as we are in our way to Heaven; and therefore now to go and throw off Chriſt, and Faith in him, and make Communion with God as God all in all, immediately in himſelf to be juſtifying Faith, though there is ſuch a Communion with him in the World to come, when God ſhall be all in all, yet this is not ſuited to what we are here in this Life; therefore we muſt take that to be the primary Object of Faith which is ordained to be ſo unto us while we are here. Now God is revealed to us here in this Life two ways, either by ſuch Words or Names which he hath given himſelf as do expreſs his Attributes, which are his back-parts, as that he is called juſt, and faithful, and true, and gracious, and merciful, and knowing all things, &c. Or elſe, God is to be conſidered as he is revealed to us in Jeſus Chriſt, in the Word of the Goſpel which is Preached to us; for what is Jeſus Chriſt but God manifeſted in the fleſh? Now then, of the two, which do you think is the chief Object of our Faith? Whether God revealed in his Attributes, or God revealed in Chriſt? Certainly God revealed in Chriſt. I yield you, that God known in himſelf is beyond both theſe, for both theſe are but means to know him by; but of the two, I ſay, God in Chriſt is the Special Object of our Faith, the other is but a ſecondary thing in compariſon of this: Why? Becauſe it was the Knowledge of God which they had in the Old Teſtament; and the truth is, that aboundeth with ſuch a Knowledge of God, in words expreſſing his Attributes; and if that had been the more perfect, then all that addition that Jeſus Chriſt hath brought by the revelation of himſelf had been in vain. Now if our minds could arrive at God immediately, we needed neither the one nor the other.

So that the ſumme of the Anſwer is this, That it is true, that the Knowledge of God ſimply conſidered, in his Nature, in his Being, in all his Excellencies, when he is ſo known, is moſt excellent: But the Queſtion is of that way of knowing him which God hath appointed us in this Life, and ſo, I ſay, the Knowledge of God in Chriſt is the moſt excellent, and Jeſus Chriſt is he that makes all the Attributes of God (which is another way of knowing him in this life) more conſpicuous than they were in the Old Teſtament, therefore Chriſt, and God revealed in Chriſt, pardoning, juſtifying, ſaving, and all that Jeſus Chriſt hath done to that end, is to us the primary Object of Faith.

Book I.

2. Another Reaſon why God hath appointed ſuch a ſpecial Faith to be juſtifying, is, becauſe Men that are ſinners (for in that conſideration the ſtrength of the Reaſon lies, or at leaſt there is thereby a further ſtrength added to the former) can never come to cloſe with God, they can never come to ſeek him, but under the Repreſentation of God in Chriſt, and of God pardoning, and God juſtifying. This is certain, that the more ſtrongly a ſinner believes all things that are in God, all his Excellencies, his Holineſs, his Power, his Juſtice, take all the Attributes that are in God, the more ſtrongly, I ſay, he believes theſe, if he ſhould not withal apprehend this God as one that not only hath Mercy in his Nature, but that holds forth Mercy in his Promiſes, and in Chriſt for the Pardon of Sin, and for Salvation, the more it will drive a ſinner off from God, unleſs the ſpecial Grace or Mercy of God, as it is held forth in the Promiſe, be revealed to that Man's Soul; and then indeed the more ſtrongly he believes all the Excellencies that are in God, the more ſuch a Belief will ſtrengthen his Heart to come to God, and to believe in him, when once he hath cloſed with him under the Notion of merciful, and juſtifying, and pardoning, in and thorough Chriſt ; otherwiſe, I ſay, it puts Men off from God ; ſo it did Cain, ſo it did Adam, who ran away from God. And what is the Reaſon that the Devils believe and tremble ? It is, becauſe all that they know and apprehend of God, hath no ſpecial Promiſe of Mercy to them as ſinners from that God : They know, that God is merciful, but becauſe there is not a Declaration of God's Will to be merciful to ſuch as are in their Condition, becauſe they know that his Mercy is limited to Men, that Good-will is to Men on Earth, as the Angels ſung, Luke 2. 14. and not unto Devils in Hell, that no Name is given unto Men by which they can be ſav'd, but only the Name of Chriſt, and not to Devils ; therefore, the more, I ſay, that they know of God, the more they tremble, and the more they go off from God ; but it is God apprehended under that ſpecial Notion, as one that hath a Name of being merciful, put out in his Promiſes to ſuch ſinners as we are, that draws Sinners to him.

So that let Papiſts and Popiſh Spirits, that would have a general Faith to ſave us, diſpute what they will, that God conſidered in himſelf is the chief Object of Faith, yet ſtill clearly take us as ſinners, God as a Juſtifier of ſinners, out of his infinite Mercy and Grace is the chief Object of Faith unto us; you have it plainly in Rom. 4. 5. To him that believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly is Faith accounted for Righteouſneſs : Go take a Man that is ungodly, and how will this Man ever come to believe in God, unleſs under this Notion, that he is one that juſtifies the ungodly ? And therefore that's the Faith that is accounted for Righteouſneſs. It is not believing that God is true, or holy, or juſt, ſimply conſidered in himſelf, (if a Man believe theſe never ſo ſtrongly) that will juſtifie him ; but to believe on God under this Notion, that he is a Juſtifier of the ungodly, this is a Man's Faith which is accounted to him for Righteouſneſs. Without this it is certain ſinners would have no Heart to come unto God ; you have an excellent Expreſſion to this purpoſe in Eph. 3. 12. where ſpeaking of Jeſus Chriſt, and ſo of God, conſidered as in Chriſt revealed, he ſaith, In whom (having ſpoken of Chriſt in the very Words before) we have boldneſs and acceſs with confidence by the faith of him : Here is the ſpecial Faith expreſs'd, which is pitched either upon God as juſtifying in Chriſt, or upon Chriſt, thorough whom God juſtifieth. Now go take a Sinner, he would never have any boldneſs, never have any Confidence ſo much as to come to God, he would have no Heart to do it, he would be driven off from him, if he did not firſt look on God as in Chriſt ; for mark it, he mentions Chriſt twice, In whom we have boldneſs by the Faith of him : The meaning is this, that take the reality of the thing it ſelf, the acceſs, the leave that God giveth for ſinners to come to him, it is in and by Chriſt, In whom (ſaith he) God really admitteth Men to him, or elſe would not do it. And as thus for the reality of the thing, it is in Chriſt, and without him there would be no acceſs to God, ſo it is only that Man who apprehendeth Chriſt, and cometh to God thorough Chriſt, that hath this acceſs with Confidence, and therefore that is added, By the faith of him : For this is a true Rule, which will never deceive us, that look what it is that moveth God to accept us, the Apprehenſion of that in God ſtrengtheneth our Hearts to come unto him to be accepted: Now if God did not look upon us in Jeſus Chriſt, there were no acceptation of us on God's part; and if we on the other ſide did not by Faith look upon God thorough Jeſus Chriſt, there would be no Confidence, no Boldneſs, but the Heart would go back; therefore he puts in both, In whom, (ſaith he) thorough the Faith of whom we have boldneſs, and confidence, and acceſs to God. If there were a Glaſs (to make ſuch a ſuppoſition) thorough and by which the Sun did ſhine upon the World, and take that Glaſs away and the Sun did not ſhine; and on the other ſide, if that the Eyes of Men and other Creatures were ſo weak that they could not behold the Sun but thorough that Glaſs; if both theſe were true, what a great Neceſſity were there that the means of the ſight of the Sun ſhould be ſtill as thorough that Glaſs. So it is here, God himſelf out of Chriſt ſhineth not upon ſinners, neither can the ſore, the weak Eye of a ſinner dare to behold that God which is a conſuming fire, but as looking thorough this Glaſs; and therefore, I ſay, tho' Man in his Primitive Innocent State had another way and means of coming to God, as Adam had, yet notwithſtanding now, as ſinners, we have not. And let me tell you this too, that take Adam's Condition, there was a ſpecial kind of Faith even in him too; he muſt have believed and known (at leaſt if not by Faith by ſome other ways, whether it was by the Law of Natural Righteouſneſs in his Heart I diſpute not) that this God did accept him to Life, and that he was in his favour. It's true indeed, he had this Knowledge by the Intervention of his own Good Works, otherwiſe tho' Adam had known God to be omniſcient, to be holy, to be juſt, to be true, and to be happy, and perfect, and bleſſed, if that he had not taken all theſe Attributes of God in at this little hole, the Beams ſhining in at this hole, That this God juſtifieth me, approveth me upon my Obedience; (he had the ſight of this through his Works and Holineſs, becauſe the Law between Adam and God ſtood as between a Creator and a Creature) all the other knowledge would not have comforted Adam's Heart, had not he, I ſay, apprehended God to juſtifie him; though then indeed the way of Juſtification was on the account of Adam's Holineſs, and thorough his Works. Hence now therefore, God as juſtifying and approving of Adam, as a Perſon in his favour, and God as his God, was the primary Notion under which Adam looked upon God; and to him all the other were but as ſecondary in compariſon of this, much more is it ſo to a poor ſinner. And therefore now let us conſider God juſtifying us out of Grace (for otherwiſe if we conſider our ſelves under the firſt Covenant, all the Attributes of God come in upon us with Terrour) and then all his Attributes ſhining but thorough this one Conſideration, that God is a God that juſtifies ſinners, come in ſweetly upon us. And therefore let Popiſh Spirits ſay what they will, yet ſtill unto us as ſinners it is God as gracious, God as juſtifying, it is God as in Chriſt revealed, which is the proper and ſpecial Object of Juſtifying Faith. For, conſider, when a ſinner doth turn to God, and come to believe in good earneſt, what is the chief thing he hath in his Eye, in the knowledge of himſelf? He hath the guilt of ſin, Poor Soul, I am (ſaith he) obnoxious to the Wrath of the great God; this is the chief, the firſt thing he hath then in his Eye; therefore, now anſwerably in his ſeeking unto God, what hath his Faith recourſe unto? to that God who juſtifies the ungodly, and to that Chriſt through whom he doth it; and therefore he hath recourſe to them for Juſtification firſt, and Sanctification afterwards; and why? becauſe the Power of Sin is not firſt in his Eye, but the Guilt of Sin, therefore anſwerably Juſtification, (take him as he is a Sinner) and God as Juſtifying, and Chriſt as juſtifying, muſt needs be in his Eye firſt, and then afterward Chriſt as ſanctifying. Adam, he might have leave to ſtudy all the Attributes of God, one after another, by Pieces and Parcels, and pick and chooſe which he would think of firſt, even as Scholars do pieces of Divinity; and God might draw out an Act of Faith and Knowledge of, or to himſelf, under this Attribute, or that Attribute, as he pleaſed: But this Poor Soul that is a Sinner, when he comes to God, he hath not the leiſure to look over all things elſe in God; or if he hath, he is terrified with them; but, (ſaith he) I am loſt; and what is the firſt Queſtion he asketh? What ſhall I do to be ſaved? That's the firſt Queſtion in order of Nature, therefore, now if you will anſwer this Poor Souls Queſtion, you muſt tell him of God in Chriſt, and of God ſaving and juſtifying Sinners in Chriſt.

3. A Third Reaſon why God hath appropriated our Salvation to ſuch a ſpecial Faith on Chriſt, is, Becauſe it is unto that Faith the Object of which only pacifieth the Heart againſt Condemnation that God only doth annex Juſtification. If to any at all, it muſt needs be to that Faith, the Object of which alone pacifieth the Heart againſt Guilt and Condemnation; but now, only the Faith that is in Jeſus Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs, and upon God as juſtifying, hath that for its Object which alone is able to quiet and pacifie the Heart againſt Condemnation, therefore God hath annexed alone to this Faith our being juſtified: Yea, it is this which firſt puts in the chief Life into the Soul, Rom. 1. 17. The Righteouſneſs of God is revealed from Faith to Faith; and it follows, The juſt ſhall live by Faith. The greateſt Death is in the guilt of ſin, ſo that if we could ſuppoſe that a general Faith could act againſt the Power of Sin, yet it could not raiſe the Soul from Death in the guilt of it, until the Righteouſneſs of God which acquits it be revealed, Col. 2. 12, 13. to this alſo accord thoſe places which expreſs, That he who ſeeth the Son hath Life, and that He who believeth on the Son hath Life, Joh. 3. 26. 1 Joh. 5. 11. Gal. 2. 20. But will you firſt, before I proceed to prove this, mark how I expreſs my ſelf; I ſay, that Faith, the Object of which ſerveth to pacifie; I do not ſay, that Faith the Act of which always pacifieth, but whoſe Object alone I muſt have peace from. Look what Thing, what Conſideration, what Apprehenſion alone muſt give that Soul Peace and Quiet againſt Condemnation, certainly Faith upon that Object is it which God hath annexed Juſtification unto. Always the Act of Faith upon Chriſt, and upon Grace, doth not bring Peace, but there is that in the thing believed, or that will do it in the Event. Now the Reaſon of the Conſequence of this is clear, for Juſtification you know is oppoſed to Condemnation, therefore that Object of Faith, and that of Faith which ſerveth to pacifie the Heart only againſt Condemnation, the Belief on that thing certainly only juſtifieth. Now there is nothing but God as juſtifying, and our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs, thorough whom God juſtifieth, that is able to pacifie and quiet the Heart of a Sinner; nothing elſe will do it. We uſe the like Argument againſt the Papiſts, that therefore we are juſtified by Faith alone.

I will give you clearly a Scripture for this, and ſo paſs from it, in Rom. 3. and Rom. 4. the Apoſtle diſcourſeth of Faith as juſtifying, and he makes the Object of that Faith in Chap. 3. to be Jeſus Chriſt; he calleth it The Faith of Jeſus, ver. 26. &c. he alſo makes God as juſtifying the ungodly the Object of Faith, in Chap. 4. ver. 5. and he doth ſhew that we are juſtified alone by Faith as acted upon thoſe two Objects, and not by the Works of the Law: Now how doth he conclude in Chap. 5. ver. 1. Being juſtified by Faith, ſaith he, (that is, by this Faith on God juſtifying, and on Jeſus Chriſt, which is the Faith only by which he had proved we are juſtified in the Words before) we have peace with God thorough Jeſus Chriſt: That is, this is the only Faith that pacifieth the Heart; Faith only as pitch'd upon theſe Objects nakedly, and barely, and ſingly, will quiet the Heart, and bring Peace with God, nothing elſe will do it. Now I appeal to the Experience of all Believers, and in this Caſe I may very well do it, I appeal to all your Conſciences, you that have been exerciſed in the Conflicts of Faith and Believing, what hath ever quieted your Hearts? All that you knew of God, or of Jeſus Chriſt, would not do it, till you came to lay hold upon the Grace of God as juſtifying ungodly Wretches, meerly for his own Names ſake, and till you laid hold on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, thorough whom you are juſtified; nothing elſe but God nakedly and ſimply conſidered, without any thing in your ſelves, hath ever quieted the Heart of you Sinners. As the Apoſtle argues from Experience in a like caſe, ſo do I argue from Experience in this Caſe too: The Apoſtle in Gal. 3. 2. when he would prove that it is the Goſpel only that conveys the Spirit, ſaith he, This only would I learn of you, you that are ſo much for the Law, I pray tell me your Experience, I appeal to your own Experience, (and Experience in this caſe is a ſure Rule) Recieved you the Spirit by the Works of the Law, or by the hearing of Faith? What doth he mean by the Spirit? He means the Spirit of God, ſealing up Salvation to them, as in Eph. 1. 13. You were ſealed by the ſpirit of Promiſe, and we have received the Spirit, the annointing, 1 Cor. 2. 12. Of this Spirit he ſpeaks, for afterwards he ſpeaks of the common Gifts of the Spirit, ver. 5. Now I appeal to you, ſaith he, what was it that did bring this Spirit down into your hearts, thus ſealing up Salvation to you? Was it all the Works of the Law that ever you did? No, It was by the hearing of Faith, ſaith he. Now the thing I cite this for, is to ſhew that in a Caſe and Argument of this Nature, the Apoſtle appeals to the very Experience of Chriſtians. What is the Reaſon that the Experience of Chriſtians muſt needs decide ſuch a Caſe as this is? Becauſe that God's Diſpenſations are alway ſuited to his own Appointments or Ordinances; that is, you will find that God will only bleſs his own way, and his own means. Now then (ſaith the Apoſtle) if Works of the Law had been a way and a means through which God conveyed his Spirit, ſome of you would have had the Spirit convey'd to you by works of the Law; I appeal to you if ever you had? But on the contrary, you have found it, and generally found it, that the Spirit was conveyed to you by the Hearing of Faith. Certainly then this is the truth: Why? Becauſe Experience would not ſecond this unleſs it were God's own Appointment and Ordination, that the hearing of Faith conveyeth the Spirit, for that which God ſanctifieth to be effectual, hath always the Subſtance of his own Ordination in it. Now then in the like manner do I here argue, that Faith whoſe Object only quieteth the Heart againſt Condemnation, is certainly that, as pitch'd on that Object alone upon which God doth juſtifie us; now nothing can, or ever did, or will quiet the Heart, (I appeal to all Experience) but this Special Faith, pitch'd upon the Grace of God juſtifying immediately and freely, and upon the Lord Jeſus Chriſt made Juſtification to us.

4. The Soul can lay hold upon no Promiſe that God hath made, (it cannot only neither come to him, nor treat with him, but can lay hold upon no Promiſe elſe) neither by way of Aſſurance, nor by way of Recumbency; it cannot with any Heart caſt it ſelf upon God or Chriſt for the Performance of any Promiſe, further than as it hath pitch'd (either by way of Aſſurance or caſting it ſelf) upon the Special Mercy of God to Pardon, or accept it in Jeſus Chriſt, and therefore this muſt needs be the firſt and principal Act of Faith. I do not ſay, that no Man can caſt himſelf upon God for any other Promiſe, till he be aſſured that God doth juſtifie him; but till he hath dealt with God for Juſtification as a God that juſtifieth the ungodly, and as a God thus merciful, and till he hath dealt with Jeſus Chriſt, and come to him for Salvation, this Soul can never come to him for any other Promiſe with any chearful Heart. It is moſt certain, you cannot have recourſe to God for other Promiſes with any Boldneſs and Heartineſs, further then your Hearts are in a proportion ſtrengthned to reſt upon, and to have recourſe unto the Grace of God to juſtifie, and unto our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, through whom we are juſtified; it is a thing which you may make a uſe of now by the way. Take this for a Rule, that your way when you would deal with God for any Temporal Promiſe, it is to renew your Faith for your Juſtification and Salvation; I will give you an inſtance or two for it, in Joh. 11. 26, 27, &c. there was the Siſter of Lazarus, Martha, who was to deal with Jeſus Chriſt, and he with her, concerning the raiſing of her Brother; Chriſt he tells her that her Brother ſhall riſe again, ver. 23. Yea, ſaith ſhe, I know that he ſhall riſe again in the Reſurrection at the laſt day: Chriſt now he was to bring her Heart off to this, that he ſhould riſe ſooner, that he would raiſe him up now, which ſhe was very backward to believe; What doth Jeſus Chriſt do therefore? He puts her firſt upon this, to renew her Faith upon him for Salvation, ſo you have it clearly, ver. 25. Jeſus ſaid unto her, I am the Reſurrection and the Life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead yet ſhall he live, and whoſoever liveth and believeth in me ſhall never dye: Here you ſee he draws her on to believe in him for Salvation, and to renew that Faith. There are a great many Obſervations which may be made out of theſe Words: As firſt this, You ſee the Special Faith of the Goſpel, which Chriſt would have us put into our Creed. You know there is a Creed, which we call the Apoſtles Creed, but here is one main Article of a Creed which Chriſt hath made; Believeſt thou this, ſaith he? He doth Catechetically inſtruct her in this main Point, namely, that he is, the Reſurrection and the Life, and that whoſoever liveth and believeth in him ſhall never dye. To believe therefore with a Special Faith on Chriſt for Salvation, and againſt Condemnation, this is the great thing of the Goſpel, and Chriſt he doth urge it upon her, that he might bring her Faith firſt off to this, and then it would be eaſie for her, more eaſie for her, having renewed that Faith upon Chriſt for Salvation, and not dying, to believe that he would raiſe her Brother, which was a Temporal Mercy which ſhe was then treating with him about, and which he was rather bringing her off to be perſwaded of. Hence therefore I conclude, That if you would have any Temporal Mercy, or believe in any Promiſe elſe, firſt believe in him for Salvation and againſt Condemnation, believe on him for Pardon of Sin, renew ſuch Acts of Faith. Another thing I obſerve by the way out of thoſe Words, is this, Her Anſwer is, Yea Lord, I believe that thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God: Hence ſome ſay, that to believe that Chriſt is the Son of God, is true Faith, and Faith enough: But you muſt join Chriſt's Words and her Anſwer together, for Chriſt doth not call her to believe that he is the Son of God, but to believe on him, that ſhe might not dye, and therefore I ſay put her Anſwer and Chriſt's Words together, and the Meaning is clearly this, ſhe believed him to be the Son of God, and ſhe believed in him alſo that ſhe ſhould not dye; and having brought her Heart off to this, it was more eaſie for her now to believe that Chriſt would raiſe up Lazarus her Brother, then which ſhe deſired nothing more of a Temporal Mercy. You ſhall find likewiſe, that when Men and Women came to be healed, as for inſtance the Man ſick of the Palſie, Mat. 9. 2. when he was brought to Chriſt to be healed of his Palſie, what doth Chriſt firſt ſay to the poor Man when he came to him? He ſaid unto him, Son be of Good cheer, thy ſins be forgiven thee: They brought him to be healed of his Palſie, you ſee Chriſt afore ever he heals his Palſie, ſpeaks firſt to the Man, Son, be of good comfort, thy ſins be forgiven thee. What do I argue out of theſe Words? Firſt, That Jeſus Chriſt, the good Phyſitian, he knew the Sore of the Man's Heart; poor Man, he would fain be heal'd of his Palſie, but the deſire of forgiveneſs ſtuck in his Spirit, and his Faith ſtuck moſt at that; for Chriſt here he ſpeaks ad Cor, to the Heart, and therefore afore he would heal his Palſie, he firſt ſpeaks to that which was moſt in his Eye, and which the Man moſt wanted, and which he came for; Be of good cheer, thy ſins be forgiven: The Words argue, that the Man was exerciſed about this, how his ſins ſhould be pardoned thorough Jeſus Chriſt that was the Saviour of the World, therefore Chriſt firſt tells him, thy ſins be forgiven: For the Man thought with himſelf, alas, the curing of my ſickneſs will do me no good, if that my ſins remain; What doth Chriſt therefore? He anſwereth according to the Man's thoughts, Thy ſins, ſaith he, are forgiven thee. Again, thought the poor Man, this Temporal Mercy will not be granted, unleſs he forgive my ſins too; my ſins brought this Diſeaſe upon me, and it will not be taken away unleſs my ſins be forgiven: Therefore Chriſt ſpeaking to the poor Man's Heart, tells him firſt that his ſins are forgiven. Hence, I ſay, I argue, that the Man's Soul was more exerciſed about the forgiveneſs of his ſins than about his Palſie; therefore, I ſay, any of you too cannot come with Comfort to believe any other Temporal Promiſe, or any thing elſe, unleſs you come firſt either by Aſſurance to believe your ſins are forgiven, or to deal with God about forgiveneſs, as this poor Soul did. I might give you the like inſtances in many others that were healed, and I might exemplifie this to you in the buſineſs of Abraham: The Lord did make a Promiſe to Abraham (which ſeems to be but an outward Promiſe, and take the Letter of it and it was but an outward Promiſe) concerning the multiplying of his Seed: And it is a thing that Bellarmine objecteth; You talk (ſaith he) that your Faith that juſtifies is pitch'd only upon God as juſtifying, and upon Jeſus Chriſt. The Faith that Abraham was juſtified by, was, believing the multiplying of his Seed as the Stars of Heaven. In Rom. 4. 3. it is ſaid, The Scripture ſaith, Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for Righteouſneſs: Now where is it ſaid that Abraham's Faith was counted unto him for Righteouſneſs? You have it in Gen. 15. 6. And upon what Occaſion was it ſpoken, that his Faith was counted to him for Righteouſneſs? It was believing of that Promiſe, that God would make his Seed like the ſtars of Heaven. Now, ſaith the great Objector, here is your Juſtifying Faith, it is meerly Faith upon a Temporal Promiſe. But you ſhall ſee how this Man is miſtaken, for read but the firſt verſe of that Gen. 15. and mark what God ſaith afore he makes him that Temporal Promiſe, (if you will make it ſuch, though if I had time I could ſhew you it is more, but take it ſo) ſaith God there firſt, Fear not, Abraham, I am thy ſhield, and thy exceeding great reward: There God makes a ſpecial Promiſe of Mercy and Bleſſedneſs unto Abraham, and having made this, he makes him a Promiſe of multiplying his Seed, ver. 5. And he believed in the Lord, (ver. 6.) and he counted it to him for righteouſneſs: That is, his Faith was exerciſed upon the Special Promiſe, by reaſon of which, and by vertue of which God did beſtow upon him this other Promiſe of making his Seed as the Stars of Heaven. I could give you another Anſwer to it, but I only alledge it for this purpoſe, that Temporal Promiſes are believed in, but in the ſtrength of having firſt cloſed with God, and with Jeſus Chriſt, under Special Promiſes of Mercy, Pardon and Forgiveneſs, and of receiving of Happineſs and of Bleſſedneſs in and thorough Chriſt. There is no treating with God for any Promiſe, till that Faith hath thus pitch'd it ſelf upon his free Favour in Chriſt, either by way of Aſſurance, or by way of caſting a Man's ſelf upon him to be juſtified; for a Man treateth with God before as an Enemy, and will a Man come to an Enemy for any thing when as his Heart is not with him? Therefore further, when the Soul doth come to God, having ſome Promiſe out of God's Heart, that he is a Juſtifier of ſuch as he is, and ſo reſteth upon him to be juſtified by him, he will then have recourſe to him for any thing elſe too: And the Truth is, a Man hath no Heart to treat with God till then about any thing, therefore in 2 Pet. 1. 3, & 4 ver. compared, he ſaith, that Through the Knowledge of him (that is, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for he had ſpoken in the Verſe before of believing in the Righteouſneſs of God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt) are given unto us exceeding great and precious Promiſes.

The laſt ſort of Reaſons which I ſhall give you for the confirmation of this, viz. Why that God hath ſingled out Special Faith thus to juſtifie us upon, and why he doth not juſtifie us upon general Faith, be it never ſo good? and why, tho' we believe other things never ſo ſpiritually, and let them have never ſo ſpiritual effects upon our Hearts, yet it is only believing upon God as juſtifying and ſaving which is the right Faith? I ſay, the laſt ſort of Reaſons to evince it are theſe; Becauſe it ſuiteth every way, and agreeth with all the Principles that are held forth in the Doctrine of Faith and Juſtification, and the contrary Opinion doth diſagree with all true, Orthodox, ſound Principles, held forth about it.

1. In the firſt place, (for this contains ſome two or three particulars in it) It was a meet thing, and well ſuited together, that God ſhould beſtow all Benefits upon us (if he will beſtow them thorough Faith) thorough that Faith that is ſuited peculiarly to, and is pitched upon the Benefits which he doth beſtow. It is a Rule which Chriſt hath, and he hath it twice; He hath it in Mat. 8. 13. and He hath it in Mat. 9. 29, 30. The Rule is this, Be it unto thee according to thy Faith, (ſaith he;) ſo it is in Mat. 9. 29. when the poor blind man did come unto him to be heal'd: He hath the very ſame expreſſion in Mat. 8. 13. Go thy way, and as thou haſt believed ſo be it done unto thee: That is, Look what is the proper Aim of your Faith, that by God's Ordination doth God upon believing beſtow upon you. Now if a Man had the Faith of working Miracles, and if he would work a Miracle, why according to his Faith it would be unto him. If a Man came to Jeſus Chriſt to be heal'd, it was to him according to that Faith. Therefore now according to this Rule then doth God give forth Juſtification, when a Man's Soul comes to him to be juſtified, believes on him as a Juſtifyer, when he comes to Jeſus Chriſt for that Righteouſneſs which ſhould juſtifie, when he believeth on Jeſus that he may be juſtified, as it is in Gal. 2. 16. Saith the Apoſtle in Rom. 4. 5. He that believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his Faith is counted for righteouſneſs: That Faith, and no other, for that is his meaning. To believe on Chriſt, or upon God, under any other Notion, though it may make a Man Holy, yet it will not juſtifie a Man: You may ſee the Truth of this in the outward Elements of the Sacraments, as Bread and Wine in the Lord's Supper, and Water in Baptiſm; look what it is that they are ordained by God to ſignifie, ifie, that they ſeal up to us; they ſignifie the Blood of Chriſt, and the Death f the Lord Jeſus, and our being one with him therein; and as they ſignifie heſe by God's Ordination, ſo they do ſeal up theſe to us in a more eminent manner. So it is here, look what it is that the Heart comes to God for, that s it that God returns again to the Spirit; therefore he returns not Juſtification o a Man till he come to him to be juſtified, therefore it is that ſpecial Act upon which this great Benefit is given forth. I do not ſay, that every Man that comes to Chriſt hath the exact Notion of the word, Juſtified by Chriſt: Alas, the Ancient Language of the Fathers was, of being ſaved by Chriſt, or they were not acquainted with this Word juſtified. Our Divines of the Reformation ſpeak more diſtinctly than they, but they meant the ſame thing: Only I ſhould add this Caution, that Benefits of a kind, if a Man come to God or any one, God gives him all the reſt; all Benefits which are out of us, as Adoption, Sonſhip, Pardon of Sin, which are all Acts without us: If a Man come to God for one, ſuppoſe Son-ſhip, he gives him all the reſt; and according o the kind of the Faith is the Benefit beſtowed.

2. Again, That God juſtifies us by a Special Faith, it agrees with this Principle alſo, viz. with the way of God's juſtifying us; and what is that? It is ot that God doth juſtifie us by Faith, as it is an Act put forth by us, an Act f ours, or a Quality in us, but he doth juſtifie us by reaſon of the Objects aid hold upon by Faith, the Free-grace of God, and of Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that ot ſo much Faith as theſe are ſaid to juſtifie, being apprehended by Faith: might be exceeding large in manifeſtation of this. It is a received Principle mongſt all our Orthodox Divines, I will only mention that in Gal. 3. 8. The Scripture foreſeeing that God would juſtifie the Heathen by Faith, preached the Goſpel, ſaying, in thee (ſpeaking of Abraham perſonating Chriſt) ſhall all Nations e bleſſed: By Bleſſing here he means Juſtification clearly, for he ſpeaks of taking way the Curſe in the following Verſes; the thing I cite it for is this, to obſerve that this Expreſſion, In thee ſhall all Nations be bleſſed, ſerves wholly to ake off all from a Man's ſelf, when you come to the Buſineſs of Juſtification; In thee, (ſaith he) that is, in Chriſt, in that ſeed they ſhall be bleſſed, for ſo the Apoſtle explains it, ver. 16. Not ſeeds, (ſaith he) but ſeed, namely, Chriſt. It is ot therefore being bleſſed in believing, or bleſſed by Faith, or thorough Faith, s it is an Act, but it is through Faith as laying hold upon Chriſt; it is in Chriſt, in in Chriſt, and in in only him. Now mark how this Truth ſuiteth others; if we are juſtified thus, by Jeſus Chriſt as the Object of our Faith, and by God as he is the Object of our Faith, (becauſe he is the Juſtifier, and Chriſt's Righteouſneſs is the matter whereby we are juſtified, and in that reſpect we are ſaid to be juſtified by Faith, becauſe Faith lays hold upon theſe Objects) then aſſuredly it is only Faith as pitch'd upon theſe Objects, by which, and upon which we are juſtified: This neceſſarily and clearly follows, if (I ſay) by God as juſtifying us, (out of our ſelves) and by his Grace, and by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, (which is out of our ſelves in him) and by Faith, not as a Quality or Act, but only as apprehending theſe; if in this ſence we are only ſaid to be juſtified by Faith, then it is evident that Faith by apprehending theſe, and by no other act, is ſaid to juſtifie us.

Therefore, do but ſee the Myſtery of other Opinions; What is the Reaſon that the Papiſts ſay, that Faith alone in Chriſt doth not juſtifie? This is the true Myſtery of it, they do not hold that the Grace of God is the Juſtifier of us, nor the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt the matter of our Juſtification, therefore Faith doth not juſtifie in reſpect of its Object with them, but it juſtifieth us only as a righteous Quality in us, and a righteous Act performed by us; and therefore with them the Belief of any Truth, whatſoever it be, juſtifies as well as the believing on Chriſt, or on God that juſtifies the ungodly; and therefore they ſay, Faith juſtifies as a Diſpoſition; that is, as any other Grace or Diſpoſition in us, and not per modum apprehenſionis, as laying hold on Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs; and their πρῶτον ψεῦδος conſiſts in this, that they aſſert Faith to be only an Aſſent, (and ſo it may be pitch'd on any other Truth as well as Chriſt dying) and not a Fiducial Apprehenſion of Chriſt; this agrees with their Principles, and the other agrees with ours.

And what is the Reaſon, that others who hold that Faith juſtifies as an Act, lean to this, and ſay, that General Faith is that which juſtifies? Becauſe if it juſtifie us meerly but as an Act, pitch it upon any other Object as well as this it will be to us for Righteouſneſs, and indeed it may as well.

But we are juſtified by Chriſt, and through Faith, even as you would ſay an Houſe is enlightned by the Sun, and enlightned by opening the Window, it comes all to one, for the Houſe is enlightned by opening of the Window, becauſe opening of the Window lets in the Sun that enlightneth it; ſo it is here, for therefore Faith is ſaid to juſtifie, becauſe it lays hold upon, and lets in Chriſt, and God as juſtifying, into the Heart of a Sinner.

3. Again, in the third Place, If a Man were juſtified upon any other Act of believing of any Divine Truth, though believed never ſo ſpiritually and truly, and not on this ſpecial Act of believing on Chriſt, and on God as juſtifying, he were plainly and clearly juſtified by ſanctification: As for Inſtance, if I believe that God is holy, (this I call part of a General Faith) and believe it ſpiritually and rightly, it makes me holy as he is holy, in my Affections. Here now the Belief of God's Holineſs, if it be a true Belief, with the whole Heart, ſerveth only to frame the Heart to Holineſs anſwerably: Now then, if I ſhould be juſtified by believing that God is holy, I ſhould clearly be juſtified by being ſanctified. To give you another Inſtance, I believe that God is juſt, and therefore I fear him: Noah (the Text ſaith) moved with fear, prepared an Ark, Heb. 11. 7. He believed that God was juſt and true in his Threatnings, and ſo feared God; if Noah now had been juſtified by this Faith of his, he had clearly been juſtified by Faith ſanctifying, or if you will, by ſanctification; for what is Holineſs and Sanctification but a right knowledge of God in the Mind, with ſuitable affections framed in the Heart accordingly. If therefore a Man were juſtified by any other Faith than by Faith throwing himſelf upon Chriſt for Juſtification, he ſhould be juſtified by Sanctification. So again, I believe that God is thus and thus excellent in himſelf, thus and thus happy and bleſſed, that he hath all theſe Perfections in him, here now is Faith in my Underſtanding; therefore I love God, here now is the Work of that Faith upon my Heart, anſwerable to the Faith I have of him in my Underſtanding: If now I were juſtified by that Faith which knows God to be thus excellent, I ſhould be juſtified by ſanctifying Faith, by Faith as it is Sanctification; or if you will, by Sanctification it ſelf: For, I ſay, Sanctification is nothing elſe but Faith in the Mind, having ſuitable Affections thereunto in the whole Heart. Therefore, though Juſtifying Faith ſanctifies moſt of all Faith elſe, and all other Faith, though never ſo ſpiritual, would not ſanctifie without it, becauſe it alone lets Chriſt and God into the Heart, that doth ſanctifie me, and juſtifie me too, yet ſtill, I ſay, Faith no way doth juſtifie but as it lays hold upon God as juſtifying, and Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe Righteouſneſs is Juſtification to us. Add to this to confirm it, that in Adam Acts of Truſt in God were required, as well as Acts of Love, (which whether they had a ſupernatural Revelation for their riſe or no is not material to this Point) but yet Adam's Faith had not Juſtification by Grace, and by Imputation for its Object: He indeed was juſtified by ſuch Acts of Faith (as being acts of the Image of God in him) as well as by acts of Love, and e contra, (as the Papiſts ſpeak;) but to have ſuch an act ſingled out, in reſpect and relation to ſuch an Object, this is proper and peculiar to, and is the very pith and marrow of the Covenant of Grace, namely, Grace juſtifying us by Imputation, and this was the way to make it a diſtinct Covenant from that of Adam's; whereas, if by General Faith on other Objects, or upon any other Grounds or Promiſes, we were juſtified, it would have been the ſame way, and the ſame Faith for Act and Object that Adam was juſtified by.

I ſhould add one Reaſon more, and that is this, It agrees with the Nature of Faith, which is a truſting; but I will not enlarge further upon this, but only give you a Uſe or two.

USE 1. By this you may have a very great Light to diſtinguiſh things: It is an excellent thing to conſider the ſeveral ways of Converſion, as Popiſh Spirits do lay it forth, and as the Divines who are of the Reformed Churches, pposite to them, do lay it out. Read a Popiſh Divine, and ſee how he will eſcribe Converſion, and the Work of God in ſaving a Man ; he will tell you, hat he ſaw his ſinfulneſs, that he was contrite under it, humbled under the ight of it, that he feareth God, hateth ſin, upon the ſight of the evil of it, nd begins to have good purpoſes. There are ſeven Diſpoſitions the Papiſts ave, (the very Council of Trent hath them) which they make Converſion to conſt in ; and then what do they ſay when a Man hath all theſe Diſpoſitions in him ? Thorough their general Faith, believing the Threatnings of God, believing the Goodneſs of God, and the Evil of Sin, &c. then a Man hath Holineſs infuſed nto him by the Sacrament, when he goes to it, being thus prepared by his own Diſpoſitions, and ſo here is the Man converted ; thus they tell the Story of it, ut they leave clearly out Special Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, and upon God for Juification, and upon his Free-grace, and ſo all their Juſtification is meerly by hat is wrought in themſelves. And, my Brethren, here is much of the ordiary Converſion of Proteſtants deſcrib'd in this : Many Men that profeſs the Lord eſus Chriſt, if you go down into their Hearts, you ſhall find no treating with od in the way of his Free grace, or with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as the matr of their Righteouſneſs, to be juſtified through his Blood, and to apprehend through Special Faith.

U S E 2. It doth teach us what we ſhould eſpecially live by, by what ith, and upon what Object we ſhould eſpecially live: We ſhould live upon at Faith which is exerciſed upon the Free Grace of God, which is ordained be the Special Object of our Faith, and upon the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and upon his Righteouſneſs ; every Man, you know, hath three Lives in him ; he hath e Life of Reaſon, which the reaſonable Soul liveth ; and he hath the Life of nſe, which is the Life that a Beaſt liveth ; and he hath the Life of a Plant, I may make compariſon, as the Life of Reaſon is the Eminent Life of a Man, hich a Man as a Man leadeth ; and if you exhort a Man to live as a Man, u would exhort him to live the Life of Reaſon in a more Eminent Manner, ough he exerciſe other acts of Life too. So it is here, the Eminent Act of ith is to live upon the Free Grace of God in Chriſt, to live upon the Righteſneſs of God revealed in the Goſpel, revealed from Faith to Faith, for by ith the juſt do live, Rom. 1. 17. Now though to live upon all other Truths e, and to act them, and digeſt them, is alſo a living by Faith ; ſo the Apoſtle eaks in Heb. 10. 39. Yet notwithſtanding comparatively, this Life is but as if Man ſhould ceaſe to live the Life of Reaſon, which is proper to a Man as a an, and live only the Life which is common to other Creatures. The Life a Chriſtian lieth eſpecially in living by Faith on Chriſt ; By the Faith which on him, as the Scripture calls it ; that is, the nobleneſs of his Spirit as he is a hriſtian ; and if there were no more Ends of it but only this, that it is the oſt precious Life, it ſhould draw up your Hearts to live this Life of Special ith : In 2 Pet. 1. 1. ſaith the Apoſtle, To them that have obtained like precious ith with us, in the Righteouſneſs of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. What is the Rean that the Faith of all Believers is called alike precious ? Becauſe it is pitch'd on the Righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt, which Righteouſneſs being poſſeſſed by weak Believer, and made his own by believing, he hath the ſame precious ith the Apoſtles had, the preciouſneſs of it lying in this Object. Hence, I y, all Faith is alike precious ; but if you come to other Faith, whereby you beve other Truths, here indeed it is not alike precious Faith. He that hath the ongeſt Faith on the Power of God, ſimply ſo conſidered, he hath a more ecious Faith than he that hath a weaker Faith in that Power : I alledge it this, that the preciouſneſs of Juſtifying Faith lies as it is exerciſed upon this ecious Object, Chriſt ; and therefore if you would live that Life of Faith which moſt precious, moſt ſo in God's Eſteem, moſt Excellent in it ſelf, live upon is Chriſt.

U S E 3. I might enlarge upon that by way of Uſe which I hinted before, mely this, that you cannot believe heartily and ſtrongly on any thing elſe, t as your Faith on this Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs receiveth increaſe. You nnot believe on God for Temporal Things, no, not for Spiritual Things, not for Sanctification, and making of you holy, further than your Faith receiveth Increaſes, and attaineth to more degrees in this thing, that it is more and more exerciſed upon Jeſus Chriſt, and upon God as juſtifying. But you will ſay, alas, I believed that long ago, I am already aſſured that God doth juſtifie me, and ſhall I now go and live upon that Faith, as the great Faith by which I muſt eſpecially live? Yes certainly, for Abraham did ſo; you have that great place in Rom. 4. 3. for an inſtance of it, Abaham (ſaith he) believed God, and it was counted to him for Righteouſneſs: The Words are taken out of Gen. 15. 6. Abraham had been aſſured of his Juſtification long before; in Gen. 12. 1, 2, &c. you ſhall ſee there God had bleſſed him, and he upon the Faith of it had left his Countrey, and God had aſſured him of his Juſtification, given him as much aſſurance of it (for he ſpake to him perſonally face to face) as Chriſt did to the Man, to whom he ſaid, Thy ſins are forgiven thee; and yet Abraham he hath the Promiſe often renewed to him, and his Faith often renewed in it; and that place which the Apoſtle citeth to prove that he was juſtified by Faith, was not the firſt act of Faith he put forth, but a Faith he had many years afore, and this is the Faith Abraham lived upon: When he had Canaan promiſed him, he had recourſe to that God that juſtifieth, and then laid hold upon the Promiſe of Canaan: When Iſaac was promiſed, he had recourſe to that Promiſe in which it was ſaid, In thy ſeed ſhall all the Nations of the Earth be bleſſed, Gen. 12. 3. Still he renewed his Faith upon the Special Mercy of God, and upon Jeſus Chriſt; and he did this again and again, and it was his Element, his Orb, his Sphere in which he mov'd; and when any Temporal Promiſe was propounded to him, he renewed his Faith on this, and ſo believed that Temporal Promiſe. This ſhould be that Life of Faith which we ſhould live, for our juſtification by God and by Chriſt; it is the eminent thing of the Goſpel, which of all other God will have glorified, and therefore would have us live upon it.

USE 4. And we may learn likewiſe from hence, how to ſeek and obtain all other things: Firſt ſeek the Kingdom of God, ſaith Chriſt. What doth the Kingdom of God conſiſt in? In righteouſneſs, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt, ſaith the Apoſtle Rom. 14. 17. that is, the Righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt, whence peace ariſeth, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt; ſeek after this, ſaith he, exerciſe Faith upon this, and then all other Promiſes will come in upon you. Paul though he had his Belief for Juſtification in Chriſt many years before, Yet, ſaith he, I account all things but loſs and dung: He inured himſelf to caſt away his own Righteouſneſs, and to wrap himſelf in Chriſt, he would ſtill exerciſe a Special Faith; I have (ſaith he in Phil. 3. 8, 9.) accounted all things loſs, and do account them ſo, that I may win Chriſt, and be found in him, not having mine own righteouſneſs, but the righteouſneſs which is of God by Faith: So that (I ſay) he ſtill renewed a ſpecial Faith upon Chriſt, and upon the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt. If a Man would have any other Promiſe made good to him, this is the way to have it. You ſee how Chriſt taught Martha to do it, to believe on him that ſhe ſhould not dye, and then ſhe would eaſily believe that her Brother ſhould be raiſed from the dead. It is Special Faith, and therefore we ſhould in a Special Manner exerciſe it. So much for this Subject, which I have with as much Brevity and Clearneſs as I could, opened; conſider it now, as a Truth of very great Moment, and which confuteth many Errours that run abroad in the World, not only in the Hearts of Popiſh Divines, but Proteſtants alſo.

CHAP. V.

The Acts of Faith in the Will. The Believing Soul truſts in Chriſt alone for Help. That this Confiding in Chriſt is the Act of Faith which juſtifies. The Nature and Properties of a True Confidence in Chriſt.

HAving diſplayed to you the Knowledge of Faith, as it is expreſt to us by Sight in the Underſtanding, and having proved that a bare Aſſent to, or a meer Belief of the Truths apprehended by us, is not ſaving nd juſtifying Faith, but that a Special Act of Faith on the Mercies and Free-Grace of God, and on Chriſt as a Saviour, is neceſſary, I will proceed on to hoſe other Acts of Faith which are in the Will, (which is the next Faculty) nd which the Heart puts forth toward Jeſus Chriſt therein.

1. As the Soul ſees the Spiritual Excellency, and the Glory that is in Jeſus Chriſt, ſo the Will doth ſet the higheſt Value and Eſteem upon that Excel-ency that is in him, a Value and Eſteem far above what a Man hath for all other hings whatſoever; and this is to believe: This you ſhall find in 1 Pet. 2. 4, , & 7th. verſes compared, To whom coming as unto a living ſtone, diſallowed indeed f Men, but choſen of God and precious: Wherefore it is contained in the Scripture, ehold I lay in Sion a chief Corner-ſtone, elect and precious, and he that believeth on him hall not be confounded; unto you therefore which believe, he is precious. It is clear that he Apoſtle here ſpeaks of Faith, and he makes the Foundation of our believing on im to be ſeeing his preciouſneſs, and therefore in Iſa. 28. 16. which the Apoſtle ere quoteth, you have this Stone's being a precious Stone, and believing on him, oth joined together; To him coming (ſaith he ver. 4.) as to a living ſtone, choſen of od and precious: That is, you believe on him under that Notion of ſeeing his xcellency, and his Preciouſneſs, and therefore the Cloſure of all in the 7th. verſe is, nto you which believe, he is precious; that is, you eſteem him precious; and it is oken not as a conſequent of Faith, but as that which goes before Faith, or is joined ith it, and is requiſite to it, for therefore the Soul comes unto him, becauſe e is precious, as the 4th. verſe hath it, even under that Notion. There are ur Things under the Apprehesion of which a Man comes to Chriſt, as theſe Words hold him forth. 1. As he is a Stone that hath a Foundation which he Soul may build upon. 2. As he is a living Stone, and a Fountain of Life nto all that believe on him. 3. As he is the only appointed means by the ather; Choſen of God. 4. As he is precions, which is the thing I cite it for, oth precious in himſelf and in all that he brings with him. In Mat. 13. 45, 6. you have a Believer compared to a Merchant-man ſeeking goodly Pearls, is Mind is ſet (as all Mens Minds are) to find precious Stones, that is, to ttain to that which he accounteth precious. Thus when the Soul is firſt umbled for ſin, it is taken off from ſeeing any thing in the World that can help , and therefore it ſeeks after ſomewhat elſe: And what will it ſeek it after? fter that which is precious, after Pearls, after Graces, (for ſuch our Graces e, which our Souls are ſaid to ſeek after) that will beautifie him, and make im acceptable unto God, theſe indeed are Pearls, and goodly Pearls. Yea, ut ſaith the Text, He found one Pearl of great price, ſo ver. 46. a Pearl that as more excellent than all, and he went and ſold all that he had, ſold away all is Graces, (for that is the meaning) he accounted all, even Grace it ſelf, to be oſs and dung; he put no value or price upon theſe Pearls; but if his Graces ay ſerve to honour this one Pearl, and that this may be ſet ſo in them all, at they all may be obſcured, he cares not, ſo precious is Chriſt unto him. o you have it likewiſe in Paul, in Phil. 3. 8. I have accounted all things loſs for be excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt; yea, (ſaith he) and I do account them dung: have done ſo heretofore, when I was firſt turned to God, and I am of the very me Mind to this day, I do account them ſo to this very hour. This is the rſt thing in believing on Chriſt, which is an Act of the Will: He that believeth n him, unto him Chriſt is precious.

2. He that believeth on Chriſt, God ſtampeth upon that Man's Will, upon

Part II. his Heart, an Inſtinct after Jeſus Chriſt, and after Myſtical Union with him, ſo as he can never be quiet without him: This you have in Joh. 6. 44, 45. No man can come unto me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him: It is written in the Prophets, that they ſhall be all taught of God; every Man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me; that is, believeth on me: Now what is the teaching, the effectual teaching that the Father exerts upon the Spirit of a Man, when he draws him to Chriſt Jeſus, and ſets him on work upon coming to him, and ſeeking of him? Why it is this, God doth plant in that Man an Impreſſion, an Inſtinct (what ſhall I call it) after Jeſus Chriſt, ſo that nothing will ſatisfie him but Chriſt. That which is here called Teaching, is elſewhere put for a Natural Inſtinct, ſuch an inſtinct as a Man hath after a thing which he can never be quiet without, ſuch as Parents have to their Children: This Teaching that the Holy Ghoſt (I will not ſay only aims at, but) eminently aims at here, I interpret by that in 1 Theſ. 4. 9. As touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you: It is not a Teaching from Words to love one another, for (ſaith he) ye your ſelves are taught of God to love one another; it is an Impreſſion ſtamped upon one Saint to love another Saint, there is as it were a Natural Inſtinct upon their Spirits to do ſo: So ſaith Chriſt, All that come to me, they are taught of God, i. e. their coming to Chriſt is from another thing than meerly a Teaching of them by way of Knowledge, it is putting an impreſſion and ſtamp upon their Will, that they can never be quiet till they come to Chriſt, and this is called a Drawing of the Father. It is ſuch an Inſtinct as God put into the Beaſts that came to the Ark, for what guided theſe poor Creatures to the Ark, that they ſhould come running by couples thither? Why, the Lord made an Impreſſion upon their Fancies, and upon that which is anſwerable to our Affections, that they were never quiet till they came thither, and thither the poor Creatures muſt come for refuge. Such an Inſtinct doth God put upon the Heart of a Believer, a Marriage Affection, call it what you will, an Inſtinct of Myſtical Union with Chriſt. The Angels they know Chriſt, and they ſee his Excellency, and they value him, but they have not this Marriage Affection to him that the Soul of a Believer hath; they have an Affection of Love, and of Fear of him as a Lord, but they have not that affection to him as to a Husband: Such an Inſtinct as this doth the Holy Ghoſt put into the Heart of all thoſe whom he doth work upon: We ſee it in other Creatures: That I may expreſs it by way of Similitude, Take a Dog when he is ſick, there is a Graſs he runs to, and he doth it by an Inſtinct, this is that which muſt cure me, ſaith he, not that he doth of himſelf make ſuch Inference, but there is an Impreſſion ſtamped upon the Nature of that Creature by God, whereby he is taught of God to do ſo: And ſo the Hart, (as ſome ſay) when it is ſtruck, it preſently runs to the Herb called Dictamnus, and is never quiet till it do ſo; it is taught of God to do it: So is a Man taught of God to go to Jeſus Chriſt. Certainly it is the main Meaning, (I will not exclude others) and the moſt eminent of that place, That he that believeth on Jeſus Chriſt, he is thus taught of God. The Angels they are taken with the Glory of Chriſt, and are affected with it, but a Believer hath an Affection after Myſtical Union with him.

3. The Soul that hath thus an Inſtinct after Chriſt, and ſo cometh to him, looks up to him for Help with a Confinement to him alone, I will have it from you, ſaith the Soul, or from none elſe: This you have in Iſa. 45. 21, 22. There is no God elſe beſides me, a just God and a Saviour; look unto me, and be ye ſaved all the ends of the Earth, for I am God, and there is none elſe: Who is this God here? What Perſon? It is clearly the Son of God, our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; for if you look into Rom. 14. 11. and Phil. 2. 10. you ſhall find there this place quoted, to prove that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord both of quick and dead, and that he ſhall come to Judgment: And it is evident too to be Jeſus Chriſt by this, becauſe he ſpeaks of all the Ends of the Earth looking unto him; for when Chriſt came, he brought Salvation, and the Goſpel to be preached to all the Ends of the Earth. The Jews they looked upon God the Father, but when Chriſt came he drew the eyes of all the Ends of the Earth unto him; Now, ſaith he, Look unto me. What is Faith? Faith is a caſting up of the Eye unto Jeſus Chriſt for Help, as they did upon the Brazen Serpent; they ſaw other things beſides, but with another Eye, when as they looked upon that as the only remedy: So when the Soul hath ſeen Chriſt, ſeen his Excellency, and hath an Inſtinct after him, and doth but open his Eye, nay, his Eye-lids, towards Chriſt, the meaning of that Look is, I will have help from you, and only from you, and here is a Glance or Caſt of Faith. And as it is a looking unto Chriſt, ſo it is a looking with a Confinement to him alone; this is clear out of the Text, I am a Saviour, (ſaith he) and there is none beſides me; therefore ſo look unto me as to confine your ſelves to me alone. The Soul of Man would ſeek an hundred ways, when it is humbled for ſin, to relieve it ſelf; but now to have all theſe Holes that a Man would run unto ſtopped, and to be confined alone unto one, when God hath wrought this in the Heart too; there is a great ſtep and proceeding on in the Work of Faith. As in taking of God to be a Man's God, he takes him ſo to be his chiefeſt good as he is divorced from all things elſe, with a Confinement of all his Expectations of Happineſs only from him; Whom have I in Heaven but thee, (ſaith David) Pſal. 73.25. So in taking Jeſus Chriſt to be our Saviour, as Paul reſolved to know nothing elſe but Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified, ſo the Heart reſolveth too, when it goes about to believe in earneſt, and it is ſtopt up from all ways of Relief elſe. When Paul (that I may make the Compariſon) was ſurrounded with his Luſts, in Rom. 7.24. (ſaith he) O wretched Man that I am! who ſhall deliver me? When he ſpake that Speech, he was as a Man that looked round about him, and ſaw no help, and ſo he cryes out, Who ſhall deliver me? at laſt he ſpies out Jeſus Chriſt, I thank God thorough Jeſus Chriſt my Lord, (ſaith he.) And ſo doth the Soul, as in Sanctification, ſo in Juſtification, it looks about it, ſees help in nothing, and betakes it ſelf alone unto the Lord Jeſus.

Jeſus Chriſt he is more, far more jealous of your Faith than of your Love, he will give you leave to love ſubordinately other things beſides himſelf, and with himſelf, but he will not give you leave to believe on any, to look for help from any but from him; this Faith is reſerv'd for him alone. The Eye of a Man that believeth is ſhut up to all things either in his own Heart, or whatſoever elſe there is that may help him, and his Eyes are only upon Chriſt, as the Phraſe is in 2 Chron. 20.12. When a Man comes to be ſaved by Chriſt, he doth Chriſt this Honour, that he reſolves to have Peace and Quietneſs, and Satisfaction, and Salvation, and all only in, and from, and by Chriſt: As a Man when he would honour a Phyſitian whom he truſteth, (ſaith he) I will take Phyſick of none elſe but of you, I will dye rather; ſo ſaith the Soul to honour Chriſt, You alone ſhall ſave me; Aſhur ſhall not ſave us, as it is Hoſ. 14.3. And truly in vain is Salvation hoped for from the Hills, and from the multitude of Mountains, Jer. 3.23. They uſed to worſhip upon their Mountains, therefore now to look to the Mountains for help was to look to their Duties, to their Worſhip, to their Sacrifices for help: But now they renounced all this, and fixed on God alone, In whom the fatherleſs find Mercy. The Soul when it is helpleſs, when it is graceleſs, when it is fatherleſs, then it reſolves to look to none elſe but unto Jeſus Chriſt for help. This, I ſay, is a great proceeding in Faith alſo, to reſolve thus to have help from none elſe, and to confine it ſelf only to Chriſt, for the Soul to ſay, I will ſo throw my ſelf upon him, and upon that Free Love in him, that if he will not ſave me, I will be loſt for ever: Thus the Heart of a Believer doth look to him as the only Saviour, and as ſuch an one that There is none elſe beſides him. And this is the third Act of the Will.

4. As a Man thus looks to Jeſus Chriſt for help, and confines himſelf unto him alone, ſo he then comes to him; this you have here in this Joh. 6. ver. 37. All that the Father giveth unto me ſhall come to me, and him that cometh to me I will in no wiſe caſt out: The Soul goes out of it ſelf Naked, a Naked Soul, to Naked Chriſt, empty and ſtript of all things, and comes unto Chriſt, and deals and treats with him about everlaſting Salvation. You have Faith alſo expreſt under this Notion in Heb. 7.25. He is able to ſave to the uttermoſt them that come unto God by him: And the like is in 1 Pet. 2.3. Unto whom coming as unto a living ſtone. The Holy Ghoſt hath on purpoſe in a gracious manner variouſly expreſt Faith to us, becauſe the Apprehenſions that Souls have of their own way of believing is various. Some Souls cannot ſay they have received

Part II. Chriſt, but they can ſay they have looked up to him, and confined all their Expectations to him, and they have come to him, &c. Now when the Soul comes to Chriſt, what is the Buſineſs and Errand that the Soul hath? for one comes to none but he hath ſome Buſineſs, ſome Errand with him: See how Chriſt himſelf expreſſeth the Errand and Aim of the Soul in coming to him, Joh. 5. 40. Ye will not come to me that ye might have life: This is the Errand of the Soul, it comes to Chriſt that it may have Life from him. He doth not only expreſs there what is the Conſequent of the Souls coming to him, (namely, that it might have Life, as the Conſequent of its coming, as that which he will beſtow) but that which is the Aim, the Errand and Buſineſs that Faith hath with Jeſus Chriſt, therefore Heb. 6. 18. we are ſaid to have fled unto him, fled to him as unto a City of Refuge: Now what was the Aim, and Buſineſs, and Errand that a poor Murtherer had, that fled to the City of Refuge? He came thither with all might and main to be let in there, that he might have Succour and Help, and that he might be ſafe; and when the High-Prieſt dyed, he was delivered; ſo the Soul comes unto Chriſt for Refuge, comes unto him that he may have Life. We have it to the ſame purpoſe expreſs'd, Gal. 2. 16. ſpeaking there of the Faith of all the Apoſtles, (ſaith he) Even we who are Jews by nature, and not ſinners of the Gentiles, we Apoſtles knowing that a Man is not juſtified by the Works of the Law, but by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt; even we (ſaith he) have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the Faith of Chriſt: How doth he expreſs Faith? He expreſſeth it by this, a coming unto, or a believing in Jeſus Chriſt, that we may be juſtified, that we might have Life; this being the Aim, and Errand, and Buſineſs the Soul hath with Chriſt in its coming to him: Here now lies that act of Faith (if it be a ſpiritual act, if it be joyn'd with that ſpiritual ſight I mention'd before) it is not that we believe that Jeſus Chriſt did juſtifie us, and had juſtified us, but we believe that he may juſtifie us. When the Apoſtles firſt believed, this was not the Act of Faith they put forth, that they were juſtified, But we have believed, (ſaith he) that we might be juſtified: So that the Aim, and Errand the Soul hath with Chriſt in coming to him, is that it might have Life, and accordingly it comes unto him.

5. The Souls coming unto Jeſus Chriſt, and treating for Salvation with him, doth grow up to a believing on him, to a reſting on him, to a truſting in him for it: I ſhall not need to give you many Scriptures to prove that this Act of Truſt is the great and eminent Act that is in Faith, and that upon which God doth rather pronounce and paſs the Sentence of Juſtification upon a Man than any other; the Text hath it here, and you ſhall find it almoſt every where, that it is called Believing on him. Some would place that great Act of Faith whereby we are juſtified, in believing the thing, in believing him to be the Son of God, and a Saviour. I confeſs it is a great Act of Faith, but that is only the Act of the Underſtanding, whereby we ſee and know him, (which I have opened before) but the eminent and the principal Act of the Will of a Man (and he muſt believe with his whole Heart) is Truſt, is Believing on him, 1 Pet. 2. 6. Behold I lay in Sion a chief corner ſtone, he that believeth on him ſhall not be aſhamed: And you have the like again in Rom. 9. 33. You ſhall hardly have a place which uſually Men alledge to prove that all the Act of Faith as juſtifying lyes in believing the thing, but immediately after follows this Phraſe, Believing on him; on purpoſe to ſhew, that the bare belief of the thing is not the only Act of Faith, as ſome would have it to be: As for inſtance, in 1 John. 5. 4. this is made the great Act of Faith there, This is the victory that overcometh the World, even our Faith: And what is the Faith? He that believeth that Jeſus is the Son of God. One would think now that the Apoſtle would make all believing to lye in believing the thing, in believing that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God, and accordingly is this place cited by ſome; but mark what he ſaith at the 10th. verſe, He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witneſs in himſelf; there is believing on him too mention'd. Another place that is cited is in Rom. 10. 9. If thou believe in thy Heart that God hath raiſed him from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved: Here now the Faith that ſaveth us is called believing the thing, namely, That God hath raiſed Chriſt from the dead; but if you read a little on, you ſhall find that Believing on him cometh in the 11th. verſe, The Scripture ſaith, whoſoever believeth on him ſhall not be aſhamed: So that indeed the Eminent Act of Faith in the Will is this truſting, is this believing on him: It is called rolling of a Man's ſelf upon him, leaving, committing, or betaking a Man's ſelf to him, as Pſal. 10. 14. It is the Old Teſtament Expreſſion, but it rightly expreſſeth the Nature of Faith.

There have been ſome that would make the Act of Faith in the Will to be a cleaving unto Chriſt for his Excellencies. The Truth is, that is nothing but Love, it is not Faith; but that Act of the Will which is properly Faith, anſwers unto Chriſt as a Saviour, and as a Means of Salvation appointed by God. Now go take Jeſus Chriſt as a Saviour, and as a Means of Salvation appointed by God, it is not Love anſwereth to that in Chriſt, but it is a truſt and believing on him: It is not a cleaving unto Jeſus Chriſt for his Excellencies, that is that proper Act of Faith which we call juſtifying, but it is that Act of the Will which hath relation unto him as a Saviour, and as the Means of Salvation; and the proper act that anſwereth to that is Truſt and Confidence. Aſſuredly, God hath ſingled out that to be the eminent act of Juſtifying Faith, which is proper to the elect of Mankind, in whom he works Faith in; now to cleave unto Jeſus Chriſt for the Excellencies that are in him, to ſee him ſpiritually, and to love Chriſt upon the ſight of him, and to value him, and to prize and eſteem him, (all theſe that I have named before) are all in the good Angels, that yet have not Faith; they believe that Jeſus Chriſt is, for they ſee him every day, and they ſee the Grace that is in him more than we do, and are taken with it more than we are, they likewiſe hear us preach, and attend our Sermons, and pry into the things delivered, and they know all the Truths about Chriſt as well as we: If God therefore ſhould have made theſe to be thoſe proper Acts of Faith, they would have been ſuch acts as are common to the good Angels, and therefore he hath ſingled out rather that to be the act of Faith juſtifying, which is proper and peculiar to the Elect Sons of God; and what is that? It is, Believing on him. The Angels they do not believe On him as a Saviour and Redeemer, they have not this act of Truſt and Confidence, they do not come unto him, or rely on him for Salvation, therefore, I ſay, God hath ſingled out this believing On him as the eminent act of Faith juſtifying; He that ſeeth the Son, and believeth on him, ſaith Chriſt, John 6. 40. and in John 14. 1. If you believe in God, believe alſo in me: And ſo in a multitude of places elſe. And there is a great deal of Reaſon that this act of Faith ſhould be pitch'd upon, to be the eminent act upon which God juſtifies us. For,

1. It is an Act that is competent to all Eſtates of a Chriſtian, while he is here below: When the Soul is in Temptation, when a Man comes to dye, when he firſt believes, let him be in what Condition he will, this act of truſting in God is that act which is common to all Believers, in all Eſtates. It is moſt reaſon and fit therefore, that this Act of Faith ſhould be pitch'd upon, as the Eminent Act in our Juſtification. If aſſurance that Jeſus Chriſt is mine had been to be it, though many of the Saints have it, yet they have it not always; when they firſt began to believe, even the Apoſtles themſelves came unto Chriſt, that they might be juſtified, and ſo it was not believing that they were juſtified: But now, let the Saints be in the heavieſt Deſertion that can be, let them be in never ſo much Darkneſs, in never ſo great Temptation, either when they firſt believe, or when they come to dye, or at any Time in all their Lives, ſtill whether they have aſſurance of the Love of God, or not aſſurance, yet (as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. 62. 8.) They truſt in God at all times; and the Soul ſtill comes to Chriſt, and relies on him: Therefore, I ſay, there was the greateſt reaſon in the World, that of all acts elſe this ſhould be pitch'd upon. The firſt act of Faith cannot be aſſurance, for the thing muſt be made mine, before I can believe it is mine; and afterward Temptation comes, and overthrows a Man's aſſurance, but it never overthrows a Man's believing on Chriſt; ſince this is that Anchor that tides it out all a Man's Life, that Cable that bears the ſtreſs in all Storms, as well as in the fair weather, it is reaſon that to it the act of Juſtification ſhould be attributed: Now let the Ship be in what ſtorm it will, it is this that holds it, this is the Cable, this act of our believ-

Part II. believing On him. You ſhall find, that you can bottom your Heart on God, and on Chriſt, when you cannot believe that he is your God, and your Saviour.

2. Of all Acts of Faith, this of pure truſt doth honour God moſt, and hath indeed more of Faith in it: The purer the Truſt is, the greater the Truſt is; and the greater the Truſt is, the greater the Faith is; and the greater the Faith, the greater Honour comes unto God. The End why God hath ordained Faith, is, that his Free Grace might be glorified; now his Free-grace is glorified by no act of Faith more than by this of pure truſting in him. In Rom. 4. 20. where Abraham's Faith is ſet out to us, it is ſet out by this, That he gave glory to God. You do not honour God ſo much with your Love, you do not honour him ſo much by being aſſured of his Love, as you do by truſting in his Love. It magnifies the Soveraignty of God, which God aims at to magnifie in our Salvation, it leaves the Soul at God's Feet, for that is the poſture of the Soul, when it ſays, Here I am, and I will truſt in thee alone; it magnifies the Faithfulneſs and Fidelity of God, and Faithfulneſs is that Attribute, which in one that makes a Promiſe, is the chief thing he aims at: Now Faith takes hold of Chriſt through a Promiſe, therefore it is a Grace ſuited, and fitted to magnifie the Faithfulneſs of God in making this Promiſe; and ſo there is nothing that doth glorifie the Faithfnlneſs of God more than believing on him. If a Man have Aſſurance, he doth glorifie God in a way of Rejoycing, in a way of Triumphing, in a way of Thankfulneſs, but pure Truſt doth another way glorifie God, it glorifies God in a way of Obedience. I do ſhew as much admiration and eſteem of a Man, if I am ſueing to him for his Friendſhip, and depend upon him, and do all acts I do in ſuch dependance, as I do by acts of Requital and Thankfulneſs when I am aſſured he is my Friend: And ſo it is here, and therefore now hath God choſen out this act of Truſt and Condence, Believing on him, as John 6. 40. He that ſeeth the Son, and believeth on him. I ſhall now aſſign a Property or two of this Truſt and Confidence, that I may the more fully explain it. And,

1. This Confidenee in God is to truſt perfectly upon him, that is, wholly and entirely. I uſe the Scripture Phraſe, which you have in 1 Pet. 1. 13. and I ſhall thereby open a Scripture to you, which (as I take it) our Tranſlation hath not rightly rendered, and I find very Learned Interpreters of the ſame Judgment; he exhorts them there to truſt perfectly in the Grace that hath been brought to them, thorough the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt: We read it, Hope to the end; look in your Margents, the Greek is, Hope perfectly; Hope perfectly (ſaith he) on the Grace that is brought; for ſo it is in the Original, φερομένην, and not, that is to be brought, as we tranſlate it. Hope and Truſt in the Scripture are uſually put for one and the ſame, as Job 13. 15. Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him; it is, I will hope in him: And many other places might be given. Now, ſaith the Apoſtle Peter, Truſt perfectly, or entirely, on the Grace that is brought in the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt: It is not only ſaid to be the Revelation of Chriſt, which ſhall be at latter day, but it is a Revelation of Chriſt which we have now under the Goſpel. The Goſpel is ſaid to be the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, and in the revelation of the Goſpel, and of Chriſt, is the Grace of God made known to us. I ſhall not need to heap up places, to ſhew you, that by the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt is meant the Goſpel; in Rom. 16. 25. you have the word ſo uſed, The preaching of Jeſus Chriſt, according to the Revelation of the Myſtery, &c. You have the like in Gal. 1. 12. where Paul ſpeaking of his knowing of the Goſpel, he uſeth the very ſame Phraſe; I was taught it (ſaith he) by the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt; and ver. 16. It pleaſed God to reveal his Son in me; and ſo in other places. That which I cited the Text in 1 Pet. 1. 13. for, is, that he ſaith, Truſt perfectly upon this Grace, which is brought or tendered to us: (And to truſt upon Free-Grace, and Chriſt, is all one, the Goſpel reveals nothing for matter of Confidence to us, but the Free-Grace of God, and Chriſt himſelf.) Now when he ſaith, Truſt perfectly upon it, what is his meaning? it is this, he would have you to do it entirely, both for Subject and Object, as I may ſo expreſs it; he would have all in you to put this Truſt and Confidence in him, ato believe on him with the whole Heart, and he urgeth this Exhortation, becauſe the Soul hath a great deal within it ſelf, that doth not come forth to truſt in Chriſt: For though all in a Man believes in this ſenſe, that there is never a Faculty but goes out to Jeſus Chriſt, eſpecially the Will, yet there is a great deal of Infidelity ſtill remaining, and ſo a Man cannot truſt perfectly in this life; as for Subject, take the Subject of Confidence, that is, all that is in a Man doth not truſt perfectly and entirely without doubting, in the Grace brought by Jeſus Chriſt; but take the Object, and ſo even the meaneſt Believer may truſt, and doth truſt perfectly in that Grace which is brought to light in the Goſpel by Jeſus Chriſt; that is, he relies upon nothing elſe, he entirely, and wholly, and fully, and with the whole Will, doth lean upon our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, and upon nothing elſe; upon nothing in himſelf, and upon nothing in the World elſe, but upon that which revealeth Grace, and Jeſus Chriſt, unto him: No, he relies not upon the Promiſes, further than they have the Grace of God, and Jeſus Chriſt, as the Subject of them; and this is the Property of all true Faith, that it doth truſt perfectly in that Grace that is in God, and in our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. As now, when the Soul doth magnifie and glorifie God, as the great God, it doth do it perfectly and entirely in this ſenſe, that it ſees how great a God he is, and that there is none beſides him ſo to be honoured and glorified. It falls ſhort indeed of honouring him perfectly, as for the Subject, that is, all in a Man cannot do it; but yet, ſaith he, I ſee that in God that requires all that is in me to glorifie him, therefore I will glorifie him alone, and thus entirely glorifies the Object; and ſo in this ſenſe doth the Soul truſt perfectly in the Grace that is revealed in the Goſpel.

2. The Soul doth truſt Jeſus Chriſt with all, and for all: I will put them both together; with all it hath, or ever ſhall have, and for all it ever looks for: It doth truſt Jeſus Chriſt with all, even as in Gen. 39. 6. we read that Potiphar truſted Joſeph; (I bring it but for an alluſion, to ſhew what Confidence he had in Joſeph, and what ours ſhould be in Chriſt) the Text ſaith, That he left all that he had in Joſeph's hand, and he knew not ought he had, ſave the Bread which he did eat. Now if you come to believe on Chriſt, you muſt thus put your truſt in him, thus believe on him, thus leave your ſelves, and all you have and are, with him, and at his diſpoſal, and at his ſervice; even as if you ſhould put your ſelves of your Eſtate, and put it all into another Man's Hands, and be at his finding for ever: So Paul in 2 Tim. 1. 12. For the which cauſe (ſaith he) I ſuffer theſe things, neverthele ſs I am not aſhamed, for I know whom I have believed, that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him againſt that day. What did Paul do when he came to believe? ſaith he, I had a little Righteouſneſs, and I flung it all away, I reſolved that I would never truſt in it; I had Learning, and Knowledge, and Parts, and I threw it all away, I gave it all up to Chriſt, to be at his Diſpoſe; he took Jeſus Chriſt upon thoſe Terms, to give up all to him; and (ſaith he) for the which cauſe I ſuffer theſe things, I do truſt him before-hand, I have committed to him all I am and have, I have not my Reward yet, but I truſt him, and he goes upon truſt with me; he before-hand hath put me upon a great many ſufferings, and for this cauſe I ſuffer all theſe things, becauſe I know whom I have believed. If Chriſt now ſhould fail, Paul he had been the moſt beſool'd Man that ever was, he had miſt of all the Happineſs he ſhould have in this World; for uſually they that believe in Chriſt, they are of all Men moſt miſerable, in reſpect of the World; but mark it, Nevertheleſs, (ſaith he) I am not aſhamed, for I know whom I have truſted. When a Man believes, he puts off all to Chriſt, and betakes himſelf to him, and to what he ſhall do for him, and if Chriſt ſhould fail this Man of his Truſt, the poor Creature would be the verieſt fool that ever was: But I know I ſhall not be aſhamed, ſaith Paul; and in relation to this doth the Scripture often uſe this Word, He that believeth, ſhall not be aſhamed, Iſa. 28. 16. Oftentimes a Man truſteth God for the Salvation of his Soul, and goes on ſo to do, and doth not of a long while know that God hath received him; he hath not received an earneſt-penny a long while, not of what he truſteth God for; (for joy in the Holy Ghoſt is the reward of Faith;) now to ſtand thus out of purſe for many years, before a Man receives a penny, this is a great and a mighty truſt, yet thus often-times the Soul doth, to be ſure at firſt it doth ſo: A Man parts with all, leaves all with Jeſus Chriſt, betakes himſelf clearly and entirely to him, and whatſoever he is or can be in this World, he leaves it with him, and to be diſpoſed of according to the Directions that he ſhall give to his Spirit and Conſcience for evermore: I expreſt it before by that of Potiphar to Joſeph, but there is a more lively Expreſſion of it, and that in a way of Faith, though not upon Chriſt as juſtifying, yet it was drawn out of that Faith which alſo doth juſtifie; the Inſtance is in that poor Widdow of Zarephath, in 1 Kings 17. you know ſhe had but ſo much Meal in a Barrel, and Oyl in a Cruſe, as would make a Cake for her ſelf and her Child, and behold (ſaith ſhe, ver. 12.) I am gathering two ſticks, that I may go in and dreſs it for me and my Son, that we may eat it and dye: What ſaith Elijah to her? Fear not, go and do as thou haſt ſaid, but make me thereof a little cake firſt, and bring it unto me: Alas, it would make but a little Cake in all, for it was but a handful of Meal, and a little Oyl in a Cruſe, even little enough all of it to ſerve Elijah himſelf; yea, but, ſaith he, make me a Cake firſt; this Woman had need have a great deal of confidence in the Prophets Words, that there ſhould be Meal and Oyl multiplied for her and her Son, after Elijah had done; ſhe might have thought that the Prophet, as a Man half ſtarved, had come to put a trick upon her, to get away that little Proviſion ſhe had; let me be ſerved firſt, (ſaith he;) ſhe went and did according to the ſaying of Elijah, and made a Cake for him firſt, and then you ſee the Oyl and Meal encreas'd, but firſt God would have her truſt the Prophet. Even thus doth God and Jeſus Chriſt deal with us, when we come to believe on him, he will have us to truſt him firſt, and put over all to him, and for to do ſo is to truſt perfectly.

God himſelf did betruſt us all with Jeſus Chriſt, and he was faithful to us, and Jeſus Chriſt truſted all with God: How many millions of Souls were to ſave after Chriſt dyed! how many thouſands are to come yet under the New-Teſtament! Chriſt dyed afore theſe are ſaved, he truſted his Father with them, and God the Father truſted him too, for he ſaved I know not how many thouſand Souls afore Chriſt dyed: The like he requires of us, Make me the Cake firſt, (ſaith he;) and ſo the Soul doth put over all nakedly and entirely unto Jeſus Chriſt, when it comes to truſt upon him; it is to throw a Man's ſelf out of all poſſibilities of what he may be in this World. Indeed a Man muſt do ſo, if he take up Jeſus Chriſt in earneſt, for he knows not what Chriſt will call him unto, or what truth he will have him hold forth; now for the Soul to come nakedly thus, and to give it ſelf up to Jeſus Chriſt, and to do this before-hand oftentimes, when he doth not know whether Chriſt will ſave him or no; to do this firſt, as the poor Widdow did to the Prophet, this is a great matter. For a Man to venture to Sea, without either Sail, or Oar, or Maſt, or any thing of his own, and to be wafted by Free-grace, and Jeſus Chriſt, to commit himſelf to thoſe Winds that ſhall blow from him, and from that Promiſe he makes, this is the great truſt, and this the Soul doth when it comes to Chriſt.

And as it truſts him with all, ſo it truſts him for all; and all the Happineſs it looks for, is to be at Chriſts finding for evermore: Nay, to be ſo at his finding, that not only its Comfort ſhall be from him, but all its ſtrength to perform any duty ſhall be all from him, ſo as not to do a Duty without him, no not to Eternity, to receive all Happineſs from him, and all Comfort from him. Nature, pure Nature was never brought up to this, it did not know what it meant: Adam was not called in this way to truſt on God, he had a ſtock of Grace communicated to him, which lay in the uſe and exerciſe of his own Free-will: Now, ſaith Nature, therefore I will ſee a ſtock before I truſt, give me my portion of Goods, (as the Prodigal ſaid) I will ſee ſomething in my ſelf, by which I may be able to do this, or to do that, I will ſee the Money in my Purſe, before I ſet a work upon this or that; this naturally the Soul doth. But now when the Soul comes to truſt on Chriſt, it doth not ſo, it truſts him for all, for all Grace here, and Glory hereafter; it believes now upon him, and truſts him, and knows not whether it ſhall be able to do it the next hour; The Life which I now live, ſaith the Apoſtle, I live by the Faith of the Son of God; and it is not I that live, but Chriſt that liveth in me: Gal. 2. 20. And to do this quietly too, is an Act of entire Truſt; for hen Faith doth grow up a little, though it doth not grow up to aſſurance, t it will grow up to the quieting of the Heart thus, and that beforehand; d when a Man is able to ſay, whether I ſhall be ſaved by Chriſt I know not, t I find abundance of Eaſe and Quietneſs by reſting and truſting on him, this a perfect Confidence; thus Faith is expreſſed in Pſal. 37. 7. (Now as is a Truſt in Promiſes, ſo it is much more in Jeſus Chriſt) Reſt in the Lord, d wait patiently for him, and he that truſteth in me is at perfect peace: And as it in Lam. 3. 29. Put our mouths in the duſt if ſo be there may be hope. Yea, a reat act of this Truſt is to believe againſt hope, as it is ſaid that Abraham id in Rom. 4. 18. For the Soul to caſt away it ſelf upon God, in ſuch a pure uſt as this is, that let God at any time throw it into any Diſtreſs, ſo that he nows not what will become of himſelf, yet to be content, and to ſubmit to it, d quietly to leave himſelf with God, and with Chriſt, this though it is hard, t when Faith doth get a little Heart and Strength, it doth this, being enabled the Power of God to do it.

Sixthly, As the Soul thus comes to Chriſt, and believeth on him, truſteth him ith all, and for all, ſo it abides by him, and will not ſtir away from him, in eſpect of waiting on him in his own way, both for the Manifeſtation of his race, and Love, and Salvation, with Submiſſion and Quietneſs. I ſhall not y, that every Soul that believes, finds diſtinctly all and every one of theſe things him, I do not urge that, but I ſhall yet mention thoſe that are in the heart f Believers, ſome one or other of them: And as this is as main a thing as any ther, I ſhall open all the Particulars of it.

1. The Soul abides by Chriſt, and there lies as the Man did at the Pool of Betheſda, or as he did that did fly to the City of Refuge, who durſt not ſtir rom thence for his Life, for if he ſhould be found out of that City of Refuge, e was a dead Man, and therefore he went thither to take up his dwelling here, and this (as I ſaid before) the Apoſtle alludes to in Heb. 6. 18. when he peaks of Faith; Having (ſaith he) fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope ſet efore us; in Acts 11. 23. it is ſaid, that when Barnabas came to Antioch, and had ſeen the Grace of God, he exhorted them all, that with purpoſe of Heart they would ροσμένειν, cleave unto the Lord: That as they had come to him, and given up their Souls to him, ſo they would abide by him, remain and continue with him, and not go away; therefore you ſhall find in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, that the Apoſtle oppoſeth to Faith, departing from God: You have it firſt in Chap. 3. ver. 12. & 14. where he alludeth to the Iſraelites departing in their Hearts and Spirits from the Guidance of that Angel in the Wilderneſs, (which Angel was Chriſt, as he ſhews in 1 Cor. 10.) Take heed, (ſaith he ver. 12.) leſt there be in any of you an evil heart of Unbelief, in departing from the living God: Do not you err in your Hearts through Unbelief, as they did; that Angel from whom they departed, is the living God, is Jeſus Chriſt himſelf: And ſaith he, ver. 14. (in which Expreſſion of his there is very much) we are made partakers of Chriſt, if we hold the beginning of our Confidence ſtedfaſt unto the end: It is clear that he ſpeaks of Faith; the Word ὑπόστασις, which we tranſlate Confidence, is the ſame word that is uſed in Heb. 11. 1. Faith is the evidence, or the ſubſiſtance of things not ſeen: Now when he ſaith, We ſhould hold the beginning of our confidence ſtedfaſt unto the end, his meaning is, that as they came nakedly unto Chriſt for Salvation, from him, and in him alone, (for when a Man's Soul firſt cometh to Chriſt, it is certain he doth ſo, for he is emptied of himſelf) ſo they ſhould continue waiting upon him, that They may be made partakers of him; he mentions that, becauſe the thing the Soul aims at in believing, is to be made Partaker of Chriſt; ſeeing you did ſo at firſt, (ſaith he) did you at firſt come nakedly unto him? continue to do ſo ſtill, and to wait nakedly upon him; and he gives this reaſon why they ſhould do it, For (ſaith he) he is the Living God; if you wait upon Men, and wait long upon them, you think with your ſelves, they are but Men, whoſe Breath is in their Noſtrils, therefore I may looſe all my Labour, if I wait long before they anſwer me in what I deſire; but, ſaith the Apoſtle, wait upon Jeſus Chriſt, for he is the living God; if you ſhould wait never ſo long upon him, he liveth in the end to anſwer you; and this indeed in Heb. 10. 38. is called living by Faith, in which place alſo the Apoſtle oppoſeth unto Faith departing from God; If any man (ſaith he there) draw back, my ſoul ſhall have no pleaſure in him; but we are of them that believe to the ſaving of the Soul: Believing then you ſee is oppoſed to withdrawing from God.

2. I added likewiſe, that Believing is waiting on him, in his own way: Even as at the firſt we came nakedly unto Jeſus Chriſt, at the firſt looking to nothing in our ſelves, (for ſo we did, if we believed) and when the Soul hath begun thus to cloſe with Chriſt, and with him alone, it finds that Jeſus Chriſt long defers before he manifeſteth himſelf; and it is apt thereupon, if not to depart, yet to deſert from him, and to eaſe and help it ſelf ſome other way, than by waiting and believing on him: Now the Apoſtle would have us ſtill to exerciſe ſuch Acts of Faith as we did at the beginning; Hold the beginning of your confidence ſtedfaſt, (ſaith he) and ſtill continue to wait on him, and to cleave to him, and to believe on him. The Galathians, you know, were ſoon diverted (as the Apoſtle tells them, Chap. 1. ver. 6.) from the Goſpel they had received, unto another Goſpel; they had begun to believe in Chriſt, and in him alone, but afterwards they were diverted to Works, and to what was in themſelves, as the Soul is apt to do too much: You did run well, (ſaith he Chap. 5. ver. 7.) who did hinder you? This Perſwaſion (ſaith he ver. 8.) cometh not of him that calleth you. I deſire you (ſaith he) to conſider, when you were called, how you were drawn to believe on the Lord Jeſus; remember but the firſt work of Faith, how nakedly without Works, or any thing in your ſelves, you came unto Jeſus Chriſt; you are now diverted, and fallen away from the Grace of Chriſt, that is, from ſeeking Salvation in a way of Free-grace; do but now remember (as he ſaid in another caſe, Remember thy firſt Love) your firſt Faith: Certainly this your New Perſwaſion is not of him that called you: If this New way that you have taken up, which diverts you from Chriſt, had been the way, ſurely he that called you would have perſwaded you ſo at firſt, when he drew your hearts to him. The Apoſtle ſpeaks clearly of the point of waiting; for, ſaith he, ſpeaking of himſelf and other Believers that profeſt Faith in Chriſt, and kept it up in the Integrity of it, We through the Spirit wait for the hope of Righteouſneſs by Faith, Gal. 5. 5. you began to do ſo too, (ſaith he) but you would not wait as you began, but you would needs divert to eaſe your ſelves, to Works, and to ſomething in your ſelves: But, ſaith he, I have confidence in you thorough the Lord, that you did cloſe with Chriſt at firſt, you will be brought about again, for God will never let you reſt in your ſelves; ſo he ſaith, ver. 10. I have confidence in you thorough the Lord, that ye will be no otherwiſe minded in the end: So that now to continue to wait thus upon the Lord Jeſus, to wait though a Mans eyes fail, (for ſo David ſaith he waited, Pſal. 69. 3.) is a ſpecial act of Faith, it is a very great ſubjection of the Creature for to wait nakedly upon God, and not to know (as oftentimes it falls out with many Poor Souls) what God will do with them. The buſineſs of Salvation it is ſo great, and ſelf-love is ſuch a ſtrong Principle in a Man, that a Man had need have ſuch a Principle of Faith to quiet him in the mean time; for Self-love is impatient in matters of great moment, and would be put out of doubt preſently, and ſo the heart is apt to turn to it ſelf, and to Works; and it is apt alſo out of Peeviſhneſs to ſay, as he did out of Wickedneſs in 2 Kings 6. 33. What ſhould I wait for the Lord any longer? The Prophet Habbakkuk ſpeaking of Faith (for though he ſpeaks it in the caſe of the Babyloniſh Captivity, yet the Apoſtle citing that ſaying, applies it to the matter of Juſtification and Salvation, whereof the deliverance from the Babiloniſh Captivity was a Type) ſaith, Chap. 2. 3. The viſion is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it ſhall ſpeak, and ſpeak home to the Heart, and be accompliſhed, and not lie, though it tarry, and therefore wait for it; Becauſe it will ſurely come, it will not tarry: Behold, his ſoul which is lifted up is not upright in him, but the juſt ſhall live by his Faith, ver. 4. This Text the Apoſtle cites in Heb. 10. 35. Caſt not away your Confidence, (ſaith he) for yet a little while and he that ſhall come will come, and will not tarry, now the juſt ſhall live by faith: It is an alluſion to theſe very words of the Prophet.

3. I mentioned alſo, That the Soul waits thus upon Jeſus Chriſt with Submiſſion and Quietneſs: A Man doth not know how his Soul may be put to it, and ſometimes it is put to it with manifold Temptations, and often times thoſe Temptations are anſwered with nothing but Submiſſions. Certainly, Submiſſion unto God is the cleareſt anſwer of all other unto Doubts or Diſquietneſs of Spirit, and whenſoever a Man arriveth there, he is always upon Ground, and will ceaſe floating. Such Acts of Faith as theſe doth God enable his Servants ſometimes to put forth, for I do not mention only thoſe that are ſimply and abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation, but thoſe acts that the Soul puts forth towards Chriſt, in its treaty with him for ſalvation, in ſome inſtance or other; in Lam. 3. 26, 29. the place I cited even now, where the Prophet ſpeaks of waiting, (ſaith he) It is good that a man ſhould both hope, and quietly wait for the Salvation of the Lord; he ſitteth alone, and keepeth ſilence, becauſe he hath born it upon him; he putteth his mouth in the duſt, if ſo be there may be hope. In thoſe Eaſtern Countries, the manner of thoſe that did profeſs an abſolute ſubjection to another, was, to fall down at their feet, and to kiſs the duſt; as amongſt the Turks, they do to their Emperours at this day: Now (ſaith he) thus ſhould the Soul wait upon God, put his Mouth in the duſt, if ſo be there may be Hope; not only wait when there is Hope, but if there may be any hope; if there may be any ſuppoſition of Hope, he is to wait upon God with putting his Mouth in the duſt. Faith it is ordain'd to glorifie God his own way, and in glorifying of him to cauſe the Heart to apply it ſelf to him in the great buſineſs of ſalvation. It is ſaid of Abraham, in Rom. 4. 20. That he believed, and gave glory to God: Faith it is the great Inſtrument of giving glory to God. Now in the matter of Salvation, what is moſt eminent in God? what is the flower of his Glory, in the way of juſtifying and ſaving a Man? It is the Freedom of his Grace: If it be Grace, then it will be free; I will have mercy, becauſe I will have mercy, and I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, Rom. 9. 15. Faith then it is alſo an Inſtrument of glorifying even Grace in all the ways of its freedom, according to all the Advantages that Free-grace hath over us to glorifie it ſelf upon us, as it is free to accept us, or free to refuſe us. For a Man now to wait upon the Lord in the time of Diſtreſs, and apply himſelf thus to the Freedom of his Grace by Faith, with ſubmiſſion, this (I ſay) is the higheſt way of Faith's glorifying that which is higheſt in God in the point of Salvation, for a Man to caſt away himſelf thus into the freedom of the Grace of God. Abſolute Submiſſion God requires of no Man; that is, that Men ſhould be content to be damned, or the like; but hypothetical Submiſſion in ſuppoſed caſes, is what God enableth his Servants to perform to him, that is, ſubmiſſion with If's; If the Lord (ſaith David in 2 Sam. 15. 26.) ſay thus, I have no delight in thee; behold, here am I, let him do to me as ſeemeth good unto him: He ſpake it indeed in the Point of a Temporal Buſineſs, or a Buſineſs which concerned the ſervice of God; had it been in the caſe of his own Salvation, it had been the higheſt acting of Faith in the World. What he ſaith in that caſe, the Soul too ſaith with an If; Here I am, let the Lord do to me as ſeemeth good unto him. You know that ſaying of Job, Chap. 13. 15. Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. In this caſe, this ſame venture for ſalvation thus with ſubmiſſion, glorifies the freedom of the Grace of God, and the freeneſs of the Grace of Chriſt: However, a Man looſeth not his end, for uſually when a Man begins to have ſuch ſubmiſſions appear in his Spirit, God hath inſtantly done, and all Doubts and Temptations are by this anſwered, and ſo the Heart is quieted, and indeed there is no Objection beyond it.

Seventhly, True Genuine Faith, in its coming to Chriſt for Juſtification and Pardon, Righteouſneſs, or whatever elſe, applies and faſhions the Heart to the Law of Faith: I uſe that Phraſe here, that Chriſt enableth the Heart to apply it ſelf in coming to Chriſt for all theſe, according to the Law of Faith, for you have the ſame in Rom. 3. 26. in another caſe, but it is applicable to this; there you ſhall find that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Law of Faith, by which he ſaith Works are excluded; and he argues thus; If a Man believe in Chriſt for ſalvation at all, Works muſt wholly be excluded, according to the Law of Faith, that is, according to the Nature of Faith; if it be true Faith, and genuine, it is impoſſible, ſaith he, that Works ſhould have any mixture with it. It is ſuch a Phraſe, as we ſay, the Laws of Friendſhip, that is, which a Man muſt keep to, and which are eſſential to him, if he will be a true Friend, and not feigned; ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, If Works be mingled with Faith, it is againſt the Law of Faith, it overthrows the Nature of Faith. As a Man ſaith, ſuch a thing is againſt the Law ot Arms, that is, when a Man doth things contrary to the Principle of Arms; as when a Man is treating, to uſe acts of Hoſtility; ſo it is againſt the Law of Faith to mingle Works with it: When he ſaith, therefore Works are excluded, he ſaith it is by the Law of Faith, by the Law of the Nature of Faith, as I may expreſs it: Even as elſewere, Rom. 11. 6. he ſaith, If it be of works, it is no more of Grace; for it is the Law of Grace to be Grace only, and it will admit no Works amongſt it, and ſo it is the Law of Faith, or elſe it is no Faith at all, if you come to Chriſt for Salvation to renounce Works. Now what the Apoſtle ſaith of the Law of Faith, in that ſence I ſhall make uſe of to the purpoſe that I have in hand, namely this, that if it be true and genuine Faith which a Man comes with to Chriſt for ſalvation, then it will apply it ſelf towards Chriſt, according to the neceſſary Laws and Nature of Faith, and according to what by believing he ſeeks for at Chriſt's Hands: Now do but conſider, when the Soul comes to Jeſus Chriſt to believe, what is it that according to the Law ot Nature in Faith is neceſſary, that if you will believe, and believe in earneſt, and believe honeſtly, the Heart muſt do? It is this, that whatſoever I would have from Chriſt, my Heart doth apply it ſelf ſuitably and anſwerably to Chriſt again, as a Creature ſhould do; whatſoever I would have Chriſt be to me, in my proportion I deſire anſwerably and ſuitably to be to Chriſt again: As for Example, if I come to a Man, and deſire him to be my Friend, and I come on purpoſe to him for Friendſhip, why now the Law of Friendſhip requireth Friendſhip from me again, it is neceſſary, according to the Law of Friendſhip, that that ſhould be the purpoſe and frame of the Spirit of a Man in ſo coming; ſo ſaith Solomon, Prov. 18. 24. A man that hath freinds muſt ſhew himſelf friendly. You read in Scripture (that I may yet explain this further) of a Faith unfeigned, as in 1 Theſ. 1. 5. Unfeigned, without Hypocriſie, without Guile. You read likewiſe in Heb. 10. 22. of drawing nigh unto God with aſſurance of Faith; you read likewiſe there of a true Heart, Let us draw nigh with a true heart, in full aſſurance of Faith: Now it is not that Truth of Heart is it ſelf that which God doth juſtifie a Man for, or that that hath any Ingrediency (as not Faith it ſelf, not as a Work) to Juſtification; yet notwithſtanding it is that which doth naturally flow from believing: If a Man believe truly, and in earneſt, and is ſo conjunct with it, as it is an eſſential Ingredient, even to Faith its being an unfeigned Faith, Faith without Hypocriſie, without Guile. I obſerve, that when the Scripture ſpeaks of believing for Juſtification, it doth not only ſpeak of an uprightneſs of Sanctification, but of an Honeſty, and Uprightneſs, and Unfeignedneſs in the act of Faith it ſelf: You have it in Hab. 2. 4. where he ſpeaks of living by Faith, he ſpeaks of an upright Soul; another Man, ſaith he, that doth not believe, His ſoul is not upright in him; and ſo in Pſal. 32. 1, 2. Bleſſed is he whoſe tranſgreſſion is forgiven, whoſe Sin is covered: Bleſſed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not Iniquity, and in whoſe ſpirit there is no guile: This very place of the Pſalmiſt the Apoſtle quoteth in Rom. 4. 7, 8. to hold forth this great truth, that our Juſtification before God doth lye and conſiſt meerly in God's not imputing ſin to us, but the Righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus, and ſo conſiſts in nothing in us: And therefore if you obſerve it, you ſhall find that he leaves out this ſentence, And the man in whoſe ſpirit there is no guile; why? becauſe it is not uprightneſs, or any thing in us that is any Ingredient in our Juſtification; and yet the Prophet David hath it of the Man that believeth thus for Juſtification, he is a Man, ſaith he, in whoſe ſpirit there is no guile; that is, he is ſincere in the very point of believing for Juſtification and Bleſſedneſs, of which he there ſpeaks, and it anſwers to thoſe other Phraſes of Faith unfeigned, or Fatith without guile, and of drawing nigh with a true heart, in full aſſurance of Faith.

CHAP. VI.

hat where there is true and unfeigned Faith, the Soul is prevailed on to conſent to give it ſelf to Chriſt in all Services and Obedience: That yet this chooſing of Chriſt to be our King and Lord, and ſubmitting to him accordingly, is not that act of Faith which juſtifies a Man.

I Will now Explain what it is for a Man to believe unfeignedly, or according to the very Law and Nature of Faith: And I ſhall open it to you briefly.

Thou comeſt to believe in Jeſus Chriſt; let me ask thee this Queſtion, What s it thou aimeſt at in thy coming to him? What would'ſt thou have from him? What would'ſt thou have with him? What is thy Intent, thy Buſineſs with im? The Soul will ſay, I would have Pardon of ſin, and I believe on him or the forgiveneſs of my ſins; For bleſſed is the Man whoſe ſin is forgiven; and orgiveneſs lies only in him. Why now according to the Law of Faith, according to that Ingenuity and Unfeignedneſs of Faith, what will be the Iſſue of t? Thou wilt let fall all the Weapons that are in thy hand againſt God preently. It floweth, I ſay, naturally, from the very Law of believing: As for Exmple, If a Traytor, having been a Rebel againſt his Prince, ſhould come to im for his ſovereign Grace and Favour, to pardon and forgive him, he comes o ſeek pardon of his Prince, who may chooſe whether he will pardon him or no; and then certainly the very Law of his coming to him for Grace, requireth (and requireth it naturally, and it cannot be otherwiſe) that this Man hould come nakedly, and come upon his knees, and lay aſide all his hoſtility, and is Weapons which he hath uſed againſt him: So it is likewiſe with the Soul hat comes to Jeſus Chriſt for the pardon of ſin, it is againſt the Law of Faith o do otherwiſe, as truly as it is againſt the Law of Arms for a Man in a Treaty or Peace to come and practice any Act of Hoſtility. This you ſhall find in he Scripture to be natural unto Faith, and to flow from it as naturally as ny thing can do, Hoſ. 14. 2. There the Prophet ſets them a work to ſeek y way of Faith, Mercy at the Hands of God; Take with you words, (ſaith he) and turn to the Lord; ſay unto him, (this now is the voice of Faith) Take way all iniquity, and receive us graciouſly; and Verſe 3. they coming thus unto God, ſay, Aſhur ſhall not ſave us, (i. e. no Creature ſhall help us) for in hee the Fatherleſs findeth Mercy: We look for help from thee alone, and we come to thee for Grace, take away all iniquity, and receive us graciouſly: What ollows upon this? what follows as a natural and neceſſary conſequent upon it? ead the 8*th.* verſe, Ephraim ſhall ſay, what have I to do any more with Idols? God doth not come in here, and ſay, Ephraim, you muſt leave your Idols; but Ephraim ſaith it himſelf, and he ſaith it as finding it inconſiſtent with what he is ſeeking for; I am ſeeking for Grace at the Hands of God, and to have all iniquity taken away, what have I therefore to do any more with Idols? this is the Voice of Faith, and the Law of Faith. So again, when you come to believe, let me ask you, What do you come for? Do you come for Pardon? What is it in God that ſhould move him to give you Pardon? O his Free grace, his infinite Love! What kind of Love is it you ſeek for, as that which only muſt pardon you? a Love unchangeable, ſuch a Love as is not beſtowed upon the reſt of the World, which Millions of Nobles, and Great Ones in the World have no Intereſt in, a Love that continueth to everlaſting, a Love that freely accepts you for nothing in your ſelf: This indeed and in truth is the aim of your Faith, for you can have Pardon from no other Principle in God, but from ſuch a Love as this. If that Faith now aims to have from God ſuch a Love, out of which, and out of no other a Man can be pardoned, and caſteth himſelf upon God for this, and without this is never quiet; if Faith come to God for this, if it be Faith unfeigned, if it keep to the Law of Faith, if it be Faith without guile, if there be a true Heart in this Faith, if there be an honeſt Heart, (for that is another Expreſſion that Luke hath, Luke 8. 15. and he means not honeſt only in reſpect to Commands, and the like, but in relation to the Word of the Goſpel, holding forth Chriſt to us, to believe on him) if, I ſay, a Man have an honeſty of Faith, and an ingenuity of Faith, and cometh unto God for ſuch a Love, it muſt needs frame and faſhion in a natural way the Heart to a ſuitable Diſpoſition unto God. I find in Acts 11. 26. where Barnabas bids them by Faith to abide by the Lord, it is ſaid, he exhorted them with purpoſe of Heart to do it: There is a purpoſe of Heart that is always the ingredient in the Nature and Being of Faith, for Faith you muſt know is ſeated in the whole Man, hath its effect upon the whole Heart, therefore it draws out all in a Man, that as the Will doth truſt in Chriſt, ſo there is a cleaving to him with a genuine purpoſe of Heart. Whatever now Faith would have from God, and comes to God for, it comes to God upon the terms of the Law and Nature of the thing, to return in its proportion that to God again; the Heart behaves it ſelf accordingly, and muſt needs do ſo when it comes to believe. Abraham when he believed upon God for to have his Son Jeſus Chriſt, (for he ſaw his day, and knew that he was to be put to death, or at leaſt that he was to be ſaved by him) would he have God's Son from God? doth he believe this in earneſt? and doth he come to God for Salvation thorough his Son to be given for him? this Faith now being honeſt Faith, Faith unfeigned, genuine Faith, ſaith he, God ſhall have my Son again; and though Abraham had not that diſtinct thought when he firſt believed, yet there was that ſeminally in his heart, when God called him to give up his Son to God, you have it there in James 2. 22. Further, when the Soul comes to Jeſus Chriſt for Pardon, I ask thee again, (and do but conſider it) What is it that thou doſt come to Chriſt to be pardoned thorough? I come to him to be pardoned thorough his Blood, and thorough his Sufferings, his having born the Wrath of God, (which is the only all-ſufficient Sacrifice of himſelf, offered up to God when he bore our ſins upon the Croſs;) Doſt thou ſo? The very Law and Nature of Faith, if it be genuine, hath this Seed and Principle in it, (which I ſay is naturally and eſſentially an Ingredient in it) that it will make thee to ſay (as the Apoſtle himſelf crys out in Rom. 6. 2, 3, &c.) How ſhall I then live in that which Jeſus Chriſt died for? Do I come for every part of Chriſt's Obedience to be counted mine? Certainly then the very Law of Faith frames the Heart to this, to conform my ſelf to that Obedience of his, to apply my ſelf thereto. The Law of Faith ſeminally doth all this, and it is not only in the caſe of Aſſurance of the Love of God, but in the caſe of depending upon the Love of God; not only in the caſe of Aſſurance that Chriſt died for me, but in depending upon this, that Chriſt died for me. Thus Faith hath a thouſand ways whereby it ſanctifies the Heart, by going to Chriſt for Virtue, by looking to the Example of Chriſt, by looking to its oneneſs with Chriſt, and the like; but the Truth is this, that that which we call Sanctification, (or call it what you will) is contained ſeminally in the very Law of Faith, when it is actually drawn out and exerciſed. You call it Repentance, and Sanctification, and the like, but ſeminally it lies in believing, and in the very Law of believing; if it be Faith unfeigned, if it be a true and genuine Act of Faith, which I take it is the reaſon why all is aſcribed to believing. It is not as if the Soul when it comes to believe, and ſees it ſelf loſt without Chriſt, &c. concludes, I muſt repent to perform a Condition of my Juſtification; No, but the very Nature of Faith, if I believe, and believe honeſtly, will draw all this after it: I ſay, the very Nature of the thing doth it; for if a Man come to God otherwiſe, he may be anſwered as Iſaac anſwered Abimelech, Gen. 26. 27. Wherefore come ye to me, ſeeing you hate me, and have ſent me away from you? Or, as Jepthah ſaid to the Elders of Gilead, Judges 10. 7. Did not you hate me, and expel me from my Fathers Houſe? and why are ye come unto me now, when ye are in diſtreſs? If any Man comes thus to God, can he think he ſhall be accepted? So that, I ſay, Repentance and Sanctification, take the Acts of it, they are all ſeminally included in Faith, and flow from it; if it be Faith unfeigned, and without guile, if it be Faith that reſteth upon Chriſt for the bleſſedneſs of having our ſins covered. But let me add this for Caution-ſake, though this is what the Law of Faith, when the Soul comes to treat with Chriſt for Juſtification, requireth, yet it is not that upon which, and that Act for which God doth juſtifie us; but rather, I ſay, whatever God reſpecteth in Faith, truſting on him, is certainly that Act which he hath ſingled out for the purpoſe of our Juſtification.

6. The Soul in treating with Jeſus Chriſt for Juſtification, according to this Law of Faith mentioned, doth apply itſelf to all, and the whole that is in Chriſt, or of Chriſt, or belonging to Chriſt, and doth give up the whole Soul to God, and to Jeſus Chriſt. If a Man do believe with Faith unfeigned, this is withall included in the very Nature of it: Although indeed when I come to Jeſus Chriſt as a Juſtifier, for that is my particular buſineſs with him, I believe on him that juſtifieth the Ungodly; yet being come, Faith correſponds or applies it ſelf to all that is in Chriſt, or of Chriſt, or belonging to him any way. I ſhall endeavour to explain and prove this: You have often heard it, and I find it in ſome Diſcourſes urg'd, that Faith is not only a believing on Chriſt, but a taking and a receiving of Chriſt, and that therein alſo lies the Act of Juſtifying: But I do not urge it ſo, for I take it, that the formal act of Juſtification is when the Soul reſteth and believeth on the Lord Jeſus; and the Scripture carries it ſo throughout. Yet withall notwithſtanding, this taking of Chriſt, this applying the whole Soul to whole Chriſt, and all that is of him, or in him, or belonging to him, is eſſential to this Faith, it is included in it, even in the very Nature of the Faith it ſelf, if it be unfeigned Faith, if it be honeſt Faith, if it be Faith that is faithful, as I may ſo expreſs it. I ſhall endeavour to explain this by degrees.

1. I lay this down for a moſt certain Truth and Principle, That God hath rdained the Spirit of Faith to be that great Principle in the Soul till it come o Heaven, whereby the Soul ſhall immediately treat with Jeſus Chriſt, or God n Chriſt, all thoſe ways whereby he is to be treated withal by the Soul; ſo hat all ſorts of Tranſactions between God and Chriſt paſs through the Cognizance of Faith, and are let firſt into the Soul by Faith. So that as Jeſus Chriſt imſelf is a Mediatour between God and us, in bringing us to God, ſo the Spi- it of Faith in the Soul is that whereby the Soul doth treat with Chriſt, is oth the Spirit of Faith which the Holy Ghoſt who acts the Soul in the ways of elieving, and the Principle of Faith in the Soul it ſelf. When you come to eal with Jeſus Chriſt, or with God through Chriſt, all things elſe are ſhut out f doors, and there is none that appears, or are ſeen together, but God and Chriſt, and the Spirit of Faith in the Soul, and the Soul acting Faith towards God thereby; ſo that whatever Excellency is in Chriſt's Perſon, (beſides his be- g a Saviour, or the Object of Juſtification) whatever relation beſides God ath put upon him to bear towards the Soul, and ordained him to be unto it, as there are multitudes of them, as an Head, an Husband, a Prophet, Lord nd King) all theſe that Faith which doth juſtifie is alſo ordained to take in, nd unto theſe all doth the Soul that comes to Chriſt for Juſtification ſuita- ly apply and demean it ſelf, it being, as was ſaid, the only eminent Princi- le that is ordained to treat with Chriſt; ſo as although the conſequent of be- ieving may be Love, and mourning for ſin, &c. yet that which tranſacts all with Chriſt, as he is a King, as he is a Prieſt, as he is a Prophet, as he is xcellent and glorious in himſelf, is Faith, and it is Faith that tranſacts all theſe irſt and primarily, nakedly and immediately with Chriſt, and then Love and ll other things ariſe. Hence therefore Faith that comes to Chriſt for Juſti- ication, is ſuch as is fitted to take in, and apply it ſelf to all that is put upon eſus Chriſt in his relation to us, and all that Faith ſhall be inſtructed n, it apprehends it, and cloſeth with it. For otherwiſe, there ſhould be ſome- hing in Chriſt ordained by God to be to the Soul, which the Soul ſhould not ave a Principle to take in or apprehend; for whatſoever Chriſt is ordained to e to the Soul, the Soul apprehends it only by Faith. Yet,

2. Although all ſuch Applications of the Soul to Chriſt by Faith, as of con- enting to be Chriſt's, the taking the Perſon of Chriſt to be mine, &c. are he proper, peculiar acts of Faith, yet are they not that formal act of Faith s Juſtifying: But the Scripture puts this upon what is here mentioned, See- g and believing on him; and although the Soul is thereby married to Chriſt s an Husband, as Rom. 7. 3. To bring forth fruit to God; yet to take him un- er that Notion as an Husband, is a Conjugal Act, whereas Juſtification is forenſical act in God, and believing upon him is anſwerable. And then again, o take him upon Conſideration of his Excellencies, as an Husband, is an act of Part II. Love, and ſo if this was the juſtifying Act, Love would go before Faith, whereas Love ariſeth from the Acts of Faith. Yet,

3. Although thus to take Chriſt, and to receive Chriſt as a Lord, and as a King, and a Husband, and apply the Soul accordingly to him, be not that formal act of Faith as juſtifying, yet all ſuch acts do flow from, and are contained in the very Nature of that act of Faith that ſeeketh Juſtification from Chriſt, and this according to the Law of Faith beforemention'd, ſo as if it be Faith unfeign'd, faithful Faith; that Soul who comes to Chriſt for Juſtification, if it comes truly to him as ſuch, doth withall neceſſarily take him as a Lord, as a King, as a Husband, in all his relations, and accordingly applies the Soul wholly to him: You ſhall find therefore in John 1. 12. that which is elſewhere called believing on his Name, is there called receiving of him; As many as received him, to them he gave Power to be the Sons of God, even to as many as believe on his Name: He that doth believe on the Son, he alſo receiveth him; and how receiveth him? he receives him as he is a Lord as well as he is a Saviour; that's clear and evident from what is the Occaſion of this Speech in the verſe before, for that which others are blam'd for in that 11*th.* verſe, is becauſe they received him not as ſuch; He came unto his own; that is, he came unto his own houſe, as a Lord and Maſter over his own Houſe, (for ſo indeed the Phraſe implies, the Phraſe εἰς τὰ ἴδια, To his own, as it is elſewhere tranſlated; ſo in John 19. 27. John is ſaid to have receiv'd Mary, Chriſt's Mother, εἰς τὰ ἴδια, to his own Home or Houſe; the like you have Acts 21. 6. And his own received him not: They did not receive him as one that came as a Lord, and that was to be the Lord Over his own Houſe, Heb. 3. 6. as we are ſaid to receive a King, when we acknowledge him, and are ſubject to him as ſuch. Now then you ſee he explains the one by the other, Believing on his Name by receiving of him, and receiving of him by believing on his Name: Now from hence I infer, that whoſoever believes on the Name of Jeſus Chriſt for Salvation, it is in the Nature of that Act to receive him alſo as a Head, as a Lord, as a Husband, as a King, &c. And that which further explains this, is, Col. 2. 6. As you have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, (Mark the Words) ſo walk ye in him. All Obedience is but walking in Chriſt, as Faith is receiving of Chriſt, and that as Jeſus the Lord: Now what is ſaid of receiving Jeſus as a Lord, it is true of recieving him under any other relation he bears towards us, wherein the Word doth manifeſt him as a Husband, as a Head, as a Prophet, as a King, &c.

The next thing I add to explain this, is, That yet it may be, that at the firſt when a Man comes to believe on Chriſt for Salvation, he hath not thoſe diſtinct thoughts of taking Jeſus Chriſt as a King, and as a Husband, and the like, though ſtill it is included in the very Nature of that act of Faith that comes to him for Juſtification, (if that Faith be genuine) ſo as the Heart doth virtually and implicitly do all this in the very coming to Chriſt for Juſtification. And as to this firſt, Chriſt is pleas'd to deal with ſome Men in their coming to him ſo diſtinctly, as haply to propound all of Chriſt at firſt, and to carry on the Soul in that way and manner in the whole Treaty with him: Thus it was with Paul from the firſt, who ſought Chriſt's Perſon firſt, and then his Righteouſneſs; Lord, (ſaith he) what wilt thou have me to do? Acts 9. 6. and Phil. 3. 8. I count all things but loſs and dung, that I may win Chriſt: I have, (ſays he) and do ſo at preſent too: He had done ſo from the very firſt, and what was the order and deſign of his Faith? That I may win Chriſt, (ſays he;) he mentions that firſt, that he may have his Perſon firſt, and that being found in him he might have his Righteouſneſs, and not his own. And I my ſelf have known ſome, that when they have ſeen their loſt Condition, have come unto Jeſus Chriſt, and looking about for a Warrant for them in particular for this, they have found this ground, that God hath commanded them to believe, and ſo authorized them to go to the Lord Jeſus, of which being aſſured, and then going to Jeſus Chriſt, he told them that he could not deny them his Righteouſneſs, becauſe he is his Fathers Servant: And 'tis true they had his Warrant, and ſo he muſt give it them. As if I have a Ticket from the King, to have ſo much Money from the Lord Treaſurer, he being but a Servant, and I having the King's Warrant, he cannot deny to pay it to me; but withall, the Soul thus coming to Chriſt, authorized by the Command of God ſo to do, Chriſt hath yet dealt thus with that Soul: It's true, (ſaith he) I cannot deny you that Righteouſneſs which you come to me for, for I am appointed by my Father to give it unto all that come to me for it; but know withall, that my Father hath appointed me to be as a King to you, to be as a Lord, to be as a Head to you. I ſay, thus diſtinctly hath the thing been driven, and the Treaty been made. But,

2. All Souls are not thus diſtinctly dealt withall, but they have this virtually and implicitely: For, Firſt, Many poor Souls, when they firſt come to Jeſus Chriſt, their Minds are ſwallowed up ſo much about Pardon of Sin, that their preſent thoughts did then only in an explicite way look upon Chriſt as a Saviour, though that act of Faith in coming to him only as a Saviour, being ſuch a Faith as is genuine, and true, and in earneſt, and ingenuous, (at the ſame time that the Soul ſeeks Salvation by him) it includes a Diſpoſition to be any thing Chriſt would have it to be towards him, or a Submiſſion to Chriſt in any thing which he is ordain'd by God to be unto the Soul; yet ſo, as that they have not ſuch explicite thoughts at that moment drawn forth, they do not make ſuch an explicite conſent of taking him to be their King, and their Head, and the like, to make a Marriage with him; I ſay, they have not theſe diſtinct thoughts drawn out in their firſt coming to Chriſt, whether it be in reſpect to the taking and receiving him as a Lord, and Husband, or whether in reſpect to the taking Chriſt himſelf the Saviour, many cannot ſay, that the Revelation of Chriſt to them, was under the conſideration of God's offering, or giving Chriſt unto them, and that ſo they did receive Chriſt, and take him; but they can ſay, they have come to him, and yet in their very coming (as the truth of it is) they do take him; but becauſe taking of him implies a looking at him as given, yea, the Phraſe to take him, implies an apprehenſion in them, that he is given to them, as theirs; for a Man is to take only what is his own, and ſo in common underſtanding it would ſeem to imply, that the Faith of a Believer hath for its ground a thought, that God hath given Chriſt for him in particular, which many truly believing Souls cannot find; they muſt therefore come to him as given by God for ſinners, &c.

3. Neither doth God ſo drive on this Treaty about Juſtification, that he ſhould keep off and ſuſpend to juſtifie the Soul coming to Chriſt for Salvation, 'till the Soul firſt doth diſtinctly apprehend that it muſt have his Perſon, before it can have his Righteouſneſs, and that he is to be to it a Lord and King, as well as a Saviour. We cannot conceive that God ſhould forbear to juſtifie the Soul, 'till it comes to have ſuch diſtinct thoughts, for ſuch diſtinct apprehenſions of Chriſt many poor Souls cannot tell how to make out at the firſt, neither doth Chriſt drive on the Treaty of the Soul with him in ſuch diſtinct terms: But as was ſaid, this is in the very Nature of the Act; and though they come to Chriſt only for Juſtification, yet if it be a coming unto him in good earneſt, they do by that very act take whole Chriſt, and all that is in him, and all that he is ordained to be to the Soul. For as it is in Marriage, though a Woman marries one that is rich, that all her Debts may be paid, yet ſhe marries him, and takes him as an Husband, to all other ends and purpoſes elſe: Or I may illuſtrate it by a compariſon of the contrary, which your Ears may well bear, for we uſe to illuſtrate one contrary by another; thoſe that are properly Conjurers, they never make a diſtinct and explicite Contract with the Devil, but by going to him to do ſuch and ſuch things for them, they take the Devil to be their Head, and they give their Souls up to him by an implicite Covenant, even by their very going to him: So doth the Soul by going to Jeſus Chriſt in earneſt, to be juſtified by him; and that according to the Law of believing, though it comes to him at firſt for nothing but Juſtification, yet becauſe the Law of believing doth require a Man to take whole Chriſt, the Soul doth it, and doth apply it ſelf to that Law, that whatſoever the Word doth reveal concerning Chriſt, the Soul correſponds with it: And if Faith be genuine and ingenuous, it naturally includes this in it, If I ſeek Salvation from him, who being all Excellency and Glory became nothing, and emptied himſelf of all for thoſe who are ſaved by him, who gave his whole ſelf to purchaſe that Salvation which I ſeek, the Law of Faith

then requires that I ſhould ſubmit, and apply my whole ſelf to him, and to all in him: But yet ſo it is, that the Soul is drawn out to do all this, as upon coming to Chriſt he is reveal'd to the Soul, and it is inſtructed in him. In John 1. 12. he having ſaid, As many as receiv'd him, then (as it were) thinking that this needed an Explanation, he mentions by way of Interpretation, Even as many as believed on his Name; and this Explication is on purpoſe to relieve many a poor Soul, who thinks with it ſelf, Alas, I cannot remember that I did thus diſtinctly receive him as my Lord and Head, or that I ſaw God the Father giving of him to me, to be ſuch unto me: Ay, but haſt thou believed on him? then thou haſt received him; As many as received him, even thoſe that believe on his Name: The like you have in Luke 14. 26. compared with Mat. 10. 37. He that hateth not Father and Mother, is not worthy to be my Diſciple; ſo it is in Luke: But in Mat. 10. 37. He that loveth Father and Mother more than me, is not worthy of me: Becauſe, whoſoever comes unto Jeſus Chriſt, and gives up himſelf to be a Diſciple to him, the very Nature of the thing is to come to him for himſelf, and upon his ſo doing he hath Chriſt himſelf: It is, you ſee, made all one. Now, I ſay, it is all virtually contained in our coming to him for Juſtification, becauſe that the Soul when it comes to him in earneſt, comes with that Truth, and with that Unfeignedneſs, that ſtill according as Chriſt is revealed, what he is ordained to be to the Soul, ſo it doth and would apply it ſelf to him; and this is evident alſo by this, that theſe poor Souls that come thus to Chriſt diſtinctly for Juſtification, though they cannot ſay, I remember when I was married to Jeſus Chriſt, I cannot remember when I took him as my Lord, and King, and Head, &c. under ſuch diſtinct Ideas, or that the Treaty was ſo driven on, yet they do all to him that a Wife ſhould do to a Husband, they ſeek to pleaſe him, and content him; they do all to him as Servants ſhould do to a Maſter, and this by reaſon of coming to him for Juſtification, and dependance upon him thereon, though it may be they had not in their firſt cloſing with him ſuch diſtinct thoughts, that they came to him as a Husband, and as a Maſter; and tho' they cannot ſay, that they have put forth an Act of taking Chriſt as an Husband or Lord, under that diſtinct Notion, and that ſuch a formal Contract hath paſs'd; yet ſuch a ſeminal, virtual diſpoſition of their Souls, they expreſs abundantly in ſuppoſition, and tendency of their deſires towards him; wiſhing, Oh that he would be a Husband to me! and how infinitely ſhould I rejoyce, if I mightbe ſo happy in him! And tho' I cannot ſay, that I have taken him under this thought, yet my Soul renounceth all other Lords, according to that in Iſa. 26. 13.

Again, the Truth is, that Faith as to our Perception is a confuſed thing at firſt, it is like the Chaos, but yet like to that it hath the ſeeds of all things in it towards Jeſus Chriſt; and even as in making the World, God brought forth one thing after another out of that confuſed Lump, (firſt he ſaid, Let there be Light, and then Light ſtarted up, &c. and he was ſix days in perfecting of the World:) So it is in Faith, It is, I ſay, a confuſed Lump at firſt, but there is the Subſtance in it of all that ever the Soul ſhall be to Chriſt, or that Chriſt ſhall be to the Soul; and in drawing forth theſe, God doth not tye or keep himſelf to any conſtant Method, he doth not make every Soul to ſay diſtinctly, I will firſt take Chriſt, and then take his Righteouſneſs; No, but many a poor Soul (it may be) comes to Jeſus Chriſt firſt for his Righteouſneſs, and by coming to him for his Righteouſneſs the truth is he takes Jeſus Chriſt himſelf; and yet in the natural way of Method, and in the dependance of the things, a Man hath firſt Chriſt, and then his Righteouſneſs. And beſides, the order of theſe actings in the Soul is as the Miniſtry is under which a Man liveth, for there is that Obediential Principle in Faith, that whatſoever the Word God of ſhall call for at your Hands, Faith is ready to apply it ſelf to Chriſt accordingly. There is many a poor Soul cannot ſay, I have taken Chriſt to be my Husband, and yet it will ſhew Conjugal Diſpoſitions; it will ſay, Oh that he were my Husband! and if he were my Husband, how infinitely ſhould I rejoyce! It cannot ſay, I have taken Chriſt for my Lord, when I began firſt to believe: But this it can ſay, Other Lords beſides him have ruled over me, but I have renounced them all, I will make mention only of his Name. So that the truth is, this taking Chriſt as a Lord, is virtually and ſeminally in every Soul that comes to Jeſus Chriſt for Salvation; for it takes whole Chriſt; and as it relies only upon him, ſo it receives all that is in him, and all that belongs unto him, and God who judgeth righteous judgment, according to the real ſubſtance of the thing, and ſtands not upon formal Thoughts, and explicite Contracts, or diſtinct Apprehenſions in the Perſon believing, as if the want of them ſhould make void what is ſubſtantial, juſtifies a Man upon that Faith which God ſees, and knows to have ſuch a true genuine Principle in it.

Having thus explain'd my Meaning as clearly as I could, I ſhall now prove he Subſtance of this Truth from the Scripture: The Covenant of Grace under he Law directed Believers to look on God as their God, and to avouch him o be ſuch: David calls him Lord, Pſal. 110. 1. And in ſo doing, the very Nature and Law of Faith requires, and cauſeth the Heart according to this Principle, to apply it ſelf to Chriſt, as to a Father, and as to a Lord, which he Prophet refers to, and interprets it Mal. 1. 6. If I be a Father, where is my Honour? and if I be a Maſter, where is my Fear? It is impoſſible the Heart hould come to God to be a Father, (if it come to him in earneſt) or come o Jeſus Chriſt to be a Saviour, but it will turn to him, as it is in Jer. 3. 19. Thou ſhalt call me Father, and not turn away from me. And Jeſus Chriſt he expreſſeth this to be the Believers Caſe all along in his Preaching, as in that place quoted even now, Mat. 10. 38. He that loveth Father and Mother better than me, he is not worthy of me: That Phraſe doth neceſſarily imply, that he that comes o Jeſus Chriſt, takes Chriſt, and he hath Chriſt, whole Chriſt; it is the very Nature of the Act to do ſo, for why elſe doth he ſpeak of that Man as poſſeſſing himſelf, for he doth not ſay, He is not worthy of my Righteouſneſs, ut he is not worthy of me; ſo that it is there implyed, that the Soul takes Chriſt himſelf under all relations: Why? becauſe he parts with all other Relations for him, he hates Father and Mother in compariſon of Chriſt, and it s becauſe he comes to Jeſus Chriſt to be all theſe to him; and this Chriſt argues from the Nature of the thing it ſelf, as is imported in that Phraſe, He is not worthy of me; i. e. He deals unworthily, and unſuitably to what he came o me for. And hence it comes to be made inconſiſtent with Faith, and againſt he Nature of the Act, for a Man believing to go on in any ſin, John 5. 44. How can ye believe, which receive Honour one of another? And when Chriſt ſpeaks f the Souls coming to him for reſt, Mat. 11. 28. he mentions his Yoke, (as lſewhere taking up his Croſs;) and in Luke 19. 14. he expreſſeth their Unbeief by this, that they would not have him to reign over them. Our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, he was a mean Man in view, and all the World contemn'd him, and he Gang of the World was againſt him, and he that would keep his Correſpondency with the World, and hold in with the World, and have Honour from he World, he would never believe on him; for if he did believe on him in earneſt, e would let go all his correſpondency with the World, and take Jeſus Chriſt ipſo facto, as his Lord, and as his Maſter.

And the Apoſtles preach'd accordingly, as you ſhall find in Acts 2. 36. Let all the Houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made that ſame Jeſus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Chriſt: He would have them know his, and know this aſſuredly, that God had made him as Chriſt, the Meſſiah o ſave them, ſo he had made him Lord; and in Acts 5. 31. you have the like, Him hath God exalted with his right hand, to be a Prince and a Saviour: Whover therefore comes unto him as to a Saviour, if he come in earneſt to him or Salvation, if it be faithful Faith, if it keep to the Law of Faith, he doth lſo neceſſarily apply himſelf to Chriſt as to a Prince: For, Mark it, for what nd doth the Apoſtle quote this? they had ſaid, ver. 29. We ought to obey God rather than Men; and then they give this reaſon for it, Becauſe He is exalted to be a Prince, (ſay they) therefore we ought to obey him; and upon thoſe terms we and others alſo have believed on him: In like manner they add, ver. 32. We are his witneſſes of theſe things, and ſo is alſo the Holy Ghoſt, whom God hath given to them that obey him; that is, That have received Jeſus Chriſt as Prince as well as a Saviour, giving that as a true Deſcription of Believers. Hence therefore Faith is not only oppoſed to doubting, but it is oppoſed to Diſobedience; you have an expreſs place for it in 1 Pet. 2. 7. Unto you which believe he is precious, but unto them which be diſobedient, a ſtone of ſtumbling, &c. Unbelief, you ſee, and Unbelievers, are expreſſed by being diſobedient: Why? becauſe virtually and ſeminally taking Jeſus Chriſt as a Lord, and a King, in all things to obey him, is contained in the very Nature of Faith. You have it in your very Creed, I believe in Jeſus Chriſt the Lord; and the ſame is imported too in that Text, tho' it be not the whole meaning of it) Eph. 3. 17. That Chriſt may dwell in your Hearts by Faith: This Phraſe imports an having receiv'd him into the Heart by Faith, as a Lord into his own Houſe, and ſo it anſwers to that in John 1. 11. He came to his own, &c. εἰς τὰ ἴδια, to his own Houſe, as Lord over it. There is in a believing Soul a Door of Faith open'd, (Acts 14. 27.) to receive the King of Glory; thus the Heart ſets open all its Doors, (as you have the Expreſſion, Pſal. 24. 9. Lift up your Heads, O ye Gates! even lift them up ye everlaſting Doors, and the King of Glory ſhall come in;) and gives up all the Keys unto Jeſus Chriſt, and ſets him up a Throne, there to dwell and rule; and that's the Reaſon why, though Heaven is his Throne, and Earth his Foot-ſtool, yet he delights to dwell in a broken and humble Spirit, and in a believing Heart, becauſe he can rule there, and he may do what he will in that Heart; and accordingly we are ſaid to receive him when we do believe. Hence therefore you ſhall find in Scripture, that all the Profeſſion of Faith and of Chriſtianity is expreſt to us by this very thing, calling of Jeſus Chriſt Lord; you have it in 1 Cor. 12. 3. No Man can ſay, that Jeſus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt: He was ſpeaking of their being converted to the Faith, and he expreſſeth it by calling Jeſus the Lord. To the ſame purpoſe is the Apoſtle's Exhortation, Heb. 3. 1, 2. Let us look to Jeſus, the Apoſtle of our Profeſſion, to guide us, as well as to him our High Prieſt, to ſave us; and anſwerably he ſpeaks, Heb. 5. 9. That he becomes the Author of Eternal Salvation to them that obey him: And it is ſuch Salvation as is eternal in the Iſſue. In 2 Cor. 5. 15. you ſhall ſee it is made the very Law of believing; The Love of Chriſt conſtrains us, becauſe we thus judge, that if one dyed for all, then were all dead; and (ſaith he) he died for all, that they which live ſhould not henceforth live to themſelves, but unto him which died for them, and roſe again. You ſee it is included in the very Nature of the thing: Do I believe that Jeſus Chriſt died for me? Or, do I come to Jeſus Chriſt to be ſaved by his Death, and by his Reſurrection, I my ſelf being a dead Creature without him? Thy Heart then cannot but judge that it is the very Law of the thing, that therefore I ſhould live to him that died for me, and roſe again. Compare this now with Rom. 14. 7. None of us (ſaith he) liveth to himſelf; that is, none of us that are true Believers; for to this end (ver. 9.) Chriſt both died and roſe, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living: Do I come to Jeſus Chriſt now to be juſtified by his Death, and by his Reſurrection? why, he that died and roſe again, both died and roſe again that he might be Lord both of the dead and living: Hence therefore, ſaith he, none of us liveth to himſelf; the natural and neceſſary Law of the thing requires that we ſhould live unto Chriſt. So that I ſay, if it be faithful Faith, if it be Faith that is genuine, and that keeps to the Law of believing, according to the Nature of the Object, when it comes to Jeſus Chriſt, to be juſtified by his Death, and by his Reſurrection, by the like reaſon it gives it ſelf up to Jeſus Chriſt, as to a Lord and King, and all the Relations that God hath ſet forth in his Word that Jeſus Chriſt is; therefore in 2 Cor. 8. 5. you have an Expreſſion of the Souls reſigning it ſelf up perfectly unto Jeſus Chriſt, that it giveth up it ſelf and all that is in it unto the Lord, and applies it ſelf to him as to a Lord and King; This they did, (ſaith he) firſt they gave their own ſelves to the Lord, and then unto us, by the will of God; that is, unto us the Apoſtles to guide them and direct them, but they gave their own ſelves up firſt to him: For Faith cauſeth the Heart to apply it ſelf to the Law of believing, and to all that is revealed concerning Chriſt in the Word: It takes whole Chriſt, and gives up the whole Soul, and that is included in the very Nature of Faith, ſo that a Man cannot believe indeed and in truth, unleſs he doth thus. Therefore now, why ſhould we make Repentance and Sanctification, and ſuch things, Conditions of the Covenant of Grace, (as many do) whereas they are all ſeminally included in

Faith, and it is impoſſible for a Man to believe but all theſe things muſt follow. God ſhall not need to ſtand treating with ſinners in ſuch a manner as this, You come to me for ſalvation, therefore thus and thus I expect you ſhould do: God need not inſiſt on ſuch things as Conditions, for if the Soul doth come to him for Salvation, all this is included in Faith it ſelf, and they are part of Salvation it ſelf; and when God bids me do all theſe things, he doth but bid me be ſaved. If a Prince ſhould ſay to one, I will give thee my Daughter in Marriage, if thou wilt but marry her, and take her for thy Wife; will a Man now ſay, that this is a Condition? No, it is that without which he cannot come to enjoy her, without which ſhe cannot be his Wife, or he have communion with her, the very Law and Nature of the thing requires it: So it is here, and therefore is Faith made the ſole Condition, (if I may call it a Condition, for there is no need to call it ſo much) becauſe it virtually includeth all theſe. He that believeth truly, according to the Law of Faith, he takes whole Jeſus Chriſt, and gives up his whole Soul to him, to be ruled and diſpoſed by him for ever: As for inſtance, 1. Doſt thou come to Jeſus Chriſt to be juſtified? and doſt thou do it in earneſt? thou doſt take Jeſus Chriſt to be the fountain of Grace to thee for evermore, thou doſt come to him with a Reſolution to be nothing in thy own Account to Eternity, and that Jeſus Chriſt ſhall be all in all to thee, and do all in thee, and for thee, and thou reckoneſt thy ſelf to be a Cypher, and that for evermore. 2. Doſt thou come to Jeſus Chriſt, to be ſaved and juſtified by him in earneſt? Thou comeſt to take Jeſus Chriſt, with all the Life of Chriſt, and all that belongs unto him. As when one takes a Husband, ſhe caſts her Fortune with him, as we ſay, to live with him; ſo doſt thou in receiving Chriſt. This is Paul's Phraſe, in 2 Cor. 4. 10. That the life of Jeſus may be made manifeſt in our body: He ſpeaks it when he was perſecuted, and what Life was that? It was a Life of Perſecution, to which he chearfully ſubmitted. Thus thou doſt ſubject thy ſelf unto a conformity to all that did accompany the Life of Chriſt perſonally here upon Earth; thou ſay'ſt as Ruth to Naomi, Ruth 1. 16. Intreat me not to return from following of thee, for whither thou goeſt I will go, and where thou lodgeſt I will lodge; thy People ſhall be my People, and thy God my God. Thou takeſt Jeſus Chriſt to follow him all the World over, with all the Diſgrace that ſhall accompany him; thou takeſt Jeſus Chriſt with Loſſes, and with Croſſes, with all Inconveniencies, with his Crown of Thorns as well as with his Crown of Glory, as oftentimes hath been expreſt: And Chriſt need not make a Bargain with thee to do ſo, it is contained in the thing it ſelf, if thou come to him in earneſt. Thou takeſt Jeſus Chriſt with all his Graces, the Meekneſs of Chriſt to ſubdue thy Pride, &c. For there is nothing in thee naturally but is contrary to Chriſt; thou takeſt him to have every thought brought in ſubjection to him. Thou takeſt him with all his Offices; thou takeſt him as thy Prophet, that is, whatſoever Truth Jeſus Chriſt ſhall reveal to thee, (and thou knoweſt not what Truths he may reveal to thee in this World, afore thou goeſt out of it, for which thou may'ſt ſuffer, and be called even to lay down thy Blood) thou receiveſt it, yea, and thou wilt watch and obſerve where Truth is, and where the Spirit of God ſtirs abroad in the Hearts of his People, ſo as a Child may lead thee, as the Prophet ſays, Iſa. 11. 6. thou wilt take the leaſt hint of Light, the leaſt Beam, and neglecteſt nothing that riſeth up in the Church to conſider it; and ſo thou takeſt him as a King alſo to rule thee, and to be under no Scepter but under his, and under no Government but under his, Iſa. 26. 13. Other Lords have ruled over us, but we will make mention only of thy Name. Doſt thou come to Jeſus Chriſt in earneſt for Juſtification? thou art pleaſed with him in all things, with all the Counſels of Jeſus Chriſt, all his Decrees and Purpoſes, all the ways of his Providence, all that is contained in this whole Book, that is his Will and Mind. Thy Soul, becauſe it is well pleaſed with Jeſus Chriſt, is well pleaſed with all that is his, and thy Heart will ſay, I wiſh nothing wanting either in Chriſt, or in what belongs to him, and this is all included in the very Nature of Faith: If I belive in earneſt, if that my Faith be ſuited to the Object that Faith believes upon, though God may draw theſe things out of the Lump, out of the Matter or Chaos of Faith, by degrees, one thing after another, yet it is all there, even when the Soul firſt comes to lay hold upon Chriſt, therefore we are ſaid to Go on from Faith to Faith, and that the Righteouſneſs of God is revealed from Faith to Faith, Rom. 1. 17.

CHAP. VII.

What the Errors are to which Men are obnoxious in Believing. How the Fatal Miſtakes are to be Rectified.

HEB. III. 10.

They do always Err in their Hearts.

THE Apoſtle's Scope in quoting this Pſalm, was to exhort them not to harden their Hearts againſt Chriſt, or againſt the Meſſiah's Voice; and the Pſalmiſt's, even as the Apoſtle's Deſign here, was to preſs this Exhortation by the Example of their Fore-fathers, (who in this were Types of them) that they ſhould take heed of dealing with the Meſſiah, as their Fore-Fathers had done with Moſes, which he enforceth from the fearful Iſſue and Event that beſel them in ſo hardening their Hearts againſt Moſes, that God ſware againſt them in his Wrath, that they ſhould not enter into his Reſt of Canaan, which was therein a Type of Heaven, into which Chriſt's Miniſtry propounds an Entrance by Faith: And this Oath was a moſt binding one; for the form of it (If they ſhall enter in) is an abrupt breaking off in a vehemency of Spirit, and imports the higheſt Reſolution that they ſhall not enter in: It is an uſal Form of Oath, elſewhere uſed by God, as Pſalm 89. 36. If I fail David; it expreſſeth with the greateſt Vehemency that God would not fail him: So Mark 8. 12. If a ſign ſhall be given to this Generation, (for ſo it is in the Greek) which is explained by another Evangeliſt, Mat. 12. 39. A ſign ſhall not be given them: And it is ſuch a kind of Oath, as wherein is expreſſed moſt Peremptorineſs and Reſolution, according to our uſual way of ſpeaking, (Which if I do!) and it is a moſt binding comprehenſive Oath, for it may have all things put in for to ſware by: It is as much as if he had ſaid, If ſo, then I am not God, not true, not juſt, &c. What one will, may be put in to bind it, ſo as it is ſwearing by all things in God. Now the Sin for which he ſware againſt the Jews in the Wilderneſs was Unbelief, which is expreſſed here by not knowing his Ways or Proceedings, and by erring in their Hearts; they are both but Expreſſions of their Unbelief; for ver. 12. he explains it, bidding theſe Take heed that there be not an evil heart of Unbelief: And ſo ver. 18. he again explains it, To whom ſwear he, they ſhould not enter into reſt? thoſe that believe not, ſo as they entred not in becauſe of Unbelief, ver. 19. which we find to have been their ſin: Pſalm 78. 19. Can God furniſh a Table? and ver. 22. God's anger waxed hot, becauſe they believed not on God, nor truſted in his ſalvation. And ſo now under the Goſpel, this is the ſin for which God will ſwear againſt Men. There are three ſins, of which this Unbelief conſiſts, mentioned here:

1. Ignorance of God's ways; for the Mercies of God in pardoning are called his ways, Iſa. 55. 9. My ways are not as their ways: 'Tis ſpoken of Pardoning, which Men not knowing, depart from God.

2. An Erring in Heart, not going the Right Way, but taking Wrong Ways.

3. An hardneſs of Heart, not receiving in, or entertaining the Word with Diſpoſitions and Impreſſions ſuitable to the Word, and ſuch as it requires, with a Soft Heart.

Now the Thing I mean only to inſiſt upon, is, concerning the Erring in Heart; that is, in Unbelief.

Obſerv. That Men by Nature are exceeding apt to err in the way of Faith, and Believing on Chriſt.

The Point is Natural from the Words, as alſo from Rom. 10. and Rom. 9. 32. where he ſhews, how the Jews could never be brought to this way of believing, but being Ignorant of Gods Righteouſneſs, (that is this, of the righteouſneſs by Faith) went ſtill about to ſet up their own ; they turn'd the Ceremonial Law (which was Goſpel in the Type, and taught them to go out of themſelves unto the Meſſiah by Faith, as their true High Prieſt offering himſelf a Sacrifice, and his own Blood for them) into a way of Works, and thought that for theſe Sacrifices, as they came from them, they ſhould be accepted, of which David ſaw the Vanity, Pſal. 51. 16. This I take to be the Apoſtle's Meaning in his Expreſſion, They ſought it as it were by Works, and not by Faith exerciſed on Chriſt, as ſhaddowed out by thoſe Ceremonies. If God would give them any other Laws, Ceremonial, Judicial, or Moral, they would receive them ; Whatever (cry they out) the Lord ſays, we will do, Deut. 5. 27. and the Grave, and Wiſe, Religious and Devout Spirits among them, would ſet themſelves to live thereby, but the way of Faith they could never endure. The Reaſon of it is, becauſe this way of Faith, and of being ſaved by Chriſt, is a new way, whereof there are no foot-ſteps in Nature, neither corrupt Nature, nor pure Nature ; therefore Heb. 10. 20. Chriſt is called the New Way, whereas he Old Way to be ſaved by ſomething in our ſelves Nature hath gone in, nd Conſcience though blindly puts us upon it, (for ſome foot-ſteps there are in corrupt Nature left) but here is no Tract, no Foot-ſtep, no Guide to lead us o Chriſt, but the Holy Ghoſt who alone muſt guide our feet into theſe ways f Peace; thus the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Gal. 5. 5. We through the Spirit wait for the ighteouſneſs of Faith: This he ſpake to the Galathians, who having once receiv'd Chriſt, and clearly committed themſelves to him, did yet recede to Works; and s Abraham after he had receiv'd the Promiſe, turn'd unto Hagar, (who was he Type of the Covenant of Works) hoping to have Iſhmael, (the Typical ſſue of that Covenant) to live in God's ſight, ſo did theſe Galathians turn to a Covenant of Works, hoping to live thereby ; they turn'd from Chriſt to the Law, becauſe this is the way of Nature, and Nature will ever return to it ſelf, nd its own ways : But we, (ſays the Apoſtle) through the Spirit, wait for the Righteouſneſs of Faith: This is above the way of Nature, and therefore it is what the Spirit muſt teach us ; and he doth (ſaith Paul) teach us. Faith alſo call'd the Way by which we have acceſs unto God, Eph. 3. 12. and Acts 4. 27. it is called The door of Faith : Now Men are naturally blind, as the Men f Sodom, and cannot find it, and as Shepherds do, come in at the wrong Door, John 10. 1. ſo Sheep alſo ; for ver. 9. he ſpeaks it of Salvation, and believing n him, as well as of Falſe Teaching.

Let us then deſire God above all things to guide our Hearts aright in the way of believing, or (to transfer the Apoſtles Speech 2 Theſ. 3. 5.) To direct r hearts in believing on, and waiting for Chriſt, as his Phraſe there is, even to uide our hearts into the ways of Peace : For it is a ſecret hidden Tract, and beg a way clean out of a Man's ſelf, a Path which even pure Nature never trod, muſt needs be hard to find. Many ſeek Righteouſneſs, but not in a way of aith at all, as the Phariſees and Papiſts, and thoſe who have no more than Principle of Morality amongſt us, Rom. 9. 32. And even thoſe that pretend aith, and to go that way to Heaven, do yet bewilder themſelves, and go out their way e're they are aware of it. And indeed this way of Faith is a ay that few find, Mat. 7. 14. and let us Miniſters give never ſo plain and preſs Directions, which the Natural Man's Head carries away with him, t without a peculiar Teaching and Leading of the Spirit, his Heart will go rong. As our Life is hid with God in Chriſt, ſo the way to come unto it hid ; the Holy Spirit muſt take us by the Hand, and lead us in unto God d Chriſt : It is like going up to ſome high Lanthorn, or Mynſter, by a ay and an Aſcent which a Man never went before ; he ſees ſeveral ſtairs, d is apt to take this way, and that way, if left alone, and to miſtake dangerouſly too, for if a Man ſets but a ſtep wrong, he may fall and ruine himſelf.

My Purpoſe is not to go over the differences of falſe Faith and true, but only the Miſtakes in the way of Faith, and of believing; and thoſe not all, but a few by way of Inſtance. Nor do I intend to ſpeak of the Hindrances, or Impediments, and Pull-backs in believing; of the ſtumbling blocks that lye in the way, and do hinder poor Souls, (ſuch as are the Diſcouragements from the greatneſs of their ſins, not being humbled enough, &c.) but only of the Errours and Miſtakes in the way of believing. Nor ſhall I Diſcourſe of the Errours about Faith in the Doctrine of it, or the Opinions about it, but of the Practical Errours in Mens Hearts, for of theſe the Text Heb. 3. 10. ſpeaks, They err in their hearts, &c. And,

I ſhall conſider the Errours of Common and Ordinary Profeſſours of Chriſt, of Common Proteſtants, as you call them, who yet are ſound in their Opinions about the Doctrine of Faith. Now their Errours are,

1. When knowing the things that Chriſt hath done and ſuffered, they reſt in a general Aſſent to theſe, as that Chriſt came into the World, and that what is ſaid in the Word of him is all true, and the Promiſes true, and think this is to believe, and ſo reſt in this without any ſpecial Application, as thoſe Profeſſours did Jam. 2. 19. whom therefore James confutes, by telling them, that the Devils believe thus as well as they. If indeed a Man were only to be a Witneſs to the Truth of the Goſpel, and to the Legacies God hath given and bequeathed therein, and that Faith were no more but to give in Teſtimony, (as I acknowlege that in part it is ſuch an Act) then this might be good Faith: But alas, there may be Witneſſes to a Covenant, and who may aſſent to the truth of all the Promiſes, who yet are nothing concerned in them. Witneſſes give Evidence in things wherein they have no Title, and ſo the Angels are ſaid to have the Teſtimony of Jeſus, Rev. 19. 10. and the Devils alſo bare Witneſs to him; but a Man is to believe as a Legatee, that is, as one that hath an Eſtate bequeathed in God's Will, and therefore Appropriation is neceſſary for him. You ſhall no where almoſt in Scripture find, where the General Aſſent to the Goſpel is made and acknowledged to be Faith, but that in the ſame Scripture not far off an act of Application comes in, and is mentioned, as that which makes up compleat that act of General Aſſent; ſo Rom. 10. 9. If thou confeſs with thy Mouth, and believe with thy Heart, that God hath raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved: Here is all put upon an Act of General Aſſent; well, but ver. 11. this Act is expreſſed with an act of Application joined to it, For the Scripture ſays, whoſoever believeth on him ſhall not be aſhamed; ſo it follows: Now to believe on Chriſt is more than an act of General Aſſent, it is to give up my Soul to him to ſave it, and thus to truſt my ſelf with him, to commit my ſelf to him; and to renounce all things elſe is an act of the Will, and not barely of the Underſtanding in General Aſſent, as you may obſerve 1 John 5. 5, 10. compared together.

2. A Second Errour of theſe common Profeſſours is, that when they endeavour to add Application to Faith, yet they take a Not Doubting for that Application, and exerciſe not their Souls at all unto poſitive acts of believing: Their Faith is a meer want of Doubts, not an application of Chriſt with Comfort. As they never doubt but that Chriſt is theirs, ſo they never have many thoughts about him as theirs, but do take it for granted, as a thing they never call in queſtion, and yet it was never proved to them; but Rom. 4. 20. it is not only ſaid, That Abraham ſtaggered not at the Promiſe, but alſo, that He gave glory to God by believing: Not only by not queſtioning God's Power, by a careleſs kind of taking it for granted, but by exerciſing daily acts and thoughts of Faith on the Promiſe, he daily glorified God by acts of believing, which thoughts do glorifie God more than any thoughts elſe.

A Man poſſeſſeth not Chriſt by Faith as he doth Money in his Cupboard, or Evidences of Land that lye by him, which he takes for granted he hath, and yet perhaps never looks on them once in twelve a Month: No, Chriſt is as Meat that a Man feeds upon, chews, digeſts, and his Stomach works upon continually, and the Man lives upon him every day, and that is the Application of Faith, John 6. 53. and if other Bread be our daily food, then

urely Chriſt much more ; and therefore anſwerably it is called The life of aith; The life I live is by the Faith on the Son of God, Gal. 2. 20. Now ife is a Continuation of Action and Motion ; and as the Heart is the Princi-le of Life, and always beats, and if it lies ſtill a Man dies, ſuch is Faith, it is ot a ſleeping thing, a not doubting ſimply that Chriſt is mine, but a continual ctive whetting my thoughts upon Chriſt as mine, or caſting my ſelf upon him o be mine, a living on him, and in him ; but theſe Men live in a good Opinion f themſelves, and of Chriſt's being theirs, and they are not ſued nor troubled in t by Satan's Tentations, and no Doubts come to put them out of poſſeſſion, and his they account Faith, and take it for granted they ſhall never be caſt out.

3. Many in their Practiſe do make this Application of Faith to be a believ-ng, and a Perſwaſion only, that there Eſtates are good, and ſo make Faith on-y a good Perſwaſion and Opinion of their preſent Condition ; ſo as the Object, he Terminus of their Faith, is their own Eſtate, and not Chriſt and his Love ; heir Faith is not a good Opinion of him, or founded upon the daily thoughts hey have of his Merit, Satisfaction, Mercy, Grace, Righteouſneſs, &c. But heir Faith is a good Opinion of themſelves, ariſing out of the Self-flattery of heir own Hearts, ſo as they honour not Chriſt in their thoughts ſo much as hemſelves ; this is a judgment of Charity to themſelves rather than Faith on Chriſt. I call it that Charitable Opinion which one Chriſtian is bound to have f others, that they are the Children of God, and that their Eſtates are good, nd that they are in Chriſt ; now ſuch a Charitable Opinion of themſelves (whereby, as the Apoſtle ſays of the Hebrews, they are perſwaded good things f themſelves) is the only Faith of a great many Perſons, but this is not to elieve on Chriſt, but on themſelves. And that their own Eſtates is indeed he Object thus of their Faith, is evident by this, That if any Man go about o diſcover their preſent Natural Condition (whilſt they are without true Faith) ot to be good, they preſently fly out, and ſay, you would bring me to Un-elief and Diſpair, (for an apprehenſion that their preſent Eſtates is good, is hat, and all that which they account Faith) when as indeed thoſe that ſeek heir Good would but bring them from a falſe Belief of their Eſtates, and of hemſelves, to a good and a true belief in Chriſt, and upon God's Free-grace, hich are the prime Objects of Faith.

4. Some Men, if they can but get daily into their Hearts ſuch kind of houghts about Chriſt as they hear Believers are ſaid to have, then they think hey apply Chriſt indeed, when yet indeed they bring in as true a formality n the matter of believing as they do in matters of Duties, without real ap-prehenſions of Chriſt, or without the Power of them on their Hearts, and without framing their Affections ſuitably to the things which they believe. They o but mumble over a few ſet Thoughts of Faith, as they do their Prayers, without communion with God ; if they think over ſuch and ſuch thoughts of aith towards Chriſt every day, (as Papiſts uſe to ſay over ſuch and ſuch Prayers very day) and can but force their guilty Hearts with any quietneſs to entertain uch thoughts, and to let them have paſſage through them ; and if they can ut keep down Doubts, that they may not ariſe to interrupt them in ſuch houghts, then they verily think that they believe, when as yet theſe thoughts aſs through them but as Drink doth throw Men in a Dropſie, they digeſt t not into Nouriſhment and Subſtance, but it runs through them, and leaves no trength, no vigour behind. Whereas to apply Chriſt, is not ſimply to take him into thy thoughts only, and think thus and thus barely of him, but to trike forth a Sprig or Fibre from every Faculty into him, to be rooted in him, o draw Nouriſhment from him, to digeſt him, to give up thy Soul to him, and to be one with him, John 6. 56.

5. A Fifth Error in the Faith of this kind of common Proteſtants is, That though they put ſome Truſt and Confidence in Chriſt, and in their Opinions and Sayings, profeſs that they renounce all but Chriſt, yet ſtill ſecretly their own Righteouſneſs is the ground even of that their very Truſt on Chriſt, and ſo they make themſelves the Rock of that their truſting upon that only truly Rock Chriſt : Thus they uſe to think, that Chriſt will rather ſave them for the ſmallneſs of their ſins, and good Diſpoſitions, and ſo that in that reſpect they are nearer to Chriſt than others. The young Man that came to Chriſt, came indeed, but encouraged by his having kept the Commandments from his youth. Theſe Men ſtand as it were on two boughs, whereof the one is a rotten one, and ſo muſt needs fall and periſh: One foot they have on Chriſt, but another upon themſelves, on their own good Works, which though they truſt not in under the Notion of Merit, (as the Papiſts hold) yet in a lower way they truſt in them, as thoſe which their Souls in their confidence put their weight moſt upon, and as thoſe which commend them to God, and make them rather accepted by God; and ſo They truſt not perfectly on the Grace revealed by Chriſt, 1 Pet. 1. 13. Theſe uſe Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs as many Miniſters that are in ſuit for Livings do the King's Title, they procure that alſo to ſtrengthen their own Title, which they have otherwiſe from their Patrons, but rely not chiefly on the King's, but to make all ſure do take it in. Such is the caſe of theſe Men, their Souls have ſecretly recourſe to their own goodneſs natural, more than unto Chriſt, although in the mean time they are ſound in their Opinions about Juſtification by Faith, and by Chriſt only: For look, as all Men by Nature are Atheiſts in Heart, ſaying therein, that There is no God, when yet their Opinions about God are right and good, ſo theſe Juſtitiaries are Papiſts in their hearts, and therein they practiſe this Popery, whilſt they are Proteſtants in Judgment and Opinion in the point of Juſtification by Chriſt alone.

All theſe have had all this Application and Thoughts of Faith, without being humbled and emptied of themſelves, ſo as it is but the Natural Opinion of themſelves, which out of ſelf (which was never yet thruſt out of them) Men uſe to have of themſelves; ſo as the Mind is full of it ſelf, and Chriſt doth but ſwim upon the top of their Thoughts; they build Chriſt upon Sand, and digged not firſt into themſelves to let him in as a Foundation, as he that built upon a Rock did, Luke 6. 48. he caſt out all falſe Earth, and did let in a foundation: But Men though they build upon Chriſt, yet they lay him upon their own Earth undigged up at all, and ſo the Waves do eaſily come between their thoughts and Chriſt, and Temptations part them in the Iſſue, and overthrow all.

Secondly, I ſhall give ſome further Inſtances of Men ſomething humbled for ſin, and of the Miſtakes that ſuch are apt to fall into in the way of believing.

1. If Men come to be a little humbled, then they are apt to apply Chriſt too ſoon: If the Earth be ſcarr'd and raiſed a little, they let in Chriſt as a Foundation preſently, when yet all the falſe Earth is not caſt out: Self flattery helps them to receive the Word with Joy immediately, as the ſtony-ground did; or if they be prick'd a little, they apply the Plaiſter when the corrupt Matter is not let out, nor the Sore launch'd to the bottom, and ſo a ſlight apprehenſion of Chriſt skins over the Sore again, and the Core in it, and in the end it breaks out worſe than ever. The Law is a School-Maſter to drive to Chriſt, but ſome run away from School too ſoon, and ſo want the grounds of Learning, and ſo come to nothing; when in the Univerſity, as I may allude, they never throughly parſed their former Eſtate by Nature, nor ſaw all the faults in it, and therefore all the Duties and Exerciſes they perform anew are falſe and improper; therefore he in Luke 6. is ſaid not only to have digged, but to have digged deep: Now by this digging deep, or being humbled, I do not mean deep Terrors, (for it is not neceſſary that all Earth ſhould be digged out with Pick-axes, God uſeth ſuch Tools unto none but only hard Earth, but ſmall Shovels and Spades may empty ſome) but ſo as Men muſt be throughly emptied by a ſpiritual Inſight into their former Eſtates, and ſee to the bottom of the naughtineſs of it, and their own unability to help themſelves, e're the Rock Chriſt be laid.

2. A Second Errror of ſuch, is, that the Ground of their applying and taking Chriſt, is an Encouragement from this, that they are not ſuch great Sinners: And ſo though as they are ſinners, they ſee that they have need of Chriſt, yet becauſe they have not been ſo great ſinners, they think they ſhall the ſooner be received by him, and thus they are encouraged to believe: They think, becauſe that they have fewer Debts, they ſhall the ſooner be forgiven; whereas it is all one with God and Chriſt to juſtifie a ſmall ſinner and a great; and as the greatneſs of any Man's Sins averts not God a whit the more from juſtifying that Man, ſo the ſmallneſs of a Man's ſins moves him not a whit the more to pardon a Man. Free-grace as it reſpects no good to allure it, (for it is free) ſo nor no evil to put it off from us, nor leſs Evil to incline it towards us. In this matter of Juſtification (it being freely by the Grace of God, Rom. 3. 23, 24.) All (ſays he) come ſhort and are alike, there is no difference in this reſpect. As the diſtance between the Heavens and the Earth is ſuch as Hills are not conſiderably nearer to the Heavens than Mole-hills, and the diſtance is ſo vaſt above both as the difference of Hills and Mole-hills holds no proportion, but is nothing, ſo it is in this caſe; for any Man therefore to think, that becauſe he is a ſmaller ſinner then others, he ſhall be the ſooner accepted of God, is to derogate from Free-grace, and to build ſomething on himſelf. But,

Thirdly, I ſhall give Inſtances in Men that have been more throughly humbled, and of the Errors they are liable unto.

1. When Men have been humbled, and terrified for ſin by God's Wrath, and filled full of Diſquietment, (which is counted by ſome the only deep Humiliation) then they reſt in this, becauſe they have been thus humbled, and ſo build not upon Chriſt, but upon their own ſight of Sin and Miſery: If indeed Man's Heart had this Rock in the Womb of it, (as the Earth hath other Rocks, ſo as it were but digging 'till you come at a Rock that is buried in it) if Men's Hearts had Chriſt under that falſe Earth, which were to be digged out, then indeed it were but digging, and ſo then afterwards building; but there is this difference, that as Chriſt muſt be laid into the Heart, and this after a digging out the falſe Earth, ſo the end of this emptying us by Humiliation is but to make room for Chriſt, the Heart being full afore of it ſelf: So that after all, this Rock muſt be brought in, and laid (de Novo) anew, 1 Cor. 3. 11. Chriſt as a Foundation is ſaid to be laid, not as growing there, and therefore after Men have digged, if then they let all alone, and ſay, they have been troubled for ſin, and know the ſmart of it, and therefore Chriſt will ſave them, they build on Emptineſs: This is as if Men ſhould think the ground muſt needs be good, and ſeed muſt needs be ſown in it, becauſe it hath been broke up and plowed, when as many fallow Grounds are plowed. Becauſe they have been under the School-maſter's Hand, therefore they think they are come to Chriſt, and muſt needs have Learning; when as many come up to the higheſt form at School, that are never ſent to the Univerſity, or admitted into a Colledge, and many are ſoundly laſhed, and yet get no Learning. Though none can be pardoned 'till they be condemned by the Law, yet many are condemned, and put into Stocks and Irons, that are never pardoned; theſe have a Promiſe, Come to me ye that are weary and heavy laden, and they make uſe of it as of a Promiſe ſpeaking Eaſe to their very being weary, whereas it is but a Promiſe of Invitation unto ſuch to come to Chriſt, ſo as without coming they ſhall never be eaſed. Eaſe lies not in being weary, but in coming to Chriſt, and yet many are heavy laden that come not to him, but would get Eaſe and Reſt in and from this very thing, that they were once heavy laden.

2. If Men eſcape this Error, and do not reſt in being humbled, but begin to build and fill up the Hole they digged, yet they lay not in the firſt place Chriſt as their Foundation, they lay not in Chriſt nor God's rich Mercy in him as the firſt thing to fill up their own Emptineſs, but they fill up the Hole they have digged with New Earth of their own New Obedience and Reformation, Duties and Performances, and build upon them, what in Humiliation was diſcovered amiſs, that they endeavour to reform, and do begin to turn over a new leaf; the Sins which were ſet upon their Conſciences they turn from, and mourn for, and then build their Faith on theſe Reformations, ſo leaving Chriſt out, and not laying the ſtrong Rock, the everlaſting Foundation of God's rich Mercy in him alone, ſo as their Humiliation hath ſet them awork to get Grace and Reformation, but not to get Chriſt, and to make him their aim, and him in the firſt and chief place, which yet was Paul's Aim, Phil. 3. 8. (which place

I delight often to urge) That I may win Chriſt; where Chriſt is made the aim, (as you ſee) and God's free Mercy in him the aim of Faith. And this is another Error and Out-let at which Men leave the way of Faith quite, which Error ſome that have Faith begun are apt to run into: And though at firſt they were ſet in the right way, yet go out, and leave aiming at Chriſt, and exerciſing Faith on him, and fall a reſting in reforming. Theſe, as the Coloſſians, are diverted from Chriſt to the Rudiments of their own Hearts. This is the way of Reaſon indeed, which thinks doing the contrary ſufficient to make amends for the former Miſcarriages: But this is not a way of Faith, and this is as rank Popery (though finer) as any is at Rome, and yet ſecretly practiſed in Mens Hearts.

3. When Men hear of Chriſt as a Mark ſet up, and that him they muſt have: And ſo now they have ſet Chriſt up as their aim, and look to the having him alone, becauſe they hear this is Neceſſary to Salvation; yet then this Error is apt to fall on them, and prevent them of true Faith, if Chriſt rectifie it not, that they think to Get him by their own Endeavours; and that ſecret Conceit carrying them on in all, undermines Faith as well as the former; for they think to make out Chriſt, and work out a Faith out of themſelves, by their own Endeavours for time to come. The former were diverted from Chriſt unto their own New acquired Righteouſneſs and Obedience, and fell a doting upon that, but theſe have Chriſt in their Eye, and do purſue after him, but yet their Hearts ſecretly make account to attain him through their own Endeavours. But the Soul muſt be emptied as well of all Conceits of its own Ability for time to come as of all Opinion of its own Righteouſneſs paſt or preſent, or Chriſt doth not become all in all. As Men do derogate from Chriſt, and Free-grace that beſtows him as a Gift, if they have an Eye to their own Graces and Obedience inſtead of him, ſo alſo if they have an Eye, or ſecret Confidence of their own Endeavours, thereby to attain him, Chriſt is not ſet up as yet, ſo as he muſt be in ſuch a Heart. It is true, Men may and muſt endeavour after Faith, as Heb. 4. 11. Let us endeavour to enter into that reſt; entring into reſt being there put for believing, as appears ver. 3. yet we muſt uſe Endeavours but as Means, wherein Chriſt gives the Heart ſtrength to believe, and conveys power to believe, and ſo to endeavour in a waiting wholly on Chriſt to have Faith given. So as Men muſt come to ſee their own utter unability to believe, and that as God finds them Chriſt, ſo he muſt give them Hands to take and receive him by. In Rom. 10. 6, 7. we have a Caveat againſt this Error; for ſpeaking of the way of believing, and that Chriſt is to be believed, and confeſſed to be the only Saviour, yet ſince the Heart will be apt to ſay, Who ſhall aſcend up to Heaven, to bring Chriſt down to me, therefore he there ſays, Say not in thy Heart who ſhall aſcend? &c. The Heart is apt to be ſetting up Ladders of its own making, and to ſay in its ſelf, I will go pray, and ſeek Chriſt, and ſo get him, but thou muſt to Chriſt as near thee, to give thee power.

4. When the Heart is humbled, and emptied of all Righteouſneſs paſt, of all Reformations and Righteouſneſs, and Endeavours to come, and knows that Chriſt beſtows himſelf for none of thoſe, but is wholly and abſolutely free in it, yet when the Soul is thus left ſtript and naked, and no Righteouſneſs, no Abilities of its own do encourage it, yet ſtill the meer ſelf-flattery in ones Spirit that ſpringeth immediately from Self-love, will be apt to ſtep in, and help one to think, That rather I than another ſhall have mercy; that although God ſhews Mercy freely without reſpect to any thing within us, yet I (will the Heart be apt to think) rather than another ſhall find it, and God will have pitty on (me) rather than another: This ſame ſelf will flatter one too much; which thought, though not ſeconded by any reſpect to any Righteouſneſs, or any thing of a Man's own, you will find will ariſe from that very ſelf-flattery in a Man, from which it is natural to a Man's Spirit to think well, and hope well of a Man's ſelf; even as Peter in another caſe ſaid, Though all others, yet not I. There is a Natural Self-confidence ariſing out of that great Love which we bear to our ſelves, that will offer its help to form up our Faith for us. As Haman thought, I am the man the King will honour; ſo the Heart is apt to think, I am the man God will ſave; and this not ſo uch from any Encouragement or drawing of the Heart by God, but out of the atural forwardneſs to think well of our ſelves. Labour therefore to find your ncouragement to believe to come from the conſideration of what is in Chriſt, om his All-ſufficiency, Free-grace and Love alluring you, and not from your wn Hearts perſwaſion meerly; liſten not to what ſelf-flattery will ſay, but what hriſt will ſpeak in a Promiſe; and acknowledge in believing not only The freeneſs f Grace, (that it reſpects no Qualification in any, and ſhews mercy for no Righ-ouſneſs, Ability, &c.) but alſo the Soveraignty of that Grace ſhewn too towards hoſe Perſons whom it accepteth; ſee how that when all Perſons are ſtript f all Qualifications, and are preſented naked before God, and as deveſted f all Conſiderations of good or ill in them, that ſhould move him for r againſt them; that beſides this freedom in accepting without reſpect to ich conſiderations, he ſheweth a Soveraignty in his Gracious Will, in accepting his Man rather than that, and which he exerciſeth in his accepting you. And he thoughts that this depends thus upon the mere Soveraignty of God, will keep own and poiſe this ſame (ſelf,) which elſe will be apt to encourage ones Heart bove what it ſhould; the thought of that Soveraignty will lay thee yet lower, nd daſh all ſelf-flattering Conceits that would ſtrike in to make out a Faith, nd give a Hope: It will make thee to ſee, that any one is as fair for it as thou, and hat God out of a Soveraignty accepteth or refuſeth, and that ſo it falleth as his Will itcheth; only withall thou may'ſt think, that thou art as fair for it as any other, ven in that reſpect, and ſo there is no cauſe of Diſcouragement. Do but only make the Scales even in thy Apprehenſions and Hopes for Mercy, and let no Qualifications in thy ſelf, nor no ſelf-flattering Conceits of thy ſelf caſt the Ballance, ut reduce thy Faith to a pure abſolute dependance upon God's Will for thy acceptation, and ſo ſhalt thou find God from himſelf in the end ſecretly ſwaying thy Heart to reſt on his Love, and to quiet thy Heart in ſo doing, and then hall thy Faith give him the whole, full and entire Honour, in accepting thee, and derogate nothing from him.

5. Many make a Promiſe the ſole ground of their Faith, and look no farther than the Letter of it; and ſo as the Jews were deceived with the Letter of the of the Law, and ſaw not into the bottom of Moſes's Miniſtry, ſo ſome are deceived with the Letter of the Promiſes, and look not to Chriſt in them; they ſee not that he is the Jewel in the Caſket, but reſt upon the Superſcription without, and look not to what is within; they have got ſome Promiſe or other, but they never regarded to believe on Chriſt in and by that Promiſe, who is the great Promiſe that is conveyed in every Promiſe; In whom all the Promiſes are Yea and Amen: They ſtick in the Letter, take the whole ſhell, but crack it not, whereas it is the Kernel within that is the Food of Faith. A Child hath more Wit than theſe Men, give him a Nut, and he will deſire you to crack it, for there is a Kernel in it that he deſires, or elſe he will bid you take it again: So ſays Faith, when it comes to a Promiſe, give me Chriſt in it, or I will have nothing.

6. Men ſeeking Chriſt, and finding ſome ſweetneſs, their Faith reſts in that, and looks not out ſtill for Chriſt himſelf and Union and Communion with his Perſon; a Preſent is ſent, they rejoyce in that, and they let the Man that it came from go, Rom. 5. 1. One fruit of Faith is having Peace with God; And not only ſo, but to joy in God through Chriſt, ver. 11. Mark it, it is not only a Joy from God, but in God through Chriſt. Take heed then of reſting in Joy infuſed, when God and Chriſt are not the immediate Object of thy Joy, and Communion with them in believing the chief thing deſired by thee.

7. Men hearing that it is Chriſt's Righteouſneſs imputed by Faith muſt ſave us, they ſeek for the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt as it were ſevered from himſelf, and the aim of their Faith is carried forth after his Righteouſneſs, without ſeeking him firſt or chiefly, but ſeeking his Righteouſneſs primarily, to be theirs at God's hand; as if the ſuing for the Money which this Surety of ours paid for us, and that God ſhould accept it for us, were all: No, the Surety himſelf muſt be ours firſt, and that is the right way of Faith, to ſeek Chriſt firſt, and then to apply his Righteouſneſs for Pardon. That was Paul's Method, firſt to be found in him, then his next thought was of not having his own Righteouſneſs, but his, Phil. 3. 8, 9.

Part II.

Though this I muſt add, that it is not Chriſt ſimply or abſtractly, but Chriſt concretely conſidered, with his Righteouſneſs, as he is a Saviour and Mediatour, and as given for the remiſſion of Sins, who is the Object of Faith, and which the Believer hath in his Eye: For he is firſt egg'd forward on to lay hold on Chriſt by the ſight of ſin, and as ſeeing Righteouſneſs in Chriſt that will pardon, yet ſo as he is to believe On him to that end, that In his Name he may receive remiſſion of Sins, Acts 10. 43. and ſo as to believe upon himſelf firſt, and in believing to cloſe with his Perſon firſt.

8. Many Men take Chriſt with his Benefits, but yet chiefly for his Benefits; and that is as bad as the former: This is to marry him for his Portion. As you are not to ſever it from himſelf, ſo nor to deſire him only for it, for you hear both muſt go together, firſt him, then his Righteouſneſs: That is Paul's Method; Phil. 3. 8, 9. That I may win Chriſt, him firſt; then follows, Not having mine own Righteouſneſs, but the Righteouſneſs of God by Faith; that is, Chriſt's Righteouſneſs imputed by God unto Faith.

CHAP. I.

That Juſtifying Faith is not Aſſurance of our Perſonal Intereſt in Chriſt, though it be an Aſſurance of the truth of the Promiſe.

1 JOHN V. 12.

He that hath the Son hath Life, and he that hath not the Son hath not Life.

THE Firſt Concluſion we will begin with and premiſe as a Foundation to what follows, is, that that Act of Faith which juſtifies a Sinner, is diſtinct from knowing he hath Eternal Life, and may therefore be without it, becauſe it doth not neceſſarily contain prevailing Aſſurance in it. By prevailing Aſſurance I mean, ſuch an Aſſurance as overpowereth Doubts and Senſe to the contrary, ſo as in the Believer's Knowledge he is able to ſay, Chriſt is is mine, and my Sins are forgiven; ſuch an Aſſurance whereby a Man is a Conqueror, as Paul ſpeaks, Rom. 8. 37.

8. 37. when he expreſſeth ſuch ſtrong Aſſurance. And this I firſt lay down not only for more clear and orderly proceeding in this Point, but alſo thereby to allay the Cavils and Exceptions which Men have againſt the Doctrine of Aſſurance. When it is affirmed, that none are in the Eſtate of Grace, and true Believers, but only thoſe who are, or have been undoubtedly aſſured by an over-powering Light of the Spirit in their own ſenſe, that Chriſt is theirs, and that their ſins are forgiven them; when it is aſſerted, that then, and not till then they did begin to believe, by ſuch an Aſſertion the Generation of many juſt ones is condemned, whoſe Faith either thorough weakneſs never came to ſuch a growth of Perſwaſion, or thorough Temptations and Prevalence of Fears and Doubts are interrupted in it, who yet cleave to Chriſt with full purpoſe of Heart, and walk obediently towards him in all their Ways. And indeed, if that were the meaning when Aſſurance is ſpoken for, that it were made the Eſſential Act of Faith whereby a Believer is juſtified, there were juſt cauſe for many and great Exceptions. And yet my Scope further herein is, not to encourage any to reſt in ſuch a Faith, without ſuch Aſſurance, and content themſelves with it, as many do, making a bad uſe of ſuch a Doctrine, and ſo neglect ſeeking for a further Work of Aſſurance to be ſuper-added: No, the next Concluſions ſhall manifeſt the contrary; but the intent of this preſent Concluſion is, to keep ſuch as have their Hearts drawn to Chriſt, and upheld to believe, (though without ſuch prevailing Aſſurance) from ſuch diſcouraging thoughts, as therefore to think their Eſtates accurſed, and that they cannot be in the Eſtate of Grace, becauſe they want ſuch a Work: For if Faith may be without it, then ſuch Souls that do entertain ſuch thoughts do entertain an Untruth, and that againſt their own Souls, and the Work of God in them, and make him a Lyar. And alſo my End is to keep off thoſe that have aſſurance ſuper-added to Faith, from cenſuring the preſent Condition of many of their Brethren, as if they were without Grace, becauſe they want ſuch Aſſurance.

Firſt, I will therefore firſt prove, That true Faith may be without ſuch Aſſurance.

1. Becauſe Juſtification and Bleſſedneſs hath been pronounced to ſuch a Condition as hath wanted this Aſſurance, and this by Chriſt himſelf, who is to judge at the latter day who are in the Eſtate of Grace and who are not: Thus Mat. 5. 3. (in the firſt Sermon, whereof we have the Notes of Bleſſed Perſons recorded) he pronounceth a bleſſedneſs to the poor in Spirit, to the meek, to thoſe that mourn, to thoſe that hunger and thirſt after Righteouſneſs, all which Eſtates want aſſurance: Now Chriſt's Scope was not to draw thoſe in which ſuch Diſpoſitions were, to begin now to believe, for that were to found Faith upon Conditions; but his Scope is to ſhew that ſuch have true Faith begun. Poverty of Spirit is when they apprehend themſelves poor and empty, it is not being ſpiritually poor, (for then they could not be pronounced bleſſed) but an apprehenſion of their Condition as ſuch, (oppoſite to the apprehenſion the Church of Laodicea had of themſelves, who thought themſelves rich, and that they had need of nothing) and ſo implys want of Aſſurance. So mourning under the ſenſe of their Sin and Miſery implys wanting Comfort, as the Promiſe that they ſhall be comforted implys, which Comfort aſſurance brings always with it, and is indeed the thing promiſed to theſe, afterwards to be given them: So hungring after Righteouſneſs implys emptineſs, and the thing promiſed is fullneſs, ſo as all theſe want aſſurance, and all theſe Chriſt pronounceth bleſſed, and none are or can be called bleſſed, but ſuch whoſe ſins are at the preſent forgiven; as Paul after him defines the bleſſedneſs the Scripture ſpeaks of to conſiſt in this, Rom. 4. 6, 7. David deſcribeth the bleſſedneſs of the Man unto whom God imputeth Righteouſneſs; he gives a Deſcription, a Definition of it, that it lyes in this, Bleſſed are thoſe whoſe Iniquities are forgiven, whoſe Sins are covered: If bleſſedneſs then lies herein, then ſurely the Eſtate of thoſe Perſons was ſuch as their ſins were forgiven, and yet they wanted aſſurance, and yet not Faith, for a Man is juſtified only thereby, Rom. 4. 5. To him that believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteouſneſs: Therefore theſe that were poor ſpirit, that mourned, that hungred and thirſted after Righteouſneſs, had Faith lay at the bottom, as is neceſſarily to be ſuppoſed. For a Man never comes to be ruly poor in ſpirit, till he ſees the Riches that are in Chriſt and in Free grace ; r it is Chriſt's fullneſs, and the ſight of it, that empties a Man more than all e legal ſight of his Inſufficiency and Miſery ; and yet the Believer in the ſight f all this fullneſs ſtill thinks himſelf therefore deeply poor, (wanting Aſſurance) r tho' he admires that there ſhould be ſuch Riches, yet he hath no ſhare in hem in his ſenſe yet, and no power to lay hold on them. Faith in its firſt act iſcovers at once with one Eye a Man to be poor and ungodly, and with the ther looks up to Chriſt's Riches, and to him that juſtifies the ungodly, Rom. 4. 5. o hungering and thirſting after Chriſt's Righteouſneſs (to inſtance in no more) oth imply Faith as the bottom of it ; for none can ſo hunger truly, but e that ſees the true worth and preciouſneſs of Chriſt ; Unto them that believe ly Chriſt is precious, 1 Pet. 2. 7. and Chriſt is precious not out of Self-love on- , but out of an Apprehenſion of the ſuitableneſs and fitneſs of all that is in im for them, for true hunger alſo implys that : What makes the Stomach hun- er after things but ſuitableneſs ? Thus the Soul hath an inſtinct to Chriſt as s Meat and Nouriſhment, and that ſuppoſeth Faith alſo, (though Aſſurance e the eating of him with Comfort and filling Contentment) and as hunger oes afore eating, ſo Faith goes afore Aſſurance. Now if ſuch Souls Chriſt ronounced bleſſed here, ſurely if they ſhould dye in this condition, at the lat- r day he would not go back from his Word, but he would ſay, Come ye bleſ- d alſo. Neither is their Bleſſedneſs pronounced to a future Condition to come, hich theſe Diſpoſitions made way for, for (beſides what is before ſaid) Chriſt the very Words tells us, he ſpeaks it of their preſent condition, Theirs is the ingdom of God : This he ſpake to ſuch as John's Miniſtry had converted, and hat truly, who (as it is in Acts 19. 4.) did teach the People not Humiliation nly, but Faith alſo, ſaying to the People, that They ſhould believe on Jeſus Chriſt. nd Chriſt he comes after to preach aſſurance to ſuch, and to tell them, that heir ſins were forgiven them. As a farther Confirmation, I will add to this an nſtance or two.

1. Let us look on the poor Publican, and let us conſider his Eſtate, which hriſt there approves, and we ſhall find it to have Faith in it, and yet not ſſurance, Luke 18. the Phariſee he had an aſſurance that his Eſtate was good, uilt upon himſelf ; for ver. 9. Chriſt's Scope was to diſcover their preſump- ion that truſted in themſelves that they were righteous, and to this end tells hem of a poor Publican that indeed comes into God's Preſence, but it is at a iſtance ; He ſtood afar off : Had he had aſſurance, it would have encouraged him o have drawn near with boldneſs, Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with full aſ- ſurance of Faith. But on the contrary, he was ſo much caſt down with ſhame, hat he could not lift up his Eyes to Heaven, and yet he lifts up an eye of aith ; Lord be merciful to me a ſinner : He flies out of himſelf, and hath recourſe o God's Mercy, which (by all his Carriage, and the Oppoſition made) he had o aſſurance of. The preſumptuous Phariſee could do nothing but give thanks, is aſſurance was ſo great. This Man in an humble Prayer beggs that Mercy hat he yet wanted in his own ſenſe, and yet Chriſt pronounceth the ſtate of his Man juſtified, ver. 14. I tell you, (ſaith Chriſt) (and I promiſe you I will elieve him) that this Man went to his Houſe juſtified, rather than the other : He was then certainly juſtified ; and therefore out of his Example he makes his Promiſe to ſuch as are truly in his Condition, That they ſhall be exalted, n the ſame verſe.

2. That alſo of the Woman of Canaan, to whom Chriſt would give no out- ward Word of Encouragement, who yet had true Faith, which Chriſt extra- ordinarily commends, Mat. 15. 22, to 26.

Beſides theſe Inſtances, I will give you Demonſtrations of it, and then the Reaſons and Grounds of it.

1. The firſt Demonſtration is drawn from the ſtate of Deſertion, wherein a true Believer may want Aſſurance, when yet he continues to believe ; For the juſt live by faith, Hab. 2. 4. Therefore as when the Heart ceaſeth beating, the Man dies for it, ſo when Faith ceaſeth exerciſing it ſelf, the Believer would dye. And again, That which is a true act of Faith to continue our Union with Chriſt, may be a true act to begin that Union : Now it is not Aſſurance con-

Part II. tinues our Union and being in the eſtate of Grace, therefore it doth not neceſſarily begin it. And now then if in the courſe of a Chriſtian's Life he be brought to live by Faith without Aſſurance, then much more may he begin to live by it, for at the beginning it may be ſupoſed weakeſt; as a Man that hath had Experience he hath lived may be brought into a ſwound, when he doth not perceive himſelf to live, or into a Frenzy, ſo as he doth think himſelf dead, and to live amongſt Ghoſts, (as ſome have done) ſo much more may a Child that is in the Womb live and not know it. Thus Heman likewiſe as to his ſpiritual ſtate thought himſelf (thorough a Frenzy) a Man dead, and to be free among the dead, and to be one whom God had cut off, and remembered no more, Pſal. 88. 5. and from whom God did not only hide his Face in regard of the light of his Countenance, (which ſome have ſaid is the only deſertion can befall a Chriſtian, in which ſtill he retains his Aſſurance, and doubts not but that God ſtill is his God, though he hides his face) but had caſt him off, ver. 14. he ſays, he was one cut off by his Hand; and yet when Heman had ſuch deſperate thoughts prevailing over Aſſurance, he had Faith, and expreſſeth it in ver. 1. O Lord God of my Salvation, I have cryed night and day afore thee: Mark it, and you will find that it is juſt the voice of Faith, wanting Aſſurance: He cannot call him his God; he ſays not, My God, my God, as Chriſt could, when he wanted the light of God's Countenance, (aſſurance of Faith remaining in him when the Comfort of Faith was wanting) but yet Heman doth look up to God as the God of his Salvation, that is, as that God who muſt ſave him, and in whom his Salvation (if ever he be ſaved) lies, from whom he looks for Salvation, and to whom he hath recourſe for it, tho' he could not ſay, God is my Salvation: Yea, and thus it had been with him from his youth, ver. 15. either he had once Aſſurance, and now had loſt it, or from his youth and firſt beginning had ever wanted it; and if it was either of the two, the Argument holds good to prove Faith not to be Aſſurance, for ſtill he hath recourſe to God by Faith in Prayer, and ſo had Faith in his Heart, when yet he was under Terrours and Appprehenſions of God's caſting him off. Why ſhould I inſtance in Job, David, Jonah, and many more? I will only give that Direction in Iſa. 50. 10. the Prophet having in the verſes immediately afore expreſſed that triumphing aſſurance, It is God that juſtifies me, who ſhall condemn? Now, (faith he) if a Soul that fears God wants ſuch a Light as comfortably enableth his Soul to ſay ſo, yet Let him truſt in the Name of the Lord. You ſee then that he might exerciſe Faith in that condition: And to ſay the caſe of this Man the Prophet ſpeaks off was not a State of Juſtification, is a groſs abſurdity; for the Prophet calls God his God; though the dejected Soul could not ſay ſo, yet the Prophet ſays ſo for him.

As for thoſe that will ſay, that Faith is a triumphing, a prevailing Aſſurance, I would refer them but to ten or twenty years Experience, which may (if they be not the more wary) lamentably confute them; for they may fall into this Darkneſs as well as Job did, and then if they do ſo, what is the Faith they live by? It is that of Heman's, a caſting themſelves upon the God of their Salvation, a cleaving to him; it is that of the Church in the like diſtreſs, Lament. 3. 24. The Lord is my portion, ſays my Soul, therefore will I hope in him: God did not aloud ſay to her Soul that he was her God, but he enabled her Soul to ſay that he was her Portion; that is, to pitch on him, and chooſe him, and reſt in him, and betake her ſelf to him, as all the Good and Portion ſhe ever looks for, which act of Recumbency afforded Hope as the conſequent of it. Faith notes out a betaking a Man's ſelf to God, a choice of him as a Man's portion, as one all the Good I look for lyes in, and therefore I will hope in him, for Help is to be had only in him, and from him, and I will do any thing that there may be hope for me. Now if ſometimes thoſe who have Aſſurance are brought to this Faith, then ſurely it is good Faith; and if it be good Faith after aſſurance, then it may be ſo before; and yet to this one that hath had aſſurance may be brought.

2. That there may be true Faith without Aſſurance, is evident from this, that if Doubting be a Corruption, as you will eaſily grant it is, then as all other Corruptions may prevail againſt the Spirit, and other Graces, ſo may doubting prevail againſt aſſurance of Faith, and there is no more Priviledge of Freedom promiſed from the one than the other. If David may fall into a groſs ſin, and Murther and Adultery may prevail, I know not but that Doubting may prevail too: For Believers are perfectly freed from the prevailing of no ſin but that againſt the Holy Ghoſt; and if the power of ſin may prevail againſt Grace in other Faculties, I know not but the guilt of Sin may prevail againſt Aſſurance in the Conſcience alſo. And further, I am ſure, that though the Holy Ghoſt, the Witneſs, be God, yet the Light he witneſſeth by is but a Creature, a Beam, a Voice, a Saying to a Man's Soul, Thy ſins are forgiven; and therefore as other prevailing workings may be interrupted, ſo may that alſo, and then what Faith have Men recourſe unto but ſuch as is a caſting a Man's ſelf on Free-grace, that Faith which ſtood them in ſtead at firſt? It is not the remembrance of his former Aſſurance will uphold a Man, for he may grow blind, and forget he was purged from his old ſins, 2 Pet. 1. 9. He ſpeaks of Aſſurance in that and the following verſes. Aſſurance depends on ſtrict and holy walking, and ſo may be interrupted by our Remiſneſs and Negligence.

3. That true Faith may be where prevailing Aſſurance is not, appears by this, That the Senſe of Belief of General Principles and Foundations of Faith may be over-clouded and prevailed againſt by Temptations to the contrary, and by the Atheiſm of a Man's Heart, ſo that a poor Believer ſhall ſay, I Doubt whether there be a God or no, whether the Scriptures be true or no, I cannot find I believe the Truth of the Promiſes. Thus the Natural Atheiſm of the Heart may overflow, and ſeem to conquer this Faith, that there is a God, and yet then the Soul believes ſtrongly at the ſame time that there is a God, and it appears in its Actions, though not in its Senſe and Light, for the Soul fears this God in all its Ways and Walks, as believing this Truth. Hence I argue, that if Faith in the General may be overpowred in Senſe and inward Light, when yet a Man truly believes, then much more may the particular Perſwaſion of a Man's being in the Eſtate of Grace (which is but a deduction out of thoſe general Principles) be in a Man's ſenſe prevailed againſt by doubting, when yet ſecretly he doth moſt truly believe. The Apoſtles, when Chriſt was dead and crucified, did almoſt begin to call in queſtion the general Principles of Faith; they were much ſtaggered in them, as appears from that Speech, Luke 24. 21. We truſted, (ſaid they) it had been he ſhould have redeemed Iſrael, and it is now the third day when he promiſed to riſe, and yet we ſee him not: His Sufferings ſtaggered their Faith, and therefore ver. 25. he calls them Slow of heart to believe what the Prophets had written; and yet then they did ſecretly believe, and had recourſe to the Sepulchre, and an Eye what ſhould become of him. Thus Thomas alſo would not believe the Reſurrection of Chriſt, (a main Article) unleſs he ſaw him. Now if the Faith in the Principles may be in the Heart, and yet be prevailed againſt by Doubting, then much more the particular Concluſions derived thence to our ſelves, which are at no time ſo fully aſſented to as the other, and yet Faith muſt then be in the Heart, for a Man dies elſe. If the main Root and Stock may ſeem dead, much more the Branches and the Buds.

4. Wicked Men are not immediately bound to have Aſſurance, and therefore it is not the Eſſential Act wherein Faith conſiſts: They are condemned, you know, for not believing, now if the firſt act of Faith commanded were to believe that Chriſt is mine, and that my ſins are forgiven, how could a Man in the ſtate of Nature be bound to it? For ſuch an aſſurance of Chriſt's being his, is not a Truth in the ſtate wherein he ſtands, but yet he is every hour bound to come to Chriſt as the Fountain of Life, and to caſt himſelf on him for his Pardon, and to chooſe him as that means appointed by God for remiſſion; for Chriſt blames the Phariſees that they did not do ſo, John 5. 40. Ye will not come to me, that ye might have Life. Therein therefore lies the Act of Faith which juſtifies.

CHAP. II.

The Reaſons why there may be true Juſtifying Faith in a Man, and yet he want Aſſurance.

AS I have given Arguments to prove that all true Faith is not Aſſurance, I ſhall now give the Reaſons, Why there may be true Faith in a Man who yet wants ſuch Aſſurance.

1. Thoſe Eſſential Acts that are attributed to Faith, and whereby it is expreſſed, fall ſhort of expreſſing aſſurance in a Believer's ſenſe. Faith is expreſſed by ſeeing Chriſt, and his Worth and Excellency, John 6. 40. by looking on him as they in the Wilderneſs did on the Brazen Serpent: Not as that which had already healed them, but looking on it as the means appointed to Cure them, and that only. So alſo Faith is expreſs'd by coming to him, which implies not ſo much a Perſwaſion that a Man's Sins are forgiven by God, as a having recourſe to him to forgive them, as a flying to him that is gracious, and choſen by God on purpoſe; As a coming unto him as unto a lively ſtone, choſen of God, 1 Pet. 2. 4. and ſo John 5. 40. they are blamed for not coming to him that they might have Life; and becauſe ſuch may truly come, who yet in their own ſenſe may fear whether he will receive them, and do them good, therefore Chriſt aſſures ſuch, John 6. 37. He that comes to me I will in no wiſe cast out. Chriſt ſpeaks it to aſſure ſuch as do come, who though they come, yet wanted this Perſwaſion in their own ſenſe. To go up to Chriſt for help is to truſt or believe on him, as to go down to Egypt for help is called a truſting on that Nation, Iſa. 31. 1. This coming argues a chooſing him, a betaking a Man's ſelf to him. Again, that act of truſting on him (as there in Iſa. 50. 10. truſting on the Name of the Lord is commanded, when Light is wanting) doth not neceſſarily imply or require a prevailing aſſurance that God is my God, and that my Sins are pardoned by him, but there may appear a great truſt in the want of the Senſe of this: As for Example, then a Traytor truſts a King, when upon a Proclamation of Pardon indefinite he comes in, and lays down his Weapons, and refers himſelf to him; when he leaves all his hopes among the Rebels, and puts his Life, his Service, and all into his hands; If there may be any hope; as the Church in the Lamentations ſays, Lam. 3. 29. ſuch a truſt was in Job; I will truſt him though he kill me, Job 13. 15. when yet God fought as an Enemy againſt him. For truſting hath two ſeveral ſignifications with it, the one intimates a quiet ſecurity that the Party that is truſted will do ſuch or ſuch a thing, as when a Man ſays, I truſt and am perſwaded he will do ſuch a thing for me; the other Signification intimates, that upon an high Eſteem of a Man's Goodneſs, Faithfulneſs, Ingenuity, and Indefinite Expreſſion of himſelf, and Carriage to others, a Man puts over all to him, and commits himſelf, his cauſe, and all upon his good Will and Grace, to obtain his Suit, and this relyance is then accounted the greateſt truſt, when the Man cannot ſay he hath a particular aſſurance from him in whom he confides: Thus ſays the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 10. The poor leaves himſelf with thee; Pſal. 10. 14. he rolls himſelf on God, Pſal. 37. 7. which in verſe 3. is expreſſed by truſting.

Again, Waiting is another act of Faith, which implys a looking for help from Chriſt, a waiting for Pardon from him, not an aſſurance of Pardon already attained. Waiting is an act of Faith, whereby a Man renounceth all vain hopes and helps, and betakes himſelf wholly to Chriſt, and continues to look for help from him, and none elſe; and this act doth not reach ſo far as to Aſſurance in Senſe, for Aſſurance is the thing waited for, and yet this waiting is Faith. He that made the 130*th. Pſalm* was a Believer, being a Pen-man of Holy Writ, and it is likely to be David himſelf, but whoſoever he was, he was then in a ſenſe of the want of forgiveneſs, ver. 1. he ſays, he was in Depths; and what Depths? it appears by the 3d. and 4th. verſes, that it was the want of forgiveneſs that troubled him; for he pleads, If thou markeſt iniquity, who ſhall ſtand? and, There is forgiveneſs with thee: In this caſe he could not ſay his ſins were forgiven him; Nay, he felt in ſenſe that God retained them, and marked them, and ſet them on upon his Conſcience, and therefore that which in this Caſe he builds his Faith upon is this, Forgiveneſs is with thee; it is there to be had, and anſwerably an act of waiting ſuitable to that Eſtate is put forth, a waiting for the Lord, ver. 5. and, In his Word (that general Promiſe of pardoning Sinners) do I hope.

2. We have another Reaſon why Faith may be without aſſurance, if we conſider the main Object of Faith, which firſt, and primarily, and adequately in the firſt act of it is here in the Name of Chriſt, John 1. 12. that is, himſelf, his Perſon. The Object of Faith is not ſo much this Propoſition, That Chriſt is mine, (that is an axiome) but Chriſt himſelf, and therefore Faith is ſtill expreſſed by believing on him, and receiving him, John 1. 12. and the Reaſon is, becauſe Faith is that which compleats the Union betwixt Chriſt and me: Now the things united are his Perſon and my Soul, and that which makes the Union is my cleaving to him as my chiefeſt good, and giving my ſelf up to him, and joining my ſelf to him, conſenting to be his, and taking him to be mine, and not this Propoſition, that my Sins are forgiven, though I acknowledge forgiveneſs of ſins is that which my Faith alſo aims at in him. But further conſider, Firſt, That Chriſt, and Chriſt alone, is the firſt Promiſe, and the great Promiſe that Faith looks at, and that Juſtification and Salvation, and the Promiſes of all a Man's priviledges he hath, or is to have by Chriſt, are ſecondary, and therefore to be believed in the ſecond place, and are made in Chriſt, and not to Men 'till they are in Chriſt, for all Promiſes are Yea and Amen in him, and is made all in all to us. So as e're any Man can believe his ſins are forgiven, or look upon any Priviledge which is to be had by Chriſt as his own, he muſt firſt be united to Chriſt, and Chriſt muſt be made his; there muſt be an act of Faith cloſing with his Perſon, conſenting to be his, and receiving him as indefinitely offered, to be his, (if he will take him) and then, and not before, can any Man come to believe he hath the pardon of his Sins, or that he ſhall have Glory, and be ſaved. Theſe Secondary Promiſes they are the Object for Aſſurance to work upon, but the Perſon of Chriſt is the Object of Faith, which Faith fixeth on, and the Believer firſt comes unto Chriſt, and takes him, and therefore aſſurance of Juſtification and Salvation muſt neceſſarily come in after believing on the Perſon of Chriſt. Now Chriſt who is the great Promiſe is but indefinitely offered, (though that Offer indefinite is made known to all) therefore anſwerably 'tis not required that the act of Faith ſhould be aſſurance; but the Promiſe of Juſtification and Glory, &c. are determined, and made definite to them that are Believers, &c. (and accordingly they ſtill run in that ſtrain) and therefore to believe them requires aſſurance. And then,

Secondly, The Aſſurance that Chriſt's Perſon is mine, is not the firſt Object of the firſt act of Faith, for he is not mine 'till I have taken him, then he becomes mine, according to the Rules of the Word: This indeed the Heart may have (and hath) a ſecret hint of, of eſpecial Good will in God and Chriſt, in the offer of himſelf to a poor Soul, conveyed thorough the indefinite Promiſe: The Believing Soul doth think that God means Chriſt for him, and deſigns Chriſt to him, but this is not aſſurance, for he cannot ſay that Chriſt is his 'till he hath taken him; it is the taking a Gift makes it the Man's who takes it, and not the offer of it: So that till out of ſuch a hint conveyed thorough the indefinite Promiſe a Man hath taken Chriſt, there is no room for triumphing Aſſurance, for a Man to ſay that Chriſt is his. Again,

Thirdly, If we conſider in what Faculty Faith is ſaid principly to reſide, it will appear, that the main act of Faith is not Aſſurance: It principally is ſeated in the Will, for the Conſent of that, and the knitting of that to Chriſt makes the Union, as conſent in Marriage doth; therefore believing is called receiving him, John 12. 1. and coming to Chriſt, and being drawn to him, is the Phraſe by which it is expreſſed, and that principally is of the Will. Now if the main act of Faith were an aſſenting to an over-powring Light that Chriſt is mine, and a ſetting it down that my Sins are pardoned, then the main act that made the Union were in the Underſtanding; but now, that firſt Work upon the Underſtanding is expreſſed by ſeeing him, but not by ſeeing him at firſt to be mine,

Part II. mine; ſo Babes are ſaid to know the Father, 1 John 2. 13. but not to know that he is their Father. When Men aſſent not to the worth that is in Chriſt, (tho' Ignorance whereof is the ground of Mens refuſal of him) then it is that they make God a Lyar: But to cloſe with Chriſt's Perſon as tendred to me, that is the main act of Faith. And it ſhould be granted, that by drawing, John 6. 44. is meant a drawing my Underſtanding to aſſent that Chriſt is mine, yet a drawing of the Will is mainly intended.

Fourthly, Hence therefore I argue in the fourth place, That Aſſurance comes in but to confirm and ſeal to what pure Faith hath done, and therefore follows upon Faith, and ſo all Expreſſions that expreſs aſſurance imply: As when it is called eſtabliſhing or confirming, ſealing and giving an Earneſt, and a Witneſſing, all theſe ſuppoſe an act of Faith already paſſed, which eſtates us into Chriſt and Salvation, to which aſſurance comes in as a confirmation: For an Earneſt ſuppoſeth firſt a Bargain made, which that confirms, and a Witneſs ſuppoſeth ſome Act paſſed, a Deed made, and then there is place for a Witneſs, and ſo a Seal comes in after the Deed is drawn and concluded, to add a confirmation, ſo that the firſt act of Faith doth not include prevailing aſſurance in it, but after Men believe then comes in ſealing, Eph. 1. 13. After ye believed, ye were ſealed with that Holy Spirit of Promiſe: And therefore the Sacraments of the Lords-Supper and Baptiſm, which are Seals and Inſtruments of aſſurance, are to be adminiſtred after a Man hath Faith, or is ſuppoſed to be in the ſtate of Grace; Let a Man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat, 1 Cor. 11. 28. They are not to begin Grace, but to confirm it; whereas were Faith Aſſurance they might begin it.

Add to this, Fifthly, That Aſſurance comes in as a Reward of Faith, as a Light ſuperadded to Faith, that when a Man hath truſted God upon his bare Word, and a ſecret hint of a Promiſe, and hereby hath ſet to his Seal that God is true, and born the ſtreſs of many over-powering Doubts and Temptations, and yet cleaves to Chriſt, though not fully knowing in his ſenſe Chriſt is his, then God ſets to his Seal; therefore, ſays Chriſt, Rev. 2. 17. To him that overcomes I will give to eat of the hidden Manna. A Man's Faith muſt fight firſt, and have a Conqueſt, and then aſſurance is the Crown, the Triumph of Faith; but Faith muſt be tryed firſt, and what tries Faith more than Temptations, and Fears, and Doubts, and Reaſonings againſt a Man's Eſtate? That triumphing aſſurance (Rom. 8. 37, 38. We are more than Conquerors; and I am perſwaded that nothing ſhall ſeparate us from the love of God in Chriſt Jeſus) comes after a Tryal, as none are crowned till they have ſtriven, and therefore Eſtabliſhment comes after Suffering, ſo 1 Pet. 5. 10. After ye have ſuffer'd a while, eſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle you: This putting into joint and rooting is after ſuffering; if they ſhould have had it before, he would have prayed abſolutely for it; and this the Apoſtle alſo imports in 1 Pet. 1. 7, 8. in ſpeaking of the joy of believing, (believing in Chriſt ye rejoyce with joy unſpeakable and glorious, receiving the end of your Faith, the ſalvation of of your Souls;) the Context argues, that this joy unſpeakable and glorious, which thus accompanieth triumphing aſſurance, is called receiving Salvation, and the end of Faith, and the reward of Faith, which is tryed with manifold Temptations, ver. 7. and therefore 'tis called the earneſt of Heaven, and God therefore diſpenſeth it voluntarily and freely.

Add to this, Sixthly, That that Light which cauſeth aſſurance of Faith is a diſtinct thing, and ſuperadded to Faith; and the Scripture ſpeaks of it as a thing diſtinct from Faith, (though it doth coaleſce with it, and they both make one) and may be ſeparately conſidered, and is called ſenſe as ſo conſidered: For either it is by a reflex act upon Graces in a Man, and then 'tis Experience (as the Apoſtle calls it) which breeds this Hope, or by an immediate diſcovery of the Spirit with joy unſpeakable, which hath Senſe and Sight in it; and therefore Job though he believed afore, yet when this Light broke in afreſh, I heard of thee (ſays he) by the hearing of the Ear, but now mine Eyes have ſeen thee, Job 42. 5. and therefore too Iſa. 50. 18. Aſſurance (when it is ſpoken of in the diſtinction it hath from Faith) is called Light, and the want of it Darkneſs; in which Darkneſs yet the Light of Faith ſhines, but ſo as comparatively with that Light which comes in with Aſſurance the Soul is ſaid to be in Darkneſs, and to walk by Faith, and not by Sight: Though I confeſs even the light of Aſſurance is not ſight compared with the ſight in Heaven, when we ſhall ſee Chriſt as he is, Pet. 1. 8. compared with 1 John 3. 2. yet comparatively to naked Faith, and the ordinary Light that Faith hath, it may be called ſight and ſenſe; ſo as I may ſay to one that believes, having ſtrong Sights and Lights of God daily, as Chriſt ſaid unto Thomas, Thou haſt ſeen and believed, John 20. 29. but the other believes though he ſees not.

I will now ſhew how in ſuch acts of Faith as theſe, all the main Ends of Faith are and may be attained and accompliſh'd, by indefinite acts of Recumbency and Truſting on God, though wanting Aſſurance: As for Inſtance, Firſt, The firſt main End of Faith is to glorifie God's free and rich Grace, and Chriſt, and to attribute all to them in point of Juſtification and Salvation, and to magnifie and ſet them up alone in my Heart; that is it for which Abraham's Faith is commended, Rom. 4. 20. He was ſtrong in Faith, and gave Glory to God: Now I acknowledge that when Aſſurance comes, it enableth the Heart many ways to glorifie God more than meer naked Faith, or caſting a Man's ſelf upon Chriſt doth; for it hath all the other hath, and more; and beſides, it cauſeth the heart to be more thankfull, and more fruitfully and chearfully obedient; it perfects Love, opens and gives vent to a new ſtream of Godly Sorrow, adds new Motives, enlargeth and encourageth the Heart in Prayer, winds up all Graces to a new and higher Key and Strain, cauſeth a Spring-tide of all; yet ſo as God is, and may be as truly, and in as right a way glorified by thoſe acts of Faith in a ſtate of meer Recumbency as by the other; though I do not ſay ſo amply, and with ſo large a Revenue as when Aſſurance comes. Now a Man doth rightly glorifie God's rich Grace, and Chriſt, by two things: Firſt, When the Heart attributes all that wholly and fully unto Chriſt, and God's Grace, which God in the Scripture aſcribes to them in point of Salvation: And, Secondly, When the Heart is bowed in all the Carriages, and Dealings, and Practices of it, to demean it ſelf accordingly, viz. In a word, to give unto God that which is God's, as Chriſt ſays in another caſe: Now both theſe a Soul that is as yet but hung upon Chriſt doth and may do, for that Soul in a ſpiritual manner ſees the Riches, the fullneſs of Grace in Chriſt, adores, admires it, renounceth all vain hopes in all things elſe, reſolves to have help no way elſe, robs and detracts nothing from Chriſt in the ſecret practices of the Heart, for it deals with nothing elſe but Chriſt for Salvation; the Soul hath, for what it apprehends to be in him, left all its own Righteouſneſs, Parts, Abilities, Comfort in all Creatures, and accordingly walks every day: Only the Soul wants this prevailing Light, that this Grace and Chriſt is his, which when it comes, though it adds to his Comfort indeed, and ſo cauſeth him in a way of particular Thankfulneſs to glorifie this Grace in relation to himſelf, yet the Faith of Recumbence attributes as much to the Grace it ſelf as the other of Aſſurance doth by way of praiſing, glorifying, and admiring it. And this Faith of Recumbence expreſſeth thus much by reſting on Chriſt, parting with all for him, as well as the other glorifies him in other acts of rejoycing in him, &c. The Grace of Chriſt is as truly glorified by the one as by the other, only in a ſeveral way; the one honours it by acts of dependance upon it to be obtained, the other by way of thankfulneſs for it as already enjoyed. As the Saints under the Old Teſtament believed as truly on Chriſt, though yet to come, as we now on him though already come, and it was but a differing circumſtance of Chriſt to come, and already come, made the difference, (and yet ſuch a difference as thereby we receive more Grace and Comfort than they had;) ſo the Saints that want aſſurance of Chriſt being yet theirs, or his Benefits theirs, by depending on him that he may be theirs, and all his Benefits theirs, they glorifie him as truly as they that believe all his Benefits are theirs, and in preſent poſſeſſion, (only I confeſs there is a new Edition of many Graces in a Man by the coming in of Aſſurance, there is much Grace and Comfort that follows;) as a Man may ſhew his true Love in admiration of the Worth, and Parts, and Faithfulneſs of one to whom he ſues to be his Friend, and honours him as much by acts of Obſervance to gain his Friendſhip, as he may do by acts of Requital when he is aſſured of his Love to him. It will I confeſs add much to the chearfulneſs of all he doth go about for him, when he knows him to be his Friend, but he honours him no leſs truly in the one than in the other; and theſe acts of Recumbency do change and purifie the Heart as truly as acts of aſſurance, and carry it on to Obedience; for not only the beholding Chriſt in his glorious Excellencies do change the Heart, 2 Cor. 3. 18. but the Expectation and Dependancy the Soul is put into, works an Holy Ingenuity: For God's Love, and ſo great a Favour out of free good-will in God being the aim, the Expectation of the Soul, that God would pardon his ſin out of as great a Love as if Chriſt were yet to be given, how can he look for ſuch Love at God's Hands, (and without it the Soul reckons it ſelf undone) without anſwering God again with all the Love in his Heart? How can a Man profeſs that he expects ſuch kindneſs at God's Hands, and be unkind to him? how can the Heart be able to look God in the Face, if it be ſo diſingenuous? Can the Soul come to Chriſt to pardon ſin through his Death, and live in it? Why Chriſt may and will ſay, how would you have me to pardon theſe Sins? Through thy death, Lord, thinks the Soul, and ſo expecteth; and how then canſt thou find in thine heart to live in them? Now, though all theſe Effects are in a more direct way wrought by Faith of Aſſurance, yet they are as truly all wrought by Faith of Recumbency or Expectation, when it is in earneſt. And let me add this, that in two reſpects the Soul in ſuch a ſtate honours God's Grace more:

See my Sermons on Friendſhip with God, out of Jam. 2. 23. the firſt Reaſon of the Doctrine. M. S.

1. It honours that Property and Attribute of Grace that it is free; for a Man in truſting God, when he knows not in his own ſenſe that Grace is his, yet refers himſelf to it, and devolves himſelf on it, and doth all in dependance upon it, as much as one that is aſſured doth; and herein he gives a real acknowledgement of, and magnifies the Prerogative and Freedom of this Grace. And,

2. Though all the acts of Grace (as they are of themſelves) are leſs and weaker that accompany ſuch an Eſtate, than thoſe that flow from aſſurance, which like the early and latter rain make the heart more fruitful, yet if you put upon theſe acts of recumbent Faith the relation of being trials, ſo they glorifie God more, and are more acceptable; for it is not ſimply acts of Faith, but the tryal of Faith which is found to Honour and Glory, 1 Pet. 1. 7. that is, to the Honour both of that Grace, and alſo of Chriſt who is the Object of it. Faith when it is tryed glorifieth God moſt in ſome regard: Now therefore to leave all Hopes and Comforts, and reſt wholly on Chriſt for Life and Comfort, and to obey him, &c. when I know not that he is mine, though the acts of Grace be fewer, yet the trial is greater; as Mercies draw out Love more, yet Afflictions do try Love more, and therefore make it exceeding acceptable; ſo aſſurance draws Love out more, makes a Spring-tide of it, but a ſtate of Recumbency tries it. A Servant that is in Health may do more work than one that is ſick, and yet what a ſick Servant doth is as much accepted, becauſe it is a trial of his Faithfulneſs, though it be leſs.

Secondly, The ſecond main End that Faith ſerves for, is to put Men into the Eſtate of Grace and Juſtification before God: It is that act upon which God pronounceth a Man juſtified, therefore we are ſaid to be juſtified by Faith, and to have acceſs into this Grace wherein we ſtand, Rom. 5. 1, 2. for though God loves a Man from all Eternity, yet he cannot ſave a Man, and pronounce his ſins forgiven, according to his Rules in his Word, till an act of Faith hath paſſed, ſo as by reaſon of that act I am before God according to his revealed will in that Eſtate I was not in before; and ſo according to the Rules of his Word, (which is the Rule he will judge by) he can after that act pronounce a Man's ſins forgiven, which before he could not, if he keeps to his Rules; as all other Eſtates are conveyed by ſome mutual act, ſo is the Eſtate of Grace. The main Intent then of this act of Faith being that God may juſtifie me, and that I may be ſaved, it is not therefore abſolutely neceſſary to ſuch an act that I ſhould know I certainly do perform it, but it may ſuffice to do the deed, that God knows it; for real Juſtification, and to be in the ſtate of Grace, and ſo accounted by God, is the main End of it. : And therefore fore the Apoſtles though they knew the Father, and believed on him, John 14. 1, 7. yet they knew not that they did know the Father, ver. 8. It was neceſſary they hould know the Father, and honour his Free-grace by believing on it, or they ould not have been juſtified; but it was not neceſſary they ſhould know this, or then they had not indeed been juſtified. That I ſhould know I am juſtified s not neceſſary to God's juſtifying of me, but the intent of it is for my Comfort, hat I may have Peace with God in my Conſcience; Therefore being juſtified by Faith, (which is the prime act) we have peace with God, as the fruit of it, Rom. 5. 1. it tends to my Joy in believing, and that I may have ſtrong Conſolation. Now to the having a thing, it is not neceſſary that I know I have it, for a Man ay have a thing and think he hath loſt it; and a Man's Hand may be ſo umbed with holding a thing that he may not know that he holds it. As o a being in the Devil it is not neceſſary to know it, ſo nor to a being in Chriſt; God then hath choſen out ſuch an act to juſtifie a Sinner as ſhall be ommon to all ages of Chriſtians, that the leaſt may not be excluded, ſuch an act as is common to all Times and all Eſtates, this act is Faith of Recumbence; but Faith of aſſurance, knowing my ſelf to be in Chriſt, and to be juſtified, could not have been ſuch a common and conſtant act that juſtifies, unleſs we will ſay it cannot be prevailed upon by Doubts. Yea, I muſt be firſt uſtified by an act of Faith, reſting on Chriſt for Juſtification, e're I can come o have aſſurance I am juſtified; for Faith at firſt looks at my Eſtate not as n God's Decree of Election, but as it is laid down in the rules of the Word, nd according to the rules of the Word I am not in a ſtate of Juſtification till I have believed on Chriſt for Juſtification, and on him that juſtifies the ungodly: And therefore in Scripture Men are ſaid to believe that they may e juſtified, Gal. 2. 16. in that Text the Apoſtles themſelves are ſaid to do ſo. So then the firſt act of Faith is caſting my ſelf on Chriſt for Juſtification, and not believing that I am juſtified.

I come now to anſwer the Objections, the Anſwers to which afford New Reaſons of the thing.

Object. 1. If Faith be not an apprehenſion that Chriſt is mine, wherein then lyes that ſpecial application and appropriation of Chriſt, and the promiſe which is made to be in Faith, and urged upon Believers?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer: Firſt, We urge a ſpecial application as abſolutely neceſſary, in oppoſition to the Papiſts Faith, who teach their Followers, that to believe only the general Truths, that there is a God, and that Chriſt hath died, and to believe as the Church believes, is true Faith; which we ſay may be in Devils, as James alſo affirms, Jam. 2. 19. But we ſay moreover, unleſs there be a further application, it is a vain Faith; but then underſtand rightly what that particular application is, namely, when my Heart is by the belief of the generals drawn in to Chriſt in particular, to reſt on him for my own Salvation; when I aſſent not only as a Witneſs to a Will, but come in as a Party, as a Legatee, put in for a ſhare, that Chriſt and all his Benefits may be mine, and ſo give my ſelf up to him; when Special Mercy to me is the aim of my Faith: Here now is a true application and appropriation, for I reſt not in a general aſſent, but my Faith joins my Heart to Chriſt, conſents to take him as mine, and to be his, and the Scope of my cleaving to him is, that he may be mine. And this as it is more then Papiſts Faith, and is indeed the Life of Faith, ſo alſo is it leſs than aſſurance, which is rather a verbal challenging him as mine than a real appropriation. I apply Chriſt when I believe on him that I may be ſaved, as well as when I believe he is mine, and I ſhall be ſaved. In the Inſtance of the Man in the Goſpel, that ſold all he had to buy the Pearl, that Bargain of his made the Pearl his, and did appropriate it to him, for thereby he bought it; and it was not a Perſwaſion of its being his made it firſt his, but a ſelling all that it might be his, though that Perſwaſion came in afterwards.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, For further clearing of this, I anſwer: You muſt know that there is a twofold Application, The one is real, which makes a thing mine; The other is axiomatical, whereby I ſay it is mine: Or, if you will, the one is an apprehenſion of the Underſtanding, when I judge and diſcern, and can challenge this as mine: The other is in the Will, when I chooſe it for my Portion, cleave to it as mine, take it to be mine. Now the main and firſt act of Application of Faith lyes in the Will, for that is the Faculty that is drawn to Chriſt, whereby I come in particular to Chriſt, and join my ſelf to him: It is therefore called receiving Chriſt, John 1. 12. and therefore Chriſt puts it upon their Will, John 5. 40. Ye will not come to me that ye might have life. As for Example, There is a double appropriation of Meat or Apparel, the one a challenging a lawful right, when I can ſay this Meat is mine, I have right to it, but the other is eating it, digeſting it, and making it one fleſh with me, and that is the true real application that appropriates it; and ſo for Cloaths, it may be inſignificant to ſay they are mine, and belong to me, they may do ſo, and I never wear them, but the true appropriation of them is to put them on, and wear them: So in Medicines, to apply them to the Soar for Cure, to bring the Salves and the Fleſh together, that is the real proper application of them. Thus it is in Faith alſo, the cleaving to Chriſt in my Will, the hungering after him, and digeſting him, the putting him on, the laying my Soul to him, this is the proper real application of him, this is an act of the Will; but to apprehend he is mine, and ſo to challenge a right in him, that is but an axiomatical application, an act of the Underſtanding, though where it is in truth it encreaſeth that real application, and draws the Will more unto Chriſt. Now if the main application of Faith lay in believing that Chriſt is mine, then it were mainly an act of the Underſtanding, and a Propoſition were the chief Object of it, and not Chriſt's Perſon; and that drawing ſpoken of John 6. 44. were ſpecially drawing the Underſtanding to aſſent, whereas it lyes mainly in drawing my Will to him, to chooſe him to be mine.

Object. 2. But you will ſay, I muſt believe Chriſt is mine e're my Will can thus apply him, as I muſt believe Meat is mine e're I eat it, and that Cloaths are mine e're I put them on.

Anſw. I anſwer, If the Condition of making Meat mine be to eat it, and if a Father offers a Child a Suit, ſaying, it ſhall be his if he will wear it, then he muſt eat that Meat firſt, and put thoſe Cloaths on, that they may become his, and ſo it is here.

CHAP. III.

That Aſſurance of Salvation may be obtained.

1 JOHN V. 13.

Theſe things have I written unto you that believe on the Name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have Eternal Life, and that ye may believe on the Name of the Son of God.

THE Doctrine of Aſſurance is that which of all other Civil Men and Popiſh Spirits do gainſay and calumniate; which they do out of Ignorance, as Men are apt to ſpeak evil of that they know not, Jude 10. Now Aſſurance of Salvation ſuch Men never had Experience of, as Chriſt (ſpeaking of the Spirit as a Comforter, John 14. 17.) ſays, The World cannot receive him, for it knows him not: Neither are ſuch Men ſolicitous about it, for aſſurance of Earth here contents them, and makes them think themſelves happy enough. They oppoſe this Doctrine of Aſſurance alſo out of Envy, becauſe they think much that ſo great a Priviledge ſhould be beſtowed upon any, which themſelves want; and therefore envying that others ſhould exceed them in ſo great a happineſs, (as this muſt needs be acknowledged, which indeed is able to outvie all other) they deny it, and would make it a thing impoſſible, and a Fancy in them that have it. And the Devil bears a great part in it alſo, who when he cannot hinder the Salvation of Chriſtians in the Event, would hinder their Comfort; and as he knows how much this Aſſurance-Office encreaſeth Spiritual Traffique, and raiſeth the Cuſtoms of God's Glory and Revenues of Grace double, by encouraging Chriſtians to trade more in all manner of Holineſs, ſo his ſpite therefore is exceedingly at it to put it down; and indeed if he could get the Opinion to prevail, that no ſuch thing is to be attained, Chriſtians would give over looking after it: And then too all our Hearts naturally being fruitful of Doubtings and Diſtruſt, are apt to join in with our Enemies, and to be glad to hear of a Doctrine of Doubtings; and then alſo that preſumptuous Security which ſtills the Hearts of many is at the beſt but blind careleſs Hope, and that too countercheck'd with a World of real Guilt, ſo as in their own ſenſe they cannot call it a Certainty or Infallibility; and then ſuch Perſons labouring after aſſurance, (as in their Opinions having thought it attainable) in the real purſuit of it find it ſo difficult that they are apt to give over, and to think it like that of the Philoſophers Stone, a deviſed Invention, good indeed if it could be procured, but not to be had; and then thoſe alſo who have attained it cannot demonſtrate it to others, eſpecially not to thoſe who have not Experience of it, for it is Hidden Manna, a White Stone which none knows but he that receives it, Revel. 2. 17. A Stranger doth not meddle with his Joy, Prov. 14. 10. that is, it is a Buſineſs he is not skilled in, as the oppoſition ſhews; for the Words afore are, The Heart knows the bitterneſs of his Soul; that is, Terrours of Conſcience are beſt known to him that hath them. Carnal People will not believe there are any ſuch troubles for ſin, and when Men are troubled they aſcribe it to any other cauſe; much leſs then will they believe their Joys and Aſſurance, which are more remote from their reaſon than the other: So as it is no wonder if that thing be denied which the moſt are ignorant of, and do envy at, as the greateſt happineſs in others, and which the Devil oppoſeth, and which is ſo hard to attain, and which is not demonſtrable or obvious to Senſe.

Now my Purpoſe is both to eſtabliſh and vindicate this Work and Doctrine of Aſſurance, it being both a Work which furthers and advanceth the Power of Godlineſs in their Hearts who enjoy it, (as ſhall be ſhewn) and alſo it being a Branch and Appendix of Faith, an Addition or Complement to Faith, and therefore is called the aſſurance of Faith, Heb. 10. 22. it therefore lies next in my way. Now this Text 1 John 5. 13. doth not only aſſure us that aſſurance of Salvation may be obtained by Believers, but further refers us to this whole Epiſtle for the proof thereof; Theſe things (ſaith he) have I written unto you that believe on the Name of the Son of God, that ye may know ye have Eternal Life.

I ſhall ſpeak ſomething of the Coherence of the Words, though indeed the Words are the Cloſe and Argument of the whole. In the 7th. and 8th. verſes he tells us of ſix Witneſſes to confirm Believers Faith, for of Faith he had ſpoken ver. 5, 6. and in ver. 10, 11. he tells us of the Record or Teſtimony which theſe Witneſſes give in their Evidence of, which contains the Summ of the Goſpel, and the Object that Faith is exerciſed about. 1. That Eternal Life is to be had alone in Chriſt. 2. That this Eternal Life he hath given to all Believers; That God hath given us, that is, Believers, (for to them he writes and intends his Epiſtle) Eternal Life. Both theſe would God have to be believed and embraced, and for the Confirmation of both ſerve thoſe ſix Witneſſes. Firſt, He would have Men believe and reſt in, and take his Son as the only Fountain of Life, which Propoſition the Witneſſes in Heaven do eſpecially confirm, which is call'd Believing on him. And then, Secondly, He would have theſe Believers that have taken his Son, and believed in him, know and believe that they ſhall certainly be ſaved, becauſe they have his Son, and Life in him; for, He that hath the Son hath Life, and he partakes of Eternal Life; and to that end God hath appointed the three Witneſſes on Earth in a Believers own Conſcience, ver. 10. And to theſe two Heads, eſpecially the latter, is it that all this Epiſtle of John drives at; that whereas there are many Souls that do entertain that firſt Record, that Chriſt is the Fountain of Life, and ſo depend on him, and reſt in him alone, but yet are backward to entertain the other, namely, that they have the Son, and that they belong to Chriſt, and that they believe on him aright, therefore for ſuch did he intend this Epiſtle, that they may come to the aſſurance of Faith concerning their own particular Eſtates: Theſe things have I written to you (ſaith he) that have believed on the Name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have the Son, and that ye have Eternal Life: And yet not for theſe only doth he write, but alſo that they which have ſome Knowledge of this begun may know it yet more, that ſo they may go from one degree of Faith to another, and further believe on his Name. And becauſe this Text refers us to what is written in this Epiſtle, I will content my ſelf with what may thence be gather'd as touching both, (it being a point the Text calls for) viz. That not only Believers may know they have Eternal Life, but that theſe things were written to aſſure them of it.

Firſt, Therefore let us argue from the Scope of the whole Epiſtle: Thoſe Arguments which the Holy Ghoſt ſpends whole Books upon, are certainly both of neceſſary and of common uſe. As when Solomon writ a Book on purpoſe to ſhew the Vanity of the Creatures, when Paul writes an whole Epiſtle to prove Juſtification by Faith, as that to the Galathians; and another Epiſtle to ſhew the Natures and Offices of Chriſt, as that to the Hebrews, theſe muſt be regarded as very conſiderable. Now John wrote his Goſpel to prove Chriſt to be the Son of God, thereby to draw Men to believe on him, that they might have Eternal Life, John 20.31. Theſe things are written that ye might believe that Jeſus is the Chriſt, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have Life thorough his Name; and therefore he endeavours thorough the whole to give all the Characters and Demonſtrations that he was God, as Divines obſerve: So likewiſe he wrote this his Epiſtle to teach them who believe how they may know that they do believe, and that they have Eternal Life; and to that end gives all the Evidences and Means that may tend to this: He not only demonſtrates that Eternal Life is given to Believers, but gives Evidence that they might particularly know their Intereſt; the Signs given in this Epiſtle tend to this purpoſe. And farther to aſſure you that this is his Scope, the beginning of the Epiſtle doth anſwer to this his Concluſion, for he puts in the Argument of the whole, 1 John 1.4. Theſe things we write unto you, that your Joy may be full: Joy ariſeth only out of ſome Good we know, and know too to be ours. Men in a vulgar Senſe and Phraſe of Speech may be ſaid to be happy, though they do not know it, as a King that is aſleep, and a Believer in a Temptation, but rejoyce in that their Happineſs they cannot, unleſs they know it; or at leaſt, it cannot be full Joy elſe, not ſo full for parts as Chriſtians are here capable of. Full Joy ariſeth only out of the Poſſeſſion of the chiefeſt Good, and the Knowledge of it, and that is Eternal Life, and Chriſt in whom it is. Let the Happineſs be never ſo great, if the Perſons know not that it is theirs, their Joy is diminiſhed and detracted, and can in no ſenſe be ſaid to be full Joy; and therefore the Apoſtle ſays not only that He wrote theſe things that they might have Eternal Life, the chiefeſt good, but that They might know it, that ſo their Joy might be full. Moral Philoſophers diſputing againſt Plotinus, who ſaid the happieſt condition might be without Knowledge, bring this very Argument againſt him, and argues truly, that Reflection or Knowledge of a Man's happineſs is neceſſarily required to it, for otherwiſe it is leſſened. Reflection is a part of the perfection of a perfect action, and a Man ſhould ſee but imperfectly, he ſhould but half ſee, who did not obſerve he ſaw; but eſpecially a Reflection is eſſentially required to joy, (which is the Companion of Happineſs) and to full joy.

Secondly, He wrote theſe things that They might have fellowſhip and communion with God and Chriſt: A Soul may have real Union, and the Marriage Knot which can never be untied, that is knit by Faith, and by caſting a Man's ſelf on Chriſt, but yet mutual Fellowſhip and Communion, and a mutual Expreſſion of Love, and walking as Friends may be wanting: But now the Comfort of Friendſhip lyes in the mutual Knowledge and Senſe of each others Dearneſs and Love. A Man can have no hearty Fellowſhip with one he thinks

riendſhip. Theſe things therefore the Apoſtle wrote that we might have llowſhip with Chriſt, as he had; now the Fellowſhip that he had with God, e ſays, was this, Chap. 4. 16. We have known and believed the Love of God to s: This Fellowſhip lyes not in God's bearing us good will ſimply, but in know-g and believing it, and that in ſuch a manner as God hath it, that as he ertainly doth bear Love to us, ſo we certainly know it, and this Fellowſhip
e calls Dwelling in Love, for the Soul walks in the aſſurance of it, and works n it, and lyes down in it, as a Man doth in his Houſe, and he poſſeſſeth God's ove, and knows it is his own, as he knows his Houſe is his own.

Therefore, Thirdly, He calls upon Believers to behold and conſider God's Love, s it is in a ſpecial manner ſet upon themſelves in making them Sons; Behold ſays he) what manner of Love the Father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be call- d the Sons of God, 1 John 3. 1. Of all things in God or Men Love deſires to have ſelf conſidered and taken notice of, as much as Wiſdom, and Power, or any ther thing whatever, and therefore he calls on them to behold God's Love; and bove all Love deſires notice to be taken of the Party beloved, whom it is in ſpe-ial directed unto more than of any other, for the Emphaſis lies in the Specialty of it; therefore he would not have them run out in general thoughts of dmiring God's Love to Mankind, and his giving his Son, but as having be-owed him on us: For when this great benefit is thus ſpecially apprehended, it oubles our admiration of it, and then it takes and affects us. And to this puroſe he bids them view their preſent Condition into which they were put, iz. the Eſtate of Grace, to look on this more than God's Love in giving Chriſt o dye, and offering Heaven, &c. they were to regard their being put into the preent poſſeſſion of it; That we are called (ſays he) to be his Sons; and he bids them iew it again and again, what now at preſent they were; Beloved, now we are the ons of God, ſays he, ver. 2. He exhorts not only to blind hopes of Heaven, and ndefinite conſiderations of God's Love to ſome, but to a joyfull Perſwaſion of their reſent particular happineſs, in that now they were Sons; and though the World nows us not to be ſuch Men, yet to our Comfort we may know it, for to hat end he brings in the World ſlighting us, as not knowing us, becauſe it appears ot what we are and ſhall be; But we know (ſays he) that when he appears we ſhall be ike him; and let the World think of us what they will, we know what they are, nd what our ſelves are, Chap. 5. 19. We know we are of God, and that the whole World ies in wickedneſs: So that his Scope is evident. Now would the Holy Ghoſt loſe ll this Labour, as if none could attain this aſſurance he ſhould? hath he not ſaid, is Word ſhall not return empty?

And again, Fourthly, He ſhews the bleſſed Effects that would follow upon this ſſurance.

1. The more Aſſurance a Man hath of being now at preſent the Son of God, the ore true Hope he hath of what is to come in Heaven; and the more true Hope a Man hath, the more will he purifie himſelf as Chriſt is pure, Chap. 3. ver. 8. Car-al Men calumniate this Doctrine, as that which makes Men ſecure, and more bold o ſin, for if they were ſure of Heaven then they might think to live as they pleaſe, s being ſure to get thither: No, it works a clean contrary Effect, it makes a Man purifie himſelf. This Doctrine he goes on at large to prove in the following erſes, ſhewing that aſſurance is ſo far from making Men unrighteous, that he whom it works not thus with, to make him more holy, hath no true aſſurance in him, but is manifeſtly the Child of the Devil, ſo ver. 10. ſo Chap. 2. ver. 6, 9. Nay, here is not a greater means to keep from ſin than aſſurance; therefore, (ſays he)
s my end of writing is, that you may know you have Eternal Life, ſo alſo, That ye ſin not, Chap. 2. ver. 1. Now if there were danger of Looſeneſs in Aſſurance, he could never have made theſe two ends meet in one Epiſtle together, had not the one been a means to the other. Yea, and ſays he, when a Man hath ſinned, there s no ſpedier way to recover that Man again, and reclaim him from his ſin, than aſſurance; therefore, ſays he, in the ſame Chapter, If any Man ſin, we have an Advo- ate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, who is the propitiation for our ſins:
He bids them conſider and believe this, and maintain the aſſurance of it, to raiſe them again. Then David's Heart began to guſh, and bleed, and break, when

Part II. the Prophet told him his ſins were forgiven; and therefore the Apoſtle he uſeth that as a Motive to the confeſſion of ſins, viz. the Aſſurance that God will pardon them, Chap. 1. ver. 9. when a Man knows not but out of his own Mouth he may be condemned, he is loth to confeſs; but when a Pardon comes, he cares not what he lays open. And then,

2. Aſſurance perfects our Love to God, Chap. 4. 16, 17. Herein is our Love made perfect, ver. 17. Herein, that is, Hereby, that we know and believe God's Love to us, ver. 16. As we cannot love one heartily whom we apprehend to be an irreconcileable Enemy, ſo we cannot love one perfectly whom we do not know to be a Friend: Therefore as full joy ariſeth out of aſſurance of God's Love, ſo perfect Love ariſeth only thence. Men may love God afore as one who may be reconciled to them, but now their Love is perfected; Men may believe afore, but now their Faith is perfected, and what is wanting ſupplied. And this perfect Love, which ariſeth out of aſſurance of God's Love, doth caſt out fear and jealouſies, and ſuſpitions, and a ſervile ſlaviſh temper; it throws out ſuch fear as hath torment joined with it, as apprehending God a Judge, and our ſelves under bondage: This Fear the aſſurance of God's Love frees us from, and caſts out, much of which remains in many Souls that have Faith, and ſome Love to God begun; therefore, when aſſurance comes, their Love is ſaid to be made perfect, there is that degree added which frees them from their Fears, and which compleats their Love begun. Now God would have all his Children ſerve him without this fear, he would have this Child of bondage caſt out, (that I may allude to the caſting out of Hagar) yea, and that he would have us ſo freed from ſuch fears he hath took an Oath, Luke 1. 34. That we ſhould worſhip him without fear; and we ſhall ſerve him the better, though Men have nothing but Self-love in them, think that Fears and Doubtings are the only means to keep Men in awe. And,

3. As this Aſſurance will breed full Joy, perfect Love, and caſt out Fear, ſo alſo Confidence in God, and a certainty that our Prayers are heard, which the Apoſtle brings in as another Motive to get this Aſſurance, Chap. 3. ver. 19, 21, 22. and ſo in the verſe after my Text, ver. 14. This is the confidence that is in him, that if we ask any thing according to his Will, he hears us: He brings it in as an Effect of knowing we have eternal Life; for doubting that our Perſons are accepted, makes us doubt whether our Prayers be; and 'till then we ſhoot at Rovers as it were, and know not when our Prayers will take or hit the White, whether they will come weeping home or granted: But, when God hath given a Man aſſurance of his Love unto Salvation, he uſeth often to give him the like ſpecial aſſurance for many ſpecial Mercies, ver. 15. ſo as he knows he hath the Petitions that he deſired of him, knows it even then when he asks them, as by the Context appears. This will encourage a Man to pray, for then it is a Man hath acceſs to God with Boldneſs, Freedom of Speech and Confidence, Eph. 3. 12. And,

4. As Love, ſo Faith is made more perfect alſo; ſo as Aſſurance helps Faith alſo, and till then there is ſomething wanting in Faith: And therefore in the Text, (if you mark it) ſays he, Theſe things I write to you that believe, that ye may know ye have Eternal Life, and may believe on the Name of the Son of God: For when Aſſurance comes in Faith is encreaſed, for it receives a new degree, whereas before there is ſomething lacking in Faith; as Philoſophers ſay, to ſee and not to obſerve is but an imperfect action, ſo to believe and not to know it is but half your Faith; and therefore Heb. 10. 22. he exhorts to aſſurance of Faith; and therefore Mat. 9. 2. the word tranſlated, Be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven thee, is θάρσει, that is, Confide, Believe, and be Confident; and therefore Eph. 3. 12. we are ſaid To have confidence in the Faith of him; and therefore he urgeth it on them as their Duty, as well to believe that God hath given them Eternal Life, as to begin to believe that Life is in Chriſt, and ſo to fly to him: And, (ſays he) Ye make God a Lyar in not believing the one as well as in not believing the other, ver. 10. for the believing not God in that 10*th.* verſe, whereby Men make God a Lyar, is ſpoken to Believers, and hath reference to this Record, That God hath given us Eternal Life, ver. 11. and therefore as they make God a Lyar that will not believe in Chriſt as the Fountain of Life, and as ſuch a ſuſfficient Saviour as God preſents him to be, (and the main ground Men believe t, lies therein) for they thereby proclaim they believe not Chriſt to be as God ys he is, ſo they that have believed (having that Witneſs in themſelves, ver. 10. hich would aſſure them of the goodneſs of their Eſtates, would they liſten to , and cheriſh it) if they give way and Ear to the Doubts of their own Hearts, ey give God the lye, and will not receive his Teſtimony, which is greater an any Mans, ver. 9.

CHAP. IV.

The Objections againſt Aſſurance anſwered.

NOw I proceed to anſwer Cavils and Objections which are moſt Specious, and I ſhall anſwer them out of this Epiſtle, which is a ſufficient Abundary to eſtabliſh this Doctrine : Only I Premiſe, at I will name no more of them but what may hence be confuted, nor ld any further Confirmation of thoſe Confutations than what the Epiſtle ffords.

Object. 1. The firſt Evaſion is this, It is pretended, that the Perſons to whom is great Priviledge is vouchſafed, were Men of extraordinary Grace, as Apoſtles ; d ſome few ſuch it may be attainable by, but every ordinary Man cannot, nor muſt w look for this Priviledge.

Anſw. I anſwer, As the Scope of St. John is to aſſure all Believers, ſo he ſays in eneral that he writes it to them that believe ; not to Apoſtles only, but to you that elieve, ſays St. John, one of the Apoſtles ; yea, he writes to all Believers, for it was er yet deemed a Catholick General Epiſtle, as the Title of it is. Yea, and if e Apoſtles, and St. John himſelf had Aſſurance, (and if any of them had, I ould think that this Diſciple that Chriſt loved, and who lay in his Boſom, d who knew his Heart, and whom the Diſciples employed to get out Chriſt's ecrets, had Aſſurance) then other Believers may have it too : He ſpeaks to this urpoſe, 1 John 4. 14, 16. We who ſaw Chriſt do teſtifie theſe things, we know and have lieved the Love that God hath to us : He tells them his Scope was, that they Be-evers might have Fellowſhip with us ; You Believers with us Apoſtles ; that , that they might have the ſame Fellowſhip ; and our Fellowſhip (ſaith he) with God the Father, and God the Son, 1 John 1. 3. Yea, Chriſt told his poſtles, John 15. 9, 10, 11. That as his Father loved him, ſo he loved them ; d he had ſaid as much afore in that Sermon, and all this was to aſſure them at they ſhould undoubtedly be ſaved, and greater aſſurance could not be given : heſe things have I ſpoken to you, (ſays he) that your Joy might be full, ver. 11. e. That my Joy might remain in you : Chriſt's meaning is, that his joy might be in em. Now Chriſt's joy aroſe out of aſſurance that the Father loved him, d he would have them enjoy the ſame joy, not for meaſure, for that is im-oſſible, but for truth, to ariſe out of the ſame cauſe, and from the ſame grounds ; hat ſo your joy might be full. Now the ſame joy that Chriſt wiſheth to them, e ſame doth St. John to all Believers ; and as Chriſt ſays, that he ſpake thoſe ings that Their joy might be full, ſo St. John ſays, that he wrote theſe things at their joy might be full alſo. So that (to wind up this) as Chriſt had ſurance, and joy thence ariſing, ſo he endeavoured to raiſe in his Diſciples the me, that they might have his joy, and full joy, and the Apoſtles endeavoured oo to beget the ſame joy in Believers that was in themſelves ; that Ye may have llowſhip with us, and that your joy may be full, 1 John 1. 3, 4. Now wherein were e Apoſtles to rejoice but in this, that their Names were written in Heaven ; Chriſt ſays Luke 10. 20. that as in matter of Holineſs Paul and the Apoſtles ropounded Chriſt as a Pattern, and themſelves as an Example, as they followed Chriſt, (Be ye followers of us, as we are of Chriſt,) ſo in point of Aſſurance, Chriſt ropounds his joy as the Pattern for the Apoſtles, and they theirs for Believ-rs, and therefore this Priviledge is not to be look'd for only in them, but in Believers.

Object. 2. The Second Evaſion is this, It is Objected, That though Aſſurance may be vouchſafed to ſome of lower rank than Apoſtles, yet it is to ſuch as are of long ſtanding in Chriſtianity, who after long Experience have Hope and Aſſurance begotten in them.

Anſw. I grant it, that many not till then have had it, yet it is attainable for others alſo; for all ſorts of ages in Chriſt, for Babes, Young-men, Old-men, 1 John 2. 12, 14. I write to you Babes, ver. 12. for your ſins are forgiven you: He tells them ſo, becauſe it is that thing he goes about to perſwade them of; it is Pardon which is the great thing they have in their Eye when they are young, and that is the grand mercy they are in purſuit of, and which they moſt pray for, and are moſt ſolicitous about: And though they are but Babes, and ſo have but little Faith, yet he ſays, their Sins are forgiven; To you Babes and Infants it is given to know, this which is hid from the wiſe and prudent. Chriſt therefore tells many New Converts on the firſt day, that their Sins were forgiven, and he tells this to thoſe of ordinary rank, not Diſciples and Apoſtles only; ſo he told that Palſey-man, Mat. 9. 2. ſo he ſaid to Mary, who was lately a Sinner, a known Sinner, Luke 7. 37, 39. (and the Phariſees thought her ſo ſtill;) he tells her, ver. 48. Thy ſins are forgiven thee; and to another, ſaith he, Thy faith hath made thee whole. And ſeeing your ſins are forgiven you, though you be but of a days ſtanding, therefore you may take the Comfort of it as well as others. And the Apoſtle John gives this Reaſon of his Writing to them, Children, becauſe (ſays he) you have known the Father. Ariſtotle obſerves it, and Experience finds it true, that one of the firſt acts of Reaſon in Children is, to call upon their Fathers and Mothers, for they are apt to know them ſooneſt of any thing, and therefore the firſt Words they ſpeak are Mam and Dad, &c. So as to Babes in Chriſtianity, one of the firſt fruits of the Spirit in them often is, to call upon God as a Father, to own God as a Father, to expreſs Child-like affection to him as to a Father, and to ſeek his Fatherly Love; and though all Babes cannot ſay he is their Father, yet they come to him as Children to a Father. Now this Knowledge and Inſtinct after God as a Father being in all Babes, the Apoſtle endeavours to raiſe it, and to teach them to know their Father more: But the Church of Rome teacheth her Children to know their Mother, but to doubt of their Father, which is a Sign they are Baſtards, and ſhe a Strumpet.

Object. 3. The third Evaſion is, To object concerning the manner of Aſſurance, though indeed they will grant that by an extraordinary Revelation and Certificate from Heaven, Men may be aſſured, as Paul was, who was wrapt up into the third Heaven, and as thoſe were by Chriſt when he was upon the Earth; yet they deny that in the ordinary way of God's dealing with Men ſuch Aſſurance is attain'd.

Anſw. But St. John here gives ordinary Directions, how Men may come to be aſſured, for he writes an whole Epiſtle on purpoſe, which if Men believe not, neither would they believe if one from the dead, or an Angel from Heaven ſhould aſſure them: And he tells us, that there are not only Witneſſes in Heaven, but alſo Witneſſes on Earth, in a Believers own Breaſt; a Believer hath the Witneſs in himſelf, and carries a work of Faith and Sanctification in him, to which if he give ear he may come to be aſſured, 1 John 5. 8, 10. and to this end the Apoſtle gives many Signs of the Work of Grace in a Man.

Object. 4. Yea, but they Object, Fourthly, That let theſe ſigns be never ſo infallible in themſelves, ſo as he that hath them in him ſhall ſurely be ſaved, yet the Word names no man in particular; it ſays not that thou John or Thomas haſt theſe things in thee.

Anſw. In anſwer to this John tells us two things: Firſt, That Every one who believeth, hath the witneſs in himſelf, a work of the Spirit in him, whence this Teſtimony may be fetch'd, Chap. 5. 10. And, Secondly, That He hath given us his Spirit alſo, Chap. 3. 24. to witneſs and teſtifie with the Word, and with the Work in a Man's Heart, and make Application, Chap. 5. ver. 6. As therefore when they ask how we know that the Scripture is the Word of God? for, ſay they, it is no where written that it is the Word: We anſwer, that it is an authentical Proof of it ſelf, it carries its own Teſtimony with it: So is Grace, and the Word written in the Heart of a Believer; that Word engrafted, and the Law written in the Heart, is an authentick Evidence of it ſelf; and as God's Spirit accompanies his Word with a Divine Light and Authority, ſo

e doth his own Work in the Heart; there is but this Difference, that the ne is the Word written with Ink, the other delineated with the Spirit of the ving God: And if the Apoſtle ſays of the Corinthians, that they were ſo fair an piſtle of Chriſt, that it might be known and read of all Men, much more then this true of themſelves.

Object. 5. Fifthly, they ſay, Yea, but our Hearts are deceitful, and who can know hem? and many are deceived.

Anſw. I anſwer, That it is true, that the natural frame of it is ſuch, and yet he Apoſtle in this Epiſtle refers Men to the judgment of their own Hearts, as a Witneſs in this Point. 1. As for matter of Condemnation, therein the Teſtimony of a Man's own Heart may be right, and give in a right Verdict, though t be thus deceitful, for in a Man's own Cauſe a deceitful Perſon will take part with himſelf; therefore if ſuch an One condems himſelf, his Witneſs is ſo much the more authentick; and therefore, ſays he, ver. 20. of the 3*d.* Chapter, If our Hearts ondemn us, God is greater than our Hearts, and condemns us much more. And, 2. As he Teſtimony of our deceitful Hearts, though deceitful, may be taken for Condemnation, ſo the Teſtimony of our renewed Hearts may be admitted for the uſtification of a Man's Eſtate: Therefore he adds, ver. 21. If our Hearts condemn us not, then we have Confidence towards God. 3. Though it be true, that our Hearts as Natural are deceitful, yet Chap. 5. ver. 20. he ſays, that the Son of God ath given us a mind that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true: So hat though our Spirits are deceitful, yet that New Underſtanding is given on purpoſe to know the truth, and to diſcern of it. And, 4. Though our own Hearts are deceitful, if left naked, yet he hath not left us without another Witneſs to guide this new Mind, and that is his Spirit, Chap. 2. ver. 20, 27. You have received an Unction, which teacheth you all things: And that Spirit is one of the Witneſſes, Chap. 5. ver. 6, 8.

Object. 6. Yea, but they Object, Sixthly, That there are many Enthuſiaſms, and Satan joins with Hypocrites hearts, and deludes them, and ſo a Man ſhall not be able to know the Spirits witneſs from that of this great Decieever.

Anſw. The Apoſtle tells us, Chap. 5. ver. 6. It is the Spirit that beareth witneſs, becauſe the Spirit is truth: That is, did he not give an infallible Teſtimony, he were not fit to be reckoned a Witneſs; and if he is a Witneſs, then he is ſo as to perſwade Men to whom he gives witneſs, for why elſe is he ſaid to witneſs? and this Record too is the Record of God, which is greater than Man's, and therefore infallible, Chap. 2. ver. 27. This annointing (ſays he) teacheth you all things, and is truth, and is no Lye; that is, doth not, cannot deceive you. A Man may ſee a thing with falſe Lights, and be decieved, but if I ſee a thing with the Light of the Sun, I ſee it with a true Light, and am not decieved.

Object. 7. They Object yet Seventhly, That it is true, man may have ſuch a Knowledge, as is joined with ſome probable hope, and a good and a happy Conjecture, which often doth not decieve in the end, but yet not ſuch but there wants an Infallibility, ſo as there may falſum ſubeſſe, be a miſtake at the bottom.

Anſw. I anſwer, How often doth John inculcate, by this we know, and we know, &c. and more expreſly, Chap. 2. ver. 3. Hereby we know we know him: We know him was too little, he therefore adds, But we know we know him; and Chap. 3. verſe 19. We know we are of the Truth, (how can this be without infallibity?) and ſhall aſſure our hearts afore him. If they themſelves were to put words of Aſſurance into any Teſtimony, or into any Bond, they could not ſay more, or put in more Expreſſions to put all out of Doubt.

Object. 8. True, ſay ſome, in the Eighth Place, They may know at the preſent that they are the Sons of God; Now we are the Sons of God, 1 John 3. 2. but what will become of us hereafter? whether we ſhall continue ſo, we know not.

Anſw. The Apoſtle anſwers them in that 3*d. Chap. ver.* 2, 3. that indeed what the great Glory of that Eſtate hereafter will be, they knew not, nor the World knows not; and in outward appearance they are now (though for the preſent the Sons of God) of all Men moſt miſerable, and therefore in regard of their outward Garb and Splendour it doth not appear what they ſhall be, as it doth not appear what Wicked Men ſhall be; but yet for the certainty of our future Condition, as now we are the Sons of God, ſo We know, that when he ſhall appear, we ſhall be like him.

Object. 9. Yea, but Ninthly, It will be ſaid, There are many that ſeemed as good as your ſelves, whom you thought good Chriſtians, and they thought themſelves ſuch, and yet they have turned Apoſtates; and will not their falling away daſh a Believer's Aſſurance?

Anſw. He anſwers ver. 19. of the ſecond Chapter, that they were never true; They went out from us becauſe they were not of us, if they had been of us they would no doubt have continued with us, but they went out that they might be made manifeſt that they were not at all of us.

Object. 10. Yea, but yet Tenthly, In that there are ſuch among Profeſſors, who are a great while not manifeſted to themſelves or others, may not this however diſparage and bring all to an Uncertainty in the beſt, ſeeing they know not but they may prove ſuch?

Anſw. No, (ſays the Apoſtle, ver. 20.) But ye have an Unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things: He ſpeaks by way of difference, and to anſwer the Cavil; and ver. 27. That ſame anointing teacheth you all things, and is truth, and is no lye, and therefore by his teaching you are not decieved: And among other things he hath taught you the Truth of your Eſtates, even as it hath taught you that you ſhall abide in him; and Chap. 3. 19. Hereby we know we are of the truth.

Object. 11. But, Eleventhly, It will be Objected, Will not this Aſſurance make Men licentious, and ſecure, and more careleſs?

Anſw. No, ſays the Apoſtle, however Preſumption in carnal Hearts may work, yet in thoſe who are truly godly it hath the contrary Effect: For he that hath this particular Hope for himſelf, hereafter to be like Chriſt, and to be at preſent the Child of God, this Hope conforms him to Chriſt here, to whom he muſt be conformed hereafter: He purifies himſelf as he is pure: It works out Corruption; and therefore ver. 1. of the 2*d*. Chapter, he ſays, He wrote theſe things that they might not ſin.

Object. 12. But poor Believers they object, Twelfthly, That they fall into ſin, and then all their Aſſurance is clean daſhed and eclipſed.

Anſw. As in the 3*d*. Chapter there is a Seed mention'd which remains in them unſhaken out, ſo they may if they ſin go with a confidence to God thorough Chriſt, and recover themſelves: If any man ſin, (ſays he, 1 John 2. 1.) we have an advocate with the Father, &c. An Advocate that never pleaded bad Cauſe, or was caſt in his Suit, and who pleads with a Father and not with a Judge, and who is Jeſus Chriſt the righteous; whoſe Righteouſneſs is eternal, and which no ſin can outvie, and which is made ours; ſo as if we confeſs our ſins, Chap. 1. 9. he is a juſt God in nothing elſe but to forgive them, and to cleanſe us alſo from all Unrighteouſneſs, and hath bound himſelf to both by Promiſe. And hence, and hence only ariſeth full Joy and perfect Charity, ver. 4. of the firſt Chapter, and ver. 17. of the fourth Chapter. Love can never be perfect when a Man is poſſeſſed with jealouſies of Enmity that may be for time to come; therefore True love caſts out ſuch fear, ver. 18. of that fourth Chapter; Amare tanquam aliquando oſurum venenum eſt amicitiæ; To love as one who afterwards will hate, is the Poyſon of Friendſhip. So that no joy can be full, though in the greateſt Good, the Enjoyment of which for time to come is uncertain.

CHAP. V.

How Aſſurance is produced in the Heart of a Believer, by Three Witneſſes in Heaven, and Three Witneſſes on Earth: The Different Nature of the Teſtimony which they give.

1 JOHN V. 7, 8.

For there are three that bear Record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one.

And there are three that bear Witneſs in Earth, the Spirit, and the Water, and the Blood, and theſe three agree in one.

AS we have ſeen the Apoſtle's Scope in this Epiſtle to have been chiefly, Firſt, To Aſſure God's People: And, Secondly, To ſhew the fruits of ſuch Aſſurance, as Motives to it; ſo in the next place let us conſider what he hath written that may help a Believer to this Aſſurance; what Directions, what Helps, what Evidence he hath deſcrib'd, whereby he may come to be aſſured; this will both demonſtrate that this is in the Scope of this Epiſtle, as likewiſe ſhew that Aſſurance may be had, by ſhewing from what Grounds and Proofs it is deriv'd. He directs them to two Trinity of Witneſſes, whereof three are in Heaven, and three on Earth: For I take it that all theſe ſix Witneſſes have their Evidence ſet to one and the ſame Record, both that Chriſt is the Fountain of Life, and that God hath given to a Believer Eternal Life. Theſe Witneſſes do not part or divide their Witneſs, (as if the three in Heaven ſhould witneſs to the one part, and thoſe on the Earth to the other) but as each Claſſis of theſe agree among themſelves in one, ſo they both agree in the ſame Teſtimony unto both; and therefore as the Witneſſes on Earth do witneſs to a Believer that he hath Eternal Life, ſo thoſe in Heaven do join ſingly in this very Teſtimony alſo. And becauſe in all things we would have proof of, the greateſt furtherance any one can do, is to produce and direct us to ſuch as are the only true faithful Witneſſes, that can ſpeak infallibly in the cauſe, therefore John to help a poor Believer in this great point of Aſſurance, points out to him the ſole infallible Witneſſes that can give in Evidence, which if he do attend unto, and examine, and ſeek unto for their Witneſs, he may get Evidence ſufficient. And in this point he brings plenty out of both Courts, both of Heaven and on Earth, three in either; that as none were condemned but under the mouth of two or three Witneſſes, ſo none are aſſured of Salvation but by as many. Theſe Witneſſes ſerve, as I ſaid, to confirm two Records; the one, that Jeſus was that Chriſt, and the Son of God; the other, that we are Sons in him, and Heirs of Life: We have the ſame, and as many as Jeſus Chriſt hath. Now we are to conſider them as they are Witneſſes to our Title and Adoption.

Of thoſe three in Heaven, and who are meant by them, there is no difficulty among Interpreters. The Being of the three Perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and how they have given Teſtimony to this part of the Record, that Jeſus is the Son of God, is evident in the ſtory of the Goſpel; the Father from Heaven, ſaying, This is my well-beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed, hear him; and Chriſt himſelf, who came from Heaven, witneſſed of himſelf, as often in the Goſpel of John is evident; for Inſtance, John 4. 26. And the Holy Ghoſt witneſſed this by deſcending upon him, Mat. 3. 16, 17. Acts 5. 32.

But how theſe three witneſs Salvation to a Believer is a difficulty, and a thing not ordinarily obſerved. As alſo again, What ſhould be meant by Blood, Water and Spirit, this hath puzled Interpreters. I accord with thoſe who

Firſt, By Blood underſtand the Work of Juſtification on a poor Sinner, and by

Part II. by a Synechdoche and Metonimy all that which goes to his Juſtification. By Blood then here is to be underſtood both that which is the Object of Faith as juſtifying, which in Chriſt you know is chiefly his Blood, (which is call'd The blood of the New Teſtament, ſhed for the Remiſſion of ſins; that is, that Blood which ratifies all the Promiſes of the New Teſtament, his Blood being put for all his Obedience) as alſo that rich Grace in God which ſprinkles or applies this Blood to poor Sinners, and which Faith in his Blood looks unto, Rom. 3. 24, 25. Being juſtified by his Grace, thorough the Redemption that is in Chriſt, whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation thorough Faith in his Blood. All theſe Synechdochically are comprehended in Blood, in this Place of John, even Chriſt's Blood ſhed, and Free-grace ſprinkling it, and the Promiſes ratified by it, which are the Object of Faith. And by a Metonimy the work of Faith it ſelf is alſo meant, which lays hold on this Blood, (the Object connotating the act it ſelf) Blood, that is, Faith in his Blood. In a word, the whole Work of Juſtification, and whatever goes to it, is meant by Blood.

Secondly, By Water I underſtand Sanctification, both in the habits and fruits of it: For whom Chriſt's Blood juſtifies, it alſo doth cleanſe and ſanctifie, and waſheth away the filth of Sin; thus it is expreſs'd John 3. 5. A Man being regenerated, and born again of Water, and the Holy Ghoſt; that is, of the Holy Ghoſt working as Water, purifying and cleanſing. So ſays the Apoſtle too, Eph. 5. 26. Chriſt gave himſelf for his Church, that he might ſanctifie and cleanſe it with the waſhing of Water by the Word. And as habitual Regeneration or Sanctification, ſo actual cleanſing a Man's ſelf daily, is ſignified to us by Water: Thus in Iſa. 1. 16. Waſh you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings, ceaſe to do evil, learn to do well. Eſpecially purifying the Heart is denoted by it, which is done by Faith, and follows upon believing; thus Jer. 4. 14. Waſh thy Heart from wickedneſs; how long ſhall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee? It makes the Heart fruitful unto every good work, and every Grace to grow up in a Man, Pſal. 1.

And that theſe two witneſs that Chriſt is the Son of God, may eaſily be conceived: As, Firſt, That his Blood is able to take away the guilt of Sin, (which nothing elſe could do) this argues it to be the Blood of God, Acts 20. 26. The force of it lies in this, that it was Offered by the Eternal Spirit, Heb. 3. 14. ſo likewiſe Water witneſſeth it, in that it ſhould be able to ſubdue ſin, waſh away the power of it, change the Heart, make a Man a New Creature, all this argues him to be the Saviour of the World, Acts 5. 31. and that theſe do alſo join to give in Teſtimony to aſſurance, that God hath given a man Eternal Life, is alſo evident by that in Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with full aſſurance of Faith: And what conduceth to effect that Aſſurance, and to help it forward? both theſe here mentioned: Firſt, Having our hearts ſprinkled from an Evil Conſcience; and by what is that done? by this Blood here meant; ſee Heb. 9. 14. How much more ſhall the Blood of Chriſt, who through the Eternal Spirit offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your Conſciences from dead works? This Blood ſprinkled on the Conſcience by Faith, helps forward aſſurance of Faith. The Second is alſo mentioned, Having our Bodies waſhed with pure water; that is, Our whole Man ſanctified and cleanſed. He writing to the Hebrews, ſpeaks in the Language of the Levitical Law, (which he explains to them in all that Epiſtle) in which there was the ſprinkling of the Blood of Goats by Hyſop, which ſignified Juſtification, or the Sprinkling of Chriſt's Blood upon the Conſcience, Heb. 9. 13, 14. and alſo they waſhed their Bodies with Water when they went to ſacrifice, and were unclean; which ſignified the Sanctification of the whole Man, Body being put for the whole, as Rom. 12. 1. Offer up your Bodies a reaſonable ſacrifice to God; that is, your whole Man; which Phraſe he uſeth when he alludes to the Sacrifices of the Law, as there he doth.

Now then the third Witneſs, the Spirit, is the Holy Ghoſt, who comes down from Heaven, and dwells here on Earth in the Heart of a Believer, and ſo takes part with him, and joins his Witneſs to theſe other two, his Teſtimony being the greateſt, the cleareſt of all the reſt: And his witneſs we may find Rom. 8. 16. The Spirit it ſelf beareth witneſs with our Spirits, that we are the Sons of God: He joins his Teſtimony to the other two, and puts all out of Queſtion. Now both theſe two Teſtimonies of Blood, that is, the work of Juſtification and Faith, and Water, that is Sanctification, Paul ſhuts up in one, namely, Our Spirit; not our Spirit as naked in it ſelf, our natural Spirit, which is full of Deceit, but as framed and renewed to the Obedience of Faith and true Holineſs, and as enlightned and irradiated by the Spirit, and ſo fitted to witneſs the Truth; and both thoſe Teſtimonies he calls the witneſs of our Spirits, becauſe our apprehending Juſtification and believing, as alſo that of Sanctification, are Works ſeated in and of our Spirits. The Teſtimony of both thoſe is fetch'd and produced out of the Records that are written in our own Boſoms, from thoſe gracious Acts and Diſpoſitions, and Dealings of God with our Spirits, in drawing us to Faith, and juſtifying, and alſo ſanctiſying of us; and they are call'd our Spirits, to diſtinguiſh both thoſe from that other Teſtimony of the Spirit which is fetch'd out of the Records in God's own Breaſt, and quoteth not, nor referreth us not to any dealing of God with us, or work in us, but is an immediate Voice of God's Spirit: And this John himſelf intimates unto us, (to accord John and Paul) that by ſome of theſe Witneſſes he means the Work of God in our ſelves, (which Paul calls our Spirits) when he adds, He that believeth, hath the witneſs in himſelf; whereby he declares, that ſome of thoſe Witneſſes, both the Work of Faith and Sanctification, are works of and in himſelf, and that they may give him ſome Evidence. The meaning is, he carries in his own Boſom written the matter of a good Teſtimony, if produced, and viewed, and examined.

Firſt, The work of Faith in Chriſt's Blood, and the Blood of Chriſt ſprinkled by Faith, have a Teſtimony in them, if examined: That is, when firſt a Man ſees he was brought in, and his Heart won to believe, according to the true Tenour and right Courſe of the Spirit in the work of Faith, and upon the right Grounds, Motives, and Terms, and Reaſons the Word chalks out, and according to the right aim, and intent, and purpoſe of God in the Goſpel, which is in Juſtification to ſet up Chriſt's Blood, and his rich Grace: When he ſees he came in at the right Door of Faith, as Acts 4. 27. when he ſees that God's Spirit opened to him, and guided him in at the right Door: In brief, when he hath ſeen the guilt of his ſins as the greateſt evil, an emptineſs and unſufficiency of help in himſelf, or any thing in him for time paſt, preſent, or to come, and in all Creatures and Means whatever, and then hath had the Fountain of Chriſt's Blood opened to him, as Hagar had that Well by the Angel which ſhe ſaw not: When he ſpies Chriſt out, and his Blood as the only means to help him, and ſees the al-ſufficiency of Redemption in it to waſh him, juſtifie him; and prizeth it accordingly, and thirſts after a draught of it, and hungers after nothing but his Righteouſneſs, ſo as nothing can down with him elſe, and he eyes nothing but it, and reſolves to have help from nothing but him: And when bethinking himſelf how to cloſe with Chriſt, and to get an Intereſt in that Blood, he finds God graciouſly opening the riches, the freeneſs of his Grace, that imputeth, ſprinkleth it, and is enabled to ſee Grace ſo free, ſo rich, that nothing in himſelf can hinder it, as nothing in himſelf can further it: And not only ſo, but when he finds God's Spirit ſecretly ſtill dealing with him to take it, to take God at his Offer of it, as being faithful, ſerious in it, as being alſo the richeſt purchaſe that ever the World had; when he finds God's Spirit reaſoning with him in private, anſwering and taking away his Scruples and Objections that lye betwixt him and the taking of it, urging him, preſſing him, laying afore him God's Command to believe, his Threatnings, his Invitations, his Willingneſs, and he ſees how welcome he ſhall be; when he finds God's Spirit drawing and winding in his Heart to cloſe with Chriſt and his Blood, (and he knows not how) over-perſwading him to reſt in Chriſt, and to caſt himſelf on him, cauſing him to truſt in him, which elſe he ſhould never have done; and ſo he takes Chriſt with all his Offices, to give himſelf up to him, to reſt in him, to go no further, no whither elſe for help: When he finds he can with ſome ſecret Eſtabliſhment of Spirit emplead the Arguments of Faith, wield Faith's Weapons, and finds his Spirit ſtrengthened thereby againſt carnal Reaſons and Guilt, ſo as he comes away from the Bar and Throne of Grace with a kind of Victory over the Pleadings and Condemnings of his Heart, and he is not non-pluſs'd, but ſees in Free-Grace and Chriſt's Blood ſufficient matter ſuggeſted to anſwer to all, and ſo he reſts? When he finds that as out of ſelf-flattery he is not encouraged to believe, Part II. but out of the Importunity of God's Spirit that follows him with ſuch thoughts, that God will have it ſo, ſo alſo that his heart is raiſed above ſelf-love in it, to God's aim and end in juſtifying, namely, to admire the Riches of his Grace, to adore the all-ſufficiency of this Blood, to aſcribe all to it. And then, as the work of Faith in Chriſt's Blood, ſo the Effect of his Blood thus apprehended, empleaded, evidenceth it to him; for ſtill when Guilt ariſeth, he can oppoſe Chriſt's Blood to it, and bathes his Soul in thoughts of Faith about it, and ſo finds the Guilt quelled, allayed, his Conſcience pacified, ſtilled and quieted by it, when no Duties, nor nothing elſe will give him eaſe: This (if a Man obſerve theſe things) may be an Evidence to him, that Chriſt's Blood is ſprinkled on him. This is the Teſtimony of Blood, as Heb. 12. 24. it is ſaid, The Blood of Chriſt ſpeaks better things than the Blood of Abel: This ſame ſpeaking comfortable things in the Conſcience of a Man, and eaſing a Man of his Load, purging, pacifying, ſtilling, allaying the Conſcience, when nothing but his Blood doth it, not Duties, not vain Hopes; this is the Witneſs of Blood, though bloody Iniquities cries loud, as the blood of Abel in Cain's Conſcience, yet this Blood ſpeaks better things; and a Man ſtill in Diſtreſs can have, with ſome ſupport, recourſe to this Blood, when to nothing elſe, and finds the Faith in it ſecretly ſupporting him. This is the firſt Witneſs, when a Man obſerves this; for though Faith is not Aſſurance, yet upon believing a Man may have ſome evidence from the work of it, and the Effect of Chriſt's Blood in his Conſcience apprehended by Faith, and therefore the Scripture points us to the Work of Faith, as that which may be known, and which gives in Evidence; ſo in the firſt verſe of this Chapter he ſays, He that believes is born of God: And therefore Chriſt ſaid to that poor Man, If thou canſt believe; Lord, (ſays he) I believe! help my Vnbelief! Mark 9. 24. He could not have anſwered ſo, unleſs he could have diſcerned the Work of Faith in himſelf: So that new Convert, Acts 8. 37. If thou believeſt with thy whole Heart, thou may'ſt be baptized. Baptiſm was the Ordinance to Men newly converted, which conveyed the Spirit as ſealing, Baptiſm being the Seal of Righteouſneſs, and this Man before thus ſealed by Baptiſm could tell he believed, for he anſwers, I do believe that Jeſus is the Son of God.

The Second Witneſs is the work and workings of Sanctification, Water. The Believer finds that cloſing thus with Chriſt changeth him, renews him, waſheth him from the Power of ſin, puts a new Spirit and Principle into him, clean oppoſite to ſin, ſo as he cannot ſin; he finds a new Spring of gracious Diſpoſitions in him, ſtill bubling naturally up, and cleanſing, and working out Corruptions, John 4. 14. he finds many ſeveral ſtreams of it, of Love to God and Chriſt, and that for themſelves, a ſtream of Hatred of ſin, running againſt a ſtream of Love to it: Every Grace is a ſtream in him, and all his Graces do teſtifie alſo, if they be obſerved. Read this Epiſtle of John, you will find he cuts this water into many Rills and Signs, in every of which as ſo many Signs Believers may ſee and have ſome Evidence of their Eſtates: And he ſays, not only that ſuch Diſpoſitions are in God's Children, but he preſents them to them as Signs whence they might know they have Eternal Life, it being his Scope to help Believers this way. One Sign that he gives, is a bent of Heart to keep all God's Commandements, Chap. 2. ver. 3. Hereby we do know we know him, if we keep his Commandements; and ver. 5. Hereby we know we are in him, eſpecially then, when the Commandements are not grievous; and Chap. 5. ver. 3. This (ſays he) is the Love of God, that we keep his Commandements; that is, this is the certain ſign and fruit of it: So Chap. 2. ver. 29. Ye know (ſays he) that every one that doth righteouſneſs is born of him. So purging a Man's ſelf from ſin upon the hope and aſſurance of Heaven, is another ſign deſcrib'd by him, Chap. 3. ver. 3. Every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure. So having a Seed in a Man contrary to ſin, that he cannot ſin, is another ſign which he diſplays, ver. 9. Whoſoever is born of God, doth not commit ſin, for his ſeed remaineth in him, and he cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God. So Love to the Brethren is another diſtinguiſhing Character, ver. 14. We know we are paſſed from death to life, when we love the Brethren; when it is ſuch Love as we could lay down our Lives, our Eſtates and Goods, for the Church, ver. 16, 17. and this Love is in deed and in truth, hearty, real, ver. 18. then hereby we know we are of the truth, ver. 20. and then finding the Spirit dwelling in us, is another Mark of our good ſtate, ver. 24. Hereby we know he abideth in us, by the Spirit he hath given us: And then he gives Signs ſuitable to thoſe times, and to hinder their being miſchief'd by the falſe Teachers among them, Chap. 4. And alſo he gives Reaſons ſtill why ſuch ſigns are infallible, this you may obſerve if you read this Epiſtle, as when he ſhews that if we love God it is certain God loves us, Chap. 4. ver. 10. proving it by this ſtrong reaſon, becauſe his Love is the cauſe of ours, ver. 19. ſo he ſhews why Love to the Brethren is an infallible ſign, Chap. 4. ver. 7. and Chap. 5. ver. 1. becauſe Love is of God, and he is the fountain of it, and he that loves the Begetter, loves the begotten, and ſo on the contrary: And alſo he proves ſometimes one ſign by another, Chap. 5. ver. 2. By this we know that we love the Children of God, becauſe we love God, and keep his Commandements: So that when one ſign is not ſo evident, yet a Man may have recourſe to another; and then alſo, when a Man's Heart is raiſed by Faith to overcome this World, to deſpiſe the good things of it, and endure all the evil, when he is tried in both, and overcomes both through Faith, Chap. 5. ver. 14. he makes it a ſign of being born of God. And you ſhall obſerve withall, that he doth this by way of Difference, giving the contrary as infallible ſigns of wicked Men; He that walks in any ſin, hates his Brother, ſuch an One is in Darkneſs, Chap. 2. knows not God, Chap. 3. ver. 6. but is of the Devil, ver. 8. And he that loves not the Saints, abides in death, and is a Murtherer, and hath not Eternal Life in him, ver. 14. I ſhall name no more, but return to this Teſtimony of Water, and add this, That as that of Blood is a Teſtimony drawn from quelling the guilt of Sin, and oppoſite thereto, ſo this of Water is a Teſtimony drawn from ſubduing the power of ſin, and putting in contrary Principles. Now as the power of ſin when it prevails, ſtrengthens the guilt of ſin againſt us, and raiſeth doubts, ſo when the cleanſing power of Grace prevails, it helps to ſtrengthen Faith in Chriſt's Blood. Faith having once rightly and alone cloſed with Chriſt's Blood to juſtifie the Believer, and having aſcribed all to it, then Water may come in as a Witneſs to juſtifie that Faith. Now the ordinary Errour is, that Men neglect the Blood of Chriſt, and the work of Faith, and the ſprinkling of it on their Conſciences for Juſtification, and the Evidence thereof, and betake themſelves wholly to Water, e're they have cloſed with this Blood: They would ſee themſelves ſanctified e're they have cloſed with Juſtification. But if a Man hath been guided once aright in the work of Faith, and his heart pitch'd right for Juſtification, to ſeek it alone in Blood, then Water comes fitly in as a Witneſs, and is to be liſtned unto; but till then, the danger is, leſt Men ſhould have that recourſe to Water which they ſhould have to the Blood of Chriſt, and reſt therein for Juſtification.

The third Witneſs is that of the Spirit, whereby is meant an immediate Teſtimony of the Holy Ghoſt, ſuperadded to all theſe: The Teſtimony of Faith finding eaſe in Chriſt's Blood, as reſted in alone for Salvation, is often prevail'd againſt by the guilt of Sin, and counter-checked, and that Teſtimony of Water is worn out, and oblitterated by the power of Sin, which alſo ſtrengthens that guilt; ſo as tho' the Soul hath an aſſurance, depending on the prevalency of the fruits of Grace in it ſelf, which when the prevalency of that Grace and Faith is in the Soul may give a certainty, yet it is ſuch as even then the Soul lingers after, and waits for a further diſcovery, and is taught to do ſo: There is therefore a third Teſtimony, and that is of the Holy Ghoſt himſelf, which is immediate; that is, though it backs and confirms what the other two ſaid, yet quotes them not, builds not his Teſtimony on them, but raiſeth the Heart up to ſee its Adoption and Sonſhip, by an immediate diſcovery of God's mind to it, and what Love he hath born to it; which is not argued from what is wrought in it ſelf, but God ſays unto a Man's Soul, (as David deſires) I am thy ſalvation, Pſal. 35. 3. and as Chriſt ſaid upon Earth to ſome few, Thy ſins are forgiven thee; ſo from Heaven it is ſpoken by his Spirit, (which yet dwells in the Heart afore) that a Man's ſins are forgiven, and he is owned by the whole Trinity to be God's Child: And this Teſtimony was that which the Apoſtles received, when they received the Holy Ghoſt after Chriſt's Aſcenſion as a Comforter, whom yet they had before already, and knew by the Fruits and Effects of him, both Water and Blood, Faith

Part II. and Holineſs, that he was in them, but yet not ſo as afterward, John 14. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. they now knew the Spirit, and he dwelt in them, ver. 17. they knew before that they had Grace, and that they believed; ſo Peter ſays, I believe that thou art the Son of God: And after his Death, afore the Holy Ghoſt was given, when Chriſt asked if he loved him? Peter ſays he did, Thou knoweſt I love thee, John 21. 16. They had the Teſtimony of Water and Blood both, but they had not yet the Spirit as a Comforter immediately ſealing up all; I will ſend you the Comforter, (ſays Chriſt, John 14. 16, 20.) and at that day you ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you: Thus he promiſes that he would further manifeſt himſelf to them, that whereas they knew afore dimly, then they ſhould know to purpoſe; and this likewiſe we find the Epheſians did receive after they believed, and had been ſanctified, Eph. 1. 13. In whom after ye believed ye were ſealed with the Spirit of Promiſe: As Seals are for Confirmation, ſo they were ſealed with Grace and Holineſs, and the Image of God before, (for that follows upon Faith) and they had truſted on Chriſt, had cloſed with Chriſt, and the Word of Truth, and Goſpel of Salvation: But now when they by ſheer Faith had honoured God, by ſealing to his Word, then God comforts them by ſealing them with his Spirit, and this Witneſs is immediate, that is, it builds not its Teſtimony on any thing in us; it is not a Teſtimony fetch'd out of a Man's ſelf, or the Work of the Spirit in Man, as the others were; for the Spirit ſpeaks not by his Effects, but ſpeaks from himſelf, and confirms the other, and therefore is ſaid to witneſs with the other, that is, comes in to ſtrengthen their Witneſs; and though the Holy Ghoſt joined with Water and Blood in their Teſtimony, (for Grace without him cannot evidence, as it cannot work without him) yet ſo his Teſtimony lay hid in theirs, as they are ſaid to witneſs, and his Teſtimony is conceal'd, though he alledgeth them, and clears them up to a Man, and therefore a Man ſhall find the ſame ſigns ſometimes evidence to him, and ſometimes not, as the Spirit irradiates them; and yet this Teſtimony of his is over and above theirs, diſtinct from theirs, and ſevered from theirs, and therefore is ſaid to make a third Witneſs, which as witneſſing in the other he could not be ſaid to be: But though this Teſtimony of the Spirit be beyond the witneſs of Faith or Water, and above what the Word in any ſound or ſyllables carries with it, yet it is always in and with the Word, and according to it, and therefore they are ſaid To be ſealed with the Spirit of Promiſe, Eph. 1. 13. It calls up ſome word that ecchoes to it, and goes with it. The Spirit opens God's mind in ſome words, and alſo though it may come in from an Evidence received and entertained from the former Witneſſes, Blood and Water, (and therefore is ſaid to witneſs with the other, as coming to back what they ſaid; yet ſo as their Teſtimony then comes to be conſidered, but as the occaſion upon which this of the Spirit is let in, and as the hint given; but it raiſeth the Soul up higher, and the other Teſtimony as it were falls down, and God's immediate Mind and Acceptation out of the Riches of his Grace, entertains a Man's Soul and Thoughts: For as Chriſt received no Teſtimony from Man, though he ſays John gave Teſtimony of him; and as in ſome Colledges when the Colledge-Seal is put to, there needs no Hands, no Witneſſes; or as when the Broad-Seal is put to by a King, he writes Teſte meipſo, ſo doth the Spirit ſpeak in the Language of a King, Teſte meipſo, Witneſs my ſelf; and receives and borrows no Witneſs from what is in us, but makes his own abundantly ſatisfie. And this Witneſs though it is placed firſt, (after the manner of the Hebrews and other Scriptures) yet comes in as the laſt of the three, as being the greateſt, and that which puts all out of Queſtion, which the other did not ſo fully, and therefore he is ſaid to witneſs with our Spirits, becauſe their Teſtimony is uſually given in firſt; this of the Spirit backs and confirms what they ſaid, as Seals come after a Man's Hand is ſet, as the greater witneſs; or as an Oath comes in after a Promiſe, to put all out of doubt, and to end the Controverſie, Heb. 6. 15, 16, 17, 18. there it is ſaid, that God makes a Promiſe, and though that might aſſure, yet we have doubting Hearts, and therefore he adds an Oath to end all ſtrife: And that he might more abundantly ſhew to the Heirs of Promiſe the immutability of his Counſels, he confirms them with an Oath. So herein I may ſay, that though the Witneſs of Blood and Water might aſſure, if Men were watchful, and could obſerve their Hearts, yet becauſe that Teſtimony ends not the ſtrife ſo fully, therefore he being willing more abundantly to ſhew hew to the Heirs of Salvation their Adoption, ſeals them with his Spirit, which s to them an end of ſtriſe, and for the preſent conquers all Doubts: And as when e ſwears, he uſeth no Name but his own, for none is greater than himſelf, ſo when he thus witneſſeth, he uſeth the Help of no Witneſs but his own, and upon his Witneſs follows Joy unſpeakable and glorious, it being the Earneſt of Hea-en; for it is a ſeeing my Eſtate of Grace and Adoption, not in the effects or Love-tokens, but in God's breaſt, as they in Heaven do. Now ſuch joy follows ot the other two Witneſſes, though Peace and Quiet may.

Having conſider'd the Witneſſes on Earth, let us conſider the Witneſſes that are in Heaven, ſince alſo theſe concur in giving Aſſurance: And beſides, what this place ays, (which to me is clear) let us ſee what Evidence in other Scriptures may e for this diſtinct Witneſs in Rev. 1. 4, 5. John (who had Experience of this work, and had gone thorough theſe three forms) wiſheth to all Believers Grace and Peace, not from the Trinity in common only, but from each apart; Firſt, From the Father, From him who is, was, and is to come; that is, from Jehovah, God the Father, the ſtyle of the whole being attributed to him who is Fons Deitatis, the Fountain of the Godhead: It is meant of the Father, becauſe the other two are afterward diſtinctly mentioned; and then afterwards the Apoſtle wiſheth Peace to them From the ſeven Spirits which are before the Throne: By which he means the Holy Ghoſt, who is the Author of all ſpiritual Graces, nd who in his Gifts is various, and yet but one Spirit, as the Apoſtle ſays, Cor. 12. the Effect is by him put for the Cauſe; and that he means the Holy Ghoſt is plain, becauſe Grace can be wiſh'd from none but God, and therefore e muſt mean the Holy Ghoſt, the third Perſon of the Trinity. Then at laſt he Apoſtle wiſheth them Peace from Chriſt Jeſus, who is the Faithful Witneſs: Grace is the Original of that Love and Favour theſe three have in their Hearts o a Believer, and Peace is the Copy, the Aſſurance of it in his own. He wiſheth them Peace from all theſe, from the Father, from the Son, and from the Holy Ghoſt; you ſee he names them not only together, but as it were apart, From the Father, and from the Spirit, and from the Lord Jeſus; that Peace might be ſpoken from all theſe three Witneſſes. That Promiſe made by Chriſt to his Apoſtles, when he promiſeth them to ſend the Comforter, John 14. is a farther proof of this hing; they then had an implicite Knowledge of the three Perſons Love to them, ut he calls them to a more diſtinct bottoming, and pitching their thoughts on them ll; Ye believe in God, (ſays he) ver. 1. believe alſo in me: They could not have believed in the one but the other muſt be ſuppoſed, for none comes to the Father but by the Son, ver. 6. The thoughts of Believers under the Old Teſtament ran much, and were drawn out more diſtinctly to God the Father, John 5. 32. All men honoured the Father; and ſays he, ver. 9. He that knows me, knows the Father; and ver. 17. he ſays, That they knew the Spirit: But all this was but implicitely, therefore he promiſeth a more diſtinct Manifeſtation of theſe, and their Love to them with a witneſs after the Comforter ſhould come, which he ſays e will ſend, ver. 16. and then they ſhould know He was in the Father, and the Father in him, and they in him, ver. 20. To clear this, Conſider,

Firſt, That all three Perſons have each a peculiar proper Hand in our Salvation, God the Father in electing, Chriſt in redeeming, the Holy Ghoſt in ſanctifying, as many places of Scripture ſhew: For God's intent in the Goſpel is as well to ſet up and magnifie the three Perſons in a Believer's Heart, as his Attributes, and the Riches of his Grace and Mercy in common; therefore in Eph. 3. 3, 4, 5. Paul ſpeaking of the Knowledge he had in the Myſtery of the Goſpel, refers us to what he had writ afore in few words, (not in another Epiſtle, but in this, namely the firſt Chapter) wherein he preſents to them, Firſt, What in a more particular manner God the Father had done for them, from ver. 1, to ver. 6. that he had appointed and ſet out all the Bleſſings they were to enjoy, elected Chriſt, and them in Chriſt, deſigned the Perſons who ſhould enjoy them, to the Praiſe of the Glory of his Grace: Then, Secondly, He preſents them with what God the Son had done, ver. 7, 8, 9. Redemption through his Blood, and the purchaſe of all the Bleſſings God appointed to us; both remiſſion of ſins, and the making known the Goſpel, and the obtaining Heaven by his Blood: Then he ſhews them what the Holy Ghoſt had done, how he had Sealed them, and became the Earneſt of their Inheritance, ver. 13, 14. Now it being a principal Scope of the Goſpel, as to draw Men to Salvation, and to magnifie the Riches of God's Grace in common to all the three Perſons, ſo alſo to make known, and have Men take notice of, thoſe three diſtinct hands theſe three Perſons have in our Salvation. Therefore,

Secondly, Each of theſe three Perſons will have their Love diſtinctly conſidered, and their ſeveral work, which manifeſts their Love, diſtinctly viewed, and ſtudied, and taken notice of by Believers: And though when one Perſon is honoured, they are all jointly honoured in that one, and he that knows the one, knows the other, (He that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father, John 14. 9.) yet they will have their Love conſidered ſo diſtinctly, that (as Chriſt ſays, John 5. 23.) They may honour the Son as they honour the Father, and ſo the Holy Ghoſt alſo; and take notice, and acknowledge what they have done for them, and that they may believe on the Son as well as on the Father, John 14. 1. Ye believe in God, believe alſo in me; he draws their thoughts to himſelf more diſtinctly than yet they were: And therefore,

Thirdly, As in point of believing we are to exerciſe Faith on all three, ſo in point of Aſſurance we may have an Evidence from all three, and therefore as they are the Object of an act of Recumbency, ſo of Aſſurance too, as Witneſſes. God draws out a Believer's thoughts ſometimes more diſtinctly and clearly, to conſider and admire God the Father's Love in electing him, in laying out all the bleſſings he ſhould have in Chriſt, in chooſing, appointing, and calling Chriſt to dye for him, in giving Chriſt to him, and him to Chriſt, in putting Chriſt to death himſelf, and becoming the Executioner, in imputing that his Death to him, &c. And then God carries the Soul more clearly to conſider Chriſt's Love alſo in his Work, in giving himſelf, and that ſo willingly, in having an Eye to it when he hung on the Croſs, in bearing its Name written in his Heart, when he was crucified, and in taking all its ſins on his back, which made his Soul heavy unto the Death; and then God carries the Soul on to a more eſpecial taking notice of God the Holy Ghoſt's Love, which is not conſidered ordinarily by Believers: He brings Souls to conſider, it is the Holy Ghoſt ſanctifies them, who begat them, and formed the New Creature in them, and who takes the pains to foſter it, as a Nurſe its little one, day and night, and who endures with much grief their Corruptions, which yet he cleanſeth them from when they have defiled themſelves, and who bears with them though they rebel and reſiſt his Motions, and who watcheth them, and attends them when they wake, to ſuggeſts good thoughts to them, and when they ſhall go to the Ordinances is ready to aſſiſt them: God makes them conſider, that all aſſiſtance in Duties is from the ſupply of the Spirit, that all the Comforts they have had Is joy in the Holy Ghoſt; that he Helps their Infirmities, indites their Prayers, makes Interceſſion in their Hearts, leads them and guides them, and carries them in his arms as Children; that he keeps them for Heaven, and hath took up their Hearts as his Temple, for ever to dwell there; that he ſeals them up for Heaven, and is the Earneſt of that Inheritance, and he teſtifies that not only this is done, but that he doth it, and that it is his part, as you have them branched out, Rom. 8. and Eph. 1. and by this diſtinct Diſcovery of the Love of all the three Perſons in their ſeveral workings, and contributing to the work of our Salvation, they bear a ſeveral witneſs to a poor Believer, ſo as he is carried on from Witneſs to Witneſs; and as a Man that is to have a Teſtimonial, goes to every Man apart for his Hand, ſo is the Soul carried from one Perſon to another.

I ſhall only anſwer an Objection, and add a Caution or two.

Object. The Objection is this, How the Holy Ghoſt is ſaid to be a diſtinct Witneſs on Earth, and alſo in Heaven, and to have alſo a diſtinct Teſtimony, as one of the three in Heaven, from that of the three on Earth?

Anſw. To anſwer this, Conſider, That it is the Holy Ghoſt who is the Reporter and Recorder of all theſe ſix Teſtimonies, and therefore is named in both, for Blood could not teſtifie without him, nor Water: As Grace cannot work, ſo nor Comfort without him, unleſs he irradiates it, and opens the Mouth of it to witneſs. This I think to be the moſt genuine intent of that place, Rom. 8. 16. when he ſaid To witneſs with our Spirits, for Grace in us could not witneſs if he ined not with it; yet he is ſaid to have a diſtinct witneſs from theirs, beuſe he hath a Teſtimony beyond and without theirs; and ſo it is the Holy hoſt alſo that is the Reporter of the Father's Love, and of Chriſt's, and of his wn; for as Chriſt ſays, John 16. 14. He ſhall glorifie me, and receive of mine, d ſhew it to you: He it is that witneſſeth Chriſt's Love, and ſo the Father's alſo, ey do all by him, and nothing immediately apart, and therefore when Chriſt ys, he will manifeſt himſelf, in that place of John 14. before quoted, he firſt omiſes the Comforter, as the Manifeſter of him and of the Father: But yet ey are ſaid to be three, and their Teſtimony apart ſeveral, becauſe their Love and Vork is diſtinctly revealed, and witneſſed by that Spirit, and his own alſo: nd the Soul is drawn to conſider, that the Perſon of the Father ſhews his ove more eſpecially in electing, the Son in redeeming, and he himſelf in comrting, &c. So that though he witneſſeth all, yet it is in their Name, and they e the Perſons concerning whom the witneſs is given, and his witneſs as he is ne of the three on Earth, is diſtinct from that as he is one of the three in Heaven: or as he is a Witneſs on Earth, the matter of his Teſtimony is in general, the leſſings themſelves beſtowed, Juſtification, Adoption, &c. and the whole ork of the three Perſons, as it is in common for Salvation, is the thing witneſſed, s it is alſo by Water and Blood. But now as he is a Witneſs in Heaven, the Perns that have done theſe come in to be more nighly conſidered, and his witeſs is of himſelf, and of what he hath done towards the Believer's Salvation: He pens the Believer's heart to have Fellowſhip with himſelf, and to ſee that he is that hath ſanctified, comforted him, &c. ſo that he witneſſeth his own part this Salvation: In the other Teſtimony he witneſſeth that the Perſon is anctified, elected, &c. but now he makes him take notice in an eſpecial anner of the Perſon ſanctifying and ſealing him, &c. and of the Father s electing, &c. And therefore he influenceth the Man to walk ſo as not to rieve him, to bear a reſpect to him that doth all this in that relation; pon which Ground is that Exhortation of the Apoſtle founded, Grieve not the Holy Spirit, wherewith you are ſealed, Eph. 4. 30. For when a Believer takes notice hat the Spirit hath done all this for him, wrought all the Grace he hath, nd brought in all his Comfort, he will have a reſpect to him, and have a diſtinct tenderneſs to him in that relation, as well as to Chriſt and to the Father. In the one the Spirit is as the common Broad Seal of the whole Trinity, nd of all the bleſſings beſtowed upon us: In the other he is a Seal of himelf in a more diſtinct manner, and ſo of the other two. As in Seals of Offices hat a Biſhop or Arch-deacon give out, there is the Seal of the Office, and ofen they will ſet their own private Seals on the back ſide alſo, ſo doth the pirit, who as he is reckoned among the Witneſſes on Earth, is the Seal of the Office in common, (the things ſealed being the Bleſſings and Works of the whole Trinity in common) but in the other their Private Seals are ſet to, nd his among the other, which makes him a diſtinct Witneſs.

Only now theſe Cautions muſt be added.

Firſt, That this diſtinct Teſtimony of theſe Witneſſes in Heaven is a thing many Chriſtians have not obſerved in themſelves, nor may happily never come o have a full Experience of: God doth not deal with all in this manner; many ome not to have Aſſurance at all, much leſs this; the People of God under the Old Teſtament had it not, for the three Preſons were not ſo diſtinctly known in their everal works in their Salvation to them; and therefore when the Apoſtle had diſcovered this Myſtery, Eph. 5. how the Father elects, the Son redeems, and the Spirit ſeals, in the third Chapter, ver. 4, and 5. he ſays, that in other ages this Myſtery in this diſtinct manner was not made known to the Sons of Men, not as it is now revealed. And the Apoſtles alſo then had it not, John 14. 1. that is, not ſo diſtinctly, and in that manner I have ſpoken of it. It is a thing many know not the meaning of, that yet have Grace, for their Hearts are wholly drawn out to Chriſt, and they but implicitely apprehend, or ſeldom conſider or think, what God the Father, or the Spirit hath done.

And then Secondly, This Caution muſt be put alſo in, that for the order of this diſtinct Teſtimony in thoſe that have it, or of taking notice of Chriſt's Love, or the Fathers, no Rule can be ſet down. Chriſt's Love breaks in upon many firſt, and then the Father's. What hath been ſaid, is to ſhew ſuch a Work is in ſome, and may be had, and is to be aimed at, being now made known to you.

Neither Thirdly is my meaning, As if Believers could apprehend the Father's Love thus apart from Chriſt's, or Chriſt's from the Fathers; or as if the one could be without the other, for the one is not to be ſevered from the other; and if any thinks the Father loves him e're he hath had Faith in Chriſt, and reſted on him, it is a Turkiſh, Jewiſh Faith.: But yet things that are not in themſelves, nor in our ſuppoſition ſevered, may in our thoughts be more diſtinctly viewed, and apart ſealed to us.

And Fourthly, Though Believers know and acknowledge what the three Perſons have done for them, yet that is not the work meant by the Teſtimony of theſe Witneſſes: As long as this Knowledge is deduc'd but by way of Conſequence, that is, when they conſider, that becauſe they are ſanctified therefore they are juſtified, and becauſe they are juſtified therefore they are elected, redeemed, &c. this is to know it by way of Deduction: But it is an Intuitive Knowledge that I mean, to ſee it, and to have the Heart affected, and the Love of each diſtinctly brought home to them, and their hearts to dwell on the direct conſideration of the Work and Love of each Perſon, ſo as to come to have alſo Fellowſhip with them all in Prayer and Walking from day to day.

The Fifth Caution is, That to direct poor Souls humbled to Faith, the way is not to direct them firſt to God the Father's Love, but to caſt themſelves on Chriſt, who leads to the Father, Eph. 2. 18. and John 14. 6. For at firſt Men apprehend God according to the Rules of the Word, as an angry Judge, and Chriſt as he that pacifies him, Col. 1. 21. but when they are come to God, and caſt themſelves on him through Chriſt, then they are brought to ſee God the Father (whom before they look'd on as a Judge) to be pacified by Chriſt, and to have as willing a heart to ſave them as Chriſt himſelf hath. It was ſuitably the Speech of a godly Perſon, As Chriſt makes Interceſſion for me, ſo God loves to have it ſo.

CHAP. VI.

That ſince Aſſurance is attainable, it is our Duty earneſtly to deſire and endeavour the Attainment of it.

SInce then (as we have ſeen) Aſſurance of our Salvation may be attain'd, Let us not reſt and content our ſelves in abiding in this Wilderneſs of Faith of Relyance only, though it be that which brought us out of Egypt, and will lead us to Canaan, and is that by which God tranſlateth us from Death to Life: Say of that State, this is not my reſt, though I have much reſt and quietneſs of Heart in it and by it.

It is the Duty of every one that doth believe to grow up to Aſſurance, and it is his ſin not to make out for it, it is his ſin to ſit down on this ſide of it. There is this Difference between a Believer and one in an Unregenerate Condition, that a Man who doth not yet believe, and is not immediately (in that ſtate) obliged to Acts of Aſſurance, yet is obliged immediately to believe on the Name of the Son of God: But to be aſſured, cannot be the firſt act required of one that doth not yet believe. But now when once a Man hath believed on the Name of the Son of God, then the next and great duty that lies upon him, is to endeavour to know that he hath Eternal Life, and by all ways and means to ſeek after the Knowledge of it. There are many Duties which a Man is bound to, but not bound to immediately: Every Man in the World that hears of the Goſpel, is bound indeed to receive the Sacraments, of Baptiſm firſt, and then the Lords Supper, &c. but he is not bound to theſe immediately; but he is bound to be in the ſtate of Grace firſt, to be in Chriſt firſt; he is bound to repent, and to turn to God, and to believe on the Name of the on of God: But when once he is in the ſtate of Grace, all theſe things lye pon him then as Duties. The Apoſtle (1 John 5. 10.) urgeth it as a Duty, or a Man that already believeth, to ſeek after the Knowledge that he hath Eternal Life; ſaith he, ver. 10. He that believeth on the Son of God, (if he have but hat Faith of Relyance) hath the witneſs in himſelf; the Meaning whereof is ot, that he hath the prevailing act of witneſſing, for then if that were the meanng, every man that believes on the Son of God ſhould have an Act of Aſſurance; ut the meaning is, he hath the matter of it in himſelf; he hath the Spirit of Adoption ithin him, and he hath the Blood of Chriſt ſprinkled upon his Conſcience; and erefore having the matter of Aſſurance in himſelf, if he do not grow up un o it, it is through his own Default; it is becauſe he neglects, or turns a deaf ar to the continual Whiſperings and ſecret Suggeſts of the Holy Ghoſt conerning his Condition, and rather willingly liſtens to Sathan, and ſaith of all he Spirits Impreſſions, that they are but the Voice and Sayings of his own Heart, nd doth not liſten to the Voice of the Blood of Chriſt, which ſpeaks (tho' ith a ſtill voice) better things than his Conſcience doth, or can do, whenever e hath recourſe to it by Faith; for he never goes to Chriſt, and throws, and athes himſelf in his Blood, but ſtill there is a ſecret Witneſs comes off with , (1 John 5. 8.) more or leſs to the quieting of his heart. Now when Men e as negligent in cheriſhing the Dictates of the Spirit, as they are in comlying with his Motions to good, when they regard not the voice behind them, t tho' God ſpeaks once or twice, (as Job ſays in another caſe) yet they ver mind it; when they who have the matter of the Witneſs in themſelves, us go and throw it all off, and are in Love with the contrary deſpairing d doubting thoughts, they are guilty of a great ſin which the Apoſtle ſays before em. He who doth this makes God a Lyar: For as in that other part of od's Record, wherein God hath ſet forth his Son Jeſus Chriſt as a ſufficit Saviour, and hath given that record of him, that he is his Son, and that him is Life, and that there is a propitiation in his Blood, every Man ow that is in his Natural Eſtate, that hears this, and comes not in and beeveth, that receiveth not this record, he makes God a Lyar, he openly conadicts God's Teſtimony, and proclaims that he believeth not that Chriſt is ch a Chriſt as God hath teſtified he is: So on the other ſide, in a Man that in the ſtate of Grace, that hath Faith, and ſo hath the Son and Eternal Life, the Fears and Doubts that Man hath to the contrary, do in like manner ake God a Lyar. The Apoſtle John ſpeaks that of not receiving God's ecord upon occaſion of both, for as the ſix Witneſſes ſerve to ſhew us that hriſt is the Son of God, ſo that we are the Sons of God, and have Eternal Life hen we do believe; and therefore that Speech of his, He that believeth not the ecord God gave of his Son, makes God a Lyar; it holdeth as well of a Believs not believing he hath Eternal Life after he hath believed, as of his not beving on the Son of God. So that as it is the Duty of every Man to beve on Chriſt for Salvation, and to believe this Record that God hath gin of his Son, and it is the great damning ſin not to believe this, (John 3. . and John 16. 8, 9.) and by not doing it Men do make God a Lyar; ſo alſo it the Duty of every one that believeth, having the Witneſs in himſelf, to grow unto Aſſurance; and if they encourage all Fears and Doubts to the contrary, far they do in their meaſure and proportion make God a Liar, in this reſpect that ey believe not the Record that God hath given concerning Believers, as well his Son Jeſus; for The not believing God, ver, 10. hath reference To this rerd, that God hath given us Eternal Life, ver. 11. So that the Apoſtle upon the very me ground (in the 10*th.* and 11*th.* verſes of this Chapter) urgeth thoſe in hom God hath wrought Faith, and to whom he hath given his Spirit, to grow to Aſſurance, and to know they have Eternal Life, that he urgeth thoſe at are not Believers to believe on the Son of God, he urgeth this common ound to both of them, of making God a Lyar.

Object. But here will one thing be ſaid, Are the Meaneſt Chriſtians obliged to is? and may the Loweſt Chriſtians attain to this?

Anſw. Yes, all ſorts may, for you ſee John here writeth his Epiſtle to all ſorts, John 2. 14. I write unto you Babes, as well as unto you Young Men and Fathers, becauſe your ſins are forgiven you, for his Names ſake, and becauſe ye have known the Father: And (ſaith he) your ſins being forgiven you, I write theſe things even unto you, that you may grow up to the Knowledge of this, and that you may know that you have Eternal Life; and though it be true, (as I ſaid) that the firſt act of Faith which thoſe that are newly converted do put forth, cannot be Aſſurance, yet it may be the very next Act. Our Saviour Chriſt pronounceth to the poor palſey Man even at the firſt, that his ſins were forgiven him, Mat. 9. 2. and ſo to Mary, Luke 7. 37, 48. when ſhe was newly converted, (ye ſhe had believed firſt, which occaſioned her coming to him) that her ſins were forgiven; ſo that even Babes in Chriſtianity are capable of it. There are many things we attain not, becauſe we do not ſet them up as our Mark, but we reſt below them, as in the caſe of Perfection; as many (ſaith the Apoſtle) as are thus minded, let them aim at that Mark that I aim at. Men are their Endeavours, and as their Mark and Aims are: Now then go home, and ſet this up for your Mark and Aim from this time forth, ſay with your ſelves, I do ſee it is my Duty to grow up to Aſſurance that I have Eternal Life, i is my great ſin to do otherwiſe; I ſee that it will improve all Graces in me, it will help me to Confidence in Prayer, it will perfect my love unto God, it will make me ſerve him without Fear, it will make me more holy, beſides all the Comfort it will bring in to me; this therefore I will ſet up as my Mark, I will never pray but I will ſeek this in a more eminent manner, I will never receive the Lords Supper, but I will put this in, that the Lord would come in to beſtow it on me; I will liſten to all the Witneſſes I find whiſpering to my Heart by the Spirit, or by the promiſes ſuggeſted to me, and that is this, of what it is that Aſſurance may be attained in this Life, as far as this Epiſtle of John holds it forth. Let me firſt give this as a Premiſe to all that follows, that you may underſtand my Meaning more diſtinctly, That though a Man is aſſured of all implicitely at once, yet the Holy Ghoſt oftentimes doth diſtinctly ſet on firſt one thing, and then another: You have Experience of it in all your whole Converſe with God, that one Truth is ſet on at one time, and another at another; ſo it is with the Object matters of Aſſurance.

1 Firſt, He hath aſſurance of all thoſe Benefits which God hath beſtowed, and of all the Priviledges which a Man enjoys in Chriſt; as to know the pardon of his ſins, and that I am juſtified, that I have right in Eternal Life, that I am a Son; this you ſee the Text holds forth, That you may know (ſaith he) that you have Eternal Life: So Chap. 3. ver. 1, 2. Now are we the Sons of God. To ſee the Priviledges of a Man's Sonſhip, and to be aſſured of it, this is the firſt degree of Aſſurance, or at leaſt the loweſt actings of it.

Now to come to know that my Sins are forgiven me, and that I have Eternal Life, &c. What is this? It is but implicitely the Aſſurance of the Priviledges which I have in Chriſt, which, I ſay, is the loweſt degree of Aſſurance: Why? becauſe this is it which more ſuiteth ſelf love; all this while the Soul may not have explicite ſence ſo much of the Love of God ſhed abroad in the Heart, but explicitely or diſtinctly in his own conſideration, his thoughts are taken up rather with view of the Priviledges which he hath in Chriſt, and he triumpheth therein. Now as to love Chriſt for his Benefits is the loweſt degree of Love, though there may be true Love in it, ſo to have aſſurance of the Benefits we have by Chriſt, is the loweſt Degree of Aſſurance.

Secondly, Beſides Aſſurance of my Intereſt in all the Benefits and Priviledges of a Man who is in Chriſt, there is explicite aſſurance of the Love of God in Chriſt; and this aſſurance John alſo holds forth in this Epiſtle, when he ſays, We have known and believed the Love that God hath to us, John 4. 16. It is not only a knowing and believing that I have Eternal Life, and that I am the Son of God, &c. but withall explicitely to know alſo and believe the Love that God hath to me, and to have my Heart taken and ſwallowed up with that, which in the next words he calls Dwelling in Love, ſo as a Man walks in it, works in it, lies down in it, ſhelters himſelf in it, as a Man doth in his Houſe. Now the Love of God is brought home to the Heart in and by two things, (which alſo John here holds forth, for I confine my ſelf to what he ſaith,) 1. In thoſe Benefits which the Lord out of Love hath beſtowed upon me, and given me ne the Aſſurance of, and over and above this, his Love with them. And, . Alſo in thoſe Works that God hath done to procure thoſe Benefits and Priviledges to me.

1. There is Aſſurance of God's Love in the Benefits themſelves; Behold (ſaith he) what manner of Love the Father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the ſons of God, 1 John 3. 1. He calls upon Believers to behold, to conſider it gain and again, not to admire the Love of God indefinitely: He calleth them ot to an indefinite conſideration of the Love of God unto ſome, or what may e their Lot, (which indeed may draw in Faith of Recumbency, or Reliance upon God for his Love) but to a conſideration of a Determinate Special Love, which God at the preſent bore to themſelves in particular, and had ſettled on them, nd had beſtowed upon them, and is now at preſent eſtated on them; Now (ſaith he) we are the Sons of God: And he calls them to conſider the infinite greatneſs f this Love; Behold what manner of love the Father hath beſtowed upon us, that e ſhould be called the Sons of God. Here is not only the Priviledge of Sonſhip, nd the Glory of it, ſet on upon the Heart with Aſſurance, but here is an admiration of that Love ſet on more than the Benefits themſelves.

2. We ought eſpecially to regard the Works and Actings of God for us, nd to rejoice in the Aſſurance of his Love ſeen herein, and to have this Love ſhed broad in our Hearts; this you have 1 John 4. 9, 10. where he ſpeaks of the Love both of the Father and the Son, in what they have done for us; Herein s love, (ſaith he, on the Fathers part in Election) that he loved us firſt, v. 9. nd alſo, That he ſent his only begotten Son into the World to dye for us, and to e the propitiation for our ſins, v. 9, 10. and herein is Love on the Son's part, as in theſe common to him with the Father) in giving himſelf ſo willingly or us; hereby we perceive The Love of God, becauſe he laid down his life for s: It is the Son's Love (whoſe Life it was) he ſpeaks of. Now for the Heart o be taken with this Love of God, in what he hath done for us, and to have he Heart ſteeped and dipped in that Love, ſo as to taſte and reliſh the love more than what is purchaſed by it, this is a further thing than the former, it is n higher degree of Aſſurance, this is called (Rom. 5. 5.) The ſhedding of the ove of God abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghoſt, which is another thing then y way of conſequence to apprehend this Love, and the greatneſs of it, from the Benefits beſtowed when we have them: This is when all the Powers do taſte that Love as in it ſelf diffuſed and brought home by the Holy Ghoſt, which all the Arguments in the World and rational Diſcourſes can never do. When I have an Aſſurance that my ſins are forgiven, and that I am a Son, &c. tho' if the Holy Ghoſt ſpake o more, yet I might by way of Argument argue what a Love this is; but to have the Love it ſelf brought home, and ſhed abroad in my Heart, this is more, or the Love is more than all the Benefits, or than all that God hath done for us.

Thirdly, That which the Apoſtle holds forth here, and intends in this Epiſtle, s not only an Aſſurance of the Benefits, that they are ours, that we are Sons, nd have Eternal Life; it is not only the Aſſurance of the Love of God ſhewn n theſe Benefits, and in what he hath done for us, and what Love he hath orn to us, but it is a Fellowſhip with God the Father, and God the Son; ſo he ells you 1 John 1. 3, 4. Theſe things we write unto you, that ye alſo may have fellowſhip with us; and truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt. Now to have Fellowſhip with God and with Jeſus Chriſt, is more han ſimply to know and believe the Love that God hath to us: It is when ll the Excellencies of God and of Chriſt are made known to us, and our Intereſt therein, and all in an appearance of Love. It is not only when God maniſeſteth his Love in the Benefits he hath beſtowed on us, and in that which e hath done for us, but when all that is in God, and all the Beauty and Glory in him, appears to us cloathed and apparelled with Love, as he ſaith, John 4. 16. God is Love; We know and believe, ſaith he, The love that God hath o us; in what he hath done, that's one thing; but then it follows, God is love; himſelf, and all in himſelf, is thus manifeſted to us, this is another. There is, 1. The Love that God hath to us. And then, 2. God himſelf is ſaid to be Love, and God is ſo to be apprehended by us, and ſo we ought to have fellowſhip with him, nd to have an Intereſt in all the Excellencies and Glory that are in him, and then the Heart dwelleth in God, (as it follows there) and God dwelleth in him. It is not a burning up of the fleſh, as ſome ſpeak, or that the Creature ceaſeth to be a Creature, and is one with the Creator, God with God ; No, that is an higher Union than Jeſus Chriſt himſelf had in the fleſh, by whom our Redemption was purchaſed, and by vertue of which it was called the Blood of God, and the Righteouſneſs of God, (which can be ſaid of no Man in the World ;) but tho' the Man Chriſt Jeſus was one Perſon with the Son of God, and ſo all his Obedience was the Obedience of God, yet he had a Diſtinct Being, and he had a Diſtinct Will from that of the Father, a Will of his own ; Not my will be done, (ſaith he, Mat. 26. 39.) but thine : Whereas now that other Notion is of a higher Union than the Union that Chriſt had, and if Men were raiſed up to ſuch a Union, then they might by their Death redeem ſinners, as Chriſt himſelf did : I therefore mean only, that the Glory of God objectively, and all that is in God, in a way of Love preſented to the Soul, filleth it, dwelleth in it ; as if the Sun ſhould come down into a Houſe, and dwell in it, inſtead of dwelling in Heaven, and yet ſtill the Houſe remain what it was before ; ſo it is here, God dwells in the Heart, and the Heart dwells in God, and yet ſtill the Heart remains what it was ; that this is a further thing than that I ſpake of afore, and that it is more than for a Man to know the Love of God in what he hath beſtowed on him, and done for him, is evident by that place in John 14. 21. He that loveth me, ſhall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifeſt my ſelf to him : And the Apoſtle ſpeaks of this too, Eph. 3. 18, 19. where beſides knowing The love of Chriſt, which paſſeth knowledge, there is a Phraſe of being filled with all the fullneſs of God ; that is, whenas all the fulneſs that is in God, is preſented to a Man in a way of Love ; not that he is ſwallowed up into God, but God filleth him ; he dwelleth in God, and God dwelleth in him, yet he remaining ſtill what he was, and God remaining what he is too. It is not the fulneſs of God dwelling in us bodily, or perſonally, as it dwelt in the Man Chriſt Jeſus ; No, that is proper to Chriſt by diſtinction (Col. 2. 16.) from God's dwelling in us ; In him (ſaith he) dwelt the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily : Now by Body there is meant Perſon, as they that underſtand the Idiom of the Greek Tongue know, as Soul in the Hebrew is put for Perſon, ſo many ſouls are ſaid to come out of Jacob's Loyns, (Exod. 1. 5.) ſo bodily in the Greek is taken perſonally. There is, I ſay, a perſonal union between the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in Jeſus Chriſt and himſelf, and therefore in the ſame place, it is ſaid to dwell in him, as the Head of all Principalities and Powers ; and all that is in God filleth him as our Head, and dwelleth perſonally in him, which Phraſe, I ſay, is uſed by way of diſtinction from the Creature. And yet all this while that the Godhead dwelt bodily or perſonally in him, he remained in the fleſh, whereas the union that is now cryed up is higher than this of Chriſt's, and while Men ſeek to be ſpiritual, they detract from God, and run into Blaſphemy againſt God and Chriſt. But this Communication of which I ſpeak, is objectively, when all that is in God is preſented to the Soul in a way of Love, and when the Soul hath Fellowſhip and Communion with him, all that is in God is his, and he ſees himſelf an Heir of God, (Rom. 8. 16, 17.) and he hath all that is in God to delight in ; and God manifeſteth the Beauty and Glory that is in himſelf unto him in love, and ſo the Soul dwells in God, and God in him, and all in Love.

Fourthly, Add this to it, That there is Communion and Fellowſhip with all the Perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and their Love ſeverally and diſtinctly. This is that Communion that John held forth, and which the Comforter promiſed unto the Apoſtles brought them into, and which the Apoſtle here would wind us up to, and put us upon the ſeeking after. Now there is an implicite Communion with all theſe Perſons, ſo that if my Heart be affected with the Love of one, I may know the Love of all the reſt implicitely, as appears from John 14. 7, 9. If ye had known me, you ſhould have known my Father alſo ; but this is but implicitely, and therefore he ſaith afterwards, At that day ye ſhall know both me and my Father, and that I am in the Father, and you in me, and I in you : Shew us the Father, (ſaith Philip) and it ſufficeth us : The poor Man ſpake he knew not what, ſpake ignorantly, as oftentimes they did ; but Chriſt here promiſeth more, I will give you the Spirit, (ſaith he) and he ſhall be in you, and I will love you, and

y Father ſhall love you, and we will make our abode with you: Do not then ſtint your lves here, that it ſufficeth that you know the Father; No, Chriſt putteth you pon labouring after a diſtinct Knowing of, and Communion with all three erſons; and the Apoſtle John alſo ſpeaks in the ſame ſtrain, 1 John 1. 3. That e may have fellowſhip with the Father, and with the Son; not only with the Father
y having Fellowſhip with the Son, and by having fellowſhip with the Son o to have Fellowſhip with the Father, and ſo to have Fellowſhip with the one n the other implicitely, but diſtinctly with the one and with the other, and iſtinctly with the one as with the other, and ſo to be acquainted with all, nd to view the Love of one as well as of the other; as Chriſt ſaith, John 14. 1.
e believe in God, believe alſo in me; ſo have Communion with God, and have ommunion alſo with me. There is alſo an implicite Knowledge of the Holy hoſt; You know him, ſaith Chriſt to his Diſciples, John 14. 17. that is, they new him in his Work, but they knew him not in his Love diſtinctly, and they ad not acquaintance with his Perſon, and they had not the Love of the Holy Ghoſt rought home to them. Now we are diſtinctly to have Communion both with he Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, as he ſaith in that place, John 14. 23. I will ve him, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode ith him. As the three Angels that came to Abraham were all entertained by him, o for a Man to converſe with, and entertain into his Heart, or rather be enterained by all three Perſons, and to have the love of them all diſtinctly brought ome to his Heart, and to view the love of them all apart, this is the Com-nunion that John here would raiſe up our Hearts unto: And this John here in his Chapter, ver. 7, 8. tells us, that there are three Witneſſes in Heaven, who as hey witneſs that Chriſt is the Son of God, ſo they witneſs to us that we are the ons of God, and that we have Eternal Life in his Son; There are three that bear ecord in Heaven, (ſaith he) and theſe are three Perſons in the Divive Nature, nd not three Manifeſtations only; for if ſo, then there would be as many Perſons as Manifeſtations; and when Chriſt ſaith, John 14. 21. I will manifeſt my ſelf unto ou, if Chriſt were but only the Manifeſtation of God, then there would be a anifeſtation of a manifeſtation: No, he is a Perſon, I will manifeſt my ſelf, (ſaith
e) and my Father he will manifeſt himſelf unto you; and ſo when it is ſaid, (1 Cor.
2. 7.) That the manifeſtation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal, if he Spirit himſelf were but a manifeſtation, there were a manifeſtation of a maifeſtation. No, the Spirit is a Perſon, and manifeſteth himſelf, as Jeſus Chriſt is a erſon, and therefore ſpeaks of manifeſting himſelf; and as the Father is a Peron, and therefore ſaith he will manifeſt himſelf, they are three Perſons, and ot Manifeſtations only. Neither are they as the Attributes in God, for if ſo, here would be then more than Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; there would be s many as Attributes, Wiſdom is an Attribute, and Power is an Attribute, and Truth and Juſtice, and Holineſs; and therefore if all in God were thus varied, here were more than three. It holds forth therefore Perſons, Jeſus Chriſt ſpeaks as a Perſon, John 14. 1. Ye believe in God, believe alſo in me: And the Holy Ghoſt ſpeaks as a Perſon, ſpeaks in the Language of a Perſon, Acts 13. 2. Se- arate ME Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them: You have he like in Acts 10. 19, 20. The Spirit ſaid unto Peter, behold, three men ſeeek thee, riſe therefore and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing, for I have ſent them:
Still, I ſay, the Holy Ghoſt ſpeaks as a Perſon. Now as theſe three are one in Nature, ſo they become three diſtinct Witneſſes, and their very being three Witneſſes argue them three Perſons, (let me alſo caſt that in by the by) there s a notable place for it in John 8. 13, 14. the Jews there excepted againſt the Teſtimony of Chriſt, and they ſaid, that he bore Record of himſelf, and therefore his Record was not true: Why, ſaith he, I am not alone, but there is the Father that witneſſeth with me, and it is written in your Law, that the Teſtimony of two Men is true; and, ſaith he, I am one that bear witneſs of my ſelf, and the Father that ſent me, beareth witneſs of me; ſo that in witneſſing he joins himſelf with his Father, as equal with him therein; and makes himſelf and his Father two Witneſſes, (you ſee how he ſtands upon it in that place) and himſelf as authentique a Witneſs as his Father: Now as the Father and the Son thus witneſs, ſo ſaith the Apoſtle in Joh. 5. 7. the Holy Ghoſt alſo is a Witneſs; There are three (ſaith he) that bear re- cord in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt : Now the Witneſs that they bear, is, 1. That Chriſt is the Son of God. And, 2. That we are the Sons of God, and that we have eternal Life. When Chriſt was baptized, all three Perſons witneſſed that he was the Son of God, and they all owned that Nature that was baptized : The Father from Heaven ſaid, This is my beloved Son ; he ſpeaks diſtinctly ; the Holy Ghoſt he comes down from Heaven, and with Joy anſwerably, Like a Dove deſcended upon him ; and you heard even now of Chriſt his witneſſing of himſelf, John 8. 13, 14. I bear witneſs of my ſelf, (ſaith he) Teſte meipſo ; he ſpeaks like God, like one that was as good a Witneſs as the Father. Now what was done to Chriſt, the ſame is a Believer capable of, (for that is John's Scope) capable to receive as diſtinct a Witneſs, though not in a viſible way, and by a Voice from Heaven, for God ſpeaks not now ſo to the Spirits of Men, but yet in as diſtinct a manner. For the three Perſons as they loved us diſtinctly, (as might be ſhewn at large) ſo they bring home their Love diſtinctly and apart to the Soul, and the Communion that John would raiſe us up unto is with all three Perſons diſtinctly, to view their Love ſeverally, and have it all ſeverally brought home to our Hearts, all of them manifeſting their Love unto the Soul. Beſides, the three Witneſſes that are on Earth, the Water, and Blood, and immediate Teſtimony of the Spirit in common, there are theſe three Witneſſes of the Perſons in Heaven ; and therefore haſt thou had the Love of the Father brought home to thee, reſt not in that, get the Love of the Son brought home to thee too, and then reſt not untill all three Perſons manifeſt their Love to thee.

As in believing ſometimes a Man's Heart is drawn out to believe in God the Father ; that is, look what is ſaid of God the Father's Love, and concerning his giving Chriſt, and chooſing Men to life, and in this his Election regarding neither ſin in them nor good, (for Free-Grace is properly the Fathers) a Man hath Support from all ſuch Conſiderations, and he believeth in God ; but whilſt he doth ſo, his Heart it may be is not ſo diſtinctly drawn out to Jeſus Chriſt at that time. So it is in Aſſurance, ſometimes a Man's Communion and Converſe is with the one, ſometimes with the other ; ſometimes with the Father, then with the Son, and then with the Holy Ghoſt ; ſometimes his Heart is drawn out to conſider the Father's Love in chooſing, and then the Love of Chriſt in redeeming, and ſo the Love of the Holy Ghoſt that ſearcheth the deep things of God, and revealeth them to us, and taketh all the pains with us ; and ſo a Man goes from one Witneſs to another diſtinctly ; which, I ſay, is the Communion that John would have us to have : And therefore Grace and Peace (Grace is that love that is in the Nature of God, and Peace is that Joy that flows from the aſſurance of it) are wiſhed from Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt : Ordinarily you have it from the Father and the Son, but John (and he alone) pronounceth it from all three, (Rev. 1. 4, 5.) witneſſing as the Love of God, ſo the love of themſelves diſtinctly ; as the Grace of God the Father is brought home with peace, ſo the Grace of God the Son, and of God the Holy Ghoſt ; and therefore as our Fellowſhip is with the Father and the Son, as he ſaith, 1 John 1. 3. ſo alſo with the Holy Ghoſt, 1 John 4. 13. and this they in the Old Teſtament wanted. And this Aſſurance it is not a Knowledge by way of Argument or Deduction, whereby we infer that if one loveth me, then the other loveth me, but it is intuitively, as I may ſo expreſs it, and we ſhould never be ſatisfied till we have attained it, and till all three Perſons lye level in us, and all make their abode with us, and we ſit as it were in the middeſt of them, while they all manifeſt their love unto us ; this is John's Communion, and this is the higheſt that ever Chriſt promiſed in this life, (in his laſt Sermon, John 14.) and you muſt know that this Epiſtle of John it anſwers to that Sermon ; At that day, (ſaith Chriſt, ver. 20.) namely, when he would ſend the Comforter, You ſhall know that I am in the Father, and you in me, and I in you : That Union and Communion with the Father immediately, (which is the whole of ſome Mens Religion) whilſt it pretends to more ſpiritualneſs, (for what more ſpiritual then for Creatures to be ſwallowed up into God) it runs into the higheſt derogation to God and to Chriſt that can be. But that which Chriſt promiſeth, is, that they ſhould know their Union with the Father, but he leaves not out the Son. Poor Philip he ignorantly ſaid, Shew us the Father, and it ſufficeth ; No, ſaith Chriſt, the Comforter ſhall ſhew you your Union n with the Father, and with me too; for you muſt never betake your ſelves o the Father only, and leave me out. Therefore now to talk of ſuch a Communion, wherein Men betake themſelves to the Father, and go to him immediately, this is not the Communion which John had; and he that denies the Son, nd Communion with him, denies the Father alſo. The Communion which the Apoſtle exhorts to, is with all the three Witneſſes in Heaven, which a Man ſhall find vhen he comes there, and your Communion for ever will lye in them; the fulneſs f the Godhead dwelling then in you by Viſion, which now you take in by Faith, nd all three Perſons will be enjoyed and poſſeſt by Viſion: It is by a more high and levated way, but it is of the ſame Nature, and hath ſtill the ſame Object.

CHAP. VII.

hriſt's Diſcovery of himſelf to the Soul, inſtanc'd in the Example of Chriſt's manifeſting himſelf to Mary Magdalen, after his Reſurrection, as a Pattern of his like Dealings with Believing Souls, ſeeking him now after his Aſcenſion into Heaven.

JOHN XX. 16, 17.

eſus ſaith unto her, Mary; ſhe turned her ſelf, and ſaith unto him, Rabboni, which is to ſay, Maſter.
eſus ſaith unto her, touch me not; for I am not yet aſcended to my Father: But go to my Brethren, and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father, and your Father, and to my God, and your God.

WE are married to an Husband riſen from the dead, (as you have it in expreſs words, Rom. 7. 4.) there is nothing can be ſuppoſed therefore more welcome then to hear authentick Stories of is Deportment and Converſe (after his Advancement, and ſo great an Alteration) with any that were his Familiars before, and eſpous'd to him, as we ll are: And in this Chapter (wherein you find his firſt ſight after his being iſen again) you have two Eminent ſuch Inſtances, The one in his Demeanour towards a poor mean Woman, and the other towards his Apoſtles, who vere as mean Creatures as her ſelf.

It ſeems to me evident, that the moſt eminent Scope of theſe Stories left to ohn, after all the reſt, to record, is to hold forth this Sweet and Pleaſant Diſpoſition of Chriſt our Lord to ſuch Souls as love him, and the Ground and Intent of this Relation is to ſhew how his Spiritual Dealings, and all Diſcoveries f himſelf to poor Souls, now he is in Heaven, do hold proportion and Analogy vith theſe bodily Appearances and Converſes, accompanied with ſuitable ſpiritual Impreſſions unto this Woman.

And as a ground for this, I take in its Coherence that Promiſe, John 14. 21. he ad promiſed to his Apoſtles to comfort them perſonally; not by his Spirit only, but y his own perſonal ſeeing and converſing with them again after his Reſurrection, ver. 18, 19, 20. Yet a little while, (ſays he) and the world ſeeth me no more; (for after is Reſurrection he appear'd not to one carnal man, but only to his own) but you hall ſee me, and that alive, riſen from the dead, and becauſe I live, you ſhall live alſo; nd in that day, (as alſo by my Spirit after my Aſcenſion) you ſhall know that I am n my Father, and you in me, and I in you: Now leaſt others in after ages ſhould hink that they being born out of time, are therefore deprived of this Priviledge of Chriſt's appearings, ſuch as he made unto the Apoſtles and others in that Part II. Age upon his Reſurrection, he adds that promiſe, ver. 21. So then theſe his Bodily Apparitions, with Spiritual Impreſſions, as they were to theſe his Diſciples, were Proofs and Pledges of like Spiritual Manifeſtations of himſelf to our Faith unto the End of the World.

Age

Obſerv. 1. That Chriſt by a ſtrong and ſtrange Providence ſingleth out ſome ſpecial Perſons to make them partakers of Special Priviledges and Diſcoveries from himſelf. And it was a great Priviledge Chriſt vouchſaf'd to this Woman, in manifeſting himſelf to her after his Reſurrection: It gladded his Fathers Heart to ſee his Son riſen again, as he utters it rejoicingly, (Pſal. 2. 7.) This day have I begotten thee, ſpeaking of the Reſurrection, as appears from Acts 13. 33. As Solomon's Mothers Heart rejoiced at the day of his Coronation, ſo God's Heart is glad at the Coronation of his Son, of whom Solomon was a Type. It muſt needs alſo proportionably rejoice the Heart of a poor Soul, who ſo dearly loved Chriſt, to be the firſt that ſhould ſee him alive again, and in his New Robes and Dreſs; and that Mary had this firſt ſight of him was not caſual, nor fell out indifferently, but electively, and as done out of Choice by Chriſt, he had a ſet deſign to take and find her alone, and ſo to honour her more eminently with this Diſcovery, and his Providences were anſwerably ſtrong to accompliſh it, (as you may obſerve in the Hiſtory) that it might appear he intended to put a differing reſpect upon her from the reſt. Mary Magdalen, and Joanna, and Mary the Mother of James, with other Women, had viſited his Sepulchre, and after them alſo Peter and John, Luke 24. But ſtill our Lord withholds himſelf, and comes not out of his Inviſibility; and Mary Magdalen her ſelf, for whom this favour was deſign'd, was depriv'd of the ſight of her Lord at preſent, becauſe they were in her Company: But when they were gone home, and Mary ſtood without at the Sepulchre, (John 20. 10.) and was now ſevered from the reſt, Chriſt had her alone, and then breaks forth from out of his Obſcurity; and that it was a deſign'd Favour to her, the Holy Ghoſt remarks, and puts a Note upon it, Mark 16. 9. That he appeared firſt to Mary Magdalen, out of whom he had caſt ſeven Devils.

Are there not ſome of you here preſent, towards whom in eminent Diſcoveries of himſelf, or in ſome other Prviledges, God hath held the like courſe, and hath made a manifeſt Difference between you and others? he hath ſhewn thee perhaps more Mercy than all thy Kindred, or than others of thine own Rank, Sex, Society and Countrey, wherein thou haſt lived: Haſt thou not perceived how God hath revealed his Secrets to thee a Babe, when he hath induſtriouſly hid them from the wiſe and prudent? Chriſt thanks God for this on his Diſciples behalf, (Mat. 11. 25.) and wilt not thou thank him on thine own behalf? Kings and Prophets have deſired to ſee and hear the things which you ſee and hear. We ſhould learn to obſerve and ſtudy out ſuch peculiarities of Mercies, by conſidering what God hath done for us comparatively to others.

Another thing to be conſider'd, is, Who was this Mary to whom Chriſt vouchſaf'd this firſt diſcovery of himſelf? I inſiſt not on it that ſhe was a Woman, to whom Chriſt revealed himſelf, in his Perſon, in ſuch a manner as he vouchſafed not to a whole Colledge of Apoſtles; however they excelled her in the Diſcovery of the deep Miſteries of the Goſpel, (which was their Glory, 1 Cor. 2.) yet in the perſonal Diſcovery or Manifeſtation of the Perſon of Chriſt himſelf, ſhe is preferred before them: I therefore limit it to the Revelation of his Perſon, becauſe there is a Spirit of Revelation in the Knowledge of him, which conſiſts in perſonal Communion with him; as well as there is a way of Notional Wiſdom and Prudence vouchſafed to ordinary Chriſtians, Eph. 1. 17. and many a poor Soul is therein preferr'd to the Holy, Learned Ones of the World, the Reaſon of which is evident, becauſe the Promiſe of that Manifeſtation is made to them who love him moſt, John 14. 21. which weak ones, Women, and unnotional Souls often moſt do, and of this intuitive Knowledge ſuch Souls are as immediately capable as the learnedeſt.

But there is another Conſideration beyond this, upon which the Scripture it ſelf hath put the Notoriety and greateſt Obſervation, and that is this, That ſhe had been the greateſt of Sinners: We have this from the Holy Ghoſt himſelf, who would have us to obſerve it, and therefore upon this very occurence he hath recorded it, there where he mentioneth this her Priviledge, Mark 16. 9. It is all one as if he had ſaid, he appeared firſt to Mary, who had been of the higheſt Rank of Sinners ; ſo then as her ſins hindred her not from being converted to Chriſt, but he ſhewed his power therein the more, ſo they hindred him not from vouchſafing to her the higheſt and choiceſt favour of manifeſting himſelf : Take her fellow Paralel in this, the Apoſtle Paul ; Not only to me the greateſt of ſinners, he ſhewed mercy firſt in my Converſion, 1 Tim. 1. 13. but after Converſion he had that ſight of Chriſt which exceeded this of Mary Magdalen's, and that of all other Apoſtles. Fore-paſt ſins then hinder not, but other pre-diſpoſitions concurring invite Chriſt rather to the higheſt manifeſtations of himſelf : Neither doth this hold true only of great ſins before Converſion, but after it alſo, for who ſhall ſet the limits to the Diſpenſations of Free-Grace? But what was it which was conſidered in this Mary Magdalen, which drew forth to her this peculiar favour of manifeſtation from Chriſt ? you read formerly of her Love, Luke 7. 47. but you find her Heart here more full of it, even to a running over, than were the Hearts of all the reſt of the Apoſtles : It was full Sea with her when it was a low Ebb with the reſt, and it was that which took Chriſt's Heart ; do but compare the preſent ſpringings and beatings of her Heart and Spirit with thoſe of the Apoſtles : But Mary (ſays the Text, John 20. 11.) ſtood weeping without, &c. that but is a Note of ſingular Commendation put upon her for her affection, in compariſon with the carriage of their Spirits ; they after a little ſearch careleſly went home, ver. 10. but Mary yet was ſolicitous, and remain'd in a weeping poſture at the Sepulchre. Obſerve in her all ſorts of Characters of a prevailing paſſion of Love in the midſt of Fears, Deſpairs, and Unbelief, ſhe ſtood, ſhe would not go away when they did ; and as ſhe was not diſcourag'd by their Example, ſo all the Halberts of the Guards about her affrighted her not, ſhe fear'd no Colours, but Love made perfect had caſt out Fear, and had fixed her with an unmoved Courage at the Grave, and a ſecret Inſtinct of the Spirit arreſted her, that ſhe could not ſtir out of the Circle, and then ſhe weeps, which ſhew'd that ſhe could not bear the Abſence of him whom ſhe lov'd, whereas the reſt were gone away with dry Eyes ; and as ſhe wept, ſhe ſtoop'd down, looking into the Sepulchre, tho' Peter and John had told her, and ſhe her ſelf had ſeen, that Chriſt was not there, yet for all this ſhe looks, and looks again, and cannot content her ſelf. It is the Nature of vehement Love and Deſire after what we want and Value, to look, and ſearch for it where we know it is not ; ſo violent was her Love and Deſire, that ſhe would not truſt her own Eyes : Yea, ſhe was ſo overcome with theſe Affections to her Lord, that tho' ſhe ſaw two Angels in white, who began to comfort her, (ver. 12.) yet Love and Deſire after Chriſt had ſo tranſported her, that ſhe minds them not, nor all their Comforts ; and out of reſtleſneſs and impatience of Spirit, that ſuffered her not to continue in one place or poſture long, (as is the nature of violent affections) ſhe turns her ſelf back from them, as refuſing to be comforted by them, and eſpied Chriſt, and thought him to be the Gardener, and Chriſt diſcovers himſelf to her, and calls her familiarly by her Name ; Jeſus ſaith unto her, Mary, ver. 16. Now I ſhall make ſome Obſervations concerning Chriſt's thus diſcovering himſelf to her, and I ſhall make an Analogy between this his Bodily Appearing in this caſe to Mary, and his Spiritual manifeſtation unto ſuch Souls which ſeek him.

Obſerv. 1. That the perſons unto whom Chriſt delights to manifeſt himſelf, are ſuch who are impetuouſly and paſſionately fond of him : They are ſuch who can no way be ſatisfied but by ſeeing him, and enjoying Communion with him ; and when Chriſt ſtirs ſuch a Spirit unto an unconquerable deſire after him, he anſwers it, and correſponds with it. As Jeſus Chriſt knows what it is to love, ſo he doth love and value a Souls fondneſs of himſelf, and delights in nothing more : And as he knows that without manifeſtations of his Love, the Spirit which he hath made would fail before him, (Iſa. 57. 16.) ſo he anſwerably takes care, that to be ſure no Soul ſhall dye for love of him ; it is his own Promiſe, John 14. 21. and this gives the full reaſon of this his Dealing with Mary. Faith carries it in the point of Juſtification from all other Graces, but Love carries from all other Graces as to Chriſt's manifeſtation of himſelf to the Soul ; and Mary you ſee loved much, and there is no reward for ſuch pure quinteſſential Love as is

Part II. fixed on the perſon of Chriſt, but Love again manifeſted, and the Enjoyment of his Perſon, nor elſe will, or indeed can recompenſe the loving Soul.

Obſerv. 2. That Chriſt makes early diſcoveries of himſelf unto thoſe Believers who are vehement in Affections and Deſires after him, when he defers the manifeſtations of his Love to others, who tho' holy, and having well-ſettled affections, yet have them not ſo vehement and flaming: For let us but conſider the different courſe which Chriſt held towards this Mary Magdalen, and the other Diſciples, according to that different Temper of Spirit which was in her and them: We have two ſorts of Chriſtians exemplified in them and her: In the Apoſtles we have an Inſtance of Judicious, Wiſe, Diſcreet Profeſſors, (yet holy) that have true and ſolid affections to Chriſt, tho' not ſo flaming; who while they think to live by a ſolid and rational Faith, and content themſelves with it, are apt to think any extraordinary aſſurance, or ſpecial manifeſtation of Chriſt, to be idle Tales, and will not hearken to them; or if they think there is any thing in them, they come (as John and Peter did to the Sepulchre) and ſee the Grave Cloaths of Chriſt, and reſt in inferior diſcoveries of Graces as ſigns in themſelves which ſatisfie them, whereas theſe are but the Grave cloaths of Chriſt, and ſevered from his Perſon, (afford but little hearty comfort) and they go again about their buſineſs, (as Peter and John did) and think it a folly to look any further; but others are, as Mary, more affectionate, paſſionate Chriſtians, that have great Impreſſions made on their Wills and Affections, they know not how or why, that come to the Throne of Grace to ſeek Chriſt, and have his Love from himſelf manifeſted, as Mary did, and find little (as ſhe did not at her firſt coming to the Sepulchre) the firſt time, that look, and look again, and ſee nothing appear, and yet will not go away: Now tho' the firſt ſort are loved by Chriſt, yet he defers his appearing to them all day long, until night, until the evening of their days, (as he did to his Apoſtles) but the other ſort of Believers being impatient after him, and lying down at his feet, and not ſtirring till they are bleſt with a ſight of him, are favour'd with the appearance of him to them in the morning early, as Mary was, for it was early in the morning when this manifeſtation was made to her, and therefore perhaps it not being fully light ſhe took him for the Gardener.

Obſerv. 3. That the time and ſeaſon of Chriſt's Diſcovery of himſelf to the Soul, is, when it hath run through the uſe of all means, and ventur'd difficulties for it: We ſee that Chriſt ſtayed from manifeſting himſelf to Mary, (who lov'd him ſo much) till ſhe had been twice at the Sepulchre, for ſhe thought that he muſt be thereabouts, or no where, and would not go away, but ſtay'd there, look'd in, enquir'd for him of Angels, ay, and of Chriſt himſelf too; but then after the full uſe of means, tho' they in themſelves were vain, and ineffectual, Chriſt ſtays not a jot longer, but unexpectedly appear'd, John 20. 14. ſhe had ſaid all her poor Soul could ſay to expreſs affection, and had done her due in the uſe of all means, and all in vain, and when Chriſt had left her to the extremity of Miſtakes and Diſtreſſes about what ſhe deſir'd, then at laſt he who had ſtood behind the Curtain all that while, and under a Diſguiſe, ſteps out, and manifeſts himſelf to her. And thus it often falls out (that the Analogy may be obſerv'd) in the Inquiſition of poor Souls after Chriſt in their own hearts, and in the manifeſtation of himſelf to them, He both uſeth gradual means in that diſcovery, and yet all along leaves them to Doubts and Diſtreſs, till himſelf breaks forth and appears: They would know whether Chriſt be riſen in them, or to them, or not; they run to the Ordinances, and firſt this Angel, this Miniſter, then another Miniſter gives them encouragement, and ſometimes reproves them for not believing; yea, they are bidden to remember the days of old, and God's dealings with them then, and they have Promiſes brought home to their hearts in a ſeaſonable manner, yea, and Impreſſions and Suggeſtions, ſometimes in Whiſpers, ſometimes in loud Teſtimonies to their Hearts in Prayer, but then they go abroad, and talk with Chriſtians ſtronger than themſelves, and find them to have ſuch a Work upon them which they want, and find them to ſpeak of ſuch Diſcoveries to which they are Strangers; and then ſuch and ſuch Corruptions break forth and overpower them, to think that Chriſt is ſtolen out of their Hearts, (as Mary ſays here, John 20. 13.) and then all which they

ad received of Chriſt before ſeems as idle Tales to them, and ſo they are oſſeſſed (as ſhe was) with a fixed imagination, that either he was never in heir Hearts, but that all hath been a counterfeit work, or that he hath een driven away by their Luſts, or ſtolen away by Sathan; and yet in he midſt of this Diſtreſs their Love works, (as Marys did) and they nquire all over the City for him, (as the Church in the Canticles, Cant. . 1, 2.) then Chriſt ſends Angels, Miniſters, and good Friends, one of a thouſand, to comfort them; and they ask, why the Soul weeps? and tell it that is in a miſtake; but the Soul is ſo far prepoſſeſs'd with prejudice, that it turns way from all Comfort, (as Mary did) and refuſeth to be comforted, Pſal. 7. 2. then Chriſt himſelf begins again to appear, tho' Luce dubiâ, in ſome more oubtful light, (as to Mary here) which yet is truly from himſelf, in impreſſions f raviſhing Joy, or the like; but they preſently queſtion this too, and diſcern ot Chriſt in the buſineſs, but take him for another, as Mary miſtook him for he Gardiner; they are ready to think, that Sathan having ſtolen Chriſt from hem, endeavours to delude them with falſe Joys, and ſo they turn away from Chriſt, as Mary did, John 20. 14, 15, 16. but when Chriſt had drawn out their ffections toward himſelf to the utmoſt, in this dark way, wherein Doubtings re mingled with their Faith, which yet doth whet their Love and Deſires af- er his preſence, (as it had ſuch an effect on Mary) then at laſt he breaks forth n diſcovering himſelf to them, as Joſeph did to his Brethren; and his Bowels urning within him, he can hold no longer, but appears as the Sun out of a loud, as Chriſt riſen from the dead indeed, he appears like himſelf glorious to heir Souls: He appears to be ſuch indeed as they look'd not for; they, like Mary, ſought for a dead Chriſt, (as Chriſt is no other in our imaginations, ill we ſee him to be what he really is, when he thus appears to us) but they nd a living, quickning Chriſt, bringing Heaven and Glory into their Hearts. The Reaſon of this diſpenſation of Chriſt, is, that he may take their Hearts the more when he doth appear, and that he may come to them with a greater evi- ence: Nihil tam certum, quam quod ex dubio certum; There is nothing more cer- ain than that whoſe certainty is cleared out of doubts: And nothing proves more certain when made manifeſt, than what before was moſt doubted. And beſides, he renders himſelf doubly welcome, when he comes not only unexpected, but t that time when we have had all our Thoughts, Deſires, and Hopes, ſeemngly baffled and fruſtrated with miſtakes. Tho' Chriſt is now riſen, and in Heaven, yet he deals with us more noſtro, in a way ſuited to our ſtate, after an humane way, and plays with us in Præludiums, diſcovers himſelf, and withdraws. He appears firſt in ſuch a dreſs as we ſhall not know him: Thus Moſes contriv'd the diſcovery of himſelf, and of his Love to his Brethren, in ſuch a takng way, and ſuffer'd their Hearts to be prepar'd by all ſuch Circumſtances, hat when he ſhould diſcover himſelf, a way might be open'd to fill their Hearts with a greater Joy and Aſtoniſhment, he laid a Train for their affections, o blow them up at once. I need not tell you, that Man hath ſuch a Principle in him, that is apt to be ever taken with ſuch a ſtory, when told, (whether it be true or feign'd) as relates the Congreſs and Meeting of two abſent Friends, or Lovers, who ran through many difficulties and miſtakes about each other e're they met. We all find the powerful influence of ſuch Relations: Who almoſt when a Child, hath not been mov'd to weep, in reading the ſtory of old Jacob the Father, and of Joſeph and his Brethren, and of his diſcovery to them? Chriſt our elder Brother, tho' in Heaven, yet plays with Chriſtians, as thoſe who are under age. If you would frame a Romance, it could not be more full of variety than is this manifeſtation of Chriſt to Mary; thus he dealt with his Diſciples going to Emaus, he mingleth himſelf with their Company, talks as a Stranger, makes as if he would have gone farther, warms their Hearts, breaks Bread, and vaniſheth. Have there been any ſuch tranſactions between Chriſt and thee? they all have proceeded from the ſame Love and pleaſant kindneſs as theſe did towards Mary Magdalen, and are of the ſame kind, and ſhall be told as largely at the latter day as this concerning her is recorded here.

Ludit in hūmanis divinâ ſatentia rebus.

Obſerv. 4. From the manner of Chriſt's diſcovering himſelf, Obſerve, That no-

Part II. thing can give full Joy, or throughly ſettle the heart in believing, and overpower all doubts, till Chriſt himſelf comes, and manifeſts himſelf to the Soul: If the Viſion of Angels, and comfort ſpoken by them, could not have this effect on Mary, what then can do it? Though they ſimpathize with us in our diſtreſs, and in ſome caſes ſuggeſt comfort to us, yet they cannot comfort us without Chriſt's appearance to our Souls.

Obſerv. 5. When Chriſt himſelf comes on purpoſe to manifeſt himſelf, you then need no other Witneſs: What cared Mary Magdalen for Angels, or Grave-cloaths, &c. when ſhe had Chriſt himſelf before her. As you need not light a Candle by which to ſee the Sun, ſo when Chriſt witneſſeth immediately to our hearts, it is enough; as when he ſwears by himſelf, there needs no other Oath to confirm what he ſays.

Obſerv. 6. When Chriſt is pleas'd to direct one word, it ſufficeth: Mary, ſays he to this Woman, and no more, John 20. 16. Thus when Joſeph ſaid to his Brethren, I am Joſeph, it was enough: She was before in the depth of diſtreſs, and ready to faint away, and one word from that mouth who ſpeaks from Heaven, not only wipes away all tears, but fetcheth and revives her again. If a Soul be never ſo far ſhot into deſpair, one glance of Chriſt's eye in Prayer, and one beam from him ſhoots it back again. Be not therefore diſcouraged in thy deepeſt deſertions, ſince one word from Chriſt in a moment will revive thee.

Obſerv. 7. When he is pleas'd to appear, and ſpeak to any ſoul, he doth it as punctually and effectually as if he call'd it by Name: He is the good Shepherd who knoweth his Sheep by Name, and they know his Voice, John 10. 3, 4. We are the Stars in his right hand, Rev. 1. 20. and he calleth all the Stars by their names, Pſal. 147. 4. and well he may, for as hanging on the Croſs, our Names, and the Bills of our ſins were brought to him, ſo now he is in Heaven, as our High-Prieſt, he bears the Names of the Tribes on his Breaſt-plate, and hath our Names to preſent to his Father; and when he ſpeaks Comfort, tho' he doth not vocally name us, as here he calls Mary, yet he ſpeaks this Comfort as punctually as if he nam'd us. Thus in the manifeſtation of himſelf unto Moſes, (Exod. 33. 17.) ſays he, Thee have I known by Name, i. e. I diſcover my ſelf to thee as one that ſpeaks to ſuch an one by name. Doth he write any Love-Letters from Heaven to thee? he punctually directs them to thy Heart, as if he had wrote thy Name.

Obſerv. 8. Chriſt muſt, when he appears, own us, before we can own him: He begins firſt, and calls Mary, then ſhe anſwers, Rabboni, Maſter. As he loves us firſt before we love him, ſo he muſt manifeſt himſelf firſt before we know him, or rather are known of him.

Thus we have ſeen Chriſt's manifeſtation of himſelf to Mary Magdalen, let us now conſider her Carriage and Behaviour.

Ver. 16. She turned her ſelf, and ſaith unto him, Rabboni, which is to ſay, Maſter: She calleth him Rabboni, too low a Word, and not full enough of Reverence for Chriſt, conſidering that ſtate he was now in; Thomas afterward riſeth higher, and ſaith, My Lord, and my God; but ſhe here plainly, Rabboni, which was the uſual Title given to thoſe who were Teachers among the Jews, and the old Name which ſhe us'd to give Chriſt before. Ver. 17. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Touch me not, for I am not yet aſcended to my Father: It was a loving Familiarity that ſhe was entring into, ſhe would fain have been touching of him, and embracing of his feet, as we read the Women did, Mat. 28. 9. the Greek Word (here in John 20. 17. tranſlated touch) ἅπτου, ſignifies to hang about one, to cleave to one: It was a loving familiarity, ſuch as ſhe had uſed to Lazarus, her Brother, when riſen, ſhe thought to have enjoy'd him as a Friend, and as a Friend on Earth, with ſuch a Love anſwerable: It was this ſame Woman that formerly fell at his feet, and waſh'd them with her Tears, and wip'd them with her Hair, and after that poured Oyntment upon his Head, and ſhe thought that ſhe might uſe her wonted reſpect in ſuch a familiarity, which became not that ſtate wherein Chriſt was now: 'Tis certain, that ſhe us'd no Geſture uncomely for a Woman to uſe to a Man, her Friend, ſuppoſed to be in an Earthly State, for then ſhe ſhould have had ſome ſpecial Reproof for it from Chriſt, neieither indeed was her Spirit at this time capable of any ſuch thing; but the uneetneſs of it lay with reſpect to the preſent condition of Chriſt, which ſhe nſider'd not, and that was, that he being now riſen, and ſo in that ſtate herein he was changed from an Earthly to an Heavenly Man, (1 Cor. 15. 44, 5.) that kind of Converſe which was once ſuitable was not ſo now; as if Friend ſhould be made a King, embracing or familiar ſpeaking would not e ſo proper as bowing to him. It was then ſome Familiar Converſe with him hich ſhe deſir'd, ſuch as ſhe was wont to have, proceeding from her Love unto him, nd therefore he only ſaith unto her, Touch me not, for I am not yet aſcended to my ather. The truth is, (and you ſhall find it true in Experience) when Souls e admitted into near fellowſhip with Chriſt, there is an aptneſs in them to e too familiar, as here we ſee Mary was; and therefore it is a good Leſſon at is given to the Church in Pſal. 45. who being advanced to be a Queen, and ſit at the right hand of Chriſt her Lord, hath this Counſel given her by od, He is thy Lord, worſhip thou him, ver. 11. the King ſaith he ſhall greatly eſire thy Beauty, and ſo be familiar with thee, but withall remember, that He thy Lord, therefore worſhip thou him. It is ſuch a familiarity as ſtill muſt be ined with the greateſt obſervance; or it may be, this poor Woman being in kind of amazement, forgot her ſelf, ſhe knew not what ſhe did, even as Peter hen he was with Chriſt tranſigured in the Mount, the Text ſaith, He knew t what he ſaid, no more did ſhe now well know what ſhe did. But why did Chriſt rbid her to touch him? it is evident that he did ſuffer men to touch him after is Reſurrection; he ſuffered the Diſciples here in this Chapter, He ſhewed them is Hands and his Feet, and bids Thomas to handle him; and in Luke likewiſe e bids the Apoſtles feel whether a Spirit had Fleſh and Bones; and the Women in Mat. 28. to whom he did appear, they embraced his feet; what ſhould e the reaſon then that Chriſt would not have this Woman to touch him? Some y the reaſon was, becauſe Chriſt was now about to ſend her upon a Meſſage o his Diſciples, whom he knew were in great need of Comfort, and therefore hough for her to have communion with Chriſt had been exceeding ſweet, yet, aith Chriſt, do not you ſtand ſtaying here with me, to ſhew your love to me as formerly you have done, do not hang about me, I have other work for you to do, o and comfort thoſe poor Souls which are weeping at home; go tell my Brethren hat I am riſen again; as for converſing with me there will be time enough hereafter for that, I am not yet aſcended to my Father: This indeed is a very probable nd good Meaning, and ſhews that our Lord and Saviour Chriſt took a great eal of care of his poor Brethren, that ſeeing now he was riſen, and had begun to declare it, they likewiſe ſhould have the News of it, that they might be comforted. But I rather think the reaſon of the difference to be this, that he permitted his Diſciples thus to handle him, and touch him, and forbiddeth her to do it, was becauſe that they might be witneſſes that he was truly riſen again with a true Body, and that ſo they might be fully ſatisfied of his Reſurrection; but now this Woman ſhe was already by this appearance of his fully ſatisfied in it, and herefore as her Aim was not to touch him for any ſuch end, ſo there was no need ſhe ſhould touch him for any ſuch end for which the reſt of the Apoſtles did indeed handle him; her aim only being to have ſome familiarity with him, therefore though Chriſt appeared to his Diſciples, and ſuffered himſelf to be touched by them, yet it was in order to beget Faith, it was not in a way of familiarity; but now that Faith that he was riſen again being begotten in Mary, he forbids her that familiarity with him that ſhe was entring into: And obſerve the reaſon he himſelf gives, For (ſaith he) I am not yet aſcended to my Father; the meaning whereof is this, that he forbids her this Familiarity in this Earthly State wherein ſhe was, and forbids it alſo to all ſuch: But in that ſtate of the World to come, when he and ſhe both glorifi'd ſhould meet, then ſhe ſhould have a full familiarity with him; I am not yet aſcended, (ſaith he) nor you with me, but one day we ſhall meet, tho' not in bodily embraces, (for they profit nothing) yet in bodily ſubſtance, and what is anſwerable and analogical hereunto: And it is as if he had ſaid, When you and I ſhall be in Heaven together, with all my Saints and Children, you ſhall have Familiarity enough with me, but now (ſaith he) this kind of Familiarity is not ordain'd

Part II. to you, nor is it the time appointed ; I am not in a ſtate to be familiar in tha way I was before, but when I am aſcended, and when you ſhall be riſen again an aſcended, and ſhall have glorified Bodies with me, then we ſhall be familiar. As one thing is forbidden to her, ſo to quiet her another thing is promis'd, and i is implied, that when he is aſcended, and his Children with him, when the ſhall have Bodies taken up thither, and be where he is, (John 17. 24.) that then h will be familiar with them : If you mark it, he doth not ſay, Touch me not, for I a riſen, as if he had only intended to ſhew that his preſent ſtate allowed it not, or as i he meant to ſay, tho' you were familiar with me before my Death, yet now you mu not be ſo, for I am riſen ; No, it is a higher reaſon, For (ſaith he) I am not yet aſcende which clearly holds this forth, that indeed there is a time after his Aſcenſion in whic he and his People ſhall be familiar, when he and they are in Heaven together ; ſt but till then, (ſaith he) and in the mean time, between me and you thoug there be a ſpiritual familiarity by Faith now I am riſen, and ſhall be when I am aſcended, yet this kind of familiarity which you would now have with me is reſerved to the Life to come ; and when I am aſcended, and ſo you are wi me, then we ſhall be familiar ; and therefore he addeth afterward, I aſcend t my Father, and your Father, we ſhall all be together one day, and then we ſhal be familiar. This I take to be the meaning, and I know not how otherwiſe t reſolve it ; other ſenſes are put upon it, but to me this is moſt natural and genuine, and indeed moſt for our Comfort : I will ſtrengthen it with one inſtanc which I have often thought of, to this very purpoſe, and it is of our Savio Chriſt's appearing in his transfiguration, when he carried up James, Peter an John, into the Mount, and was transfigured before them : Now all the Evangeliſts have this as a Preface to that ſtory, that Chriſt ſaid, There are ſome ſtanding here that ſhall not taſte of death, till they ſee the Son of man in his Kingdom : So that that transfiguration was a Glimpſe or an Entrance into that Glory of his Kingdom, which with his Saints and Children he is and ſhall be poſſeſt o Now in that Kingdom to ſhew that Familiarity that ſhall be between his Members and himſelf, you have Moſes and Elias both (one having had his Body in Heaven afore, and the other through the power of God aſſuming his Body, an being riſen again) talking and familiarly converſing with him : Thus it wil be in the Kingdom of Heaven, and this, I ſay, Chriſt implies in this Speech o his to Mary, Touch me not, (ſaith he) for I am not yet aſcended ; forbear this Familiarity with me till we be in Heaven together, for then we ſhall be familia enough. He meaneth not, that there ſhall be embracing of him, as here ſhe would have done, but Metaphorically, that there ſhall be an intercourſe of Familiarity between him and his Children. It is a Parallel Phraſe of Speech wit that in Mat. 2, 29. (and indeed the one interprets the other) I will not drink o this fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new with you in my Fathers Kingdom : It is not that Chriſt will then drink Wine, but he Metaphorically expreſſeth the mutual Joys which he in and with the Saints, and they in an with him, ſhall have by the Spiritual Entainment in Heaven. Look then wha Familiarity there is amongſt Men at Table, when they eat and drink together, ſuch a kind of enjoyment in a familiar way ſhall the Saints have with Jeſus Chri in Heaven, whereof there is ſome earneſt here, Rev. 3. 20. as that there is but a Metaphorical Expreſſion, ſo this of touching him here is, then in Heaven they ſhall touch him, that is, they ſhall be familiar with him : He expreſſeth it in one place by that familiarity we have one with another at a Supper, and in this place by her touching of him, or embracing him. It is certain, that much o our happineſs in Heaven will lye in a bleſſed Familiarity with Jeſus Chriſt. Chriſt is a perfect Husband, and all other Husbands are but Shadows of him, and there ſhall be the utmoſt familiarity then between us ; not that kind that i between Man and Wife here, but what tranſcends it, our Bodies ſhall be made ſpiritual, 1 Cor. 15. as his alſo is, and yet as Bodies earthly are ſuited each to other in converſe earthly, They two are one fleſh, ſo Chriſt's Spiritual Body and ours in an Heavenly way ; yet I ſay, that all ſuch near Converſes here are but the Shadows of it, becauſe it will be tranſcendantly more intimate, for we ſhall be one Spirit with Chriſt, therefore in that 1 Cor. 6. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord or the Body, he addeth, ver. 14. God hath both raiſed up the Lord, and will alſo aiſe up us by his own power ; that is, God hath appointed the very Bodies of he Saints (take them as glorifi'd) for Chriſt to take pleaſure in them, and for hem to take pleaſure in Chriſt ; and as he hath ſuited the Eye to Beauty here, ſo e hath ſuited thoſe ſpiritual ſenſes there to that Glory which is in Chriſt.

Obſerv. 1. In the mean time Chriſt being now riſen and aſcended, we may learn his, not to know him after the fleſh : Mary here would have been familiar with im in a kind of humane Familiarity, our Saviour Chriſt refuſeth this, to teach her, hat though he would one day be thus familiar with her, yet for the preſent hat Familiarity ſhe was to have with him was by Faith ; Henceforth (ſaith aul, 2 Cor. 5. 16.) I know no man after the fleſh, yea, though I have known Chriſt fter the fleſh, I know him no more : Though the Apoſtles had the earthly Image f Chriſt in their Fancies, yet when they prayed to him, they did not ſet before them ſuch a Chriſt as they had ſeen, but a ſpiritual Chriſt, as glorified, s aſcended, as riſen again ; and under theſe Conſiderations did they put orth their Faith to him, and unto this doth he call Mary here, Touch me not, or I am not yet aſcended ; if you will have any converſe with me by Faith, o it is ; as for that Familiarity to which we are ordained hereafter, that beometh not us now : So that indeed the leaſt knowledge of our Lord and aviour Chriſt in a ſpiritual way by Faith, it is worth all the Bodily Knowedge we can have of him, though he ſhould appear to us all a thouſand times, and e never ſo much otherwiſe familiar with us, it were nothing in compariſon of hat we may have by Faith ; Though I have ſeen Chriſt after the fleſh, (ſaith aul) which expreſſion of his I think may riſe to this, though I was enabled y the Eye of my Body to behold him in Heaven glorifi'd, (for ſo he did when e was converted, and ſo wicked Men ſhall ſee him at latter day) yet that ght I have by the New Creature, by Faith, is worth more than all the other. hat ſight that the pooreſt Believer hath of Jeſus Chriſt by Faith, is a higher ne than that which Paul had of him by his bodily Eyes ; it was a means indeed f converting Paul, and it may be of the Jews, but elſe had not Chriſt wrought n him a touching of him by Faith, a ſight of him by Faith, and by the New Creature, that other would have done him no good, for it will do wicked Men no good at latter day. Therefore now if you will deal with Jeſus Chriſt, ou muſt deal with him by Faith, you muſt touch him that way ; there is o other, till ſuch time as you come up to Heaven, and be aſcended with im, then indeed you ſhall ſee him face to face, and have familiarity enough with him ; Touch me not, for I am not yet aſcended to my Father ; but go and tell y Brethren, &c.

Obſerv. 2. You ſee our Lord and Saviour Chriſt was not only careful to dye or us, but to apply comfort to us : You ſhall read in the Story of the Evangeliſts, hat the Diſciples were got into a Corner, and there they were weeping and ourning ; ſaith Chriſt unto Mary, What do you ſtand ſtaying here with me, o your ways, ſaith he, and tell my Brethren, poor Souls they have need of Comort. Such are his dealings with poor Souls now he is in Heaven, he ſeeth uch an one weeping and mourning after him ; what doth he ? why he doth in is Providence order ſuch a Speech in a Sermon, though he doth not tell the Preacher ſo much, yet his Spirit doth ſecretly guide him ; Go, ſaith he, and tell uch a one ſuch a truth as ſhall comfort his Heart. Jeſus Chriſt knows all your Diſtreſſes, and as he ſent Mary to his Diſciples, ſo he ſendeth a word providentially, either publickly or privately, or he ſendeth indeed his own Spirit (a etter Meſſenger than Mary was) down into your hearts, to be a Meſſenger f Comfort to you, when you go up and down mourning, and want Comfort. You may ſee, I ſay, how careful our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt is, of thoſe that e in Diſtreſs, in want of him, how he takes care to have them comforted, therefore e diſpatcheth away this good Woman to his Diſciples. That's one Obſervation.

Obſerv. 3. Another Obſervation is this, That for us to be means of performing of Duty to others, to comfort them, and to bring others to Faith and to believing, and to go about Errands, and to do buſineſſes that Chriſt ſets us about, is much better in its ſeaſon than enjoying Communion with Chriſt : The thing is clear from this, Mary though ſhe had not been thus ſamiliar with Chriſt, yet what a great deal of Happineſs would it have been to her Soul, what comfort to have but ſtaid by him a while: No, ſaith Chriſt, I have better work for you to do than this, (for certainly he did not ſend her to her Loſs) Go, ſaith he, as faſt as you can, and tell my Brethren, do that Work and Buſineſs, and refer the other till hereafter: And this was better for her, and ſhe ſhould have a greater reward than to have ſtaid there to behold him, and perſonally to have Communion with him. To be employed in Works for the Glory of Chriſt and good of his Churches, when he calleth us thereunto, is more acceptable than private Communion with him in Prayer, &c. Why? for we ſhall have familiarity enough with him in Heaven: So he ſaith here, Go and do that Work I appoint you, and then fear not Familiarity when you and I am aſcended; do you that I ſend you about, and believe me, we will find a time for the other, we will meet in Heaven; in the mean time go and tell theſe poor Souls that are mourning, and ſadned for the want of me. This may hearten us in the Work of our Callings, to do what our Hands find to do: Spiritual-ſelf muſt be ſometimes denied to do Carnal Buſineſs, Chriſt denied glorious ſelf when he left Communion with his Father to come into the World, and to work out our Salvation in it.

Obſerv. 4. Another Obſervation from hence is this, That God doth oftentimes uſe means, very weak means, to reveal the greateſt Truths to his Children, yea, to the greateſt of his Children. Here is the great point of the Reſurrection; yea, here is the great point of the Aſcenſion, which was higher than the Reſurrection, whom doth he employ to break it firſt, but a poor Woman, and employs her to the greateſt Apoſtles. It is not Miniſters only that do always bring forth a Truth, God oftentimes bleſſeth the meaneſt in a Church to do it, Angels teach the Women, they the Apoſtles; he would honour, and he did honour Mary, to bring the firſt News of the Reſurrection to the Apoſtles; therefore we ſhould not ſtreighten truths only in reſpect of Perſons, but as the Holy Ghoſt ſaith, A Child ſhould lead us, Iſa. 11. 6. I mean in reſpect of Truths.

Obſerv. 5. Again we may Note this, That if we do know any thing of God, and of Chriſt, if any ſpecial thing be told us for the good of others, we ought to tell it, and not to keep it cloſe: So ſoon as ever Chriſt had told Mary, Go tell my Brethren, ſaith he.

It's the firſt time he called them Brethren, he called them Diſciples and Apoſtles when he ſent them forth to preach, and when he took his Farewel of them to dye, he called them Friends, but now he is riſen again he calleth them Brethren; not only to fulfill what was plainly foretold of him in Pſal. 22. 3. (which Pſalm in the former part of it is a Prophecy of the Crucifying of Chriſt) that as he made uſe when he was upon the Croſs of that Saying, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Nay, God had in his Providence put into the Phariſees Mouths to ſpeak the very Words that he had foretold in this Pſalm, ſo now being riſen again he uſeth that compellation which was propheſied that he ſhould uſe, I will declare thy Name unto my Brethren; therefore ſaith he here, Go tell my Brethren; not only, I ſay, for this Reaſon doth he call them Brethren, but alſo hereby the more to break their Hearts, for they were guilty of more ſin againſt him now than they had been in all their Converſe with him; ſome of them, namely Peter, had denied him, and they had all forſaken him, yet when he riſeth from the dead, the firſt Word he ſpeaks of them he calleth Brethren, thereby to aſſure them how his Heart and Mind ſtood toward them, notwithſtanding their Sin and Unbelief.

Obſerv. 6. Our Lord and Saviour Chriſt in the manifeſtation of himſe[illegible] ſtill riſeth higher and higher: He had called them Servants a long [illegible] they had called him Maſter, when he was to take his Leave of [illegible] called them Friends, now he is riſen he calleth them Brethren, a Rel[illegible] more ſweetneſs, a higher ſtile than any of the former. The longer [illegible] verſe with Chriſt, the longer you live with him, the more ſweetneſs you [illegible] find in him, the more nearer and intimate Paſſages of his Love, and of [illegible] ſweetneſs of his Relations you ſhall find to increaſe and grow upon you. [illegible] you found God ſweet in one Relation? haſt thou found ſweetneſs in ſuch a Promiſe? he hath ſome further thing reſerved to reveal of himſelf to thy Soul; hath Chriſt call the hee Friend? wait but a while, and he will riſe higher, he will call thee Bro-her. You ſee here after his Reſurrection he ſpeaks more kindly than he did efore his Death; Go tell my Brethren, ſaith he; and now being aſcended, and Heaven, his Expreſſions are yet more ſweet, he profeſſeth himſelf to be a Iusband, and they to be his Spouſe. The longer thou knoweſt Chriſt, the ore Love thou ſhalt ſtill find in him, he will ſtill riſe higher, and encreaſe in is Expreſſions,

But what is the Meſſage he would have his Brethren told? Tell them, (ſaith e) that I aſcend unto my Father, and your Father, to my God, and your God.

Here you ſee he doth not only ſatisfie this poor Woman, that he was riſen gain, but he tells her a greater matter than his Reſurrection at the very firſt ord, he breaks open to her the great Article of his Aſcenſion. When Chriſt nce begins to reveal himſelf to a Soul, he goes ſtill on to reveal greater and greater ings. Mary here ſhe would have contented her ſelf with his dead Body, ſhe ems to deſire no more; Tell me where thou haſt laid him, ſaith ſhe, and I ill take him away: Poor Woman, ſhe had been unable to have born away dead Body, but her affections goes beyond her ſtrength, and now ſhe hath t only Chriſt's Body dead, but Chriſt's Body riſen; and not only ſo, but ſhe th News of his Aſcenſion; I aſcend, ſaith he. Still our Lord and Saviour Jeſus hriſt will exceed our Expectations in the manifeſtation of himſelf; you look r him riſen, you ſhall find him aſcending, (I ſpeak in alluſion to the Text) will ſtill be better than you can imagine, he hath ſtill reſerves beyond what-ver your Hearts can think; I aſcend, (ſaith he): As ſoon as he was riſen, his eart was preſently upon aſcending into Heaven. The truth is, it was his e to have aſcended into Heaven when he firſt roſe, therefore he ſpeaks in the eſent tenſe, I aſcend, I am going thither, though he was to ſtay a long while, rty days upon Earth; but, I ſay, as ſoon as he was riſen his Heart was above, was in Heaven, all his mind was upon aſcending; he was held here indeed low, to do that Service to his Diſciples and Saints, to teach his Apoſtles e Myſteries of his Kingdom, and of his Reſurrection, yet his heart was upon s Aſcenſion, ſo ſhould every Soul be: What ſaith the Apoſtle, Are ye riſen with briſt? what's the next ſtep? Heaven: Aſcend, ſaith he. Do we profeſs our ſelves ſen with Chriſt? let us not ſet our affection on things on the Earth, let us cend to Heaven, let us ſeek thoſe things which are above. Chriſt was up in is affections ſooner than in his Body; I aſcend, ſaith he.

What's the Reaſon that Chriſt would have Mary to tell his Diſciples at the rſt daſh, that as he was riſen, ſo he would aſcend, and aſcend preſently, aſcend on?

This is the Reaſon, among others, they did dream, and their thoughts ran pon nothing but a Temporal Kingdom, and ſuch a kind of Meſſiah as ſhould ſtore again the Kingdom unto Iſrael: Nay, the truth is, that even when he as aſcending they could not be kept off, but ſtill this ran in their minds, Vilt thou at this time (ſay they) reſtore the Kingdom unto Iſrael? for the Apoſtles ou muſt know were ignorant in many things, and though it was neceſſary hat they ſhould know infallibly, yet it was not neceſſary that they ſhould know ll things at all times. John did not know his Revelation a long time after he was n Apoſtle. Now to break off their thoughts from this carnal Conceit, the firſt ews he ſends them word of, was, that he was to aſcend; he would not let hem lye in an Error ſo long; how careful is our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, hat as his People ſhould not lye long uncomforted, ſo that they ſhould not ye long in Error; the very firſt News you ſee that he ſends his Diſciples, afore e ſpeaks with them himſelf, (to drive that Error out of their Hearts) is, aſcend, (ſaith he) I aſcend to my Father, and your Father, to my God, and your God: ou ſhall find that Chriſt when he had ſpoken of his Aſcenſion before, he uſu-lly ſaid, I go to my Father, and I go to him that ſent me, &c. ſo John 15. 6, 10, 8. but now he puts their Names in too; I aſcend to my Father, and your Father; or ſtill (as I ſaid) he reſerves Comforts for them: It became Chriſt when he as riſen from the dead to ſpeak higher things than he had done before. Now he Scope and End principally of it is this, he had told Mary, that he was not et aſcended, and that therefore ſhe ſhould forbear her familiarity with him;

Ay, but, ſaith he, know, and tell my Diſciples too, that I aſcend to my Father, and your Father, and therefore where I am you ſhall be alſo; I aſcend to Heaven, you ſhall aſcend thither too; for what's the reaſon that I go to Heaven, but becauſe my Father is there? I muſt go to my Father's Houſe; why he is your Father too, and therefore you ſhall aſcend too, and that by virtue of my Aſcenſion. We go to Heaven by virtue of our Sonſhip, or Adoption, therefore ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 17. If Sons, then Heirs, and Heirs of God.

Chriſt doth not ſay, I aſcend to Heaven; No, he ſpeaks higher, I aſcend to my God, and to my Father; for God conſidered as a Father is Heaven, and therefore in that Rom. 8. we are ſaid to be Heirs of God, not Heirs of Heaven, for indeed God is Heaven.

I aſcend to my Father: He ſhews here the reaſon why he was riſen, and why he did aſcend, and ſo why the Saints ſhall riſe and aſcend; becauſe God is his Father, and God is their Father. What's the reaſon that Abraham ſhall riſe one day? becauſe he is the God of Abraham; ſo Chriſt himſelf argues from that very thing in Mat. 22. 32. ſo here he ſhews them the true ground why he was thus riſen, and why he was to aſcend, becauſe, ſaith he, God is my God, and my Father; and he plainly intimates, that they ſhall go to Heaven too, and riſe again, as he had done; for what God is to me, ſaith he, the ſame he is unto you; Is he my Father? he is your Father too; what the conſequent was of his being my God, and my Father, ſhall be the conſeqent of his being your God, and your Father; the conſequent of his being my God and Father, is, that I roſe again, and am now going to Heaven; ſo the conſequent of his being your God, and your Father, ſhall be, that you ſhall riſe again, and go to Heaven too. This is clearly the Scope of Chriſt, Go tell my Brethren this, (ſaith he) that I aſcend to my God, &c.

I might ſhew here, How he is the God of Chriſt, and the Father of Chriſt, and that in him what he is to Chriſt he is likewiſe to us: But I will not ſtand upon that now.

Obſerv. 7. Only Obſerve this, That the Tenour of the Covenant is alter'd; it was the God of Abraham, of Iſaac, and Jacob, and ſo the God of the Jews; but now it is the God of Chriſt, and ſo our God: Becauſe he that Abraham typified out is come: Abraham, with whom the Covenant was made, was but a ſhadow, Chriſt is the Subſtance. And ſo I proceed to the 18*th.* verſe.

Ver. 18. Mary Magdalen came, and told the Diſciples that ſhe had ſeen the Lord, and that he had ſpoken theſe things unto her. There is little I ſhall Obſerve out of theſe Words, but only that which before I did; Mary ſhe goes, and doeth her Duty, ſhe leaves communion with Chriſt, and goes to perform that which Chriſt had enjoined her, as indeed we ſhould. Though Communion with Chriſt may be ſweeter to us, as it is with a Child to be with his Mother all day, yet it is his Duty to go to School all day, and then he ſhall come home to his Mother at night; ſo it is our Duty to be converſant in our Callings, to be doing thoſe things Chriſt ſets us about, and it is more acceptable to God then to have communion with him all day long: You ſee Mary counts it ſo here, ſhe leaves Chriſt, and goes and tells the Diſciples what he had ſpoken to her.

CHAP. VIII.

f Joy in the Holy Ghoſt: That it ſprings from our Communion with God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt.

1 JOHN I. 4.

nd theſe Things write we unto you, that your Joy may be full.

THis Apoſtle John was the Love and Delight of Chriſt, when he liv'd upon the Earth, nor had he leſs Familiar Converſe with his Lord Jeſus after his Aſcenſion, and Inveſtiture with Glory in Heaven: Hence the Apoſtle makes this Preface to his Epiſtle, 1 John 1. 3. hat which we have ſeen and heard, declare we unto you, that you alſo may have llowſhip with us, and truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son eſus Chriſt.

The only begotten Son of God coming out of the Boſom of the Father, veal'd the Father and his Love; and indeed, he only could do it, John 1. 3. in like manner John, that Boſom Apoſtle, who lay in the Boſom of hriſt, opens to us thoſe Breaſts of Conſolation which himſelf had ſuck'd; nd as they were full Breaſts, ſo he writes theſe things that our Joys may e full.

What therefore this Epiſtle aims at, we may gueſs by the Frontiſpiece, to hich alſo relates, and comes almoſt to the ſame thing, what he repeats at e end, and which is near the Cloſe of the Epiſtle, 1 John 5. 13. Theſe things ve I written unto you, that believe on the Name of the Son of God, that ye may ow that ye have Eternal Life, and that ye may believe on the Name of the Son God: For however Believers may be happy by having an Intereſt in this iſe, yet then only they gladly rejoice when they know themſelves to have , and exult with a full Joy, when they know the Life which they have to e eternal. Hence then there ariſes two things, more diſtinctly to be treated : 1. That it is the chief Aim of the Apoſtle to fortifie the way for Believ-rs to attain Communion with God, and to aſcertain themſelves concerning ternal Life. 2. That thence only a fulneſs of Joy doth redound, That your y (ſaith he) may be full. The Papiſts, who have made Shipwrack of Faith nd a good Conſcience, to endanger others too would deprive the Chuch of hriſt of Aſſurance, of Salvation, which is the truſty Rudder to ſteer her in Storm, and ſo put her out to Sea, not a calm Sea, but unquiet and trou-led, (as Iſaiah ſpeaks, Iſa. 57. 20.) and there leave her to be driven about ith the Whirlpools of a fluctuating Conſcience, or to be toſs'd with the Hur-icanes of Tentations, and at laſt to ſuffer Shipwrack.

If in no other reſpect, in this at leaſt, they are Enemies of the Chriſtian eace, of that which is the beſt Peace, Peace of Conſcience: To overthrow them ll I oppoſe this ſingle Apoſtle John alone againſt them.

But they will ſay, that it is granted indeed that to the Prophets, and Apo-les, and to Chriſtians of the firſt magnitude, this extraordinary Priviledge of Aſſurance is vouchſaf'd, and manifeſted to them by extraordinary Revelation; ut that it is not diſcover'd to the common ſort of Chriſtians by any Reve-ation founded on the Word: But, ſays the Apoſtle, I have wrote theſe things (and indeed he wrote them on purpoſe) to that end, that they who believe ay know that they have Eternal Life. What need is there of any Heavenly Meſ-enger, to tell them? they have John, let them hear him. It is not only to the Apoſtles, that John, who was was one of them writes this, but to all who

Part II. believe, 1 John 1. 3. That which we have ſeen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye alſo may have fellowſhip with us, and truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt: His meaning is, that you Believers may have communion with us Apoſtles, in the ſame fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt which we have. He directed this Epiſtle to all who believe on Chriſt, and to Perſons of all Ages among them, 1 John 2. 12, 13, 14. I write unto you, little Children, becauſe your ſins are forgiven you for his Names ſake: I write unto you, Fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is from the beginning: I write unto you, young Men, becauſe ye have overcome the wicked one: I write unto you, little Children, becauſe ye have known the Father: I have written unto you, Fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is from the beginning: I have written unto you, young Men, becauſe ye are ſtrong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one. He doth not therefore ſpeak of Aſſurance, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, as a Priviledge peculiar to grown Believers, of the largeſt and ſtrongeſt ſize, or to young Men eſtabliſh'd in the Faith, but to Children themſelves, to whom it is given (as our Saviour ſpeaks, Mat. 13. 11.) more often given to know this Myſtery of Joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

If we read over the whole Epiſtle, we ſhall find that there are as many right and infallible Marks, and certain Signs given, whereby we may know our Adoption, as there are verſes in it; ſuch are, walking in the Light, 1 Joh. 1. 6, 7. Confeſſion of our ſins, v. 9. Obſervance of God's Precepts, 1 Joh. 2. 3, 5. Obſervance eſpecially of that Precept of Chriſt, which is the Teſt of his Diſciples, To love the Brethren, v. 10. Then he tells us, (1 John 3. 3.) that the greater our Hope is, the more it will purifie us; and that whoever is born of God, doth not commit ſin, v. 9. and that he hath given us the Spirit, v. 24.

Object. But the Papiſts reply, That they freely grant that all theſe are certain ſigns of Salvation, in the general, but that the Apoſtle John doth not name, or ſo much as intimate any perſon to be aſſur'd of his Salvation in particular: Whence therefore can any one promiſe himſelf that theſe ſigns are in him?

Anſw. The Apoſtle himſelf furniſheth us with an Anſwer to this, 1 John 5. 10. He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witneſs in himſelf; he that believeth not God, hath made him a Lyar, becauſe he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son: In himſelf, that is, in his Heart, aſſenting and agreeing to theſe ſigns; for as the Word of God, which we have in our hands, and which is divinely inſpir'd, hath the inward Teſtimony of the Spirit in it ſelf, and is the Evidence and Judge of it ſelf; by like reaſon alſo λογος ille ἔμφυτος, that word which you bear written in your hearts, hath annexed to it a moſt credible and authentick Evidence of it ſelf; He who believes (ſays the Apoſtle) hath the witneſs in himſelf, and that Witneſs is, that God hath given to us Eternal Life, v. 11. and the ſame Apoſtle exhibits to us three Witneſſes, (v. 8.) who uſe on Earth to confirm and ſeal to the Conſciences of Believers their proper particular Salvation. As there are three in Heaven, who before had accompliſh'd their Salvation eſtabliſh'd in the greateſt reality, (v. 7.) ſo there are three that bear witneſs on Earth, the Spirit, and the Water, and the Blood; and theſe three agree in one, v. 8. There is the Spirit of Adoption, Rom. 8. 16. the Water of Sanctification, Heb. 10. 22. and the Blood of Chriſt and Juſtification, Heb. 9. 14. Now in the Mouth of two or three Witneſſes every word ſhall be eſtabliſh'd, 2 Cor. 13. 1.

Object. But the Papiſts again Object, That the Heart of man it ſelf is deceitful, who can know it, Jer. 17. 9. And we experience daily many to be decieved, and to be deluded with a falſe Hope.

Anſw. Be it ſo, yet to us who truly believe Chriſt hath given an Underſtanding, that we may know him, 1 John 5. 20. he hath put into us that true new Heart, that renewed Underſtanding which judgeth all things, 1 Cor. 2. 15. and beſides, he hath given us the Spirit, which is a Spirit of Truth, and knoweth all things, and teacheth us all things, 1 John 2. 20, 21, 27. for all theſe ſigns of Salvation, which the Spirit hath inſerted in the Scriptures, he hath written in the Hearts of Believers, and hath taught them to read them in themſelves, as well as in this Epiſtle, ſo that that there is no need that any man ſhould teach us, v. 27.

To which this alſo may be added, that ſince all Knowledge chiefly owes e certainty of its Evidence, which is in it ſelf, to the reality which is in the bject, Faith therefore which is ἔλεγχος, an Evident Demonſtration, and ὑπόστασις, real ſubſiſtence of the things which are believ'd, doth claim to its ſelf the gheſt certainty and infallibity : For if the ſenſe is not deceiv'd about its pro- r Object, nor the Underſtanding about its proper Object, (which ſince it is ſublimer and more abſtracted power of the Soul, often corrects the ſence) uch leſs can Faith (in which the Image of God chiefly ſhines forth) be de- eved about its proper Object, ſince it is more noble than Reaſon, and rais'd bove it, and often convinceth Reaſon of Errors and Miſtakes. For it is the όστασις, the ſubſiſtence of things believ'd, and the ἔλεγχος, the evident demon- ration of them, and therefore challengeth to it ſelf the higheſt certainty : And deed the Certainty and Infallibility of Knowledge chiefly ariſeth from, and owing to, both the reality which is in the Object, and to the evidence hich is in the Knowledge it ſelf. Therefore, Tho' Hypocrites deceive them- lves, and being deluded with falſe appearances, dream that they believe, et they who are ſincere Believers, who are awake in the broad day-light of clear and bright Faith, ſee and embrace the things themſelves really ſubſiſt- g. But the Papiſts when they are ſo reduc'd that they cannot defend their rrour in the groſſeſt ſenſe, in denial of all Aſſurance of Salvation, begin to ſten their Opinion, and to ſmooth it with ſome little Diſtinction, and pre- nd to acknowledge that a Man may have a conjectural and probable Opi- ion of his Salvation, but not a certain and infallible knowledge, this they ſtiffly eny : But they ſhall not ſo evade the Cogency of this Apoſtles reaſoning, who ot only often inculcates theſe and the like Expreſſions, from this we know, and this we know, but ſpeaks more plainly, 1 John 2. 3. Hereby do we know that we now him ; and 1 John 3. 19. Hereby we know that we are of the Truth, and all aſſure our Hearts before him : Ay, ſay the cavilling Papiſts, this Doctrine oth render men ſecure indeed, too ſecure ; this your aſſurance makes them areleſs, profligate, and looſ'd to all Wickedneſs. The Apoſtle as foreſeeing d aware of this Cavil, meets with it, and prevents it at the firſt Entrance this ſecond Chapter, 1 John 2. 1. Theſe things (ſays he) write I unto you, at ye ſin not : To which alſo agrees what he ſays 1 John 3. 3. And every an that hath this hope in him, purifieth himſelf even as he is pure. This Aſſu- nce of Faith when it is genuine, begets an ingenuous Spirit in the Heart the Believer, Pſal. 51. 14, 15. There is not a ſtronger Bridle to reſtrain ſin, or a quicker Spur to Holineſs than this Hope, and Aſſurance, and Joy in the oly Ghoſt.

But what tho' the Believer falls into great Sins, as the greateſt Lights have eir Eclipſes, yet the certainty of Faith is not utterly loſt, for as the Seed Faith remains in him, not as yet ſhaken out, (1 John 3. 9.) ſo the firm Eſta- liſhment of Faith abides alſo unſhaken, 1 John 2. 1. My little Children, theſe ings write I unto you, that ye ſin not : And if any man ſin, we have an advo- te with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous : We have Aſſurance in this, at Chriſt being a righteous Advocate, he will never be the Patron of a ad cauſe, and therefore ſince he pleads ours, we may be ſure to proſper in . And he is not only a righteous Advocate, but his own very Righteouſ- eſs pleads for us, and pleads not before a Judge, but a Father, who in this ews himſelf juſt to us his Children, That if we confeſs our ſins, he is righte- s to forgive, 1 John 1. 9.

Object. But it is Objected by others than the Papiſts, many fall by ſinning ſo as holly to fall way : Tho' therefore it ſhould be granted that Believers may have aſ- rance at preſent, yet how ſhall they be aſcertain'd of the future?

Anſw. But notwithſtanding all, the Foundation of God and Faith ſtands ſure ; r what ſays the Apoſtle of theſe who thus totally fall away, 1 John 2. 19. hey went out from us but they were not of us ; for if they had been of us, they ould no doubt have continued with us ; but they went out, that they might be made anifeſt that they were not all of us. But of thoſe who are true Brethren in- eed, what ſays he? 1 John 3. 1. Behold, what manner of Love the Father hath ſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the Sons of God ; therefore the World knoweth us not, becauſe it knew him not: Ay, but they will Object, that he ſays indeed rightly, That now we are the Sons of God, v. 2. but leaves it uncertain whether we ſhall be ſo for the future. The Apoſtle to obviate this Objection goes on, and ſays, That tho' it doth not yet appear what we ſhall be, yet we know that when he ſhall appear we ſhall be like him; for as he ſays 1 John 5. 11, 12. And this is the Record, that God hath given to us Eternal Life, and this Life is in his Son: He that hath the Son hath Life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not Life: God hath now given us this Eternal Life, whoſe Gifts are ἀμεταμέλητα, without Repentance, Rom. 11. 29. and the Life which he gives is eternal, and ſo it is impoſſible that ever it ſhould be cut off by any Fate or Death. And as it is given to us, and to be enjoyed by us, ſo it it is depoſited in Chriſt to be kept for us, and he is ſo powerful and ſo faithful as to preſerve what is committed to his Charge; And theſe things have I written to you, (ſays he, 1 John 5. 13.) that you may know that you have eternal Life.

From this alone, perfect Love and full Joy reſult: For there cannot be perfect Love in the Heart of any Believer which nouriſheth a fear of any future Hatred or Enmity which God may have againſt him, nor can there be a full Joy where the Mind is obnoxious to the leaſt Suſpicion of a Change in its happy ſtate: For any one ſo to love, as that hereafter he will hate, is the Poyſon and Bane of Friendſhip; and thus for us to enjoy God the chiefeſt good, in ſo uncertain a manner, as that afterwards we ſhall looſe him, would afford more bitter than ſweet Reflections to our thoughts; but the Apoſtle wrote all in this his Epiſtle, That our joy may be full, 1 John 1. 4.

Having thus ſurmounted the chiefeſt Rocks of thoſe Objections and Doubts, with which the Papiſts endeavour to obſtruct the Entrance (of which Peter ſpeaks, 2 Pet. 1. 11.) into the Kingdom of God, let us now with full Sails (that I may uſe Paul's word πληροφορία, Heb. 6. 11.) ſtrive to enter into the Harbour it ſelf of joy in the Holy Ghoſt, a Joy ſo great, a Joy ſo full, that we may rather be ſaid to enter into it, than that to enter into us; but we ſhall better underſtand how full and deep this Joy is, if we conſider the fountain from which it ſprings: For as Water will riſe as high as its Spring-head, ſo this joy doth too: Nor is there any need for us to ſearch for the fountain afar off, for it is near to us (as that in Gen. 20. was to Hagar) ſince the verſe preceeding my Text opens this Spring to us, 1 John 1. 3, 4. That which we have ſeen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye alſo may have fellowſhip with us, and truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt: And theſe things write we unto you, that your joy may be full. This Communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, is the bleſſed Spring from whence theſe clear, lively and refreſhing Waters come, bubling up unto Eternal Life, John 4. 14. All joy (which God as the moſt excellent and wiſe Worker hath inſerted into the actions of Creatures, to ſharpen, excite and animate them) doth either accompany or follow vital Actions and Operations, and a full, compleat Joy, doth only attend ſuch an action of our Souls, as is moſt vital, and moſt perfect, and to ſuch an Operation there are theſe three things requiſite:

1. That it ſhould have for its Subject, the moſt vivacious and lively Power, or Faculty of our Souls.

2. The Object, about which it is exercis'd muſt be the moſt Noble of all other.

3. The Power or Faculty muſt be join'd to this its Object with the moſt intimate Union: Even Ariſtotle's Philoſophical School teacheth us thus much; but that great Dictator of Nature could never find out what this moſt perfect and vital Operation was, but the Apoſtle John hath unlock'd and open'd this Myſtery out of Chriſt's School, and his moſt ſecret Counſels; Communion with God and his Chriſt is this moſt vital and perfect Operation of our Souls above all other, and let us ſee how all the forementionꝰd Particulars do exactly ſquare with this Communion, and are found in it alone.

1. For this Operation, viz. Communion with God and Chriſt, is moſt vital, John 17. 3. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent: And indeed this Communion is the only vital action; for thoſe Who live in carnal pleaſures, are dead while they li

1 Tim. 5. 6. And as the Apoſtle denies that ſuch live, ſo Auſtin deny'd that they had any joy, for as good is the ſole Object of the Will, ſo of true joy likewiſe: Wicked Men as they only luſt, not love, ſo they wanton, not rejoice.

2. This bleſſed Communion hath for its Seat both the Underſtanding and Will, which are called the Quinteſſence, the very Spirits of the Mind, Eph. 4. 22. theſe are the Subjects and Receptacles of this Communion, and of this full joy, according to that Song of Mary, Luke 1. 47. And my Spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour; and this part of the Mind, the Spirit, is more ſublime, purer, and more lively than any other, and form'd for infinitely greater pleaſures then all our External Senſes and Appetites: Theſe are vaſtly deep, and moſt capacious Gulphs, which can at one Draught take in and drink more of Pleaſures and Joys then all the other lower Powers of the Soul, (which are only ſubſervient to theſe, as Purveyors of Pleaſures for them) and they are able alſo to collect, to treaſure, and heap up theſe joys unto Eternity: But the Gates of the Senſes are too narrow to admit an Entrance of this full joy; Therefore lift up your heads you everlaſting Gates, (that I may ſpeak in the Pſalmiſt's Phraſe) you Gates of Eternity, viz. you higher powers of the rational Soul, which only is immortal, that the King of Glory may come in, attended with this retinue, Pſal. 24. 7. whom yet to receive even theſe Paſſages of the Soul, are too narrow, tho' they are never ſo much enlarg'd. As the Eye too ſmall and unequal to the Light of the Sun ſpread far and wide, cannot with one look behold and comprehend all its Beams diffus'd through the whole Compaſs of Nature, The peace of God doth not only ſurpaſs all our Senſes, but our Underſtanding too, Phil. 4. 7.

3. This Communion, as the moſt noble Operation, hath the moſt perfect Object: For our Communion is with God, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt; our Communion is with God, who as the Father of Spirits, is the Fountain and Centre of our Souls, and they cannot have any Reſt or complacent Satisfaction, but in the Boſome of this their Father: Our Communion is with that God who is the Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End of all things, who can do all things, who fills all things with himſelf, and who is all in all, 1 Cor. 15. 28. in whom alone we feaſt upon that abundant heap of Bliſs and Pleaſure, which he hath but ſparingly ſcatter'd in other things beſides himſelf: All thoſe Delights which we like Bees do but lightly touch in other things, we in a ſuper-eminent manner do find and taſte in God, who alone can fill and ſatisfie the various Deſires of our Minds, and he doth indeed fill them; the enjoyment of him is the fulleſt, and moſt ſatisfactory bleſſedneſs of our Souls, for this Enjoyment of himſelf is alone full, and ſufficient to his own happineſs from all Eternity: It is full, for it fills all the Godhead, the poſſeſſor of it, and yet doth not empty it ſelf; it is ſufficient, for it hath a preſent and conſtant ſupply from him who is all in all, and therefore it muſt be full and moſt ſatisfying to us; I will be his God, (ſays God, Rev. 21. 7.) and he ſhall inherit and poſſeſs all things.

Our Communion is alſo with Chriſt, In whom all fulneſs dwells, Col. 1. 19. Col. 2. 9. who as he is full of Grace and Truth, (John 1. 14.) with Grace he delight our Wills, and with Truth gratifies our Underſtandings.

Then alſo the Union, on which this our Communion is founded, is of all other the cloſeſt, which by the help of Faith in the Underſtanding, and of Love in the Will, joins God and the Soul into one Spirit: For there are two Arms of the Soul wherewith we embrace God, the Underſtanding and Will, and there are alſo two hands in Believers, adjoin'd to thoſe Arms, Faith and Love, by which we lay hold on God, and embrace him.

1. Faith as it always unites us unto Chriſt, ſo ſometimes it is ſtrengthen'd, and elevated by a Light flowing from above, and makes us to rejoice with joy unſpeakable, 1 Pet. 1. 8. Whom having not ſeen, ye love; in whom tho' now ye ſee him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unſpeakable, and full of Glory: David alſo ſpeaks to the ſame purpoſe, Pſal. 4. 6. There be many that ſay, who will ſhew us any good? Lord, lift thou up the Light of thy Coutenance upon us. The greatneſs of this Bleſſedneſs he illuſtrates, v. 7. Thou haſt put gladneſs in my heart, more than in the time that their Corn and their Wine increaſed: To this farther

Part II. farther Light is alſo added from that place in Pſal. 36.9, 10. For with thee is the fountain of Life, in thy light ſhall we ſee light: O continue thy loving kindneſs unto them that know thee, and thy righteouſneſs to the upright in heart! This Heavenly Light with which Faith ſometimes ſhines is not a dry Light, but drops with Honey, and bedews the Soul with the moſt delicious ſweetneſs: What doth Philip pray for? John 14. 8. Philip ſaith unto him, Lord, ſhew us the Father, and it ſufficeth us; it was ſufficient to ſatisfie him, what Chriſt promis'd, v. 21. He that hath my Commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me ſhall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifeſt my ſelf to him: Which he often performs, and ſometimes illuminates the mind with Light, which doth not only ſhew him conſpicuous to be ſeen, but which doth exhibit him preſent to the Soul in the moſt real and intimate preſence, whence ariſeth the moſt real and cloſeſt Union and Communion, and alſo the higheſt and moſt glorious joy: But if we conſider the Union which the Senſes and the Underſtanding produce between themſelves and other things, how ſuperficial and meerly outward is it? and how weak and empty is that intercourſe which they have with thoſe things? Now the joys which ariſe hence are of the ſame kind, they are not ſolid, but only plated or guilded over, for the ſubſtance of the things remain without, and only the Shadowy and vaniſhing Images of them enter in by the Windows of the Senſes, and walk through the Soul, and being deceiv'd with a thin Cloud, we do not embrace the things themſelves. What thin and airy pleaſures therefore doth the trifling Enjoyment of all theſe things afford us? The mind is only lightly touch'd with Air, but doth not feed on true Nouriſhing Joy: Theſe meer Shadows of things leave the Mind (which is form'd to be ſuſtain'd by firmer and more ſolid Food) unquiet and hungring after the things themſelves: But Faith by an admirable Art (which is peculiar to it ſelf, and is unknown to reaſon) gives a reality to all things which it repreſents: Faith is the ὑπόστασις, the ſubſtance of things hoped for, (Heb. 12. 1.) and affords to the things which it believes a real ſubſiſtence and preſence of them before the Mind, and doth not tranſmit its Objects by the Shadows of Species only, which ſupply the place of the things themſelves: And hence likewiſe the greateſt, and higheſt, the moſt real and ſolid, the trueſt and fulleſt, and moſt ſerene joy, is predominant in the ſatisfied mind.

I now come to conſider the Second Bond of this Communion, and the other cauſe of this Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, which is the conjugal Union of the will to God in in the Bonds of Love: For as ſoon as that threefold moſt bleſſed and kind Aſpect of the Trinity, (of which we have ſpoken) hath ſhin'd on the Soul, ſhe kindles with an Heavenly Flame, and a reciprocal Love to God ariſeth in her; for the Love of God manifeſted to her, doth as with a Fan make this Flame of Divine Love to break forth: And hence the Holy Soul doth triumph, and is ſweetly delighted, for that great conjunction of theſe two Loves, both of that which flows from God to us, and that which is in us infuſed, never falls out, but it brings jointly with it an Auguſt and Solemn Jubilee in the Heart.

Hence the Apoſtle Peter hath join'd theſe three moſt intimately together, 1 Pet. 1. 8. Whom having not ſeen, ye love; in whom though now ye ſee him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unſpeakable, and full of Glory.

1. You believing, (ſaith he) love: The Apoſtle John ſpeaks anſwerably, 1 John 4. 16, 19. And we have known and believed the Love God that hath to us, God is Love, and he that dwelleth in Love dwelleth in God, and God in him: We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us: His Meaning is, that whilſt Faith more clearly views all thoſe infinite Perfections, and all thoſe infinite lovely things which are in God alone, the firſt infinite, and the firſt lovely Being, and ſees all theſe things mingled and ſeaſoned with Love, whilſt Faith ſavours and diſcerns all God to be entirely Love, and whilſt the Soul ſees God to be ſuch an Husband who looks for no other Dowry in his Spouſe than only a return of Love for his Love, and whilſt the Soul alſo knows that all thoſe are bleſſed with Love, who thus place their Love, the ingenuous Soul conquer'd and over-power'd with Love, flows into this vaſt Ocean, with a reciprocal Tide of Love, and pours it ſelf wholly into it.

2. You loving, (ſays the Apoſtle) rejoice with joy unſpeakble : It is not eaſie to onceive, much leſs to ſpeak, how much this Intercourſe and ſweet ſtrife of ove doth delight the Soul: For,

1. A Love that is yet ſingle and divided, a Probationary Love, hath I know ot what ſelf-ſufficiency in it, and applauds it ſelf in its own Boſom, is a price nd Reward to it ſelf, and nouriſheth it ſelf; and to love one who yet loves ot again, yields moſt abundant fruits, for Love is the reliſh of all things, and oth ſweeten the moſt bitter Circumſtances of Life: But theſe Conſiderations re very mean, and ſmall, and only little Gleanings, in compariſon to that Har-eſt of joy which ſprings from the mutual Concourſe of two Loves, and a ſten'd Union of Souls. It is ſweet to love and to beloved again, Prov. 27. 9. ntment and Perfume rejoice the heart, ſo doth the ſweetneſs of a man's Friend hearty counſel : To which anſwers that Saying of David, mourning for the death f his Jonathan, 2 Sam. 1. 26. I am diſtreſſed for thee, my Brother Jonathan, very leaſant haſt thou been unto me ; thy love to me was wonderful, paſſing the love of omen.

3. To all this we may moreover add, That the beginning of this Love is om him who loves without beginning, and without end; without meaſures, nd without any preceeding merit, and who receives nothing from any other, ut it is from himſelf only that he hath it, that he loves freely, and Therefore he ves the more vehemently, becauſe he hath not love in him ſo much as himſelf is Love : s Bernard ſweetly ſays, whoſe Love we taſte not only to be ſtronger than eath, (Cant. 8. 6. ſince Chriſt laid down his Soul as a pledge of his Love, ohn 15.) but better than life, as David found it to be, Pſal. 63. 3. As God eſts ſatisfied in the love of himſelf, ſo the Soul reſts ſatisfied in the love of od, and ſo in God himſelf, whom therefore David calls his Reſt, Pſal. 116. 7.

4. Nor is the Joy of a Chriſtian yet in its Height and Splendour, for the oul doth not only perceive that ſhe is lov'd again by her Beloved, but that ſhe s moſt cloſely united with him, and that ſhe enjoys her beloved, which union Chriſt himſelf makes; and as the enjoyment of him is the bleſſed fruit of hat Union, ſo he is the efficient of it too.

1. The Soul is united to Chriſt, for being allur'd by the ſight of the Di-ine Excellencies, and powerfully drawn by his Love, as with a magnetick orce, ſhe goes out of her ſelf, and moſt earneſtly deſires Union with God; his ſhe breaths after with ſo great a vehemence, as ſhe doth not only deſire o be united to Chriſt, but to be melted, to be transform'd into him, as much s his being at preſent her abſent Bridegroom will admit; ſhe repoſeth and yeth cloſe her ſelf in the moſt inward bowels of his Love, for whoever loves od is ſaid to abide, and to dwell in God, 1 John 4. 15, 16.

2. And behold now how good and pleaſant it is, for God and the Soul (as uſband and Wife) to dwell together in unity; and not only to cohabit, ut to rejoice in one another, Iſa. 62. 5. For as a young man marrieth a Virgin, o ſhall thy Sons marry thee ; and as the Bridegroom rejoiceth over the Bride, ſo ſhall hy God rejoice over thee : Cant. 1. 2. Let him kiſs me with the Kiſſes of is Mouth, for thy Love is better than Wine : And behold how Chriſt diſmiſſeth his Spouſe filled with himſelf, and full of joy; for what Vertue nd Efficacy muſt there be in the Kiſſes of his Mouth, whoſe Lips breath ife, (Gen. 2. 7.) Souls, Angels, and all the Heavenly Spirits, are the reath of God; and not only ſo, but he breaths the Holy Ghoſt himſelf, John o. 22. Theſe Kiſſes of his mouth are better known by the Impreſſions which hey make upon us, than they can be by any of our Expreſſions; we may experience the joy, but are not able to ſpeak what it is; we may more eaſily btain its poſſeſſion, than learn perfectly the Nature of it. Nor doth Chriſt only ive the Kiſſes of his Mouth, but the entire poſſeſſion of himſelf, ſo that the oul takes hold on, and poſſeſſeth whole God, wholly as her own, ſo as 'tis ree for her to enjoy all the ſweetneſs of God, (if it were poſſible to an infinity) nd to draw out and taſte all the pleaſures which can be drawn from Chriſt, ven to Eternity.

But this joy which is already ſo full is yet more full, and abundant, and ows to a greater exuberancy, ſo that I may uſe Job's Words, Job 26. 14. How little a portion is heard of him; and Believers do more profuſely and exuberantly rejoice that all theſe Excellencies and Perfections (which afford ſo much joy and delight to them) are in God, than if they were in themſelves; for Love (whoſe off-ſpring is joy, a bright clear Spark, and reſembling its original) with a pure diſintereſſed flame, loves God for himſelf, (as God loves himſelf) and therefore loves all thoſe Perfections, which it ſees to be infinite in God, and flowing from his Eſſence, and with which his Nature being crown'd and adorn'd ſhines with incomparable brightneſs. And beſides, this ſincere affection of the Will doth wiſh and pray, that God may have all the Revenues of his Glory, ariſing from the preſent diſpenſation of things, and offers all theſe to him; and as this Love is thus ingenuous, ſo this joy too is not leſs ingenuous and illuſtrious, for both of them are of the ſame nature and kind, therefore the Believer doth congratulate and rejoice at all that Beauty, Glory, Goodneſs and Sweetneſs, which he believes to abound moſt affluently in God, and he doth more ſweetly rejoice (infinitely more) that God doth poſſeſs all theſe perfections in an infinite manner, and incommunicable (as to their Eſſence) to other things, nay, to Believers themſelves, then he rejoiceth in his own felicity: So that this Joy is a Joy of Friendſhip, as the fore-mentioned Love is alſo a Love of Friendſhip, which our Lord Jeſus, the fountain of Love, taught us, when he reproved his Diſciples ingratefully mourning for his Departure from them, John 14. 28. Ye have heard how I ſaid unto you, I go away, and come again unto you; if ye loved me, ye would rejoyce, becauſe I ſaid I go unto the Father, for my Father is greater than I: Which Glory and Honour of his Perſon his Fore runner John the Baptiſt declar'd, when he liv'd upon Earth, John 1. 29, 30. The Apoſtle Paul boaſts in the Hope of Glory, (Rom. 5. 2.) and the Believer made an Heir with Chriſt may deſervedly do ſo too; for he knows, that joy, (which the Apoſtle ſometime enjoy'd) tho' inexpreſſible, and he takes in ſome little drops deſcending from that River, which waters and makes glad the City of God; and the time will come that he ſhall be more throughly and deeply plunged into the fountain of the Deity, where one flood of joy will continually follow another, without any interruption: We rejoice therefore in hope of the thing, and we rejoice in the thing it ſelf; we rejoice in the Poſſeſſion, and alſo in the Promiſe; in the preſent Exhibition, and in the future Expectation; and as if all this joy were too little, (which indeed is exceeding great) and not noble enough, the Apoſtle ſubjoins, (Rom. 5. 2, 3.) And not only ſo, (he ſpeaks in a Rhetorical Figure called Climax) but we alſo glory in tribulations, &c. 'till at laſt we come to glory in God himſelf, or in his love ſhed abroad in our Hearts, v. 5. The Apoſtle fixeth here the higheſt top of all, (than which there is nothing more ſublime or more divine) that we do not only rejoice in thoſe perfections of God, with which he is bleſſed, but that the joy too, is in ſome manner the ſame; to which alſo that Speech of Chriſt hath a reſerence, John 15. 11. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full; he doth not only ſay, that my joy may be concerning you, but that it may be and abide in you, viz. that very ſame joy with which Chriſt doth rejoice; and therefore we are ſaid To enter at laſt into the joy of our Lord; not into that joy only with which Saints and Angels do rejoice, but with which God himſelf rejoiceth: This is a wonderful faſtening of Love, which is the cauſe that as one mind is in the Perſons loving, ſo likewiſe one joy, not mutually only, but individually, and joining into one flame, and this is the ἀκμὴ, the compleat ſtrength, and fulleſt encreaſe of joy; it is (as I may ſo ſpeak) the plenilunium, the full moon of it, than which nothing is fuller; for ſince the joy of Chriſt, the Fountain of Light, remains in us, that joy which we borrow from him muſt be alſo full. I will ſpeak in a word what is the Sum of all, and what is the higheſt top of this joy, the joy of a Believer is in God, and on the acconnt of God, their joy is God himſelf, and the joy of God himſelf, who himſelf is the God of Peace, and of Joy, and of all Conſolation. What ſays God of all the Pleaſures and Imaginary Joys of the Wicked? Iſa. 57. 21. There is no peace, ſaith my God, to the wicked. But on the contrary, Believers, tho' ſometimes they ſeem ſorrowful, yet they are always rejoycing, 2 Cor. 6. 10. As ſorrowful, yet alway rejoycing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, yet poſſeſſing all things:

Tho' the Expreſſion is as ſorrowful, yet of their joy it is not ſaid as rejoycing, but always rejoycing. The happineſs of the World may have an as if put to it all, and as the World, ſo all it's felicity paſſeth away, (though an as if cannot be ſaid of the puniſhment of the ungodly, which is real, and endures for ever) but the joy of the Godly is not with an as if, but is ſolid and permanent; the very Tears of praying Believers are ſweeter than the Songs and Applauſes of Theatres: You may believe the Apoſtle, who ſays, (Gal. 5. 22.) that true joy is The fruit of the Holy Ghoſt, and that it grows not on any other ſtock, whereas the joys of the Wicked are the meer Rinds and Shells of the Fruits of Paradiſe; and as Tantalus his Apples deceive any one who endeavours to taſte them, and vaniſh into Vapour and Air, they are nothing but the Spectrums and Apparitions of Pleaſures and Joys, they are like Jonah's Gourd, which wither in a moment; they are like the crackling of thorns under a pot, which is ſoon at an end, Ecclеſ. 7. 6. It makes a loud noiſe, a great blaze, but as it ariſeth, and encreaſeth on a ſudden, ſo the Subſtance of it is thin and vanid, it is a ſhort-liv'd flame, and leaves nothing remaining; they are deceitful joys, which allure, but do not ſatisfie us, which under a ſhew of Kindneſs hurt us, which emaſculate our minds, and which in all reſpects have a greater mixture of troubles and miſery than delight, Prov. 14. 13. but on the contrary, the joys of a Believer are pure, without any mixture of a baſer allay, they are the drops and dews of Heaven, and clear ſtreams flowing from God the Fountain of all Pleaſures; they are joys clear'd from all filth and dreggs, Iſa. 25. 6. And in this mountain ſhall the Lord of Hoſts make unto all people a feaſt of fat things, a feaſt of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined: They are joys connatural to the mind, which both heal it, and reſtore it to its right genuine taſte of things; they are joys which when once the Soul hath drunk and taken in, it will never thirſt more to Eternity, (John 4. 14.) for it will be abundantly ſatiated with them, Jer. 31. 14. And I will ſatiate the ſoul of the Prieſts with fatneſs, and my people ſhall be ſatisfied with my Goodneſs, ſaith the Lord. They are joys which encreaſe with their own growth, and in their agitation ferment to a greater quantity; they are joys which never fail, being full and ſufficient to themſelves, they are the Breaſts of Conſolation, Iſa. 66. 11. they are ſuch joys which diſarm all evils, and pulls the ſting out of all ſorrows, and ſweetens the moſt bitter Calamities, even death it ſelf, the very remembrance of which how bitter is it to us: They are joys which infuſe into us a true and invincible ſtrength of Mind, Neh. 8. 10. ſo that we glory and triumph in the midſt of Afflictions, Rom. 5. and tho' Storms and Thunder-bolts may fall upon us, yet they are like Hail falling on the Houſe-top and ſhatter'd to pieces, and do not break us, but are themſelves broken. The Heavens and Earth may fall into ruines, as Chriſt hath told us, that they ſhall ſo paſs away, when not an Iota, not a Tittle of this word and of this joy ſhall be diminiſh'd. And when the Believer ſhall ſee this World declining to the extreameſt age, and long ſince condemn'd to the puniſhment of an old Witch, (2 Pet 3. 7. The Heavens and Earth which now are, are reſerv'd unto Fire) at laſt all in flames, he will not only be in ſafety, but will ſtand erect and joyful upon the Aſhes and Ruines of the World; and not having the leaſt part of his Happineſs leſſen'd by this univerſal Deſolation, he will cry with a great and chearful voice, I have loſt nothing.

CHAP. IX.

Directions unto the Faith of ſuch as want Aſſurance, how to take in and make uſe of God's Eternal, Electing Love, in Believing with Comfort.

THE applying Acts of Faith (as I have ſhew'd) are two, the one of Aſſurance, the other of Recumbency, for in both I apply Juſtification and Chriſt to my ſelf; only the one is an Application axiomatical, that he is mine, the other real. Now to direct a Soul that hath triumphing Aſſurance added to his Faith, and a right perſwaſion of his juſtification, over ballancing all Doubts to the contrary, there is no great difficulty, for his thoughts may in the particular application of all theſe to himſelf follow God's ways in juſtifying him in particular ſtep by ſtep, without any Error, (as Paul here doth) and take God's proceedings directly as they lye, to mould his thoughts of application thereby; his thoughts may climbe up to Eternity, and from thence with comfort view himſelf written in God's Heart, and in the Book of Life, and then given unto, and made one with Chriſt, and in him diſcharged from all his Sins, juſtified by an Eternal and Unchangeable Covenant made by Chriſt undertaking for him, and he may drink in all theſe with comfort, and utter this with triumph, Who ſhall condemn? God hath juſtified; and then he may come down from thence, and ſee Chriſt's day, as Abraham did, and rejoice with Abraham, knowing as aſſuredly that Chriſt did repreſent his Perſon, as that he took our Nature: He may behold the Lamb of God (as the Baptiſt ſays) carrying and bearing his ſins all the while he was on the Earth, and on his Body upon the Tree, and he may ſee himſelf then repreſentatively in Chriſt fulfilling the Law, undergoing the Curſe, dying on the Croſs, as truly as we all believe that we ſinned in Adam, and were in the Garden with him: And he may ſay to the comforting of his own Soul, I was juſtified in Chriſt when he aroſe, and diſcharged of all my ſins, as truly as Chriſt was dead and is alive; and as Chriſt dyed unto ſin once, and dyeth now no more, ſo likewiſe he may reckon himſelf (as the Apoſtle ſays:) To live unto God for ever; he may look back upon himſelf when enwrapt in his Blood, and in the purſuit of his bold and bloody tranſgreſſions in his former Eſtate, that though his Eſtate was then accurſed, yet that his Perſon in Chriſt conſidered, was really beloved of God; and though he was not under the Communication and Diſpenſation of Love and Mercy, (God being debarr'd by his Rule from ſhewing it) yet he was under the affection of Love and Good Will: But now the partition wall being beaten down, and that which did let being removed, and his Eſtate by Faith altered, he finds God's favour flowing in amain upon him, and when he looks into the written revealed Word, he may write his own Name into every particular Promiſe, and read in them all the Sentence of his own juſtification pronounced.

But all the difficulty lyes in directing the other ſort of Believers, or beginners to believe, how they ſhould take in, or make uſe of a right application of Chriſt's dying for us, and of God's thus juſtifying us, as hath been ſpoken: The Difficulty lyes in this, that they muſt have recourſe to Chriſt's dying, (becauſe from thence their Faith muſt fetch Juſtification for themſelves) who yet in dying (they believe) aimed but at ſome particular perſons, who were then alſo juſtified by God, as alſo from all Eternity, and they alone. Now ſo to have recourſe to this Death of Chriſt, as with Aſſurance to apply it, and ſo as to apprehend that their Names then were in that Bill, this is it they want, and ſuch an act of Application they cannot put forth; and what other act of Application is there to be put forth towards Chriſt dying, or God juſtifying, to caſt themſelves upon Chriſt and God? to what end ſhould they do it? What! to truſt to Chriſt to dye for their Sins! that is done already: What occaſion then is there, or what ſuitable Object is there for ſuch an act towards Chriſt as dying, or God as juſtifying, for both is done already, or not at all, and therefore to what end ſhould they caſt themſelves on either? To oil this difficulty there have been many ways thought of by ſome of e.

Some make the Sole and Proper Act of Juſtifying Faith to be an Evi- nce and over-powering Perſwaſion of our Eternal Juſtification, and of hriſt's having born all our ſins as one with us, and that this Perſwa- on is wrought by an immediate revelation of the Spirit; and therefore ſeem exclude all acts of bare recumbency, and caſting a Man's ſelf on Chriſt from e Canon of Faith, as unuſeful; yea, condemn the Exerciſe of ſuch acts, teach- g Men ſo to wait for ſuch a Revelation, as till then not to entertain a thought at they have Faith: Which is an Errour againſt the Generation of many elievers, againſt Scripture and Experience.

Secondly, Others aſſert, That Men are not to look at all to God's ways of ju- ification from Eternity, but only to the indefinite Promiſe, when they exerciſe n act of taking Chriſt, and caſting themſelves on him; even as when a Sin- er is yet to be humbled for ſin, the promiſe is not to be conſidered by him, ll he be humbled by the Law; and ſo they judge men are not to trouble hemſelves with the thoughts of the other, ſuppoſing them to be an hinderance nd a diſcouragement; but when Men after believing have alſo Aſſurance gi- en them, that they have now obtained that Juſtification which the promiſe olds forth, then indeed the conſideration of God's antient juſtification from ternity, and of Chriſt's dying for particular men, will come comfortably and eaſonably in; and only then, and until then they are not to look to it at all: o as the indefinite promiſes are given to Recumbents, and the Revelation of e other is for them that have Aſſurance only.

Thirdly, Others ſay, That though there be but a ſpecial Intention for ſome, et it is ſo as to make all ſalvable, if they would believe; which Errour makes Suppoſal of another juſtification promiſed than what is the fruit of an Eter- al Love, and ſatisfies not Souls, which will reſt in nothing but Eternal Love, nd Effectual Intention of God and Chriſt, and prize it more than his Death.

A Fourth Opinion aſſerts, That ſeeing there is wrought a condition of Humi- ation, particular to God's Elect, they ſeeing it to be wrought under it, caſt hemſelves upon a promiſe, which intimates ſomething in us as the ground f Faith, and of all the former this is the moſt falſe. That which I ſhall ſay, will oth confute theſe, and open a

Queſt. 1. The firſt is more general, viz. What ſhould be the Occaſion and Object f the Aim of a Believers Faith, in an act of Recumbency? The Anſwer is made y theſe ſeveral Propoſitions.

Anſw. 1. Let him conſider, that howſoever thoſe who ſhall be ſaved were uſtified from Eternity in God's ſecret will, (and therefore it were in vain to ave that in their Eye, ſo as to caſt themſelves upon God for the beginning f ſuch a juſtification, as if it were now to be begun, which is already paſt) et there is a true and real act of juſtification, which is begun to be performed hen a Man firſt believes, and which is an act to be paſſed according to the ules of God's revealed Will, and which in relation to God's proceedings hereby is an act now begun to be performed, when a man ſhall believe, nd not before. This is the juſtification which the Promiſes of the Go- pel holds forth, as an act for time to come, that God is yet to do; and the performance hereof may be the object and aim of ſuch an act of Faith; hus (Gal. 2. 16.) the Apoſtles at firſt believed, that they might be juſtified; and ſo (Rom. 9. 30.) the believing Gentiles are ſaid To have attained to Righteouſneſs, aving ſought it by Faith; ſo as juſtification may be, and is to be look'd upon, nd entertained not only by Aſſurance that it is already paſt, but alſo, and that irſt, by ſeeking and believing for the attaining of it for time to come, and y having it in our Eye as a thing to be actually given and beſtowed: So as hey are in a great miſtake, who would have Faith to be a particular Evidence, and Apprehenſion of God's having already juſtified us, both from Eternity, and in Chriſt's bearing our ſins: And the foundation of their Errour lies n this, that they imagine that there are no other acts of God's juſtifying us, but thoſe two, and that before God we were as actually juſtified afore Faith as after. And alſo their Errour lies, in imagining that all the uſe and end of Faith is but to clear up this to us, and to cauſe us to apprehend it; whereas there is a true real new act of juſtification begun upon a ſinner, which doth not only alter the apprehenſion of his Eſtate, but alſo his Eſtate it ſelf, from a ſtate of Sin and Wrath, to a ſtate of Righteouſneſs and Favour, and this according to the Rules of God's revealed Will; ſo as Faith ſerves not only to give Men the Knowledge of their Eternal Juſtification, but actually to poſſeſs them of that in themſelves perſonally which they had before only repreſentatively in another, and this by a further act of God upon the Sinner; which act being to be performed, ſince it is for the future promiſed, a ſinner that either begins to believe, or that cannot put forth an act of Aſſurance, may and ought to exerciſe an act of caſting himſelf upon Chriſt to be juſtified, and thereby ſeek to attain the Righteouſneſs that is of Faith. And to this end,

2. Becauſe all acts of God's juſtifying us depend upon Union with Chriſt, (we having him, and being in him firſt, and then thereby having right to his Righteouſneſs) therefore as the aim of a Soul caſting it ſelf on Chriſt is to have juſtification from him, ſo to have Union with him alſo; and thus it may and ought to caſt it ſelf upon God and Chriſt, to be made one with him. And there is the like reaſon and occaſion for ſuch an act as for the former, it being a priviledge now to be anew obtained as well as the other. For though we were one in Chriſt before God in repreſentation from all Eternity, and when he was upon the Croſs, and by a Covenant ſecretly made between God and him, yet there is an actual implanting and engrafting us into Chriſt, upon believing to be obtained, and not till then, which the Apoſtle calls Baptizing, and planting into Chriſt, and being in Chriſt, Rom. 6. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 3. 27. until which time even thoſe who were elect afore are ſaid to be without Chriſt in the World, Eph. 2. 12. So as he may and ought at firſt to look at Chriſt as yet to be obtained, and ſo to ſeek after that union with him which is yet to be wrought, upon which this juſtification yet to be attained depends; ſo Paul (Phil. 3. 8.) ſays, We accounted all loſs, that we might win Chriſt, and obtain an Intereſt and a Share in him; ſo as if there be both an union with Chriſt, and a juſtification depending thereupon yet to be obtained, there is a juſt ground and occaſion given for the caſting a Man's ſelf upon Chriſt to obtain this; yea, and this very caſting a Man's ſelf upon Chriſt out of Spiritual apprehenſions and affections, is the very act which both makes this Union, and eſtates us into juſtification; and therefore the ſeeing of Chriſt, and coming to him, are made the acts of juſtifying Faith, John 6. 35, & 40. And further, to this End,

3. Though thoſe acts of juſtifying us from Eternity in his ſecret Will, were diſtinctly fixt, and ſet upon ſuch and ſuch particular Perſons by Name, and not left at random, (as that thus he would juſtifie ſome) yet God in his revealed Will (out of which our Faith is to expect that our juſtification now in time is to be applied, and according to which God proceeds to the laſt act of juſtification) hath folded and ſummed up thoſe fore-paſſed Ways and Paſſages of juſtifying ſuch and ſuch particular diſtinct Perſons there named, in his ſecret Will, and hath gathered and expreſſed them in indefinite promiſes of juſtification to ſome Sinners indefinitely, and Believers generally; which Promiſes are the Abſtract, Contents and Argument (as I may ſo call them) of the Book of Life, and of his ſecret and diſtinct purpoſe concerning ſome particular Perſons; and thus he hath done, both to fit the Faith of poor Souls with Objects proportional, and ſuitable to ſuch an act of Recumbency, as alſo that he might have theſe to come between their Faith and his Decrees, and that they might take in thoſe his Eternal Tranſactions firſt, as repreſented through the indefiniteneſs of theſe Promiſes, and ſo caſt themſelves upon ſuch Promiſes for that their particular juſtification, which is promiſed now to be performed: Therefore one that would believe, is bound firſt to have in his eye that laſt way of juſtification that is to be performed the laſt of the three, according as it is held forth and promiſed in the revealed Will of God, and from

nce to aſcend up to the other: His Faith is not to climbe up to the top the Ladder at the firſt, he is not to make it his firſt Buſineſs to be aſſur'd ether he in particular were intended, e're ever he will exerciſe any act Recumbency, or look after any Promiſe, or ſeek out for the juſtification t is to come: This proves a real hindrance to many, for it is to enquire in- God's ſecret Will to me, as the ſole Ground of my Faith; whereas I am learn it out of his revealed Will; and I am to begin at the laſt ſtep, and m thence to aſcend to the other; and in relation to that third act of ju- fication (which the indefinite Promiſes hold forth, and preſents the Perſon th, and which a Believer ſees is yet to be performed) it is that a Believer doth rciſe an act of Recumbency, and comes to Chriſt, and truſts in Chriſt to juſtified de futuro, for the future; and the Promiſes of that juſtification which upon Faith to be performed upon the Sinner being thus indefinite, they do tably require, and are fitted to draw forth an act of Recumbency, to caſt ſelf upon God and Chriſt for juſtification, ſeeing thoſe his Promiſes run efinitely, that he will ſave ſome Sinners, and juſtifie all Believers: And ac- dingly as the promiſes thus framed out of thoſe his particular tranſactions indefinite, ſo the firſt acts of Faith which he requires are but ſuch acts are ſuitable to their indefiniteneſs; namely, to caſt a Man's ſelf upon them, t Chriſt and Juſtification may be his: Not at firſt to believe they are his, that Chriſt hath done this for him, thus David did, Pſal. 130. and thus Apoſtle would draw in the Hebrews to ſuch an act of Faith, and endea- urs by Faith to enter into his Reſt, (Heb. 4. 11.) upon this ground, be- ſe the Promiſe is, that ſome muſt enter in. And again, as he hath fitted Promiſes of that juſtification which is upon believing to be performed, to h an act of Faith, ſo alſo he hath repreſented and offered Chriſt alſo, who to be made one with us for our juſtification, as a Saviour for ſinners inde- itely, as one that came into the World to ſave Sinners indefinitely, that bear the ſins of the World indefinitely for all ſorts of Sinners, that ſo this preſentation of his Son might draw on the Heart of a poor Believer to take n, and come to him, and caſt himſelf upon him, that he might be his, and with him, by that Union which is yet to be accompliſhed upon be- ving. Now the indefiniteneſs of the Promiſe which fits it thus for Faith, d in which the ſecret tranſactions of God are included, conſiſts but in three ings, which make them to differ from the other, i. e. there are three things the Promiſe which make it indefinite.

1. There is the concealing of the Perſons, that whereas in God's Decree and anſaction with Chriſt the Perſons are named, here in the Promiſe they are ncealed: And it is ſaid indefinitely to be for ſome, to that end that none might he is excluded, and that is one thing makes the Promiſes indefinite.

2. Whereas Men might notwithſtanding think, that yet thoſe ſome might limited but to ſome certain Conditions of Men, or but to ſome kind of nners, as not to great Sinners, &c. And ſo Men might think, that for their ndition and Sins they might be excluded; therefore Secondly, the indefi- teneſs of the Promiſe lies in this, that it ſpeaks indefinitely of all kind of nners and Conditions, be the caſe what it will, and the ſin what it will, for to me in thoſe Conditions, and guilty of thoſe ſins, the promiſe is made.

3. The indefiniteneſs of the Promiſe lies in this, that it names a qualifica- on of Faith, and ſo makes it general, that whoſoever believeth ſhall be ſav'd, as a ſinner may further ſee, that there is but a want of a true act of Faith tween him and juſtification.

And theſe indefinite Promiſes do yet truly agree with thoſe particular In- ntions of God, and not croſs them at all: For, Firſt, Although God's juſti- ing from Eternity was fixt only on particular Perſons, whom he look'd on in hriſt, and alſo that Chriſt in his Death repreſented only their Perſons, and d bear their particular ſins, yet the promiſe of that juſtification to come which is the fruit of thoſe Tranſactions) might thus indefinitely be pro- ounded; and ſay it may, that Salvation is for ſome, and name none; and God ight ſo expreſs his purpoſe, as might put all men that hear it in expecta- on and dependance, concealing the particulars; for there is an indefinite truth,

Part II. mercy (ſays God) I will not take from him. And ſuch a Covenant promiſed to be made to everlaſting, cannot but be pre-ſuppoſed as the proper fruit of that juſtification which hath been from everlaſting, and is no other, and therefore may be lookt at as the ground of it. If indeed there were any other juſtification in any of the Promiſes beſides that, which is the proper effect of that as the cauſe, then all thoſe former Intentions of God to Sinners might be laid aſide, and needed not to be conſidered; but there is not any ſuch: For the bleſſings held forth in the promiſe are but the former bleſſings beſtowed upon particular perſons in Chriſt, folded up and made up in an indefinite promiſe, and therefore the one doth mutually argue the other; for if a Soul can challenge an intereſt in the juſtification promiſed, he may comfort himſelf with his Intereſt in the former, and that he was one with Chriſt, dying and riſing. And again, When it is ſaid that Chriſt dyed, it muſt be thought he had either an unreſolved aim, or a reſolved: An unreſolved aim would be unbecoming of him; and if it was reſolv'd, then he dyed deſigning the particular perſons for whom his Death was meant. And again, All the Knowledge hereof a Recumbent in the way of his Faith may make uſe of, as well as one that hath aſſurance; it is but turning the Key another way, as the ſame arguments are uſed in Logick and Rhetorique; ſo Eph. 1. 9, 10. that which brought in the Epheſians to truſt in Chriſt, (v. 12.) was the opening of the Myſtery of God's Will and Purpoſe together in his Elect in Chriſt, according to the good pleaſure which he purpoſed in himſelf.

But ſtill all this doth but in general ſhew, that theſe fore-paſſed ways of Election, and Chriſt's Death may be taken in. A third Queſtion therefore will be, How, and in what manner, and what order, and to what end and purpoſe the recumbent Believer is to take into his thoughts theſe fore-paſſed paſſages, ſo as to make it a help to ſuch an act? (when as yet his Faith can perform no other) How he is to draw them in, and make them ingredients, and how they are to have an influence into his Faith, to be helpful to him? For this, I ſay, take theſe Directions out of the former Grounds laid. But before I give them I muſt premiſe a Caution, which alſo makes way for a right underſtanding of what follows.

The Caution is, That the Believer is not to take into his thoughts theſe fore-paſſed fixed acts of juſtification, to that end as to make it his only and firſt Work and Buſineſs, to enquire whether he was thus juſtified or no; ſo as until he is reſolved thereof, he will ſit ſtill, and exerciſe no act of Faith at all, nor look after any promiſe; for it doth prove a real hinderance to many, when that is the fruit of this their Knowledge. Though indeed we are not to reſt, or quiet our ſelves in any acts of Faith, till ſuch an aſſurance is obtained, but to wait for it in all, yet we are not to do it ſo as to caſt off the exerciſe of this other act of Faith, and ſeeking juſtification to come, till we have particular evidence of that which is paſt. This is a wrong uſe made of God's ways, ſo to enquire after his ſecret Will, concerning our particular, as to neglect his revealed; whereas we are ſo to look to what is paſt, as to quicken us unto, and not to keep us from, ſeeking that juſtification to come. So as we ſay, that the Knowledge of this fixed and eternal juſtification is then a help to an act of Recumbency, when the believing indefinitely and in general, that thus God did towards ſome, doth quicken our Faith of Recumbency: Which that it may do, take theſe Directions,

1. The Believer may take in the conſideration of theſe ways of God's juſtifying, and Chriſt's dying for certain Men, who were one with him: This in the general he may do, to the end to pitch and point the Aim and Scope of his Faith aright, ſo as to aim at his caſting himſelf upon God in Chriſt, for ſuch a juſtification as only is the proper effect of the former, ſo as diſtinctly he may make it the Deſire and Aim of his Faith, that he may obtain ſuch a juſtification as doth only proceed from an Eternal Love, and as is the ſole Fruit of a former Eternal Juſtification, and of Chriſt's particularly dying for his firſt. And the Reaſon why in this way he may take it in, is, becauſe though he looks upon that of God's Love which is paſſed, as not now anew to be obtained, yet as to that part of it which is to come, and to be manifeſted now in the actual beſtowing of all the Bleſſings of it, is, he may caſt himſelf upon God now to obtain it, (it being yet to come) and to have it performed to him in the ſtrength and virtue of the former; apprehending and knowing, that no other but ſuch a juſtification is meant in the promiſe by God, nor can be obtained by any: But ſo, that ſtill the aim of his Faith and Prayers may be, to be juſtified with the juſtification of God's Choſen, and to be juſtified out of that Love with which he juſtifies thoſe whoſe ſins Chriſt bore upon the Tree. Thus David often in many particular Bleſſings frames his Prayers, which are but the aims and meaning of Faith, expreſſed and folded up into Deſires, Pſal. 106. 4. Remember me with that Favour thou beareſt to thy People, and Oh viſit me with thy ſalvation! that is, that Salvation which proceeds from ſuch a ſpecial Favour, Pſal. 119. 132. Look upon me, and be merciful to me, as thou uſeſt to do to thoſe that love thy Name: Thus he dealt alſo in matter of juſtification when he came to dye, and to expreſs his Faith at laſt; This is all my deſire, (ſays he) and all the ſalvation I look for: What kind of Salvation was in his deſire and expectation? that which proceeded from the ſure Covenant, ordered and ſure. And thus God's Spirit doth point the aim of the pooreſt Believer's Faith, ſo that the meaning of his Faith (if he could expreſs it) is, that he might be juſtified with the juſtification of God's Choſen, with that juſtification which is the ſole fruit of Chriſt's having born his Sins in particular.

2. He may conſider what is already done by God and Chriſt towards the juſtification of ſome Sinners thus indefinitely, as the cauſe of that juſtification which is promiſed. He may conſider this, to that end to quicken him to ſeek ſuch a juſtification (as that muſt needs be) which is the fruit and effect of ſuch Tranſactions and Intentions in God juſtifying, and Chriſt dying thus for particular Men and Sins; and he will thereby both ſtrengthen and quicken the act of his Faith, of caſting himſelf upon God for the obtaining of it: For as one that hath aſſurance by his Faith receives and turns all ſuch Conſiderations into Comforts, believing they are true concerning him, ſo the other that wants aſſurance, may turn them all into Motives to quicken, and to ſtrengthen his Heart the more eagerly to ſeek it, and caſt himſelf with the ſtronger and faſter act of dependency and cleaving to God, to obtain it; there is all the difference, and theſe Conſiderations will further the one as well as the other. And the Conſideration thereof may ſerve and be turned into a double Motive, to quicken and ſet an edge upon their Faith.

Firſt, By conſidering theſe proceedings of God, in juſtifying thus from everlaſting, &c. to be the cauſe of the Juſtification which is in the Promiſe, (and which he is ſeeking) his Heart will be the more inflamed to ſeek ſuch a juſtification as that muſt needs be, which is the effect and ſtream of ſuch ſpecial Love both in God and Chriſt: And the more ſpiritual inſight into, and conviction of thoſe Proceedings a Soul hath, the more he will come to ſee the Freeneſs, the Fulneſs, the Abſoluteneſs, the Unchangeableneſs, the Greatneſs of that Juſtification which he is putting in for, and ſo his Heart will be fired with it. For when a Man ſhall hear, and conſider, that God hath out of an infinite, unchangeable Love, been a juſtifying ſome Men from Eternity, and hath done it ſo reſolvedly, as tho' knowing and making account what their Sins would be before, yet he reſolved they ſhould be no bar, nor no hinderance, and that no eſtate, no condition ſhould alter or interrupt his purpoſe towards ſuch: And when he ſhall alſo conſider that further, God hath took ſuch ſpecial Order concerning them, that he hath given them to his Son, and reckoned to him their ſins, and looked at them as one in him; and withall conſiders, that the juſtification which is offer'd in the Promiſe, is ſuch as is the fruit, and proceeds from theſe; why, thinks he, this is ſuch a juſtification as if I obtain, it will fully anſwer all my Fears, and Wants, and Doubts, and Scruples; and it is ſuch as none can be like to it, ſuch as my Heart may ſecurely reſt in; ſuch, as if a poor Sinner would himſelf have drawn his own Pardon, he could not have drawn it more fully, nor can deſire a better. And by theſe conſiderations will his Heart be taken with a longing after ſuch a juſtification as this, Oh Lord, (will the Soul ſay) juſtifie me with the juſtication of thy Choſen Ones! And Oh that it may be, that I might be the Subject of it! and it may prove ſo, thinks he; and if I were to chooſe, I had rather be one of a thou-

Part II. ſand of thoſe who are in poſſibility of being juſtified out of ſuch a Love, than any other: And why? becauſe this is ſuch as if I obtain it, and it prove mine, a Sea of Eternal Love will come with it, and fill my Heart, and I ſhall be out of the Gun-ſhot of all caſes that can fall out, it being ſuch a juſtification as ſhall have all the unchangeable Love of the great God, and the Efficacy of Chriſt's Death to feed it, and maintain it and us in the ſtate of it. And thus he may conſider all thoſe paſſages, to enflame his Heart toward this Love, and to draw it in, and this e're he can ſay it is his. The Souls of Believers are uſually taken with this way and proceedings of God and Chriſt in juſtifying, and it ſo likes them, and takes hold of their Hearts, that they can never let go ſeeking of it. Thus God propounds the conſideration of the unchangeableneſs, and of the everlaſtingneſs of the Covenant, to allure the Hearts of Believers, Iſa. 55. for the conſideration hereof doth quicken the Heart to come in; ſays God, ver. 3. Encline your Ear, and come to me, and I will make an everlaſting Covenant with you, even the ſure mercies of David; that is, I will juſtifie you out of the ſame Love I juſtified David with; yea, the Mercies of Chriſt, who is that Spiritual David, ſhall be yours.

Secondly, By the conſideration thereof he may ſtrengthen his Faith in the Perſwaſion of the Certainty, that ſuch a juſtification ſhall be ſettled, and eſtated aſſuredly upon ſome, and that therefore it is to be obtained; which if believed, will exceedingly help a Man's Faith, to caſt himſelf with the more boldneſs and confidence on Chriſt to obtain it. When Men look upon God as one that contents himſelf with this, that he hath done his part to ſave them, and that however it falls out, yet he contents himſelf, for he ſhall have Glory out of them, this will and doth work a careleſneſs in Men; but when Men ſhall be poſſeſſed with this thought, that God is reſolved upon it, to ſave ſome, and that Chriſt hath took ſure order for them, and that therefore there is a certainty in the thing, ſo as it is to be had and worn by ſome, and that God is moſt ſerious in it, for he hath been a juſtifying from Eternity, and Chriſt hath dyed for particular Sinners; when this perſwaſion of the certainty of the thing it ſelf is fixed upon Mens Hearts, ſo that together with the greatneſs of it, they are alſo perſwaded that ſuch a thing there is reſolved on in God's Breaſt to beſtow, it will draw Mens Hearts into a dependance upon God for it. When Men believe that Chriſt ſhall undoubtedly juſtifie many, becauſe he hath born their ſins, (Iſa. 53.) and that there is a reſt, into which ſome muſt enter in, (Heb. 4. 6.) this will quicken them to labour to obtain it, as knowing it is to be had: For to that end thoſe Conſiderations are there brought in; and the chief hinderance of Faith lyes in not believing the thing, and the certainty of God's purpoſe in it, that there is Mercy with him, and plenteous Redemption. The aſſurance of this, tho' but towards an Iſrael, yet the certainty that Iſrael ſhould be redeemed, cauſed him to wait, Pſal. 130. If Men have no Heart to the thing, tho' God meant to ſave never ſo many, they would never be ſaved; and if they have, they ſhall be ſaved, though never ſo few are intended. Now there is nothing more effectual to perſwade the Heart of the certainty of the thing, than the Conſideration of God's Eternal Juſtification, and Chriſt's ſpecial Intention.

Thirdly, In the third Place, Theſe Eternal Ways of Juſtification may be conſidered, as the cauſe of that juſtification in the Promiſe, to that end, to quiet and ſettle moſt of all thoſe Carnal Objections, Fears, and Scruples in Mens Hearts, which are moſt dangerous, and the greateſt hinderances of Faith. And indeed the conſideration of it will ſerve to quell all of them, but only one, which of all the reſt is leaſt dangerous: For when a Man ſhall conſider, that the juſtification which only is to be obtained is ſuch, as is the fruit of an Eternal, Unchangeable Love, &c. all the Objections taken from the greatneſs of his ſins will be ſcattered, for God's Eternal Thoughts in pardoning are beyond all Imaginations; and that Love alſo regarded neither Sins nor Goodneſs, but pitch'd upon perſons freely; and that when he knew what their Sins would be when he choſe them, and alſo all fears of being rejected for often back-ſlidings will vaniſh, becauſe the juſtification to be obtained is to be the fruit of a Love that is unchangeable; and all his fears likewiſe of provoking God

o caſt him off, and of falling away, and that he may one day fall by the hand of Saul, will diſſolve, when he conſiders the bleſſings of Eternal Love to e the ſure Mercies of David, out of which God juſtifies: And though he ears and reads, that after ſuch a ſin God took advantage of Saul, Eſau, &c. nd ſwore in his Wrath againſt thoſe in the Wilderneſs, yet the juſtification e is ſeeking of, and hath in his Eye, is ſuch, as if obtained, he may be aſſured of it, never failing; as flowing out of an antient peculiar Love, and therefore proceeds not in ſhewing mercy by Rules, or Examples of dealing of others, nd which knows no bounds nor bottom, but God excepts, and ſays, though make a full end of them, yet not of thee; and he ſays alſo, I will have mercy ecauſe I will, and where I will, though I harden others. Now the Believer nowing the Juſtification (which he now ſeeks) by reaſon of theſe former ranſactions to be thus full, it quiets all ſuch Fears, and reſolves all into one, whether he ſhall obtain it no? That is all his Care, his Heart is eaſed of all other, nd this is a good care, unleſs in caſe of utter deſpair, for this quickens him the more o ſeek at Gods Hands to reveal himſelf to him, and it keeps him in dependance; and when once his Spirit is truly won, and taken with the way of Salvation, he will never let go his dependance, but like a burr, the more he is hook off, the more he will cleave on. Yea, and againſt that one Scruple, whether it be for him? he hath in ſuch a way of Dependance many things o uphold him, that his Soul can quietly wait, and by reaſon of a hint given, doth ſecretly more encline in his conſtant thoughts towards hopes than otherwiſe. Now take all other ways of juſtification, which are not conceived to be backt thus with an Eternal Juſtification, and an Eternal Love, but wherein God proceeds as he ſees cauſe, and let a Man be ſuppoſed in his own apprehenſion to be eſtated into it, and that Cloud cleared, yet if he knows his own heart, he muſt needs be filled with ſad, and dark, and dangerous fears: Sometimes the greatneſs of his ſins paſt muſt needs amaze him, and his often back-ſlidings and falls after enlightning, if none of theſe damp his hopes, or if none of theſe diſquiet him, yet having no ſecurity of his own Heart, he fears for time to come, and the Doubts which ariſe about the thing it ſelf, and the way of Salvation he depends upon, will be greater, and of worſe conſequence, and make his Heart ſet more looſe towards God than when on the contrary his Heart is reſolved, that the Juſtification it ſelf which he depends on doth anſwer all Fears and Scruples about his whole Eſtate and Condition, and all the Query is only about his Perſon, and this is a doubt which when all others are reſolved into it, God can eaſily anſwer when he will; and if at any time the Spirit be ready to fail, he breaks in, and reſolves it; it is a doubt which the Security his Heart hath from the way it ſelf, about all other things that can be objected, doth countervail.

Queſt. 4. As there yet remains in his Heart that one Scruple unreſolved, Whether his Perſon ſhall obtain that juſtification to come? he knowing that it depends upon what is paſt already, the Queſtion is, What acts of Faith, and of the application of Faith, he ſhould put forth towards both the juſtification that is to come, and likewiſe towards that which is paſt, for his own particular?

Anſw. 1. 'Tis true, there are two acts of Faith which he cannot put forth: 1. He cannot exert an act of Application with Aſſurance, he cannot put that forth towards either; and indeed if he could do it towards either, he might towards both. If then the ſole application of Faith that juſtifies lay in aſſurance, he would have no Faith, and therefore it is well for him that it doth not. 2. To caſt himſelf to obtain juſtification paſt, is a contradiction, and abſurdity, therefore that is not the act of application in his Faith neither, tho' it may well be exerciſed towards what is to come.

Anſw. 2. This I muſt ſuppoſe as a Foundation for all, that there is yet an Impreſſion and Hint wrought in the Heart of the pooreſt Believer, of ſpecial mercy towards him, which is it that hangs his Heart upon what is paſt, and cauſeth him to depend upon what is to come. This I mention firſt, becauſe this is the principle of all thoſe acts that I ſhall after mention, and this is like the firſt Principles which are indemonſtrable, but the Concluſions from thence are and may be demonſtrated. So about this I cannot give you any Direction, for that Spirit that works the mind, and ſearcheth the deep things of God, muſt work it in you. It is the Principle of Faith, and is indemonſtrable; only what acts of Faith this principle may be drawn forth into, as Concluſions from that principle, this I will direct you unto.

This therefore being given by God to the Heart, and ſuppoſed by us, ſuch an one may be directed, and enabled before he hath Aſſurance, to put forth theſe acts of application for his particular.

1. He may put forth an act of renuntiation of Salvation by all other ways of juſtification ſuppoſable, then ſuch as is by Chriſt's ſpecial Intention in dying, and juſtification from Eternity: And this he is to do, not in his Opinion only, when the Query is about Truth or Falſhood, but he may and can, and is to be directed to do this for his own particular Salvation, when he is conſulting on what way to pitch, as for his own Salvation; and that not of neceſſity only, becauſe there is no other way, but out of choice: For when once in general he hath viewed the certainty, the ſtability of this way of Salvation, in the whole progreſs of it; and how when obtained and declared it ſecures the Heart, and ſo his Heart fully approves it, and ſees alſo how it magnifies God's Love, and the Riches of his Grace, and Chriſt's Love alſo, and withal his Heart hath had that undiſcerned hint of Intention towards him, he ſo approves it, not only as beſt and trueſt in it ſelf, but as beſt for him alſo, and doth conſtantly venture, and reſolves conſtantly to venture his particular Intereſt upon this way of Salvation alone; and betakes himſelf to it, to deal and trade in his thoughts with it for his own Salvation. He ventures not only his own Intereſt upon the truth of it, but upon the performance of it to him, and all other ways that can be ſuppoſed or preſented to him as poſſible, he utterly renounceth: He betakes himſelf to this rather, and chooſeth to venture to be ſaved by virtue of theſe eternal paſt tranſactions of God and Chriſt than any other. And though this hint is not boiled and raiſed up unto aſſurance, and he cannot yet ſay, that he was juſtified from Eternity, and that Chriſt had a ſpecial eye to him, yet he is content fully to hang expectation upon it, for his own particular; and as David ſaid of the Law, I hate all falſe ways, but thy Law do I love, ſo ſays he of this way of the Goſpel, of theſe ways of God, which are yet paſt finding out, that this way of Salvation he loves: And though for ought he knows, there may prove a venture in it to him, yet he had rather venture to be ſaved this way than ſaved the other way; and had rather be one of a hundred that ſhould have a draw for this, than one of two for another.

2. He may put forth an act of Dependance upon God for the obtaining that juſtification to come, with ſubmiſſion to, and with reference, and by virtue of that which is paſt.

1. It is an Errour that Men imagine that there can be no room for dependance, but only when all is yet [illegible] reſolved on by him on whom we depend: For though I ſuppoſe the foundation of all their Salvation that ſhall be ſaved laid in God's Heart, and in Chriſt's Heart, and the thing reſolved on, yet if the actual Performance and Execution be yet to be accompliſh'd, (as it is) there is room for a dependance: As if it were known that a Prince had reſolved to beſtow an Office on ſome particular Man, but not declared who it is, every Man capable might live in dependance for the actual beſtowing it upon himſelf in particular, as well as if they knew he were not reſolved, but might diſpoſe of it this way or that way. Men therefore falſly conceive that if God and Chriſt were yet to make their Will, then they would ſeek t them with dependance, becauſe they hope that they might gain their hearts towards them, (by obedience and dependance) to diſpoſe of Chriſt's Death and the Riches of it towards them; but when their Will is made, and ſealed up from Eternity, they think there is no room for dependance, when yet there is the greateſt of all other.

2. For there may be a dependance with ſubmiſſion, which Jeremiah cal waiting quietly, and putting the mouth in the duſt, Lam. 3. 26, 29. Th Top and Flower of God's Glory in the ways of juſtification is his freedo therein, and therefore as it is called Grace, A being juſtified freely by his Gra ſo Free-Grace too; which freedom is ſhewn moſt in juſtifying ſome, an condemning others, and in directing the courſe and progreſs of theſe his way as he pleaſeth. Now Faith is appointed the Inſtrument in us, that ſhou glorifie God's Grace in all the Prerogatives of it, to glorifie it as God glorifies it; and therefore among other things, Faith ought to glorifie the freedom of it, as well as the Riches of it in pardoning; and this it cannot do more, than by ſubmitting its own Salvation to this free, diſpoſing, ordering Grace of God, and to let God have his Liberty in it. Faith frames the Heart, and turns and applies it to the freedom of God, and glorifies him according to all the advantages his Grace hath over Men, whereof this is one of the greateſt, viz. his Freedom; It caſts away it ſelf in the glorifying of it, it ventures upon it with ſubmiſſion, becauſe it is free, and if it falls out that the Soul attains it, he glorifies that freedom, acknowledging that it was Gods free mercy which ſaved him. If he thinks it may be otherwiſe, (tho' in this caſe it cannot, however he may think ſo) yet withal he thinks that there is an inſtance of God's freedom that will be glorified, and he commits and ſubmits himſelf, not to the ſufficiency of God's and Chriſt's Grace, but to the Freedom of it, and launcheth himſelf into it, without either Oar or Stern, and commits himſelf to thoſe vaſt Waves, and the current and ſtream of God's mind towards him, to ſave or drown him: Thus David in a particular caſe exerciſeth his Faith, and if he had no other acts in matter of his Salvation, this act of Faith would have ſaved him: What ſays he? he ſubmits himſelf to God's own thoughts towards them, 2 Sam. 15. 25, 26. If I ſhall find favour in the eyes of the Lord, he will bring me again, and ſhew me his Habitation; but if he ſay, I have no delight in thee, behold, here I am, let him do to me as ſeemeth good to him: He refers himſelf to God's thoughts wholly, with an holy dependance and ſubmiſſion. And thus Faith may exerciſe acts of ſubmiſſion and dependance towards what is paſt, as well as for the obtaining of what is to come; or rather Faith may act for the obtaining of what is to come, by virtue of what is paſt already, and ſo it honours God in both.

3. And Faith may act, not with a bare and naked ſubmiſſion only, but with a reference alſo to be juſtified by virtue of what was done then, which I may do, though I cannot tell whether I was then juſtified or no: This I know, that ſome men were juſtified then, and that what is to come hath an inſeparable Connexion thereupon, therefore in caſting my ſelf upon what is to come, I may refer to what was done then, and I may have recourſe to be juſtified now by virtue of that juſtification then performed by virtue of Chriſt's Intention towards me: For as a Man may refer to that he knows not the event and purpoſe of, ſo I may hang all my Expectation upon what was done then, and I may refer to God's Heart, and Chriſt's Heart towards me then, not only with a bare act of ſubmiſſion, but with hopeful expectation, which is the greateſt truſt in the World. For if the matter were now to be begun to be caſt, the ſupport of a man's dependance might be a confidence in himſelf, that he might do ſomething, which in the end might encline God, and then a Man's truſt were in his own heart; but when I refer to what was paſt before I was, I refer meerly to God's heart towards me; I then refer with dependance on the bare free thoughts of God and Chriſt, which is the moſt naked, pureſt truſt in the World: Now this is not only nakedly to ſubmit, but it is to exerciſe Faith in this manner; as if the Soul ſhould ſay, Lord, by virtue of what Chriſt did, and thou didſt from all Eternity towards me, now juſtifie me. As a Man may and ought to exerciſe the thoughts of Faith which God works in him, though he thinks they are but his own thoughts; as a Man is to pray, though when he prays he knows not whether he prays aright, ſo a Believer is to refer to God's thoughts towards him, altho' he know them not, and to caſt Anchor in the dark; he ought to make tryal what God's Heart is to him, and to caſt Anchor upon it, though he cannot fathom it: And whilſt his Faith appeals thus to God's Heart, and Chriſt's Heart towards him, God doth the thing, he hitting right. And again, Men may and ought to take in thus by way of reference what is paſt; becauſe, they muſt be juſtified (if ever they be ſo) by virtue of what is paſt, and therefore their caſting themſelves upon God for juſtification may be with this reference, that it ſhould now be performed to them by virtue of what is paſt. God and Chriſt did mutually truſt each other about our Salvation: God truſted Chriſt (e're he dyed) for ſaving many thouſands, upon Chriſt's bare word, and Chriſt truſted

God to ſee the fruit of his Death in many thouſands yet to come, and he ſees his ſeed, and is ſatisfied; and if they truſt one another, ſhall not we?

3. A Soul thus referring to what is paſt by God and Chriſt, for him to obtain juſtification by virtue thereof now, may yet be bolder in the exerciſe of his Faith: For all theſe thoughts of what God and Chriſt hath done he may turn into Pleas to God, and plead before God the ancient paſſages of that his Tranſaction with Chriſt about him, and try how they will take upon his Heart, and ſee what God ſays to them: Thus Habbakuk in the Name and Perſon of poor Believers puts God to it, to draw out his thoughts towards them in his Prayer which he makes, Hab. 1. 12. Oh Lord, (ſays he) art not thou from everlaſting, my God and mine Holy One? He puts him to it, and reminds him of his ancient thoughts; and he puts the Queſtion to God, to ſee what he would ſay to it; and what doth God anſwer again? E're he goes any further, he hath a gracious perſwaſion, an Eccho of God's Heart towards them; We ſhall not dye. So do thou, go and turn all that thou knoweſt about God's Eternal Tranſactions with Chriſt towards Sinners, and Chriſt's Undertakings and Undergoings for Sinners, go and turn them all into Holy Pleas and Queries with God daily in thy Prayers, as touching thine own particular: Ask him, Art thou not mine, Holy One, from everlaſting? Lord, look on me again, doſt thou not know me? Deſire him to look into his own heart, and view the Idea he had of thee, and the thoughts he had towards thee from everlaſting; boldly ask him, if he did not then commend thee to his Son, and write thy Name in his Heart himſelf? Mind him of all thoſe ſecret Paſſages, go over them all, and turn them into Queries, which another Soul which hath aſſurance would do into Comfort and Thankſgiving: Go down from thence, and ſpread all that Chriſt hath done before the face of God, tell over all the Story of his being in the Garden, on the Croſs, and ſay, Lord, did not Chriſt do all this for me, a vile Wretch, by thine own appointment? Had not Chriſt me in his heart, when he hung on the Croſs? and hadſt thou not me in thine eye, as one with him, when he ſuffered? and didſt not thou then unbeknown to me, charge theſe and theſe particular ſins upon him, &c. I ſay, turn all into ſuch Queries about thy ſelf, put God to it, ſee what he ſays to theſe things. How often is God ſo put to it that he cannot deny it, but plainly confeſſeth all this was true while the Soul is a ſpeaking? However, whilſt the Soul is thus pleading, he finds thereby his load taken off, his Mind eaſed; and why? becauſe he hits God's very mind, ſpeaks the botom of Chriſt's Heart, and ſo finds the Blood of Chriſt ſpeaking better things than the Blood of Abel: He ſhall find in theſe pleadings God's Eternal Love, and Chriſt's Death, to be as a plank to a Man a ſinking, to have a reality in them, to bear his Heart aloft: He ſhall find, whilſt he is pleading thus blindfold, (as I may ſo ſay) and caſting Anchor in the dark, that his Pleas take hold, and eſtabliſheth, and ſettleth his Heart in the midſt of all toſſings. Thus as a bold Man will by putting Queſtions draw out anothers Secrets, ſo by ſuch Pleas and Queries doth the Heart often in a holy Cunning draw out God's mind. However, thereby doth the Soul find a Support, and he ſhall find them to take with his Heart, and to take with God; that as in Preaching God's mind, if a Son of Peace be preſent, it takes with him, and his Heart cloſeth with it, and is won, ſo in pleading over God's Mind, and queſtioning thus with him, a Man being a Son of Peace, and hitting right, God owns him, and all he ſays to be true.

4. Under ſuch an Act of referring himſelf to God's Heart and former Proceedings, and in ſuch a way of pleading, he may improve every Promiſe, and all the fulneſs that is in Chriſt. Is there any benefit that God's Love ever intended to beſtow, or that the merits of Chriſt's Death purchaſed, or can help a Man unto? In the ſame way he refers to and pleads Chriſt's Death for his juſtification, he may refer to it for all bleſſings elſe, for that way of Salvation he depends upon will help him, and be improveable for all: If a man be ſick, he can plead, Lord, did not Chriſt bear our ſickneſſes and infirmities? Was not his Soul made a Curſe to redeem me from all miſeries? Lord, I refer to his Death for my recovery, as well as for my ſalvation, by virtue of it heal me: And he may have upon theſe pleadings of his all things done for him, and by vertue of Chriſt's Death, and his Faith may make uſe of it, and have recourſe to it for all, and recieve all from it, as well as he that hath aſſurance. Indeed hapappily he may want the diſcerning of ſeeing all done by virtue of Chriſt's eath, as he that hath aſſurance hath, but it may be as truly done upon theſe cts of Faith for him, as upon acts of aſſurance.

6. Since God when he juſtifies now, doth it out of the ſame frame of Heart, and ree Love renewed, or rather continued, out of which he choſe and elected, I ay (without looking back to that Love as electing) caſt my ſelf upon him, bear ſuch a Love now to me as he did bear to his Elect, and out of it juſtifie me, and ſo contract all that is ſaid of eternal Love in Electing, own to a preſent Love to be ſet on me, to juſtifie me: For, as out of that ove he elected, ſo out of ſuch a Love afreſh taken up he juſtifies, and that yet to come, and ſo I reſt not on Love, or Free-grace, as electing, but on ch a Grace or Love as out of which he elected me, to juſtifie me; a Love at ſhall have all the Attributes of God freely, unchangeably exercis'd in it, all but from Eternity) that Electing Love had, and is differing but in order a different act of Election, than of juſtification now, and ſo Free-grace and lecting Love are for Subſtance the ſame; and in ſo doing I do draw but a odel, Map, or Deſcription of what a Love I deſire God may bear to me, lluding to the pattern of that Love I hear he bare Men, in electing them in he Mount of Eternity.

PART. II.

Of the Acts of Faith.

BOOK III.

Of the Actings of Faith in Prayer. That we are not bound to Pray with Aſſurance of obtaining the very particular Bleſſing which we ask: That God, neither in the Revelation of himſelf and of his Attributes, nor in his Promiſes, hath oblig'd himſelf to give us the very particular Bleſſing which we ask: That the Eſſential Acts of Faith in Praying do not neceſſarily require, that we ſhould have ſuch a certain particular Perſwaſion. How we are in Prayer to act Faith upon Temporal Promiſes, and how upon Spiritual.

CHAP. I.

That God hath not by any Revelation of himſelf or Attributes, engag'd himſelf to give us the very particular Bleſſing which we ask, and therefore we are not bound to pray with Faith of Aſſurance of obtaining it.

JAMES I. Ver. 6, 7, 8.

But let him ask in Faith, nothing wavering, for he that wavereth is like a wave of the Sea, driven of the wind and toſſed.

For let not that Man think he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord.

A double minded man is unſtable in all his ways.

THE abſolute Neceſſity of Faith in Prayer he doth vehemently and peremptorily expreſs.

1. Vehemently: He doth not ſay, he ſhall obtain no great or large Gifts or Favours, but nothing, not any thing, without this.

2. Peremptorily: Let not that Man think: Let him not entertain ſo much as a thought, that God will hear him; Let him not think that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord.

The Apoſtle binds up our Faith in Prayer ſtrictly unto ſuch a Belief as hath A not doubting, or not wavering, accompanying it, and under that reſolute manner preſſeth it, as that on which the ſtreſs of all asking in Faith in Prayer ſhould lye: He inſtanceth in one particular of Wiſdom for all other, but thereupon gives the ſame common Rule for praying for any thing elſe which we may think or make account to obtain. Thus extenſive is his Caution, reaching to any thing, as thoſe Words ſhew, v. 7. Let not that man, namely, that wavereth, think he ſhall recieve any thing of the Lord: He cannot regularly, or according to God's ordinary courſe which is ſet about praying, receive any thing. God may hear us afore we ask, but if we think to receive any thing by Prayer, it muſt be by praying in Faith, without wavering : So as this is propoſed as a general Rule, holding in all Prayers, that whatſoever we pray for, We pray in Faith, nothing doubting. But then here comes the difficulty, the laſt Words immediately foregoing having been, Let him ask, and it ſhall be given him, and theſe Words coming next, But let him ask in Faith, nothing doubting ; the Coherence whereof would ſeem to carry it thus, Let him ask in the faith and confidence of this, that he ſhall receive the thing it ſelf he prays for, when and whilſt he prays, nothing doubting but that he ſhall receive it, and otherwiſe he ſhall not obtain it.

The Text thus underſtood hath been a mighty ſtound and plunge to many poor Souls, that have lived in a lower Region and way of Believing: If this be the caſe, (will ſome ſay) then I never yet have prayed one faithful prayer in all my Life: Nay, I have not prevailing Aſſurance, (that is, a Faith with a nothing doubting) No, not for my own Salvation, but am full of doubtings and ſinkings of Heart about that great point: I have not obtained ſo much in and by all the Prayers I have hitherto made, and how much more may I ſay as to particular Requeſts of what I ſtand in need of, that I never yet had this happineſs, to be able through Faith to ſay, I ſhall receive them, afore I did receive them. Yea, thoſe Chriſtians that have Aſſurance of their Salvation, do find in Experience very few of their Petitions for particular Mercies anſwered, wherein they have had a full fore-hand perſwaſion that they ſhould recieve the very particular.

It muſt therefore be look'd upon as a caſe of very great Moment and Uſefulneſs to reſolve, and which requires a through diſcuſſion to ſatisfie the many Scruples about it.

The Caſe I propound thus:

Whether it be a Neceſſary, requiſite unto praying in Faith, for the obtaining any, or every particular thing a Chriſtian prays for, that he ſhould pray in or with ſuch a ſpecial Faith and Perſwaſion, as amounts to a not doubting that he ſhall certainly receive it, ſo as if he fall ſhort of this perſwaſion of Faith in Prayer, he muſt not think to receive it?

Firſt, I lay down this Aſſertion:

That there is a true ſpiritual and effectual praying in Faith, which doth obtain and prevail with the Lord, that yet is ſhort of, and riſes not up unto this ſpecial perſwaſion of Faith without doubting, that I ſhall certainly receive the very particular I ſeek of the Lord.

Many pregnant Inſtances and Examples in Scripture might be alledged to prove this Aſſertion, which I omit, becauſe they may pertinently fall in, and will well mingle with ſeveral pieces of the Diſcourſe. I know alſo it is a common-place Head in our modern Divines, to handle, What it is to pray in Faith, by the meaſure of which I might proceed to demonſtrate this Aſſertion, but this I decline now, for it will fall in with my following Method: But I chooſe rather for the clearer demonſtration of it, (for I know no better, or more conducing and fairer way) to take a Survey of the moſt eſſential things unto Faith in Prayer; and chiefly, becauſe in ſo doing it will not only prove, but withal diſcover the very Foundation and Intrinſical Grounds, how and whereupon it comes to paſs, that ſuch a ſpecial Perſwaſion of Faith in Prayer is not of abſolute neceſſity to obtain the Bleſſing deſired. Now theſe eſſential things, &c. are two.

1. The Principal Object of Faith, which Faith in Praying eyes, and acts upon, to move God to beſtow what we ask.

2. The proper genuine Acts of Faith in praying, which yet fall ſhort of being aſſured I ſhall receive the particular mercy prayed for.

And my demonſtration for both theſe is founded on this great Truth, common to them both, that they do admit of a Latitude: Firſt, Unto our Faith in praying: And, Secondly, Unto God in anſwering; ſo that it is not neceſſary either that Faith in its acting upon theſe Objects ſhould riſe up to that aſſured perſwaſion that you ſhall receive, or that God ſhould grant you the very particular: But God and Faith both have room, and Line enough left them: God to anſwer the Prayer in ſome other thing, and Faith to ask the Bleſſing without ſuch an aſſurance.

I begin my Demonſtration with the primary Objects of Faith in Prayer, (as our Divines call them) which are theſe things in God which our Faith in Prayer treats with God upon, which Faith preſents to God, and pleads with God, and urgeth upon God, that it may obtain: Or, which are the principal Supports unto Faith, that do ſtrengthen it to continue to pray, and hearten it that it ſhall obtain. And my diligent Enquiry ſhall be, whether an acting on theſe in our Prayers doth neceſſarily require and exact ſuch a particular perſwaſion, &c.

Now the prime and principal Objects of Faith, by which it thus deals with God in Prayer, are three.

1. Some ſpecial Attributes of God, as his Wiſdom, Power, Mercy, which Faith applies it ſelf unto, and treats with God by.

2. The Promiſes; General or Particular; of ſuch or ſuch good things, which Faith lays hold upon, and urgeth unto God to be fulfilled, by vertue of thoſe Attributes.

3. The Name of Chriſt, in which under the New Teſtament we are explicitely to put up all our Prayers, as for which, and whoſe ſake, God will beſtow all he hath promiſed.

Now if there be a due application of the Soul unto God, in and through all theſe, according as the Nature of theſe may require, then it is certain there is true Faith, and a due acting of Faith in Prayer: For what is, or can Faith be, other than a ſuitableneſs in its acting upon its proper Object, for the glorifying of God thereby? All Acts do receive their diſtinguiſhing Kind and Genuineneſs from their tendency and conformity to their Objects, and ſo muſt Faith; and it is true, genuine, unfeigned Faith, when it puts forth ſuch and ſuch Acts as its true and proper Object doth require: And it is as certain, that to pray in and with ſuch a Faith, ſo levell'd towards theſe Objects, muſt needs be a praying in Faith, and ſo muſt obtain.

Now the moſt bottom Ground why a Faith duely acting in Prayer upon theſe Objects, and pleading theſe Motives, may yet fall ſhort of a certain perſwaſion I ſhall receive the very particular, &c. lies in this one Propoſition.

Prop. That God hath not in the revelation of himſelf through theſe Objects to our Faith, ſo bound up himſelf in, or by vertue of any, or all of theſe, tho' duely implored in Prayer, that he will certainly give the very particular we ſhall ask in true faith on theſe, the Nature of theſe things not abſolutely or neceſſarily requiring it, as they are to us revealed.

And the Inferences from hence will be,

1. That if God be not certainly bound up by any one, nor all of theſe, therefore mentioned, then by nothing elſe, for theſe are thoſe, and ſuch as for which he is pleaſed and moved to grant all that he doth grant to us by Prayer.

2. And hence it will follow, that if God be not neceſſarily bound up by theſe to give the very particular, that then Our Faith in Prayer is not bound up to a certain Perſwaſion, I ſhall receive that very particular; for Our receiving muſt be from God's giving, and his declarared Intention in giving ſome way anſwerable thereto: And therefore, if God profeſſeth not to be bound up to give, &c. our Faith cannot be bound up abſolutely to think we ſhall receive. And again, that muſt needs be acknowled right Faith, that treat with God in all, and each of theſe, according to God's own Intention, in hi Revelation of all and each of them; for then God is truly ſought to, wh according to the Tenour of his own Will and Revelation of himſelf.

And take Notice, that the materials of the Demonſtration of this Aſſertio propoſed, (which I ſhall carry through all theſe three Places mentioned) wi ſerve alſo to direct and inſtruct us, how to form and level our Prayers aright, and teach us how to apply our Faith to God's Attributes and Promiſes.

1. I affirm, That the Attributes of God, to which Faith is to apply it ſelf in Pra- er, have reſerved to themſelves a latitude, or a liberty left unto God, in what particular anſwer our Prayers, as ſhall be moſt for the Glory of any of thoſe his Attributes which we plore. That God as repreſented to us by his attributes, and ſo his attributes a the grand Object of Faith in Prayer, appears by the Prefaces unto all the emine Prayers recorded in the Old and New Teſtament, the Saints therein taking in their Prayers ſuch or ſuch particular attributes, as had nigheſt conjunctio with, and affinity unto the particular things they pray for, as being the ne and immediate cauſe of them, and ſo ſtrengthen their Faith for the obtaining that particular.

Before I fall into the particular Inſtances of Attributes, to demonſtrate my foreſaid aſſertion, I ſhall again renew the Memory of this, That it's the Na- ture and Property of Faith, and that which God ordained it for, to apply and turn it ſelf every way, to each and every attribute, according to the kind and nature of each, and according to that way and manner of diſpenſing and giving forth things to us, which each attribute doth hold forth; and in doing ſo, it honours and glorifies that, or thoſe attributes, according to the Nature and Kind of each Attribute and way, in their affecting things for us: And hence it comes to paſs that Faith in Prayer is ſuch a Latitudinarian, that it is not bound up to a certain perſwaſion or belief, that it ſhall receive this or that very par- ticular which it asks, and is bound to ask, and which particular Promiſes, according to a Man's ſenſe of need, direct Faith unto. And the Reaſon is clear, Becauſe the kind or nature of theſe attributes, and the way and the manner of the diſpenſation of them, doth admit of a latitude in God's Intention (in his Engagement of thoſe attributes) for the performance of the Promiſes prayed for; and God for the Glory of them hath, as became him, neceſſarily reſerved a Liberty how, and in what particular to anſwer our prayers, as ſhall be moſt and beſt agreeable to the nature of the attributes, and for the manifeſtation of the Glory of them. And hence, if Faith applies it ſelf (as ſo it ought) to God, in pleading his engagement of any of thoſe attributes, according to their kind, it muſt be with a reſerve on Faith's part, leaving God's performance unto his own latitude reſerved. I only except what may and doth fall out ſometimes, that God is pleaſed to give a ſpecial perſwaſion and aſſurance, (as ſometimes eſpecially in ſpiritual things he doth) otherwiſe in the or- dinary way and courſe Faith muſt leave all to God, with ſubmiſſion to wait the mercy ſought, when it ſhall be moſt for the Glory of that attribute it hath or had recourſe unto in Prayer; for God's Will diſpoſeth it ſelf in giving unto us, according as he intendeth the Glory of ſuch and ſuch his attributes, and this (which is a ſure ground in it ſelf) gives meaſure to our Prayers, and Faith therein, and is a main foundation to decide this Caſe.

1. We ought to apply our ſelves unto God's Allſufficience and Power, with a firm Aſſurance in it; But tho' as to his Power he requires that we ſhould confide in it, to obtain the thing prayed for, yet he exacts not as to his Will, for us to believe that he will certainly effect it, but left that part rather unto an humble ſubmiſſion, whether he would do it yea or no; for he would have that left to him. Thus when the two blind Men came to him, (Mat. 9.) who prayed vehemently to him, (v. 27.) Two blind men follow'd him, crying, and ſaying, thou Son of David, have mercy on us; all the Queſtion that Chriſt askt them, was this, Jeſus ſaith unto them, believe ye that I am able to do this? v. 28. He ſays not, believe ye that I will do this, but only that I am able to do this; and doth your Petition, that I would do this for you, proceed from a faith on my Power, that I am able? They ſay unto him, yea, Lord, and they ſpake their Heart as far as their Faith went, and as far as Chriſt's Que-

ion reacht. And look as Chriſt did not aſk them, whether they did believe e would cure them, ſo neither did they expreſs that they believed any ſuch ing; he loaded their Faith with no more but that of his Power, and as to e belief of that, Chriſt was abſolute to require it; but as to the belief of s particular Will, for that particular thing, there is not a word ſpoken: And et Chriſt in anſwer to their Faith in praying, approved their Faith, by ſaying, e it to you according to your Faith, v. 29. for it came up to his demand, and the erformance teſtified thereunto, that it was ſuch a Faith as he required, for ereupon their Eyes were opened; and theſe were all the Tranſactions that ſſed betwixt Chriſt and the Men in that particular, and yet they obtained hat they prayed for thereupon: Now that which was Faith ſufficient in em to obtain by Prayer, will alſo be in us. And further, Suppoſe this Faith d not been put forth in the way of Prayer, (that is, if we ſuppoſe they d not prayed, but only believed this) yet it muſt be acknowledg'd that the ſame ith put into a Prayer muſt needs be good, be as good Faith to obtain;
r, look what is true Faith out of Prayer, that Faith if it be formed up into Prayer, doth according to the meaſure of it; make Prayer in Faith, and ſo all comes to this Summ, that it is as if theſe blind Men had explicitely ſaid, rd, we come to thee to be cured, and believe thou art able, which makes us e; and though yet we know not whether thou wilt, yet we come, and we leave that thee: Now would not this have been praying in Faith? and will not the cumſtances of thoſe tranſactions juſtifie it to be ſo? yes, without Queſtion;
d yet I need not ſay, how much it fell ſhort of aſſurance that they ſhould ve the thing. Another Inſtance, more expreſs than this, is in Mat. 8. 2. Be- ld there came a Leper and worſhipped him, ſaying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canſt ke me clean: This Faith of his was put forth in Praying, for its ſaid he wor- ipped; the other Evangeliſt ſays, he fell on his face; it was an adoration, with pplication to be cured. He acknowledges him to be Lord of all Diſeaſes, n as that Centurion had, who ſaid, Si voles res acta eſt, If thou wilt, the thing done; thus ſays the Leper, Thou canſt make me clean; and in this latter he Poſitive, nothing wavering; but as to Chriſt's Will, he puts an if to that, thou wilt, &c. Where, Firſt, he manifeſts his Deſire and Requeſt, that he ould cure him. Yet, Secondly, ſpeaks as one not aſſured that Chriſt would it. And, Thirdly, As one that reſigned up himſelf to his Will, and left to him, to do as he pleaſed, having made firſt His Requeſt known, with Faith on his Power; and though he believes abſolutely that he could heal m, yet he prays not abſolutely that he would, but with a reference and ſubſſion to his Will, If thou wilt: Now Obſerve, how abundantly Jeſus Chriſt pproved this Faith, as thus put forth in Praying; I will, (ſays he) be thou clean;
t is the imperative) he had askt, If thou wilt, with an if to that, but Chriſt ſwers him poſitively and abſolutely, I will, ſays he; Thou canſt, (ſays the oor man) he ſpeaks that abſolutely of his Power, and Chriſt ſpeaks as abſotely of his obtaining, The thing is done, (ſays he) be thou clean. And the aſon of this Difference of believing on his Power and on his Will, (that the e muſt be abſolute, the other needs be but indefinite) is, becauſe if we do ot believe his Power abſolutely, that he is able to do the thing, we do not be-eve he is God, nor do we come to him, and glorifie God as God; but to be- eve he will, or that he will not do a thing, or may not, this detracts nothing at l from his being God, but on the contrary exalts him in the acknowledgent of the Liberty, Dominion and Soveraignty of his Will. And it is evi-nt, that our Saviour Chriſt puts the great pillar of Faith upon believing his ower, Mat. 9. 22. Jeſus ſays unto the Father of that Child poſſeſs'd with the Devil, If thou canſt believe, all things are poſſible to him that believeth; and the ther cryed out, and ſaid with tears, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief; for even elief of his Power is not ſo full without all wavering, but it may have an perfection accompanying it: But I cite it for this, that Faith is ſaid to be mnipotent, as God's Power is; Faith on his Power can do all that God can o, and this even in the point of pardoning ſin. Moſes hath recourſe to the ower of God, (Numb. 14.) ſo that to believe that he is able to pardon, ly-g at the feet of his Will, is good Faith.

Fides quam Chriſtus laudat eſt de potentia ipſius, non de potentia ipſius exercione. Brug. in Verbo.

Object. But you will ſay, Power is but one Attribute only, and will our believing on one Attribute thus obtain?

Anſw. A Believers dealing with, and applying himſelf to any Attributes of God, that is effective of the thing, with a ſpiritual Faith exerciſed upon it, is a prevailing Faith in praying; and the reaſon is, becauſe it engages all the Attributes, while it applies it ſelf to one; although I do not explicitely think of the reſt, even as to touch Jeſus Chriſt any where by Faith, but the hem conveys all Chriſt, and all of him: If I deal by ſpiritual Faith with him to be juſtified, and no more, yet Adoption, Sanctification, and all follows; and as the Apoſtle ſays, (Rom. 6.) If we be planted together in the likeneſs of his death, we ſhall be likewiſe in the likeneſs of his Reſurrection; v, 5. If we be dead with Chriſt, we believe that we ſhall alſo live with him: If we have one Benefit, then all.

2. We have to do with God's Mercy in praying in Faith: I need not enlarge upon that, for it is our conſtant plea, Rom. 10. 12. He is rich in mercy to all that call upon him: It is ſpoken eſpecially to what he is to Men, in or upon their Prayers, for it is to them that call upon him: Now directly Mercy will be acknowledged Mercy in the Glory of it, and that is to be free; that Attribute therefore deſerves a greater latitude, yet as to the particulars, wherein he will ſhew mercy, and is in that reſpect more regulated by his Will than any Attribute whatſoever. Mercy will be exalted as Mercy, (Iſa. 30. 18.) and therefore in its Freedom, which is the top Glory of it; and therefore in that place where he himſelf gives himſelf the moſt full, abſolute declaration of Mercy, and the Characters of his Nature, (Exod. 34.) yet in the 33*d.* Chapter he prefaces thereunto, I will be merciful to whom I will; if he is free to be merciful as to the Perſons, then much more in the things wherein to be merciful: For of any thing he hath to beſtow, Mercy is moſt his own, it is his Riches, and he hath enough of them, and ſhall he not do what he will with his own? and having ſuch abundance and variety of them, if he doth not gratifie us in one thing, he hath to do it in another, and hereby Mercy is exalted, as you hear'd the Prophet ſpeak. And if it be thus, then that Attribute which our hope is moſt in, yet it doth not require a certain belief that we ſhall receive the thing we ask, but God himſelf reſerves a liberty to himſelf, and leaves thereby a latitude to our Faith.

3. God's Wiſdom alſo reſerves a Liberty to it ſelf, and gives Line to Faith, Iſa. 30. 18. The Lord will wait, that he may be gracious to you, and therefore will he be exalted that hath mercy on you, for the Lord is a God of Righteouſneſs, bleſſed are all they that wait for him: The meaning is, he is a God of Wiſdom, a wiſe God, he knows what is every way beſt, and therefore waits to be gracious in the beſt way, that his Mercy may be moſt exalted; he waits not only the fitteſt ſeaſon wherein to be merciful, but in what particular things moſt to gratifie us, and will find out a time wherein it is beſt for us. Tho' a Believer therefore coming to God, hath all the Promiſes of God before him, and his own Judgment is, that he hath more ſpecial need of ſuch or ſuch a Promiſe, yet God's Wiſdom (who is a God of judgment, and alſo made all the promiſes) having much more all thoſe promiſes afore it ſelf, alſo conſiders for its own Glory, and its own good, in what, or by which promiſes to anſwer us; and as it is for the Glory of his Wiſdom to order the paſſages of his Providence, ſo as to be paſt finding out, ſo alſo his diſpenſations to his people in anſwer to their prayers are, have much of the like variety, that he ſhould not always do it one way. It is true, God hath promiſed that he will with-hold no good thing, but what that good thing is that ſhall be good for us, that he only is judge of, who as he is a Father, is termed alſo to be a heavenly Father, whilſt he ſits in Heaven, conſidering what to give us that is good for us, Luke 11. 13. If ye then being evil, know how to give good things to your Children, how much more ſhall your Heavenly Father, &c. Thou askeſt of him ſome earthly thing, as thou thinkeſt it beſt for thy need, but he anſwers thee as a Heavenly Father, Mat. 6. 32. Your heavenly Father knows that you have need of all theſe things: Earthly Fathers know but what are earthly good things, and of them they give to their Children, ſuch things as they judge beſt; but God judges as a Heavenly Father, and ſo of what is beſt as in relation to Heaven, and thy coming thither, hither, and his thoughts are herein as far above Earthly Fathers as Heaven is above Earth. He hath alſo declared, that all things ſhall work together for thy good, but what particular diſpenſation ſhall work for good to thee, and how, this he ſays not, nor doeſt thou know: It may be the contrary to what thou deſireſt ſhall work for good, and that lyes in his Wiſdom only to judge and diſpoſe of, upon the glorifying of which in his own way thou muſt wait: ſo that Wiſdom reſerves to it ſelf a latitude, and it is meet it ſhould, for the Glory of it ſelf, for there the Glory of it lyes. Hence therefore if Faith applies it ſelf as it ought unto God's Wiſdom, according to the kind and way of diſpenſation of it, why then Faith alſo muſt be left to a latitude too, and not be bound up to the particular that thou ſueſt to him for, but muſt wait alſo on him for what his Wiſdom will judge beſt, and ſo indeed it is added, Iſa. 30. 18. that becauſe he is thus a God of judgment, and waits thus to be gracious his own way, therefore bleſſed are thoſe that wait on him, i. e. that wait on him as ſuch a God, a God of Judgment; for waiting is but an act of Faith continued.

4. A fourth thing about which it hath to deal with God in Prayer, is, The Glory of God, and ſo it is to frame its Petitions, not only for what ſhall ſtand with the Glory of God, but what ſhall be moſt for his Glory. The Apoſtle ſhews, that Faith of all other eyes God's Glory, and treats with it, Rom. 4. 21. Abraham was ſtrong in Faith, and gave Glory to God: And as it is the Object of Faith in common, ſo of Faith in particular, as it is put forth in Prayer, and which Faith applies it ſelf unto in praying: This we have in the Lords Prayer, in the cloſe, For thine is the Kingdom, Power and Glory; and in the firſt Petition, Hallowed be thy Name, which is the meaſure of all that follows; and we are hereby taught to enforce all our Prayers with this, as with which God is principally moved to grant us our Requeſts, and which the Soul in praying, if it prays aright, maketh uſe of as Pleas unto God to grant thoſe Requeſts; and it is the higheſt Plea, and moſt effectual way to obtain that Faith hath, or can have, in praying.

Now it's certain, that what that particular ſhould be, which as concerning my particular Condition ſhould be moſt for the Glory of God, that only is known to him, who as he knows our concernments and intereſts, ſo his own above all: We pray indeed for what we jugde would be moſt for his Glory, as concerning us, and make a great plea of it, and God highly accepts it from us, becauſe it is what is beſt in our view and judgments, but he performs according to the Riches of his own Glory, according to his own deſtines and vaſt purpoſes of Glory to himſelf, ſo as a Man may pray in the higheſt Faith, and in the ſublimeſt way, according to what he judges, and yet ſtill not know certainly that he ſhall receive; for what is moſt for God's Glory, God only himſelf knows. It is true indeed, that all the Promiſes, which are the declarations of his Will, are for his Glory, 2 Cor. 1. 20. All the promiſes of God in him, namely, Chriſt, are in him Yea, and in him Amen, unto the Glory of God by us; there is none but doth tend to his Glory more or leſs, but the performance of which of them to my particular will be moſt for his Glory, that ſtill is reſerved to himſelf. And this Attribute of his Glory hath a mighty compaſs and room to anſwer thee in, by ſome Promiſe or other, tho' yet it doth not give thee the particular thou deſireſt, according to that one particular Promiſe which thou haſt ſingled out to urge. Yea, as this gives a greater latitude to him than any of the former Attributes, ſingly conſidered, and ſo therefore an anſwerable allowance muſt be given unto Faith, in reſpect unto this Attribute above all other; for what is and will be moſt for his Glory, he alone is the ſovereign judge of: Therefore, ſays the Apoſtle, (Rom. 11. 36.) of him, and through him, and to him are all things, to whom be glory for ever. That other Royalty alſo of his Kingdom, or of his being King, is appropriate and eſſential to him as he is God, (Pſal. 93. 2. Pſal. 74. 12.) which David's Faith ſo often lays his foundation on in praying, and therefore is ſo exactly conjoyn'd in the Lord's Prayer with his Glory; and therefore every Son of his, that comes to him as to his King, (as David often did, when he ſays, My God and my King,) as he hath great encouragement, becauſe he is his King, who

who can do any thing, ſo he muſt conſider, that his Kingdom is of a vaſt extent, and that he hath many Dominions, and an infinity of Deſigns and Ends towards Perſons of all ſorts in thoſe Dominions, that he hath many Irons in the Fire, many Concernments and Ends of a greater breadth than what thy narrow Deſires or Concernments are, eſpecially as they are comprehended in the ſhallowneſs of thy Underſtanding, for they are of a greater breadth than any one particular Promiſe can or doth contain. In the adminiſtration of a KINGDOM, a Favourite very near to his Prince, comes with a Requeſt to be gratified; he has had many large Promiſes of all ſorts given him, and his particular Requeſt in his View is but a ſmall one, as the Life of a Friend that hath run into Treaſon, or the like, and he thinks the Grant of it will not be a prejudice to any of his Prince's affairs; but that King having a large Dominion, and many perſons, yea, perhaps Parties and Intereſts to deal with, this Buſineſs and Requeſt of his may fall croſs unto, and interfere with ſome very great intereſt of his own, which this Favourite knows not of, and ſo he denies him his particular Requeſt, but yet takes care to gratifie him in another, that ſhall be beſt for his particular: And as he hath a Kingdom to adminiſter, ſo he deals in Politicks, and hath more general ends than a Subject can think of, or imagine, and knows that which none of them can do; he hath a vaſt extent of affairs in that Kingdom, and his Honour is intereſted to ſee to all things, as they ſhall tend to his more general Ends. And thus it is much more with God, who is the King of Kings, and the greateſt that ever were are but as petty Conſtables to him: He hath deſigns upon particular times, wherein the Saints do live, which are part of the adminiſtrations of his Kingdom, and he hath ſuch deſigns in thoſe times, as according to his ordinary providence he cannot do that for his people that live in this age, at this time, which he can and doth in another for them. General Providences, or at leaſt more general than thy particular, do croſs often particular requeſts, whereof in the end we come to ſee a Reaſon: This ſome underſtand (and I believe rightly) to have been Baruk's caſe, Jer. 45. poor man, he was miſerably diſcompoſed for the common Calamity which Jeremy had threatned, Thou didſt ſay, woe is me now, (ſays God to him, v. 3.) for the Lord hath added grief to my ſorrow, I fainted in my ſighing, and found no reſt: And he had beſought God much for the averting of that Calamity, the thoughts of which lay ſo heavy upon him, and preſſed him down; but eſpecially, he had ſought for a quiet condition for himſelf, in theſe turbulent times to come, v. 5. Seekeſt thou great things for thy ſelf, ſeek them not: What were the great things? what preferment, or honour, or riches? He was a Man too godly to be ſo ambitious and worldly: No, he only deſir'd to live in the Land quietly, that he might have ſuch a particular priviledge, and he ſought it for himſelf; it was a thing he ſought for himſelf, as the Text ſaith, He ſought only Quietem in communi inquietudine, Quiet and Eaſe amidſt the common diſturbance; and great things theſe were to ſeek, in reſpect of God's common providence at the time he lived in, Ardua & difficilia, things hard and difficult to be done: Therefore God tells him, (v. 4.) That which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted will I break up, even this whole Land, and ſeekeſt thou great things, and hard things for thy ſelf? It's contrary to the general deſign I have, and therefore too great, or too hard for thee to obtain: Yet thus far God gratifies him, as far as ordinary providence would reach and extend, I have given thee (ſays God) thy life for a prey in all other Countries, but I cannot gratifie thee in this; altho' he had a Promiſe ſufficient to have asked this upon, viz, Honour thy Father and thy Mother, that the days may be long in the Land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

CHAP.

hat God hath not in his Promiſes obliged himſelf to give us the very particular Bleſſing which we pray for, and therefore we cannot pray with Aſſurance of obtaining it.

I Shall now carry on the ſame Demonſtration touching Promiſes, the ſecond Object of Faith, viz. That the manner of God's Declaration of them is ſuch, as God hath not bound himſelf ſo up, but that there is this Lirty reſerved, in what particular promiſe he thinks beſt for us to anſwer our rayers, and as ſhall be moſt for his own Glory; eſpecially, conſidering how romiſes are taken in by us into our prayers.

I come then to Promiſes, the ſecond Object of Faith before-mentioned; and erein to conſider, Whether the promulgation of them, as God hath been leaſed to make it, doth not reſerve the like liberty to God, as hath been ſhewed f his Attributes, and ſo by conſequence the ſame latitude to Faith in Prayer, hich is a putting of Promiſes in ſuit; ſo as that notwithſtanding that God ath engag'd himſelf in promiſes, we may pray in Faith, altho' ſhort of ſuch Perſwaſion, that we ſhall receive the very particulars we aſk for. I ſhall iſcuſs this point under a General Conſideration of Promiſes: And indeed e General Conſideration had of them, will much conduce further to diſcoer and lay open the very bottom ground or root, why a Faith ſhort of ch a perſwaſion may be prevailing to obtain, and will withall ſtub up by e roots ſuch Objections as may be made againſt it.

The Objection may be framed up of theſe particulars, That there being one ttribute not hitherto mentioned, viz. God's Will, which hath drawn in oſe other forementioned Attributes into a confederacy with it ſelf, to aſſiſt d perform what that Will determines; and this Will being revealed in parculai promiſes, his Will hath thereby put out of its own hands all Liberty o anſwer or not to anſwer our Prayers. Theſe Promiſes alſo now ſerving holly as Directions and Sea-Marks, to guide how to ſteer the courſe of our rayers; and God having moreover made ſuper-added Promiſes to hear our rayers, and further his purpoſes and contrivances about his Church, being nown to him from the beginning, (as all his works are, Acts 15.) and that eing the pureſt part of his Providence, and therefore eminently called Forenowledge; and he having before ever he made any promiſe conſidered all, d caſt and given forth his promiſes according to the Idea of thoſe his puroſes, as his purpoſe is to grant upon their prayers, therefore there ſhould d ought to be a ſpecial perſwaſion of Faith in our prayers, that we ſhall ceive the very particular.

Now for aſſoiling this Objection, and for the better clearing the bottom eaſon of what I am purſuing, I have caſt this General Conſideration of romiſes into theſe three Heads:

Firſt, As touching the matter of them, or things promiſed.

Secondly, The Tenor they are delivered in, as in relation to Perſons. Theſe wo as they lye in the Words abſtractly conſider'd. But,

Thirdly, A diſtinct Conſideration muſt be and a part had of them, as they e taken by us into our Prayers, and therein urged unto God.

Firſt, Touching the matter of them there are theſe Aſſertions:

1. God hath ſo framed and ſuited his declared Promiſes to his ſecret puroſes and deſigns, of what he means to beſtow upon his Children, that there extant ſome either Promiſe, or Inſtance, or Declaration, (which always imlies a promiſe in them) for all and every good thing he means to beſtow: e hath ſo drawn out his Purpoſes into Promiſes, as the Sea into Rivulets, at I may ſafely ſay, there is no particular good thing he hath purpoſed to eſtow, but there is a declaration of his Will, either by Inſtance or Promiſe r it. God's Will is open and manifeſt in this, that we have the whole of Part II. his Secret Will (as it concerns us, touching good things to be beſtowed) in his revealed Will; and as his Children are Children of Promiſe, Heb. 6. 17. and Heirs of Bleſſing, 1 Pet. 3. 9. (which are of equal extent, becauſe Promiſes and Bleſſings are of like equal extent) ſo in like manner there is no Bleſſing but is a Bleſſing of Promiſe ſome way or other; and like as God bleſſing us in Chriſt, bleſſeth us in nothing out of him, ſo whatever he bleſſes his Children withall, it is by, and not out of a Promiſe: Whatſoever is given, is given by a Word, and there is nothing we need, or can deſire, but there is ſome Promiſe or other for it, as the matter of it.

2. It's alſo further true, That whatſoever God actually performs, there is a Word for it; this Aſſertion is a conſequence of the former: He rules the World by his Word, or if Judgments be on the World, or particular Perſons, they are ſhewn in ſome Threatning, or ſome inſtance of the like in the Word; and they are all but executing the Judgments written, Pſal. 149. 8. and therefore God's diſpenſing Judgments upon Men is ſynonimouſly call'd his taking hold of them, Zach. 1. 6. But my words and my ſtatutes, which I commanded my Servants the Prophets, did they not take hold of your Fathers? and they return'd, and ſaid, like as the Lord of Hoſts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, ſo hath he dealt with us: In which place you have, 1. God's thoughts, what he meant to do, which is his ſecret Will. 2. You have God's thoughts put into words, ſuited unto his Will. 3. You have the performance, They took hold of them, ſo that they are ſuited to both the Threatnings and Purpoſes, which are in this reſpect parallel. It's ſaid, not a word fell to the ground, 1 Sam. 3. 19. 1 Kings 8. Again, performances and promiſes are adequate.

2. The Tenor of Promiſes is to be conſidered apart from the matter of them, and it lies in this, How the Declaration of theſe Promiſes doth intend and reſpect particular Perſons: And as to that there are theſe Aſſertions;

1. Tho' there is no good thing but is in ſome Promiſe or other, as hath been ſaid, yet God's ſecret Will was never to perform or beſtow all, and every good thing in Specie, (which he hath promiſed) to all and every one of his Children perſonally; nor is it declared any where in the Word that he will do ſo: This is apparent in temporal Promiſes of Temporal things; he hath not given Riches to all Saints, nor Wiſdom, nor Honours; there are not many rich, wiſe, or noble, though ſome are ſo; and yet becauſe he will beſtow of all theſe upon ſome, therefore there are promiſes that do particularize all theſe. The like may be ſaid of many promiſes in ſpiritual priviledges, Gifts, Degrees of Grace, &c. The Sence of this aſſertion you may take up and conceive of thus, That our God, the God of all Grace, and the God of all Comforts, having the whole Body of his Elect before him, and all parcels of good things in proſpect and intuition, his Will was to give all, and every good thing in ſpecie among them, and in his ſecret purpoſes he diſperſed and ordered them amongſt them.

Gerard upon thoſe Words, Joh. 14. Whatſoever ye ſhall ask, I will do. Though he peremptorily determines there is no Prayer but God anſwers, yet in his giving an account why ſo many Prayers come ſhort, one of them is, Deus nuſpiam in verbo ſuo dedit ejuſmodi promiſſionem, quod in temporalibus velit dare nobis omnia quæ deſideramus.

2. Every good thing that every one of them hath, he hath it by Promiſe, yea, and to that very end it was that God made ſuch manifold promiſes, particularizing every good thing in one of them or other, becauſe he would beſtow nothing without or beſides a promiſe in his Word.

3. Take the Declaration of promiſes, as they reſpect perſons, and ſo when God made and gave forth all theſe promiſes of his revealed Will, he had in his eye whom he meant to beſtow theſe particularities of things promiſed, in their ſeveral kinds upon, and ſo made theſe promiſes with a ſpecial intent unto them, and de facto beſtows them upon them individually, altho' in his Word he named not thoſe particular perſons, but keeps and reſerveth that in his own Breaſt, both what good things, and whom he would beſtow them upon.

4. The Declaration of God's Will, and his intent in ſuch promiſes is, for the moſt part not univerſal, to all and every Saint: Some promiſes indeed are univerſal, but then they run in the ſtrain as that doth, Whoever believes ſhall not periſh, (John 3. 16.) but many other are but indefinite, and ſo to be underſtood by us: This indefinite Tenor of Promiſes is clear in the caſe of the Pro-

miſes to work Miracles, which may illuſtrate what I mean about theſe other: Theſe promiſes we have John 14. 12. He that believes on me, the works that I do he ſhall do alſo, and greater works: Mark 16. 17. And theſe ſigns ſhall follow them that believe in my Name, they ſhall caſt out Devils, they ſhall ſpeak with New Tongues, &c. Theſe Speeches are but indefinite, and yet run in this ſtrain, He that believes on me, &c. but are not made to whoever believes; No, not in thoſe times, 1 Cor. 12. 10. To another is given the Gift of working Miracles, &c. But if you hear of ſuch a promiſe, He who believes ſhall be ſaved, (as Mark 16. 16. Chriſt had ſaid,) you muſt underſtand it univerſally of all that believe: For in that Tenor of Univerſality it runs, John 3. 16. Whoever believes, &c. But there are abſolute Promiſes of Salvation which are the Object of Faith, which are not univerſal to all Men; the promulgation of them is indeed o be made to all, but the Promiſes themſelves are not intended to all, and we ſee it in the performance, which falls out accordingly, both which Promiſes and Performances are yet adequate as to Gods' ſecret Intent, he in his ſecret Intent having thoſe individual perſons in his eye, whom he would beſtow ſuch and ſuch particular things upon, and made thoſe promiſes with an eye to them, but ſtill not nameing thoſe particular perſons in his Word; there was a Reſerve in his Breaſt on whom he would beſtow them: And ſo becauſe his Will and Intent was to perform them to ſome, therefore he hath given forth all ſorts of particular promiſes in that Tenor mentioned, He that &c. and yet becauſe his Will was to perform each but to ſome, therefore theſe promiſes run in an indefinite ſtrain and tenor. I call them indefinite, becauſe the Declaration made in them reſpecteth not all perſons, but ſome, and thoſe not declared who they are.

Object. But you will ſay, That all and every Chriſtian hath a Right to every Promiſe.

Anſw. What greater Inſtance is there than that of Chriſt himſelf? and yet lthough all things are Chriſt's, and the promiſes of all things are made in im to us, as the Great Founder of them, (2 Cor. 1. 10. In him all the Promiſes are Yea and Amen;) he never had the performance of all and each of the good things of this World promiſed in Specie, but leſs thereof, and more of he contrary than any of his Children: And what of them he hath in the other World is per modum eminentiæ, in a way of Eminence, as the Holy Apoſtle (that was but a ſmall draught of him) ſays of himſelf, that though he had all things, viz. in the right, yet he was poſſeſſing nothing.

5. Promiſes being thus indefinite, it is ſufficient for any to obtain them that their Faith on them be but an indefinite act, and ſo a Faith anſwering to the Tenor of the promiſe. An indefinite Act from us is rightly and duely ſuited o an Object that is but indefinitely propoſed by God to us, and to ſuch an ndefinite act is ſuited: I mean, that as the promiſes declare not individually whom the things promiſed are intended unto, ſo the Faith tho' in the underſtanding part not certainly knowing that I am the Perſon, yet in the Will puts forth indefinite acts, anſwerably to that ſuſpence in the underſtanding; ſo that I caſt my ſelf upon God to obtain that thing promiſed, by vertue of that Promiſe which muſt and ſhall be made good to ſome, and what do I know ut unto me. And theſe indefinite acts of Faith are good Faith, for they are nſwerable to the Mind and Tenor of many Promiſes that run in the Stile f a bare it may be, which you meet with ſo oft in Scripture, both concerning piritual and temporal things; and who knows but God may intend it to me, ys the Soul, and therefore I do put in for it, and am bound ſo to do, both n reſpect of my own needs, and God's promulgation of it to me as well as o any other. From hence there ariſeth theſe three Corollaries:

1. As Faith is good Faith, becauſe it anſwers the Tenor of the Promiſe, ſo is a praying in Faith when my Prayers anſwer to ſuch a Faith, without certain knowledge that I ſhall undoubtedly obtain.

2. Such promiſes as are declared by God being in the reſpect before-menon'd but indefinite, hence this Attribute, the Will of God, ſtands in great eedom (which he hath reſerved within himſelf) how to perform theſe Promis, notwithſtanding they are the declarations of his Will, and he hath on purpoſe (that he might retain this Liberty within himſelf) in that manner utter'd them. And by this it will appear that as great a latitude is left to his Will, notwithſtanding the Promiſes given forth, as to any other Attribute whatſoever before ſpecified; which latitude lyes in which and what Promiſes he will be pleaſed, and is pleaſed to gratifie ſuch and ſuch perſons, doing it to ſome in one thing, to others in another; and it is according to his Will in all, as it is ſaid of beſtowing his Gifts, It's according to his Will, 1 Cor. 10.

3. Again on our part hence it comes to paſs, that his ways and judgments, which are the performances of his Promiſes and Threatnings, are paſt finding out; and accordingly his Will in diſpenſing this or that to particular perſons is paſt finding out, notwithſtanding the declaration of all ſorts of Threatnings and Promiſes particularly made in his Word. If a Man would go about to make a Collection from the Word, of all ſuch Threatnings or Promiſes, together with all the variety of Inſtances (which are interpreters of his Mind in either) wherein either are ſet forth as performed, (as that when Men have lived to ſuch a degree of Sinnings the threatning hath been executed, as ſeveral inſtances do ſet out) and will thereupon ſay, that upon ſuch a Sinner God will certainly bring ſuch a Judgment, becauſe I find he did bring it upon ſuch and ſuch Sinners, in ſuch a caſe, which we have inſtances for, and thoſe ſuited according to the Threatnings: In the end he will find a great latitude and variety of Judgments, of ſeveral ſizes and proportions, in thoſe various inſtances which the Word holds forth, and ſome inſtances of the ſame kind, in the higheſt meaſure, on whom God forbore to bring the execution of ſuch puniſhments, whilſt he hath brought upon the ſmalleſt Sinners of that kind the ſame. If he ſhall beſides alſo conſider, thoſe many intermediate inſtances, of higher and lower ſizes, between either of theſe two exreams of greateſt and ſmalleſt, that have or have not been puniſhed ad libitum, as God thought meet, that Man will conclude from all ſuch Collections, that no Man can make a certain Judgment what God will do, from ſuch inſtances of ſuch Judgments joyned together. And thus it is in Promiſes, and the inſtances belonging to them, for God's faithfulneſs and truth are as well engaged in his Threatnings as his Promiſes, and there is ſo great a variety of degrees of Qualifications of the Perſons that the Promiſes are thereby made unto, as there will appear that God hath beſtowed and fulfilled ſuch and ſuch a particular Promiſe to one, that had leſs of that Qualification; as in giving Riches to ſome, when yet he hath paſſed by another, that hath had more of that Grace or Qualification that the Promiſe is made unto, and yet he leaves him in deep Poverty, as he doth many of his precious ones, notwithſtanding his Promiſes and their Prayers; and therefore no abſolute Judgment can be made, which is the Point in hand.

3. The Third Conſideration of the Promiſes is, As they come under our Prayers, or are put into ſuit by us in Prayer. The former Conſiderations ſhewed what latitude is left to God for the performance, and to our Faith in believing, as to the Promiſes, conſidered in the matter of good things promiſed, and the Tenor as to the Perſons: Next follows the Conſideration of them, as any of them are upon occaſion ſingled out by us, and taken into our Prayers: For God hath not made Promiſes, or doth beſtow good things promiſed, altogether as they lye abſtractly in his Word, but hath made ſpecial Promiſes beſides unto our Prayers about them, or when we ask them, or ſupplicate about them; Ask, and it ſhall be given; ask Wiſdom of God, and it ſhall be given: And this may ſeem ſuch an Obligation on God's part, that although the Promiſes of the good things themſelves, abſtractly taken, and ſever'd from our Prayers, may not aſcertain us of obtaining, yet when the Addition is made of God's Promiſe to beſtow them, when they ſhall be prayed for, that makes ſuch double Obligation on God's part as may afford a certainty to our Faith, that we ſhall obtain the very particular we pray for. But concerning Promiſes as thus conſidered and propoſed, I offer theſe Aſſertions or Propoſals.

1. The Promiſes we do put in ſuit for good things we pray for, are but a few, in compariſon of the many that God hath made in his Word. The Promiſes in our prayers are but like the gleanings, in compariſon of a Great Harveſt; what through our Negligence in prayer, ſtraitneſs of Comprehenſions to glean nd gather them, I may ſay of them as the Apoſtle doth of the Earth, that t ſtands in the Water, and out of the Water ; ſo do the Promiſes ſtand out of ur prayers, an Ocean of them, as well as ſome are taken in : For what the Pſalmiſt ſays of the Law, that it is exceeding broad, and that there is no end of ts perfection ; the like we may ſay of Promiſes, if we take them in all particulars of them ; and for multitude, they are ſuch as we cannot number them, or our underſtandings are narrow as they are broad. So as God hath, beſides what we put in ſuit, a multitude of other Promiſes that lye afore his Underſtanding, and which he intends to his Children ; and hence it comes to paſs, that he hath a mighty Compaſs and Roomth, by reaſon of the breadth of the Promiſes, to anſwer us in, beſides what we pray for.

2. Conſider thoſe few Promiſes that we ſingle forth, and take down in ur prayers, and then put up to God, or conſider the good things promiſed, which you requeſt in prayer, and you will find that they are but as they are firſt taken in by our apprehenſion, and according to what we udge of them to be beſt for us : For prayers are form'd by us, and ſo put up o God as they lye before our Underſtandings ; and alas, poor Creatures, as we re ſaid to know nothing as we ought, in general, ſo nor particularly what o pray for as we ought ; No, not as to the matter we are to pray for : The Apoſtle hath told us ſo, and that in relation to our prayers, Rom. 8. And though here is ſo great a choice of promiſes that lye expoſed before us, with ſo great variety and multitude for us to pick and chooſe, yet we know not what s moſt expedient in our condition, and which to ſingle forth and pitch upon : ut as Calvin obſerves, "We are blind and ignorant in ſeeking God ; yea, and "although we know our own Evils, the Sores of our Hearts, our Needs and "Wants, yet our Minds are more confuſed, and clouded, and tangled, then "to know what rightly to pitch upon, or what is moſt meet and expedient "as to our preſent need. So that there falls out a great variation of the Compaſs by our ſteering aſide, between what the needs of our prayers point o, and what God's Intentions are oftentimes towards us.

3. Hence we are attentively to conſider the infinitely wide difference between promiſes, as they lye before God's Underſtanding and Intentions of his ood Will towards us, (as in Jeremiah the Prophet himſelf hath expreſſed it, know the thoughts that I have towards you ; and yet even thoſe thoughts lye in ome promiſe or other in the Word, as it is afore him) and what we are apt o pitch upon by reaſon of our clung Underſtandings and confuſed Apprehenſions, when his Promiſes lye afore us, and are choſen by us. The Corollaries which ariſe from hence are theſe,

1. We may ſee the reaſon why God gives, and that by vertue of Promiſes, o many and ſo great good things, beſides, and without, and above our Prayers. . He doth this beſides and without our Prayers, I am found (ſays God) of thoſe that ought me not ; and he gives things that enter not into our Thoughs and Heart. And, . He doth it above and beyond our prayers, more than All we are able to ask or to hink, as the Apoſtle ſaith ; for why ? the reaſon hath been told us, even becauſe Promiſes are of infinite breadth, and the Declarations of his Will, as they lye before his Underſtanding, and his Word, which is in his Eye, are exceeding arge. And we may truly ſay, that for God to do according to what is let in, r comes into our Minds, is not the main part of what he intends, he is ſo bundant in kindneſs and truth, above all we can ſue for. God is greater than ur Hearts in this reſpect, and knows his thoughts and intentions towards us, nfinitely beyond thoſe ſhort Ideas we ſhape forth to our ſelves, for our ſelves, out of his Promiſes. Miſerable, at leaſt imperfect ſhould we be, if God ſhould anſwer us but according to thoſe imperfect Models, Draughts and Propoſals of our Petitions : We ſhould have been infinitely diſadvantaged, if God ſhould have bound himſelf up to our Prayers, and have given nothing elſe.

2. We may alſo hence ſee how it comes to paſs, that God's Will may ſtill etain that great freedom and latitude as to performance of Promiſes, notwithſtanding his Promiſe is to hear our Prayers, and that he may ſtill be executing his Will, according to ſome Promiſe or other, as they lye before his Divine Underſtanding and Will, therein performing as he judgeth moſt expedient ; as Part II. Chriſt ſaith, It is expedient for you I go away; when yet at preſent that word brake all their Hearts, to think of his Departure. But by the taking in of thoſe forementionꝰd things, we may with ſatiſfaction diſcern how both theſe things may ſtand together, That God may ſtill deal with us according to his declared Will in Promiſes, and yet deny us that individual we ſeek in Prayers, notwithſtanding his Promiſes to hear our Prayers.

CHAP. III.

That the Eſſential Acts of Faith in Prayer are ſuch as do not neceſſarily require a certain Perſwaſion of obtaining the very particular Bleſſing for which we pray.

I Come to enquire into the Principal and moſt Eſſential Acts of Faith in praying, and ſhall ſtill carry on the ſame Demonſtration founded on this, That the Eſſential Acts of Faith do admit of the like former latitude, and are ſuch as do not neceſſarily require, that in praying we ſhould have ſuch a particular Perſwaſion of obtaining the particular Bleſſing which we ask.

1. The firſt and main Act of Faith in praying is, a firm belief and perſwaſion of the fore-mentioned grand and fundamental Objects of Faith, as of God and his Attributes, and the Truth and Faithfulneſs of his Promiſes; and hereof our Aſſertion is, That there muſt be an Aſſurance of Faith, or a certain, firm and fixed perſwaſion, without wavering, of the fundamental Objects of Faith. This Aſſurance of Faith, excepting in times of great Tentations and over-flowings of Unbelief, we muſt always retain, and by vertue of a firm Faith in theſe we muſt always pray, or we muſt not indeed think to obtain any thing of the Lord. And this, as it is a great truth, ſo it will prove to be the main Intention of our Apoſtle, when he ſays, But let him pray in Faith, nothing wavering. The Apoſtle in his Epiſtle to the Hebrews lays and makes this fundamental neceſſary unto both Faith and Prayer, He that cometh unto God (ſays he, Heb. 11. 6.) muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him: And thus to do, being of the Subſtance of Faith, (v. 1.) muſt be firmly believed, without wavering; and as our Apoſtle here (Jam. 1. 6.) exhorts to pray in Faith, ſo in v. 5. you may obſerve how he had firſt ſet forth God, as a God that giveth liberally, &c. and thereupon his Exhortation is, to pray in the Faith of God, as ſuch a God that giveth liberally; and alſo our Saviour Chriſt doth, as an introduction to his Exhortation unto Faith in prayer, (Mark 11. 23, 25.) preface this, v. 22. Have Faith in God, ſays he, ſpeaking of Faith in praying to God in Chriſt's Name, of the prevalency of whoſe Name with God an aſſurance alſo is required under the New Teſtament, Mat. 16. 22. Whatſoever you ask the Father in my Name, he will give it you.

Object. You will here ſay to me, This is but a general Faith, what profit is there in praying with a Faith that is ſuch?

Anſw. I Anſwer, That there is much advantage every way, if the general Faith you pray in be the ſame with that in Heb. 11. if it be a Faith which is there ſaid to be a Sight of him that is inviſible, (v. 27.) that is, a ſeeing God in himſelf and Attributes, by a ſpiritual Light and Sight of Faith, which doth render and preſent God and Chriſt ſubſiſtent, and really preſent too, and with the Soul in prayer: This very ſight and preſence of him, when we come to pray, will in ſome good degree cauſe us to pray in Faith.

If you ask how, or wherein? I anſwer, By operating and working in the Soul two eminent things in prayer, that have a great tendency to obtain the deſired Bleſſing.

1. This Sight of God and Chriſt, with this foreſaid Aſſurance of Faith, will humble the Soul deeply in the preſence of this great God. And,

2. This Sight of him preſents us with that in God which will encourage us to pray, and to ask the things we would have; and theſe are good ſteps unto praying in Faith.

1. There is an humbling Act of Faith put forth in prayer: Others ſtile it praying in humility, give me leave to ſtile it praying in Faith: In Faith, which ſets the Soul in the preſence of that mighty God, and by the Sight of him (which Faith gives us) it is that we ſee our own Vileneſs, Sinfulneſs, and abhor our ſelves, and profeſs our ſelves unworthy of any, much leſs of thoſe Mercies we are to ſeek him for. Thus the ſight of God had wrought in the Prophet, Iſa. 6. 5. Then ſaid I, woe is me, for I am undone, becauſe I am a Man of unclean lips, and I dwell amongſt a people of unclean lips, for mine Eyes have ſeen the King, the Lord of Hoſts: And holy Job ſpeaks thus, Job 42. 5, 6. Now mine eye ſeeth thee, wherefore I abhor my ſelf, and repent in duſt and aſhes. This is as great a Requiſite to prayer as any other Act; I may ſay of it alone, as the Apoſtle here, that without it we ſhall receive nothing from the hands of God. GOD loves to fill empty Veſſels, he looks to broken Hearts. In the Pſalms how often do we read that God hears the prayers of the humble, which always involves and includes Faith in it, Pſal. 9. 12. He forgetteth not the cry of the humble, and Pſal. 10. 17. Lord, thou haſt heard the deſire of the humble, thou wilt prepare their heart, thou wilt cauſe thine ear to hear. To be deeply humbled, is to have the Heart prepared and fitted for God to hear the prayer, and therefore you find the Pſalmiſt pleading ſub formâ pauperis, often repeating, I am poor and needy: And this prevents our thinking much, if God do not grant the particular thing we do deſire. Thus alſo Chriſt himſelf, in his great diſtreſs, (Pſal. 22.) doth treat GOD, v. 2. O my God, I cry in the day time, but thou heareſt not; and in the night-ſeaſon am not ſilent; our Fathers truſted in thee, they cryed unto thee, and were delivered; but I am a worm, and no man, reproached of men, and deſpiſed of the people, v. 6. and he was heard in the end, in what he feared: And theſe deep humblings of our ſelves being joyned with vehement implorations upon the Mercy of God to obtain, is reckoned into the account of praying by Faith, both by GOD and Chriſt, Mat. 8. There comes to him a poor man, to heal his Servant, Beſeeching him, ſays the Text, which (the Man believing that he was God, and the Son of GOD, as v. 9.) is to be interpreted to have been a Supplication or Prayer put up unto him: He came not to him as one Friend uſeth to do to another, that intreats a Favour from his Friend as ſuch, but as to one that was God; There came to him a Centurion, beſeeching him, ſays the 5*th.* ver. He beſeecheth him for his Servant that lay at home ſick, and he tells him his Caſe; ſaith Chriſt at the 7*th.* ver. I will come and heal him, ver. 8. The Centurion anſwered and ſaid, Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldeſt come under my roof: This being joyned with that Faith the 9*th.* verſe ſpeaks of, Jeſus Chriſt thereupon pronounceth, I have not found ſo great a Faith, No, not in Iſrael; and his coming and praying in that deep humility, is to be reckoned in unto his Faith, which did obtain. Thus Faith in Prayer lays its Foundation.

2. To come to God with ſuch an aſſurance of Faith, That he is, &c. Heb. 11. 6. (as hath been forementioned) doth many ways encourage the Soul in Prayer, and raiſeth hopes to be heard, and ſo excites him further to pray, more than that general Faith as I may call it.

1. For when God doth Siſtere ſe preſentem, make himſelf thus preſent to Faith, this will mightily encourage the Heart with a hope that he hears the Prayer: If the Soul but knows it hath Communed with God, (as it is ſaid of Abraham, Gen. 18. 33.) and God with it, a Man doth from thence carry away a ſecret perſwaſion, (even this at leaſt) that God hears him, and that his prayer is accepted, and will you ſay this is no great matter? If Chriſt but ſays, It is I, Mark 6. 50. then Be not afraid, or be of good courage, Bono animo ſitis will follow thereupon. His real preſence doth ſcatter Fears and Miſgivings of Heart, as the Sun doth Clouds, and works a perſwaſion of acceptation, both of a Mans perſon and Prayer. If the Soul can but ſay, I have ſeen God to day, (as Job, or as an Holy Man once ſaid, I am ſure Chriſt is alive, I ſaw him ('twas in prayer) this morning) if God preſents himſelf as the living God, this will hearten the Soul to believe on him, and pray to him for any thing whatever.

2. If the Soul believes with Aſſurance of Faith, that God is a Rewarder of them

them that ſeek him, (as it is in the forecited Heb. 11. 6.) this alſo leaves a perſwaſion that a Man's prayers ſhall not return empty, that he doth not ſeek him in vain, (Iſaiah 45. 19.) but that he ſhall have a Reward and Return of his prayer one way or other. David makes this very Attribute of his being a God bearing prayer as a foundation of his Faith in prayer, Pſal. 65. 2. O thou which heareſt prayer, unto thee all fleſh (that is, Man) ſhall come! and therefore do I come among the reſt; and this is in the ſubſtance of it a parallel Speech unto that in Heb. 11. That he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him; as alſo of our Apoſtle, That he giveth liberally to them that ask: And Calvin's outcry and inference from thence is, That we do never ſeek God in vain; and Nunquam irritas fore preces he hath up an hundred times in his Commentaries on the Pſalms. Yea, this very Faith on God, as hearing prayer, in the ſubſtance of it, helped David againſt the grandeſt Objection which the Heart can have to diſcourage it from believing, that his prayer ſhall be heard, viz. prevailing iniquities in point of guilt, and the Conſcience of Sins that have in a godly Man's practice for a while prevailed: But here upon this, that God is a God hearing prayers, David's Confidence riſeth, that theſe ſhould not hinder a Man's hope of being heard, (and theſe if anything would:) But notwithſtanding them David is ſtill reſolved to pray, and would have others do ſo too, becauſe God is a God hearing prayers, which he will never be if he hears not ſinners; and ſo it follows, v. 3. Iniquities prevail againſt me; as for our tranſgreſſions, thou ſhalt purge them away.

But though this Faith in God, That he is a God hearing prayer, makes ſomething towards an hopefulneſs that I may obtain the very thing, and towards a Certain Confidence that God will ſome way or other anſwer me, yet ſtill whether certainly or no in the very thing I ask, this Scripture ſpeaks not; and ſo ſtill it may fall out, I may pray in Faith, when not neceſſarily with a confidence I ſhall have the thing: And yet this I may ſay hereof, that this Faith hath obtained a good degree of praying in Faith, when put up in Chriſt's Name, which the Goſpel doth require.

The particulars of ſuch like principles, fundamental unto our Faith in prayer, are divers others, beſides this, of all which there muſt be a firm belief without wavering, as of, and about ſeveral Attributes of God, and alſo the Truth and Faithfulneſs of God in all his promiſes: Likewiſe there muſt be a belief of the Name and Intereſt that Chriſt hath with his Father, in whoſe Name I come; and the Neceſſity of a ſtedfaſt Faith of theſe is founded on the ſame reaſon that the Faith That there is a God, already inſtanced in, is founded upon; and the ſame Fruits and Conſequents to encourage the Heart in prayer doth follow the Faith of them, as we have ſeen doth the Faith of that other, That there is a God: There muſt be an Hypoſtaſis, a Subſiſtence of all theſe Fundamentals in a Man's Heart, and he muſt fixedly believe them, and that with Spiritual Faith, as that there is a God, and he a Rewarder, ſo that he is able to help and ſuccour me in any diſtreſs. Alſo I muſt fixedly believe that he is a God merciful and gracious, and willing to help, and gives liberally, &c. there ought not to be a doubting here. Martha firmly believed the Reſurrection, and doubted not; ſhe believed the thing, when yet ſhe wavered about the application of it to that particular, whether her Brother ſhould be raiſed up then or no, before the general Reſurrection. And indeed you find the belief of theſe things in (Heb. 11.) to be the Baſis fulchrum Subſtantia, The Foundation and Support that bears up all; and therefore to pray in the faith of ſuch as theſe principles, without doubting, is required; and it is the belief of theſe doth make a Man continue in prayer: Yea, and when all is ſaid to the contrary, the Faith of theſe is the main of Faith, and the Faith of theſe cauſes us to cleave to God, and to follow after him, and not to take any denyal, becauſe we believe thoſe things are in him, and ſuch promiſes made by him: Only it is a ſpiritual faith that doth this, a faith which makes God real, and all his Attributes real, it is a Faith in earneſt. Now when I ſay he believes theſe things, which are the foundations, without wavering or doubting, my Meaning is not, that a true and firm Believer may not have many Injections caſt in to the contrary by Satan, and many Reaſonings of his own ſpeculative Underſtanding, and great degrees of Unbelief mixed with the faith of them, as hath been the caſe of many poor Souls, that have been exerciſed long with this Temptation, that there is no God, and reaſonings to the contrary, yet ſo as ſtill the belief of thoſe things remaineth firm in his practical Underſtanding, which carries him unto Obedience and all Duties, and in like manner to cleave to God in Prayer: Such a one prays, and behaves himſelf as verily believing there is a God, to purpoſe; and his cleaving to God, and following after God, clearly ſhews that he believes there is a God in earneſt. My meaning alſo is not, as if God did not grant many Requeſts upon Prayer, when Men are very weak in Faith of thoſe things. There came a poor Man to Chriſt about his Child vexed with the Devil, and ſays to him, But if thou canſt do any thing, have compaſſion upon us, and help us: Chriſt diſcern'd his Faith was very weak in the great buſineſs of his Power, that he ſhould put an If to it: And Jeſus ſaith unto him, if thou canſt believe, all things are poſſible to him that believeth; and the Man crys out with Tears, Lord, I believe, help my Unbelief: He began to gather up a Faith upon the power of Chriſt, he plucked up an Heart to believe through the power of the Spirit, yet diſcerning a great deal of Unbelief, and Darkneſs, and Deficiency, even to this very point; for it was the power of Chriſt therein which was the thing ſpoken about, as appears both by Chriſt's Speech and his. As a Cannon diſcharged makes a recoil, until it comes to that which firmly holds it, ſo it is with many a poor Soul his Faith in prayer.

Ames well diſtinguiſheth, That Dubitatio minuens, tantum aſſenſum conſiſtere poteſt cum fide infirmâ, ſed non illa dubitatio quæ tollit aſſenſum: And for that he quoteth this very place, Jam. 1. 6, 7, 8. Medulla l. 2. c. 5. de fide, Theſ. 44.

But my further Deſign is to ſhew, That ſuch a Faith as this, which is without wavering, and a praying in ſuch a Faith, is that which well ſuiteth with the Scope of the Apoſtle here in this place.

1. The Perſons that he gives this Caution to, about asking in Faith nothing doubting, were certainly Temporary Profeſſors of Religion, or as we uſually call them, Hypocrites, that in the end waver in their Faith about Religion it ſelf, and the ſpiritual principles of it; and when they come to a ſtreſs of Perſecution, which was the caſe of thoſe times, the wavering that is in their Hearts appears in their prayers, and in their irreſolutions and readineſs to fall of, and in making them to cloſe with any ſhifts or pretenſions that may colour their deſerting thoſe principles which the perſecution is directed againſt. And my reaſon why he points to, and levels the dint of this Caution againſt ſuch, is, becauſe (v. 8.) he doth expreſly ſay, ſpeaking of thoſe Men, A double minded man is unſtable in all his ways: As he is wavering in his prayers, ſo in his mind, which makes him unſtable in his whole Courſe, which proceeds from his not having ſpiritual prevalent convictions of the principles of Faith which he doth profeſs; and this looſneſs or ſhockyneſs is ſeen in their prayers between God and them, but eſpecially when they come to be in any ſtreſs. I have compared it thus, there are two pins in a wall, the one is looſe, and yet hath a room in the Wall, and ſeems firm, and there is another pin that is riveted, ſo that it is fixed indeed; the difference of theſe two pins you will ſee when you hang any weight upon them, and put them to a ſtreſs: When you come to hang any thing upon that which is looſe, and not fixed, it ſelf and all will tumble down with it. And thus it is in times of Temptation, that the wavering of their Faith is ſeen in ſuch Apoſtates.

2. The very word here uſed διακρινόμενος, tranſlated wavering, or doubting, is uſed in Scripture elſewhere to expreſs the oppoſite to that Faith which is fixed as to the principles to be believed, and unto them applied.

1. I find it uſed of Abraham's Faith, whereby he believed the Power of God, that God was able, Rom. 4. 20 He ſtaggered not at the promiſe of God through unbelief, but was ſtrong in faith, giving glory to God, and being fully perſwaded that what he had promiſed he was able to perform, &c. The word tranſlated he ſtaggered not, is the ſame that is uſed here, tranſlated not wavering: And this Commendation of his Faith is not, that he ſtagger'd not in the belief of the Will of God, for he had a perſonal Promiſe from God, that God would do it, and therefore no wonder if it be not ſaid, he doubted not of that; but that which his Faith is commended for, was that he ſtaggered not at the power of God, but was fully perſwaded God was able.

2. The ſame word is uſed in Matthew 21. 21. when he ſpeaks of Faith in Prayer, Multi enim, quia putant id quod petunt eſſe arduum et difficile hinc diffidunt, ſe á DEO id impetraturos, ideoq; non impetrant.

If you have Faith, and doubt not, you ſhall ſay unto this Mountain, be thou removed; καὶ μὴ διακριθῆτε; if you do not ſtand diſputing or wavering, whether it is poſſible for God to do this, or not to do it: If you think in reſpect of the power of God it be too hard or difficult a thing, this is to doubt in Chriſt's Intention, ſo as indeed it is the believing, or doubting about his power, that the word is there pitch'd upon, conſonantly unto that of that too often confident Apoſtle, (Matthew 14.) who walking upon the waters, and his Faith ſinking together with himſelf, Chriſt reproved him, and ſaid unto him, O thou of little Faith, wherefore didſt thou doubt? His doubting was not of Jeſus Chriſt's Will, for Chriſt had reſolved him of that in bidding him come to him; but when he ſaw the wind boiſterous, he began to doubt of his power.

3. The word διακρινόμενος ſignifies diſputing, or a diſceptation againſt a thing, Acts 11. 2. When Peter was come to Hieruſalem, they of the circumciſion contended with him; it is the ſame word that is uſed here: So thoſe Men of whom the Apoſtle ſpeaks are διακρινόμενος, diſputing, wavering and reaſoning againſt things in Religion, Principles in Religion, (which they had profeſs'd) upon occaſion of Perſecution. The Hearts of ſuch uſe to begin to cavil againſt Religion, and call in queſtion this or that which they have profeſt, as willing to be rid of it. Now Prayer is to be put forth with a Faith oppoſite to ſuch a reaſoning, or (as it is tranſlated) ſuch a wavering, and as being fully ſatisfied of the truth of thoſe things, they ſhould never have ſo much as a thought to deſert them; and therefore we find, 1 Tim. 2. 8. that as we ſhould be without wrath, ſo χωρὶς διαλογισμῶ, without reaſoning, diſputing againſt: We muſt pray with a heart fixed in the Principles of Faith.

4. Even here in the Text it is an Attribute of God that is propoſed to the Faith of a Man that prays, and to believe the truth of it fixedly, which attribute is this, That God gives liberally and upbraids not; and to doubt of this goodneſs and readineſs of God to hear prayers, and return anſwer to them, is the principal thing which the Apoſtle had in his Eye, whilſt he ſays, But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering: So then the Faith he intends is about the reality of the truth of this, and other the like Attributes given to God.

2. A Second Act of Faith is of Adherence, or Cleaving unto God, for the good things promiſed, and of Recumbency, coming to, and caſting ones ſelf on God to obtain it, with truſting on God, and waiting on him: And theſe may ſtrongly be exerciſed and put forth in prayer, effectually to obtain, when yet a particular perſonal perſwaſion, that a Man ſhall obtain the very thing he asketh, is wanting. The truth of this aſſertion, concerning ſuch acts of Faith as theſe, although deficient in ſpecial aſſurance, might be carried through the whole Bible in many particular inſtances, as of David for his Child, Hezekiah for his Life, &c. But I ſhall content my ſelf with this only, and fix and center upon this one Argument for it; That there may be a true Exerciſe of theſe kind of acts of Faith, and effectually put forth in prayer, for the great and grand buſineſs of a Man's own Salvation, who yet may want perſonal aſſurance of his Salvation: From whence ariſeth an invincible demonſtration, that there may be a true Faith, and praying in Faith, for all other things whatſoever, ſhort of ſuch an Aſſurance. For the truth of the Antecedent, I need not much inſiſt upon it, it being ſo frequently true in Experience, and now ſo generally entertained and acknowledged by our Divines; and few or none of Proteſtant Divines, holding that Faith of Aſſurance, or a particular perſwaſion of a Man's own Salvation, is that eſſential act of Faith by which we are juſtified and ſaved. That the firſt act of juſtifying Faith in him that begins to believe, is not an act of aſſurance that he is juſtified, is moſt clear; for that were to ſay, that a Man ſhould firſt believe he is juſtified, that he might be juſtified by that act, which is a Contradiction. The aim of the firſt act, yea, of the true juſtifying act of Faith, as juſtifying, is always, and all along a believing on God, that a Man may be juſtified, Gal. 2. 16. Knowing that a man is not juſtified by the works of the Law, but by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt; even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the faith of Chriſt, and not by the works of the Law; for by the works of the Law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified: It Notes forth both the aim of the Soul, when it puts forth Faith for Juſtification, as alſo, that Juſtification follows upon believing; unto which agrees that Speech of Chriſt, (tho' ſpoken to the contrary, and to Unbelievers, and ſhewing what Unbelief is) Ye will not come me, that ye might have life; that is, ye will not believe, (which elſewhere is expreſſed by a coming to Chriſt) with that intent to have life from me, which all thoſe whom I ſave do come unto me for. That Particle [That] ye might have life, denotes out the end or aim which he is to take up, who truely comes to Chriſt, or believes upon him; and it ſignifies not only what is the Event or Conſequent that would follow upon believing.

And yet a Faith on ſome Promiſes or Declarations or other for Salvation he Man muſt have: For Faith and Promiſes, &c. in the Word are Relatives, nd on Promiſes made unto Conditions or Qualifications, not wrought as yet n him, (we ſpeaking now of a firſt act of Faith juſtifying put forth) he annot then in the firſt act of his believing lay hold, both becauſe he hath o ſuch Qualifications as are certain and proper Characters of a Perſon already n the ſtate of Juſtification; nor would he diſcern any ſuch in himſelf, if we ould ſuppoſe he had them; for the true and genuine work of Humiliation oth altogether deveſt a Man of all, and preſents him to himſelf as empty f all good, and lays him naked afore God, as an ungodly perſon, (Rom. 4. 5.) nd he ſees and views nothing but ſin in himſelf, and Faith being that which irſt puts him into a ſtate of Juſtification, (Rom. 5. 1.) he therefore can neither lay hold on any Promiſe made to Believing it ſelf, (for he is ſuppoſed ow to begin to believe, and never to have done it before) and therefore he s wholly left unto abſolute Promiſes and Declarations, and to throw and caſt imſelf upon God and Chriſt in them, as a Man that is in a Ship that is inking under him, doth caſt himſelf upon a Rock that is afore him, and that mmediately with his whole weight, without the help of Plank or Board, or ny thing to convey him to it; ſo here is the Rock Chriſt, and the Soul now ung upon it, it having nothing elſe to ſet his foot upon.

This Condition is much the ſame with that of a perſon that after long Conflictings with various Doubts and Tentations about his ſpiritual Eſtate, is ver and anon turn'd out of all within himſelf, as in his own Apprehenſions, hat ſhould give him ſo much as eaſe in his hold on Chriſt; and ſo he wanteth revailing Aſſurance, though perhaps his Faith from ſome Experiences, &c. s a growing up towards it: In this caſe this Man may and doth find it he ſafeſt, eaſieſt and ſhorteſt way for his Faith, to have an immediate recourſe unto abſolute Promiſes, and to uſe ſuch Pleas in Prayer as may be fetched rom, and pick'd up out of them, and taken up from them; for they uſually contain in them naked Diſcoveries, and layings open of the Cauſes and Original of Man's Salvation; and thoſe very things which move God and Chriſt o ſave us, as there is the Motive in that Promiſe, For my Names ſake I will lot out thy Tranſgreſſions: The manner of ſuch Souls is, to turn them into Pleas rom out of thoſe Promiſes, and to return them upon God as Motives to him o ſave their Souls in particular.

The Corolary from this will prove to be an invincible demonſtration for hat Grand Aſſertion which is my general Subject: For if Juſtifying Faith, and raying with Faith for Juſtification, doth not at firſt, nor often times long after, iſe up to Aſſurance of Faith, or a certain perſwaſion that I am juſtified, or that ſhall be juſtified, and remains but an adherence or coming to Chriſt that may be juſtified; unto which Faith yet the promiſe of being juſtified is made, nd the Prayers from out of that Faith are heard, and ſhall be anſwered, tho' e Soul as yet apprehend it not: The Corolary from thence is, that then ertainly ſuch a Faith wherewith a Believer comes to God to obtain ſuch or uch a particular Mercy promiſed, (which is far leſs than Salvation) and prays n ſuch a like Faith, tho' far ſhort of a certain perſwaſion of obtaining it, muſt eeds be of Prevalency with God to obtain, tho' he hath not aſſurance. The Reaſon of the Conſequence is, à majori ad minus; from the greater to the leſſer; Juſtification is the greater, if not the greateſt ſpiritual Bleſſing by far, (however to be ſure alvation is) and is abſolutely neceſſary, as without which a Man cannot be ſaved, ut many other ſpiritual Bleſſings, (as thoſe Promiſes about ſuch degrees of

Grace,

Part II. Grace, &c. the like alſo of ſuch or ſuch Temporal Mercies and Promiſes) are infinitely of leſs Neceſſity and Moment to us, and in no reſpect abſolutely neceſſary; and therefore if Faith of recumbency prevails to obtain the greater, then much more the leſs. It would be ſtrange, that ſuch a Faith of recumbency and adherence, wanting perſonal aſſurance, and praying therewith, ſhould obtain the greater, and that the ſame kind of Faith for other Mercies ſhould not obtain the leſs; or that God ſhould ordinarily part with the grand Bleſſing, the Bleſſing of Bleſſings, upon ſo low and cheap a rate of Believing, (as this ſeems to be for the degree of it, in compariſon with that of aſſurance) and yet hold all other Mercies at a higher price and rate, and hold them harder and faſter, ſo as none ſhould obtain them, unleſs they be firſt aſſured they ſhall have the very particular they ask. Who would not think, that if Faith of recumbency be good Faith for Salvation it ſelf, it ſhould not be for all things that are leſs than Salvation it ſelf? yea, that are comprehended in it, and go with it, and have all the Promiſes annexed to it: I may ſay, as the Apoſtle ſays of God's giving Chriſt, If he hath given his Son, how ſhall he not with him give us all things? So here, if he hath committed the Keys of Life and Salvation into the hands of Faith of Recumbency, to open this his great Maſs of Treaſure, ſhall he ſhut up all his leſſer Cabinets from all Capacity of opening them? I may boldly ſay, how ſhall he not give us all things, with the ſame Faith, and give power unto it over all other Bleſſings whatever.

2. Neither can any account be given, why that the ſame Perſon ſhould be obliged unto ſo hard and high a Condition of believing, (as Faith of Aſſurance is, and which is a further ſpecial Gift of GOD ſuper-added unto Faith of Recumbency) or elſe he ſhall not receive Mercies of any inferiour rank and kind; when yet if he prays for the tranſcendant Mercy of the whole of his Salvation, but with a Faith of recumbency only, without aſſurance, he ſhall receive it, when yet not the other without that higheſt degree of Faith, as the contrary aſſertion doth and muſt ſuppoſe.

3. Let this Conſideration be added, That it is hard to ſuppoſe, That this ſame Believer ſhould be obliged to pray for all other things with a Faith of Aſſurance, whilſt yet he wants aſſurance of the main; viz. Of his own Salvation, (which is as the grand Leaſe, upon which the Promiſes of all other Mercies, as leſſer Cauſes, do depend); Yea, and whilſt he conflicts daily with, and is under doubtings of his perſonal Intereſt in Salvation, his real Intereſt in which muſt give him Intereſt in all other Promiſes. And in this caſe, who will not readily ſee that aſſurance of his Intereſt in the Love and Favour of God, that is the Fountain of all other Bleſſings; and of his Intereſt in Chriſt, the Purchaſer and Channel of all Bleſſings, muſt be had firſt, as that which muſt in any ordinary way be the foundation of his aſſurance, that he hath, or ſhall have any of the ſmaller Rivulets or Streams that flow therefrom: He muſt in reaſon be aſſured of the grand Leaſe, e're he can claim, or with aſſurance ſue for particular demeaſnes belonging to it. What more abſurd, than to think that we muſt be bound to ask all other things elſe in the Name of Chriſt, as being our Chriſt, to be given us out of God's ſpecial Grace and Love, and all this with an aſſurance we ſhall receive them thence, whilſt yet we are in doubt, or at leaſt do not certainly know that Chriſt is ours, or that God certainly loves us: This were to put Mens Faith upon Contradictions. I deny not, but in the caſe of the faith of Miracles, thoſe that wrought them were perſwaded and aſſured God would work ſuch a Miracle by them, e're they would declare that they would attempt it, or did attempt to work it. And alſo I grant, that many of thoſe that had ſuch a Faith, were not yet Believers with a ſaving Faith. But the caſe is far otherwiſe here, for in and unto them the working of Miracles did not depend upon that ſpecial Love of God which he beareth to his Children, but in the fate in hand. All Bleſſings given to any true Believers, after Juſtification, comes out of the ſame Love that Salvation it ſelf doth; and therefore if this Believer ſuppoſe faith of aſſurance that he ſhall receive them, it muſt withall be an aſſurance that God out of that ſpecial Favour will beſtow them on him, for otherwiſe his ſuppoſed Faith of Aſſurance terminates it ſelf in God's beſtowing the things, without perſwaſion of God's Love to give them: And if ſo, then he prayeth but with ſuch Faith of Aſſurance as was common to Men unregenerate, that did work Miracles, who barely had a Faith God would do the thing by them, but without a reſpect of a Love born to their Perſons therein. And ſo it would be a contradiction, to ſay the ſame perſon ſhould want Faith of aſſurance of God's ſpecial Love for his Salvation, and that yet he ſhould pray for particular Bleſſings out of a Faith of aſſurance, that God out of ſuch a Love would give him them. At leaſt it would be a Faith of Miracles, to have ſuch an aſſurance for particular Bleſſings, when a Man wants aſſurance of God's Love.

4. Yea and Laſtly, He ſhould be obliged to this aſſurance, (if ſuch a Tenet were true) about things which are not ſo certainly propoſed, viz. The Promiſes of degrees of Grace, &c. as alſo temporal things, which are not with abſolute certainty propoſed in the Promiſes of them.

CHAP. IV.

How we are in Prayer to act Faith upon Temporal Promiſes.

THe next Object of Faith, on which it acts in praying, is the Promiſes. Faith in Prayer treats with God by his Promiſes; and tho' it treats with God, and with God only, through Chriſt, yet it deals with Promiſes. Prayer is a putting Promiſes into ſuit, as you do Bonds and Bills, which are your Specialties. I reckoned up five Attributes before, which did not bind you up to believe you ſhould have the particular thing which you aſk: I add two more, the Will of God, and the Faithfulneſs of God; and when you come to Promiſes, you have to do with theſe: 1. You have to do with the Will of God, for Promiſes and Declarations of his Will. And, 2. With the Faithfulneſs of God, that he will perform that which he hath promiſed. Now mark it, put but theſe five things together, in appearance they would ſeem to anſwer any Diſtruſt which you may have, concerning receiving the particular Mercy requeſted.

1. Promiſes are a Declaration of God's Will.

2. When I am in preſent need of any thing, I find a Promiſe, and then it is Faiths duty to lay hold on that promiſe, and to put it in ſuit, and to urge it to God.

3. When I come to pray, I am moved hugely to urge that Promiſe, and this by the Spirit of God.

4. God's Faithfulneſs lyes at ſtake to perform it; for you will ſay, he cannot deny himſelf.

5. I come and pray in Chriſt's Name, which hath great efficacy with God.

Now put theſe things together, and what ſhould hinder but that I ſhould obtain? but tho' you put other things together, and put all theſe things together, yet it will be found, that Faith may not riſe up to an aſſurance, nor is it bound ſo to do.

To aſſoil this particular, The main thing to be done, is to ſhew what latitude God's Will in his promiſes do allow to Faith, that it ſhall not bind it up, that I muſt be neceſſitated to believe that I ſhall have the particular thing. If we will know the true meaning and intent of God in his promiſes, we muſt ſearch into the Nature, and Kind, and Tenure of the Promiſes, and thereby we ſhall find that God in making theſe Promiſes hath not bound us up to any particular perſwaſion, that I muſt believe I ſhall receive the very particular mercy which I aſk. This muſt be granted, that look what God promiſeth, ſo Faith ought to believe: This we muſt ſtick to, and bide by. Look what is the true Intent and Meaning of God in making Promiſes, that Faith muſt be perſwaded of: But take any promiſes, and there is not ſuch a declaration of the Will of God in them, as ſhall bind me up to ſuch a perſwaſion of aſſurance, that I ſhall receive the particular Bleſſing. The Promiſes are of three ſorts:

1. Perſonal Promiſes, made to particular Perſons; as the promiſe of a Son

Iſaac made to Abraham, which in it ſelf was a temporal promiſe, but there was added Abraham's Salvation in the Seed of Iſaac, of whom Chriſt ſhould come. David likewiſe had the temporal promiſe of a Kingdom, and he had the promiſe of Salvation through his Seed, namely, Chriſt: Now this muſt be ſaid, that they were bound up to a ſpecial Faith, and to a perſwaſion that God would do this thing for them, for the promiſes were made to them perſonally, and to both of them with an Oath: But theſe cannot be drawn to an Example to us, to bind us to believe we ſhall have the like.

2. The ſecond ſort of Promiſes are promiſcuous Promiſes, Promiſes in common, as it is call'd the common Salvation, and therein is not put in me, or thee, or you, but they are made in common and at large. Now take the Promiſes that are in common, and promiſcuouſly, and they are diſtinguiſh'd according to the Subject matter of them, and alſo the Tenure of them: The matter of them varies the kind of them, and ſo will vary our Caſe in hand to ſpeak to it, and the Tenure of them depends upon what is the matter of them.

1. Some Promiſes are of temporal things, that is the matter of them.

2. Other Promiſes are about things eternal: The Apoſtle hath made this diſtinction to our hand, 1 Tim. 4. 8. Godlineſs hath the promiſe of the Life that now is, and of that which is to come: Now you ſee there are differing matters promiſed, either temporal things, or things belonging to Salvation; this makes a very great variation in the promiſe, and accordingly they differ in their Tenure, or manner of promulging. God hath framed the Tenure and Form of promulging them according to the matter of them; and as we ſay, that he works contingently in contingent things, neceſſarily in neceſſary; ſo he hath delivered promiſes of temporal things one way, and promiſes of eternal things another way.

I begin with Temporal Promiſes to God's People, and concerng them I have this Maxim or Aſſertion:

1. For the Tenure of them: They are but indefinite, not univerſal to all the People of God. The People of God have indeed all the promiſes before them, but take any temporal particular promiſe, and it is not univerſal to all the People of God, but is in God's intention indefinite, and deſign'd but to ſome of them: God's intent in making them was never to perform them to all godly Men in all things. There is no good thing temporal (be it Deliverance, Riches, Honours, &c.) but God hath given a promiſe of it; for whatever good he doth any of his Children, he doth it by a Word, a Promiſe, and there is no diſtreſs or want any of us are in, but there is a Promiſe ſuitable for it, if we could find it: But yet I affirm, that God never intended to give all theſe outward things to all his Saints, for not many of them are rich, not many noble, &c. from this is clear, that he did not mean ſuch promiſes for them all. But the caſe ſtands thus, God had the whole Body of the Elect afore him, and he gives all among them, and diſperſeth all among them; and whatever good thing any Man hath, he hath it by a Promiſe, and through Prayer on that Promiſe. Hence it neceſſarily ariſeth, that it is impoſſible that every man that prays ſhould have every temporal promiſe for which he prays performed to him, for God never intended it. I ſeek ſuch a mercy which God hath promiſed, and God takes liberty to anſwer my Prayer another way, and yet ſtill performs the deſign of his promiſe.

Object. But have not I right to all the Promiſes, as I am a Chriſtian? and therefore doth not God intend them all to me?

Anſw. Had Jeſus Chriſt right to all the Promiſes? you will ſay, Yes; and you ſay rightly, for in him were all the Promiſes, both of this Life and that other, Amen. Yet you know and find, that our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt had but few of them fulfill'd to him in Specie, or in kind; he that was the Founder of all the Promiſes, and for our ſakes became poor, had not the promiſe of Riches fulfill'd: For our ſakes he was deſpiſed, and his face more marr'd than any Mans, and ſo he had not the Honours of this World, tho' he had the right to all: How then were the Promiſes fulfilled? Vertually he had all; and now he hath all Riches and Honour, and all to diſpoſe of, as the Angels Song in the Revelations ſhews: Now it is ſaid, (Rom. 8. 32.) if God gives Chriſt, how ſhall he not with him give all things? What Saint in the World ever had all things in kind? None: How is it then he hath all things vertually? how is that, he hath as good as all things? I give you Paul's inſtance, 2 Cor. 6. 10. As ſorrowful, yet always rejoycing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, yet poſſeſſing all things: In ſolido, vertually, eminently he had all, while he had God and Chriſt: As Chriſt had all while he was in the World, when yet he had nothing; for he had not a hole to hide his Head in. That the Promiſes muſt needs be indefinite, and not univerſal, is evident alſo by this, that in the Old Teſtament they were not univerſal, for they were never performed univerſally, (this very point was the Quarrel between Job and his Friends; they inſiſted on it, that all godly Men had outward proſperity, and Job ſays the contrary) yet in the Old Teſtament they were in their prime, in their Auge, in their Dominion, for there was a conſtellation of outward promiſes then, yet not performed to all Saints: Why elſe doth Jeremiah complain, ſaying, Thou art an Enemy to me? And why doth David make ſuch complaints, Pſal. 73.

When thou comeſt to pray for ſuch a good particular temporal thing, and haſt it not, thou mayeſt as well ſay, Thou haſt not Chriſt, as ſay that God doth not anſwer thee: Why? becauſe with Chriſt thou ſhould'ſt have all things, (as the Apoſtle tells us) but not all things in Specie, in the kind; No, God never meant it.

Now then what kind of Faith ought we to have about Temporal Promiſes? The promiſes are not made univerſal to all Godly Men, for they are but indefinite: Hence your Faith that applys to God, muſt be ſuitable to the promiſe, and ſo if the promiſe be indefinite, your Faith muſt be indefinite. And what is that? the Scripture prompts it every where, and it is this thought of thy Heart, It may be God will be gracious to me in this thing, and this (it may be) makes me pray, and urge this promiſe, being in need, to put in for it; but whether I ſhall receive it or no, I am not certain, but I throw my ſelf entirely upon God.

2. Temporal Promiſes for the Tenure of them are Conditional; that is, they are made to ſuch and ſuch Qualifications in Men, which if they do fall ſhort of, God is not obliged to beſtow them, or to perform them, though they pray for them; though they are declarations of his Will, yet they are declarations of his Will upon Condition, viz. to them that fear God, and pray to God. I make an Argument from Threatnings, which are declarations of God's Will as well as Promiſes: You ſhall have ſome Threatnings uttered, which ſeem very peremptory Declarations of God's Will, yet there ſeems to be a Condition of God's Will, why God does not perform them: Such was that Threatning denounc'd to Hezekiah, for God came upon him by a Prophet, with the ſame aſſurance by which God inſpir'd Scripture, Iſa. 38. 1, 2, 3. Hezekiah was ſick unto death, and Iſaiah the Prophet ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the Lord, ſet thy Houſe in order, for thou ſhalt dye, and not live: Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the Wall, and prayed unto the Lord, and ſaid, Remember now, O Lord, I beſeech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy ſight; and Hezekiah wept ſore: Here is no Condition mentioned, but it is with the ſame light ſpoken by the Prophet with which he wrote his Prophecy; yet notwithſtanding there was a tacite Condition, it being but about a temporal thing, and Hezekiah underſtood this, and therefore he turn'd his Face to the Wall, and prayed: Here he did ſet himſelf to perform that Condition which might prevent this Threatning, for the Threatning was upon ſuch a Condition, If he did not pray, and thus humble himſelf. On the other hand (that you may ſee God's Liberty) we find, (2 Sam. 12.) that the Prophet expreſly tells David, that the Child which he had by his Wife Bathſheba ſhall ſurely dye: What doth David do? thought he, this is but a Conditional Threatning, I may get it off if I humble my ſelf, Ver. 6. David therefore beſought God for the Child, and David faſted, and went in and lay all night upon the earth: Here he performed that Condition upon which Threatnings uſed to be diverted, but God took his liberty for all that, and the Child dyed; yet, ſays David, (ver. 22.) While the Child was yet alive, I faſted and wept, for I ſaid, who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the Child may live; he had reaſon to do as he did, to faſt and pray, for Who could tell, &c. Here are clear inſtances on both hands, David pray'd againſt the Prophets words on the one hand, and Hezekiah pray'd, and God revers'd his Threatning. Now Promiſes are conditional as Threatnings are, and being ſo, conſider what an uncertainty (let me ſay it) there is in point of conditional promiſes, (ſuch as temporal promiſes are) and therefore ordinarily there is not required a certain perſwaſion that they ſhall be granted.

Object. But I have (ſaith the Believer) ſome evidence I am a godly man, and here is a promiſe to them that are righteous and fear God, I put this in ſuit, and ſhall not I have it ?

Anſw. 1. Let me firſt tell thee, that God doth not always perform the promiſe to him that hath the Qualification, for God takes a great liberty, as by comparing theſe Inſtances in David and Hezekiah plainly doth appear.

Anſw. 2. I would ſay this to thee, the Promiſes of Temporal things to Conditions, are made yet to particular Conditions of Righteouſneſs and fearing God, and they are not made to every righteous man fearing God; for example, take Pſal. 41. 1, 2, 3. Bleſſed is he that conſiders the poor, the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble: The Lord will preſerve him and keep him alive, and he ſhall be bleſſed upon the earth, and thou wilt not deliver him to the will of his Enemies: The Lord will ſtrengthen him upon the bed of languiſhing, thou wilt make all his beds in his ſickneſs : Theſe promiſes are not made to all ſorts of righteouſneſs, but they are made to that part of righteouſneſs which any man is eminent in, viz. the laying to heart the miſeries of others, and conſidering the poor, which many a Saint dear to God doth not do. Thus take alſo what David ſays, I have been young, and now am old, yet have I not ſeen the righteous forſaken, nor his ſeed begging bread, Pſal. 37. 25. Is this made to righteous men in general? No, it is limited, (v. 26.) He is ever merciful and lendeth, and his ſeed is bleſſed: A Man that abounds in that kind of righteouſneſs of doing good, and being liberal, (ſays he) God will remember it, and his ſeed ſhall be bleſſed.

3. I anſwer again concerning Conditional Promiſes, that the truth is, It is at the pleaſure of God, upon what degree of that Qualification he will be pleaſed to beſtow and perform the thing promiſed. It's evident that promiſes temporal in every kind, nay, in any kind, are not performed to all that are righteous, or fear God; No, he does not do it to them that are qualified in the higheſt degree for the promiſe, not to them who in the higheſt degree have been merciful; leſſer Saints that truly fear God will have more of ſuch promiſes, and Saints that are more exactly holy ſhall be moſt afflicted, and truly the nature of Communion with God calls for this. I will hold Communion with that Soul, (ſays God) and that Soul ſhall have much Communion with me, and therefore I will afflict that Soul for every little going aſide: God will take that at the hand of a leſſer Saint, which he will not take at the hands of a higher Saint.

4. God takes advantage to put off or not perform a temporal promiſe, which a man hath prayed for: He takes a ſmall occaſion, according to his liberty, to put it off, and not to perform it. It is a ſtrange thing to conſider the liberty God takes in performing promiſes. You ſhall have a Man break the Conditions over and over, and yet notwithſtanding the Lord fulfills the thing to him: So in Hezekiah's caſe, fifteen years was granted him, and notwithſtanding the pride of his Heart ſtill God goes on to perform his promiſe, for he liv'd his fifteen years. Now that God takes occaſion on the other hand for a ſmall matter in compariſon to put off a temporal promiſe, the inſtance of Moſes and Aaron is a very great proof: When Moſes and all the people of God came out of Egypt, truly the promiſe was without any clog to carry him and the people into Canaan, and of all Men Moſes had the moſt reaſon to expect that he ſhould carry them into Canaan, for he was their Leader, and had brought them out of Egypt, and had endured that people in their murmurings, and ſuffer'd more than ever any Man did in governing them: Moſes

underſtood this Promiſe, and it was that which made him pray ſo hardly about it, and God did deny him upon the moſt ſmall occaſion that could be, Deut. 3. 22, 23, 24, 25. I beſought the Lord, ſaying, O Lord God, thou haſt begun to ſhew thy ſervant thy greatneſs, and thy mighty hand, and I pray thee let me go over, and ſee the good Land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly Mountain, and Lebanon: But in the 26th. he ſays, The Lord was wroth with me for your ſakes, and would not hear me, and ſaid, let it ſuffice thee, ſpeak no more unto me of this matter. Now conſider with your ſelves this Inſtance; this poor Man was the meekeſt man in the World, and had never been angry but in God's cauſe, unleſs in this buſineſs, and then he was raſh with his mouth, and did not ſanctifie God afore them, as God challeng'd him for it, Numb. 27. 14. Would not God pardon ſuch a Man as this, that had been humble, and ſought God? Nay, there was more than all this that made the denyal of the going into Canaan the harder to him, becauſe it was a priviledge the Patriarchs had to be buried in Canaan, Deut. 34. Therefore you that think to have promiſes temporal upon conditions, you depend upon very great uncertainties, for God upon the leaſt trip may take occaſion to cut you ſhort of them. It was the caſe of God's people, Numb. 14. 34. he had promiſed they ſhould go into Canaan, but you fail firſt, and break your word with me, (ſays God) I will juſtifie my ſelf, that I did not perform the promiſe to you, But you ſhall know my breach of promiſe, i. e. You ſhall know that I do not fail in my Word, but you are wanting in your Performance.

5. If you take temporal promiſes, they that live by Free-grace are heartleſs to urge the condition of the promiſes: They are loth to ſay, I have ſuch a condition, Lord therefore do ſuch a thing for me. The People of God that live upon Free grace under the Goſpel, run rather out to ſelf-humblings; and if it be truly examined, it will be found that David's pleading his righteouſneſs up and down, was his pleading againſt his Enemies. There is indeed one paſſage which appears otherwiſe, Pſal. 86. where He deſires God to be merciful to him, for (ſays he) I am holy: In truth the meaning is, I am thy Favourite, I am an ingratiated Saint with thee, (and you have it ſo in the Margent) I am one whom thou favoureſt, (as in the Salutation of the Angel it is, Hail Mary, thou art full of Grace: So the Papiſts make it, but it is, Whom God hath grace unto) and the frame of David's Spirit was to plead Free grace thereupon, Ver. 5.

Object. But would you have us to leave off eyeing all Conditions, and make no uſe of them that way?

Anſw. 1. God often doth perform the Promiſes according to the Conditions performed.

Anſw. 2. God made them to this end, that all that plead the Promiſe ſhould look to it, that they have performed the Condition; and tho' Saints under the New Teſtament are heartleſs to plead ſuch things, yet they ſhould make ſure to have the condition, not as that for which, nor as that unto which, but as that without which God will not fulfill ſuch things, for he doth not fulfill them to his Children without them. Now ſuppoſe thou followeſt ſuch a promiſe, and ſeeſt ſuch a condition in it, and thou dealeſt with thine own heart and the power of God to have the thing promiſed, and God diſappoints thee after all, what then? Thou art made more holy, there is the Anſwer; and if thou art made more holy by ſeeking the condition, there is no hurt done thee.

3. Temporal promiſes in the performances of them are to be underſtood disjunctively; that is, God will either give thee this bleſſing, or a better, either the one or the other. God promiſed Abraham, that he would give him the Land of Canaan for a poſſeſſion; the promiſe was made perſonally to himſelf, Acts 7. 5. tho' he gave him no inheritance in it; No, not ſo much as a ſpot of Ground to ſet his foot on, and yet God had promiſed that he would give it to him for a poſſeſſion, and to his ſeed after him. Here is a promiſe made, and truly the Lord comes off in it, Heb. 11. 14, 15, 16. God gave him a better Countrey, and indeed all the Patriarchs lived as ſtrangers in the Land God gave them, expecting a better Countrey. Abraham had no hurt done him, that he had not the Land in poſſeſſion which was promiſed to him, for he was taken to a better Countrey. Thus God alſo dealt with Aaron, when he

ſaid to him, Go up that Mountain and dye; Aaron was ſhrewdly hurt, for he was carried to Heaven. God does commute promiſes, (as the Law word is) doth transfer them, interchange them one for another. Moſes look'd for that promiſe of Canaan, and as you heard, he dyed and went to Heaven ſo much the ſooner: Nay, you heard how his Body muſt not go into Canaan, it went to Heaven: For who appeared in the transfiguration but Moſes and Elias? Inſomuch as Moſes hath been in Heaven ſo many thouſand years before other Saints ſhall have it. Well then, if thou doſt ask Riches, and repairs in thy Eſtate, and God gives ſelf-ſufficiency, that is, Content, here whileſt thou ſeekeſt a temporal bleſſing, God recompenceth thee with a ſpiririual bleſſing. As one ſaid to another, What ſhall I give to take thee a box on the Ear? ſays he, give me an Helmet, and ſtrike as hard as thou wilt; ſo God brings thee into Afflictions, and gives thee patience and conſolations to bear them, and this is Security and Defence enough for thee. James pronounceth it a bleſſed thing to endure, and that we ſhould count it all Joy to undergo Tryals, if they bring forth patience, Jam. 1. 2, 3. To the ſame purpoſe the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 138. this Pſalm was made upon occaſion of his having been in the midſt of Troubles, (as v. 7. ſhews) Hazards and Dangers from Enemies; now what doth he ſay? Ver. 3. In the day when I cryed, thou anſweredſt me; and how did he anſwer him? he was in diſtreſs, and God ſtrengthned him with ſtrength in his Soul, in his inward Man, and therein performed his promiſe much better.

4. That which makes a further uncertainty yet to Faith, and a greater latitude on God's part to perform theſe temporal promiſes, is the alteration made concerning them under the New Teſtament, in compariſon of what was under the Old. The largeneſs of performance of temporal promiſes was predominant under the Old Teſtament, (when that Conſtellation reign'd conſpicuouſly) for they were helps to their Faith, as pledges of ſpiritual things: Nay, their degrees of Holineſs had ſigns from their proſpering in outward things; thus I underſtand that Pſal. 112. 1, 2, 3. Bleſſed is the man that feareth the Lord, that delighteth greatly in his Commandments; his ſeed ſhall be mighty upon the Earth, the Generation of the upright ſhall be bleſſed; Wealth and Riches ſhall be in his Houſe, and his righteouſneſs endureth for ever: It ſpeaks not only of a Man that fears God, and delights in him, but of one who doth ſo greatly, that Man according to the Diſpenſation of thoſe times ſhould be bleſſed, ſo as that his Seed ſhould be mighty upon Earth, &c. But Jeſus Chriſt being become an High Prieſt of good things yet to come in the other world, (Heb. 9. 11.) And he having obtained a more excellent Miniſtry, by how much alſo he is the Mediator of a better Covenant, which was eſtabliſhed upon better promiſes, (Heb. 8. 6.) as his coming wrought alteration in the Law, (Heb. 7. 12.) ſo it wrought an alteration in the diſpenſation of promiſes, and in the performance of them. Good things yet to come began to be the eminent promiſes, becauſe Jeſus Chriſt is now come, who is the Heavenly Man, 1 Cor. 15. Read the Old Teſtament, and there you find, Bleſſed ſhall you be in your Basket and Store, Bleſſed in the field, &c. But read Epheſ. 1. you ſhall find, that when Chriſt is come, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly things, the bleſſing now is communion with God, increaſe of Faith, larger meaſures of the Spirit: Theſe are the bleſſings above board, and promiſes of temporal things are ſubſervient to carry us thorough the World, and for our living in the World to get more Grace: What did they ſerve Jeſus Chriſt for, but to carry him thorough the World? To this end do the promiſes of outward things ſerve, and it is enough if we have Meat, and Drink, and Raiment, let us be therewith content, ſaith the Apoſtle. They are not now ſo much as pledges to our Faith, as they were to Believers under the Old Teſtament: No, the beſt uſe of them is, that they are means to raiſe our Hearts to ſerve God more chearfully, 2 Cor. 4. Now then you ſee the diſpenſation is plainly altered, and therefore now temporal promiſes are mightily diminiſhed, and impaired, and abated, and check'd.

2. But yet Secondly, They are further check'd by the promiſe of the Croſs and Perſecution. What is the meaning of that ſaying, Mark 10. 29. 30. You ſhall have an hundred-fold in this life? How? with perſecution: Inſtead of promi-

g temporal things, he propoſeth leaving all, and inſtead of all you ſhall ve perſecution. You ſhall have an hundred-fold; not of the things, for they are ken from them: How then is it? In having Spirituals, which God makes to them.

3. Yet further under the Goſpel it falls uſually out, That to whom God eans to do moſt good in a Goſpel-way, he brings things clearly and perfectly ontrary to temporal promiſes upon them; this you ſhall find in the Apoſtle aul, 1 Cor. 4. 8. The Corinthians had leſs Grace; You are full; (ſays he) ye are ch, ye have reigned as Kings without us: We that are the Leaders of you, the inent Chriſtians to this preſent hour, are both hungry and thirſty, and are naked, d buffeted, and have no certain dwelling place; and labour, working with our own nds, &c. v. 11, 12. How many temporal promiſes was poor Paul's Faith deprived ? Under the Old Teſtament, as a Man was more righteous, God ordinarily oſpered him, but now according as a Man is more holy, God ordinarily afflicts im: Therefore now as to praying in Faith about Temporal things, and with a ertainty, you ſee how many ways it is cut off.

1. God on his part finds, and thinks himſelf in greater Liberty, and takes reater latitude for performing temporal promiſes now, than he did under e Law, and he indeed herein deals with us as he pleaſeth: If he took ſuch liberty in the Old Teſtament, (as Pſal. 37. expreſſeth he did) that when the Vicked proſpered, the Godly went down the Wind; if he took ſuch a Liberty Jeremiah's time, that Jeremiah complains of it, much more may we think at he will do it under Goſpel-diſpenſations: Only a little to relieve ou, conſider that God ſeems more peremptory to undertake for Neceſſaries this Life: It is a thing he hath declared, (1 Tim. 6. 8.) Having food and iment, let us be therewith content: He propounds no other terms but ſo; and e reaſon is, becauſe we cannot live without them, we cannot ſerve him ithout them, and ſo he does undertake for theſe things. That promiſe which enforc'd by five Affirmations, and indigitated by four Negatives, (Heb. 13.) I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee; that promiſe abſolutely comes about providing for Families, for ſuch as are married, and have Children, the Coherence ſhews. Our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt ſeems (Mat. 6.) put us off from any vehement ſeeking for theſe things; No, not by Prayer, for e tells us, Your Father knows you need theſe things, therefore do not ſpend thoughts n them, do not ſeek them vehemently, for you have one who takes care f you, and knows your needs; (if one ſhould ſay ſo to a Child, it would make im careleſs) he knows you need all theſe things. All theſe things; that is a ood word, but conſider it is not all you wiſh for that you need, v. 31. If we live, od will provide neceſſaries, and if we dye, if we ſhould dye for him, for e Lord, that is a Priviledge and Advantage beyond all temporal promiſes, eyond all advantages of living in the World, and enjoying all promiſed tem-oral bleſſings.

I might ſhew you how precious our Lives are to him, and that he will not caſt s away: The World lives upon Meat and Drink, but we live upon God's ove and Care. What ſaith the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 4. 11, 13. For we which live e always delivered unto Death for Jeſus ſake, that the Life alſo of Jeſus might be ade manifeſt in our mortal fleſh; we having the ſame ſpirit of Faith, according as is written, I believed, and therefore have I ſpoken; we alſo believe, and therefore ſpeak: What a long while did Peter and Paul live? a Man would wonder that en that liv'd in continual jeopardy, ſhould live forty years preaching, as ey did, (for they dyed within two years of the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem) nd they lived by the power of the Reſurrection of Chriſt. Precious in the ht of the Lord is the death of his Saints. Who knows how he diſpoſeth of eir Lives? Now as on God's part he takes a liberty about performing tempo-l promiſes to us, yet with that Caution to give Neceſſaries, ſo our Faith, ouching outward things, ſhould be anſwerable; our Faith ſhould be at leſs certainty obtain outward things than they had in the Old Teſtament, yet our Prayers

Part II. ſhould be earneſtly and vehemently for our Lives, that we may live to ſerve God. The alteration of God's diſpenſation on God's part, muſt needs alter our Faith.

CHAP. V.

Concerning Praying, and Faith in Prayer, for performance of Promiſes purely ſpiritual. A Diviſion of Spiritual Promiſes into three ſorts. A Diſcuſſion concerning abſolute Promiſes. How this Maxime is to be underſtood, That abſolute Promiſes are to be abſolutely ſought by us: With what manner of Faith in Prayer any Soul may deal with God for the performance of thoſe Promiſes.

PRomiſes purely ſpiritual are ſuch as purely concern our Salvation. There are three ſorts of Promiſes that concern Salvation.

1. Such as are abſolutely abſolute; Abſolutiſſimæ; that are abſolute indeed, Primo Prima; ſuch are all thoſe immediate declarations of God's purpoſes to ſave, and all ſuch promiſes as hold forth ſo much of the Covenant of Grace, Jer. 31. 33. I will write my Law in their Hearts: Which Promiſes God makes without reſpect had to any pre-requiſites at all in Men, as unto which he ſhould have reſpect in his making thoſe promiſes; which God is ſo far from, that in thoſe promiſes he undertakes to perform the Conditions.

2. A Second ſort of promiſes are abſolute in this ſence, that they expreſs a certainty of performance of them, but yet do ſuppoſe pre-requiſite Qualifications firſt wrought by God, and a continuation thereof; and though not for which, yet as upon which, and not without which firſt wrought they are ever performed to any. The Qualifications are ſuch as Faith and Repentance, &c. which do at firſt put a Man into a ſtate of Grace, according to that of the Apoſtle, ſpeaking of Faith, Whereby we have acceſs into the Grace wherein we ſtand, Rom. 5. 2. They are ſuch promiſes as theſe, Whoſoever believeth hath Eternal Liſe, and ſhall never periſh, John 3. 16. and John 18. 36. He that believeth ſhall never dye, John 11. They ſhall never enter into Condemnation, John 5. 24. Unto this ſort belong all promiſes of Perſeverance, and of giving the poſſeſſion of Salvation in the latter end of our Lives; and theſe (becauſe of the certainty of the performance, though made unto ſuch and ſuch Qualifications) I do call ſecondarily abſolute.

3. There is a third ſort of Promiſes belonging to Salvation, which I call Additional Promiſes, as thoſe that are made of giving more or leſs degrees of Grace, and of preſerving a Man through his whole courſe from falling into groſs ſins, and of giving joy and peace in believing, Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory, and peace which paſſeth underſtanding: Theſe I call additional to Salvation, becauſe they belong but to the Bene eſſe, to the better being of a Chriſtian, and yet have Salvation in them, as the Apoſtle's word is, i. e. they belong to Salvation, but not abſolutely to the eſſe or being of a Believer, as ſuch, or as without which he is not a Believer, and ſhall not be ſaved, whereas thoſe two former are eſſential to Salvation it ſelf, without which none is or can be ſaved.

According to this Diviſion of Promiſes, I ſhall firſt ſhape this general diviſion of Anſwers to the point in hand, viz. How we are to act Faith about each of theſe Promiſes, and to manage our Prayers about any of them.

1. As to that Third and laſt ſort of additional things and promiſes of Salvation, they are thoſe that are the occaſions and matters of the greateſt complaints amongſt Chriſtians. We pray indeed for ſuch and ſuch Graces and holy Diſpoſitions, &c. but we find no more performance of them than we do in temporals; and this cauſeth a great Diſcouragement, Scruple and Sadneſs, riſing even unto this, that God therefore anſwereth not our Prayers at all, and that therefore we pray not in Faith.

2. As to the ſecond ſort of Promiſes, which I call ſecondarily abſolute, they ing of the Eſſence of Salvation, and the final poſſeſſion thereof being an- xed unto the Qualifications of Faith, &c. firſt wrought: A Believer that es, and ſpiritually perceives the Qualifications wrought in himſelf, may fur- er by a Faith of Certainty believe and pray for the performance thereof. He ithall muſt diligently attend unto a continuing in that Faith and Morti- cation of Luſts, &c. which are to be the conſequents of the firſt Faith wrought, the end to obtain ſuch promiſes: For even ſuch Promiſes are utter'd with an ; thus it is ſaid, That we are made partakers of Chriſt, if we hold the beginning of our onfidence to the end, Heb. 3. 14. and ſuch is that promiſe of Chriſt, He that endures to e end ſhall be ſaved; and ſuch is the contrary Threatning of the Apoſtle, If ye live fter the fleſh, ye ſhall dye, but if ye through the ſpirit do mortifie the deeds of the body, ye ll live, Rom. 8. 13. So as hypothetically it may be ſaid, that if thoſe that ave true Faith once, ſhould not continue and exerciſe to do thoſe things through- ut the future courſe of their Lives, they would certainly periſh: But yet be- uſe God hath abſolutely undertaken, without Iſs or Ands, to keep and to reſerve them out of his Faithfulneſs, and to ſanctifie them ὁλοτελεῖς, which ord imports finally and totally, (as his promiſe is 1 Theſ. 5. 23.) therefore Be- evers may pray abſolutely; that is, with a belief of certainty for the perfor- nance of thoſe promiſes, and God's continuing to preſerve them to the nd.

3. But, Thirdly, As to that firſt ſort of abſolute Promiſes and Declarations, which call moſt abſolute, there is in Experience found (as well may be thought) me difficulty in the thing it ſelf, how a Man may apply his Faith thereto, hether in an abſolute way, or how? and conſequently, how he may make uſe en of ſuch Promiſes in praying, and wind them into his prayers, and pleas r his Salvation, by vertue of them.

There is a Trite and Common Maxim paſſeth up and down, (but I fear not ſo well underſtood by all) viz. that ſpiritual promiſes and things being ſolute, therefore all Men are bound to pray abſolutely, or with a Faith of ertainty about them: And the ſuppoſed Grounds for this are;

1. That Faith in us being to be anſwerable to the matter and nature of e promiſe, and the things therein promiſed, therefore if the Promiſe be abſo- te, then the Faith ought to be abſolute, and then as abſolute a praying for them ſuch a Faith ought to be alſo; and that abſoluteneſs of Faith required of ll in praying for them, is underſtood to be a Faith of Certainty, or aſſurance hat they ſhall abſolutely, that is, certainly obtain them.

2. A Second ſuppoſed Ground is, That this is a commonly received difference etween Temporal promiſes and Spiritual; that the temporal are to be prayed r conditionally, &c. and ſo with an It may be, therefore oppoſititely all ſpiri- ual promiſes, and the performance of them, are to be pray'd for abſolutely, ithout any If, or It may be. And hence Men think, that every Man is bound ſeek for theſe with ſuch an abſolute Faith as is certainly perſwaded they hall obtain, although a Man cannot aſſure himſelf the like of Temporals. Here judge it conducible to the point afore us, to conſider how that common axim is to be underſtood, as in relation unto our Prayers about abſolute pro- miſes.

1. Let no Man deceive himſelf, that theſe are called abſolute promiſes, as if od would ſave Men without thoſe Qualifications mentioned wrought in them. et not any Man imagine that he ſhould ſeek for Salvation abſolutely, thinking that hough he ſhould want thoſe Qualifications, yet he ſhould obtain it: No, for ſome f thoſe very promiſes inſtanc'd in, are to work the very conditions themſelves, nd are thereby differenced from the Covenant of Works. I may abſolutely ſay, s the Apoſtle doth in my Text, without thoſe Qualifications Let no man think receive any thing of Salvation from the Lord; for without true Faith and Ho- neſs (which are a part of writing the Law in our Hearts) no Man ſhall e, or be accepted of God, Heb. 12.

2. The matter in thoſe abſolute promiſes, which is Salvation it ſelf, and he Qualifications promiſed to be wrought, are abſolute indeed in this Sence, hat they are things of an abſolute Neceſſity, as to Man on his part; (Mark that) both

Part II. Both the things themſelves are Neceſſary, and that every Man ſhould ſeek after them for himſelf alſo is Neceſſary.

1. The things are of abſolute Neceſſity: Chriſt calls them (as moſt interpret that Speech) that One thing Neceſſary; and in this ſenſe indeed, in reſpect of the kind of abſolute Neceſſity of them, theſe Spiritual Promiſes are rightly diſtinguiſht from Temporals, which do not contain Matters of abſolute Neceſſity. It's not Neceſſary to have Honours, Riches, Pleaſures, (which yet are the Materials of many Promiſes) but to be Saved is, for the Man is deſtroyed elſe: So as the things are of abſolute Neceſſity to every Man.

2. Thereupon it is of as abſolute Neceſſity, for every Man to ſeek for the accompliſhment of them to himſelf, for it is his own Salvation: Work out your own Salvation, Phil. 2. 13. of which working there ſpoken of in the general, this of a Man's ſeeking to God by Prayer is one great part. It is an Argument of ſufficient cogency that is couched in that Clauſe, your own Salvation: And thus, and in this ſenſe, in reſpect to Man, theſe things I confeſs are abſolutely Neceſſary.

3. But then Thirdly, We muſt take in God's part too, whoſe Mind in ſuch Promiſes is, that although the Matter of theſe Promiſes be moſt abſolute every way, yet as to the Tenor of them, that is, the Declaration of them, as to the Perſons to whom he intends them, ſo they are utterly Indefinite; that is, are intended but for ſome, and not to all Men univerſally: Which is manifeſt in this, that God doth not write his Law in the Hearts of all Men, as we ſee in common Experience, and which the Apoſtle would have us obſerve, in ſaying, All Men have not Faith. Hence therefore it comes to paſs, that though all Men ought out of their own Neceſſity to put in for a Share and Intereſt in the things therein promiſed, yet as Neceſſarily (I ſay) it doth fall out, that in the firſt puttings forth of Faith towards ſuch Promiſes, none can or muſt think to ſet out with a full Perſwaſion, or an Abſolute Faith, (as in this Argument, and upon this Occaſion I term it) that they ſhall obtain, as if they were infallibly certain that their individual Perſons were Abſolutely intended by God in thoſe Promiſes. No; And the Reaſon is, Becauſe evidently they are not Univerſal Promiſes, and therefore Men cannot, nor muſt not at firſt daſh, or at their firſt entrance into Faith, believe that they are Elected, or be aſſured of their Perſonal Intereſt in ſuch Promiſes. No, But all they are capacitated to do in point of believing at firſt, is, to comply with the Indefiniteneſs of the Promiſe, by a Faith that is ſuitably indefinite as to their Perſons, whereby though not knowing of a certainty they are the Perſons, they yet caſt themſelves upon God and Chriſt, to be made partakers of the Salvation promiſed therein. The Promiſes being made to ſome, (and who knows, or can tell, but God may be Gracious to me, as I have elſewhere ſhewn) they wait on him to find the accompliſhment.

And then indeed after a Soul hath exerciſed theſe indefinite Acts of Faith, turning therewith and thereupon unto God with its whole Heart, then indeed Believers may come to be aſſured, with a Faith anſwering to, and correſponding with that certainty which is found in that ſecond ſort of Promiſes, which I have termed ſecundarily Abſolute: They endeavouring to believe, or to enter into that Reſt, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Hebr. 4.) if they find that in doing ſo they arrive at true Spiritual Faith and ſound Repentance, and that in the Event theſe actings of both prove to be ſuch, then indeed they may be aſſured of their perſonal Intereſt in, and God's intendments of their particular Perſons therein; becauſe then they find that God hath wrought the Qualifications in them, according to his Promiſes and Declarations in thoſe firſt ſort of Promiſes made, unto which Qualifications Salvation is abſolutely, that is certainly annexed; and by thoſe Qualifications thus wrought, their Perſons are ſet forth and declared to be thoſe whom God in the firſt ſort of Promiſes had indeed intended. But until theſe Qualifications be wrought, or whilſt they are but in the working, and a Man's Heart under the Anvil, or but in hammering thereunto; or whilſt they are not diſcerned by themſelves to be in them, they can but apply themſelves with a Faith ſuitable to that Tenor in which God hath on his part utter'd (as in reſpect to Perſons) in thoſe his moſt abſolute promiſes, which as to perſons are but indefinite. And to be ſure, if we will deal with God, we muſt treat with him according to his own way and manner of Revelation: For it is from him we are to have our Salvation made over to us, and therefore this application of Faith muſt be ſuited to the Tenor of the Promiſes; it muſt be even an indefinite Faith, (as I may call it) in reſpect unto a Man's own perſonal Intereſt, yet with a firm cleaving unto God, and to the good things promiſed, to obtain them through a caſting our ſelves upon him, though we be not aſſured we are the Perſons who ſhall infallibly obtain, (for the Event muſt ſhew that) and yet we are, as in reſpect of our purſuance after the Salvation promiſed, to ſeek for it, out of the ſame neceſſity that a Man condemned to dye doth ſeek for his Life. And the Paralel between the caſe of ſuch a one, and of this other, holds very much alike: For if a King ſhould declare his abſolute Purpoſe and Intentions to be, to pardon ſome in ſuch or ſuch a Rebellion, but ſays not whom, though he declares withall he will be ſought unto, in ſuch an humble and ſubmiſſive manner (as he himſelf will be the Judge of) by them that ſhall obtain that pardon: In this caſe thoſe that ſue for it, not knowing whom he intends perſonally, nor whom he will judge to ſeek it in that manner he deſires, they in their ſeeking cannot be abſolutely, that is, certainly aſſured, they ſhall find Grace; and yet they purſue it out of an abſolute neceſſity as to themſelves. And ſo the caſe falls out to be oftentimes in Souls that ſeek for Salvation, (I judge ſome difference may be found in theſe two caſes, yet in this main they are alike) for many Believers tho' true, yet do not, nor cannot a long while judge or diſcern in themſelves, whether they ſeek and apply themſelves to God with ſuch an unfeigned Faith as the Word deſcribes, and God requires; ſo as they are enforced, and yet enabled by God to ſeek him by ſuch a Faith, as the Event muſt prove whether it be true or no; and yet they make a venture of a Believing, and of a turning unto God, (as the conſequent of that Faith) ſubmitting unto God, and leaving it for him to judge of, and to give them the Spirit whereby to diſcern the truth of it.

Laſtly, To move and ſtir up all Men to come to God with ſuch an indefinite act of Faith, God makes an univerſal promulgation of theſe promiſes, tho' they ſhall be accompliſhed but in ſome Perſons, that Men may be aſſured that they ſhall be moſt certainly fullfilled unto ſome, that thus lay hold on them, and ſo they are univerſally made known. He would have the promulgation of them to be univerſal, to the intent that every Man that hears them, finding himſelf no where excluded, and withall not knowing but he may be one of thoſe ſome who ſhall have thoſe things promiſed fulfilled in him, and upon him, may thereupon (and he ought to do ſo) apply himſelf to God by acts of believing, and to prayer for his particular attainment.

2. We ſhall now conſider, with What manner of Faith, and level of ſuch Faith in Prayer, any ſort of Soul may treat with God for the performance of thoſe abſolute promiſes? To the end I may aſſign to every one their right, and due elevation of Faith in Prayer, about abſolute Promiſes, I muſt neceſſarily ſet out the ſeveral Climates that all or any Believers are brought into, or do live in, and according to the elevation of their Faith, muſt their applications in Prayer neceſſarily be ſuppoſed, and accordingly meaſured forth to be.

The ſeveral Elevations of Believers are theſe:

1. The firſt Elevation is of ſuch as are In ipſo articulo, vel apice Converſionis, Upon the point of believing in God and Chriſt for Salvation, and who through that Faith are turning to God, and have been humbled for ſin, &c. without which no Man will come to Chriſt: I plainly mean, thoſe that are now to put forth a firſt act of ſaving Faith, having never done it before; which was the caſe of the Jaylor, Acts 16. What ſhall I do to be ſaved? ſaid he; Believe on the Lord Jeſus, ſaid the Apoſtle: And as every thing muſt have a beginning, ſo every one that is ſaved muſt have a firſt beginning to believe.

2. The ſecond ſort are ſuch as have had (and that perhaps for ſome time) true Faith already wrought in them, and ſome fruits thereof in the courſe of their Lives: They are ſuch as have truly come to God through Chriſt for Salvation, and from the firſt putting forth of Faith have alſo continued to pray, and to ſeek for ſalvation at the hands of God; and yet through God's diſpenſation towards them, are kept under, without prevailing aſſurance, that they are

Part II. are or ſhall be ſaved, although withal there be ſome leſſer degrees of Hopes growing up towards aſſurance, that are added to, and do accompany their Faith more or leſs.

3. The Third ſort is of thoſe that have Triumphant Aſſurance of Salvation, whether obtained by Experience of their own Graces, and manifold gracious dealings of God with them, or further by a ſuper-added immediate Teſtimony of the Spirit, by whom the Love of God is ſhed abroad in their hearts immediately beyond all thoſe Experiences: You have both in Rom. 5. where it is firſt ſaid, Experience breeds Hope, that is, an Aſſurance, (in which ſence the word Hope is there uſed in 1 John 3. 2, 8.) and then further, that the Love of God (which is ſhed over and above immediately into the Heart by the Holy Ghoſt) breeds a Hope or Aſſurance, beyond what Experience gives, which he there calls a Hope which maketh not aſhamed; No, not in reſpect of the continuance of that aſſurance in our Hearts.

Now as touching this laſt ſort, of ſuch as have perſonal Aſſurance of Faith; there is, nor can be no difficulty, how either their Faith ſhould come to cloſe with ſuch abſolute promiſes mentioned, or how they may take ſuch promiſes into their prayers. And as touching the firſt and ſecond ſort, there is often found ſmall difference in the Attainments of their Faith, they being fain to live moſtly upon a meer act of Adherence and Recumbency, without additional Comfort. I ſhall therefore ſpeak to both in a Notion common to both, which is the Conſideration of Men wanting prevailing Aſſurance.

1. There is this General Rule, That whatever degrees or actings of Faith in any of these mentioned, are to be allowed unto true Faith, the Prayers alſo that are put up in ſuch a Faith muſt be allowed to be a praying in Faith to all Intents and Purpoſes, which therefore ſhall be accepted of God, and ſhall obtain, and have power with God, (as the Phraſe uſed of Jacob is) for what the Man prays for. And the Reaſon is clear; for if the Faith be ſuch as wherewith God is well pleaſed, as the Apoſtle's Aphoriſm of it is, then certainly the Prayer put up, though but according to the proportion and elevation of that Faith, muſt be accepted as a praying in Faith alſo. And the proof of this is from what the Apoſtle ſays in treating of ſaving Faith, Rom. 10. 15. where he ſo nearly links Faith and Prayer together, and makes them of ſo like an extent, in regard of obtaining Salvation it ſelf, as evidently ſhews the truth of this Maxim; and to that end he brings together two things ſometimes far remote in place one from the other: Speaking of each ſingly, Firſt, He ſpeaks for Faith, Whoever believes on him ſhall not be aſhamed, v. 11. Secondly, He ſpeaks for Prayer, Whoſoever ſhall call upon the Name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved: And this conjunction of each one with the other, and his preſcribing the ſame influence for Salvation unto each, doth plainly hold forth there three things.

1. That true Faith from the firſt ſets a man upon Prayer for what his Faith aims at, which was his own caſe during the firſt three days of his Converſion; Behold he prays, ſays Chriſt, Acts 9. 11. for now he had begun to believe.

2. Such Prayers out of that Faith do obtain Salvation, which is the matter there ſpoken, and is the great aim of Faith at firſt.

3. He ſpeaking this of Faith in Prayer in general, and ſo of all the degrees thereof, and accordingly of all praying out of all, or any ſuch degrees of Faith as a Man hath attained, therefore all ſuch praying out of that Faith which he hath, is accepted to obtain. And my Ground for this is, that the Apoſtle utters thoſe Speeches of Faith and Prayer in the general, Whoever believes, v. 10. and Whoever ſhall call on the Name of the Lord, &c. and therefore means that all, and any of them that believe, and do call upon the Name of the Lord, with whatever degree of true Faith, ſhall be accepted according to the degree of Faith in Prayer. And in v. 11. (which is the middle between them two Sayings) you have this reaſon of it given, For the ſame Lord over all, is rich unto all that call upon him: Whether out of a ſtrong or weak Faith, whether out of a Faith of Recumbency to obtain, or Aſſurance that they ſhall obtain, which accords with what our Apoſtle ſays, He giveth liberally to every one that prayeth in Faith, (I add by way of Explication of both) be the Faith of what Degree and Elevation whatever.

2. A Second Maxim or Rule is this, Upon theſe, and ſuch like general Dictates of the Holy Ghoſt, I may warrantably conclude, that ſo as a Man's Faith in all theſe three ſeveral Conditions fore-mention'd doth riſe, ſo far a Man's praying in thoſe Degrees of his Faith, or his putting forth Faith in Prayer will riſe alſo. The ſtream never riſeth higher than the Fountain, but ſo far it will. A Man can but pray with that Faith which he hath, and his Prayer ſhall be accepted according to what he hath, agreeable to that Aſſertion of the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 8. 12. It ſhall be accepted according to what a Man hath, and not according to what a man hath not. So that as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of God's judging men at latter day, that thoſe that are without Law ſhall be judged by what Light and Power they had without the Law, and thoſe that have ſinned living under the Law, ſhall be judged by the Law, and the Light and Power they had therefrom, (and in like manner they by the Goſpel that had the Light of it, and all in their due proportions) ſo I may ſay of praying in Faith, he that prays in Faith of bare Recumbency without Aſſurance, ſhall by that Faith obtain what he prays for without aſſurance; and he that prays with ſome hopeful truſt of obtaining, though not riſing up to full aſſurance, (which is ſometimes the caſe of the ſecond Condition) he ſhall obtain according to the meaſure of his Faith, altho' ſhort of full aſſurance. In ſhort, I may ſay of them all, as Chriſt did, Be it unto you according to your Faith.

BOOK I.

f the Excellence and Uſe of Faith. That good Works are not ſlighted by exalting Faith. Of the Excellence of Faith, in that it gives all Honour to God and Chriſt; and that for this Reaſon God hath appointed it to be the Grace by which we are ſaved. Of the Excellency of Faith, as it hath a general Influence on all our Graces.

CHAP. I.

The Excellency of Faith diſplay'd in ſeveral Particulars.

IN diſcourſing of the Properties of Faith, Firſt I will begin to ſhew the Excellency that is in Faith above all Obedience elſe: But before I come to demonſtrate the Excellency of Faith, I will firſt premiſe theſe few Conſiderations to all that I ſhall ſpeak of Faith's Excellency, becauſe Men think Faith too much agnified, and Works ſlighted.

1. Faith in it ſelf is of all Graces the meaneſt and the loweſt, a poorer and a ore beggarly Grace than to love, by far: for in loving God we return ſomething him, Love for his Love; we give as well as we take; but in believing we reeive all from God: ſo Gal. 3. 22. The Promiſe is ſaid to be given to them that beeve; and ver. 14. to be received by Faith. We lay but hold upon what he offers, hriſt and the Grace that is revealed through him. Now as præſtantius eſt dare uam accipere, ſo to love and obey is in it ſelf better than to believe, it is more hoourable for us. Believing is Paſſion rather than Action, for indeed God puts hriſt upon us, and into our Hands, or we would not take him: We do but ſit ill as it were when we believe, and ſee what God will do in us and for us; and herefore God the rather choſe to advance this Grace which is the Weakling to all he reſt. God choſe to ſhew his Power in this Grace; and that which is the moſt oliſh in the Eyes of Reaſon, hath God choſen to be his Agent.

2. Therefore it is not Faith as it is a Quality or an Act ſimply in it ſelf, that we hall or do commend it to you; it is not for any Worth in it ſelf, but as it is an Inrument ſingled out by God to do all by in us. As Peter ſaid of himſelf, having ealed the Cripple, Acts 3. 12. Why marvel ye, or look ye ſo earneſtly on us, as if by ur own Power or Holineſs we had done thus? No, be it known to you, that we are ut the Inſtruments: So may Faith ſay, It is not any Excellency or Holineſs in me above other Graces that doth any thing more than they, I am but an Inſtrument of Conveyance. Thus a Seal of Wax is of it ſelf of far leſs worth than a Pearl or Piece of Gold, and yet it may ratify a Covenant which a Piece of Gold doth not do: Now he that believes, hath ſet to his Seal that God is true, John 3. 33. and ſo the Covenant is ſtruck up betwixt God and him; and therefore it is more precious than any Grace elſe, yet but as an Inſtrument, not in it ſelf.

3. It is ſuch an Inſtrument as in all that is attributed to it, Chriſt, who is the Object of it, and God who is the Worker by it, are magnified and glorified when it is commended: So that in commending Faith, and deſiring you ſo earneſtly and above all to believe, we do deſire you but to ſet up Chriſt in your Hearts above Works, and above Obedience, and to let him be all in all. We deſire you but to magnify God's Free Grace above your own Merits, and what you can earn, and to magnify God's Power above your own. If God had uſed any other Grace, ſome Honour would have reflected upon it, and ſo much have been taken away from God: But by Grace ye are ſaved, and through Faith, (as the Inſtrument) Epheſ. 2. 8. and why is it of Faith, and not of any Works or Diſpoſition in us elſe? Leſt any Man ſhould boaſt, ver. 9. for (Rom. 3. 27.) Boaſting is clean excluded by the Law of Faith: that is, an aſcribing any thing to a Man's ſelf, or to any thing in a Man, is excluded, for that is meant by Boaſting. Did not Faith do all, or if Works did any thing, a Man would boaſt, for whatever Faith is ſaid to do, Chriſt is ſtill as fully ſaid to do as if he did it without the Help of Faith; for Faith is but the bare fetching it from Chriſt, or receiving it from him, or ſuffering Chriſt to do all in me: And therefore what is ſaid to be done by Faith, is all one in Scripture-Phraſe, and in God's Account, and in the Believer's Eſteem, as to ſay, that Chriſt doth it; ſo that Chriſt is no whit afraid you ſhould attribute too much to Faith.

1*ſt*. In Scripture-Phraſe therefore, to be juſtified by Faith, and to be juſtified by Chriſt, is all one; to be in Chriſt, and to be in the Faith, is all one and the ſame; for Faith doth all by going to Chriſt. Memorable is that Place, Acts 3. 16. when Peter ſpeaks of healing the Cripple, he ſays, Chriſt's Name through Faith in his Name had made the Man whole. What he attributes to Faith is wholly attributed to his Name, and to Faith but as in his Name, and his Name manifeſted through it, and ſo his Blood through Faith in his Blood juſtifies; and therefore it is promiſcuouſly called the Righteouſneſs of Faith, and the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt; for it is all one: Faith robs not Chriſt a whit; and ſo to live by Faith, and to have Chriſt live in me, is all one, Gal. 2. 20.

2*dly*. And thus it is in a Believer's Account alſo, for it is the very Inſtinct of Faith, the Form of it, to attribute all to Chriſt, it is not Faith elſe, it is the Property of it to do ſo; I live by Faith, (ſays Paul, Gal. 2. 20.) yet not I, but Chriſt lives in me: Faith ſtill comes in with yet not I.

And, 3*dly*. Thus it is in God's Account; and therefore Chriſt cares not how much he attributes to Faith, for he doth but cloſely herein attribute all to himſelf: when he ſays, All things are poſſible to Faith, (Mark 9. 21, 22.) he derogates nothing from himſelf, he doth not put Faith into Commiſſion with himſelf, but it is all one as to ſay, all things are poſſible to my Power, which Faith makes uſe of. Chriſt, when he had done a Miracle, or pardoned a Man, would ſeem to put off all from himſelf, in ſaying, Thy Faith hath ſaved thee, and thy Faith hath made thee whole: which was enough to have made any Man proud of his Faith; and had it been any other Grace, it would have done ſo; but he knew that that Faith which was in their Hearts whom he ſaved and healed, ſaid within them, Lord, thou alone haſt made me whole. Thus Faith doth truſt Chriſt, and Chriſt doth truſt Faith: So as when we attribute ſo much to Faith, we do but attribute it to Chriſt, and deſire you but to honour him.

Secondly, We will ſhew you the Prerogatives and Excellencies of Faith, which (as the Apoſtle ſays in another caſe) are much every way.

1. You ſhall ſee what it doth, that Works do not.

2. You ſhall ſee that all which Works do, it doth, and much more alſo; and therefore we commend it to you above all, and more than all.

1ſt. It is in a primary Senſe the ſole Inſtrument in the Covenant of Grace, and orks and Obedience are but ſubſervient, and as a Conſequent annexed to it, tho as eceſſarily annexed as the other. Our great Buſineſs in the Covenant of Grace is aith, as the Form of the Covenant of Works lay in doing. Therefore ſtill the wo Covenants, and the Righteouſneſs conveyed by both, are differenced, by doing nd believing only; Rom. 10. 5, 6. and Gal. 3. 11, 12, 13, &c. Acts 16. 30, 31. and e Reaſon is couched in three Words, in Rom. 4. 16. Therefore it is of Faith, that it ight be of Grace, and that the Promiſe might be ſure.

1. That it might be of Grace, given freely, requiring nothing, but receiving: God had required giving again any thing from us as the Condition, then it had ot been of Grace, that is, not every way of Grace, (Rom. 11. 6.) if it had been y any Works as the Condition, then Grace had been no Grace.

2. Therefore it is of Faith, becauſe this Covenant is a Promiſe: So it is called, in that Place, ſo in Gal. 3. 14, 17, 18, 19, 20. Thus he calls the Covenant of e Goſpel throughout in that Chapter, and therefore mentions Faith only as the ſtrument to lay hold of it, as anſwering thereunto; for what is there ſhould anſwer to it but Faith? For tho it contains Commands, yet Power to do what is mmanded is alſo promiſed, to give a new Heart, &c. And therefore Faith is that hich alone anſwers to it, to lay hold on thoſe Promiſes.

3. Therefore it is of Faith, that it might be ſure; therefore it was both neceſſary be by way of Promiſe from God to give all and do all, and to require nothing but ceiving and believing the Promiſe from him, that the Covenant might not depend us, but on God and his Promiſe, and upon nothing in us but receiving and believing the Promiſe. God in the Covenant of Works had to do with pure Nature; twixt which and God, till there came a Breach, there could be no Cauſe of Suſpion of God's Love to Man; and therefore Love was required, and not Faith primaly: But in the Covenant of Grace God hath to do with terrified Conſciences; hich, if any thing elſe than Faith ſhould have been required, could not have been iſed to any Perſwaſion of God's Love and Favour. But now a poor Soul, tho mbled, and ſeeing no worth in himſelf, and a Soul in Deſertion that ſees no Righouſneſs of its own, yet may come to the Promiſe to have Salvation ſure to it ſelf Faith, tho for the preſent it hath nothing to bring to the Covenant. God reires Humiliation indeed afore, becauſe Men will not believe elſe; and he requires bedience after, as that which neceſſarily follows upon Faith, ſo as a Man cannot uly believe but it will follow as Heat follows Light, yet upon believing the Barin is ſtruck up; and tho Faith be the great Inſtrument, yet we ſay withal, that orks are neceſſary to be in the Perſon juſtified, yet not to juſtify. Thus Heat is neceſſarily in the Sun as Light; yet it makes not Day by its Heat, but by its ight. Works of new Obedience are required as neceſſary to the Poſſeſſion of Salation, but Faith is that alone which puts us into a Condition of having the Title d Right to it, by the Blood and Righteouſneſs of Chriſt. Obedience is neceſſaly required in all that are made Sons, and ſo cry Abba, Father; for if he be a Faer, where is his Honour? but it is Faith alone that makes us Sons, Gal. 3. 26. nd tho we are as neceſſarily ordained to Sanctification, as to Faith and to Salvation through both, 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. by which as the neceſſary way we come and are ought to Salvation as the Goal, yet it is by Faith alone that we are put into that ſtate; Epheſ. 2. 8, 9. By Grace ye are ſaved through Faith, and that not of Works, &c. hen might ſome ſay, Works are not required; yes, ſays the Apoſtle, as a neceſſary eans you are ordained to come to Salvation by, which is the End of your Faith, d which are a neceſſary Condition of that Eſtate, tho Faith alone puts us into it; r he adds, ver. 10. We are his Workmanſhip created to good Works, which God hath dained we ſhould walk in. They are the Condition of the Subject that ſhall be ſaed, who muſt be made meet, not the Condition of the Promiſe of Salvation it lf. They are the Condition of Faith, or of the Perſon believing: but as Sight is at which ſaves us in Heaven, by which we have all our Happineſs communicated us; ſo is it Faith that ſaves us here.

2dly. Accordingly Faith doth all in us, till it hath brought us to Salvation. It rries along this great Venture of a Man's Soul ſafe to Heaven, and leaves it not ll it hath put it into Chriſt's Hands in Heaven, till it ſelf ends in Sight. It begins d it ends with us, and ſtands by us, when elſe all would fail.

(1.) It begins, for it gives us the firſt Ken of Chriſt and Happineſs: When the Soul is battered and toſſed in the Waves of Humiliation at firſt, it is Faith climbs up to the Top of the Maſt, and ſpies Chriſt out to get on board him, when all was in Deſpair, and thought to be caſt away: By Faith we have Acceſs into thi Grace, Rom. 5. 2. And,

(2.) When we are in the State of Salvation, Faith doth all: for whenas all Graces elſe would ſoon be overcome and caſt out again by Luſts, and would ſoon be tripp'd up from off their ſtanding, Faith is able to keep its Legs and Standing, Rom. 5. 2. Therefore (1 Pet. 1. 5.) we are ſaid to be kept through Faith unto Salvation. If we were in any other Grace's keeping, we were undone, for how ſoon would all our Love be non-pluſt if that were the Condition of the Covenant? How ſoon did all Graces fail in Adam? But Faith is never non-pluſt, it ſtill truſts in God; and therefore above all Armour elſe Faith is commended (Eph. 6. 16.) as that which ſtands us in ſtead when all elſe fail: Above all take the Shield of Faith. When a Man's Headpiece is crack'd, his Shield will hold, and he will ſafely lie under it when all Weapons elſe are taken from him. Let Luſts, Devil, Hell, do what they will, the Believer is ſecure, if Luſts rage; whereas other Graces left to themſelves would ſay, Who ſhall deliver us? Faith raiſeth up it ſelf; I thank (ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 7. 25.) my God through Jeſus Chriſt, &c. Let Satan roar and caſt in firy Darts, Faith quencheth them, Epheſ. 6.16. We reſiſt him being ſtedfaſt in Faith, 1 Pet. 5. 9. Let God frown and terrify us, and do what he will, Faith can look upon him and truſt him, Job 13. 15. Thus Faith fights it out againſt all Oppoſition. When a Man comes to die, it is Faith that reſigns and delivers a Man's Soul into Chriſt's Hands: Theſe all died in Faith, Heb. 11. 13. and Salvation is therefore called the En of our Faith, 1 Pet. 1. 9.

2. All the Works in the World cannot unite you to Chriſt, and enable you to la hold on him and Juſtification by him; this is Faith's Work alone: That ties th Marriage-knot betwixt Chriſt and you, as nothing makes Man and Wife but Co ſent; tho there be Love and Kindneſs, yet that makes the Match: ſo doth Faith; Hoſ. 2. 20. I will betroth thee to me in Faithfulneſs, and thou ſhalt know the Lor that is, believe in him; as Iſa. 53. 11. By his Knowledg he ſhall juſtify many. Fait on our Parts makes the Match; therefore (John 6. 47. compared with all the fo lowing Verſes) Chriſt calls Believing, eating his Fleſh, and drinking his Blood; wher by we are as nearly join'd to Chriſt as to the Meat we eat. Now tho all the Me bers in you ſerve to many good Purpoſes, yet you can make Meat only yours by ea ing it, and you have but one Mouth to do it with, and no Member elſe can let down into your Body to nouriſh it: So is there no Grace can receive Chriſt but Faith, no Duty, no Performance can help thee to him. 'Tis true indeed, the Union o Chriſt's Part is in order of Nature firſt made by the Spirit: therefore Phil. 3. 1 he is ſaid firſt to comprehend us e're we can comprehend him: Yet that which makes th Union on our Part is Faith, whereby we embrace and cleave to him, and come t have any Communion with him, and it is Faith alone that doth it. Love inde makes us cleave to him alſo, but yet Faith firſt; for Faith works Love; and we ca not love him till we believe he loves us, 1 John 4. 10, 16. And tho Love may clea to him as to a lovely Object in general, yet our Union to him, as to a Head an Husband, offered to be ours, Faith makes. Faith brings Chriſt into the Heart, a then Love clings to him, which elſe it could not do. We are united not only t Chriſt as good for us, but as given to us: now Faith makes that Union of receivin him as given, tho Love makes the other. All Communion too that is betwe Chriſt and us is by Faith; by it we draw near to him, Heb. 10. 22. by it he reveal himſelf to us: All our Fellowſhip with him is tranſacted by it; it is as the Prie between Chriſt and us that deals between us and him for us.

3. Faith makes things it believes real and preſent, and to ſubſiſt to the Hear (and therefore it is called the Subſiſtence of things hoped for, Heb. 11. 1.) and i cauſeth us to have a real Communion and Fellowſhip with the Perſon of Chri daily; inſomuch as Chriſt is ſaid to dwell in our Hearts by Faith, Eph. 3. 27. whe as tho a Man loves many that are abſent, yet Love cannot make them preſent t talk with when he would, tho it may make Pictures of them, and ſo pleaſe it ſelf i them, but Faith makes Chriſt preſent.

4. Faith is that Mother-Grace which begets Children on all Graces, and ſtirs hem up, and ſets them a-work. I will not ſay that the firſt Act of Faith begets he Habits of all Graces firſt; for he that believeth is born of God, 1 John 5. 1. and it elf is a Part of that Image in Righteouſneſs begun. The Opinion that the firſt Habits of all Graces ſhould ariſe from Faith, hath riſen out of the Experience godly Men have had, that Faith did firſt open the Sluce, and ſet the Wheel a going, and ſtirr'd up their Graces, which we attribute to Faith moſt gladly. It is that Grace hat begins all the Acts that are begotten on other Graces, therefore it is ſaid to work y Love, Gal. 5. 6. I am ſure it cauſeth the firſt Love to God and Chriſt, for we annot love him till he loves us; and as to all that Obedience to God which Love works in us, it is not Love ſo much as Faith that works by it; and in this Senſe it is aid, Jam. 2. 22. That Faith worketh with Works. (1.) Faith lets in all the Strength o do all with: The Life I lead, (ſays the Apoſtle, Gal. 2. 20.) it is by Faith in the Son of God. (2.) All the Motives which influence us to work, Faith ſets on: That ſhould live to him (ſays the Apoſtle) who gave himſelf for me, 2 Cor. 5. 15. Gal. 2. o. And 2 Cor. 5. 14, 15. ſays he, The Love of Chriſt conſtrains us: but how? beauſe we thus judg (by Faith namely) that Chriſt died for us. (3.) All Acceptaion of our Works when we have done them, are through Faith that ſtamps Chriſt's Acceptation on them, mints them, and makes them current: Heb. 11. 6. Without aith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God: as Faith juſtifies our Perſons, ſo our Works. 4.) When Love, which is the fulfilling of the Law, falls ſhort, then Faith hath Recourſe to a Righteouſneſs, which makes it up; therefore Rom. 8. 3. The Righteuſneſs of the Law is ſaid to be fulfilled in us. How? Rom. 10. 4. Chriſt is the End the Law to every one that believeth.

5. Whatever Works doth or can do, Faith doth it much more. It may ſay as aul ſaid, in regard of the reſt of the Apoſtles, Are they Apoſtles? So am I, in Laours more abundant; and yet ſays Faith, I am nothing, tho I do all. Doth a Man n Working obey God? In believing he doth much more; Rom. 1. 5. Acts 6, 7. Doth Works pleaſe him? Faith much more; for it makes all accepted: therefore in the oſpel Chriſt is taken with nothing but their Faith ſtill; he ſtill ſpeaks of that, and n one Place wonders and cries, Great is thy Faith. Do Works encreaſe Sanctificaon? Rom. 6. 22. Having your Fruit in Holineſs, &c. Faith doth it much more; is the Inſtrument by which the Heart is purified, and Faith doth it in a more mble way, by going to Chriſt, Acts 15. Therefore when the Apoſtle would exrt them to grow in all Grace, he exhorts them to grow in Faith. Do Works glofy God? Let your Works ſo ſhine before Men, that they may glorify your heavenly Far: Faith doth it much more; Rom. 4. 20. Abraham was ſtrong in Faith, giving lory to God. It ſets up all his Attributes, but eſpecially Free Grace, (for that aith only doth) which God ordained moſt to be admired; Epheſ. 1. And as only aith glorifies that Attribute, ſo Faith only honours and magnifies Chriſt, and is reated on purpoſe to do it. A few Thoughts of Faith glorify God more than a ouſand Acts of Obedience. Yea, the greateſt Glory our Obedience doth reflect pon God ariſeth from this, that it proceeds out of Faith that we ſhould truſt God far as to venture all our Obedience before-hand; 1 Tim. 4. 10. Therefore we both bour and ſuffer Reproach, because we truſt in the living God.

1 PET. 1. 7.

That the Trial of your Faith being much more precious than of Gold that periſheth, th it be tried with Fire, might be found unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the ap pearing of Jeſus Chriſt.

THE Scope of the Apoſtle (from the third Verſe) lies eſpecially in thre things. The 1*ſt* is to comfort them againſt Afflictions; which is the Gene ral, which runs through all. And, 2*dly.* He doth that by ſetting out the Greatne of Salvation, which God hath appointed as the End of their Faith, v. 11. 3*dly.* He Deſign is to commend and ſet out to them (that they might live by it) the Exce lency of that Grace of Faith, both as that which ſhould keep them (as he ſaith, v. 5 They are kept by the Power of God through Faith unto Salvation) unto that Salvatio he had ſpoken of before, as likewiſe being that Grace which bears the ſhock of a the Trials and Tentations which they run through in this World, and overcome them all; which Grace therefore, eminently above all elſe, ſhall be found unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the appearing of Jeſus Chriſt.

It is Faith here he means that ſhall be found unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the appearing of Jeſus Chriſt; for altho he ſaith, The Trial of your Faith might be found unto Praiſe, &c. yet either firſt it is an Hebraiſm, Trial of Faith, that is, Faith tried: or otherwiſe if you take it (as ſome) for the Afflictions themſelves that do try our Faith, if they be ſo precious, much more precious than Gold, then Faith it ſelf that is tried muſt needs be much more: If the fining Pot and the Furnace (as Solomon ſaith in the Proverbs) which doth try the Gold and Silver, and which is caſt away when the Gold is tried, be of ſuch Worth and Excellency, then the Gold and Silver it ſelf much more. But it is not Afflictions or Tentations that ſhall be found unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the latter day; but it is Faith being tried by all thoſe, that ſhall then be found unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, and that ſhall be crowned by God, as of all Graces the moſt glorious and the moſt emi nent alſo. And becauſe that this Grace is a hidden Grace, and the Glory of its Tranſactions are not ſeen, (as an Anchor under Water) therefore he ſaith, It ſha be found unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the appearing of Jeſus Chriſt.

Jeſus Chriſt is the chief Object of Faith, and Faith honoured him when he wa not ſeen, as the Text hath it here; ver. 8. Whom having not ſeen, ye love; in wh tho now ye ſee him not, yet ye believe. Becauſe that Faith honoured and truſted him thus when it ſaw him not, therefore will Jeſus Chriſt, when he ſhall appear, ho nour this Grace, that is, he will acknowledg an Honour to be in it, and give the Crown of all that is in us, unto Faith: It ſhall be found (ſaith he) unto Praiſe, an Honour, and Glory, at the appearing of Jeſus Chriſt. And altho that Faith ſhall cea then, (as the Apoſtle elſewhere tells us) as the Pillar of the Cloud, and the Pillar of Fire ceaſed when the People came out of the Wilderneſs into Canaan: Yet not withſtanding the Glory of Faith, and the Fruit of Faith, and the End of Faith and the Crown that ſhall be given to Faith, begins but then. It ſhall be found viz. for its paſt Service, unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the appearing of Je ſus Chriſt. Now then, having to my ſelf and to you alſo propoſed the handling o the Doctrine of Faith in all thoſe Particulars which are uſeful, I have ſhewn yo ſome of the Acts of Faith, and alſo the Author of it, and what is done for you whe you believe, I ſhall in the next Place come to ſhew you the Excellency of this Grace and what a great deal of Honour and Glory there is in it, and ſhall be put upon it a the latter day. To manifeſt this unto you, let me lay this for a Foundation befor I ſpeak of that Honour that God hath put upon it; That of all Graces elſe, Fait the meaneſt and loweſt, it is the pooreſt and the moſt nothing: But God always kes things that are not, and he filleth the Hungry, and ſends the Rich empty vay: he hath Reſpect unto the low Eſtate of this Grace. It is in it ſelf I ſay the oreſt and the moſt beggarly Grace of all other, if you compare it but with Love, with any elſe. It was Love whereby Adam was united unto God, and not ith, which was anſwerable to that Covenant: and Love hath ſomething whereof boaſt, but Faith hath not; for in loving we return ſomething unto God, for we turn Love to him, we give him Love for his Love, altho he loveth us firſt: We, I y, do return ſomething unto him again; we give as well as we take: but in be-ving we do nothing but receive from God. The Promiſes are ſaid to be given to them that believe, Gal. 3. 22. and ver. 14. to be received by Faith. Now you ow what Chriſt himſelf ſaid, (it is a Speech of his recorded in Acts 20. 35.) It is re bleſſed to give than to receive: So it is more honourable in it ſelf to love God, d to obey him, than merely to believe and to receive from him. But becauſe d will not be beholden to the Creature, and it ſhall never be ſaid that any Creare gave firſt to him, and was not recompenſed again; hence therefore he hath ken Faith, which of all Graces elſe is the moſt empty, (it is indeed nothing elſe t an open Mouth for God to fill) and hath choſen to put Glory upon it: Go ye ys Chriſt, Mat. 9. 13.) and learn what that meaneth, I will have Mercy and not Sa- fice. I find by Chriſt's own alledging it, that this Saying is uſed in a double nſe, or a double Meaning, as indeed many Scriptures are ſo intended by the Holy hoſt: Either that God doth prefer Mercy ſhewn by a Man to himſelf, or by one an to another before Sacrifice to himſelf, (and ſo it is urged, Mat. 12. 7. upon an caſion of the Phariſees murmuring at the Diſciples plucking the Ears of Corn on e Sabbath-day) or elſe Chriſt meant (which indeed is the Scope of Mat. 9. 13. mparing it with Hoſ. 6. 6. out of which Chriſt quotes it) to ſhew that God dehts in his own ſhewing Mercy more than in all our Sacrifices, and that he delights re in our knowing him to be merciful and to be gracious, (which indeed is ſeen our believing on him) than in all our Obedience which we perform to him. And t this is Chriſt's Meaning is plain, for he ſpeaks in the Verſe before of his own ing that which is loſt, and of being a Phyſician to them that are ſick: They that whole (ſaith he, ver. 12.) need not a Phyſician, but they that are ſick. And then he eſently adds, But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have Mercy and not Sacri-

: that is, I that am the Son of the great God, that am the Meſſiah, delight ra-er in being a Phyſician, in healing, in ſhewing Mercy to poor Souls, than in all edience as from you. And in Hoſ. 6. 6. this is alſo added, I deſire the Knowledg God more than Burnt-offerings. What is it in us that in us anſwers to Mercy and ace in God? It is Faith, it is the Knowledg of him. You muſt know that the d Teſtament uſeth much the Phraſe of knowing for believing; as in Iſa. 53. By Knowledg ſhall he juſtify many. And Jer. 9. 23. Let him glory in this, that he oweth me which exerciſe Loving-kindneſs in the Earth. Now then here is the Sum this Text, that God is more pleaſed, infinitely more pleaſed, thus in giving, in uring forth his Grace upon us, in ſhewing Mercy to us, than he is with all our crifices, or whatever elſe we offer to him; and therefore anſwerably he is more aſed with our knowing of him to be gracious and merciful, and ſo in believing on m, (for this Knowledg doth in the Law of it always contain ſutable Affections to d, and is the Principle of all in us) than with all Burnt-offerings. The leaſt ng that God could have required of you, the meaneſt Act upon his being merci-to you, is this; Do but know that I am merciful, do but believe it, do but rely on it. The Apoſtle in 1 Cor. 1. 30. ſaith, That God made Jeſus Chriſt unto us to Wiſdom, and Righteouſneſs, and Sanctification, and Redemption: To what end? at according as it is written, (ſaith he) He that glorieth, let him glory in the rd. Now where is this written? It is in Jer. 9. 24. Let him that glorieth, glory this, that he underſtandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord which exerciſe Loving-dneſs in the Earth (which brings us to the Point in hand;) and it is as if he had d, I'll give you leave to glory in your Faith if you will: Why? Becauſe your ith it is merely knowing how good I am; ſo that when you glory in your Faith, your knowing of me, which exerciſe Loving-kindneſs in the Earth, the Truth you glory in the Lord, for ſo you ſee the Apoſtle interprets it. It is but as if d ſhould ſay this, I am thus great and glorious, a God that exerciſe Loving-kindneſs, and delight more in ſhewing Mercy than in all I receive from you, only I deſire to have this Mercy apprehended and believed by you. And when the Creature comes to apprehend God to be thus merciful, it excludes all Boaſting, the very Law of this Knowledg doth, becauſe it is ſuted to its Object; it gives all Honour to that God whom it knows to be thus gracious, it admires and adores him for it. Faith, my Brethren, it is a Paſſion, it is not an Action, therefore it is compared to ſeeing the Son: now take the Senſe of Seeing; and fit intramittendo, non extramittendo; It is done by receiving ſomething in, not by ſending any thing out. The Eye ſees by receiving, by taking in the Beams of the Light, or by taking in the Image of the Colours from the Object, irradiated by the Light, and not by ſending forth a Light of it ſelf: And ſo indeed is Faith. Therefore it is that God hath choſen Faith, becauſe it is (if I may ſo expreſs it) a mere paſſive Grace. We ſhall know God by Viſion hereafter, and we know God by Faith here, and both are parallel in this: that as Heaven, is but knowing God as we are known, it is but ſeeing his Glory, and ſo being glorified thereby, as it is in John 17. 24. ſo Faith is but a knowing of God, and a giving Glory to him, according to that Knowledg of him, drawing on the whole Heart anſwerably to live unto him. Saith Paul, in Gal. 4. 9. You have known God, or rather are known of God. Mark how he diminiſheth and draws down even Faith it ſelf as low as poſſible: He ſeem'd as if he would have put ſomething upon our Knowledg of God when he had ſaid, You have known God; but he takes away what he gives, You are rather known of God, ſaith he. So that our knowing God hath nothing to commend it ſelf at all, for it is a mere receiving, it hath nothing to glory in it ſelf, no not as it is Knowledg, but from its Object; for the thing it labours to apprehend, it is to be known of God. The Honour and Glory of this Grace I ſhall ſhew you, by demonſtrating two things.

1. The Honour which this Grace is ordained to give to God.
2. The Uſe and Hand it hath in our Salvation. God honours it for both; for God hath a reſpect to both theſe.

1ſt. To demonſtrate the Honour which this Grace is ordained to give to God, I ſhall premiſe, that whatſoever honours God moſt, certainly God will honour that moſt. It is the Rule that God himſelf gives in 1 Sam. 2. 30. Therefore if that this Grace ſhall be found unto Honour and Glory at the appearing of Chriſt, it muſt b upon this Ground, becauſe it hath given moſt Honour and Glory unto God; fo ſaith he, Them that honour me, I will honour.

(1.) Take Faith in the general Nature of it; God hath appointed this Grace to be the univerſal Receiver (as I may ſo expreſs it) of all the Revelation of his Glo ry which he diſpenſeth unto Mankind in this World. Look what the Eye and Light is to this whole Creation, this viſible Frame of Heaven and Earth, and al the Glories that God hath ſtamped upon it, that is the Light of the Spirit an Faith in the Heart of a Believer to all thoſe glorious things in the new Creation, i that new World which God hath revealed in the Goſpel, which the Goſpel is th Map of. All thoſe things which are there revealed, they are all taken in univer ſally, and apprehended by this Grace of Faith. God having made this gloriou Frame of Heaven and Earth, if he had not made alſo an Eye to have ſeen all thi all that he had done had been in a manner loſt, in reſpect of his End in it. So is i in this new World, which Pſal. 8. ſpeaks of; ſaith the Pſalmiſt there (ſpeaking i deed of the Goſpel, and of the things of the Goſpel, and of Chriſt, as the Ap ſtle interprets it in Heb. 2.) in alluſion unto Man's contemplating the Heavens, th Moon, and the Stars, and the like; When I conſider thy Heavens, the Work of t Fingers, the Moon and the Stars which thou haſt ordained. How comes he to conſid all theſe? Becauſe he hath an Eye to ſee all theſe, which doth let in the Knowled of all theſe into his Mind. If a Man's Body had not had this ſmall Member, th Eye, he could not take into his Conſideration at all the Heavens, or the Moon an Stars, &c. So it is here, God hath made a new World, whereof Jeſus Chriſt the Sun, and he hath made a whole new Creation, a new Creature, and revealed world of glorious Truths, which have infinitely more Harmony in them than the is in the old Creation, and the Law thereof. Now this little Eye of Faith whi God creates in the Soul, and the Light thereof, is that which takes in all theſe, wit out which the Glory of all theſe would be loſt. Therefore we are ſaid to behold t Glory of the Lord, in 2 Cor. 3. 9. And as the Eye is a mighty large Senſe, of a mo large Comprehenſion; you ſee it can run up to Heaven preſently, it can go from Eaſt to Weſt, and take in half the Heavens at once: So is Faith in the Soul, it doth draw in God and all his Beams, draws in Chriſt and all his Glory through a narrow Cranney. Faith is a ſtrange Grace, for it doth in this partake of Divinity it ſelf: For wherein lies the Excellency of God's Knowledg? His Omniſcience lies in this, that all things paſt, preſent, and to come, are preſent to him. Faith doth this too; t doth not only take them all in, but makes them all preſent. Abraham ſaw my day, nd rejoiced, ſaith Chriſt in John 8. 56. And Heb. 2. 9. We ſee Jeſus crowned with Glory and Honour. Faith makes all God's Decrees from everlaſting, and the Day of Judgment, and Life to come, preſent to the Soul; it makes Chriſt hanging upon he Croſs preſent. This is that Grace which hath therefore a kind of a Participation f Divinity and Omniſciency in it. It is the univerſal Receiver of all that Glory which God himſelf revealeth unto Mankind.

(2.) I might ſhew you, that God hath made this Grace an adequate Inſtrument o honour and glorify his Free Grace by all the Ways he would have it glorified; nd to honour and glorify Jeſus Chriſt in all Ways that he would be glorified. Free Grace in God himſelf, and in Jeſus Chriſt, who is God's Servant, and Faith in us, heſe three are a meaſure adequate one to another, and in God's Ordination ordained o glorify each other. As Jeſus Chriſt did fully glorify Free Grace, and all the Attributes of God beſides, and ſerved Free Grace in its own way; ſo hath God appointed Faith ſuch a Principle in the Soul, as to apply it ſelf to glorify Free Grace nd Chriſt, to their full Satisfaction, and to detract nothing from them.

(3.) Hence it is that God is not regardful, is not ſhy to put this Grace in Commiſſion with Chriſt and with himſelf, and with all his own Attributes. He glorifies it ſo much, becauſe indeed it glorifieth him. It ſets all the Attributes of God on work, and it is ſaid to do all that thoſe Attributes do, and all that God himſelf doth. It ſets the Power of God on work, and then it glorifies his Power. It is aid of Abraham, (Rom. 4. 20, 21.) that he being ſtrong in Faith, gave Glory to God: And what was it he gave God the Glory of? He was fully perſwaded that what he had romiſed, he was able alſo to perform. It was a Perſwaſion which gave this Glory to im, and it was a Perſwaſion of the Power of God in God for the raiſing up of Iſaac: Hereby now he gave Glory to God; yea hence, becauſe without Faith God ſhould oſe his Glory, therefore the want of it puts a ſtop to his Attributes in their working. As Faith ſets all the Attributes of God on work, ſo it doth give them cope, Vent, and Time, as we ſay, that without it they will not work, they will o nothing. It is ſaid, Mat. 13. 58. that when Chriſt came to Nazareth, he did not ny mighty Works there, becauſe of their Unbelief. Faith holds the Arm of God's Wrath, and of his Juſtice, and it lets looſe the Arm of his Power, and wieldeth nd manageth all that is in God: and God he is not ſhy to attribute all to Faith that e himſelf doth. You ſhall find this in many Inſtances in Scripture. Take that memorable Place in Acts 3. 16. ſee how ſtrangely he ſpeaks there; Know (ſaith he) at his Name, through Faith in his Name, hath made this Man ſtrong, whom you ſee and now. You ſee here that he putteth his Name, and Faith in his Name, both into Commiſſion together for the making this Man ſtrong; and his Name is all his Attributes, his Mercy, and his Goodneſs, and his Power, and whatſoever elſe was mployed in doing that great Miracle to this poor Man. And here now is the Reaſon alſo couched why that God is not jealous to put Faith into Commiſſion with his wn Name, becauſe that Faith gives all to his Name again, it gives all to God. aith, if it be genuine, will not rob Chriſt a whit: therefore in the Scripture you hall find, that what Faith is ſaid to do, Chriſt is ſaid to do, to ſave, and to juſtify, nd to ſanctify, &c.

The Scripture calls the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt the Righteouſneſs of Faith, and he Reaſon is this, becauſe it is all one in reſpect of the Soul's Account, which truly elieveth, and it is all one in God's Account. It is all one in the Soul's Account to y, that God doth it, and Chriſt doth it, and Faith doth it, becauſe the Law of aith, the Genius of Faith, the Form of Faith, lies in this, in attributing all to od, and all to Chriſt, and nothing to it ſelf. While God doth all upon Believing, Faith attributes all to him, it is not Faith elſe, for it is the genuine Property Faith ſo to do; Gal. 2. 20. The Life which I now live in the Fleſh, I live by the Faith the Son of God. But mark how he diminiſheth it: Nevertheleſs I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me. Faith ſtill comes in with, It's not I, even then when all is attributed unto it. It is its eſſential Property ſo to do, and to give all unto God. This it doth in the Soul's Account. And thereupon in God's Account it is all one too. You ſhall find that Chriſt ſeems careleſs what he attributes to Faith. The truth is, this Grace truſteth Chriſt, and Chriſt truſts this Grace with all; for he knew that when he attributed any thing to Faith, he cloſely attributed it altogether to himſelf. It were a ſtrange thing to hear that Faith ſhould be made Omnipotent, that you ſhould make another God of it as it were, (as I told you even now it was made Omniſcient, becauſe it maketh all things preſent to it) which is only attributed to God, Mat. 19. 26. That with him all things are poſſible; and Chriſt (Mark 14. 36.) makes it a Property of God only; Father, (ſaith he) all things are poſſible unto thee. Were it not Blaſphemy now to ſay of any Creature, or of any Man, that all things are poſſible to him? When Chriſt, in like manner, took on him to forgive Sins, in Mat. 9. 3. they quarrell'd with him, This Man blaſphemeth, (ſay they): who can forgive Sins but God only? But now you ſhall find in plain Words in Scripture, (even of Chriſt himſelf, who hath ſaid it, Mark 9. 23.) that all things are poſſible to him that believeth: It is, you ſee, the very ſame Phraſe that is uſed concerning God himſelf. I need not to tell you, that you are ſaved by Faith, and that you live by Faith, and are juſtified by Faith: no, what is ſaid of God is ſaid alſo of Faith. And when Chriſt ſaith, that all things are poſſible to him that believeth, it is as if he had ſaid, All things are poſſible to me, becauſe the Grace he aſcribes all this to, gives all unto God again, it only apprehends the Power of God, is but perſwaded that God is able, and ſo reſteth upon it; this is Faith. Chriſt, when he had done a Miracle, when he had ſaved a Man's Soul, when he himſelf was preſent in it, yet he would ſeem to put it off from himſelf, and to put it upon the Man's Faith; Thy Faith hath ſaved thee, and thy Faith hath made thee whole, and the like. Had theſe Speeches been ſpoken to any other Grace, had he ſaid it to Humility it ſelf, it would have made it proud: but becauſe he ſpeaks it to Faith, which ſtill comes in with its not I, and that God doth all; and tho I live by Faith, yet it is the Son of God that liveth in me, and doth but merely know God, and take in what is in God, and what is in Chriſt, and ſets all theſe a-work, ſo long Faith is ſtill nothing: Tho as Paul ſaid of himſelf, that he did more than all the Apoſtles; ſo tho this Grace doth more than all Graces elſe, more than the Angels in Heaven; yet notwithſtanding, I am nothing, ſaith the poor Soul, I have done nothing, it is not I, but the Grace of God that is in me. And becauſe that Faith doth thus glorify God in this high and tranſcendent manner, by giving all to him, hence it is that God puts ſo much Honour and Glory upon it, and it will be found even thus high unto Praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the appearing of Jeſus Chriſt. And therefore when we exhort you to believe, what do we exhort you to? To ſet up Jeſus Chriſt in your Hearts, to ſet him up a Throne there, to aſcribe all to him, and to go out to him for all, and to ſet up God in your Hearts, and to attribute all to him, to make him and Jeſus Chriſt all in all. This is that is done when we exhort you to believe. So that there is no Danger in commending this thing to you; for the very Nature, the very Law of the Grace it ſelf, if right and true Faith, is to empty the Creature of all, and to give all unto God.

CHAP. III.

The Excellence of Faith in that it is moſt active, and hath the greateſt Influence in the whole Courſe of our Salvation from firſt to laſt.

THIS Grace will be found of all other unto Honour and Glory at the appearing of Chriſt, if we reſpect Man's Salvation. This I ſhall make forth to you by running over ſome Particulars. I will not ſtand to ſhew you the Excellency of Faith in this reſpect, that if there be any Condition of the Covenant of Grace, Faith alone is it, (as our Divines ſpeak) and it is that alone that God requires; but I ſay I will not ſtand upon that; only this is it that I will hold forth to you, that this Grace is that which carries the Soul on from firſt to laſt, and never ceaſeth till l it hath brought it to Salvation. In this little poor brittle Veſſel God hath ventred the Blood of Chriſt, ventured in it the Souls of his Redeemed, the Dwelling of s Holy Spirit, and all the Works of the Spirit; they are all in this brittle Veſſel thrō e Power of the Holy Ghoſt acting the Soul by it, to ſet the Soul ſafe on ſhore in the her World: and it ceaſeth not I ſay till it hath carried the Soul to Chriſt, and put it mediately into his Hands. It begins all, and it endeth all, manageth all till the Soul mes to Heaven. I ſay in this Life, my Brethren, there are two Principles of ife to Mankind, as there is of Life and Nouriſhment to the Sons of Men: The e is in the Womb by the Navel-ſtring, by which it takes in all its Nouriſhment en. But no ſooner is it out of the Womb, and cometh into the World, but it th another Principle to take in Nouriſhment by, and then the other is cut off, d is of no uſe. So it is here; There are two Principles we are to live by for everore; there is Faith, which is a ſeeing of Chriſt abſent; and there is Viſion, which ſeeing of him preſent in Heaven. We are here in this World as Children in the omb, in compariſon of the other, and the Glory of the other differs from that we ve here, as much as the Glory of the King upon his Throne, from what he was the Womb. Now all the while we are here, it is this Principle of Faith that we e by, which is as the Navel-ſtring to convey Nouriſhment to us; but when Faith th performed all its Offices, and we are grown up unto a perfect Man, unto the eaſure of the Stature of the Fulneſs of Chriſt which is for Heaven, then the Soul carried into the other eternal World, and then indeed Faith ceaſeth, and the Soul es by Viſion. Faith is both Nurſe, and Midwife, and all to the Soul, both for e beginning and carrying on, and doing all, till you come to the other World. hall run over ſome Particulars to manifeſt this to you.

1. It is Faith that prepares the Soul for Chriſt. A Man's Conſcience may be firſt a-work in the ſight of Sin, ſet upon by all, and they may humble him, and ing him down very low; but that which ſtrikes the great Stroke in preparing you Chriſt, is the taking you off for ever from all Abilities, and from whatſoever is your ſelves, and out of that Emptineſs to gō to Jeſus Chriſt. Now it is Faith ly that doth this; that only is the emptying Grace which is the filling Grace of hriſt. Tho the Spirit begins upon a Man's Conſcience firſt, yet it is Faith that rfects that Work of making you nothing, and then it comes and raiſeth you up to things in Chriſt. Now as it is a Rule both in the Law of Nature and of Comonwealths, that it is the ſame Power muſt make void a Law that makes a Law, e ſame Power that creates muſt annihilate and bring to nothing: So it is the ſame ith that brings the Soul to nothing, and empties it of it ſelf, and of all things elſe, d that brings it unto Jeſus Chriſt, and fills it with the Fulneſs that is in him. It all but Faith digging downward, and working upward. In John 16. 8. it is d, The Spirit ſhall convince the World of Sin and of Righteouſneſs. The thing I ote it for is this, the word there that is tranſlated convince, is the ſame that is ed in the Definition of Faith in Heb. 11. 2. You know Faith there is called the vidence of things not ſeen: the word is ἔλεγχος, Conviction; the ſame that Chriſt eth here when he ſaith, The Spirit ſhall convince the World of Sin: that is, he all work Faith in them to ſee their loſt Condition ultimately: The ſame Spirit of ith and Conviction that convinceth me of Righteouſneſs, convinceth me of my t Condition; and therefore he adds, if you mark it, Becauſe ye believe not on me: that is the ultimate Conviction that prepares a Man for Chriſt. To take a Man of his own bottom, to make him ſee that he hath no Ability to believe in Chriſt himſelf, this Faith doth; and having done thus, convinces a Man of his loſt Conion ultimately. What is the Reaſon the firſt Promiſe is made to Poverty of Spirit Chriſt, in Mat. 5. 3? Certainly in Poverty of Spirit there he includes Faith, d Chriſt would not have pronounced a Bleſſedneſs but upon Forgiveneſs of Sins, d that is upon believing; yet it is eminently denominated Poverty, becauſe it is Work of Faith, as making the Soul poor. It is Faith only that makes a Man fling ay his own Righteouſneſs, and to count it Droſs and Dung, (as you have it in il. 3.) and to lay hold upon the Righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus. It is Faith that imately ſtrikes that great Stroke in Preparation ſo much ſpoken of; and truly her Preparation will not drive a Man to Chriſt.

2. And then when the Soul is thus ultimately emptied by Faith, and is loſt, it is ith that firſt ſpies out Chriſt, as that all-ſufficient Satisfaction received by God the

Part 3.

Father. When the Soul is in a Storm, and is even caſt away in his own Apprehenſion, when it hath thrown over-board all his own Goods, all his own Righteouſneſs, all his own Hopes, all his own Abilities, or whatever it be; and if God ſhould leave the Soul in that Condition, the Wrath of God, like mighty Waves, would break in upon it, and ſwallow it up: What doth Faith now? It climbs up to the top of the Maſt; O there is Chriſt, I have ſpied out the Lord Jeſus, and it makes out to him inſtantly, gets aboard of him preſently. Therefore now the Entrance into the State of Grace is attributed unto Faith; in Rom. 5. 2. We have Acceſs by Faith into this Grace wherein we ſtand.

3. Then again, tho there is a radical Union that we have with Jeſus Chriſt, without all Preparation, for he takes us before we take him; yet notwithſtanding all the Communion we have with Jeſus Chriſt is tranſacted by Faith. The Union on our Part is mainly and primarily by Faith, it is that which on our Part ties the Marriage-knot; it is not Love but Conſent that makes Man and Wife: It is the Heart's coming off to be Chriſt's, and going unto Chriſt to be his, and to be Righteouſneſs for him, and to be a Head and a Saviour to him, this is it which makes Union, and this is done by Faith. There are but two things that do marry us to Chriſt, as Hoſ. 2. 19. clearly holds forth; I will betroth thee unto me in Faithfulneſs and in Loving-kindneſs; that's now on God's Part: but what is on our Part? It follows, And thou ſhalt know the Lord. There are but theſe two things make the Match. Here is the Faithfulneſs and Loving-kindneſs of God on his Part; and then here is on our Part, You ſhall know the Lord: I opened that before out of Jer. 9. I need not ſtand to repeat it, for in the Old Teſtament you ſhall find that Faith is expreſs'd as there, by our knowing of God, who exerciſeth Loving-kindneſs in the Earth. Now tho that Love doth unite too, for the Soul is united to what it loves by Love, yet it is Faith that brings Jeſus Chriſt into the Heart, and reveals him to the Soul in all his Excellencies and his Glory. We apprehend his Love firſt, or his Excellencies firſt, how lovely he is, even before Love unites the Soul to him. So that Faith is firſt, and tho that Love may unite us to him, as for the Excellencies in his Perſon, yet take him as he is a myſtical Head, and as a Husband, and a Husband given, ſo it is Faith that goes out to him as ſuch, and goes out to him with an Inſtinct after myſtical Union with him.

4. And then, all Fellowſhip and Communion with him to be ſure is by Faith. Unto all Communion and Fellowſhip with another there are two things required. The firſt is, to make that Perſon real and preſent. And the ſecond is, to have a familiar bold Acceſs. Now it is Faith only that doth both theſe things to us, and therefore it is Faith that lays the Foundation for all the Fellowſhip and Communion that we have with the Father, and with the Son, the which the Apoſtle Jo ſo much commendeth; Firſt, it is Faith only that makes God and Chriſt preſent, that ſo we may have Fellowſhip with them, for we only have Fellowſhip with thoſe that are ſome way or other preſent to our Spirits. It is not Love that makes another preſent, it may ſet the Fancy on work to make Pictures of the Party abſent, but it is Divine Faith alone that hath the Art to make God and Jeſus Chriſt preſent. It ſees God that is inviſible, &c. cauſeth God to dwell in the Heart, and bringeth Chriſt down from Heaven, and cauſeth him to dwell in the Heart. There is no more of God to my Soul than that which by Faith it takes in of him: therefore wicked Men are ſaid to be without God and without Chriſt in the World, for ſo far is God and Chriſt got into a Man's Soul, as he by Faith ſees him, and takes in the Knowledg of him, and takes him in ſo really, as Love could not make that Reality; it may ſet the Fancy on work, as I ſaid, to make Pictures in the Fancy, and to talk of him, but the Party is not there preſent ſo as Faith makes God and Chriſt to be to the Soul. And then again, it is Faith that makes us familiar with God, all our Acceſs with Boldneſs it is by the Faith of him, as Epheſ. 3. 1 hath it: Beholding him with open Face, we come to him with open Face, with Confidence and Boldneſs. The Communion we have by Faith with Chriſt, is often compared unto Eating and Drinking, as in John 6. 46. It is ſo for the Reality of it, My Fleſh is Meat indeed, ſaith he. Now a Man hath many Members in his Body, but he hath Communion with his Meat no way but by his Mouth and Stomach, and indeed he can have it no way elſe; the Hand takes it, the Eye ſees it, and the like, but unleſs the Mouth and Stomach receive it, the Man ſtarves ſti

Fai

Faith alone is that which takes Jeſus Chriſt to fetch Nouriſhment from him, makes a Man find the Sweetneſs that is in him, and draws Virtue from him, makes my Soul in this reſpect one with him, and he with me.

5. And then all the Joy we have in Jeſus Chriſt, it is through believing; Rom. 15. 13. that you may be filled with all Joy and Peace through Believing. In John 5. 38. Unto him that believeth there is promiſed a Fountain of Living-Water, ſpringing up in his own Heart, which Faith is indeed the Fountain of, for you ſee it is to him that believeth. He that believeth hath the Witneſs in himſelf, hath the Fountain of all Joy in himſelf; ſo the next Words to the Text, In whom believing ye rejoice with Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory.

And thus as it brings us into Communion with Chriſt, ſo it brings the Spirit alſo down into the Heart. I acknowledg that the Holy Ghoſt comes down without all Preparation upon a Man's Heart, for how elſe is a Man prepared but by the Holy Ghoſt when he comes to convert a Man? Yet there is a Coming of the Holy Ghoſt down upon a Man's Soul upon Believing. The great Promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt which the New Teſtament ſo much ſpeaks of, to ſeal a Man up to Salvation, to give a Man Fellowſhip with the Father, and with the Son, which was the great Coming down of the Holy Ghoſt you read of in the primitive times in reſpect of Grace; he came upon Men in reſpect of Gifts, but that is nothing to Salvation; but that great Promiſe of ſending down the Holy Ghoſt to ſeal up a Man's Salvation, and to give him Communion with God the Father, and with Jeſus Chriſt, and to fill him with the Fulneſs of God; the Coming of the Holy Ghoſt to this Purpoſe we receive by Faith. The Text is expreſs for it, Gal. 3. 14. That we might receive the Promiſe of the Spirit through Faith. And that is the Reaſon I take it, that in John 14. 17. Chriſt ſpeaking of that Coming of the Holy Ghoſt upon the Apoſtles, he tells them, that they had him already, they had him ſo far as to enable them to believe; He dwelleth with you, ſaith he: but there was a farther having of him as a Comforter. Now he tells them there, that the World cannot receive that Spirit, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him. I take it, the Meaning may be this, that the World cannot receive the Holy Ghoſt to come thus as a Comforter, as a Sealer, (which is the thing promiſed there to the Diſciples) till ſuch time as a Man knows and ſees, that is, believes. For otherwiſe if this were true, that no Man could receive the Holy Ghoſt till he knoweth him and ſeeth him, I would ask, how comes a Man unconverted (as all once are) to know him and ſee him, and to ſee Chriſt? By Faith, that muſt be acknowledged: and who works this Faith? The Holy Ghoſt certainly. Therefore there is a receiving of the Holy Ghoſt as a Comforter, and as a Sealer upon Believing.

And then I might likewiſe ſhew you, that all our ſtanding in Grace is by Faith; Rom. 5. 2. By whom we have Acceſs by Faith into the Grace wherein we ſtand; and ſtand by Faith; for as we have Acceſs into the Grace by Faith, ſo we ſtand by it too. And in the Words a little before the Text we are ſaid to be kept by the Power of God through Faith unto Salvation. Mark it, Faith is joined there in Commiſſion with the Power of God: Doth the Power of God keep you? Faith keepeth you too; and as I ſaid before, God is not ſhy of attributing that to Faith which is proper only to himſelf, becauſe Faith attributes all to the Power of God, and gives that the Honour. But I ſay, we are kept through Faith; for, my Brethren, if the way of our being kept were by other Graces, we were in a miſerable Caſe, we ſhould be at a loſs ever and anon, but Faith is never nonpluſt. Adam did not live by Faith, and what then? He had no Acceſs into the Grace in which he ſtood; no, in which he fell rather: but by Faith we have Acceſs into the Grace wherein we ſtand. Faith it ſtands, and ſtands out all Storms, (as I may expreſs it to you;) whenas Waves are ready to overwhelm the Soul, what doth Faith? It leads a Man to the Rock that is higher than he, as the Pſalmiſt hath it, Pſal. 61. 2. All a Man's other Graces are but like Quick-ſands; if he ſtand upon them, he is ſoon ſwallowed up. It is Faith that carries the Soul to Chriſt, who is the Rock, and upon whom, when the Soul hath ſet its Footing, it ſtandeth ſure. If the Soul be in any Diſquietneſs, what recovers it? is Faith: Why art thou caſt down, O my Soul? and why art thou diſquieted within me? Truſt thou in God, Pſal. 42. 12. there is the Remedy. Be you in any great entation, if you can but get to believe, and to ſee God and Chriſt, ſo as that by aith he become but preſent to your Spirits, and that you can ſee that in him that draws draws your Hearts to reſt upon him, your Tentation is gone preſently; it is impoſſible that any Man can be miſerable if he believe. Thou wilt keep him in perfect Peace whoſe Mind is ſtayed on thee: It is a famous Place that in Iſa. 26. 3. And how is the Mind ſtay'd on God? By Faith. If a Man be fallen, what reduceth him again? It is Faith. If you let go your Faith when you fall into Sin, you will fall down to the bottom; as when a Man is going up a Ladder, if his Foot ſlip, and he let go his Hands, what can hinder him from falling to the Ground? When Chriſt foreſaw that Peter would ſin againſt him, what ſaid he? I have prayed that thy Faith fail not. If thy Faith fail not, that will recover all again. If any Man ſin, (ſaith the Apoſtle) we have an Advocate with the Father: Let him go to Jeſus Chriſt, and begin to recover himſelf by Faith, and then let him mourn for Sin, &c. Renew thy Faith and thou reneweſt all. It is Faith that bears the brunt of all Tentations. When all other Graces are under Hatches, and dare not look out, Faith will be above board, and ſteer the Ship ſtill. Above all take the Shield of Faith, ſaith the Apoſtle. A Shield you know ſtands a Man in ſtead when his Sword is gone, and when his Helmet is crack'd; and when all his other Armour is gone, he may lie ſafely under his Shield, for that uſed to cover the whole Man. It is Faith that can deal with the Wrath and Anger of God, and with all the firy Darts of Satan, and makes a Man, when he hath done all, to ſtand; ſo the Expreſſion is in Epheſ. 6. Other Graces in ſuch a Caſe, poor things, they will all ſtand trembling, and cry out, Who ſhall deliver us? But Faith ſays, I thank my God, through Jeſus Chriſt, he is he that will deliver me. And it quencheth all the firy Darts of Satan too. We may in this caſe ſpeak of Faith, as the Scripture ſpeaks of God in *Iſa.*69.16. He ſaw that there was no Man, and wondred that there was no Interceſſor; therefore his Arm brought Salvation. Indeed Faith is the Arm of the Lord, and that brings Salvation to us when all other Graces are at a loſs. It is Faith which can bear out Conflicts with God himſelf. This was it that bore out Chriſt upon the Croſs, and enabled him to ſay, My God, my God, when God had forſaken him. And when God ſeems to be a Man's Enemy, and to fight againſt him, he ſecretly upholds Faith within him to ſtand it out: Tho he kill me, ſaith Job, yet will I TRUST in him, Job 13. And when God who is greater than our Heart, and is able to condemn us, and when Conſcience that hath ſo much Guilt laid up in it, is againſt us, then can Faith have Acceſs with Boldneſs unto the Throne of Grace; or at leaſtwiſe the Soul thereby is enabled to truſt in God.

I ſhould ſhew you here likewiſe, that Faith is the Mother of all Graces: And when I ſay ſo, my Meaning is not, as ſome have ſaid, that all Habits of Sanctification, and of all Graces, they are wrought upon us after Faith, and after the Act of Believing. No, he that believeth, he is born of God, 1 John 5. 3. And Faith it ſelf is a Part of the new Creature, which God works in us. But tho it be not the Mother of all the Habits of Grace in us, which are all wrought in the whole Lump at firſt; and tho God draws Faith out firſt, yet it is that Grace that ſets all other Graces a-work, that ſets all Wheels a going. When God hath drawn out Faith to lay hold upon Chriſt, then it works by Love, it is Faith that then goes out for Strength in Chriſt, that manageth all Motives to move to Obedience, and to live to him that died for me. It is Faith that fetcheth all Acceptation for every Work we do; without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. As Faith juſtifieth the Perſon, ſo it juſtifieth, and (as Luther was wont to ſay) it fulfils the whole Law in Chriſt. Why? Becauſe I have Recourſe to Chriſt, which hath a Righteouſneſs beyond mine, and it throws away its own Righteouſneſs: therefore it is called the End of the Law unto him that believeth, Rom. 10. that is, the PERFECTION of the Law.

I might ſhew you alſo, that it overcomes the World, it overcomes all the Good of the World, and all the Evil of the World; and likewiſe how it ſweetneth all Croſſes. It overcomes all the good things of the World. So Heb. 11. 13. Moſes by Faith ſeeing him that was inviſible, forſook Egypt, and refuſed to be called the So of Pharaoh's Daughter. It brings in Objects ſo ſtrong, ſo vigorous, ſo tranſcendently glorious into the Soul, that it maſtereth Reaſon, and Senſe, and Luſts, and all. It overcomes the Evil of the World; Heb. 11. 35. Through Faith they ſubdued Kingdoms, ſtopped the Mouths of Lions, quenched the Violence of Fire, eſcaped the Ed of the Sword, &c. 2 Tim. 1. 12. Therefore I alſo ſuffer theſe things; for I know whom I have believed, and am perſwaded he is able to keep that I have committed to him.

And when you come to die, (let me but add that) it muſt be by Faith: Faith as begins all, ſo it ends all. It is that which muſt ſtand you in ſtead when that King Terrors environs you. It is not your own Graces that will help you; but if thy oul hath been familiar with God by Faith, (for there is a Familiarity grows upon od by exerciſing Acts of Faith towards God) Faith will reſign up the Soul imme-ately into the Hands of God and Chriſt with Boldneſs: Lord, (ſaith he) into thy ands I commend my Spirit: That very Speech was the Voice of Faith, and it was e greateſt Truſt that ever was. Theſe all died in Faith, ſaith he in Heb. 11. and erefore Salvation is called the End of our Faith, in this Epiſtle, ch. 1. v. 9.

I ſhall in a word make a Uſe of it, and ſo conclude: And the Uſe is but plainly is, To pitch your Hearts upon ſeeking that at the Hands of God and of Jeſus hriſt, and upon exerciſing that eſpecially which will moſt be found unto the Glory God in you, and moſt to Honour and Glory unto you alſo, at the appearing of ſus Chriſt, and that is this Grace of Faith. There is no Grace glorifies God ſo uch as this, a few Thoughts of Believing glorify him much more than a great al of Obedience: This will be found at the latter Day. If you find that this Grace th not ſprung up in you, or abounded in you, ſeek unto God that this Grace of all aces elſe may abound: And to that end I have ſet out the Excellency of Faith to ou. It is the great Work of God; ſo Chriſt ſaid when they asked him, what ey ſhould do that they might work the Works of God? This (ſaith he) is the ork of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath ſent. Our Saviour Chriſt, when e Apoſtles ſaid unto him, Lord increaſe our Faith, Luke 17. 5. he did preſently purpoſe fall on the commending it yet more to them, and ſetting out the Excel-ncy of Faith, and told them what great things it could and would do, to the end might make them enflamed yet more after Believing, and that their Hearts ight be ſet yet more upon endeavouring after it. You ſay well, ſaith he, to ſay, rd increaſe our Faith; for of all Graces elſe it is good to ſeek the Increaſe of that, cauſe it is ſuch a Grace as can do all things, that can ſet on work all that is in od, and ſet a work likewiſe all other Graces.

ow good Works are not ſlighted by exalting Faith alone to have an Intereſt in our Juſtification.

THE ſecond thing which I propounded was to invalidate a falſe Corollary, that corrupt Minds are apt to deduce from our putting ſo much of the Pow- of Godlineſs to Faith, and attributing ſo much to it, as that it ſhould be the ſole ſtrument of Juſtification, of Union on our Parts, and Communion with Chriſt, d more to be look'd out for than all Works elſe. Hence Men take occaſion to ink, that inherent Holineſs and Obedience iſſuing thence, are hereby ſlighted, d that this tends to have Works of Holineſs neglected. But for Anſwer;

1. As for ſlighting of Works and inward Holineſs, we are bold to profeſs, that ke Faith when it beholds with open face the Glory of Chriſt, (who is the Deſire d Delight of Faith's Eye) and when it is a viewing over the Beauty of Chriſt om top to toe, and every Part of his Righteouſneſs wrought for it, and imputed it; and then when it caſts its Eye upon its own inherent Holineſs wrought in it lf, and all the good Works of Holineſs wrought by it ſelf, which to Eternity it all be enabled to do, it will think meanly of them all. Yea, if the rich and glori-s Righteouſneſs of all the Angels in Heaven ſhould offer to preſent it ſelf to a Be-ver's Thoughts with a ſuppoſed imagined Offer of Exchange, it will and doth ght them all in compariſon of this of Chriſt's, which Faith hath in its Eye. As e Sun puts out the leſſer Stars, ſo doth the Righteouſneſs of this Sun put out the lory of the Obedience of all the Morning-ſtars, Saints and Angels. What ſays aul, Phil. 3. 8, 9. when Faith was broad awake, and the Sun of Righteouſneſs iſen on him? then he accounts all the Righteouſneſs and Conformity to the Law t as Dung and Droſs, which our Divines interpret rightly of his Righteouſneſs d Works done after Converſion as well as before. But what (ſays Bellarmine) doth he account the Fruits of the Spirit which are for God's Reliſh, and pleaſing to him doth he call theſe Dogs-meat? It is a Blaſphemy to do ſo, if that be his Meaning But take theſe two things with you, and you will not ſay ſo: 1*ſt*. That it is but comparative Contempt, not ſimply; he ſlights indeed his own Righteouſneſs, b how? for the ſuper-excellent Knowledg of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord, and in compariſon of winning Chriſt, and being found in him, which Faith can only hel you to. And he not only ſlights but alſo renounceth his own Righteouſneſs fo the Righteouſneſs of Faith, that is, the Righteouſneſs that Faith hath in i Eye and Keeping, not his own. And in this manner (comparatively, namely) we find Paul ſeeming to ſlight the Law. It would ſtumble a Man to hear how he ſpeaks of it, as when he calls it, a Schoolmaſter and a Priſon, Gal. 3. 23, 24. an beggarly weak Elements, Gal. 4. 9. The Miniſtry of Death, and engendring to Bondage Gal. 4. 24. But theſe were ſpoken but comparatively to the glorious things that are revealed in the Goſpel, not ſimply, for otherwiſe he commends the Law as holy an good, Rom. 7. 12. as ordained for Life, ver. 10. The Law is good, ſays he, if Man uſe it lawfully, 1 Tim. 1. 8. But if they would ſet it in Competition with the Goſpel, then 'tis Paul ſlights it; and tho he ſays that in it ſelf it is glorious, 2 Cor. 3. 7. yet ſays he, in compariſon with the Goſpel, the Miniſtration of Righteouſneſs, it loſeth its Luſtre, and hath no Glory in this reſpect, by reaſon of this Glory that excelleth, ver. 10. And, 2*dly*. This is only in the Point of Juſtification, and in relation thereunto. If the Statute-Law offers to be brought into that Court, or Works be impleaded there, then Faith calls them out with Indignation. If they will ſtand at the Bar, and give in Witneſs, they may be heard, and their Witneſs is not ſlighted; but if they would have a hand in the Sentence of Juſtification, then they are cried down, and bidden to ſtand by, and hear Faith alone to plead a Man's Caſe.

2. Then a thing is ſlighted when the Reſpect that is due to it is not given it; but when more than is due is denied, it is not ſlighted. A Man ſlights not an inferiour Magiſtrate if he gives him not the Honour due unto a King, nor a King if he gives him not the ſpiritual Honour due to a Miniſter: As the Prieſts ſlighted not the King when they drove him out of the Temple, and denied him to offer Sacrifice; ſo we ſlight not Works nor inward Holineſs, if we attribute not that to them which God is pleaſed to attribute to Faith, or to Chriſt rather, (for Faith is but Chriſt's Inſtrument to glorify himſelf by) if we ſay they cannot help to juſtify or unite to Chriſt; nay, if when they will preſume to do Faith's Office, we ſlight them not if we drive them out of the Court, for all Honour that is due to theſe in their Places we give to them. Indeed becauſe Love had once the Honour to unite us to God as the primary and immediate Tie of Union, and Works had the Prerogative of Juſtifying, Do this, and thou ſhalt live; therefore they are apt to look for the ſame Reſpect ſtill: but Sin broke the Covenant of Works, and made void that Covenant, and then God put theſe out of Commiſſion, and out of theſe great Offices, and ſubſtituted Faith; and if they will be content with their Places, and give Chriſt and Free Grace the Throne, they ſhall have Honour enough under him. We will acknowledg the New Creature to be worth all the Creatures elſe; and tho the Soul be more worth than a World, yet inward Holineſs in the Soul is worth all Mens Souls devoid of it, tho but an Accident: and ſo tho a Logician would reckon it leſs worth than the meaneſt Subſtance, yet a poor Soul and a Believer eſteems it more worth than Millions of Worlds, and thinks a Dram of Grace, a Shread of this, in value above all Rubies, as Solomon ſpeaks. Yea, and if they could be ſevered (as yet in Imagination and Suppoſition they may) Grace is of more Worth than ſuperadded Glory, and a Chriſtian prizeth it, values it more than ſimply Happineſs. Glory is the Embroidery of Grace, and the Stuff is of more worth than this Embroidery if they could be ſevered; yea indeed, Grace it ſelf is Glory, 2 Cor. 3. 18. It is the Image of Chriſt, and called Glory, and makes the Church all glorious within. As Sin is worſe than Hell, ſo Grace is more worth than Heaven, take Heaven only for our Joy and Happineſs there. Paul was content to part with Heaven for ever, (if you take Heaven for a comfortable Communion with Chriſt) but no Offer could have been ſo great as to have bought of him one Dram of Grace and inward Holineſs, and of the Love which he had to Chriſt in his Heart, or of one good Work that he had done for him. It was the Saying of an holy Man, That he would wilgly of the two rather have more Grace here, and exchange it for and abate of deees of Glory hereafter: But yet hereby (ſays Paul) I am not juſtified. Yea, tho d juſtifies us not for inward Holineſs, yet he prizeth us the more for it, and eve-degree of Holineſs added makes us more lovely in the Sight of God, and more iable, 1 Pet. 3. 4. A meek and quiet Spirit is before God of great Price, it is t which makes our Perſons beautiful in his Eyes, and makes him greatly deſire us, d to have Communion with us, and to delight in us; So ſhall the King greatly de-thy Beauty, Pſal. 45. 11. That God delights in one more than another, is, beſe he hath beſtowed more Holineſs, more Beauty on them. It is not indeed t which cauſed him to ſet his Love on us, but it is that which draws it out;

nt. 4. 9. Thou haſt raviſhed my Heart, my Siſter, my Spouſe, ſays Chriſt of the aces in his Church. 'Tis true, we are accepted in the Beloved, in Chriſt through e Grace, Epheſ. 1. 6. and it is Faith makes the Match, yet inward Holineſs
h cauſe him to delight in us, and to take more Pleaſure in us. And ſo as to eve-Act of Obedience we acknowledg a great deal of Worth in it, as that it is a Fruit the Spirit, a Child begotten by Chriſt, (Rom. 7. 4, 5.) and therefore if the Soul zeth Chriſt, it muſt needs prize the Begotten by him, (as John ſays, 1 John 5. 1. caſe of loving our Brother) and the Soul will deſire ſtill to have more Children him. And likewiſe as it is Fruit by Chriſt to the Glory of God, it glorifies him o it juſtifies not us: and what is Grace but making God's Glory our End? and ſo, then a Man deſires to be filled with Works; and that being his End, his Deof Holineſs is infinite, as the Deſires of a Man's End are to be. And likewiſe prizeth it as a rich Treaſure for himſelf laid up in ſtore againſt that Day, (1 Tim.
19.) when he ſhall receive Bills of Exchange in Heaven; therefore a Man is ſaid be rich in good Works there, as well as rich in Faith elſewhere, Jam. 2. 5.

3. Neither may any thing we attribute to Faith cauſe a Neglect of Holineſs and edience. 1*ſt*. Indeed it is true, if we attributed all this to an idle Faith, to a ith that had no Efficacy to change a Man's Heart and Life, and thought that true ith might be without other Graces, as the Papiſts do, and that it might ſtand ith a reigning Sin, and then made ſuch a Faith the Inſtrument of our Union with hriſt, &c. then this Calumny might juſtly be laid upon our Doctrine, and that hich we profeſs: But on the contrary, we profeſs that ſo much Faith as there is, much Holineſs and Obedience too, and that it doth as neceſſarily follow upon it as ght doth from the Sun. When we ſay, (as the Apoſtle doth) that in Chriſt nong availeth any thing but Faith, we add withal, which worketh by Love, (Gal. 5. 6.) d that that Faith which is without Holineſs is dead, (as James ſays) as you ſay, t is, a dead Drug that works not. If we made Faith an idle Hand to receive rdon only, then it were ſomething, but we make Faith a labouring and a work-g Hand alſo, Remembring (ſays the Apoſtle) your Work of Faith, 1 Theſſ. 1. 3.
hn 6. 28, 29. It is full of Works, as Chryſoſtom ſays; it hath all good Works in Belly of it; and therefore Col. 2. 7. the being eſtabliſhed in Faith, hath abounding Thankſgiving joined with it; for Fulneſs of Faith makes the Heart full of Thanks, d therefore full of Obedience. We profeſs that he that lies in any known Sin or gleɫt of any Duty, doth deny the Faith, (1 Tim. 5. 8.) that is, denies really at in Words he affirms, and he ſhews he wants Faith, and Grace and all. Yea, ſay that the way to encreaſe in Holineſs, is to encreaſe in Faith; 2 Pet. 3. 18.
ow in Grace, and in the Knowledg of Jeſus Chriſt: This is the Root; water that, d you will be fruitful. The more Faith there is, the more Love there is too; and more Love, the more a Man is conſtrained to love God again, and that Love is larious and deſirous to pleaſe him, ſo as Works do neceſſarily follow Faith, not ne-ſtate Infallibilitatis, only as Fruit doth from a good Tree, and theſe are Fruits of Spirit, but in a ſweet manner, neceſſitate coactionis, for Love conſtrains. And the Grace revealed teacheth the Underſtanding by a logical Illation to deny Un-dlineſs, Tit. 2. 12. ſo it teacheth the Heart by a phyſical Inſtinct to love God en believed, and to mortify Sin, and to put off Corruption. If you have learned been taught the Truth as it is in Jeſus, you will put off the Old Man, for if you ow Chriſt as in Truth he is to be known, that will follow, Epheſ. 4. 21, 22.
d indeed not Chriſt only, but Chriſt apprehended by Faith, doth it, and muſt ds do it when he is beheld by Faith. As the Sun heats through a Burning-glaſs, oth Chriſt, when he is let in to the Heart by Faith, change it; and therefore

(2 Cor. 3. 18.) we are ſaid to be changed into his Image by beholding his Glory, b the Spirit that is in him. And that is one Reaſon among others why we mak Faith to be the primary Grace, becauſe it virtually contains all the other in it. A Love is ſaid to be the fulfilling of the Law, (Rom. 13. 8.) and ſo contains all th Commandments; Thou ſhalt not kill, Thou ſhalt not ſteal, &c. (and if there be an other Commandment, it is comprehended in this word, Thou ſhalt love thy Neig bour, (as the Apoſtle ſays) it is recapitulated, reduced to thoſe as to the Head, th Sum of all, that virtually contains all) ſo I ſay of Believing, that it alone is the fu filling of the Goſpel, and it virtually contains Love and all Works elſe: For the Ob ject of Faith is Chriſt as he is preſented to us in the Goſpel: now he is preſented n as Juſtification only, but as Sanctification alſo; therefore he that takes Chriſt as h is given, takes Chriſt for both, and Chriſt is made both, and he doth turn to hi as well as believe in him in that very taking him. Therefore Faith is receivin Chriſt as a Lord, and Repentance is walking in him, Col. 2. 7. and therefore Re pentance is call'd a turning to Chriſt, 1 Pet. 2. 25. As when a Man takes a Plac on him, it is ſuppoſed he ſubjects himſelf to the Conditions and Work required i it: As when a Man marries a Wife, it is ſuppoſed he will love her; ſo when a Ma receives Chriſt as the Truth is in him, it is ſuppoſed he is to obey him; therefore i is call'd the Obedience of Faith, for all Obedience is ſpoken in that one word, Joh 6. 38. when they ask'd what they ſhould do to work the Works of God, Chri tells them, This is the Work of God, to believe; they meant all Works: and he an ſwers the Queſtion by pointing to this one Work, as containing all Works el in it.

Of the Properties of Faith.

BOOK II.
The Difficulty of Faith. That it is above all the Powers and Faculties in Man. That all which is in Man is ſo far from enabling him to believe, that it doth withſtand his Believing. That Faith is the Work of the alone Mighty Power of God.

CHAP. I.
Of the Difficulty of Faith; how hard it is to attain to believe.

NOW that I have ſhewn you the Uſe and Excellency of this Grace of Faith, I will diſcover to you the Difficulty to attain it; and this is uſeful to be done both to make Men the more to ſeek out for it, as alſo to go out of themſelves to God to work it. And it is indeed neceſſary, becauſe elſe Men will reſt in an eaſy ſlight Faith, which is always a falſe Faith; for naturally Men do imagine it the eaſieſt of all things elſe required in us to Salvation, that it is the eaſieſt thing of all the reſt to believe, and they wonder that any ſhould make any Difficulty in it. Men think if they could but do other things as well as believe, they ſhould do well enough: To pray, and to keep the Sabbath, and to part with Luſts and beloved Sins, theſe things indeed are hard and difficult, and to a Man impoſſible; but to believe in Chriſt for Salvation, this they make nothing of; and whatever they do, they will ſurely believe and never deſpair; and if they come to a poor Soul that is any whit troubled, they rate him, and uſe to ſay, Thou art a Fool indeed, canſt not believe? And hence of all Works elſe Men mind this of Faith the leaſt. They make a Buſineſs of it to be humbled, and to have Strength to perform Duties; but to believe, they think that would eaſily follow, if they could but do other things that God requires. And hence alſo Men do wonder ſo at ſuch poor Souls as are humbled and cut off from carnal Hopes, that they ſhould keep ſuch a do and ſuch a toil to get Chriſt, who is the Object of Faith, and to lay hold upon Chriſt, which is the main Act of Faith; that they ſhould run up and down from this Ordinance to that in ſuch a reſtleſs manner, turmoil themſelves about obtaining him, as if there were any queſtion to be made of having him at any time, or any difficulty in it. What need then is there (ſay they) of ſo many Complaints of the want of Chriſt? of ſo many Heart-breakings and Pantings after him? of ſuch troubling of Miniſters how to obtain him? Men wonder at this becauſe they know not, and aſſent not to the Power and Greatneſs of the Work of Faith.

Now this Difficulty of the Work of Faith might in the general, by many ways, be made good. As,

1. From ſetting forth to you the Excellency, and Preciouſneſs, and Glory of this Grace, which are two Epithets: Peter gives it, 1 Pet. 1. 7. and Difficilia pulchra, the moſt excellent things are difficult to compaſs.

2. From the wonderful Effects of it, and Privileges we obtain by it. It is that Grace which God alone hath put in truſt to give Livery, and Seiſin, and Poſſeſſion of Chriſt and Heaven, and all things elſe. It is that Elixir, the leaſt Dram whereof turns the Heart of Stone into a Heart of Fleſh, brings Chriſt down from Heaven into the Heart, makes uſe of all the Grace, Power, Vertue, that is in him; which only can command it, and doth do it; which can do all that God's Attributes can do, having all God's Attributes, Wiſdom, Power, Mercy, &c. to uſe, and manage, and ſet awork for its own and the Churches Good. Faith of Miracles did caſt out Devils, removed Mountains, brought down Fire from Heaven, healed Diſeaſes; but juſtifying Faith doth more. It is the greateſt Wonder-worker in the World; it reſiſts Satan, quencheth all his Darts, bears the ſtreſs of all Temptations, overcomes the World, and therefore it ſelf muſt needs be difficult.

3. I might demonſtrate this to you by comparing Faith with all other Works to be wrought as neceſſary to Salvation. We will only ſet it by that which of all other, is the eaſieſt, and that is to humble Men, and pull down their Plumes and proud Thoughts. When Men think themſelves to be rich, and to have need of nothing, then to ſee themſelves poor, and blind, and miſerable, and naked, how hard is it? What Towers doth Self-Righteouſneſs erect? What high Thoughts are elevated by Self-flattery? and how ſtrongly doth carnal Reaſon fortify all theſe? How many Weapons of Warfare hath God prepared, and doth he uſe to batter down theſe? And how many Shifts, and Shelters, and Burroughs, hath the Heart to fly unto? Until all theſe be ſtopp'd the Heart is not taken, and to ſtop all theſe is out of the Power, Wiſdom and Foreſight of any Man, and it muſt be the Spirit muſt do it. Now if this be ſo difficult, then to bring Men to believe muſt be much more; for beſides, all this forementioned is but to prepare for believing. And if all this muſt be done to prepare the Way for Chriſt, what Difficulty is it to bring Chriſt into the Heart? And indeed if then it were eaſy, and Chriſt would come alone, yet inaſmuch as the Work that makes way for it is ſo difficult, in that reſpect, if in no other, Faith might be ſaid to be difficult alſo. Yet beſides, all this is but deſtroying and pulling down; and we ſee in the Works of Art which Men are able to do, it is eaſier to deſtroy than to build up, to wound than to heal, to cut and break off from the old Stock than to ingraft into the new, to ſlay than to make alive and bring a new Soul in; and yet ſuch is the Work of Faith in compariſon of the other. And moreover, thus to humble Men, there is much Aſſiſtance in a Man's own Heart to further it. There is a Conſcience in him not capable only, but ready to convince him if he would but hear it ſpeak. There is Matter enough might be pick'd and alledged out of his Heart and Life to condemn him, and perſwade him that his Eſtate is miſerable and damnable, if but produced; and therefore at the day of Death it is ſo eaſy to perſwade Men to ſuch Thoughts, and at the day of Judgment they will be eaſily convinc'd. And this State of Sin and Wrath is the common Condition of all Men, and was ſurely every Man's once; ſo as it is a wonder it ſhould be ſo hard to convince Men of it, for to pull down this Houſe ſhould ſeem to be a Matter of no great Difficulty, for it is ruinous, and apt to fall of it ſelf; nay, would fall but for falſe Supports put under it to hold it up. But to bring Men to believe, there is no Principle in Men that hath any Power to give Aſſiſtance to it, but it muſt be wrought anew, there is nothing to be raiſed out of what is in a Man's ſelf that can give any ground for it, for it is founded upon nothing in Man's ſelf: And it is the Condition but of a few to obtain Chriſt and this precious Faith; for all Men have not Faith, nor never had, nor never ſhall, becauſe it is the Faith of God's Elect.

4. To empty out of a Man's Heart his falſe Faith, and to convince him he is Unbeliever, how hard is it? The Spirit muſt convince the World of Unbelief, John 16. 9. The Law, as it required not Faith, ſo it diſcovers not Unbelief: as it is Sin againſt the Goſpel, ſo the Goſpel diſcovers it; and it is a ſtill Sin that lurks and makes no Noiſe, for it ſhews not it ſelf in poſitive Acts, as Envy, Uncleanneſs, but in a privative way, and ſo goes ſtilly on, ſteals the Heart away from God and Chriſt, and by a bare doing nothing doth all, and gives way to the reign and ſtirring of all Luſts, which therefore are perceived, but not it. If therefore to convince the Heart of Unbelief be ſo difficult, which yet is in the Heart already, then to bring in Faith, to make Faith anew in the Heart, muſt be much more difficult; and if to cauſe the Heart to ſee Faith when it is wrought coſt ſo many Years Search in many poor Souls, what is it to work it?

But to let ſuch as theſe and many other Demonſtrations go, we will reduce the main Grounds that may demonſtrate this Difficulty of effecting Faith in the Heart to theſe two Heads:

1. Let us conſider what is done by God for a Man in Heaven without him, when Faith is wrought.

2. What Unability, yea and Obſtacles, there are to the Work of Faith within a Man.

1ſt. If the Difficulty lay only in regard of what was to be wrought in us, it were nough, (as the ſecond Head will abundantly diſcover) but beſides this, at the beſtowing Faith, and at the Celebration of this great Union by Faith between Chriſt nd us, there muſt be a ſpecial Conſent and Concurrence, and Joint-meeting of all hree Perſons in the Trinity when this Match is made. As God called a Council hen he made Man, (Let us make Man, ſays he, Gen. 1.) ſo there is as ſolemn a Council called of all the three Perſons when this new Man is made, and eſpecially t the Work of Faith, for then Chriſt is beſtowed. Conjunctions of Sun and Moon re not every day, eſpecially not in one Climate, eſpecially not great Conjunctions f the Planets. Now it is at a great Conjunction of the whole Trinity, and when heir ſpecial Conſent is that Chriſt ſhall be beſtowed upon ſuch a Soul, it is then on- y, and at ſuch a time that Faith is wrought, and in ſuch a Soul only. Tho Chriſt e offered at other times by us Miniſters with Warrant from God, yet at that time hen Faith is wrought he muſt be actually given to thee, and not for thee only. e was given for thee from the beginning of the World, and upon the Croſs, but ow he is actually given to thee, and thou to him. The Father as a Father ſtands y, and ſays in Heaven, Son, I give this Soul to thee, to wed and betroth to thy lf for ever, take him and own him as thy own from everlaſting; and therefore ys Chriſt, John 6. 37. All that the Father giveth me ſhall come to me. A Deed of iſt, and a Delivery, is paſt by God the Father of the Soul into Chriſt's Hands, d of Chriſt to the Soul by him alſo; Take (ſays God) this Chriſt my Son for ine, with all that he and I am worth. There is a giving of Chriſt before the Soul ceives him, and a giving de præſenti, in the preſent time, as diſtinguiſhing it from at which was from everlaſting. And Jeſus Chriſt, as a loving Huſband, be- ows himſelf, and embraceth the poor Soul as his, which he had formerly redeemed his Blood, but hitherto had lived without him. He apprehends or embraceth e Soul firſt e're we apprehend him, Phil. 3. 12. As he loved us firſt e're we love m, ſo he muſt apprehend us firſt e're we can apprehend him; and therefore our pprehenſion of him by Faith is to apprehend that for which we are apprehended; e give up our ſelves to Chriſt, becauſe he gives himſelf firſt to us. And then fur- ermore, Chriſt puts forth his Arm from Heaven, viz. the Holy Ghoſt, as the iner together of both, and who is called the Arm of God in working Faith, Iſa. . 1. He is ſent into the Heart, Gal. 4. 6. and he creates Hands in us to compre- nd Chriſt again, who apprehends us, and to embrace him in the Promiſe who h now embraced us, Heb. 11. 13. and gladly to embrace him, and not to let him ; and having him now hand in hand, we have Manuduction, we are led by the nd by Chriſt to the Father through the Spirit, Epheſ. 2. 18. who therefore joined r Hands together. Now to get all the three Perſons thus joined at once effectu- y and actually to beſtow Chriſt and the Spirit of Faith upon a Man, is not within y Man's Command. God indeed ſtands ready to do it at all times when the Word preached and Chriſt offered; but actually thus to do it, this is rare. It is not ompliſh'd to the Elect at all times, not till the Fulneſs of Time of Calling comes, to any other but them. Faith is a receiving Chriſt, and until the Time comes t the Father actually beſtows Chriſt on thee, thou canſt not receive him; yea, he muſt put his Hand into thy Hands too; John 3. 27. A Man can receive no- g unleſs it be given him from Heaven : and that thou doſt receive him, and haſt a Heart

Part 3. Heart to do it, that muſt be given thee. And however Men may think the leaſt Obſtacle of Faith to lie in this, becauſe God is ready to do all this to every Ma when the Goſpel is preached, yet when Chriſt gives the Reaſon why ſome believed not and others did, he reſolves it into this, John 6. 36, 37. I ſaid to you, that you have ſeen me, and believe not: Why? All that the Father giveth me ſhall come to me: and ver. 64. giving the Reaſon why Judas believed not, therefore it was (ſaith he) I ſpake to you of this giving of the Father, both of you to me, and me to you, and of Faith to you to come unto me. And this is the Reaſon why the Elect have not Faith at all times wrought. There is a Fulneſs of Time for drawing and knitting a Soul to Chriſt, as there was for Chriſt to take Fleſh: And canſt thou appoin the Time of this their Meeting? Canſt thou ſend forth, and haſt thou Power of calling this great general Council together when thou wilt? Canſt thou move God to give his Son at this time to thee, or Chriſt now to take Poſſeſſion of thee? No, all is a Gift, and actually then beſtowed (tho given afore) when Faith is wrought. This Match muſt be concluded in Heaven e're in thy Heart, and the Father muſt ſay Amen to it, the Son Amen to it, and the Holy Ghoſt Amen to it, e're thy Heart can ſay Amen to it; and therefore think not that it is an eaſy Matter to believe.

2dly. If you conſider what Unability, yea what Obſtacles are in the Heart it ſelf ſavingly to believe, you will grant it is difficult.

1. There is nothing in the Heart to help towards it.
2. There is all in the Heart, and without the Heart, againſt it.

(1.) There is nothing in the Heart that induceth it to believe. There is no Principle to promote it and help it forwards.

1ſt. To clear this, conſider, that it is true (as all grant) that we have a poſſe remotum, a remote Capability; we have Faculties wherein this Faith may be engrafted, ſo that God ſhall not need to add a new Faculty into the Soul: but this Will and Underſtanding of ours which was apprehenſive of, and conformable to the Law, is the ſame which is to apprehend Chriſt, and to be made conformable to the Obedience of Faith; and the ſame natural Faculties are the Subjects of both. There need not a new Finger to be added to the Hand to apprehend Chriſt withal; and there are no more Faculties in the Soul when it is regenerated, than when it was in Unbelief, only they are endued with new Powers and Abilities.

2dly. But yet ſome affirm, and thoſe ſuch as are godly and judicious, great Divines, that tho new Faculties are not added, yet the Underſtanding and Will of Adam, in the State even of pure Nature, wanted that Habit or Principle whereby Believers are enabled to believe in Chriſt. To believe and put Truſt in God as a faithful Creator, he had Power to do, but not in Chriſt as a Mediator. So that as the way of Salvation by Chriſt is new, and contrary to that whereby Adam was to attain to Life, ſo there muſt be a new Principle to attain it, a new Spring which might turn the Stream of all the Faculties from looking to be ſaved by doing, to which they naturally tend, and which might direct a Man to glorify God by believing. It is a new Inſtinct to carry the Soul of it ſelf to Chriſt, as before it was carried out to Works. As the Law of Faith, and the Law of Works are different, Rom. 3. 27. and this Law of Faith is a new Law, ſo it was not written in Adam's Heart. This Aſſertion I confeſs, if it could be clearly proved, would argue Faith to be exceeding difficult indeed, as being not only out of the Reach and Power of corrupt Nature, but of pure Nature alſo. But this I liſt not now to diſpute.

3dly. However, whether it was in Adam's Power to believe, or not, yet ſure I am, that the Objects propounded to be believed are of a higher Difficulty, infinitely higher than any which that State was capable of. Adam in Innocency could not have been ſet ſo hard and ſublime a Task and Exerciſe as to believe in Chriſt is; and all his other Leſſons given him to learn were eaſy in compariſon of this. So that ſuppoſe we have no other Principles than what we had afore in Adam, yet this Faith is a difficulter piece of Service than he was ſet about: for example; for Adam to believe that God made him and the World, (which was a point of Faith to him as well as to us, tho the World was not ſix Days ſtanding, for the making of it was not a thing to him ſeen, and therefore it is reckoned as an Act of Faith, Heb. 11. 3.) this was eaſy in compariſon of our believing God himſelf to be made Man, and to come down into the World clothed with our Frailties. This would have put all the Faith

him to a ſtand, and made him ſtretch his Eye-ſtrings, for the Angels themſelves ut out their Necks to behold it. So to believe that the Soul that ſins ſhall die, and at on that day he did eat of the forbidden Fruit he muſt die the Death, was eaſy r him, for if by doing he lived, he might well believe that by tranſgreſſing he ould die; and yet his Faith was eaſily overturn'd in this, he believed it not long, nd therefore fell. But to believe that God would give, or hath given his Son to eath, and that God would make him Sin who knew no Sin, this would have ſtaggered and amazed his Faith. So for him to believe that whilſt he pleaſed God in all ings he ſhould continue in his Favour, and live by doing ſo, and be juſtified by it, as eaſy; for his own Senſe of God's Love brought into his Heart, and maintained y Obedience, might perſwade him to it, and he had a Sacrament of the Tree of ife to confirm him in it, and God's remunerative Juſtice might aſſure it to him: ut to believe that God will and doth juſtify an ungodly Perſon, and account him as ighteous as the Angels, would well nigh have poſed, if not non-pluſt his Faith. nd further, to believe that when that ungodly Perſon to be juſtified hath not one ram of Power to pleaſe God with, yet he ought to live in another, and to have a rinciple of Life and Grace out of himſelf, and to have his Life and Abilities hid in nother, fetch'd from another who lives in him, and all to be fetch'd by believing, is would have been a Paradox in Adam's Divinity, and would well-nigh have verthrown it, for it croſſed and contradicted the Faith which he had in that his ſtate, which was maintained by a ſtock of Grace in himſelf committed to his wn Hands to diſpoſe of: As the Pſalmiſt ſaid, I thought to underſtand this, and it as too high for me; ſo may I ſay, when he ſhould have attempted to believe this, e would have found Load enough to charge his Faith with, if it had not been too igh for him. When our Saviour Chriſt (John 3.) conferred with Nicodemus bout the eaſy and moſt familiar things which concerned Salvation, the Truth of hich even earthly Light might convince him of, as that what is born of the Fleſh is leſh; and therefore corrupt Man's Nature is ſo: Nature and Senſe might have inſtructed him in all this, and in a farther Truth alſo, viz. that therefore if ever this Nature enters Heaven, it muſt be changed and born again; and that Image which t firſt was loſt muſt be reſtored. He that heard of the State of Innocency, would ave eaſily aſſented unto this, that the ſame Image muſt be renewed e're God accepts us, and yet this ſets Nicodemus his Mind in an uproar, John 3. 12. and yet heſe things Chriſt tells him were but earthly in compariſon, and if ye believe not heſe, (ſaith he) how ſhall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things? Now what were hoſe heavenly things but the Truths of the Goſpel which are neceſſary to be believed, which Chriſt brought down from Heaven, becauſe they had never grown in Adam's Garden, who was a Man of the Earth, earthly? And he inſtanceth in ſome f them in the following Verſes; he inſtanceth in the humane and divine Nature f Chriſt, and their Union, and the Doctrine of Faith, and in being cured by believing on him, as they in the Wilderneſs were by the brazen Serpent; he inſtanceth n that amazing thing alſo, that God ſhould ſo love the World as to give his only begotten Son, that whoever believeth on him ſhould not periſh. Now to believe heſe and the like things, muſt be by a Power derived from Heaven.

4thly. But ſure I am, that whether Adam had ſuch a Power, yea or no, then, yet ow in corrupt Nature it is utterly loſt and gone: For beſides the general Reaſon hat the whole Image of God is loſt, there was a ſpecial Reaſon why he ſhould oſe this of Faith above any other Part, for he fell by Unbelief, and therefore all he Ruines fell upon that Arm, and broke it all to pieces. The ſpecial Guilt of hat Sin ſhattered that part of God's Image all to ſhivers. We are ſhut up under Unbelief, Rom. 11. 32. and Faith is the way out of that miſerable Condition we are n, when the Door is lock'd and barr'd by Unbelief, and we cannot open it, nor hoot nor break open the Lock. To believe but the Law of Moſes, how hard is it? nd tho Men have a Conſcience in which the Law is written by Nature, yet Chriſt tells the Phariſees, John 5. 47. that they did not truly believe Moſes. How hardly are Men brought to believe the Threatnings, eſpecially with Application, when yet they are thundred out againſt all, and there is a Guilt tells us that we deſerve Death who do ſuch things, Rom. 1. 32. much more hardly are Men brought to believe the Promiſes which belong but to a few; If ye believe not Moſes's Writings, (ſays Chriſt) how ſhall ye believe my Words? John 5. 47. He argues à minori ad ad majus, from the leſs to the greater. Did I ſay to believe the Law? I may ſay, that to do the whole Law exactly is as eaſy as to believe ſavingly in Chriſt. This is a received Maxim among all Divines, and deſpairing Spira ſet his Seal to it out of woful Experience, when he ſpoke theſe Words, You command me to believe, I ſay I cannot; your Command is as impoſſible to me as to keep the moral Law.

1. All the Parts of Wit and Wiſdom in the World will not help us to believe, 1 Cor. 2. 5. Faith ſtands not in the Wiſdom of Men, but in the Power of God; the Wiſdom of other Men cannot beget it, nor the Wiſdom of a Man's own Heart cannot attain it, or give the leaſt Inclination to it, but the alone Power of God, for of that likewiſe he ſpeaks, and therefore ſays he, ver. 6, 7, 8. The Wiſdom of the Princes of this World, that were the wiſeſt, came to nought, and could not reach it: Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, neither have entred into the Heart of Man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

2. Natural Conſcience cannot arrive to Faith, it will ſet you a doing indeed, but not a believing; it will diſcover other Sins to you, but not this; for the Spirit muſt convince of Unbelief. The Law of Works is written in Conſcience, but not the Law of Faith; and therefore Men that make Conſcience of private Prayer, and of keeping the Sabbath, and of avoiding Uncleanneſs and Adultery, and dare not omit or commit any of theſe, yet make no Conſcience of believing, nor are ſtruck with a Senſe of Unbelief. Nay, therefore Believers themſelves that take thought about other things are often careleſs of believing, look not at this as the main Duty, the great Command, the higheſt Obedience.

3. All the Duties thou canſt perform cannot beget one jot of Faith; Rom. 9. 16. It is not in him that wills nor runs, but in God that ſheweth Mercy. Tho Paul was as exact in keeping the Law as ever Man was, yet (1 Tim. 1. 17.) he was an Unbeliever. If a Man ſhould go and make Money (as I may ſo ſay) of all he is or hath, and put all into one Stock; if he ſhould call in all his Strength which is put out, and is in the Hands of Learning, Riches, Honours, &c. and convert and turn every Thought for every Moment's time he is to live, upon nothing but Believing, and trade with all that he can make, for nothing but for Faith, he could not compaſs one Dram. Let him take his flinty Heart in one hand, and all the Promiſes in the Word of God in another, and ſtrike his Heart and them together to Eternity, he would not ſtrike out ſo much as one Spark of Saving Faith.

4. All external Means cannot work Faith. Chriſt preach'd and preach'd as powerfully as ever Man did, he ſpake as never no Man ſpake, (John 6. 63. The Words I ſpeak to you are Spirit and Life) yet the Jews remained Unbelievers; and Judas that heard all his Sermons, and miſſed not one, yet remain'd an Unbeliever: for it follows, ver. 64, 65. There are ſome of you believe not, for Jeſus knew who ſhould betray him; and therefore I ſaid to you, that no Man can come to me except it be given him of my Father. And tho he preach'd plainly as well as powerfully, (John 10. 24, 25.) yet ſtill they doubt, as they themſelves ſay there: nay, ſays Chriſt, My Works bear witneſs of me, ver. 25. But yet ye believe not: there is ſomething elſe in it; it is becauſe ye are not of my Sheep, ver. 26. and ver. 37. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not; (yea, John 15. 24. He did Works which none other did) and if ye believe not me, yet believe the Works. But tho ſuch Works as were never done before were added to ſuch Words as were never ſpoken by any but him, yet theſe admirable Works and Words did not effect Faith in their Hearts; John 12. 37. Tho he had done ſo many Miracles, yet they believed not on him.

5. As there is nothing to help to work Faith within or without a Man, ſo all in him is againſt it. As,

(1.) All thy Sins, both the Power of thy Sins, and the Guilt of thy Sins, oppoſe thy believing.

1ſt. The Power of thy Sins is oppoſite to Faith; for till the Heart be divorced from every Luſt, thou canſt not give Chriſt and Faith Entertainment. It will forbid the Banes of Matrimony between Chriſt and thee. Thou canſt no more take Chriſt for thy Salvation and Portion, and ſet him up in thy Heart, than thou canſt at once look up to Heaven, and down upon the Earth: How can ye believe (ſays Chriſt) whilſt ye receive Honour one from another? John 5. 44.

2dly. The Guilt of thy Sins cauſes thee to depart from God, and bids Chriſt to de- art from thee: Depart from me (ſays Peter) for I am a ſinful Man, Luke 5. 8. Guilt of Wrong and Enmity is always ſuſpicious, and makes a Man look upon God s an Enemy, and therefore he dares not truſt him. Men will rarely truſt a reconiled Enemy, nor will Men be brought to venture themſelves upon a God reconcing himſelf through Chriſt. Judas runs to the Phariſees when he had betrayed Chriſt, but he durſt not come at Chriſt, his Guilt would not ſuffer him. Sins will ell thee, and defiled Conſcience will tell thee, that thou muſt look for no Mercy, nd that there is no Hope, Jer. 2. 25. and when we would look for Salvation, yet t is far off; for becauſe our Sins teſtify againſt us, and we know them, therefore he Guilt of them ariſeth and puts off ſuch Thoughts of Mercy, and diſcourageth he Heart. As preſumptuous Men think they ſhall be ſaved becauſe their Sins are o ſmall, ſo poor humbled Souls when they ſee their Sins once, ſurmize that they hall never have Mercy, becauſe they are ſo great: What? I a Blaſphemer, a Conemner of Mercy, ſhall I obtain Mercy? The Soul cannot believe this. Tho Sin when ſlighted furthers Preſumption, yet when diſcovered it hinders Faith.

(2.) All the Righteouſneſs that is in a Man for time paſt, and Endeavours for time o come, alſo hinder the Work of Faith.

1. Righteouſneſs for time paſt is a Hindrance to it, for Men cannot have any Righteouſneſs in and of themſelves but Self will be conceited of it, and a Conceit of their own Merit hinders them from ſeeing their need of, and looking out for Chriſt's. The Phariſees that thought themſelves righteous, were ſo far from Faith or coming to Chriſt, that Chriſt ſays he came not to call ſuch. The Jews going about to eſtabliſh their own Rigteouſneſs, ſubmitted not to the Righteouſneſs of God by Faith, Rom. 9. 31, 32. and Rom. 10. 3. As the Law was not given for a righteous Man, that is truly ſuch, ſo nor the Goſpel is not given for him that hath any conceited Righteouſneſs of his own. Faith is that whereby we believe in him that juſtifies the Ungodly. As Laodicea that thought her ſelf rich, was thereby kept off from coming to Chriſt by Faith, to buy Gold of him; ſo the more Goods have been increaſed, and the richer a Man hath thought himſelf, the lother he is to break and become a Bankrupt, and to ſuffer ſo much Loſs, and to ſtand at the Courteſy of Free Grace, and put off his Robes and come as a Beggar, and lie naked at Chriſt's Door. And,

2. Endeavours for the time to come alſo hinder and ſpoil Faith. A Man when he ſees his former Sinfulneſs and Want of Faith, and hath ſuffered the wrack of all his former Eſtate, is apt to begin of his own Coſt to build a new Ship to ſet to Sea in, and lades it upon a new Stock with new Wares of Duties he never did afore, and lanceth it into Profeſſion, and thinks by his own rowing, and tugging, and haling, in the end to arrive at Chriſt, who goes as faſt from him as he makes after him, whilſt he thus goes out in his own Strength: But if he would tie his Cockboat to the Ship of God's Free Grace, and commit himſelf to Sea with it, and ſuffer the Stream of it, and the Gales of the Spirit to carry him on in the Uſe of Means, he might attain to Faith, and to the Righteouſneſs of God. Rom. 9. 32. the Jews ſought it but as a by-Faith, but as it were by the Works of the Law; and I may in this caſe allude to it, a Man muſt ſeek Chriſt and Faith, but it muſt be in a way of Faith, elſe tho the Duties be Evangelical which they endeavour to perform, yet they are as it were the Works of the Law, as the Apoſtle's Phraſe is, and will be accounted as legal. A Man may ſeek the Righteouſneſs of Faith, and yet not by Faith, or in a way of Faith and Senſe of a Man's own Unability, and ſo ſeek after the Faith it ſelf, as if it were a Work of the Law; and then (as Paul ſays) as a Man condemns himſelf in what he allows, ſo he undoes himſelf in what he endeavours, and goes to Hell by ſtriving to go to Heaven. The People of Iſrael, if they would have gone into Canaan by the way of Faith in God alone, who offered to caſt out their Enemies before them, they might have done it, but that way they rejected through Unbelief, and then ſet to it by their own Strength; but they were beaten back by their Enemies, and God commanded them to go back again even to the brink of the Red Sea: ſo doth God deal with Souls that have gone far into the Wilderneſs, and are nigh believing and laying hold, yet ſubject not their Souls to God's way of working Faith, but attempt it by their own Strength, and this caſts them behind-hand, and they are to begin the Work a-new, and ſo they are brought thereby as far off as at firſt, and have need to be humbled of thoſe their new Endeavours, and then they are fit to enter. God hath ſaid, that no Man ſhall prevail with his Part 3. Strength, 1 Sam. 2. 6. And thus to endeavour after Faith with our own Streng is like the ſcrabling and ſtriving of one that cannot ſwim, which ſinks him ſooner and the more, and is oppoſite to the way of Faith; for Faith fetcheth Strength from another, ſince that is eſſential to that Grace, and is one Rule in Law of Faith, as the Apoſtle calls it, and therefore Strivings for Faith out of own Strength are moſt oppoſite to the Law of Faith. A Man's own Strength vents and ſupplants Supply by Faith, which is paſſive, and a receiving borrow Grace. And therefore Chriſt tells us plainly, that many ſhall ſtrive to enter, and not be able, like a Man that would open the Floodgate of a Sluce; one who attem to break open the Door of Unbelief, which is ſhut againſt all the World, is like to Man who would open the Flood-gate of a Sluce, the more he pulls to open it, more he keeps it ſhut, whilſt he doth it out of his own Strength, whereas if would go on the other ſide of the Stream, and commit himſelf to it, the Strea would do it alone, and carry him thorow it.

3. All Parts of natural Wiſdom and Reaſon are againſt Faith alſo.

1ſt. For beſides that ſome reſt in Knowledg, (Rom. 2. 17, 18, 19, 20.) Know ledg and Gifts alſo puff up, 1 Cor. 8. 4. but he whoſe Heart is lift up, believes no Hab. 2. 4. They are oppoſed; nothing oppoſeth Faith more than Pride, nothi makes proud more than Knowledg; and therefore to confound the Pride of World he choſe out this Grace of Faith, which by making a Man become a Foo ſaves him, (1 Cor. 1. 19, 20, 21.) and confounds all Mens admired Wiſdom ſaving them that believe.

2dly. And again, carnal Reaſon keeps Men from Faith, becauſe that is the Fo of a Man as a Man, and will be liſtned to. The Philoſophers defined a Man to Animal rationale, a rational Animal; now Faith hath a reach beyond all this, therefore when a Man ties himſelf to Reaſon, and conſults with it, he is kept fro believing; and when he would believe he muſt not conſider what Reaſon ſays to contrary: So Abraham (Rom. 4. 19.) being not weak in Faith, conſidered not own Body; that whereas Reaſon and Conſideration, out of Wiſdom and Rea would have raiſed many an Objection up, he conſults not with it. And therefo God hath choſe this Grace of Faith as that which Fools are as capable of as w Men, yea and more, for they are apt to be credulous, and out of a Senſe of the want of Wiſdom to reſolve their Judgment into another's. Yea and therefore G hath choſen the poor and fooliſh things of the World, becauſe Faith in them is mo eaſily wrought; Have any of the Rulers believed in him? (John 7. 48, 49.) but People that know not the Law are accurſed.

3dly. The more Reaſon a Man hath, the ſtronger Objections he will raiſe againſt Believing: therefore in Temptations the more Knowledg a Man hath, ſtronger he pleads againſt himſelf, and his Wit ſerves to make his Indictment more full, and to diſpute againſt his own Salvation the more ſhrewdly; as Sp did, to the Amazement of the Standers by, invent ſuch Objections as another wou not have dreamt of. And thus it hinders afore and in the working of Faith: Afore, what is it keeps Men from being humbled? Their carnal Reaſonings, their Strongholds. Now all that Reaſon which before a Man was humbled, ſhewed its Strength in maintaining the Goodneſs of his Eſtate when he is humbled, turns Head, and pleads againſt a Man's Eſtate, and againſt his having any Intereſt in Mercy; and indeed whilſt a Man will go in a way of Reaſoning, and conſider his dead Soul, he will never believe. A Man muſt believe above and againſt all Reaſon; as Abraham conſidered not his dead Body, ſo nor muſt he conſider his dead Soul. And hence it is that we have more ado with carnal Reaſon after Men are humbled than before.
Self-flattery, when that was general, uſed and commanded all the Reaſon in a Man to fight for a good Opinion of his Eſtate; and when Self-flattery is ſlain, and that good Opinion of a Man's ſelf with it, then Unbelief turns all the ſame Force and Weapons another way, and all the Reaſon in a Man is imployed to fight to keep a Man in it.

4thly. Self in a Man is againſt it alſo, and the greateſt Enemy to it, and therefore in Faith there is the greateſt Self-denial that is in any other Grace. To deny a Man's Reaſon, and ſubject all his Thoughts to the Authority and Wiſdom of another, and to give God leave to take away all Reaſon and Wiſdom from me, and to

ſolve my Thoughts into his Words, and to think as he thinks, whatever my own houghts are; all this is hard. And ſo to be content to be nothing of my ſelf for er, and to do nothing of my ſelf, to throw my ſelf away, to loſe, to forget my lf, to be loſt to my ſelf, dead to my ſelf, (as Paul was, Gal. 2. 20. and 2 Cor. 12. who thought he did more than all, yet ſays he was nothing, in thoſe Words, t I, but Chriſt, &c.) and to take Chriſt into my Heart not only to rule all, but to all, to have the Glory of all, both the Grace and the Glory I have; to have no eaſon, no Will, no Power, no Life of my own in my ſelf, but Chriſt to be all, is is to believe, and this is a farther Self-denial than was in pure Nature in Adam. his Self is brought to by loſing and forfeiting it ſelf, and this only in point of ith. Adam though he had Grace from God, yet he had it in himſelf, and of him-lf could work, and could ſay, This have I done, and this is my Righteouſneſs my own weaving, and this is my Happineſs of my own keeping; and it was al-wed him to ſay ſo: but now cut off that ſame I, away with that Self, make it a ypher to Eternity; tho it be ſomething as a Creature, and have a Name in the talogue of Beings, and is advanced to the higheſt Eſtate of Happineſs, yet let it nothing in doing, nothing in Righteouſneſs, nothing in glorifying or making it f happy, and let Chriſt be all. Adam was as much in his Aims and Deſigns to ny himſelf (as we now) in point of Sanctification, he was herein to aim at God much as we, and to reſpect himſelf as little; but in point of believing we fall wer, for that empties us, annihilates Self, fetcheth Righteouſneſs, Power, Life, from another, as well as it works to another. And this is therefore difficult, cauſe it is a higher ſtrain of glorifying God than Adam knew, or than the Heart either in pure or corrupt Nature acquainted with. Self reſts in it ſelf, and ould not go out of it ſelf, this is natural to it, and it was uſed to do ſo when it was the beſt, and therefore this way of believing is a way which Self would never e, but it will fall a doing and performing Duties, and keeping the Law, and ourning for Sin; and if you have any Work for it to do in it ſelf within doors, will ſit to it, but to go abroad and beg all of Chriſt, to live upon Alms, to ſtand the Courteſy of Chriſt and Grace, and to do this for Eternity, Self was never ought up to it. It would live of it ſelf, of its own Lands and Revenues, though ler and meaner, rather than be in Dependance, tho to enjoy a Kingdom. And o going to Chriſt be a ſhort Cut, yet it had rather go about, make a new way of orks, than go to Chriſt, and by Chriſt, who is the Way and the Life; Ye will not e to me (ſays Chriſt, John 5. 40.) that ye might have Life; no, they will un-rtake to fulfil the Law rather. The Phariſees and the Jews did ſo, they would ther appeal to it that was their Condemner, to Moſes who accuſed them, (as riſt ſays, ver. 45.) than come to Chriſt who offered to ſave them: They would her go to the Law that was the Miniſtry of Condemnation. The Galatians, t they might be eaſed a little in point of believing, would be in Bondage to the remonial Law, which they nor their Fathers were able to bear: And Papiſts ll rather give over Kingdoms, and put themſelves into Monaſteries, lie in Hair, e upon the Alms of others, whip and rend their Bodies, keep ſtrictly to their Ca-nical Hours, than go to Chriſt, than caſt off Works, and betake themſelves to ith. And the ſame you may ſee in poor humbled Souls, they run to every Duty, never dream of Faith that that muſt eaſe them: Thus Chriſt's Sheep will hang on every Briar er'e they come to him.

4. If there were nothing in us againſt it, yet the Devil oppoſeth it more than any ng. He oppoſed not the moral Vertues of the Heathen, nor doth he oppoſe a uded Chriſtian in Performance of Duties; but when he comes to lay hands on riſt, when he will go that way, then he muſters up all the Forces he can, The of this World blinds the Eyes of them that believe not, leſt the Light of the glori- Goſpel ſhould ſhine to them, 2 Cor. 4. 4. This is the Point he would keep them nd in, viz. the Knowledg of Chriſt by Faith; and hither tend all his Deluſions Oppoſitions, that our Faith might fail.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

That all the Faculties and Powers in Man do not afford him Abilities to believe. That all humane Wiſdom is ſo far from promoting Faith, that it ſets it ſelf againſt it.

EPHES. II. 8.

By Grace ye are ſaved through Faith; and that not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God.

I Shall proceed on ſtill in opening of that Faith which ſaveth us, of that Faith which juſtifieth us, and ceaſeth not till it hath put us into the Hands of Christ, I ſhall now proceed farther to ſhew you the Greatneſs of it in reſpect of the working of it in our Hearts, and the Diſproportion that is between our Hearts in which it is wrought, and this Grace it ſelf. I will ſhew how hardly it is attained unto that 'tis fetch'd out of the Rocks (as I may ſo ſpeak) by an Almighty Power. And to that end I have choſen this Text, and eſpecially this Particle here, and that not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God; which I intend not ſo much to diſcourſe of by way of Expoſition, for that I have done before, as to lay open the thing to you in a common-place way, only in general take the Scope of the Apoſtle before in this Chapter. His Scope is to magnify the Free Grace of God, as the ſole Author of our Salvation; which he magnifies in two reſpects:

1. By ſhewing the Miſery that a Man lay in when God firſt ſet his Heart upon him, dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins, deſerving a thouſand Deaths, Children of Wrath, &c. ver. 1, 2, 3.

2. By laying open the way of God's bringing us unto Salvation; and he tells us this, that ſeeing Free Grace was the Contriver of our Salvation, and its end was to magnify it ſelf, therefore it having the making of its own Laws, it would be ſure to order our Salvation ſo, that though of neceſſity ſomething was to be wrought in us, or we could not be ſaved, yet it would pitch upon ſuch things as ſhould have as little an Ingredient into our Salvation as poſſibly the thing it ſelf would bear; For by Grace ye are ſaved (ſaith he) through Faith, and that not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God; not of Works, &c.

There are but two things required of us, Faith and Works. The Apoſtle puts a Difference betwixt theſe two clearly: and he tells us, that Faith is taken up into Commiſſion as it were, when Works are not, By Grace ye are ſaved through Faith, not of Works; no by no means. Tho Works are as much required as Faith, yet God doth by no means own them, doth not ſo much as look upon them in the matter of Salvation: For indeed Faith is that Grace that doth ſo glorify God, and his Free Grace, that he is not jealous as it were to put it into Commiſſion even with himſelf and with Jeſus Chriſt. But now when God had therefore required of us as little as could be in the matter of Salvation, when he had required only that we ſhould know this Grace of his, and lay hold upon it, (without doing of which his Grace would be loſt) and that in laying hold upon it, Faith ſhould give all the Glory unto Free Grace, here Man might ſtep in, and ſay, I have Faith in my ſelf, or contribute ſomething to the getting of Faith, and to the attaining thereof. No, ſaith the Apoſtle, we will cut you ſhort there (that ſtill Free Grace may be magnified). It's true ye are ſaved through Faith, but that Faith is not of your ſelves, is the Gift of God. This now is enough for the opening of the Words, and ſhewing you the Apoſtle's Scope. The thing then that at this time I intend to diſcourſe of is this, to manifeſt unto you that ſaving Faith is not of your ſelves. That is my Theam, put what Title you will upon it: To ſhew you, I ſay, that there is nothing in your ſelves that contributeth to the working of Faith in you; and in doing of this I have this aim, namely, that when you ſee that All in your ſelves, or all that you can do, can no way help you to the Attainment of Faith, you may come to underſtand both the ſeveral falſe Ways that Men do take in the matter of Believing, and alſo may the more clearly ſee (in the Negative) what the right way of Believing is, and what the Nature of juſtifying Faith is: and likewiſe, that by ſeeing your Inability to attain it, you may come to prize it the more, and that you may be emptied of your ſelves, not only in reſpect of the Grace you believe on, (for you believe only on Free Grace) but in reſpect of this alſo, that you muſt come to Free Grace it ſelf even to work this Faith, to believe upon it. For what can lay a Man more low in himſelf than this, that when he ſees himſelf loſt, and that God hath provided a Remedy, and requires nothing but Faith, honeſt Faith, faithful Faith (as I uſe to call it) that yet the Man of himſelf is unable to attain to this Faith? And further, I have alſo this end in it, that you that have your Hearts taken off by God, and have been taught and led in the right way of believing, and enabled to do it, may be thankful to God, and go on in a way of Dependance upon him for the perfecting of the Work of Faith in you: for every Story, every Garniſh in this Building, as well as the Foundation, is not of your ſelves. And likewiſe further, that thoſe that think that Faith is ſo eaſy to be had, may indeed be convinced that they have no Faith: Faith (ſaith he) it is not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God. I ſhall not go about to ſhew you in the general the Greatneſs of the Work of Converſion, and that that is not of a Man's ſelf; and how that to change he Heart, and to create new Faculties, to turn a Man from Darkneſs to Light, nd from Satan to God, and the like, is a great Work, and requires an Almighty Power. No, I ſhall keep ſtrictly to the point of Believing, and in that not ſpeak o much of the Habit of Faith, as of bringing the Soul to the Acts of Faith, clearly nd plainly to cloſe with Jeſus Chriſt, and to truſt upon Free Grace, and in nothing n a Man's ſelf. I ſhall particularly demonſtrate theſe two things:

1ſt. That all that is in Man, or all that is from Man, can no way help him unto his Faith. Yea, 2dly. That all that is in Man, and all that is from Man, is againſt it. And herefore certainly Faith is not of our ſelves, it is the Gift of God.

(1.) I ſhall only premiſe this in the general, which I will but briefly touch upon, hat if we take pure Nature, that is, Nature in Innocency, in Adam afore he fell, was far above it to believe thoſe things which we do now believe. I will not and to diſpute that Point, whether Adam yea or no had that Principle of Faith we ave: Only this is what I ſay, that if Adam had the ſame Principle of Faith that e have, yet to believe thoſe things, which when we believe to Salvation we do be- eve, was infinitely if not above the Proportion of his Faith, yea above what it as put to believe. If the Wheels be the ſame, yet there is a new Spring put in, hich doth turn all the Wheels, and the Stream and Courſe of them, another way. nd that is, Whereas Adam ſought Salvation from God by doing, and by Obedience f the Faith he had, (which indeed ſets all the Wheels in him a going) here comes new Spring into the Heart, which turns all the Wheels quite another way, and ts the Heart a-work to ſeek Salvation out of it ſelf in another. There is a new nſtinct, a new Genius therefore, carrying the Heart unto another, unto Chriſt, be ſaved, differing from what the Genius, and Spring, and Inſtinct of Adam's aith carried him unto. The Truth is, the Law of Faith (as the Expreſſion is in om. 3. 23.) which is written in our Hearts, is differing from that Law of Works at was in his Heart, and was written there. So that I ſay, Suppoſe that he had Principle of Faith, ſuch as we have, yet he was never put to believe that which e are, yea certainly it was far above the Proportion of it ſo to do. I ſhall but ve you an Inſtance or two.

1. He believed that God made him, and that God made the World, (I will not ſpute whether his Faith might be reſolved into ſanctified Reaſon or no) it was an ſy thing for him to believe alſo this, that God when he made him had a Conſulta- on, expreſs'd in Gen. 1. 26. Let us make Man, and let us make a World. But was he t upon it to believe that that God who made the World would himſelf be made an? If he had the ſame Principle of Faith we have, yet I believe it was ſo dim as could hardly have ſeen ſo far without new Spectacles, but it would have ſtretch'd s Eye-ſtrings, have put his Eyes to it to have diſcerned this, even as it puts the ngels Necks to it, (as Peter ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 1. 12.) to ſtoop down to behold this.

2. Adam believed that the Soul that ſinned ſhould die, and that on that day he d eat of the forbidden Fruit he ſhould begin to die. There was Reaſon for him believe this, becauſe he found that by doing the Will of God he lived, therefore he might very well on the contrary believe, that if he tranſgreſſed the Will of God he muſt die; and yet you ſee how eaſy his Faith in this thing was overthrown. The Devil came with a Suggeſtion of a Doubt, Gen. 3. 2. Yea, hath God ſaid that you ſhall die the Death that day you eat? and how eaſily did the Tempter hereby prevail againſt his Faith? But what if God had ſaid to Adam, that God himſelf ſhall die, and that God himſelf ſhould be made Sin that knew no Sin, and be made a Curſe? If ſuch a thing as this ſhould have been propounded to his Faith, and if the Devil had come with ſuch a Suggeſtion, Yea, hath God ſaid? he would have put his Faith to it.

3. For Adam to believe that whilſt he pleaſed God in all things, he ſhould continue in his Favour, and ſhould be juſtified in ſo doing, it was eaſy, why? Becauſe he had a Principle of Conſcience in him, which was ſtill to give him Peace by doing, and to give a Teſtimony of the Favour of God towards him. He had a Principle adequate to this in his own Boſom, and it was natural unto him, for he had the Notion of the remunerative Juſtice of God, whereof he had the Image alſo in his own Boſom that might aſſure him of it. But to come to believe that God will juſtify the Ungodly, and to apprehend my ſelf to be ungodly, and then to believe that God will juſtify me; and to believe that God will and doth account an ungodly Perſon as righteous in his ſight as all the Angels in Heaven are, in point of Juſtification, this would have poſed, have non-pluſt Adam's Faith. And further, when that ungodly Perſon, tho juſtified perfectly, ſhould continue ſtill imperfectly holy, and not have a Dram of Power and Ability in himſelf to pleaſe God, but he muſt turn himſelf out of doors, go and live in another, muſt fetch a Principle of Life and Grace from Chriſt, (as Chriſt tells us we muſt do, John 15. 5. Without me ye can do nothing: and as the Apoſtle's Faith was, Gal. 2. 20. I now live, I live by the Faith of the Son of God; and it is not I, but Chriſt that liveth in me) all theſe would have been Parables, Soleciſms in Adam's Opinion. Faith therefore, by which we are ſaved, may well be ſaid not to be of our ſelves, for it is indeed above this pure Nature, this pure Self.

(2.) But beſides, a ſecond Conſideration in the general about it, may be this. If Adam had Power to believe all theſe things, (which I will not diſpute nor utterly deny) yet now it is above ſelf, for he utterly loſt it, and we all have loſt it, and ſo loſt it, that of all things elſe which we are able to do, we are weakned in the Point of Believing. Beſides the general Reaſon which is common to the Loſs of all Grace elſe, (viz. If that Faith had been a Part of the Image of God, the whole being loſt, it had alſo been loſt with the reſt) I ſay, beſides that general Reaſon, there is this ſpecial one to evince this, that in loſing that Faith he had we are utterly diſenabled of our ſelves to believe. For, do but conſider, where was it that the Temptation entred in? Certainly it was in a way of Unbelief. We will not diſpute whether that Faith he had might be reſolved into ſpiritual Reaſon or no: Yet a Faith it might be called, and ſo anſwerably his firſt Sin may be called Unbelief. Yea, hath God ſaid? ſaith the Devil to Eve; and at that ſhe ſtagger'd, became dizzy, reel'd and fell, and fell upon that Arm, and broke it all to pieces. If a Man be kill'd with a Shot in his Eye, we know that Shot piercing the Eye, and carrying that away with it, kills the whole Man; and the Man being kill'd, it muſt be an Almighty Power that muſt go to the raiſing of that Man preſently again; but now it were a farther thing to raiſe that Eye beyond and beſides raiſing the whole Man, becauſe the whole Body remains, but this Eye muſt be made a-new, ſo it is here. In Rom. 11. 32. we are ſaid (and it is an emphatical Expreſſion) both Jew and Gentile, to be ſhut all up together in Unbelief, (ſo you have it in your Margins) that God might have Mercy upon all. Do but mark what he compares Unbelief unto, (that I may fit it to that thing we have in hand, namely, that in the Matter of Believing we are of all the reſt moſt diſenabled) he compares it to a Priſon or Bonds. Suppoſe now that a Man had Life in him, yet if he be ſhut up, if he be manacled in Fetters, (as likewiſe the word ſignifies) he is utterly diſenabled: And it imports firſt, that God in a ſpecial manner hath ſhut up all in Unbelief. Other Sins (if I may ſo ſpeak) are they for which God impriſons Men; but to the end they may be ſurely impriſoned, he makes Unbelief the Jailor, and we are all as it were ſhut up in a Dungeon, with a Door of Unbelief faſt lock'd upon us. Therefore now the Apoſtle makes the Greatneſs of the Mercy of God to lie in giving Faith, as appears y the Context, God (ſaith he) hath ſhut them up altogether in Unbelief, over and bove their other Sins, that when they were all thus cock-ſure the Priſoners of eath, he might have Mercy upon them. In Gal. 3. 22. you have the like Phraſe; he Scripture (ſaith he there) hath concluded all under Sin, (the word is a Com-ound, συνέκλεισεν, of the ſame Root κλαίω) hath ſhut up all under Sin. There are, s I may ſo ſpeak, outward Priſons of all a Man's Sins elſe in which he is ſhut; but n Rom. 11. he makes Unbelief to be as it were the inner Priſon. So that God ow ſhews a farther Mercy in giving of Faith: And notwithſtanding all a Man's ins, the Promiſes which are by Faith in Jeſus Chriſt given to them that believe, as it follows there in Gal. 3. 22.) may come and knock at the Priſon-door, and ell this poor Man, We have broke up all your other Priſon-doors, and have paſt hrough all thoſe Priſons, and if now you will but believe, do but come out of this Dungeon you are in, and you ſhall be delivered. Alas! ſaith the poor Soul, tho ll the other Priſon-doors be ſet open, and there be a free Acceſs unto Grace not-ithſtanding all my Sinfulneſs, yet I cannot believe. No more indeed he cannot, or he is ſhut up under Unbelief. Therefore now what ſaith the Text in Gal. 3. 22? The Promiſe is given to them that believe; and as the Promiſe is given to them that be-lieve, ſo Epheſ. 2. 8. tells us, that Faith is the Gift of God: for a Man being ſhut up under Unbelief, lock'd up in that inner Priſon, the Promiſes may come and nock a thouſand Years at the Priſon-doors, and all to no purpoſe, unleſs God (as he Expreſſion is, Acts 14. 27.) open a Door of Faith unto him. So that we are n a ſpecial manner in this corrupt Eſtate ſhut up under Unbelief, over and above ll the Loſs we ſuſtained by Adam. But theſe are yet but general Demonſtrations. I ſhall now come to the Particulars, and by the Grace of Chriſt manifeſt this to you.

1. That there is nothing in a Man (in the Condition we lie in by Nature) that an help forward, or is any way conducing to the working of ſaving Faith in the Heart; and that unleſs God come by an Almighty Power to work it, he can never believe. And,

2. That all that is in a Man, and all that comes from him, Duties or Endeavours, or what elſe you will, are all againſt it. To make manifeſt the firſt of theſe I ſhall go over all that is in you, take you all in pieces, your Underſtanding, your Will, your Affections, your Conſcience, and ſhew you in all theſe Particulars that Faith is not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God.

1ſt. I will begin with the Underſtanding. All the Parts of Wit and of Wiſdom that all the wiſe Men of the World have had ſince the Creation, or ſhall have to the end of the World, if they had met in any one Man's Heart or Head, could not help him in the leaſt to believe on Chriſt in a ſaving manner. The thing is demonſtrable abundantly. What ſays the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 2. 5. That your Faith ſhould not ſtand in the Wiſdom of Men, but in the Power of God. It cuts the Throat of Man's Free Will directly. Therefore he tells us in ver. 6, 7, 8. that the Wiſdom of the Princes of this World came to nothing, as to the matter of Believing. Nay, in 1 Cor. 1. 18, 19. he tells us, (and he proſecuteth the ſame all along almoſt to the end of the third Chapter) that God had a Deſign by ſetting up Faith in the Hearts of his People, to ſave them, thereby to confound the Wiſdom of all the wiſe Men in the World; The Preaching of the Croſs (ſaith he) is to them that periſh Fooliſhneſs, but unto us which are ſaved it is the Power of God: for it is written, I will deſtroy the Wiſdom of the Wiſe, and bring to nothing the Underſtanding of the Prudent. And ver. 21. After that the World by Wiſdom knew not God, it pleaſed God by the Fooliſhneſs of Preaching to ſave them that believe. This poor thing Faith, to ſave Men by, he ſets up as a Principle in the Hearts of his People who are ſaved, to confound that proud Principle of Wiſdom, Parts, Wit and Underſtanding, that the wiſe Men of the World boaſt themſelves ſo much of. And as God in Man's Redemption had an Eye to confound the Devil, (as appears by the Curſe in Geneſis) ſo he chooſeth out that which is the moſt excellent thing in Man, as that which in the way of ſaving Man he would moſt confound. I'll do it, ſaith he, by the fooliſheſt Object, Chriſt crucified; by the fooliſheſt Inſtrument, Preaching; and by the fooliſheſt Means within a Man, mere Faith; and by this I will accompliſh that Good and Salvation which all the wiſe Men in the World by their Wiſdom ſhall never attain. He doth not ſay, he will confound the wiſe Men, for he ſaved many wiſe Men, (not Part 3. (not many wiſe Men indeed, (ſo ver. 26.) in compariſon of the other, but ſome wiſe Men) therefore he ſays not that he will confound the wiſe Men of the World, but the Wiſdom, in the Abſtract; for they muſt lay their Wiſdom aſide when they come to believe, and become Fools. The Apoſtle there uſeth two or three Words very obſervable. In the 19th Verſe he ſaith, that God reprobateth, maketh no uſe of the Wiſdom of the World in point of Salvation. And ver. 20. he ſaith that God hath made it Fooliſh, he hath put a Scorn, an Affront upon it: And he ſhews that wiſe Men are the greateſt Fools in the World, whilſt poor Souls ſcrabble up to Heaven by Believing.

And then again, if you will know the Reaſon why God doth it, and the Reaſon likewiſe why Wiſdom in a Man cannot attain to it: The Reaſon why God doth it is, that he may confound that which is in Man his chiefeſt Excellency, as Wiſdom is, and that it may be in his Power (mark it) to ſave whom he will, and that it might be in his Power only to raiſe Men up to what degrees of Grace and Faith, and ſo of Glory to come, he pleaſeth. And this he doth whilſt he makes no uſe at all of Wiſdom in this Point, but makes uſe of Faith. Why? Becauſe he can make the fooliſheſt People that are, believe as much as the wiſeſt Men in the World. Nay, he can raiſe up a Principle of Faith unto an higher degree in a ſimple Man, if he pleaſeth, than the wiſeſt and learnedſt Man in the World can attain to by all notional Learning. He therefore pitcht upon this Grace of Faith to confound the Wiſdom that is in Man, ſo that all his Parts and Wiſdom cannot help him one whit. This might be inſiſted upon largely, but it needs not.

1. For Reaſon, which is alſo joined with Wiſdom, is utterly againſt the Way of Faith. I thought (ſaith he in Pſal. 73. 16.) to comprehend this; he thought to do it by his own Wiſdom, and that Thought ſpoiled him. So ſaith Wiſdom, (for it is a puft up Principle) I think by my own Brains and Wit to attain this which a fooliſh Soul cannot do. Pride of all things elſe is moſt oppoſite unto Faith; The Juſt ſhall live by Faith, (ſaith he in Hab. 2. 4.) and he oppoſeth living by Faith to him whoſe Heart is lifted up in him; and Wiſdom and Knowledg puffeth up, as the Apoſtle ſaith in 1 Cor. 8. 7. It is therefore in it ſelf the greateſt Enemy unto Faith. When the wiſeſt Man in the World comes to ſee his natural Condition, and comes to believe, it lays that Man as low as the pooreſt and ſimpleſt Creature in the World: I would not care (ſays he) if I were a Fool, if of a King I were a Beggar, ſo I had but one Dram of Faith to intereſt me in Jeſus Chriſt. So that now he that is a rich Man, when he comes to believe, he rejoiceth (as James ſaith) that he is brought low, &c.

2. And then again, Reaſon, which is the Form that conſtituteth Man as he is Man, and is the higheſt thing in Man till Faith comes, is utterly againſt it. For when Faith comes, it depoſeth Reaſon, which before ruled as King, it ſubdueth it, even as Reaſon it ſelf ſubdueth Senſe. Reaſon therefore riſeth up againſt it; for when Reaſon comes to be put from its Kingly Power and Regency, which it hath retained in a Man all his days, when a Stranger ſhall come, and tell Reaſon of ſtrange things in another World, which it never heard of, never took in before, and upon the news of this though it ſees not one jot of Reaſon in it, yet it muſt lay it ſelf down at the foot of this Stranger Faith, and receive the Law at his Mouth: Reaſon that hath been the ſupream Principle, and the King and Dominator in the Heart of Man, will never do this, but it will ſtir and raiſe up all the force it can againſt it to reſiſt it. When Faith ſhall come and ſay, I will have all theſe Counſellors of yours, all your carnal Reaſonings put away from you; Reaſon flies upon the height ſtill, ſtill conſults with Fleſh and Blood, and will never yield of it ſelf. In Rom. 4. when Abraham came to believe, Reaſon would have been putting in many Objections; do but conſider your Body, being now dead, (ſaith Reaſon) and conſider the Deadneſs of Sarah's Womb: but what ſaith the Text? Abraham being not weak in Faith, he conſidered not his own Body being now dead, when he was about an hundred Years old, neither yet the Deadneſs of Sarah's Womb; he ſtaggered not at the Promiſe of God through Unbelief, but was ſtrong in Faith, giving Glory to God, Rom. 4. 19, 20. He gave himſelf up unto Faith.

3. And, thirdly, the more and ſtronger Reaſon a Man hath in him when he omes to believe, he will find the harder Pull of it, and have the ſtronger Objections.
n Men that are in diſtreſs of Conſcience, the larger their Knowledg is, the deeper their Diſtreſs; becauſe the more Knowledg a Man hath, the more Arguments he nds out againſt himſelf; and all the Reaſon a Man hath will but ſerve to make his dictment the fuller againſt himſelf, and enable him the better to diſpute, and the ore ſhrewdly to argue againſt himſelf. As Spira, being a Man of a ſtrong Rea-n, you know how he reaſoned againſt himſelf to the Amazement of all Men.

4. Carnal Reaſon (if you would know how it is a Hindrance) hinders both be-re Faith and after. Before Faith it is an Hindrance, for you will never believe till ou ſee your natural Condition: Now what is it that hinders Men from ſeeing at? All Men are ready to acknowledg themſelves Sinners, but they will not knowledg themſelves to be loſt and undone. Why carnal Reaſon uſeth all the rength it hath to build up high Towers, and plauſible Shifts and Pretences to make Man think he is in a good Condition. All the Reaſon a Man hath is mainly exerſed in maintaining the Diſpute of this againſt his Conſcience, or the Grumbling in s Heart about the Goodneſs of his Eſtate. Again, on the other ſide, when once a an comes to be humbled, and then ſhould come to believe, all this Reaſon turns ad again, and uſeth as much Strength of Objection againſt himſelf, why he ſhould t have Mercy, and tells him he muſt have this and this Qualification before he mes to Jeſus Chriſt. I ſay it uſeth as much Strength in this Caſe too, and turns e Weapons it uſed afore quite another way. And let me tell you this, never any an comes to believe if he will go the Way of Reaſon, while he ſtands conſidering s dead Soul; as Abraham, if he had conſidered his own dead Body, had never be-ved. The Self-flattery that is in every Man, while he is in his natural Eſtate, is e General of all the Forces of Reaſon in him, it leads on an Army of Reaſons to ht for this, that he is in a good Eſtate; and though his Conſcience, and the Word God tell him the contrary, yet he will maintain this ſtifly; for he muſt loſe ch an Opinion of himſelf if ever Self-flattery ſhould yield to the contrary. Now en God hath kill'd this General Self-flattery, and then Faith comes to lead up all e Forces in a Man too; then doth Unbelief, then doth Deſpair come and turn all e ſame Forces another way: So that there is as much to do, and more, yea infi-tely more, to raiſe Men up, to bottom their Hearts in a way of Faith, and rightly reſt upon Chriſt and Free Grace, and to have Peace with God being juſtified by ith, than to ſhew them their natural Condition. You ſee now that Wiſdom and aſon in Man conduceth nothing to Believing, but that it is all againſt it.

CHAP. III.

hat all the Workings of a Natural Conſcience will not help a Man to believe; but that on the contrary, they withſtand Faith.

YOU have another Principle in you, (and there is a great deal of Hope from that, for it is a good Principle) and that is your Conſcience; which is indeed the Principle in a Man, for it doth inſtigate a Man to good, and hath a moral odneſs in it. But let me tell you this, that take natural Conſcience (for we ak now of what is in Nature) though never ſo much enlightned, and let it rein ſtill in that State which by Nature a Man was in at firſt, and it conduceth nog to Believing; nay it is the greateſt Enemy to it that the Heart of Man hath:
erefore ſtill Faith is not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God.

. I confeſs it is a good Principle in a Man; it tells him of his Sinfulneſs, but alas ill never help him a whit in Believing. Come to Conſcience, and conſult with it ſets you a doing indeed, but it will not direct you one whit in the Way of th, but rather ſetteth you out of the Way clean contrary. It is capable of what Law ſaith, for it ſelf is but the Law written in the Heart naturally; and it hath Ear to hear what the Law ſaith to a Man under the Law, but it is deaf to what Goſpel ſaith, and underſtandeth not a Word of it. If you ſpeak to natural

Conſcience concerning a Saviour, and urge it to believe on him, its Anſwer will be like to that of the Jews, (and it was this Principle of Conſcience which made them ſo ſpeak) John 9. 29. As for Moſes we know that God ſpake unto him, but this Fellow we know not whence he is: Juſt ſo ſaith Conſcience; Moſes I know; and if you talk to me of the Law, and what I ought to do, I can hear it; but as for the Goſpel, the truth is I know not the thing; it is a Stranger to me.

2. Nay, which is more, Conſcience enlightned will help to diſcover all ſort of Sins, and tell a Man roundly of them; but Conſcience alone will never diſcover Unbelief to you, in the bottom of it, and will never tell you of that; but it muſt be a ſpiritual Light in the Mind and Judgment that doth it. In John 16. 8. Chriſt ſaith that it is the Spirit (and he ſpeaks of the Holy Ghoſt's coming as a Comforter) that muſt convince of the great Sin of Unbelief. There are two Sins which are out of the Juriſdiction of Conſcience to ſet them home upon the Heart ordinarily: One is the Guilt of Adam's firſt Sin, (a Man's Conſcience may help him through ſpiritual Diſcerning to ſee the Corruption of Nature, but not the Guilt of Adam's Sin ordinarily:) And the other is, want of Faith in Chriſt; for a Man to ſee that to be the great Sin, and to have it ſet home upon the Heart, it is the Spirit of the Goſpel that muſt do this. What comes within the compaſs of the Law written in the Heart, that Conſcience will tell a Man of; but this is the Law of Faith. Come to Men troubled in Conſcience, that make Conſcience of all ſort of things; the truth is they make no Conſcience of the Matter of Believing, as if there were no ſuch Command; nay they think they do well to argue againſt themſelves, and that they do well to refuſe the Promiſes, and they pleaſe themſelves in ſo doing. Men will wrangle and cavil againſt the Command of Faith, and againſt themſelves; whereas yet all other Sins ſtare them in the face. Now to have the Heart diſcern Unbelief as the great Sin, and to have it ſet home upon the Soul, and to look upon Faith as the great Work of God, and that this I muſt attain to, or elſe I am undone; Conſcience will never help a Man to this; it is the Holy Ghoſt in your Hearts, and the Goſpel that muſt do it.

3. Let me tell you alſo, that Conſcience not ſubordinated unto Faith (as in natural Men it is not) is the greateſt Hindrance to Believing that can be.

1. It is the greateſt Hindrance of it, firſt, in reſpect of the Guilt of Sin: For what is the great Hindrance in Believing? The Greatneſs of your Sins, your Hearts clearly miſgiving you in that. Now it is Conſcience that is the Subject of them; and it is the Conſcience raiſeth and conjures them up, (as I may ſo expreſs it again thee;) for all the Sins that lie in that dark Cell thy Heart, are made by Conſcience to appear and ſtare in thy Face, therefore it is called an evil Conſcience; for though to repreſent a Man's Sins is good, yet it is called an evil Conſcience, becauſe the State of a Man is evil, and it is his Conſcience is the Repreſentation of the Man's State, and tells him ſo, it being the Subject, the Drain, the Sink of all a Man's Sins where they lie till ſuch time as God ſtir that Sink. Now what is it that keeps Men from believing? The Greatneſs of their Sins; when their Conſcience is awakened it continually preſents to them their Sins; and all the Diſcouragements they have as from their Sinfulneſs, are from a Conſcience unſprinkled with the Blood of Chriſt unſubdued unto Faith. Conſcience hath not learned its Leſſon from Faith, it hath not gone and dipt it ſelf in the Blood of Chriſt by Faith; for if it had, it would be quiet, and not always ſuggeſting to a Man what his Sins are, ſo as to diſcourage and hinder him from believing. This the Scripture tells us, Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with a true Heart in full aſſurance of Faith, having our Hearts ſprinkled from an evil Conſcience. What is it that ſprinkles the Conſcience? It is the Holy Ghoſt in the Soul, that by Faith takes the Blood of Chriſt and ſprinkles it upon the Conſcience; ſo you have it in Heb. 9. 14. How much more ſhall the Blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit offered himſelf without Spot to God, purge your Conſcience from dead Works, to ſerve the living God? There is nothing then that can ſatisfy the Conſcience in reſpect of the Guilt of Sin, but the Blood and Death, and Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt. When a poor Soul looks upon it ſelf as thus ſinful, and upon Chriſt ſo holy, he ſaith as Peter did unto Chriſt, Depart from me, for I am a ſinful Man, O Lord, Luk. 5. 8. And therefore your Conſciences, by ſtirring up the Guilt of Sin, do hinder you from believing; and whilſt that Conſcience ſhall be ſuffered to ſpeak louder than Faith, it will cry Faith down, till that Faith comes and brings in the Blo Blood of Chriſt; and then that cries louder, as the Apoſtle's Compariſon is in Heb. 2. 24. Otherwiſe, I ſay, unleſs the Conſcience be ſprinkled by the Blood of Chriſt hrough the Spirit of Faith, the Guilt of Sin in the Conſcience will cry down Faith n a Man's Heart, and the Voice of Sin there will be louder than the Voice of the Blood of Chriſt. In Iſa. 59. 11, 12. they ſay, Salvation is far off from us; they hought there was no hope: Why? Their Sins did fly in their Faces, and diſcourag'd their Hearts; for (ſay they) our Tranſgreſſions are multiplied before thee, and ur Sins teſtify againſt us, for our Tranſgreſſions are with us, and as for our Iniquities we now them. Slight Thoughts of Sin further Preſumption, but Sin diſcovered, as is in it ſelf, hinders Faith: that I who am a Blaſphemer, Injurious, &c. that I hould have Mercy, is this poſſible, ſaith the Soul? I need not inſiſt upon this, for ou all feel it.

4. Conſcience hinders Faith if it be not ſubordinated to it; for Conſcience is a ecret Enemy, and the cloſeſt Enemy that can be of any other thing that is in Man nto the way of believing, and hinders the Work of Faith more cloſely and ſecretly han any thing elſe, till Jeſus Chriſt and his Spirit hath ſubdued and ſubordinated it o be a Servant unto Faith. To expreſs my Meaning, and to convince you of this, ou will all yield that know any thing of God, that there is nothing ſo oppoſite to he Goſpel as the Law is, unleſs it be ſubordinated to the Goſpel: It muſt have in a anner all the Formality of it deſtroyed, though the Materiality remain. If any Man ſeek for Salvation in a legal Way, he muſt needs acknowledg he croſſes the Way f the Goſpel, and the Law of Faith, as Paul expreſſes it in Rom. 3. and 9. 32, 35. and he whole Epiſtle to the Galatians is evident for it. Now if that the Law be thus in it elf, as it is a Covenant of Works, oppoſite unto the Goſpel, then likewiſe is natural Conſcience, (though never ſo much enlightned, if it remain ſtill a natural Conſcience, as it doth till Faith hath got the Victory of it) alſo an Enemy unto Faith, nd muſt needs be ſo. And the Reaſon of it is this, becauſe that natural Conſcience, nd the Light it takes in by the Spirit, or however otherwiſe, is the Vice-gerent r the Law; for it is that Principle in a Man which God hath ſet up for to make a Man apprehenſive of all that the Law ſhall ſay. It doth keep (as I may ſo expreſs) the Law's Court in a Man's Heart. Now on the other ſide, this great Principle f Faith, and the Holy Ghoſt acting of it, and acting the Soul in a way of Faith, is hat which keeps the Goſpel's Court; that is, all its Proceedings concerning a Man's Condemnation, Juſtification, Salvation, Abſolution, they are all diſpatched by aith, and that in the Way of an Evangelical Covenant.

Now (my Brethren) this is a certain Truth likewiſe, that all Men in their natural Condition, they are under the Law. Let them be never ſo much enlightned with e Knowledg of the Goſpel, yet notwithſtanding for certain the Law is the predominate Principle in them. As on the contrary, he that is brought into the State of alvation, he is under Grace, (it is the Apoſtle's Diſtinction in Rom. 6. 14.) And ing under Grace, under the Free Grace of God in Chriſt, under the Goſpel, he is nder Faith as the ſupream Principle in his Heart. As the Strength of Sin is the aw, ſo the Strengh of Conſcience is the Law; but the Strength of Faith it is the oſpel, and the Grace of God in Chriſt. The Apoſtle in that Rom. 6. compares the aw and Grace to two Soveraigns, two Kings, which do ſway the Heart and Spirit their ſeveral ways: that is, if the Perſon of the Man be ſtill under the Law, then Law ſways the Heart in a legal Way; if he be under Grace, then doth the Free race of God in Chriſt ſway the Heart in a Goſpel Way; and the one doth this by aſon and the Means of Conſcience, and the other by Means of the Spirit of Faith. ow then, go take a Man, in whom hitherto the higheſt and ſupremeſt Principle him hath been the Conſcience remaining in its natural Defilement, though never uch enlightned, it will be true to its Maſter, true to the Law, and will never ject to this new Stranger Faith, that will bring the Free Grace of God in Chriſt a ſupream Soveraign over the other. It will ſtand for it to the Death, it will (I) be faithful to him whoſe Vice-gerent it is; it will ſtrive, and eſpecially in the at of Juſtification. If it have not the face to do it plainly and directly, it will do ſecretly, and it will turn the very Goſpel into a Legal Way. If it will comply with Knowledg of the Goſpel, and the Knowledg of Faith exceeding far, yet ſtill it ll ſeek to undermine it; it will carry on the Heart in a way of Works, yea it ll turn the Duties of the Goſpel themſelves into Works, and under-hand ſeek to be ſtified by Faith.

5. Con-

5. Conſcience, if it did proceed aright, ſo as to help Faith, yet it ſhould do no more than what the Law is to do: And what is the Law's Office? To ſhew a Man his Sinfulneſs, and his Inability to help himſelf to do any thing; to diſcover corrup Nature to a Man, and ſend him with a new Petition to the Court of Free Grace, and (as I may ſo expreſs it, to follow the Alluſion taken Gal. 3. 24.) to whip th Soul thither, and to be a School-maſter hereby to Faith. This, I ſay, is that whi Conſcience ſhould do if it proceed aright: It ſhould lay open all a Man's Sinfulneſs to him, ſend him with a Petition to the Throne of Grace, (as in Heb. 4. you hav it;) where Grace ſits as King, and thereto own Grace as a Soveraign, and to take the Law from its Mouth, Conſcience it ſelf profeſſing that it finds the Heart ſo cor rupt, and ſuch an utter Inability in it, that it can never attain to God's Favour by it ſelf, or any Courſe which Conſcience can proſecute. Thus Conſcience ſhould accom pany Faith to Chriſt, and deal with Chriſt nakedly and immediately both for Juſti cation, and likewiſe for Sanctification and Glory, and what-ever he is to receive. Now Conſcience ſhould wait to receive a new Commiſſion from the Throne of Grace, and from Faith, for to ſubſerve Faith in this to direct the Soul meerly in what is to be done, but lets Faith take its Courſe for to ſupply Strength to the Soul to do all that it doth, for to live out of it ſelf in another, and ſtill to have recourſe for Acceptation and Juſtification alone in that Redeemer. And when the Soul hath been dealing with Chriſt, Conſcience will ſometimes come in to confirm as a Witneſs that a Man lives as a juſtified Perſon ſhould do when he hath thus acted Faith upon Chriſt, then Conſcience ſtill is ſubordinate unto Faith, and receiveth its Commiſſion and Power from it. But this you ſhall find by eternal Experience, and it ſhall be found at lat ter day in the Hearts of all Men that have not ſaving Faith, that let there be neve ſo much Enlightning, their Conſciences will ſtill work in a legal Way, and will the Tenour of their Proceedings take a clean contrary Courſe; and whilſt Conſcienc holds its Commiſſion from the Law, it will direct and ſway the Heart legally, and undermine Faith in the Power of it. It will ſtill ſet the Heart a-work to ſeek the Favour of God by Doing, though it be by doing things that the Goſpel it ſelf com mandeth. It will ſtill, I ſay, proceed according to that legal Tenour, though it wi diminiſh it much. And therefore you ſhall find this to be true, that whenas Con ſcience hath ſubdued the Heart in a way of Humiliation, to ſee a Man's own Sinful neſs, and hath brought the Heart under, (and then Conſcience is upon the Thro again, then it hath the Sway of the Heart) then it will liſten (natural Con ſcience will do ſo, though thus enlightned) to hear all that the Heart ought to do and look what Sinfulneſs it ſees in it ſelf, it will ſet it ſelf to practiſe the contrary, and put the Heart upon doing of it; and will whip the Heart as a Run-away Home to his Maſter, but how? To ſerve out his Years, and to make up the Time that is loſ and by ſuch Ways to get and obtain the Favour of God, yea to get Faith it ſelf and then upon conforming to what it hears the Word ſay, whether out of the La or out of the Goſpel, it will take upon it to pronounce a Peace, and a Juſtificatio and an Abſolution; (for the natural Office of Conſcience in the old Covenant, is to accuſe, and ſo to excuſe, and to give Peace when a Man doth well.) And thus in ſtead of being a Witneſs, it will become a Judg; it will take upon it to pronoun upon the Heart the Sentence of Abſolution. Yea, and if that a Man is enlightne thus far as to be convinced, that by the Works of the Law no Fleſh ſhall be juſti ed, what will Conſcience do? It will go and turn all the Duties of the Goſpe Faith and Repentance, and Mourning for Sin, and all things elſe, into Duties the Law; that is, the Heart ſhall have that reſting upon them which natural Co ſcience had upon the Duties of the Law. In Rom. 9. 32. there is an excellent E preſſion of the Apoſtle's, ſpeaking of the Jews that had the Ceremonial Law, (much Light of the Goſpel they had) he ſaith, Thy ſought not Righteouſneſs by Fai but as it were by the Works of the Law. Mark his Phraſe, as it were by the Work the Law. Some of them that were more enlightned, and ſaw their own Sinfuln knew that their own Righteouſneſs alone would not ſtand them in ſtead; and th ſought after Evangelical Graces, as Love unto God, and the like. You may read one of them, a Scribe, that came unto Chriſt, in Mark 12. 34. I know (ſaith he Chriſt) that though the reſt of the Jews and Phariſees truſt in all theſe Sacrifices meer Works of the Law, yet a Man muſt have an inward Work, he muſt love G with all the Heart, and with all the Underſtanding, and with all the Soul, and wi

l the Strength; and this (ſaith he) is more than all whole Burnt-offerings and Sa-rifices. And our Saviour Chriſt tells him upon this, that he was not far from the ingdom of God. But what doth he do now? Tho that which he pitched upon as that which is required by virtue of the Evangelical Covenant, yet his legal pirit turned this as it were into a Work of the Law; he ſought Salvation as it were y the Works of the Law; and ſo did the Jews, tho they were very much enlight-ed many of them. And in Rom. 10. 2. (ſaith the Apoſtle) I bear them Record, that ey have a Zeal of God, but not according to Knowledg. That Zeal there which he eaks of is a Zeal ariſing from Conſcience; a conſcientious Zeal, as we uſe to call , whereby they ſet themſelves to aim at the Glory of God, yet it was ſtill as it ere a Work of the Law. I do not ſay that any Man doth attain to true Love of od, or truly to aim at the Glory of God above a Man's ſelf; I do not ſay that any Ian attains to that who is not in the State of Salvation, I believe the contrary plain-. But this ſome of them pitch'd upon, and did think thereby to obtain Salvation, en as well as by outward Works of the Law. Therefore ſaith the Apoſtle, they e utterly miſtaken, their conſcientious Zeal utterly miſleads them, for it is not ac-rding to that Knowledg of Faith which the Apoſtle clearly meaneth, which acheth us to fling away all in our ſelves, and to ſubmit unto the Righteouſneſs of od, as it follows there, ver. 3.

6. And therefore now, when Conſcience hath once gone and got up into the hrone, that is, when it hath ſubdued the Heart to legal Humblings, the Soul is en in moſt Danger of being miſled in the way of Believing when it comes juſt to Point; why? Becauſe that Conſcience having got the Dominion (ſo as it never d before ſo fully till now) it will ſeek to hold it, and to ſway the Heart its own y; and if Goſpel-light comes in, Conſcience ſtill will turn it as it were into the ght, and Tenour, and Way of the Law, to ſeek Salvation ſtill by Works. But en Faith, and when the Holy Ghoſt comes, he ſets up (as I ſaid afore) Grace on the Throne, and natural Conſcience muſt then take its Commiſſion from ith to direct a Man in ſerving the Living God, as it is Heb. 9. 14. For the Truth his, and I ought to ſay it, that ſtill there is a Uſe, and a great Uſe of Conſci-ce; and therefore you find that Oedience is made to ſpring from Love and a good nſcience, and Faith unfeigned, (1 Tim. 1. 5.) and thoſe are the Principles that ul reckons up; and he ſaith of ſome, (ver. 19.) that they had made Shipwrack of ith and a good Conſcience. For ſtill Conſcience remains in a Man as a Guide when s ſanctified and purged by Faith, that he may ſerve the Living God; but then I it muſt be indoctrinated by Faith, and purified by Faith; for it is Faith it ſelf t fetcheth out this legal ſtrain that is natural to the Conſcience, and ſubdues, as the reſt of the whole Heart, unto Faith, ſo Conſcience alſo. Now in all natural n (the Truth is) Conſcience runs into a Præmunire, goes beyond its Commiſſi-, takes upon it to abſolve, to juſtify, to give Peace, and to do it in a predominate y to Faith; it does it from doing, and from what a Man ſees in himſelf, and not m the Law of Believing.

You may by this ſee the true and clear Reaſon why that in all natural Men by ture, tho never ſo much enlightned, their Spirits are acted in a legal way; the aſon is clear, becauſe that Conſeience is the higheſt Principle in Nature. nſcience is a Principle in a Man that believes, and it ought to be ſo when it is ified, and made more quick, and enlightned with a more ſpiritual Light to de him in the way of ſerving God; but it is not the ſupreme Principle; no, it ut an under-Principle unto Faith: for if the Matter of the Law be an under-g to the Goſpel, certainly Conſcience is ſo to Faith. Now therefore whilſt t Conſcience remains the ſupremeſt Principle of all things elſe, it muſt be a dly Enemy unto Faith, and ſtill ſway the Heart its own way, and it muſt needs o till the Holy Ghoſt hath ſubdued the whole Heart to a way of believing in the d Jeſus. By what I have now ſaid you may ſee then and underſtand, from the per Principle that is in all Mens Hearts, what is the Reaſon why they are thus led in a way of doing, and that they ſeek Righteouſneſs not by Faith, but as it by the Works of the Law. And ſo I paſs from this Principle of Conſcience, and n ſhewing how that that is an Enemy unto Faith, and I come to the Will.

CHAP. IV.

That all the Powers of a Man's Will cannot enable him to believe. That Faith therefore is an Effect of the Infinite Power of God alone.

I Now come to demonſtrate that the Power and Faculty of Will in a Man doth not help him to believe, but is againſt Faith.

1. Take the Will of a Man in his natural Condition, let that Will remain but ſtill natural, and let it be excited and ſtirred up never ſo much by Light, or by Conſcience, or any how otherwiſe, yet till that Almighty Power comes that puts a new Life into it, there is both firſt an Inability in it to help a Man in Believing; yea, there are Principles in it that are all contrary unto Faith and to Believing. Firſt, To make it out to you, that a Man's Will is thus diſenabled to believe, yea that nothing is more unable than the Will is, to give up the whole Man unto Free Grace, and to God's own way of Salvation by Jeſus Chriſt. Conſider how this Truth is ſadly confirmed to us by manifold Experiences, and by the Scripture alſo.

If we come to many Men that are upon their Death-beds, or in Diſtreſs and under the Fears of Hell and of the Wrath of God, having their Conſciences enlighned, and God having ſtruck Sparks of Hell-fire into them, which have taken hold of all the Gunpowder there, we ſhall find that the Will in ſuch Diſtreſs, when comes to the Point of Believing, ſinks into a Diſcouragement under Thoughts of a Impoſſibility. For aſk them then if they will be ſaved? Yea, they would give ten thouſand Worlds to be ſaved: Will you but then throw your ſelves upon Jeſus Chriſt and upon Free Grace, and let your Hearts be quieted in ſo doing? (for to have the Will brought to a Quietneſs, this is the proper Effect of Faith there, have this Storm allayed, and the Winds ſtill, by rolling a Man's ſelf, and committing this little Cock-boat to thoſe Waves of Free Grace to ſave him) it comes to this Point, you ſhall find that the Will ſticks at nothing more, and theſe poor Souls will then tell you, that of all things elſe they cannot do it, and they will profeſs they cannot, and you ſhall ſee they cannot do it. Now if there were any Ability in the Will of a Man to cloſe with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt intirely and wholly, certainly Man would then do it, whenas he himſelf profeſſeth he deſires Salvation more than Millions of Worlds. I remember in the Story of Spira, (who yet I believe was Believer, and is in Heaven) that he being left to the Nakedneſs of his own Spirit, and diveſted of the Holy Ghoſt to ſtrengthen his Heart in Believing, to join with his Will, (for ſo the Holy Ghoſt doth when a Man is enabled to believe and to re himſelf quietly upon God) when all Objections were anſwered, and all the Promiſes of the Goſpel laid before him, (as they were abundantly by many that came to him, and that pitied him with the greateſt Tenderneſs that can be) he ſtill complained of this, I have a Wound in my Will, and I cannot do it, I cannot believe: once one ſaid, being exhorted to lay hold upon Jeſus Chriſt, Bid me (ſaith he pointing up to Heaven) lay hold upon yonder Star.

Beſides the manifold Experience that we have of the Truth of this Point, I ſha give you a Scripture or two for it. In John 1. 13. the Evangeliſt ſpeaking at th latter end of the 12*th* Verſe of them that believe, he adds, ver. 13. Which were bor not of Blood; for ſay not, you have Abraham to your Father; nor of the Will of t Fleſh. Take the natural Will that every Man hath, and it will not help him to be lieve; no, he that believeth truly he is born of God, (ſo ſaith the Text in 1 Joh 5. 1.) He that believeth on the Son of God, (as ver. 10. hath it, for you muſt ta both together) and doth do this truly, he is born of God; and his being born of Go ſo as to believe, is not of the Will of the Fleſh. Compare theſe two Places toge ther, and they clear this Point fully. And in this Epheſ. 2. what is the eminen thing that the Apoſtle in the Series of his Diſcourſe doth hold forth as the Reaſ why Faith is not of a Man's ſelf? He had ſaid afore, ver. 1. and ver. 4. that we we dead in Sins and Treſpaſſes; and that Faith is a new Life, ver. 5. And where li the Death moſt? Truly you will find in ver. 3. that it is in the Will; Fulfilli ſaith he, the Wills of the Fleſh; ſo it is in the Original. As the chief Subject o Death is the Heart, ſo the chief Subject of this ſpiritual Death is the Will of Man an: And (ſaith he) know this, That you being dead in Sins and Treſpaſſes, and d in your Wills eſpecially, ye are ſaved by Grace through Faith, and that not of r ſelves, it is the Gift of God. It is the Will, i. e. the Heart eſpecially, that is Seat of Faith; with the Heart a Man believeth to Salvation, Rom. 10. 10. To brace Mercy and Grace offered according to the Word, to cloſe with it upon d's own Terms, to bring the Will off to this, this is a great Point indeed; for he ſt be born of God that believes truly, becauſe it is not through the Will of the ſh, for that is a dead Will, utterly unable to believe. And becauſe I have fallen on that Place in Rom. 10. give me leave to ſpeak a little out of it. The Apoſtle re doth ſhew you (that you may ſee what a hard thing it is for the Soul to be-ve thus) what Plunges the Hearts of Men are put to when they are emptied of mſelves, and of their own Righteouſneſs. He had ſhewn in the former Part of Chapter, and in the latter end of the 9th Chapter, that it was the great Error Fault of the Jews, that they ſought Righteouſneſs as it were by the Works of the

, as I ſaid even now. Now whenas a Jew (in whoſe caſe the Apoſtle puts it, he had diſcourſed of the Jews all along) ſhould come to be convinced that he ld have no Righteouſneſs by doing, ſee but what Plunges that Man's Heart will put to: The Righteouſneſs which is of Faith (ſaith he, ver. 6.) ſpeaks on this wiſe; not in thine Heart, Who ſhall aſcend into Heaven, that is, to bring Chriſt down n above? Or, who ſhall deſcend into the Deep, that is, to bring up Chriſt again from Dead? Here you ſee the Law of Faith, when it comes to direct a Man, doth in to empty out of him abundance of Sayings that the Heart is apt to run into.
not in thy Heart, ſaith he; the Holy Ghoſt goes to the bottom of the Heart, fetcheth up thoſe deſpairing Thoughts that ariſe out of the Fainting, and Sucnbency, and Deſpondency of the Will; and he pitcheth upon thoſe Sayings that Heart in that caſe is apt to form up againſt it ſelf when a Man is emptied of his n Righteouſneſs. I will open this Place of the Apoſtle a little; Say not in thine rt, &c. The Heart when once it hath loſt a bottom in it ſelf, and is caſt off from t legal way, is apt amongſt other things to run into all ſort of Thoughts of Imſibilities of ever attaining unto Life. He expreſſeth the caſe as in the inſtance of ew, living under the Old Law, that had heard in the Abſtract that there ſhould a Meſſiah, and that God muſt be ſatisfied by that Meſſiah. Now how would t Jew reaſon with himſelf in this caſe? He would ſay, Who ſhall climb up into aven to bring down a Meſſiah from thence, for he that muſt be my Meſſiah, d muſt ſave me, muſt come down from thence? Quis, quis, (ſaith he) who, who go up to Heaven and climb up thither? No Man hath a Ladder to do this; and the Angels go thither, can all the Angels in Heaven perſwade the Meſſiah to ne down from Heaven and die for me, and do thus and thus for me, that I may ſaved? He ſpeaks I ſay in the caſe of a Jew that is put off from the Law, and under Terrors of Conſcience, and hath heard of a Meſſiah, and that God for part is willing to ſave Men if the Meſſiah will do thus and thus. Such Sayings theſe, and ſuch Thoughts of Impoſſibilities, will riſe up in the Man's Heart; o ſhall aſcend into Heaven to bring Chriſt down from above? Or when he is brought n from Heaven here upon Earth in the Nature of a Man, who ſhall perſwade him to dergo the Wrath of God for my Sins, and to ſatisfy for them, or they muſt never be isfied for? Or if he be willing to do it, who ſhall ſupport him in undergoing this? Or ſhall go down into the Deep, into the Abyſs, to bring up this Chriſt again from the d? for he muſt riſe again, or elſe he can never ſatisfy for my Sins, and ſo I ſhall nebe ſaved: O who can do all this? A Jew now would have all theſe Thoughts, have tired himſelf in theſe Impoſſibilities concerning his Salvation, if once he he cannot have it by the Law which hitherto he hath gone by. And theſe Words ich the Apoſtle here uſeth, he quoteth out of Deut. 30. 11. Now you muſt w this, that tho Moſes had moſt of all preached the Law, and given it at Mount ai, and had hid the Goſpel under the Types and Shadows of legal Ceremonies, now when he was to die, he doth, through the Holy Ghoſt coming upon him, ach the Goſpel, and deliver the Covenant thereof clearly and plainly to the ws; for you may read in Deut. 29. 1. that he calls it, the Words of the Covenant ch the Lord commanded Moſes to make with the Children of Iſrael in the Land of oab, beſide the Covenant which he made with them in Horeb. It is another Covent; and therefore the Apoſtle pertinently quotes the Words of this laſt great Sermon of Moſes, to diſtinguiſh the Covenant of Works and the Covenant of Grace, Now then he propounds this Covenant unto them, and when the Soul comes to enter into that Covenant, being left naked by the Law, Moſes ſheweth the Averſeneſs that is in the Heart thereunto, and how apt the Spirits of Men are to turn aſide into all ſort of Thoughts of Impoſſibilities in the way of that Covenant. When the Law was given in Horeb, Exod. 19. 8. when that other Covenant was given O then they were very forward, as if they would have undertaken to have fulfilled the whole Law; All that the Lord hath ſpoken (ſay they) that will we do: But when Moſes comes to preach this other Covenant, beſides that which he had taught them before, he knew well enough (as the 11*th* Verſe of that Deut. 30. hath it) tha they would ſay in their Hearts, O this is hid from us. But this Commandment (ſaith he) which I command thee this day, it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off; It i not in Heaven, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall go up for us to Heaven, and bring it unto us that we may hear it and do it? (You may ſee that they made a greater Difficulty of this Covenant than they did of fulfilling the Law delivered in Horeb) Neither is it beyond the Sea, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall go over the Sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it and do it? They were apt to ſay that this Covenant wa hidden from them: and the word there uſed for hidden is uſed by Moſes alſo for what is too hard, for what is impoſſible, as in Gen. 18. 11. the Angel tells Sarai when the Promiſe was made of Iſaac, Is any thing too hard for the Lord? Now if you look into Luke 1. 37. you ſhall find, that unto Mary the Mother of our Lord Chriſt, that unto her (being in the ſame Unbelief, in ſome degree of it) the Angel uſeth the ſame Expreſſion, only changeth the word too hard into impoſſible; Is any thing impoſſible for the Lord? That which is here, hidden, is all one with hard, and that i all one with impoſſible. So that this is his Meaning, (when he ſaith) Say not th Commandment is hidden from thee; that is, ſay not that it is impoſſible for thee to attain it. And by the way, let me give you this Note upon thoſe two Places laſt quoted Iſaac you know was the Type of Chriſt, eminently made ſo in Rom. 4. and alſo i Heb. 11. Now it is obſervable, that the Angel uſed the ſame word to Sarai th Mother of Iſaac when his Birth was promiſed, that the Angel uſeth to Mary, when as the Incarnation of Chriſt (typified out by Iſaac) was promiſed alſo. Now the Inſtances which Moſes gives of climbing up to Heaven, and going over the Sea, were t the Jews the Language of Impoſſibilities. They were ready to ſay, You may as we bid me go climb up to Heaven; and where ſhall we have Ladders to do that? Yo may as well bid us go over the World, and fathom the great Gulf, the great Se and fetch things from far, (which in thoſe days, becauſe they wanted the Loadſtone, and therefore could not lanch out into the vaſt Ocean, but were fain to cree along by the Coaſts, was thought a thing impoſſible) you may as well bid us d theſe things as bid us believe in this Word, and join with this Covenant you no give us. This their Hearts were apt to ſay. Now the Apoſtle alluding to th Place, and giving the Interpretation of it, ſpeaks in the Language of a Jew that to believe on Chriſt as to come, and as coming to die for him; which Jew, wh he ſhall hear that he is a Sinner, and that the Law cannot help him, nor all his Sacrifices and Oblations, but that there muſt be a Mediator that muſt ſatisfy God fo his Sins, and this Mediator muſt come from Heaven to do it, and he muſt go Hell too, and be fetched up again from thence, will preſently ſay within himſel Who ſhall go up to Heaven to perſwade the Meſſiah to come down and die for me Alas, it is impoſſible I ſhould be ſaved if this be the way of Salvation. And wh the Meſſiah is here, and is to undergo the Wrath of God, and to die upon the Croſ who ſhall ſupport him? This the Soul of a Jew would be apt to ſpeak, as ſinki under the deſperate Impoſſibilities of this way of Salvation. Now theſe Impoſbilities which the Heart of a Jew would forge, and did forge unto themſelves, t ſame under the Goſpel do the Spirits of Men, if the Holy Ghoſt leaves them but little unto themſelves. Tho they hear what God hath done, that he hath gone an ſent Jeſus Chriſt from Heaven for them, and hath fetch'd him again from the De (for what Moſes calleth the Sea, the Gulf, that the Apoſtle interprets Hell, at lea by way of Alluſion) and that God requires nothing in the World of them but to believe this, ſo ſaith ver. 9. of Rom. 10. If thou ſhalt believe in thine Heart that G hath raiſed him from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved: yet notwithſtanding tho a Chriſtian knows all this, and tho the Goſpel and the way of Believing is moſt clearly a

nakedly preached; the Soul when it forecaſteth with it ſelf all his own Sinfulneſs and Unworthineſs, and Diſcouragements, will ſink under the ſame Thoughts of the Impoſſibility of his Salvation that the Jew had, he will ſtill be ſaying, Who ſhall climb up to Heaven to bring Chriſt down to this Heart of mine? or where ſhall I have a Ladder to reach up to cloſe with Jeſus Chriſt? or if I be ſinking down to Hell, who can go and get Chriſt to put forth his Arm to pull me out again? This I ſay is the manner of the Spirits of Men even under the Goſpel. The Scope of the Apoſtle there is to hold forth two Contradictions, namely, that of all things elſe it is the moſt eaſy to believe; and that of all things elſe it is the moſt impoſſible, ſo taking in all that the ſinful Heart of Man is apt to ſay of it ſelf. It is eaſy (a Man will ſay) for it is no more but this; there is Chriſt, and there is the Word, God hath done all for you; he hath ſent Chriſt down from Heaven to die for you, and all is ready, and God requires nothing of you (when the news is brought to your Hearts) but cloſing with it. So that take the Act in it ſelf, and it is the eaſieſt thing in the World that God requires, the ſmalleſt Matter that could be required of the Sons of Men. But yet when a Man is diveſted of his own Righteouſneſs, he will have Thoughts of a thouſand Impoſſibilities, as this deſpairing Jew had; and he will ſtill have ſuch Sayings in his Heart, Who ſhall bring this Chriſt down hither? and who ſhall move this Chriſt to pull me up from the Deep when I am ſinking thither? Is it poſſible that God ſhould ever do thus for me? Is there any Hope that he ſhould regard my Soul ſo from Everlaſting as to perſwade his Son to come and die for me that am thus and thus a Sinner? Is it poſſible that ever Salvation and I ſhould meet? That though God hath ſent Chriſt down from Heaven, and he is come up again from the Deep, is it likely that Chriſt ſhould do this for me? I may as well think to climb up to Heaven and take hold of Chriſt there, and go down into the Deep and come up with Chriſt there in my Heart, as to believe this. The Heart, I ſay, is apt to fall into theſe Thoughts of Impoſſiblities. I have been the longer upon this, becauſe it gives Light to that Scripture which is exceeding difficult to underſtand. I know there is another Meaning of the Words, namely, that when the Soul is emptied of it ſelf, and hears that there is a Chriſt, it thinks to get him by Endeavours, What though I have nothing in my ſelf, yet I hope to climb up to Heaven, &c. But the Text clearly holds forth likewiſe, thoſe deſpairing ſinful Thoughts which the Soul is apt to have when it comes to believe; therefore what ſaith the Apoſtle in the following Verſes of that Chapter, though God requires no more of Men but that they believe that God hath raiſed Chriſt from the dead, and that all thoſe Impoſſibilities which the Jew might plead are taken away, and that God looks for nothing more than that the Heart and the Word meet; yet how doth the Apoſtle complain, that although they have heard, yet who hath believed our Report? ver. 16. For a Man ſo to believe it as to give up his Soul unto it, who hath done it? Few do it; ſo that though Jeſus Chriſt be thus nakedly and plainly taught, and Men need not frame the Jews Impoſſibilities of moving Chriſt to come down from Heaven and die, and of ſupporting him under his Father's Wrath, and bringing him up again from the Grave; yet to perſwade them to reſt quietly in this Chriſt, and to have their Hearts and Wills quiet in ſo doing, how hard a Buſineſs is it? When the Soul is humbled for Sin, and ſtript of it ſelf, it is the greateſt Impoſſibility as to his own Power, to believe; who hath believed our Report? And why? Becauſe the Arm of the Lord is not revealed; it muſt be the Arm of the Lord, an Almighty Power that muſt do it.

I ſhall end this thing only with giving you the Reaſon of it, why it is thus hard, and why the Heart fancies all theſe Impoſſibilities in Faith, that though God hath done ſo much, yet to believe that God ſhould have done this ſo for me as that I may come and reſt upon it, and to have my Heart quieted in ſo doing, is of all things in the World the hardeſt, and the moſt impoſſible.

This is a Rule which I believe will be found true, that look what Power God puts forth in doing any thing, the ſame Power is required to draw the Heart in to believe that God is able, or that God hath done that thing; I mean to believe the thing in earneſt, ſo as to venture all my Soul for ever upon it. This is partly the Scope of that Place in Eph. 1. 18, 19. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that the ſame Power that went to raiſe up Chriſt from the dead, goes to the working of Faith in them that believe. The Jew now in his Deſpair (becauſe Chriſt was not as yet come) muſt needs conclude

Part 3. that it muſt be an Almighty Power and Engagement that muſt draw Chriſt from Heaven, and ſupport him under the Wrath of God, and bring him from Hell to be a Saviour unto him. But now after all this is done, there muſt yet go as great a Power to cauſe a Man to believe that Chriſt hath done all this for him, as there did to make Chriſt do this. The Place is expreſs in that Eph. 1. 19. where the Apoſtle plainly ſaith that the ſame Greatneſs of Power which wrought in Chriſt when he was raiſed from the dead, works in thoſe that believe, in cauſing the Soul to reſt quietly upon this Chriſt for Juſtification and Salvation. So that although God now requires nothing of us under the Goſpel but to believe the thing is done, (in the manner I have ſpoken) yet there muſt be as much Power go to work that Faith in the Soul, as to bring Chriſt from Heaven, and to raiſe him up again, which was the thing the Jew in his Deſpairings ſtuck at. This is a great Truth, (and I ſhall give you a farther Ground for it) that it is all one for God to do a thing, and to make a Man believe it, and that the ſame Power is required to the one as much as the other. In Mark 9. 22, 23. the Father of the poſſeſſed Child comes to our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and what ſaith the poor Man in the Doubtings of his Spirit, and Miſgivings of his Heart? Lord (ſaith he) if thou canſt do any thing, have Compaſſion on us and help us: There he queſtions Chriſt and his Power. What Anſwer doth Chriſt give him again, who had more Reaſon to queſtion him than he had to queſtion Chriſt? Jeſus ſaid unto him, If thou canſt believe, all things are poſſible to him that believeth. Here Chriſt and the Man do as it were ſtand looking one at another; If thou canſt help me (ſaith the Man), if thou canſt believe (ſaith Chriſt), all things are poſſible. I obſerve this from it, that Jeſus Chriſt makes it the greateſt Matter to believe; when the poor Man asked him if he could do that which required an Omnipotent Power, ſaith he, canſt thou believe? As the Man thought it hard for Chriſt to do this, ſo Chriſt knew it was hard for the Man to believe it, therefore ſaith he, canſt thou believe? And he gives the Reaſon of the Hardneſs of it, becauſe he that believes aright, that Man's Faith doth inveſt it ſelf as it were, and doth join iſſue with the Omnipotent Power of God; and he that believeth the one, viz. that an Infinite Power that can do thus and thus, his Faith is ſtretched to a kind of Infinitneſs; therefore ſaith Chriſt in the next Words, All things are poſſible unto him that believeth. Now for a Man when he is convinced of his Sinfulneſs, to believe that God is able to pardon him, or to believe any thing elſe in the Matter of Salvation, there muſt be as great a Power come from God to make a Man do this in earneſt, to work this in a Man's Heart that this is poſſible to be done, as there is Power in God to do it; God can as eaſily do it as he can do the thing it ſelf, and he can as eaſily do the thing it ſelf, as make the Man believe it. As there is a Hand of Omnipotency ſtretched out to do things of Omnipotency, ſo there muſt be an Eye created by the Omnipotent Power of God to elevate the Soul of a Man to ſee it, and the Will quietly to reſt upon it and to leave all elſe, and to betake it ſelf to this Power of God, to this Will of God, this Grace of God, and Mercy of God. I ſay, comparing theſe two Places together, Chriſt ſpeaks as if the Working of a Man to believe, were a Matter of as great Power as to do the thing. So far as any thing is impoſſible to any one's Thoughts, ſo far it is incredible; ſo far as it is poſſible, ſo far it is credible. And therefore if a Man believes that this thing is poſſible to be done which requires an Infinite Power to do it, he muſt believe in that Infinite Power; and it muſt be Infinite Power that muſt ſtretch the Soul to believe this, and to reſt quietly in it. Therefore to draw the Heart to believe is all one as to bring the Meſſiah down from Heaven, and up from the Grave again, though the thing it ſelf on our parts ſeem a poor Matter to it; yet take the Act it ſelf, the ſame Power goes to the one as to the other, and the Heart of a Man under the Goſpel will be as apt to object Impoſſibilities, and doth object, as the Jew himſelf did before the Meſſiah came.

CHA

CHAP. V.

That all in Man's Will is oppoſite to Faith, and withſtands his Believing.

A S there is thus an Inability in the Will to the way of Believing, ſo there is an Averſeneſs; not only is there nothing in the Will which can help a Man, but here is a Reſiſtance in the Will to the Work of Faith and to Believing. I ſhall give ou one Scripture for it, which is Joh. 5. 40. ſaith Chriſt there, You will not come to e that ye might have Life. The Place is full to the point in hand. Our Saviour Chriſt ſpeaks complainingly, and wondring at it, as you ſhall ſee by his Diſcourſe. and my Father, (ſaith he) I profeſs to you require nothing of you but that you ould have a Will to come unto me, that your Wills be but brought off to cloſe ith me according to my Worth; that you would be but a willing People, as it is Pſal. 110. and as he ſaith in Rev. 22. 17. He that is a willing Man (ſo the word in the Original) let him take of the Water of Life freely. Thus ſpeaks he here, I quire nothing elſe but that you have a Will to come unto me; and as he ſaid at the th Verſe of John 5. to the Man that had an Infirmity thirty eight Years, Wilt ou be made whole? (that is, haſt thou a Will to be made whole by me, by leaving ll things elſe, and giving thy ſelf up unto me and my Power? I require nothing ſe of thee) ſo ſaith he to theſe Jews, I require no more of Men to be ſaved, but at they will come unto me; yet, ſaith he, (and he ſpeaks wondring at it) you will t come to me that ye might have Life. It is certain of the Phariſees, whom he ſpake , and ſo of all Men elſe, that their Wills pitch upon this, that they would be ſaved. is clear theſe Phariſees did ſo; you think (ſaith he) to have eternal Life in Moſes s Writings, I know there is one Moſes in whom ye truſt, ver. 45. But mark it, d ſee the infinite Stubborneſs and Averſeneſs of the Will of Man in his natural ondition by this Inſtance; you would fain have eternal Life, (ſaith he) and you ink to have it by the Scriptures and Moſes's Law, and ſo you chooſe rather to nture your Salvations upon doing all that Moſes hath ſaid, and you will rather go d truſt in Moſes as a Lawgiver, as one that hath preſented God as a Judg to you, ho hath curſed you if you continue not in every thing the Law requires to do, d ſo venture upon that Curſe, rather than you will be brought off to come to me r everlaſting Life. This is clearly his Scope. In reading the Scriptures (ſaith he) u will make ſuch Interpretations of them as ſhall fit your curſed Opinions, of at-ining Salvation in a legal Way, rather than you will go ſearch the Scriptures a lit- more to ſee how Moſes propheſied of me. Search the Scriptures, (ſaith he) for y are they which teſtify of me; but you will not come to me that ye might have fe, you will truſt in Moſes rather, yea in Moſes that accuſeth you, for in your Con-ences you cannot but find that Moſes doth accuſe you. I come as a Saviour, and quire nothing of you but a Will to come unto me, and you will not do it; you will venture your ſelves upon a killing Letter, upon a Miniſtry of Condemnation, d not upon the Law of Free Grace. Nay Chriſt aggravates the Sin of Man's ill by this, ver. 43. If a Man come in his own Name, him you will receive. Theſe rſed Jews (give me leave to call them ſo, for the Wrath of God came on them to e uttermoſt) did and would truſt upon I know not how many falſe Chriſts, that thoſe Days, and after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, told them they were Meſſiahs. They me in their own Names, meerly in their own Power, without any Miracles; but, h Chriſt, I am come in my Father's Name, and not in my own Name, and I come with all Power and Miracles, and yet you do not receive me, you will not lieve me, no not for my Work's ſake. What can be clearer than this, that in the ills of Men there is that inbred in them, that of all things they will take any urſe rather than clearly and nakedly, and entirely give up themſelves to Jeſus riſt to have eternal Life in his way?

The Reaſons of this Averſneſs in the Will of Man to the Way of Believing, are iefly theſe:

1. The Will of Man is ſet, if it will be ſaved, to be ſaved in its own way. It is tural to Men if they be not ſaved that way that they themſelves would, for the ill to grow ſturdy. If God will ſave them in their own way, then indeed they are

are willing to be ſaved, but they will not be ſaved in God's way. Look what way the Heart of a Man naturally fancieth to it ſelf to be ſaved in, (as it doth the way of Doing and the like) that way the Will ſticks to; and you may move the Earth off of its Center as ſoon as move the Heart off of that way it is ſet upon. A Man is apt to be in a Chaſe if he cannot have a thing in his own way: As in that Inſtance of Naaman in 2 Kings 5.11,12. I thought (ſaith he in a Pet and in a Chaſe) that he would ſurely have come out to me, and do ſo and ſo; doth he bid me go and waſh in Jordan? I could have waſhed at home in better Waters than all the Waters of Iſrael. So that becauſ the Way for his Cure, which was deſigned by the Prophet, was ſo contrary to th Way that his Fancy and Mind pitched upon, hence therefore he would have none of it. So is it with the ſturdy Spirits of Men to this day. The way that pure Natur went was a way of doing; and the Will of Man ſticks to that way ſtill, and never will be brought over but by an Almighty Power; for you may as ſoon throw th Earth off the Hinges of it, as ſtir and remove the Will from its obſtinate Poſture. If you have any Work for me to do, ſaith the Will or Conſcience, I will be doing; but to believe, I am reſolved againſt it.

I will give you an Inſtance of it in the Galatians. It is evident the Apoſtle thought they had true Grace many of them; it is clear in Gal. 5. 8. This Perſwaſion cometh of him that calleth you; and I am confident, ſaith he, that God will bring you of again. But yet notwithſtanding ſee the Madneſs of it, (as he himſelf calls it, and truly it is a ſtrange thing, but that Nature will have its Courſe in the Hearts o Men, otherwiſe I ſay it is the ſtrangeſt thing in the World) that theſe Galatians ſo that they might eaſe themſelves a little of waiting through the Spirit for th Righteouſneſs of Faith, would chooſe to be in Bondage to the whole Ceremoni Law: Nay, which makes the Wonder yet more, the Gentiles (ſuch as theſe Gala tians were) never had the Ceremonial Law given them; and therefore though th Apoſtle did permit the Jews to continue in the Ceremonial Law after the Aſcenſio though they were Believers, yet Paul flies in the Face of the Gentiles if they offere it; for (ſaith he) you were never under it: yet (I ſay) theſe Galatians would ra ther put themſelves under a Yoke which they were free of, which God never at an time put upon them, than through the Spirit wait for the Hope of Righteouſneſs by Faith. So prevalent is this Strain of Spirit which is in the Conſciences and Wills o Men, and ſuch an Averſeneſs to the Matter of Believing; not an Averſeneſs to Salva tion, for all Men deſire that, but to the way of Salvation, which is by Faith in Je ſus Chriſt, that Men would rather do any thing than believe. The great Conte between God and the Hearts of Men, is practically, though Men know and diſcer that God will have them ſaved in his Way, yet they will be ſaved in their own Wa and upon their own Terms; and rather than they will believe in Chriſt (which i God's way of Salvation) they will put themſelves under the hardeſt Bondage th can be. You may ſee it verified in the Papiſts, (and truly there is a world of th Popery in the Hearts of all Men) they would rather go and give over their Kin doms, put themſelves into Monaſteries, lie in Hair, live upon the Alms of other tire out themſelves by ſaying the whole Book of Pſalms over once every Twent four Hours, and to that end riſe twice or thrice in the Night, break their Sleep whip and rend their Bodies, do all this rather than betake themſelves to Faith; fo indeed there is nothing they jear more and contemn, than the way of Juſtification b Faith. And many of Chriſt's Sheep themſelves hang in theſe Briars, and do no come home clearly and fully to this Way of God; they will ſit down in Humiliatio I know not how many Years before they will ſtir a foot to Jeſus Chriſt, and the Fre Grace of God; they will go and ſpend all their Time and Thoughts in proving th old Work (which hath it may be been true and found in it ſelf) rather than ſtir im mediately unto Jeſus Chriſt and Free Grace, to begin a new or a farther Work up them. Experience ſhews how true this is in the Souls of Men; and the Rea is this, becauſe Man ſticks in this, to be ſaved in his own Way, and will not be ſave in God's Way; even juſt as Naaman the Syrian acted in the Inſtance before me tioned.

2. The ſecond Reaſon, or rather the ſecond and chief Thing in the Will of Ma that makes it thus averſe, is that Self (as I may ſo call it) that is in every Ma That which we call Self, or ſticking to a Man's Self, and pleaſing of a Man's Se this ſame Self is ſtrongeſt in the Will above all other Powers in a Man. The W s the Throne and Seat of Self, even as the Heart is the Seat of Spirits: And Self vill always reſt in it Self, as the Earth doth upon its Center, and will never be emoved till that Jeſus Chriſt flings it off of its own Hinges. Now as the Will is the hief Seat of Self, ſo the chiefeſt of Self-denial lies in the Will in the way of Belieing: as when a Man comes to believe, there is a great deal of Self-denial in the Un-erſtanding; but the great Self-denial lies in the Will. There is a great deal of Self-enial in the Underſtanding, Prov. 3. 15. Truſt in the Lord with all thine Heart, d lean not unto thine own Underſtanding. There are no things more oppoſite than aith, and leaning unto a Man's own Underſtanding; therefore I ſay there is a great elf-denial there, to give up all my Thoughts for ever to the Wiſdom and Authority

f another, to give God leave to take out both my Eyes, and only to take me by the Hand, and lead me and guide me whither he will, and to ſtrengthen me and teach me he way whither I ſhould go, to bring every Thought into the Obedience of Chriſt, his is great Self-denial. But the Will is more put to it. You ſhall find in Rom. 10.
hat Paul doth reſolve the Reaſon of Mens not believing into the Wills of Men, and nto the Want of Self-denial there. He begins to tell them a ſtrange thing at the tter end of the 9th Chapter; What ſhall me ſay? ſaith he, ver. 30. I'll tell you a range thing, which you will all wonder at, and know not what to ſay to; yet I muſt ſay
: and what is that? It is this, (ſaith he) The Gentiles which followed not after ighteouſneſs, have attained to Righteouſneſs. This is a Contradiction, that thoſe at did not follow nor purſue after Righteouſneſs at all, ſhould attain it; eſpecially u will think ſo when you hear the reſt; But Iſrael which followed after the Law of ighteouſneſs, hath not attained to the Law of Righteouſneſs, or, the Righteouſneſs of e Law. There muſt be ſome great Reaſon of this. He tells you the Reaſon of it.
rſt, he ſaith that the Righteouſneſs which the Gentiles attained was the Righteouſ- ſs which is of Faith: So ver. 30. But Iſrael (ſaith he) hath not attained to the Law Righteouſneſs: Why? Becauſe they ſought it not by Faith, but as it were by the Works the Law, ſo ver. 32. And God (ſaith he) hath made theſe two ſo contradictory e to another, that he that doth ſeek Righteouſneſs as it were by Works, though may mince the Matter much, yet he ſhall never attain to it; for the Holy Ghoſt th pronounced it in Gal. 5. 4. that Chriſt is of no effect to him that goes that way.
that theſe two being incompatible, hence it was that the Jew could not attain to e Righteouſneſs he ſought for. But what was it that hindered him? The Apoe ſatisfies us, Rom. 10. ver. 3. They being ignorant of God's Righteouſneſs, and going ut to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the Righuſneſs of God. He aſcribes it firſt to an Ignorance in them; there now comes in e Underſtanding, they being ignorant (ſaith he) of God's Righteouſneſs. But then e other two Hindrances lie in the Will, and they do lie in the Will where Self th its principal Seat and Throne. For he ſaith, they ſought to eſtabliſh their own ighteouſneſs; mark that word, their own Righteouſneſs. When we are ſaid to be ved, it is according to God's own Purpoſe and Grace, (as I remember the Expreſ-on is in 2 Theſſ. 1. 12.) Here now doth Self come in, and will needs ſet up its own ghteouſneſs. He brings it in, like to a Deſign that a Company of Men have in a ate; As they would ſet ſuch a one up King, and all their Courſes bend that way; as a Step-mother would ſet up her Son to be King againſt the true Heir; ſo they ght to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs; there lies the Reaſon, you ſee Self is it, they ſought to eſtabliſh it becauſe it is their own. And they were zealous in s; for they being ignorant of God's Righteouſneſs, were zealous of their own.
d this word eſtabliſh is exceeding emphatical; it is making a thing that is totte-
g to ſtand: like ſetting up a dead Man or a ſick Man; if you ſet him up again again, he falls; but yet their Deſign was, that though all their Works of Righuſneſs did fall before their own Conſciences, and their own Hearts miſgave em, yet Self was ſo ſtrong in them as it would needs be ſtill making their own ghteouſneſs to ſtand; they ſought to eſtabliſh it, as the Apoſtle ſaith. As Man aid to ſeek out many Inventions, ſo all the Endeavour and Sway of their Heart nt that way; which notes out the natural Deſign and Project, and Drift of their arts, that they ſought to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs.

2. But then a ſecond thing in the Will is, a Pride which would not be ſubject to e Righteouſneſs of God: ſo the next words are, but have not ſubmitted themſelves ith he) to the Righteouſneſs of God. They had ſome Glimmerings of it certainly both

both in the Miniſtry of the Prophets and holy Men amongſt them, who did teach in their Synagogues, but ſtill they would not ſubmit, and all that could be done could never bring them to it. It is the ſame word that is uſed in Rom. 8. 7. where, ſpeaking of the Corruption that is in us, of Fleſh, he ſaith it is Enmity againſt God, for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. There is a great deal of Enmity naturally in Men againſt the Law of God, againſt the Duties and Commands of it; but there is ten thouſand times more Enmity in the Wills of Men againſt the Way of the Goſpel. Here the Word likewiſe is a Paſſive Word; they would not be ſubjected, all that could be done would not bring them under. So that clearly and plainly you ſee, it is not only an Ignorance in the Underſtanding, and carnal Reaſonings there; it is not only a ſinking of the Will out of Apprehenſions of Impoſſibilities, and foſtering all ſuch Apprehenſions, (as it is ver. 6. of Rom. 10.) but it is alſo a going about to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs, and a not ſubmitting, out of Pride of Heart, (a ſecret Pride of Spirit of Self in a Man) unto the Righteouſneſs of God; that is, that Righteouſneſs which God out of our ſelves in Chriſt hath provided for us.

Now let us conſider what of Self there is in the Will, and how far the Principle of Self is againſt Believing, and how far Self is denied in it, and that not in the Conſequence of Believing, but in the Acts and Concomitants of it.

And before I ſhall ſay what I have to ſay thereof in the Particulars, let me ſay this to you firſt; That of all Corruptions in your Hearts, the Working of Self in the Will of a Man, is the moſt ſtill, the moſt ſecret. It is not drawn forth into Propoſitions; a Man doth not ſay diſtinctly within himſelf, I will have none of God's Righteouſneſs, but mine own; no, the Workings of Self-love in a Man do ſeldom come forth into ſuch diſtinct Thoughts; but it is inlayed, and it works naturally, ſlily, ſlowly, and ſtrongly: yet when a Man ſhall reſolve his Actions into Principles, he ſhall find that that is at bottom. So that I ſay it may be you will not find what I ſhall now ſay of this Self, to ariſe in diſtinct Thoughts within you; but yet the Principle of Self being in the Will, ſways it that way, that it will not ſubmit to the Righteouſneſs of God: It is inlayed (I ſay) in it, and connatural. The Thoughts of Unbelief are ſeldom drawn forth into Propoſitions. Who almoſt in his Heart doth diſtinctly and deliberately think there is no God? Yet the Thought that there is no God ſways all the Life of a wicked Man; The Fool hath ſaid in his Heart there is no God; and that is the Reaſon of all his Sinfulneſs. Who is there that ſaith within himſelf, I will thus and thus love my ſelf, I am reſolved and purpoſed ſo to do? It needeth not, it is inlayed in a Man's Heart, and there needs no new Purpoſe or Reſolution ſo to do.

Now let us conſider what Self-denial God requires in the Will when a Man comes to believe. I will not urge that which ſome have urged, as, That in Believing the Soul muſt ſo come to God as to aim more at glorifying God in it, than the ſaving of himſelf, and have ſuch a diſtinct Thought within himſelf. That this ſhould be the Aim of a Man's Faith when firſt he comes to God and to Chriſt, or that this ſhould be the Self-denial that God requires, diſtinctly ſo to do, is too hard to put the Truth of Faith upon. You ſhall obſerve the Scripture ſpeaks unto Men coming out of their natural Eſtates, and when they come to believe, and inviteth them upon Principles of Self-love, What ſhall I do to be ſaved, ſaith the poor Heart? Believe, and thou ſhalt be ſaved, ſaith the Scripture. Only the Law of Faith is to do ſo and ſo for him that died for thee. The Truth is, to ſay that the Glory of God ſhould be the Aim of a Man's Heart in his firſt Believing, or elſe his Heart is not right, is to make the Love of God to be before Faith in a Man. Neither will I urge the Point of Self-denial, which is higher than the former, that a Man muſt be content to be diſpoſed by God as he pleaſeth, be willing to be ſaved, or to go to Hell, to be diſpoſed of any way, ſo God may be glorified. I wonder that any ſhould make this at leaſt part of Preparation to Faith, which is the higheſt Act that can be ſuppoſed to flow from Believing at any time, and than which nothing is greater. That any ſhould make that to go before Faith, which God ſeldom or never puts Men to when he hath given them Aſſurance, and hath given them Communion with himſelf, for then they are out of the Suppoſition of it. I ſay this is hard to me; and certainly it is not this Self-denial that is thus the Concomitant of Faith. And I ſhall ſay of it through the Grace that is given me, only this, That as in the Sin againſt the ly Ghoſt (for ſo I uſe to call it) there is ſuch an Enmity in the Heart of a wick- Man that ſins that great Sin, as to deſire above all things to be revenged upon d (for that is the Property of that Sin): As that, I ſay, is the higheſt Degree of , ſo this is the higheſt Diſpoſition of Grace. Now Millions of wicked Men ve never that Spirit of Enmity againſt God drawn out as they that ſin that Sin ve: So on the contrary, there is many a Soul that has abundance of Grace and lineſs, and goes to Heaven with it, that never had this Diſpoſition of Self-denial wn forth out of it. It is indeed a Duty, but upon occaſion, when the Heart is to it, either in deſperate Temptations, or elſe ſometimes in a way of Suppoſi- n hypothetically, when the Soul enjoys moſt Communion with God. It is when d begins with his Soveraignty to contend with the Will of a Man, and reſolves break it. I will not ſay but there is that in Grace which will do it, for there is Attribute in God but the Image of God in us hath ſomewhat to anſwer and com- withal; therefore if God will ſhew his Soveraignty in the Salvations of Men, if Sovereignty will put the Heart to it, where the Image of God is there is a Prin- le to comply with that Sovereignty. But this I ſay, God doth not do it, or but dom, and but to a few: and therefore this is not that Self-denial (which I am w to ſpeak to) which is a Hindrance in the way of Believing. God doth not in- on the Denial of mere Self, but of ſinful Self. Now to put a Man upon a be- contented to go to Hell that God may be glorified is the Denial of mere Self, d God doth not always put this upon Men. I confeſs it is a Forfeit, which be- ſe we are Sinners God may take of us and make us vail to; but God doth not or- arily put Men to it. Chriſt indeed in the Goſpel puts Men upon the Denial of ful Self, (How can you believe (ſaith he, John 5. 44.) if you love your ſelves?) not upon the other. And tho Paul did it, and Moſes did it, yet it was not in rſuit of their own Salvations, and as a Condition of being ſaved, but in Zeal to d for the Salvation of others. The truth is, God leads Men on in the way of lieving rather by glorifying his Free Grace in ſaving Men, not only in ſaving m at laſt, but in letting them ſee that his Glory and their Good are joined toge- r, and that this ſhould ſtrengthen their Faith, that in their Salvation God will be nitely glorified: And God loves us ſo well, as he would have us in ſeeking Salva- n from him, and in ſeeking his Glory, therein to love our ſelves alſo. But now come to thoſe Self-denials which are in the Will, and which are oppoſite to the y of Believing in a more ordinary way: There are two Objects of Faith, the is Chriſt and the Righteouſneſs God placed in him, and of God's Appoint- nt; and there is the Free Grace of God towards us which is in the Heart of God mſelf, and which is delivered to us in all thoſe indefinite Promiſes which are in the ripture. Now the Will of a Man is to deal with both theſe, and is put upon a lf-denial in both theſe.

1. Indeed tho God did not take that Forfeiture, (namely, to make the Condition Salvation this, that a Man ſhould be content for the Glory of God to go to Hell, ing he deſerved it) I ſay, tho he doth not urge that Forfeiture, yet he will have u ſaved in and through another Perſon than your ſelves, or you ſhall never be ved; and he will have your Wills come off to it, and this is a juſt and a neceſſary rfeiture for God to urge upon the Wills of Men: The Life that I now live (ſaith ul) it is by Faith in the Son of God, Gal. 2. 20. And I ſay, that this Forfeiture th God taken of Men by reaſon of the Fall: Saith God now, It's true I did truſt ur own Wills once with Power and Ability to ſave your ſelves, and you had all your own Hands, but you have forfeited your ſelves to Deſtruction, and you ve forfeited your own Power for ever, forfeited the having of it in you as you had before; therefore now I will betruſt it in the Hands of another, whom you ſhall e in, whom you ſhall have Recourſe unto for every Penny you receive, and you ll have Recourſe continually unto him as Beggars, even unto my Son the Lord ſus Chriſt. This Forfeiture I ſay God takes of us as we are Sinners, and it is ell he did ſo, and indeed Salvation muſt come that way, or we could never elſe be ved. Now then if I muſt go thus out of my ſelf, and continually live upon ano- er, then Self in me muſt for ever be laid aſide, as it neceſſarily follows: and God refore hath made the way of Salvation the moſt contradictory unto Self, and to e way of Self, that can be; he hath ſet up not our own, but his Righteouſneſs, d that Righteouſneſs too in another. Now this Self-denial is the hardeſt Self-denial in the World. To make this ſorth to you: Is it not a great matter, think you, for the Soul to be content to be nothing in it ſelf, and Chriſt to be all for ever, to throw away and to forget it ſelf, to be loſt to it ſelf, and dead to it ſelf, as Paul ſaid he was, Gal. 2. 19, 20. And I have nothing (ſaith he, 2 Cor. 12. 1.) tho I have done more than all the Apoſtles? Is it not a great Self-denial not only to take Chriſt into the Heart to rule all a Man's Paſſions and Deſires, but that he muſt not only rule all, but do all there; and that he muſt have the Glory of all that is done? And ſo to have the Glory, as that all boaſting, no not a Thought of it muſt riſe or lift up it ſelf? I ſay not that Faith doth actually keep down all ſuch Thoughts in a Man, but this is the way of Believing which the Spirit of a Man muſt ſubject to. Faith excludeth Boaſting, boaſting even in Works, and in Works of Righteouſneſs; that's clear in Epheſ. 2. 9. For a Man to ſay, I have nothing but the Grace of God in me, this I ſay is the greateſt Self-denial the Creature can be put to, and it is certain that the natural Sway and Bent of the Heart is moſt oppoſite to this of any thing. Now this Self hath gotten by forfeiting it ſelf through Sin, that it muſt be loſt thus for ever; but it is well loſt, for it is loſt in him that ſaves it with a greater Salvation. And this Forfeiture doth God take of Self in every thing; ſo that Self as it were loſeth the Right of the Creation, that is, that Law which paſt between the Creature and the Creator about it, which was this, that according to the Law of Creation it had his Righteouſneſs in his own keeping; it could ſay, This have I done, this is my own Righteouſneſs, of my own getting, tho you gave me the ſtock to ſet up withal; this is the Happineſs of my own keeping: And it was allowed him to ſay ſo. You have it clearly, Rom. 4. 2, 3, 4, 5. in the Apoſtle's diſtinguiſhing the two Covenants; He that is ſaved by Works, he hath whereof to glory, (ſaith he) as Adam had, and the Reward came of Debt, of a natural Due: But now Self muſt fall lower. A Man muſt not only have all this Boaſting of Self for ever excluded, but he muſt reckon himſelf for ever ungodly, as it follows there in that Rom. 4. 5. I muſt believe on him that juſtifies the Ungodly. Now that a Man ſhould be in himſelf ungodly, cuts off that ſame I, that ſame Self, makes it a Cypher to Eternity; that tho a Man is a Creature ſtill, yet the Truth is, he is raſed out of the Catalogue of Creatures: Of him ye are in Chriſt Jeſus, 1 Cor. 1. 30. It is a mighty Expreſſion of the Apoſtle's. You were ſomething once, but now you are what you are in Chriſt Jeſus. To have Self, I ſay, thus to be a Cypher in being, nothing in doing, nothing in Righteouſneſs, nothing in making a Man's ſelf happy, yea to be an ungodly Self in a Man's own Account, worſe than nothing, (as that Place in the Romans ſhews) and Chriſt to be all here, is a Self-denial that the Heart is brought to and brought off to, and gladly brought off to when it comes to believe. Adam was to aim at God, and to make God his End in all things, as we do, and to reſpect himſelf as little, but in the point of Believing we fall lower, for that emptieth and annihilateth us. How ſhould this be done, think you? How ſhall a Man be brought to this? You may as ſoon fling the Earth off its Centre, and hang the huge Hills in the Air. If you ſhould ſee the Earth remove and hang in the Air by virtue of a Load-ſtone, what a Miracle would this be to us! as hard a thing is it to throw Self off of it ſelf. For the truth is, the other having been the way of Nature, even in pure Nature, Self will never, eſpecially now when corrupted, go out of it ſelf. If you have any Work for it to do within doors, it will do it; yea, and work it ſelf to death, even for Salvation, as many have done; but to go abroad, to live upon Alms, to ſtand to the Courteſy of another, this is what Self was never brought up to; and therefore like one that had a great Eſtate in his own Hands, will think much to come down and live upon mere Courteſy and upon Alms, he will rather be content to ſcrabble up any thing (tho it be much leſs than what he might have upon Courteſy and upon the Alms of others) to get a living, nay if he can get but Husks, he would rather do it than enjoy the faireſt Life in coming under another: ſo it is here. This is therefore I ſay the higheſt Self-denial, and yet this is the Self-denial of Faith, and that in the Will of a Man, in relation unto Jeſus Chriſt, whom God hath appointed us to live by.

2. Faith is likewiſe to deal with the Free Grace of God. What is the eminent Principle of God's Free Grace? It is his Will; I will be merciful (ſays God, Exod. 33. 19. Rom. 9. 15.) to whom I will be merciful: and he hath made known to us the Myſtery of his Will; ſo the Goſpel is called, and the Promiſe of Salvation, Epheſ. 1. 9.

. 9. Our Wills now muſt come and deal with this Will of God, and to be ſure hat is croſs to Self. Now to mention the Self-denials in that reſpect, I do not ſay heſe things are always drawn into diſtinct Thoughts, but the Heart doth this by a ew inlaid Principle which God puts into the Spirit of a Man.

1ſt. The firſt thing herein is this, that though God doth not urge this, that a Man ſhall ſo take Chriſt, that is, that a Man ſhall be contented to be damned ſo as od be glorified if he ſave him: No, the poor Soul doth ſeek for, and God treats with it for Salvation, therefore why ſhould that be urged as a Condition, or a Quaification, or Preparation before a Man comes to believe? yet if you believe, and elieve in earneſt, you ſubmit to God to be diſpoſed of in this World, not accordng to your Wills, but according to his own Will. The Law of believing carries his with it. When thou waſt young thou wenteſt whither thou wouldeſt, (ſaith Chriſt o Peter, John 21. 18.) that is, when he was firſt converted; but when thou ſhalt be ld, another ſhall carry thee whither thou wouldſt not. It was Chriſt in his Will that arried him whither his fleſhly Will would not. Now this alſo is a Forfeiture we ave brought upon our ſelves by ſinning. The truth is, we brought it upon Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, for he thus reſign'd his whole ſelf to God, Not my Will, but thy Will e done: yea, it was to the undergoing of his Father's Wrath, tho he knew it was ot for Eternity. But to be in this World as Chriſt was, to be content to be poor nd to be deſpiſed, let a Man be never ſo great, to have all his high Thoughts rought down when the Glory of God in believing is manifeſted unto him; and for im that is of high degree to rejoice that he is made low, Jam. 1. 10. For a Man ſo to alue the Favour of God and Free Grace which he ſeeks, as to be contented to be iſpoſed of thus, or elſe he is not worthy of it, as Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 10. 37, 38. (O let me be as an hired Servant, ſaith the Prodigal, Luke 15. 19. ſo I may be in thy Houſe) For a Man to ſay, tho I am a Dog, yet let me have ſome Crums, ſome Mery, let me have Salvation: (ſaith Paul, If by any means God would ſave me:) Here s a Self-denial now that Faith bringeth, and here is a great deal of Load upon the Will, even in this if there were no more. But then again,

2dly. We are brought to this Self-denial likewiſe, being Sinners, to make a Venure of our Souls (if I may ſo expreſs it) upon him that is free to ſave us or to detroy us, to throw away our ſelves in a Dependency upon ſuch a God as ſhews Mery freely, and to venture intirely upon this Free Grace and rich Love of his. Faith s the greateſt Venture that ever was made in the World, it is more than to commit a little Cockboat without Oars to the Mercy of Waves and Winds, to be caried to ſuch a Shoar. This God hath fairly obtained by our Sins. He carries it reely, as we muſt all know, he commands us to believe, to venture our ſelves thus pon him. All Believers when they come firſt in, make this Venture more or leſs; We believe that we may be juſtified, Gal. 2. 16. They did not know that they ſhould e juſtified certainly, the Apoſtles themſelves did not. Now to venture a Man's elf upon a who can tell, as I may ſo expreſs it, and as the Scripture expreſſeth it in oel 2. 14. Who can tell if he will return and repent, and leave a Bleſſing behind him? And for the Will in this caſe to deal with one, that if he be of one mind, who can urn him? as it is in Job 23. This is a great Self-denial: for mark it, when Self n a Man is awakened, and awakened with Apprehenſions of ſo great a Matter as alvation and Damnation is to a Man's Soul, when the Soul is awakened to purpoſe, nd a Man comes to God with whom he deals upon Terms of Free Grace, all in Self uſt needs be infinitely ſolicitous accordingly. Look how high a Man's Value of alvation is, look of what moment he apprehends Damnation to be of, ſo far is Self p in Arms, all up in Arms about it; and what ſaith Self? O let me be aſſured preently: As in all points of moment you know what infinite Fears a Man will have f he have not Aſſurance, becauſe of the Greatneſs of the thing, for the Greatneſs f the thing hinders quiet truſting. And when Self is thus awakened, eſpecially orrupt Self, (for we have nothing elſe in our ſelves by Nature) what a buſtle muſt his needs make in the Soul of a Man to make this great Venture? how ſolicitous is e? and how hard to be quieted by a pure Truſt in God? In this caſe, for the Soul o be called ſo from it ſelf, and from its own ſtanding, to be perſwaded to leave its wn Footing, and all the carnal Support and the Confidence it once had, in the way hat is natural to it, by which it gets Peace, to be perſwaded I ſay to go and throw t ſelf off of this ſtanding; Self is in this caſe the moſt wary Principle that can be. Therefore now to go and venture upon this God, and upon the Freedom of his Grace, upon the Promiſes of God, upon the Commands of God, to ſtand at God's Arbitriment thus, and to refer a Man's Will to his Will, and to caſt a Man's ſelf into thoſe everlaſting Arms, (as they are called in Deut. 33.) to leave a Man's own ſtanding; it is as if a Man ſhould leave his own ſtanding, and caſt himſelf into the Arms of a mighty Giant that ſtands upon another Pinacle, one whom he hath alſo wronged and abuſed often, and he himſelf hath no Hands to lay hold upon him neither, but he muſt depend upon his catching of him: Here is the greateſt Venture, the greateſt Truſt, the greateſt Self-denial that can be. Thus the Heart throws it ſelf out of all Poſſibilities, and ſubmits to the Free Grace of God in Chriſt, and this is done in believing. And then,

3dly. In the way of Believing Self is yet often-times more put to it: for God makes a Man wait, and makes him wait long; ſo that tho God doth not put a Man to that Submiſſion that he ſhould be content for his Perſon to be damned ſo God may be glorified, yet he puts him to this Submiſſion oftentimes, that he ſhall wait his time for revealing of his Grace and Love to him: And therein God ſhews the Freeneſs of his Grace exceedingly, that altho it is certain that whoever doth venture himſelf thus, that doth thus throw himſelf upon the Lord Jeſus Chriſt and God's Free Grace, ſhall certainly obtain in the Iſſue; yet for the Manifeſtation of this I will be free, ſaith God, I will take my own time. Now in this caſe, for the Soul ſtill to ſubmit to this Free Grace of God, to wait upon the Manifeſtation of it, and this when God hides his Face, (as in Iſa. 8. 17. I will wait upon the Lord that hideth his Face from the Houſe of Jacob, and I will look for him): For the Soul I ſay to do this, and to do this with any Quietneſs, in a Matter of ſo great moment, is the greateſt Self-denial that can be. The Eyes of Men are apt to fail with looking for the Salvation of God, (as David expreſſeth it in Pſal. 119. 123.) but to be brought to wait, and for a Man to be glad that he may do ſo, for it is for his Soul, there is the Pride in the Will that oppoſeth this, and oppoſeth nothing more. There is a Pride, there is an Impatiency in the Will, when the Soul doth find it ſelf loſt, and taken off from it ſelf, and hang in the Air as it were, and hang by a Thread; Self in this caſe apprehending the Danger, muſt needs be impatient. If God will come and aſſure it preſently, it would be quiet; but to be brought to wait, and ſtill not to be aſſured, I ſay this is the hardeſt thing in the World to do. In this caſe the Quarrel is not in Mens Underſtandings, no, there is a Foundation laid enough to draw the Underſtanding in; a Man ſees the Riches of Grace that is in God, he ſees the Promiſe to be indefinite, he hath the univerſal Command upon that Promiſe to draw him in, i. e. that it is God's Will that he ſhould do ſo, and ſo he hath a Warrant to come to God. But I ſay in this caſe the Quarrel lies in the Wills of Men, that they can wait no longer: and what doth the Will do? It ſends to the Underſtanding and ſaith, O look out, Is there any Tidings yet? Do you ſee any better ground yet of Hope? O I am loſt and undone, I can wait no longer! The Wills of Men are apt in this caſe to ſay ſo, in a world of ſinking Diſcouragement. And this I ſay is the Pride that is in the Will: His Soul which is lifted up, (ſaith he in Hab. 2. 4.) which is haughty, that is, which hath that reigning in him, is not upright, but the Juſt ſhall live by his Faith. For a Man to ſee other poor Souls to have Comfort, and that he ſhould not have it, to ſee how God hath dandled others as it were even from their firſt turning to him, and ſhined upon them, and yet ſtill hides his Face from him, this cauſeth Self to ſwell, and the bigger a Man's Will is, the more it ſwells in ſuch a caſe as this. You have two Principles in your Wills, the one oppoſite to the other, that is, Self-flattery and Impatiency. If a Man will go and believe in a carnal way, Self-flattery will help him to believe, that is, a Man loves to have a good Opinion of himſelf; and while he hath but ſlight Thoughts of his Sinfulneſs, if God ſhould ſay, I will have but one Man ſaved, he would be apt to ſay as Haman when the King asked him, What ſhall be done to the Man whom the King delights to honour? Haman thought in his Heart, To whom would the King delight to do Honour more than to my ſelf? So will a Man be apt to ſay, I am the Man whom God intends to ſave. But when that this Self-flattery is kill'd, then deſpairing impatient Pride riſeth up, eſpecially when a Man is not aſſured for the preſent; and therefore then to be quiet and ſtill, and quietly to wait upon God, this I ſay is the greateſt Self-denial that can be, and this Self-denial is and lies in the Wills of Men.

4thly. If God comes in with his Wrath upon a Man's Soul, as ſometimes he doth when the Soul goes on thus in a way of waiting on him: If God hide his Face from him, and not only ſo, but comes in with Terror and Wrath upon him, (tho ſtill God in all ſuch caſes doth not put the Heart to this, to be contented to be damned ſo God may be glorified; yet this he puts the Heart upon, and requires of Self, in ſuch caſes, that a Man ſhould take part with God, and this is a juſt thing laid upon a Sinner that waits upon God for Salvation, namely, that he ſhould acknowledg himſelf worthy to be deſtroyed, that he is in the Hand of God as the Clay is in the Hand of the Potter) the Soul is to have no repining and grudging Thoughts allowed for that preſent Wrath that is upon him, but to judg himſelf full of his own Fruits, and to ſay as they in Micah 7. 9. I will bear the Indignation of the Lord becauſe I have ſinned: and the like Expreſſion you have in Iſa. 39. 9. Such a kind of Submiſſion it is that God requires of a Man in a way of Believing. And take this from the Word of God, there is nothing will quell Murmurings in ſuch caſes; Heart-riſings againſt God, which do ariſe from the Pride of the Will, and Self in the Will, which is the proper Seat of them, (for the Will is the chief Seat of Self) nothing I ſay allays and quiets them but only Faith. And the Quarrel lies not in want of Underſtanding ſo much as in not having a Will to ſubmit, and it is nothing but Faith, waiting quietly upon the Lord, and ſubmitting a Man's ſelf to God that will quiet the Heart in ſuch caſes. Now I ſay not that every Man hath this when he firſt cometh to believe, but God draws it forth in the Courſe of a Man, and in his way of Believing as he hath Strength, and there is occaſion for it. And unto this the Will muſt needs be oppoſite and averſe, and therefore ſtill Faith is not of your ſelves, for this Self that is in the Will is in it ſelf moſt oppoſite unto Faith; By Grace ye are ſaved, thorow Faith, and that not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God. I ſhall not need to make Uſes, for the things themſelves are practical and experimental; and if the Spirit of God go home with them into your Hearts and Spirits, he will make Uſes of them for me.

[illegible] God comes in with his Wrath upon a Man's Soul, as sometimes he doth [illegible] goes on thus in a way of wrestling on him: If God hide his Face from [illegible] only so, but comes in with Terror and Wrath upon him, (tho still [illegible] such cases doth not [illegible] the Heart to this, to be contented to be damned, so [God] may be glorified, yet this he puts the Heart upon, and requires of Faith, in such [illegible] Man should take part with God, and this is a just thing laid upon a [illegible] that waits upon God for Salvation, namely, that he should acknowledge him- [self] [illegible] be destroyed, that he is in the Hand of God as the Clay is in the [Hand of the] Potter) the Soul is to have no repining and grudging thoughts allowed [illegible] against the Wrath that is upon him, but to [illegible] as they in Micah 7. 9. I will bear the Indignation of the Lord because I have [illegible]: and the like Expression you have in Isa. 39. 8. Such a kind of Submission it [illegible] requires of a Man in a way of Believing. And take this from the Word [illegible] there is nothing will quell Murmurings in such cases, Heart-risings against [illegible] which do arise from the Pride of the Will, and Self in the Will, which is the [illegible] of them, (for the Will is the chief Seat of Self) nothing I say allays [illegible] them but only Faith. And the Quarrel lies not in want of Understanding [illegible] not having a Will to submit; and it is nothing but Faith, waiting up- [on the] Lord, and submitting a Man's Will to God, that will quiet the Heart in [illegible]. Now I say not that every Man hath this, when he first comes to be- [illegible] but God draws it forth in the Course of a Man, and in his way of Believing as [illegible] strength, and there is occasion for it. And from this of the Will [illegible] [illegible] Believers, and therefore this Faith is not of your selves, for this Self [illegible] the Will is in a [illegible] most opposite unto Faith: By Grace are ye saved, through [Faith], and that not of your selves, it is the Gift of God. I shall [illegible] to make [illegible] things the matters are practical and experimental, and if the Spirit of [illegible] come with them into your Hearts and Spirits, he will make Use of them

Of the Properties of Faith.

ho Faith be a difficult Work, yet we ought to uſe our Endeavours to believe. What thoſe Endeavours are. Cautions about uſing them.

CHAP. I.

Tho Faith be a difficult Work, yet we are to uſe Endeavours to believe. What thoſe Endeavours are.

THAT we are to endeavour to believe, is generally granted; the only Queſtion will be, what kind of Endeavours we mean? We will take the moſt of them out of the 4*th* Chapter of James, where he directs Sinners what to do. As,

1. To cleanſe their Hands and Hearts, taking heed of Hindrances and Impedi-nts, which may hinder God's working of it, or provoke him to leave off the ork: To refrain all ill Company, which quencheth all good Motions; as all Sins o of what kind ſoever, which grieve the Spirit. Thus the Apoſtle, Heb. 12. 1.
ds us lay aſide every Weight that preſſeth down, and the Sin that ſo eaſily beſets us, oſe Sins our Natures are moſt prone unto; and Heb. 3. 12. when he had bidden em in the 12*th* Verſe take heed leſt there were in them a Heart of Unbelief, he ſub-ns in the 13*th* Verſe, leſt any of you be hardned through the Deceitfulneſs of Sin:
as Unbelief keeps off from God, ſo nouriſhing any Sin keeps in Unbelief. So
b. 12. 16, 17. when he exhorts Men to take heed they fail not of the Grace of God, adds, leſt any Luſt of Uncleanneſs, as in Eſau, cauſeth you to ſell your Birth-right Part in Heaven. The Patient though he cannot give himſelf Phyſick, and make work, yet he can abſtain from Drink e're he takes it; he can bring an empty Stoch. A Woman cannot of her ſelf conceive nor quicken the Fruit of her Body, yet ſhe can take heed of what may deſtroy it, and hinder Quickning and Con-tion. She may beware of Journies, Dancings, violent Motions which may ſe it to miſcarry; and ſo much the more careful are they that are to bring forth rince, an Heir of a Kingdom; now ſuch an one is the New Creature which is a ming in the Heart. And though Abſtinence from Sin, and Fearfulneſs to offend, no way further the Work, yet becauſe the contrary may hinder it, we are to eavour it: And to this hath that Text a reference, Phil. 2. 13. when he ſpeaks orking out Salvation with Fear; he means not a doubting Fear, (as the Papiſts uld have it) but a Fearfulneſs of diſpleaſing and offending God, upon whom the Work depends, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks 1 Cor. 2. 3. I was with you (ſays Paul) in much fear, &c. Now this in Conſideration of their Dependance upon God, Men are able to do; for in reſpect of Men whom they depend upon, they can and do forbear their deareſt Pleaſures, and why not much more for God and the Work of Grace?

2. Men may endeavour to be humbled for their Sins, and take ſuch Conſiderations into their Hearts as may ſerve to humble them; which though it is not Faith, nor works Faith, yet it leads to it: Jam. 4. 3. Be afflicted, and mourn and weep, (ſays he giving Counſel to Sinners what to do) let your Laughter be turned into Mourning. Men can give over their carnal Mirth, and go alone and conſider their Sins, and ſet themſelves to mourn for them, and humble themſelves in the Sight of God; and God (ſays he) ſhall lift you up, raiſe up your Hearts to believe. Though Men cannot caſt in the Seed, yet they can go about to plow the Ground that fits for it, and break the Clods, Hoſ. 10. 12. And becauſe this is preparatory to Faith, therefore endeavouring after this is endeavouring for Faith, becauſe it is an endeavouring for that which fits for Faith, and is neceſſarily pre-required. Only this, it is not all the Humiliation in the World can give them Power to believe, as many think, O if I were thus humbled I could believe! but on the contrary, when they are humbled it is a new Work to create Faith, as though the Seed in the Womb be prepared for the Soul, and made fit to receive it, yet it is the Almighty Power of God muſt ſend and put a Soul in: But becauſe God never gives Faith to unbroken Hearts, therefore Men are to endeavour after this Work.

3. There are Duties and Ordinances God hath appointed, in which to bring our Hearts before him; which I think James means when he ſays, Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you, Jam. 4. 8. He means, coming to theſe Duties wherein God's Preſence is ſeen; as Corah, Dathan and Abiram, being Prieſts, and converſant in Ordinances, are ſaid to draw nigh to God, Num. 16. 9, 10. And this alſo Men may do; they may come unto God, and preſent their Souls before him by Prayer, by Hearing the Word, by good Conference, by Reading, &c. and look up to him, and ſay, Lord, now do thou work, Luk. 11. 14. He promiſeth the Spirit himſelf, who is the Beginner of all Grace, to them that ask him. When therefore a Man comes to theſe Means, wherein God diſpenſeth Faith, and lies at the Pool ſtill, he may be ſaid to endeavour after Faith.

4. There are ſpecial Opportunities wherein God draws nigh in his Ordinances. When God ſtirs a Man's Spirit, and ſtrengthneth it to ask and endeavour, then a Man ſhould beſtir himſelf, and hoiſt up Sail while the Wind blows, as when the Pool was ſtirred the Diſeaſed ſtept in. There are times when God's Bellows blows the Coals, as the Prophet ſpeaks, and then if we be not purged, we are not purged; and working out our Salvation with trembling, I think hath reference to it, Phil. 2. 12. He means Trembling to foreſlow any Opportunity. But now this is the Error of Men, that when God doth draw nigh to encourage their Hearts ſtill to ſeek and wait on him for Faith, they reſt in theſe as the Work of Faith.

5. But laſtly, I conceive that theſe are not all the Endeavours are to be uſed after Faith; but further, Souls humbled are to attempt the Exerciſe of the very Act of Believing; that is, they are to take Promiſes into their Thoughts, and to bring their Hearts to them, to look up to Chriſt, and conſider his Fulneſs, and attempt to lay hold upon him: to exerciſe Thoughts of taking him, and treating the Marriage with him, and conſider what is in him, may move them to take him; and what is in the Promiſe, may be a Ground for their Faith, and to encourage them: And ſo far as God ſtrengthens a Man's Heart, ſo far go and try, and try again, and ſee when and what Thoughts of Faith will take thee. We have an expreſs place for this, Heb. 4. 11. Let us labour to enter into that Reſt, leſt any Man fall after the ſame Example of Unbelief. In the former part of the Chapter he ſhews that Men entred not in becauſe of Unbelief, ſo as Faith is the Means of Entrance; now therefore he exhorts Men to labour to believe; not to knock and ask only, but to put forth Thoughts of Faith, to ſet their feet in, to endeavour this daily: And therefore, ver. 16. he bids Men come to the Throne of Grace, that they may obtain Mercy; thoſe that had not yet obtained it, muſt come that they may obtain it. But you will ſay, we cannot come: Why come, ſays he, to obtain Help it ſelf, in the next words. So Heb. 12. 2. he exhorts them to look to Jeſus the Beginner and Finiſher of Faith, to look to o him as the Beginner as well as the Finiſher. And my Reaſons why Men are to ndeavour and attempt the immediate Acts of Believing, are:

1. Becauſe God commands Men to believe and to come to Chriſt, 1 Joh. 3. 23. nd therefore Chriſt, when any came to him, would ſtill urge Faith on them, anſt thou believe? ſays he, Mark 9. 23. And ſo the Apoſtle Paul, when the Jaylor me trembling, Believe (ſays he Acts 16. 31.) on the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ved. Now if we are to endeavour to practiſe other Commandments to ſhew our uty, (as I ſaid before) then to believe alſo; and my Unability to do it right, hinders not, nor frees me not from attempting to do it, and reaching as far as I an.

2. If Miniſters are to preſent Promiſes and Motives unto Men, then thoſe Conſiderations and Motives, and Promiſes, which the Miniſters of the Word are to preſent to Hearers and humbled Souls, to beget Faith in them, humbled Souls may and ught with Application to conſider alone and digeſt, and exerciſe Thoughts of Faith bout. The Word was preached (ſays the Apoſtle, Heb. 4. 12.) to the Iſraelites, Promiſes preached, but they profited them not, becauſe they mingled them not with Faith; erefore, (ſays he) let us take heed leſt a Promiſe being left us, any of us ſhould ſeem to me ſhort of it for want of applying thoſe Promiſes. And tho it be true that but me ſhall enter in, yet the Promiſe is indefinitely made to all, ver. 6. and upon that round, ver. 11. he exhorts all to labour after Faith, to look up to Jeſus as the Author of Faith.

3. Men are to inure their Hearts to the ſame Thoughts of Faith Believers have, far as Recumbency or Caſting a Man's ſelf upon Chriſt, and bringing their Hearts Promiſes goes, becauſe God works on us as upon Creatures reaſonable; and the me Conſiderations and Thoughts, and Objects of Faith which Believers have in eir Minds, a Man that is yet to believe may think over and over. They differ ly in the Manner, in the Formale, not the Materiale; and as Fruits, they have the me Form and Shape, they differ but in Reliſh and Taſte: And God doth often graft true Thoughts of Faith upon the Notions we had being Unbelievers, and angeth them into true Thoughts of Faith whilſt we are a thinking them; as the oaves were encreaſed in the breaking them, and as the Water was changed into ine in the pouring of it out. So that Men believe often truly e're they are aware it, by exerciſing their Hearts to Thoughts of Faith; and whilſt they attempt , God helps them, as to pray, ſo to believe. And therefore it is their Error that ould have Souls humbled to lie ſtill, and ſee if God will begin to draw their earts to believe, and not to attempt till then. It is indeed a Man's Strength ſit ſtill, but there is a two-fold ſitting ſtill; the one is a doing nothing at all, t ſetting a Foot forward, not a Thought towards Believing, and that is naught; t the other is a quelling all Conceits of Abilities in my ſelf to believe, and not to ffer a Thought to ſtir upon that ground, yet ſo as to think Thoughts of Faith ith a quiet Dependance upon God. Sitting ſtill is not oppoſed to uſing Means, t to truſting in Means. Again; Sitting ſtill is oppoſed to Turbulency of houghts, that a Man's Thoughts ſhould be quiet and ſedate for the Event, d yet uſe the Means. Only I add this Caution; Firſt, that tho a Man attempts to believe, yet he ſhould not expect Power from himſelf to believe; t in attempting and thinking Thoughts of Faith, expect Power from God, d do it in Subordination to God's Power: A Man is to bring his Heart to e Promiſe, and then expect Power from the Promiſe to cloſe with it. Secondly, That a Man's Soul do not reſt in his own Endeavours, but ſtill wait r a farther Work.

CHAP. II.

That the Reſting in our holy Duties and Endeavours, is an Hindrance unto Faith; but a right Performance of them, is very well conſiſtent with it, and needful.

WHEN we ſhew that in the Working of Faith, and in Mens coming on to believe, Duties and good Performances, and new Endeavours, become to many the greateſt Hindrances to Believing on Chriſt alone, and do interpoſe themſelves, and come betwixt Chriſt and the Soul; Men taking up a Reſt, and putting Confidence in them e're they come to Chriſt: When therefore we cry out againſt this Reſting in Duties, and ſhew the Vanity and Emptineſs of all you can do to ſave you, or obtain Chriſt and God's Favour, and bid Men, as Luther, take heed not of their Sins only, but of their good Works alſo; then Men are apt to ſay and think, that we do cry down all good Performances, and ſpeak down-right againſt good Duties, and do drive Men wholly off from the Performance of them. And not only carnal Men are apt to think ſo, but this is the Caſe of poor broken Souls, that when this their Error, and the Emptineſs of all their Performances to this end is diſcovered to them, their Hearts flag, and they ſit down diſcouraged, and their Hands grow feeble in the Performance of them. And we find Luther complaining of nothing more than this Miſtake and Cavil, which accompanied his Doctrine; the chiefeſt of whoſe Thoughts and Breath was ſpent in this very Point to beat Men off from carnal Confidence in Works, (as the deepeſt and moſt bottom Corruption in Man's Nature) and to bottom their Faith immediately upon Chriſt, wherein he makes the Power and the Truth of Faith to conſiſt; which whilſt he endeavoured, this Calumny was ſtill raiſed, that he ſpake againſt good Works and holy Duties: And ſtill this Shadow follows this Truth; and to this Purpoſe he ſtill profeſſeth, that as it was the hardeſt thing in the private Exerciſe of Mens Spirits not to conſult with Duties, to lay Works aſide, and to caſt a Man's Soul out of Duties, and to lay all upon Chriſt; ſo it is the difficulteſt Matter in all the Circle of Theology, to give both their Limits: for whilſt Duties are only taught, Faith is loſt; and whilſt Faith is urged, carnal People dream (ſays he) that good Works are ſpoken againſt. And thus whilſt Paul taught Juſtification by Faith without the Works of the Law, (Rom. 3. 28.) this Objection was ſtarted up, that he made void the Law; which Cavil is therefore there met withal by him, ver. 31. Do we make void the Law? No, we eſtabliſh it. So whilſt Chriſt taught that Publicans and Sinners went into Heaven before Scribes and Phariſees, they caſt this Aſperſion, falſly deduced from that his Doctrine, that therefore he was a Friend to Publicans and Sinners. Luther in Gal. 5.

1. To clear this therefore, firſt, it might be alledged, and that truly, that our Scope, when we ſpeak thus againſt their good Works, is chiefly to diſcover that Works performed in a State of Unbelief by carnal Men, are wholly ſinful and abominable: and though if we take them in the Abſtract, they are to be preſſed upon them as their Duties, tho they ſpoil them in the Performance of them; yet that in the Concrete as performed by them, we cannot but declaim againſt them, and diſcover their Sinfulneſs to them. Now for wicked Men to argue from the Concrete to the Abſtract; and to infer, that becauſe we ſpeak againſt wicked Mens beſt Performances, and diſcover them to be ſinful, that therefore we ſpeak againſt the Duties themſelves commanded, or that they are not their Duties; this is an Argument fetch'd out of the Devil's Topicks. We profeſs that wicked Mens beſt Works occaſionally prove their greateſt Sins; as Luther ſays of the evil World, Tunc eſt peſſimus cum eſt optimus, They are then worſt when they ſeem beſt; and the more holy in Appearance they are, and the more good Works they do, Eò purius Diabolo ſerviunt, they ſerve the Devil more purely. But it follows not that therefore we ſpeak againſt the Duties themſelves.

2. But ſecondly, I ſhall propoſe more pertinent and proper Conſiderations to the thing in hand: Firſt, by way of Explication, I will premiſe two or three general Conſiderations; and then, Secondly, draw up formal and direct Anſwers to this Cavil and Miſtake.

1. The firſt thing that I premiſe by way of Explication is, that when we ſpeak gainſt truſting and reſting in Duties, as oppoſing the Work of Faith, we mean not nly reſting in them with an Opinion of Merit and ſatisfying God in the moſt groſs nd Popiſh Senſe: For that Opinion may be renounced when yet the Heart practi-ſeth a more refined fine-ſpun Popery ſecretly; and that is, that tho' Men expect hat it is Chriſt alone muſt pardon them, and think that their Performances are not ble to ſatisfy God for their Sins, but Chriſt's Satisfaction is it which muſt ſtand hem in ſtead, yet they look upon their own Performances as thoſe which may com-paſs Chriſt and an Intereſt in him, and they look at them as Motives that may pre-ail with God to give them Chriſt. Which ſecret Opinion is not much leſs dero-atory from God's Grace and Chriſt than the other; for Chriſt is more than Juſtifi-ation, becauſe he brings Juſtification, and all with him: If he hath given us his on, how ſhall he not with him give us all things? Rom. 8. 32. All are leſs than hriſt; and therefore to think, though not to merit, yet to obtain Chriſt for our wn Performances, and ſo to reſt in them, is as bad as the former. It is indeed a ew Shift beyond what groſs Popery dreamt of: yet as it is in Laws, tho' never ſo irect and expreſs Cautions be made to prevent all Evaſions, yet cunning Heads ill invent new to defraud and go beyond the Statute; ſo tho our Divines have xpreſſed themſelves never ſo fully againſt Works, yet Men renouncing Merits, heir Hearts have yet farther Inventions of reſting in Works and Duties, as Motives o move God they think to give them Chriſt; which yet are as oppoſite to Faith as he other, and therefore are excluded by the Apoſtle, Rom. 10. 6. The Righteouſ-eſs of Faith (ſaith he) ſpeaks on this wiſe, Say not in thy Heart, &c. For let us reach Chriſt never ſo fully, and let Mens Opinions be never ſo much convinced, et their Hearts are apt in their ſecret Conſultations about their own Salvation, to ink of a Courſe of doing; Who ſhall aſcend up to Heaven to fetch Chriſt thence? ho the way be by Chriſt, yet they think by doing to get him and procure him. o, ſays the Apoſtle, it is by a ſheer-way of Faith, cloſing with him as freely given, d put into your Mouths and Hearts.

2. The ſecond thing I premiſe is, that as God in giving Chriſt, and in juſtifying by Chriſt, looks at no Performances either as meriting or as moving him to do ther; ſo Faith, that apprehends and lays hold on Chriſt as given, and upon Juſti-cation in him, whether by an Act of caſting a Man's ſelf on Chriſt for Juſtificati-, or otherwiſe, looks not at Duties, or all that ever a Man hath done either as meri-g or moving Cauſes, that do further him any way in either, or prevail with God beſtow either. So that look as there is an exact Oppoſition between Grace and orks in God, (Rom. 11. 6. that if it be of meer Grace, then all Duties are exclu-d; and if of Works, then Grace is excluded, ſo as theſe two cannot mingle;) ſo ere is as exact an Oppoſition between Faith and Duties in point of apprehending hriſt and Juſtification by him; for Faith is a Grace choſen on purpoſe to ſute with od's Free Grace, to cauſe our Thoughts to anſwer to his in this great buſineſs; to ke Chriſt as given, upon the ſame Conſiderations that God beſtows him, and ſo s Righteouſneſs too. Therefore to be juſtified by Grace and by Faith, is all one; d therefore it is of Faith, that it might be by Grace. And when we are ſaid to be ſtified by Faith without Works, what is the Meaning of it, and why is it attri-ted to Faith, but becauſe Faith is the ſole Inſtrument of apprehending God's ing me Chriſt, and juſtifying of me? as alſo becauſe in that its Apprehenſion God in Juſtifying, looks not to Works, nor any thing in me, as the moving Cauſe, any way conducing to it; ſo Faith apprehends it, having no eye to Works why it prehends it, and ſo is ſaid to juſtify without Works; that is, to apprehend it ha-g no eye to Works as moving Cauſes. Yea, as God looks not to Faith it ſelf, as Work, but only as an Inſtrument apprehending; ſo Faith looks not on it ſelf as a ork any way having any Influence into obtaining Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs, t only as a Hand receiving it: And therefore God choſe this Grace of Faith, know-g that tho when the Believer believes he performs a Work, yet he would not look that Act as a Work, but look to Chriſt and his Free Grace; as Luther expreſſeth mſelf, When I believe, I uſe to imagine as if there were no ſuch Quality in me as ith, &c. So as (ſays he in another place) I do not know whether there be any Righ-uſneſs elſe, or Unrighteouſneſs in the World. Hence then it comes to paſs, that ith, when it goes about its proper buſineſs of laying hold upon Chriſt and Juſti-

Part 3. fication through him, is careful to ſhut out and exclude Works; it beats all Duties and Graces off with Poles as it were from putting their Hands to this Ark, which it alone is appointed to touch and poſſeſs; and it is exceeding jealous of Duties leſt they ſhould ſtep in and ſpoil her Virginity, (as Luther calls it) which ſhe reſerves for Chriſt, which is tainted and polluted, if Works mingle their help with Faith in this buſineſs: For, as I ſaid before, if it were any way of Works, Grace ſhould be no Grace; ſo if the Soul thought it any way of Duties, it were no Faith. And therefore Paul though he had never ſo many Performances to boaſt of, and elſewhere to Men he doth boaſt of them, yet in point of Juſtification he thinks not of them; Though I know nothing by my ſelf, yet hereby I am not juſtified, but it is the Lord that freely of himſelf doth without relation to any thing in me. And therefore (1 Pet. 1. 13.) we are exhorted to truſt perfectly, to truſt and lean fully and wholly on Grace; not ſo as to ſtand maimly upon it, and lean to Works, but wholly and upright upon it.

3. The third thing I premiſe is this, That Man's Nature is exceedingly prone to reſt and truſt in his own Performances, and not to look out wholly to God's Free Grace and to Chriſt; Malum hoc eſt communiſſimum, (as Luther calls it) the moſt common Evil; and deepliest rooted. Some of our Divines, as Chemnitius, &c. have gone about to ſhew that from Cain and Abel to this very day, this hath been the great and ſtanding Controverſy in the World, and Difference between the World and Believers, whether we are accepted before God by Works or by Faith? Cain thought by Sacrifice to do it, and neglected Faith; but Abel, tho he brought Sacrifice alſo, yet Heb. 11. he offered it by Faith, not reſting in it, and ſo by Faith offered a more excellent Sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witneſs he was righteous, which the other did not, thinking alone by Sacrifice to do it: the Apoſtle puts the Difference on purpoſe, Heb. 11. 4. Thus in Aſaph's time, God by Aſaph corrects it as the common Error of that Age, and ſhews it was not by Works, not by Sacrifice, that they are accepted, Pſal. 50. 7, 8. Thus it was in Iſaiah's time alſo, Have we not faſted, and thou ſeeſt not? Iſa. 58. 2. And thus in Chriſt's time too, What ſhall we do to work the Works of God? John 6. 37. They thought to obtain Righteouſneſs by doing, and therefore Chriſt, as correcting their Error, points them to Believing. Thus the Phariſees truſted in themſelves, ſays the Text, that they were righteous, Luke 18. 9. that is, the Righteouſneſs they truſted unto, it was the only in themſelves, and out of themſelves. In a word, Paul ſays of them all, Rom. 9. 32, 33. that they ſought not Righteouſneſs by Faith, but as it were by the Works of the Law. The Promiſe of Salvation they hoped for as well as Believers, but (as ſome expound that Place in Acts 26. 7. of the unregenerate Jews) they hoped to come to the Promiſe by Works; which Promiſe, tho Paul alſo look'd for by Faith, yet they thought by ſerving God Day and Night only to attain it; that was their way to attain: but Paul, tho he aimed at the ſame Promiſe, yet ſought it by Faith. And this was the general Error of all the twelve Tribes, as he ſays there. And this was the reigning Error in Popiſh Times, that they ſtill truſted in their Works; and tho they knew Chriſt as a Redeemer, yet they left him, and Faith in him, and ſought Juſtification by the Works of the Law. Now that a Corruption ſhould be ſo general in all Ages from time to time, and ſo univerſal and ſo irreclaimable, that all Chriſt and his Apoſtles did could not work Men off from it; this argues that it is moſt natural, and that Nature ſticks here. As why have Pelagian Controverſies been ſtill in the Church ſtarted, tho ſtill more refinedly, but becauſe there are Pelagianæ Fibræ, Pelagian Fibres in every Man's Heart, (as he ſaid) Roots, and a Spring of it within. Now the other Error about Works hath been more antient than this, and more laſting, becauſe more natural. Yea, ſo natural is it, that even Believers that have Faith begun are apt to reſt in, and truſt too much in Duties. The Apoſtles could not get rid of all the Grudgings of it, Mat. 19. 27. We have forſaken all, what ſhall we have therefore? and tho he tells them what they ſhould have, yet elſewhere he beats down that. Therefore Luke 17. 7, 8, 9. Chriſt there endeavours to beat down all ſwelling Conceits of their Performances in them, tells them that when they had done all they could, they muſt confeſs themſelves unprofitable Servants: And upon what occaſion comes it in? Look the 5*th* and 6*th* Verſes, and you will find that it is upon occaſion of a Conference about Faith, they deſiring the Increaſe of it, and Chriſt commending it, and telling them, that a Grain of it was more worth than all their Works, and then he comes in with this Aſſertion, as removing the main Hindrance of it. And therefore the Galatians, a whole Church that had received Chriſt, yet how ſoon (ſays the Apoſtle) were they removed to another Goſpel from the Grace of Chriſt, Gal. 1. 6. That other Goſpel was looking partly to Works and partly to Chriſt, and joining Chriſt with the Law. And this we all find by Experience to be true, more or leſs; and the reaſon is, becauſe Reaſon hath the Law for its Object, and to be juſtified by the Works of the Law, and accepted for them; and ſo when Men hear of Grace and Chriſt, they think that yet they ſhould go that way too. This moſt agrees with Reaſon and the Dictates of a natural Conſcience, for it was that way which in Innocency was the way, and ſo ſome Sparks of Light that Men ſhould be ſaved by Works are in every Man's Heart, as well as of the Duties of the Law, the legal way of Salvation; and tho a Man be brought to acknowledg that Chriſt pardons, yet he will have as much of his own way as he can: So that natural Reaſon hath ſome Knowledg of Juſtification by the Law; but of Juſtification merely by Grace now Man is fallen, this Reaſon is ignorant of, and there is no ſuch Spark of Light ſown in Man's Heart by Nature: therefore the Apoſtle (Rom. 10. 3.) gives this as the Reaſon they were ignorant of God's Righteouſneſs, that is, of God's way of Juſtifying. And therefore it muſt be revealed, (Rom. 1. 17.) and when it is revealed, it is entertained only by Faith; and that not to Faith at firſt, but from one degree of Faith to another, for Faith only is apprehenſive of it; ſo as if God would make a Man more and more to caſt himſelf upon Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, and add a farther Inſight into it, he muſt add to a Man's Faith: and look how much carnal Reaſon there is, and want of Faith, ſo much relying upon Duties there will be even in the beſt. And tho Mens Opinions may be ſet right, yet this being an innate Spark and Principle in the Heart which is rooted out of it only by Faith, therefore the Heart under-hand will have Recourſe and Reſt in Performances, more or leſs; for we in the working of our Hearts are not guided by our Notions, but by the rooted Principles of Nature: therefore tho Mens Judgments are convinced that there is a God, and that fully and clearly, yet Atheiſm is rooted, and a ſettled Principle in the Heart, and therefore ſways in the Workings of a Man's Spirit: and accordingly as the Fool ſays in his Heart, there is no God; ſo naturally a Man ſays in his Heart, Duties muſt help me to Chriſt. And therefore the Righteouſneſs of Faith is brought in as checking and contradicting ſuch Sayings that are apt to ariſe in a Man's Heart, which are not wrought out by Opinion, but by a Principle of Faith, and a Divine Light accompanying; The Righteouſneſs of Faith ſays, Say not in thy Heart, Who ſhall aſcend into Heaven, to bring Chriſt down from above? Rom. 10. 6. And therefore in another place, God carefully meets with thoſe Thoughts of their own Righteouſneſs, Deut. 9. 4. Speak not in thine Heart, that for my Righteouſneſs the Lord hath brought me in to poſſeſs this Land, &c. either as the moving Cauſe, or the meriting Cauſe: And ver. 6. he comes over it again with a more ſpecial Inſtruction in this Point, when he ſays, Underſtand therefore that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this good Land for thy Righteouſneſs; for of all elſe the Heart is moſt uncapable of this Leſſon, to diſcern the Way of Faith and Works. And as Ignorance and oppoſite Reaſon, ſo alſo Pride (which is the other Reaſon there, Rom. 10. 2. uſed by the Apoſtle) makes Men to truſt in their Duties; They being ignorant of God's Righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs. He brings both in as Reaſons why they ſubmitted not to God's Righteouſneſs of Faith, for they would ſet up their own. Nature deſires to do ſo; becauſe as Self-love hath ſet up it ſelf for a Man's God and End, ſo for a Man's Chriſt alſo; there is the ſame Reaſon of the one that is of the other, and Pride is ſeen in both; for we would have wherewithal to boaſt. Therefore (Deut. 8. 14, 17.) he bids them take heed of the lifting up of their Hearts, in ſaying, My Might, and the Power of mine Hand hath got me this Wealth. As it is thus in matters of Wealth, ſo Pride makes Men think that through their Prayer and their Faſting, they ſhould get Chriſt: And this Corruption was ſo rooted, that the main End of the forty Years Troubles in the Wilderneſs, was to work out this Conceit, and that by humbling them; ver. 16. which ſhews that Pride was the Original of this Corruption.
